Ezra H. Stuart was six years old when his grandfather Lassell brought him to Janesville. He was reared by his uncle and aunt, J. W. and L. R. Stuart, in the town of Decatur, Green county, and attended the district school. Mr. Stuart enlisted, Oct. 27, 1861, in Company B, 18th Wis. V. I., and after serving a little over a year in that regiment was discharged for disability. He came home, and in August, 1863, re-enlisted, in Company B, 1st Wis. Vol. Cav., serving until July 19, 1865. He was mustered out at Edgefield, Tenn. He was a corporal, and was with Col. Harndon's squad when he captured Jefferson Davis, receiving as his share of the $100,000 reward $329. He was in the battle of Shiloh, the relief of Knoxville, the East Tennessee campaign, all through the Atlanta campaign, during the siege of Nashville, on the pursuit of Lyon, and also on the Gen. Wilson raid through Georgia and Alabama.

When the war was over Mr. Stuart came to Brodhead and engaged in farming for a few years. He was four years at Kirksville, Mo., then moved into Illinois, and lived near Hamilton twenty-two years, engaged in farming and fruit raising. In 1894 he returned to Brodhead, and engaged in the ice business. In 1898 he took on the coal trade, and has a fine patronage all the year around.

Mr. Stuart and Miss Lacey A. Northcraft were united in marriage Nov. 29, 1866. She is the daughter of Samuel and Elmira (Dawson) Northcraft, and became the mother of two children, Francis and Mary, both of whom died when small. Mr. Stuart belongs to Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M., and, with his wife, to the Order of the Eastern Star. He was master of the lodge at Hamilton, Ill., five years in succession. He is a member of Wesley W. Patton Post, No. 90, G. A. R., at Brodhead, and was commander of the post one term. He was formerly a Republican, but for a number of years has been a Populist. He is supervisor of the First ward in Brodhead. He lives at No. 127 North Thomas street, where he bought and has remodeled a very attractive and elegant home.

WILLIAM FINLEY GIBSON. Among the old residents of Belmont township, Lafayette county, who have won the esteem of a wide circle of friends, and whose worth is acknowledged by the community in which they have so long had a home, are William Finley Gibson and his estimable wife, the former of whom is the subject of this biography.

The birth of our subject took place in County Wicklow, Ireland, near the city of Dublin, May 28, 1826. He is a son of George and Jane (Boyce) Gibson, the former of whom was for many years a revenue officer under the British government, and both parents lived and died in their own land, leaving five children. Our subject is the only one of these who ever came to America. In his own country Mr. Gibson received a liberal education. Having decided to try his fortunes in this land, he reached Chicago sometime in 1848, engaging there at his trade of carpenter for some five years. In 1850 he married Miss Margaret Keegan, daughter of Francis H. and Margaret Keegan, who were born in Ireland, but came of English parentage. Francis H. Keegan came to the city of Chicago in 1848 with his family of ten children, and after a residence of five years there removed to a farm at Mineral Point, Wis., where he passed the remainder of his life. Three of the children still survive: Frank, who resides in Chicago; John, in Mineral Point; and Mrs. Gibson.

Some five years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Gibson decided to leave the city and become farmers, and with this end in view migrated to Mineral Point, Wis., where they lived on a farm which Mr. Gibson purchased for some eighteen years. In 1879 an opportunity offered for the sale of that place and the purchase of the present home farm, and the family moved to Belmont township, where Mr. Gibson has improved the property very much by the erection of commodious buildings and a comfortable home. For a number of years he continued to cultivate his new farm, causing it to become one of the most attractive in the neighborhood, but his son William for some time has had complete charge of affairs, and has successfully managed both farm and stock.

The family born to Mr. and Mrs. Gibson consisted of eight children: (1) George, born in Chicago in 1851, married Amelia Delong, of Lafayette county, and they reside in Montfort, where he is an extensive buyer of stock; their six children are May, Willie, Holland, Laura, Archie and Edna. (2) Margaret J., born in Chicago, in 1853, married John Fitzsimmons, a merchant of St. Paul, Minn.; the children of this union are Thomas, Charles, Zelba, Willie and Lillie. (3) William F., born at Mineral Point, Wis., in 1855, received his early education at Mineral Point, later spending two years at the Platteville Normal School. In 1882 he married Mary Jones, and they resided at Cobb, Wis., for some years, then removing to his father's farm, Mr. Gibson purchasing the old homestead in March, 1900. His wife died in December, 1899, leaving him with nine children (who reside with him and his parents at the old home). Ethel, William Roy, Samuel, Ella, May, George, Anna, Burt Clair and Guy J. (4) Mary E., born at Mineral Point in 1859, married Rev. Henry Stewart, of Cadott, Wis., and has two children, Ira and Blanche. (5) Albert, born in Iowa county in 1861, was educated at the State Normal School. He married Libbie Laughlan, of Benton, where they reside, Mr. Gibson being in business in that city. Their children are Joseph, Charles and Russel. (6) Joseph, born in Iowa county in 1863, graduated from the State Normal School, and then became principal of the Bloomer (Wis.) high school. He was taken sick at that place and died in 1895, the county losing one of its finest young men. (7) Dr. O. E., born at Mineral Point in 1865, attended the Platteville Normal School, later graduated with honor from the Chicago Dental College, and is now the leading member of his profession in Platteville. He married Alice Gray, of that city, and their two children are Irvin G. and Helen M. (8) Henry I., born at Mineral Point in 1867, attended the Platteville Normal School, graduated from the Chicago Dental College, and then entered Rush Medical College, one year after graduation locating at Menomonie, Wis., in the practice of his profession. He married Katie Doughty, a daughter of Rev. William Edward Doughty, and their children are Obe E., Henry Irwin, and Dwight.

Politically our subject has always been identified with the Republican party, and he has faithfully served as a justice of the peace for a number of years, both at Mineral Point and in Belmont, his son William having also held that office. For many years both Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were members of the Episcopal Church, but upon locating in Belmont they found difficulty in reaching a church of their preference, and connected themselves with the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which they are consistent members, the Christianity of such people not being regulated by the doctrinal name. Throughout the county our subject and family are respected and have a name for generous hospitality which has brought them many friends. None in Belmont township deserve the esteem of the citizens in a higher degree than do William Finley Gibson and his wife.

MRS. MARY HANEY is a retired business woman of the town of Ellenboro, Grant county, who since the death of her husband, Phillip Haney, has cared for her estate with much executive skill, and is now living in peace and quiet.

Mrs. Haney was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1842, daughter of David and Harriet (McKee) Phillips, who came West to Ohio from Connecticut, and made their home in Trumbull county some few years, then moving to Ellenboro, Grant Co., Wis., being among the very early settlers of that town. Mr. Phillips owned a large amount of land, and was one of the wealthy and influential men of Grant county. The latter part of his life was spent at Rockville, Wis., where he and his wife died at a very advanced age. As a prominent business man he had a fine reputation, and left ample estate to his family of six children: (1) George, the eldest son, died in the village of Arthur. (2) Lorinda is the deceased wife of Samuel Poland. (3) Dorus is a resident of Nevada, where he owns a large silver mine. (4) Mary is the subject proper of this article. (5) Harriet married a Mr. Tighe. (6) David is mentioned below.

Mary Phillips married William Duncan for her first husband, and they settled on a farm in Ellenboro, where he died leaving his wife with two daughters, Harriet M. and Eva. Harriet married John Myers, of California, and is the mother of four children, Joseph, Arthur, Millie and George. Eva married Philo Curley, of Kansas. Mrs. Duncan later married Phillip Haney, of Grant county, and settled in the town of Harrison, where they were living at the time of his death, in 1886. Mrs. Haney still retains this home. To this union there was born one son, David Haney, a prosperous ranchman of Lanagan, Mo. Mrs. Haney is a lady of much culture and kindness, showing many traits of character well developed in her distinguished ancestors.

Dorus Phillips, David Phillips, and Mrs. Haney are all who are left of this old and prominent family. David Phillips, one of California's old-time gold miners, now a resident of Potosi, Wis., married Miss Mahalla Travis, of the town of Harrison, whose father fought in the Black Hawk war. They have one daughter, Maggie, who is the wife of John Craiger, of Chicago.

FREDERICK GERBER, a prominent and successful dealer in furniture and undertaking at Monticello, Green county, was born near Booneville, N. Y., Dec. 29, 1858, a son of Nicholas and Katherine (Galli) Gerber, natives of Canton Berne, Switzerland. They were the parents of four sons and two daughters: Frederick, whose name appears above; Nicholas, a resident of Ohio; John, a resident of Rockwell, Iowa; Charles, who lives in Minnesota; Lena, who is the wife of Edward Leibly, of Monroe, Wis.; Sophie, the wife of Fred Alder, of Brodhead. Nicholas Gerber is now in the cheese business in Esther, Iowa. In 1858 he came to America, and settled near Booneville, N. Y. From there he moved to Wheeling, Ill., and in 1868 came to Green county, where he established the two first cheese factories there, one of which was located in the town of New Glarus, and the other in the town of Washington, and was proprietor and manager of both for a number of years. In 1894 he moved to Esther, Iowa, where he still resides. The first Mrs. Gerber, the mother of Frederick, died in 1868, at the age of thirty-six years. She was a member of the Swiss Reformed Church. After her death Mr. Gerber married Miss Katherine Pound, who became the mother of six children: Louisa, wife of Isaac Harrison, of Luverne, Iowa; Edward, of Omaha; Henry, of Cobb, Wis.; Annie, of Esther, Iowa; William and Robert, at home. Mr. Gerber is a Republican.

The paternal grandfather of Frederick Gerber, of Monticello, died in Switzerland, well advanced in years. He was a farmer and the father of five children. The maternal grandfather was John Galli, who came to New York city, where he died when about eighty years old. He, too, was a farmer, and had five children.

Frederick Gerber was six years old when he came to Illinois, and spent some eight years at Wheeling, in that State. Then his parents removed to Green county, Wis., and here he completed his education by attending the district school. He was reared to the business of cheese making, and was an inmate of his father's home until he reached adult age. For a number of years he followed cheese making; but abandoned the business in 1885, when he came to Monticello and opened up in his present line. His furniture stock is very complete and thoroughly modern and up-to-date, and as an undertaker he has a reputation second to none in this part of the State.

Mr. Gerber was married Nov. 6, 1879, to Fannie Marty, who was born January 27, 1861, a daughter of Henry and Fannie (Durst) Marty, of New Glarus. Mr. and Mrs. Gerber are the parents of two children, Fannie, who was born in New Glarus, Wis., Feb. 28, 1881; and Nicholas, who was born in Monticello, Wis., June 19, 1884. The father and mother belong to the Swiss Reformed Church, and he is a member of Monticello Lodge, No. 153, F. & A. M., Lodge 83, I. O. O. F., and the M. W. of A. Mr. Gerber is a Republican and has been trustee of the village for the past three years. In the village he owns a good home which he has thoroughly remodelled since his purchase.

JOHN J. BRIDGMAN, the oldest citizen of the town of Lamont, Lafayette county, was born in the town of Lyme (near Dartmouth College), N. H., Nov. 5, 1815. His parents, Gideon and Elizabeth S. (Barker) Bridgman, were natives of Haverhill, N. H. Gideon Bridgman, the grandfather of John J., was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and fought under Montgomery in his ill-starred expedition to Quebec.

John J. Bridgman was the third in a family of seven children, and was reared in the State of Ohio, whither his parents had removed in 1818, settling in the town of Williamsfield, in Ashtabula county. There the children grew to adult years, and though the locality was on the frontier line of civilization much attention was devoted to their instruction, both in information of the world and in the elements of character. Mr. Bridgman was married in Ohio March 11, 1838, to Miss Rhoda Cone, and eleven years later they came to Wisconsin from Cherry Valley, Ohio, settling in the town of Fayette, Lafayette county, where they lived four years. In 1853 they moved to their present home, and here he has remained to the present time, a period of over forty-seven years. When they settled here the country was new, and neighbors were few and far between. Mr. Bridgman has improved a fine farm with the assistance of his sons, beginning with a tract of 120 acres, which he gradually increased to 220 acres. As his sons grew up and married they acquired farms of their own. All are now well situated, and have become honorable and worthy members of society.

The greatest loss that Mr. Bridgman has ever sustained was the death of his estimable wife, which occurred March 11, 1899, on the sixty-first anniversary of their marriage. She was born June 16, 1815. Mr. and Mrs. Bridgman became the parents of eight children, of whom three sons and three daughters are now living: Charles R., of Darlington; Hiram M., who served in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, being a member of the 31st Wis. V. I., as was also his brother, Charles R.; Mrs. Elizabeth Cook, of Clarksville, Iowa; Mrs. Julia Ann McConnell, of Spencer, Iowa; James, living at the family homestead, who is the present treasurer of the town of Lamont; and Mrs. Hannah R. McCarty, living in the town of Lamont. Henry died when nine years old, and William died in Charles City, Iowa, Nov. 22, 1900, at the age of fifty-one years.

The parents of Mr. Bridgman came to Lafayette county in 1863, and were drowned in Otter creek, Feb. 13, 1867, while attempting to ford that stream. The father was born April 8, 1787, and the mother June 23, of the same year.

John J. Bridgman is one of the well known citizens of his town. He has been very successful in his farming operations. Arriving in the county with fifty dollars in his pocket, and a horse and wagon, worth not more than sixty-five dollars, he has become one of the wealthier men of the community, and has ample resources for every possible call that may be made on him. In religion Mr. Bridgman has long been associated with the Freewill Baptist Church, and was for forty years one of its active deacons. He is now the only survivor of the original organizers of his church.

OBED K. JONES, a retired farmer of Harrison township, Grant county, is on the "shady" side of sixty, but his step is not feeble nor his arm weak. He has retired from the hard and strenuous labor of active farming, but industry and prudence in his earlier years have brought him an ample competence to make his remaining days comfortable and independent.

Mr. Jones was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in January, 1833, a son of Chauncey and Elizabeth (Brown) Jones, both natives of that county, the former born Dec. 19, 1807, and the latter March 1, 1807. They were reared and educated in Trumbull county, and were there married. They followed farming in Ohio until 1840, when they came to Grant county, Wis., and made a home where their son Obed K. now resides, Mr. Jones purchasing nearly three hundred acres from the government, and putting up a log house near where his parents, Chauncey and Ursula (Crosby) Jones, had established themselves in 1839. They were born in Connecticut, and moved West at an early day. These are heroic names in American history. The Browns, Crosbys and Joneses were all Plymouth Rock stock, and bore a hand stoutly in the American Revolution. Chauncey Jones, Sr., and his wife remained on their Grant county farm as long as they lived, he dying in 1863, and she in 1876. They had a family of four children, of whom (1) Chauncey, the father of our subject, was the eldest. (2) Obed, the second child, was born in Ohio, came with his parents to Wisconsin, and settled on part of his father's original purchase, thence moving into Platteville township, where he died in 1889, leaving a wife and several surviving children of their family of six—Mary, now Mrs. Whittenheim, of Lima, Grant county; Albert, now of Sac county, Iowa; Julius, who died in the Civil war; Pluma, now Mrs. Robert Duncan, of Prairie du Chien; Celia, married and living in Missouri; and Julia, Mrs. Burney, who lives in Nebraska. (3) Clarissa married Jesse Waldorf, and settled on a farm in Lima township, Grant county, where both died. Their only surviving child is Mrs. A. V. Knapp, who lives on the old Waldorf homestead. (4) Harvey came with his parents into Wisconsin, here married Miss Eliza Hull, and shortly removed to Oregon, settling on a farm near Puget Sound. They were killed by Indians. Two of their children, Harvey and Eliza, escaped and were brought back to Wisconsin by their grandfather; they died while they were still in their childhood.

Chauncey Jones, the father of Obed K., lived in the log house some years, and when circumstances permitted erected a handsome frame dwelling. This gave way later to a more pretentious structure, which is now the home of the gentleman whose name introduces this article. Chauncey Jones died in 1856, his estimable wife, who had shared with him all the hardships of frontier life, surviving until 1885. He was an old-time Whig, and an active Republican, served as justice of the peace, and was a member of the school board for a number of years. Both he and his wife were always consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, opening their house for public worship before the town had either school houses or church buildings. They reared a family of three sons and one daughter: Orlando S.; Obed K.; Orpha, who died when ten years old; and James H. The last named enlisted when only fifteen years old in the 7th Wis. V. I., and served throughout the war as a member of the celebrated "Iron Brigade." He was taken prisoner and confined at Libby prison and on Belle Isle. While home on a furlough he married Miss Ortha McFall, who died in December, 1899, in Fayette county, Iowa, where she and her husband had resided for some years on a farm. Four of their children are now living, Archie, Dr. Louie (physician for the Northwestern road at Wall Lake, Iowa), Hermie, and George.

Obed K. Jones was brought to Wisconsin by his parents when a boy, and here he grew up on the farm and received a district-school education. He married Miss Harriet Gurnsey, a daughter of Joseph and Charlotte Gurnsey, of Blue River, Grant county, and old and honored residents of the State of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Jones lived with his mother after his father's death. She died in 1861, leaving him one son and one daughter: (1) DeForest, a farmer in Sac county, Iowa, graduated from the Platteville Normal School. He married Miss Clara Hurlburt, and they have five children, Harry, Olive, Hattie, Burt, and Gordon. (2) Harriet, the daughter, who was educated at the Platteville Normal, married David Murray, of Grant county, and they are now living on a farm in Iowa. They have a family of five children, Bessie Olive, Frank, Nellie, Genevieve and Ernest.

Mr. Jones enlisted in Company E. 33d Wis. V. I., in the spring of 1862, and served throughout the war. He was in the Western Army under Gen. Sherman, and was in many fiercely-fought battles and long marches, but survived all the perils of that great struggle, and came home in 1865. Two years later he married Miss Susan Janney, a daughter of Nathan and Elizabeth (Grimes) Janney, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. She was born in Wisconsin in 1836, and her parents were among the earliest settlers to take farm property near Platteville. Mrs. Jones was educated in the old academy at Platteville, and was among the successful teachers of Platteville and Galena for over fifteen years; she is a lady of culture and education, and has many warm friends. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jones moved to the old Jones homestead farm, where they have resided up to the present time. In 1892 Mr. Jones gave up active farm work, and turned the management of the farm business over to his son Frank. One son and one daughter were born to the second marriage. The daughter, Nellie, was born in 1868, and educated at the Platteville Normal. In 1889 she married Philip Winterheiller, of Grant county, and now resides in Pocahontas county, Iowa, where her husband is engaged in the real-estate business and farming. They have two children, Clyde and Clara. Frank C., the youngest son of our subject, was born in 1870, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and was a teacher for a short time. He married Miss Maude Johnston, daughter of Warren and Phoebe Johnston, one of Grant county's old and prominent pioneer families, and is now the manager of his father's interests on the home farm. They have three children, Frank, Ruth, and Helen.

Mr. Jones has been a Republican all his life. He and his wife and children are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, his wife being very prominent in the work of same. Fraternally he is a Mason, and he belongs to Sherman Post, G. A. R.

WARREN ELISHA GARDNER. of Brodhead, is one of the early settlers of Green county, and his life is a part of its history for more than half a century. Here he spent his boyhood and youth, and here he has lived and labored through all the intervening years. He is a man of character and standing, and may be justly pronounced one of the leading citizens of this part of the county.

Mr. Gardner was born in Bennington, Vt., Feb. 1, 1839, and is a son of Dewey and Samantha W. (Wadsworth) Gardner, both natives of Vermont. They had a family of three children, of whom Warren Elisha is now the only one living. The father was a farmer, and came to Wisconsin in 1845, locating in Waukesha for a year. After that he came to Green county, and secured a tract of two hundred forty acres from the Government. From time to time he added to this, until he had a magnificent rural estate of five hundred twelve acres. He lived in the town of Decatur until his death in 1873, at the age of sixty-six. His widow survived until 1898, when she died at the age of ninety-one years. They were Universalists in their religious convictions, and lived after the best ideals of their faith. He was a man of local standing and was called to fill various town offices from time to time. His father, Sylvester Gardner, was a native of Vermont, of German lineage, and he was born and bred a farmer, following that calling all his life. He reared a large family, and died in the East. The maternal grandfather of Warren Elisha Gardner was Samuel Wadsworth. He was a native of Vermont, of English descent, and a farmer all his life. He lived to be seventy-five years old, and reared a large family. He had a brother, Joseph, who served in the Revolutionary war.

Warren E. Gardner was only six years old when he came with his parents to Wisconsin, and he has lived in Green county since he was seven years old, so that he can say that practically his entire life has been passed in this State. He was reared on the farm, and attended the district school, finishing his schooling at the seminary at Evansville. When he became a man he taught school, and made a very creditable record as a teacher. But he was needed at home and he came back to the farm, where he remained assisting his father in its cultivation as long as he lived. When the father died, the farm was divided between the two brothers, Gurdon and Warren E. Warren E. continued on the old homestead until 1886, and it still remains in his possession. He has added to his inheritance until he now owns five hundred eighty-eight acres of as choice land as may be found in the southern part of the State, which is as much as to say anywhere in the United States, for Green county is a garden and a delight to the eye. In 1886 Mr. Gardner came to Brodhead with his mother to occupy a good home which he had just completed, and here his mother lived until her death.

Mr. Gardner is a staunch Republican. He was chairman of the town board several terms before moving to the city, and here he has served two terms as a member of the board of trustees of the corporation. For fourteen years he has been a resident of Brodhead, and is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of the place.

JACOB KARLEN. This gentleman has been a resident of Monroe, Green county, Wis., for the last twenty years, and in that time has made a large success of the cheese business, both as a producer and a wholesale dealer. He came to it somewhat late in life, but he was familiar with the cheese methods of his native land. Industrious and not afraid of hard work, he put character into every cheese he offered for sale. He is but a little past sixty years of age, yet he has achieved a very decided success, both in the accumulation of a fair fortune and the building up of a wide and prosperous trade. He was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 18, 1840, and is a son of Christ and Maria (Pfund) Karlen, both children of the mountain republic.

Christ Karlen was a stone mason by trade, and his death occurred in his native land in 1852, at the early age of forty-five years, the result of an accident while he was engaged in blasting. He left a widow and five sons, four of whom are now living: Christ, of Vilas, S. Dak.; Jacob; David, of Booneville, N. Y.;

Mr. E. Gardner

and Gottfried, of Beemer, Neb. The mother came to this country in 1875, and made her home with her children, dying in Monroe in 1898, when over eighty-three years of age. Both she and her husband were members of the Lutheran Church.

The father of Christ Karlen bore the name of Jacob Karlen, and he, too, was a stone mason by trade, and was a very hard working man. He died in his native land at the age of eighty-three. In 1798 he was drafted by Napoleon when the latter invaded Switzerland, and made a call for 1,800 men, but Mr. Karlen would not serve, and deserted the French army. In his family were eight sons and three daughters, several of whom are represented in this country. Joseph Pfund, the father of Maria (Pfund) Karlen, was a soldier in the Swiss army, and lived to be over seventy years of age.

Jacob Karlen, who is widely known as the Monroe cheese maker and dealer, was reared to manhood in his native community. He attended the Swiss schools, and had an education as good as the circumstances of his family could command. In November, 1862, Mr. Karlen and Miss Maryanna Zwahlen, the daughter of Christ and Anna (Beetschen) Zwahlen, were united in marriage, and to this union were born eleven children: Mary Ann, Magdalena, Jacob, Jr., Rosina, David, Anna, Gottlieb, Louisa, Samuel, Fritz, and Louis. The first five of these were born in Switzerland, and the others in this country. Mary Ann married John Becker, and lives in the town of Jefferson; they have five children, Mary, John, Jacob, Emma and Herman. Magdalena married John Werren, and lives in South Wayne, Wis.; they have one child, Edna. Jacob, Jr., married Kathrina Heftv, and has three children, Lillian Kathrina, Herman Jacob and Florence; Jacob, Jr., is in partnership with his father. Rosina is Mrs. Fred Schumacher, and lives near Browntown, Wis.; they have three children, Louisa, Lena and Fritz. David married Miss Malie Hoesli, and is the father of three children, Sylvia, Myrtle and Arthur. Anna is the deceased wife of John Karlen, of Buffalo, N. Y., and was the mother of three children, David, Huldah and Lilly. Gottlieb married Miss Kathrina Becker, and is a grocer in Monroe; they have one child, Marie. Louise and Samuel died about the same time, children of seven and five years, from diphtheria. Fritz, in business with his father, married Sophia Hoehn. Louis died when twenty-one years old.

In 1869 Mr. Karlen, his wife and five children, came to this country and located at Booneville, Oneida Co., N. Y., where they spent about a year, and then came on West to Wisconsin. They stopped for some months at Hanover, and presently arranged to have their permanent home in Green county, and for the last twenty years or more Mr. Karlen and his interesting family have been residents of the city of Monroe. He was reared a mason, but when he came to this county he saw an opening in the cheese business and was quick to take advantage of it, with marked success. His business extends to all parts of the United States, and with every passing year it is increasing. Mr. Karlen is an independent in politics. His home is on Farmer street, in Monroe.

BENJAMIN G. JONES. Among the well-known citizens of Grant county is Benjamin G. Jones, of Millville, proprietor of a flouring-mill at that place, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, having fought for the Union in the famous Iron Brigade. He enlisted in January, 1864, in Company C, 6th Wis. V. I., and joined the regiment at Culpeper, Va., participating in the terrible battles, marches and sieges which fell to the lot of the Army of the Potomac during the last desperate struggles of the war. All know the record of the Iron Brigade in the awful campaign of the Wilderness, in the siege of Petersburg, and the desperate battles attending that siege. Then, when Lee was compelled to leave his stronghold and flee before the terrible onslaughts of Grant's army, the Iron Brigade was foremost among the troops who pursued the Confederate army, and was present at the surrender at Appomattox. Mr. Jones participated in many severe battles in which the brigade was engaged, and had many narrow escapes, but was never severely injured. At the battle of Hatchie's Run a ball passed through his hat, and the force was sufficient to knock him down. He is in a fair condition of health, considering the severity of his army life, and yet he has suffered much from causes resulting therefrom, chief among which was a varicose limb, which compelled him to go on crutches for some time; he has never fully recovered in this respect.

A native of England, Mr. Jones was born in Northamptonshire Dec. 5, 1846, a son of John and Christina (Gamage) Jones. When he was a mere lad the family, comprising parents and four children, emigrated to America. Another child was born after coming to this country. Benjamin G. was the eldest son. The father passed away in 1887 at Bridgeport, Wis., where the aged mother still lives. On coming from England the family first located in Grant county, whence they removed to Crawford county.

Mr. Jones was reared to the occupation of farming, but also learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for a number of years. In the fall of 1878 he went to Nebraska, where he had come into possession of a milling interest, but after operating the mill for a period of twenty-one years he returned to Wisconsin, since which time he has owned and operated the mill at Millville.

Mr. Jones married Miss Rhoda O. Polley, and to them were born seven children, but the eldest child and only son is now deceased. They have an adopted son, however, David L. Jones. The daughters are all living. Externally Mr. Jones is a worthy member of W. H. Irwin Post, No. 70, G. A. R., of Nebraska. He takes an active interest in whatever tends to promote the prosperity of the community in which he lives, and is an extensive reader, keeping well informed on the political and general issues of the day. As a gallant soldier in the war for the Union, and one of the highly respected citizens of Millville, he is well deserving of honorable mention in the history of his adopted county.

THOMAS BRACKEN, of the town of Willow Springs, Lafayette county, is a son of Gen. Charles Bracken, who was one of the more prominent pioneers of Southwestern Wisconsin.

Charles Bracken was born April 6, 1797, in Pittsburg, Penn., and belonged to a family long established in that State, its first American representative having come to America about the time that William Penn established his colony. He was a youth at the time the second war with England broke out, and took an important part in that struggle for one so young. Some time after the close of that war

Mr. Bracken went to Cynthiana, Ky., where he was married May 30, 1820, to Sarah Jones, who was born in Baltimore March 1, 1799. The year 1828 found him at Galena, Ill., which had already become important as the chief point in the lead regions. From that time until his death, in 1861, he was intimately identified with the growth and development of Southwestern Wisconsin. Soon after Mr. Bracken located at Galena he was joined by his family, but on the breaking out of the Black Hawk war he sent them back to Kentucky, where they remained until the close of Indian hostilities. Mr. Bracken himself took an active part in that short but sharp struggle with the followers of Black Hawk. He assisted in building Fort Defiance, where he was made a lieutenant, and took part in a number of severe engagements with the Indians.

Mr. Bracken was one of the earliest to engage in the smelting business in Lafayette county, and carried on that business quite extensively for a number of years. He established a blast furnace smelter in Section 35, Town 4, Range 3, East, now the township of Willow Springs, where he smelted both copper and lead ore. He had previously built several ash furnaces at different points. Mr. Bracken had entered from the government a large tract of land, and in 1833 settled with his family where his son now lives, and where he lived until his death, which occurred in April, 1861, when he was aged sixty-four years. His wife had passed away in 1849. Gen. Bracken, as he was commonly called, was a man of much more than the average ability. Possessing great energy and perseverance, he contributed as much as any other one man to the development of Lafayette county, and in its early annals deserves a place with such men as Judge Dunn, Col. Parkinson, Elias Pilling, Moses Meeker, Dennis Murphy, Major Sheldon, and other representative pioneers whose names might be mentioned. In his political affiliations he was a Whig of the Old School, and he was active and influential in the councils of his party, serving as a member of the General Assembly in 1858.

Gen. Bracken and his wife became the parents of nine children, of whom seven lived to mature years, but only three are living at the time of this writing (1901). The oldest of these, Charles James Bracken, is a resident of Hot Springs, S. Dak.; Mrs. Jane Simpson, the only surviving daughter, lives at Mineral Point; Thomas Bracken is the subject proper of this article.

Thomas Bracken was born Nov. 4, 1838, on the family homestead, the establishment of which, in 1833, is noted above. He obtained his education in the common schools, and in what was then Platteville Academy, in 1860. His father was a competent surveyor, and the son prepared for that profession, and in the spring of 1862 went to the Northwest Territories for the purpose of engaging in government work. Congress had made no appropriations for that work, and the young man was disappointed, but remained some nine years in the Far West.

Mrs. Thomas Bracken was formerly Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Benson, who brought his family from England to the United States in 1849, and lived for a time in Willow Springs, where friends of the family had long been established. The father died when sixty-two years of age, the mother living to be eighty-two. Their children are all living, and include Daniel, who is a resident of Willow Springs; Joseph, who lives in Iowa; Mrs. Bracken; and John, of Plainfield, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bracken have one son, William, who is still at home. Thomas Bracken is living where the greater part of his life has been passed. He is one of the most reliable and universally respected members of the farming community in this part of the State. He has a pleasant farm home, and his broad and well-tilled acres show everywhere the work of a man to whom agriculture is not only work but a pleasure. Generally affiliating with the Democratic party, he has come to take strong ground on the liquor question, and of late he has felt that is the main problem now before the American people. Hence his sympathies go out very largely to the Prohibition party. With his family he holds membership in the Primitive Methodist Church.

E. M. CURKEET, one of the substantial and prominent agriculturists of Elk Grove township, Lafayette county, is known among his neighbors as a successful and prosperous farmer and stock raiser, and is most highly regarded as a representative man, both in public and in private, in his town.

The birth of our subject took place on his present homestead, March 1, 1854. He is a son of John and Jane (Martin) Curkeet, the former born at St. Martins, England, in September, 1810, his wife in Melore, England, in 1812. Both grew to maturity in their native country, where they married, coming to America in 1843. Their first location was at Galena, Ill., where Mr. Curkeet engaged some years in mining, and they then moved to Wisconsin, where he purchased a farm near Elk Grove. In 1868 he purchased a farm near Darlington, and moved on it. In 1874 he purchased a home in Hardin county, Iowa, where he died in 1887, our subject's mother surviving until 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Curkeet were good and pious people, Mr. Curkeet being a local preacher in the M. E. Church for a number of years, and one of the founders and supporters of the first M. E. Church in Elk Grove. In his good work he was ably assisted by his worthy wife, neither ever tiring in their mission of good. In politics Mr. Curkeet supported the Republican party. The children born to these worthy people were: Elizabeth A., born in 1838, married Frank McNett, of Lafayette county; later they moved to Georgetown, and still later to Elk Grove, where she died; their children were John, Henry, Elizabeth, and Frank. Robert, born in 1841, married Mary Deselhorst, of Lafayette county, became a large stock raiser in Grundy county, Iowa, where he bred blooded stock, and later moved to Hardin county, where he lived until his death, in 1894. Jennie, born in 1844, lives in Hardin county, Iowa. William J., born in 1846, married Adela Woods, of Darlington, and died in Fonda, Iowa, leaving a daughter, Rena. James, born in 1848, married Emily Julian, of Mineral Point, and lives in Platteville, having one son, Justice, born in 1851, married Lizzie A. Thomas, followed farming for some years, and then engaged in merchandising at Elk Grove, later moving to Darlington; he died in 1892, leaving a wife and two sons, now living in Denver, Colo. E. M. is our subject.

Our subject received his early education in the district schools of Elk Grove, and later entered the high school of Darlington. He engaged in farming until his marriage, in 1878, to Miss Hattie A. Jones, the daughter of J. W. and Catherine Jones, one of the most prominent of the old pioneer families. Mrs. Curkeet was born May 6, 1855, and as she grew up was educated in the best schools of the county, also receiving a superior musical education. After marriage our subject purchased the old homestead, and continued to occupy the frame house erected by his father until 1889, when the present elegant, modern home was built. Since that time many improvements have been made in the way of commodious barns and outbuildings of a substantial character. Our subject and wife own 267½ acres of fine, well cultivated land at their location, and their place is one of the most attractive in the township, all the surroundings telling of the culture and refinement of the inmates.

Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Curkeet: Lillian, born in Elk Grove Aug. 14, 1879, was educated in the Platteville Normal and at St. Clair Academy, of Wisconsin, and is a young lady of superior attainments and attractions; John E., born in 1881, is one of the advanced students in the Normal school; Orvil was born in 1891. Politically our subject is a Republican, is now a justice of the peace, and has been roadmaster and a member of the school board. For thirty-eight years Mrs. Curkeet has been a necessary adjunct to the choir in the M. E. Church, her duties as organist beginning when she was but nine years old. Her musical accomplishments assist in making pleasant the beautiful and hospitable home of our subject, and the whole family is one which the residents of Elk Grove delight to esteem.

EDWIN JOHNSON (deceased) was numbered among the prosperous retired farmer citizens of Platteville, Grant county, where he enjoyed the comforts of life removed from active business, though he took a deep interest in the welfare of the community.

Mr. Johnson was born in Avoca, County Wicklow, Ireland, Nov. 2, 1817, a son of Richard and Mary Johnson, who were born and spent their lives in the Emerald Isle. Of the ten children born to them, our subject is the only one who crossed the ocean, and was the last to pass away. Receiving an excellent education in his native land, Mr. Johnson followed a sea-faring life for a number of years, sailing between Liverpool, New York and New Orleans, after which he located in Baltimore. After a few years, at the time of the Black Hawk troubles, he migrated West, locating at Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., and engaged in mining lead and other ores. Later

Mr. Johnson settled at Belmont, having purchased a large tract of prairie and timber land, which he greatly improved, acquiring over 1,000 acres in and around Belmont, of which he was the founder. In 1887 Mr. Johnson purchased a pleasant home in Platteville, near the State College, where he resided until his death, Nov. 19, 1900.

In 1839 Mr. Johnson married Miss Elizabeth Johnson, of Ireland, and she bore him ten children, four now living: Elizabeth, the eldest living, now Mrs. Samuel Fitzsimmons, of Mineral Point, Wis.; Mary, wife of William Marsh, of Mineral Point; Abigail, wife of Dr. Cronin, of Lancaster, Wis.; and Sarah, Mrs. Samuel O'Neill, of Chicago; the remaining children died in childhood. In 1865 Mr. Johnson lost his wife, and in 1866 he married Emily Stephens, daughter of Michael Stephens, one of the old pioneers of Platteville. To the second marriage three children were born: Edwin A. is mentioned below; Eva, born in Grant county, was well educated in the public schools and the Normal at Platteville, and is now at home; Annie died at the age of seven. In September, 1896, Mr. Johnson was again bereaved, his wife passing away at their home in Platteville.

Politically Mr. Johnson was a member of the Democratic party, and while residing in Belmont held a number of State and town offices, becoming well known for his upright principles and faithful discharge of his duties. In religious matters he was a consistent member of the Catholic Church. He was instrumental in forwarding the commercial importance of Platteville, at one time dealing quite extensively in real estate, improving property, and enhancing its value. All of his children who attained maturity are a credit to him and the city from which they hail, and our subject was justly regarded as a man of sterling worth, upright integrity, and pleasing personality. He numbered his friends by legions.

EDWIN A. JOHNSON was born May 14, 1870, was educated in the public schools and at the Chicago Veterinary College, receiving the degree of M. D. C. in 1896. He is now engaged in the practice of veterinary surgery. In April, 1898, he married Miss Grace Johnson, of Montfort, daughter of John Johnson, one of the pioneers of southern Wisconsin, and they have one daughter, Emily, born Dec. 9, 1900.

Edwin Johnson

JAMES ROBISON, a worthy representative of one of the prominent pioneer families of Grant county, was too young to enter the service at the inauguration of the Civil war, but in January, 1864, he enlisted, at Platteville, in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., for a period of three years or during the war, being mustered into the United States service at Madison. He entered the army just in time to take part with his regiment in Gen. Sherman's Atlanta campaign, participating in its famous battles, beginning with the engagement at Resaca. He was in the celebrated march to the sea, and took part in the Carolina campaign and the grand review at Washington, D. C., at the close of the war. He continued in the army for some time after hostilities ceased, being mustered out at Louisville, Ky., July 16, 1865.

A native of Grant county, Mr. Robison was born in Platteville township in 1848, a son of William R. and Ann (Gregor) Robison. The father was born in Pennsylvania, and when a young man came to Grant county, Wis., where his marriage was celebrated. For many years he followed farming in Platteville township, where his death occurred in 1886. His widow now makes her home in Dubuque, Iowa. In their family were seven children, namely: Mary Jane, now Mrs. Heinney, of Harrison township, Grant county; James, who is next in the order of birth; Oliver Henry, a resident of Iowa; Agnes A., wife of Augustus Cooper, of Dubuque; Elizabeth, Mrs. Nye, a resident of Madison, Wis.; and Rhoda May, Mrs. Kane, and William R., both of Dubuque, Iowa.

James Robison grew to manhood in Harrison township, Grant county, and for a number of years was engaged in mining, spending part of this time in the mining districts of the far West. Returning to his native county, he located in Cassville township in 1892, and has since successfully engaged in farming. In the township of Hazel Green, Grant county, he was united in marriage with Miss Oaklief, daughter of Jacob and Rose Ann (Roselief) Oaklief. The father was a native of Germany, removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio, and later came to Grant county, Wis., being at present a resident of Waterloo township. Mr. and Mrs. Robison have the following children: Charles Henry, Carrie, Lottie May, Laura, Oscar J., Arthur and Ethel

D. Mr. Robison uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party, and gives his influence to all enterprises which he believes calculated to advance the interests of his town and county along any line.

MICHAEL McKENNA, deceased. The founder of one of the most respected families of Platteville, Grant county, was Francis McKenna, a native of Ireland, born in County Tyrone. He married Sarah O'Neil, and after some years came with his little family to America, in the hope of providing better for his children.

Remaining in Pittsburg, Penn., for a short time, Mr. McKenna followed the influx of settlers then drifting toward Wisconsin, and settled at Mineral Point, on a farm, some time later securing what became the old homestead near Moscow, Iowa Co., Wis., owning at one time 1,300 acres of land. Francis McKenna was an educated man, and became one of the leading citizens of Moscow, where he and his wife died, leaving a family of four children: Anna, born in Ireland, married a Mr. Cox, who resided at Moscow, but is now deceased; her daughter Ellen is the wife of a Mr. Matson, of Iona, Minn. Teresa, born in Ireland, married Samuel McWilliams, of Iowa county, and had nine children, Hugh (a well-known lawyer in the State of Oregon), Frank (of Ashland, Oregon), Mary (Mrs. Phelan, of Iowa), James, John (of Colorado), Sarah (of Colorado), Terissa, Michael and Jennie (all of Iowa). Eliza is deceased. Michael was the next in the family. John, born in Ireland, who resides with his family in Madison, Wis., is the only survivor of the family.

Michael McKenna was a boy of eight years when he accompanied his parents to America. Attending the district school, he received a fair education, and remained with his parents on the farm until his marriage, Jan. 1, 1872, to Miss Mary L. Eddy, daughter of William W. and Eliza (Morgan) Eddy, old and prominent pioneers of Lafayette county. William W. Eddy was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, married Miss Eliza Morgan, a native of Vermont, and after their marriage, which took place at Manchester, Ill., where they became acquainted, they settled first at Apple River, Ill., where they lived several years. Leaving there, they made a permanent home in Yellow Stone, Lafayette Co., Wis., where they both died, the father in 1872, the mother in 1868. Six children were born to them, of whom Mrs. McKenna and her brother Horace, of Kenosha, are the only survivors; the latter has a family of six children. Mrs. McKenna was born in September, 1852, and was well educated, first in the district schools, later in the Sisters' Catholic School, at Mineral Point, and became one of the successful teachers in that town for a number of terms.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. McKenna settled down to agricultural life at the old homestead in Iowa county, known as "Riverside stock farm," which she and her family still own, remaining there until the death of Mr. McKenna, Sept. 9, 1892. In 1896 the remaining members at home moved into Platteville, where they have a pleasant home. The father showed his devotion to his children by his care in advancing their educational opportunities, and the home is one of intelligence and refinement. The following children were born to our subject and wife: Frank J., born in December, 1873, was educated at Sacred Heart College, Watertown, Wis., later taking a course at the State University, Madison, and is now the competent manager of the Conrad Houser ranch, in Dodge county, Wis.; the old homestead will soon be his permanent home. Hugh C., born in 1875, graduated in the class of 1898 at the Platteville Normal School, and then entered the Medical Department of the State University, at Madison, where he was graduated in June, 1900; he is at present a Sophomore in Rush Medical College, Chicago. Charles M., born in 1877, graduated from the Platteville State Normal School in the class of 1900, and is the principal of the eighth grade in the high school of Darlington. Mamie, born in 1879, graduated at the Platteville Normal School in June, 1900, is a teacher at Red Wood Falls, Minn. Alice, born in 1882, graduated from the Platteville Normal School in June, 1900. John F., born in 1884, is a student of the Normal School. Alberta was born in 1887, and Joseph M. in 1891.

Politically Mr. McKenna was a lifelong Democrat, and an active and influential politician, was a delegate to the State conventions, and held all of the minor local offices in the gift of the party. Mr. McKenna reared his family in the Roman Catholic faith, as he had been reared, and through life was a devout adherent of same, giving liberally of his means to its support, and as nearly as possible following its teachings. His family grew up to do him credit, and in all the locality surrounding the old home where he was known so well none speak of him except in terms of the highest praise. Mrs. McKenna is still spared to her family, and takes pride in the education and advancement of her children, and in the honorable positions which they occupy in the community.

JOSEPH L. BEAR has devoted the better part of his life to the cultivation of the soil, and may be fairly selected as a representative member of the farming community of Rock county. At the present time he is a resident of the city of Janesville, and takes pride in the fact that he belongs to the State of Wisconsin, both by birth and choice. He has filled various public positions of trust and honor, and in them he has displayed integrity and public spirit.

Mr. Bear was born in Rock county, Wis., March 20, 1847, and is a son of James and Sarah (Lawrence) Bear, both born and reared in Pennsylvania, who were the parents of four sons and three daughters. Four of their children are now living: Hanna is the wife of James Slawson, of Rock Creek, Iowa; Louise is the wife of E. R. Jones, of Marshalltown, Iowa; Joseph L. and Sarah J., the wife of B. L. Gage, live in Janesville. James Bear, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in 1845, locating on a farm of seventy-five acres in Janesville township, near the city. To this he afterward added fifty acres, and there he lived and reared his family. His wife died in 1891, at the age of sixty-eight, and with her husband belonged to the United Brethren. He was born in 1817, and died Feb. 1, 1900, of heart failure, at the age of eighty-two years, two months and seven days. Mr. Bear was supervisor of the township several times, and was also treasurer of the school board. He was a Republican, and a man of strong convictions. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent, and died in that State in middle life, leaving a large family. Joseph Lawrence, the father of Sarah Lawrence, was born in Pennsylvania, and came of English stock. He was a farmer, and came into Wisconsin in 1846, locating in Janesville township, not far from the city, and died in 1881, when eighty-one years old. He had three children.

Joseph L. Bear was reared on his father's farm in the township of Janesville, attended the district school, and began a course of study at Milton Academy, where he was doing very well. But he could not continue in school with the whole country aflame, and he went to the war when only fourteen years old. This was in 1862, and notwithstanding his extreme youth he completed a three years' term of service; he did not return home until the last ember of the Rebellion was extinguished. He entered the service a private, and was a corporal at the time of his discharge, Sept. 4, 1865. He was a member of Company G, 8th Wis. V. I., and took part in the battles of Iuka, Corinth, the siege of Vicksburg, Banks' expedition up the Red river, Nashville, Mobile, and many skirmishes, and throughout sustained himself with the spirit of a veteran. In May, 1866, our subject enlisted in the regular army, was attached to Company A, 3d United States Infantry, and completed a second term of three years. In the regular service he was quartermaster-sergeant, and had he elected to continue had prospects of a flattering nature before him.

Mr. Bear left the army when his second term of enlistment was completed, and coming back to the homestead farm entered upon its cultivation and management. He remained upon the place until 1892, when he bought it, and it is still in his possession. That year he was elected sheriff of Rock county, in which incumbency he served two years with credit. He moved to the city, made his home at No. 204 South Main street, and there he has since remained. He has had faith in the future of Janesville, and has made liberal investments in residence property in various parts of the city, most of which he still holds. Mr. Bear and Miss Mary E. Taylor, a daughter of Robert T. and Priscilla M. (Nelson) Taylor, were married Nov. 11, 1873, and they have had three children, Robert J., Maud P., and John. Robert J. is clerk in a grocery store. Maud P. married Herbert A. Griffy. John was seventeen years of age when he died. Mr. Bear is a member of W. H. Sargent Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and also holds membership in the Knights of Pythias. He is a Republican: was supervisor of Janesville township for seven years; was also school director and township constable; was treasurer of the township of Janesville four years; for the last three years he has been supervisor of the Third ward in Janesville; and is at present (1901) serving as chairman of the county board of supervisors.

JOHN BUXTON, one of the prosperous merchants of Lead Mine, New Diggings township, Lafayette county, was born in Yorkshire, England, April 15, 1849.

Joseph Buxton, his father, was born in Yorkshire in January, 1822, and his wife, Elizabeth Harker, in May, 1824. They were married in England, and in 1862 came to America, settling in Wisconsin. Joseph Buxton engaged in farming and mining in New Diggings township, devoting himself almost exclusively to the former occupation during the latter years of his life. He and his wife were earnest followers of John Wesley, and liberal supporters of the Methodist Church in their new home. In politics Mr. Buxton was a Republican, continuing firm in the principles of that party until his death, in 1888. His wife passed away in 1866. In their family were nine children: (1) John is the eldest. (2) Elizabeth, born in 1851, married Albert Merritt, and now lives in Globe, Ariz. They have two children, Robert and Lucy. (3) William, born in England in 1853, engaged in mercantile business with his brother John until his death, in 1884. He was postmaster of the village for a number of years. (4) Thomas, born in 1855, is now a farmer in Lead Mine. He married Mary Alderson, of New Diggings, and has five children, Annie, Luella, Nellie, Ollie, and Edward E. (5) Joseph, born in 1857, moved from Wisconsin to Silver Plume, Colo., where he is engaged in gold mining. He married Vinnie Vivian, and his children are named William Marcus, Delores Vivian, James Morton, Etienne Vance, Viola May, Fennimore Wendell, Vesta Mary and Joseph Menton. (6) James, born in 1860, is engaged in mercantile business in Hazel Green, Wis. He married Hattie Hunt, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has two children, Clifford and Vanese. (7) George, born in 1861, is a city drayman in Sioux Falls, S. Dak. He married Adaline Buxton, of Lafayette county, and has ten children, Orville Ray, Walter Lewis, John Lester, Lorena Essie, Pearl Odessa, Myrtle Ana, Forrest Herrald, Hazel Almeda, Lilah May, and George Otis. (8)

Mark E., born in New Diggings in 1863, married Rachel Pedelty, who has borne him three children, and they make their home on the old Pedelty homestead. (9) Matthew M., born in New Diggings in 1865, is a railroad employe, residing at Leadville, Colo., where he married.

John Buxton received a fair education in the schools of England, and after the removal of the family to Wisconsin studied for one or two winters in the Lead Mine schools. When he started out in life for himself he first engaged in mining, continuing in same until the spring of 1880. That year, in connection with his brother William, he purchased Mr. Harker's general store in Lead Mine, and has met with great success in his mercantile venture. He has held the office of assistant postmaster for many years. He has become quite well-to-do, and now has one of the largest stores in his section of the State, his honorable dealings and pleasant manners having won new customers, and kept the old ones.

In 1884 Mr. Buxton was married, to Miss Hannah Pedelty, daughter of James and Sarah Pedelty, of Grant county. She died at her home in Lead Mine in 1885. In 1888 Mr. Buxton wedded Miss Lizzie Ingram, who was born in Lafayette county, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Ingram. Mr. and Mrs. Buxton are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he has given most liberally. In his political faith he is inclined toward the principles of the Republican party.

HON. REUBEN B. SHOWALTER, president of the Meyer Showalter State Banking Institution, an ex-Union soldier, and one of the most substantial and influential residents of Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Pennsylvania June 3, 1842, and represents a prominent family that has been identified with the history of Grant county for half a century.

Reuben K. Showalter, father of Reuben B., was also a native of the Keystone State, where he passed all his life, dying when his son Reuben B. was a child. Mrs. Rachel Showalter, the mother of Reuben B., came with her six children—four sons and two daughters—from Pennsylvania to Grant county, Wis., and located in Lancaster township. She passed away at Beetown June 28, 1868. The sons for several years were employed in mining.

Of these, Robert died prior to the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion; the other three all served in the Union army, and John, who was lieutenant of Company C, 2nd Wisconsin Cavalry, contracted disease while in the service, from the effects of which he died in 1865, soon after the war had closed. The elder of the two sisters, Sarah, was married to Charles Brownfield, and died many years ago. The younger sister, who was the youngest but one of the family, became the wife of James Hughes, of Glen Haven, Grant county.

Reuben B. Showalter grew to manhood in the mining districts of Grant county, and was educated in the common schools. At the outbreak of the Civil war, in 1861, he was desirous of becoming a soldier at once, and enlisted in the fall of that year. But owing to unpropitious conditions outside of his control he did not enter the service until 1864, when he became a member of Company C, 2nd Wisconsin Cavalry, and with his regiment took an active and gallant part in many important raids and expeditions in the Southwest, including Grierson's raid, the operations in Mississippi in the neighborhood of Vicksburg, including the second battle of Champion's Hill, and several other sanguinary engagements.

After the Rebellion had been stamped out Mr. Showalter returned to his home, and for several years was again employed in mining. In politics a Republican, he was elected superintendent of the Poor Farm and Insane Asylum, and officiated in that capacity fifteen years. He later represented his district in the State Legislature, serving in the sessions of 1886-87-88-89; was elected chairman of the board of supervisors of Grant county in 1891-92-93-94-95-96-97-98; and has served the city as alderman and mayor. In 1888 he became connected with the banking interests of Lancaster, and has been president of the Meyer Showalter Banking Institution, ever since it was incorporated as a State bank, July 1, 1892.

Mr. Showalter married Miss Martha J. Arthur, a prominent Relief Corps woman, she having held department offices for a number of years. Mrs. Showalter was born in Maquoketa, Iowa, daughter of the Rev. Evan Arthur, a sketch of whose life may be found elsewhere. Mr. and Mrs. Showalter have had three children, the first of whom died in infancy; Virgil L. is employed in the bank with his father; Estelle is the wife of William B. Carter, of

T. B. Shewalter.

Seattle, Wash., who is engaged in the Puget Sound National Bank.

Mr. Showalter is a Blue Lodge and Chapter Mason, and was master of his lodge seven years; is also prominent in Grand Army circles, a past commander of his post, and at present Department Inspector of G. A. R. posts of the Department of Wisconsin. Socially he and family stand at the front, and their prominence in this respect, and their individual traits of character, which are of an exalted standard, naturally command general esteem.

THOMAS COOMBE, a thoroughly honorable and upright man, who is a stock and grain farmer of the town of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born in Lafayette county, Wis., July 30, 1844.

William and Elizabeth (Rodda) Coombe, his parents, were natives of Cornwall, England, the father born in 1803, and the mother in 1813. Mr. and Mrs. Coombe were married in England, and became the parents of three children before they came to this country, in 1841. The voyage across the ocean was made in a sailing-vessel; from New York to Pittsburg the greater part of the journey was made in a canal-boat; from Pittsburg they floated down the Ohio; came up the Mississippi to Galena, Ill.; and from there to Lafayette county, Wis., where he was to have work in the lead mines. In 1851 Mr. Coombe purchased eighty acres of land in the town of Hazel Green, two miles west of the village, where he made a home for his family in the wilderness. In those days the Indians were still numerous in the Western States, and gave the adventurous pioneer settlers no little trouble, and danger as well. In 1851 Mr. Coombe went to the gold fields of California, by the Isthmus route, and remained in the land of gold for three years or more. Returning to Wisconsin in 1854, he took up the work of a farmer, and followed it until his death in 1863, leaving a wife and eight children. Two of his sons were in California at that time. Mr. Coombe was an active worker in the Methodist Church, and in politics he was first a Whig and afterward a Republican. Mrs. Coombe lived on the family home until her death, in 1896.

(1) William, the eldest son, was born in England, and educated in Wisconsin. When a young man he went to California, and was killed in the gold mines. A widow and two children, who still live in California, survive him. (2) John, born in England, went to California when a young man, and worked some time in the mines. Turning to the work of a surveyor, he found a calling badly needed at that time, and, qualifying himself, was elected surveyor of the county in which he lived, and became very prominent. He married a Miss Waters, and spent the rest of his life in California, dying in 1892; he left a widow, but no children. (3) Elizabeth, born in England, is now the widow of John S. Williams, of Hazel Green. (4) Blanche, born in Lafayette county in 1842, married William Redd, and lives in Dubuque, Iowa. To their union were born eight children, Mamie, Emma, Charles, Allie, Bertha, John, Stella, and Lucile. (5) Thomas is our subject. (6) Emma, born in Lafayette county in 1849, is the wife of Thomas Pierce, of Georgetown, Grant county. (7) Jane, born in 1851, always remained with her parents until they passed away, and has since lived with her brother Thomas.

Thomas Coombe obtained his early education in the district schools of Lafayette and Grant counties, and grew up on the farm, which came under his management when he was only nineteen years of age, his father dying at that time. He has always remained at the old home, and has had charge of its cultivation to the present time. In 1869 he bought sixty acres of land adjoining, which he has added to the old homestead, making it one of the choice farms in the region.

Mr. Coombe has always been a Republican, and in religion he supports the Methodist Church. The Coombe family is one of the oldest and most highly respected pioneer families in this part of the State. All its members are known for their kindly disposition, and their Christian acts toward their fellow men.

JOHN EPLETT, a retired official now living in Platteville, Grant county, has had a varied and eventful history. He has passed through many interesting and suggestive experiences, and has kept his hands clean, and his character unstained.

Mr. Eplett was born June 1, 1825, in London, England, son of John and Sarah (Mance) Eplett, who were born and married in England. In 1851 they emigrated to this country, and settled at Mineral Point, Wis., living in that town until 1854, Mr. Eplett following his trade of millwright. In the year mentioned the family moved to Jo Daviess county, Ill., and spent the next two years on a farm, which he then sold, moving to Smelser, near Cuba, Wis., where he spent some time. Reports of the opportunities of getting on in the world that were to be had in southwestern Wisconsin reached the ears of the elder Eplett, and he moved his family to Georgetown, Grant county, where he and his wife spent the rest of their lives, he dying Aug. 16, 1871, and his wife in 1890. They had a family of six children: Mary A., born in England in 1820, grew to womanhood in that country, and married William Jennings, and has two children; they still reside in her native land. Elizabeth, born in England in 1822, married John Burnette, and is now deceased; they had one son, John, now living in Iowa. John is our subject. Sarah, born in 1828, married Henry Craze, who died in California, leaving one son, Charles, who died a few years later; the widow afterward married Herman De Graff, of New York, and they are now living in Illinois; they have two children, Ella and Lawrence, the former the wife of John W. Oliver, of Apple River. Jane, born in 1831, grew up in England, came with her parents to Wisconsin, and married James Minor, of Cornwall, England, who settled near Galena and remained in Illinois for some years, thence moving to Colorado, where he held the position of foreman in the mines of one of the large silver companies of that State; they have five children, Annie, John, Sarah, Thomas and Herman. Catherine, born in England, married Edwin W. Crockett in 1851; they were in California for a time after their marriage, and then made their home at Alden, Iowa, where they both died, leaving five children—Edwin, deceased; Emily, wife of a Mr. Poppy; John, county clerk at Eldora, Iowa; Annie, wife of Joseph Byers, of Alden; and Frank, of Eldora.

John Eplett was educated substantially in the schools of his native country. When a young man he learned the trade of millwright under the instruction of his father, and worked at his trade some years before coming to the United States. In 1850 the young millwright came to Wisconsin, and settled at Mineral Point, where he found employment at his chosen craft for some years. In 1851 Mr. Eplett married Miss Joanna Vivian, daughter of Francis and Anna Vivian, her parents dying in England, where she was born. Mr. Eplett and his young wife settled in Grant county, where he maintained himself with credit by working at his trade until 1892. That year he was elected county clerk and moved to Lancaster, living in that city nine years, throughout which time he held the important position mentioned. Before being elected county clerk he held the position of town clerk nine years, was also justice of the peace, and for two years Mr. Eplett served the house at Madison as enrolling clerk, filling that office with satisfaction to all and credit to himself. He is thoroughly versed in public affairs, and has proved himself a capable and trustworthy man. In 1897 Mr. Eplett purchased real estate, an addition to his homestead, where he erected a fine house, finished in hard wood, and equipped with all the modern conveniences. Mrs. Eplett died in 1885, leaving three children. Elizabeth, born at Mineral Point in 1852, was educated in the schools of the neighborhood, and is a lady of culture; since the death of her mother she has had charge of the home. Sarah, born in Smelser, Aug. 13, 1857, became the wife of C. B. Gray, a merchant of Galena, Ill., and died in October, 1893, leaving three children, John R., Curtis and Harrison; these boys have been reared in the home of their grandfather, in Platteville, by their aunt Elizabeth, who has given them the care and attention of a mother. Mary, born in Smelser, is now the wife of Thomas Dent, a farmer of Smelser; they have three sons, Floyd, Raymond and Donald. Mr. Eplett has always been identified with the Republican party, and cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. He is a member of the Methodist Church, as was also his wife, and fraternally belongs to the Masonic order. He is a man of character and standing in his own community.

SAMUEL B. LOOMIS, of Brodhead, Green county, has been a farmer and a painter during his more active life, and is now living in the enjoyment of a competence acquired by industry and thrift through long and useful years.

Mr. Loomis was born at Bennington, Vt., Oct. 18, 1826, and is a son of Jesse and Sarah (Blackmer) Loomis, both natives of that place. Jesse Loomis was born July 11, 1794, and died Oct. 21, 1849. His wife was born March 12, 1799, and died in 1865. They had three children, two of whom are now living. Samuel B. and Frances H., the latter the widow of Henry Johnson, of Chicago. The father was a stage proprietor when a young man, and ran all the stages out of Bennington. In later life he was a hotel keeper at North Bennington. His father also bore the name of Jesse Loomis. He was a native of England, and came to this country about 1777, and served in the Revolutionary army, being with Gen. Washington at Valley Forge. He drew a pension for his services in that great struggle, which came to his widow after his death at Bennington, at the age of eighty-eight years. He was a farmer, and had a family of nine children. The father of Mrs. Sarah B. Loomis was a native of Vermont, and a farmer; he was twice married, and was the father of eleven children.

Samuel B. Loomis was reared in a hotel at Bennington, Vt., until he was about eighteen years old. He then learned the painter's trade, which was his calling for fifty-five years. He attended the school at Bennington, and at Hoosick Falls, N. Y. When he was married he took his wife to Troy, N. Y., where he lived a year or more, and then came to Wisconsin. He located at Janesville, where he spent a year, and then bought a farm. This he tilled one year, and then sold it for double the money it cost, and returned to Janesville, where he lived five years. He spent some time in the town of Spring Valley on a farm, and then came to Brodhead, and this city has been his home for many years.

Mr. Loomis and Miss S. Lorinda Burdick were married Aug. 28, 1848. She was the daughter of Joseph T. and Eunice (Scriven) Burdick, and became the mother of nine children, Frances H., Lilly H., Norman B., Willie H., Emma Josephine, George A., Mae B., James Spencer and Sara E. Frances H. married James T. Smith, and lives at Tacoma, Wash., and has two daughters, Maud and Norma. Lilly H. married James H. Horne, now deceased; they had six children, Jessie B. (who married Orrin Brewer, and has two children, Rodney and "Bud"), Alice M. (who married William T. Green, and has one son, Orvill), Robert W., Grace E., Tina M., and Harry; Mrs. Horne lives in Brodhead. Norman B. died when twenty-nine years old; he had married Miss Sarah L. Spencer, and was the father of one daughter, Bessie M. Willie H. married Miss Florence Weller, and lives in South Dakota, where he is engaged in farming; they are the parents of four children, Albert Spencer, George, Samuel R., and Lora Mae. Emma Josephine, who died in 1871, at the age of eleven years and six months. George A., a graduate of the Brodhead high school, class of 1880, died in October, 1885, aged twenty-three years and eight months. Mae B., a graduate of the same school, class of 1884, is a teacher in the high school at Brodhead. James Spencer, a stationary engineer in a large elevator at Tacoma, Wash., married Miss Mamie Lauby, and has two sons, Harry Burdick and Jess. Sara E., who was graduated from the Brodhead high school in 1887, and from the Whitewater State Normal in 1899, is a teacher in Madison, Wisconsin.

Mr. Loomis belongs to the Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M. In politics he is a Democrat. His wife owns a farm of twenty acres in the corporate limits of Brodhead. Her parents, Joseph T. Burdick and Eunice Scriven Burdick, were natives of Rensselaer county, N. Y., where they spent their entire lives. He died in 1848, at the age of forty-seven. His widow survived him many years, and died in 1884, at a very great age. Ten children were born to them. They were both devout members of the Methodist Church, and he was a farmer and a blacksmith. His father also bore the name of Joseph Burdick, and was a native of New York, but died in Janesville, Wis. He married Elizabeth Scriven. Mrs. Loomis' maternal grandparents were John Scriven and his wife, Eunice Chandler, the former of whom attained a very great age.

Mr. Loomis had a brother, Norman B., who was an auditor in the Illinois Central railroad service at Chicago for some twenty-five years, and died in 1898, at the age of sixty-nine.

LEWIS F. BENNETT, M. D., is one of the younger physicians of Beloit, Rock county, and has rapidly made his way into the forefront of his profession in this part of the State. He has acquired a wide knowledge of the theory of medicine, and is very skillful in his application of its great and fundamental principles to the treatment of disease. He seeks to cure, and in the last dozen years has won an enviable reputation in his chosen calling.

Dr. Bennett was born in the town of Lima, Rock Co., Wis., Nov. 10, 1860, and is a son of George and Susan F. (Osmond) Bennett, both natives of New York. They were the parents of five children, three of whom are now living: Dr. Lewis F.; Dr. O. G., deceased, who was a popular dentist in Janesville; Chester C., a shoe dealer at Janesville; James B., a farmer in the town of Lima; and one who died in infancy. The father was a farmer, and came from New York to Wisconsin about 1850, locating on a farm near Lima, where he and his wife still reside. In religious faith they are Baptists, and are recognized by their neighbors as genuine Christians. He is a Republican. His father, Nathaniel Bennett, was born in New York, where he followed farming all his days. He died in middle life, leaving five children. His father was a soldier in the Revolution. The family is descended from English ancestry. Caleb Osmond, the father of Mrs. Susan F. Bennett, mentioned above, was born in England, and coming to this country in 1829, settled in the western part of New York. He soon moved still farther West, and found a home in what was then almost on the frontier line, the vicinity of Mansfield, Ohio, finally removing to Wisconsin, where he effected a settlement near Milton Junction about 1855, and engaged in farming until his death, about 1880, when he was ninety years old. He was the father of six children. Politically he was a Republican.

Dr. Lewis F. Bennett spent the first seventeen years of his life on the farm. He began his education in the neighboring district school and Milton (Wis.) College, graduating from that old and noted institution in 1883. The next fall he matriculated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and was graduated in 1886, with honors. He opened an office at Lyons, Wis., and there engaged in the practice of his profession until 1889, in which year he moved to Beloit; he has since been identified with the medical history of that city, his office being in the Manchester block. He is a member of the staff of the H. P. Strong Hospital.

Dr. Bennett and Miss Rebecca Alice Stockman were married May 6, 1886, and to this union two children have been born, George and Howard. Their home is at No. 803 Bluff street, where the Doctor has erected one of the finest residences in Beloit. Mrs. Bennett is a Presbyterian, and the Doctor attends church with her. He belongs to the American Medical Association, to the State Medical Association, and to the Wisconsin Central Medical Association; fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and is highly esteemed in that order. He is a Republican in political sentiment. Mrs. Bennett's father, John Stockman, is Scotch-Irish, and came from the North of Ireland. Her mother, Elizabeth (Nicholson) Stockman, was born in England. Gen. White, the prominent officer in the English army operating in South Africa, is Mrs. Bennett's father's cousin.

PETER LA BORDE, for many years an honored citizen of Juda, Green county, where his death occurred April 7, 1901, was a son of David and Catherine (Arnold) La Borde, natives of Union county, Penn. The La Borde family is of French origin, and David La Borde was born in 1793, followed cabinet making as a trade, and died in Stephenson county, Ill., in 1876. His wife, Catherine (Arnold), whom he wedded in 1817, was born in 1800, and died in 1881. They became the parents of the following children: Philip, born in 1819, is now living in Nebraska; Peter; John, born in 1822, resides in Stephenson county, Ill.; Elizabeth, born in 1824, was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun; Catherine, born in 1826, married Henry Long, now deceased; Abraham, born in 1828, resides in Nebraska; David, born in 1830, is dead; William, dead; Samuel, born in 1832, deceased; Eli, born in 1834, also deceased; Eliza, born in 1836, married Elias Shaffer, of Nebraska; Joseph, born in 1838, lives in Stephenson county, Ill.; and George, born in 1840, died twenty years later.

Peter La Borde was born Sept. 10, 1820, and Aug. 24, 1848, was married to Miss Phoebe E. Nofsker, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Miles) Nofsker. Mrs. La Borde became the mother of the following children: Aaron Lane, born Sept. 12, 1849, died in childhood; Hannah, born Oct. 8, 1850, married James W. Roderick, an extensive farmer of the town of Jefferson, whose biography appears elsewhere; Lydia, born Oct. 13, 1852, is a noble Christian woman, a member of the Juda Baptist Church, in which she is a teacher in the Sunday school; and Clara, born Sept. 21, 1856, married James Newman, a business man of Cheyenne, Wyo. Mrs. La Borde was born July 15, 1825, and died Oct. 13, 1896. She was an active worker in the Baptist Church. Mr. La Borde began life as a poor boy, and made his own way in the world. He located in Stephenson county, Ill., in 1857, and came to Juda, Green Co., Wis., in 1858, and followed carpentering and undertaking for nearly forty years. From 1890 he lived a retired life. Mr. La Borde was the owner of a choice farm of 140 acres, three lots and a nice dwelling in Juda. He first visited Wisconsin at the age of nineteen years, was always fond of travel, and had visited every State from New Jersey to Wyoming. A Democrat in politics, and a member of the Lutheran Church, he was a man of character and standing in the community. Reared on the farm in the early days, he had little or no schooling, but became one of the honest, upright and prosperous men of Green county, with clear views and intelligent ideas regarding questions of the day. A kind-hearted and generous spirit, he made many friends, and left as part of his legacy to his children and grandchildren the record of an honorable and useful life.

SAMUEL MULLEN is a prominent farmer of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, and has attained a high place in the financial circles of his native town. He was born Aug. 31, 1853, one of the large family of children of John and Catherine (Nechery) Mullen, who were of Irish birth. He is industrious and enterprising, and is looked upon as one of the public-spirited and progressive farmers of the county.

John Mullen was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1809, and his wife, Catherine Nechery, was born in the same county in 1814. They were married before leaving the Emerald Isle, and after a voyage of seven weeks in a sailing vessel landed in New York. They remained in York State some two years, and in 1846 located in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where Mr. Mullen found employment at smelting ore. In 1852 they purchased, with their savings, forty acres of land, where their son Samuel now lives. Upon this they erected a house, good barns and other buildings, making a most comfortable dwelling place. As the years passed Mr. Mullen invested in other real estate in that and in Gratiot townships, until he became the owner of a large amount of land, acquired wholly by his own industry and economy. After his first purchase he made farming his steady occupation. He died in 1886, and his faithful and devoted wife, who had shared with him all the trials and hardships of their early life, passed away at their home in 1893. They were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church. In politics Mr. Mullen was formerly a Whig, but upon the formation of the Republican party affiliated with that organization. He was the father of the following children: (1) John, of Gratiot township, Lafayette county, born in Ireland in 1838, married Miss Eliza Glass, of Shullsburg, and has six children—Katie, wife of Samuel Farrow, of Darlington, now in England with her husband on a visit; Elizabeth J., wife of Samuel Urin, of Lamont, Wis.; James, of Gratiot; John and Robert, of Gratiot; and Matilda, wife of George Boning, of Darlington. (2) James, of Monticello township, married (first) Miss Carrie Quinch, of Shullsburg, who died, leaving two daughters, Cora and Carrie. He married (second) Miss Hannah Dickinson, and of this union there are nine children, Louisa, Ida, Josephine, Harvey, George, Charles, Irene, Edna and Isabel. (3) Thomas, a farmer of Shullsburg, married Miss Elizabeth Hutchinson, and has ten children, John, Nellie, James H., Wilbur, Joseph, Edgar, Clyde, Katie, Harrison and Matilda. (4) William, born in New York, enlisted during the Civil war in the 33d Wis. V. I., and was engaged in many battles and skirmishes. After the war he married Miss Sarah Vivous, and now lives retired in Darlington. They have seven children, Nettie, Uritt, Annie, Minnie, Bert, Frank and Ernest. (5) Mary, born in New Diggings, remains on the old homestead with her brother Samuel. (6) Robert, born in New Diggings, now a farmer on land adjoining his father's old farm, married Miss Ella Cook, of New Diggings, and has five children, Jennie, Luella, Wesley, Ethel and Idelle. (7) Matilda, twin of Robert, married James Carr, of Scales Mound, Ill., and has seven children, Matilda, James, Henry, Harvey, Wilbur, Edgar and Brown. (8) Jennie, born in 1855, married Edgar Allison, of Alvord, Iowa. (9) Bessie is the wife of Charles Pearson, of Newell, Iowa, and is the mother of twelve children. (10) Samuel is our subject.

Samuel Mullen grew to manhood on the home farm, and early acquired all the necessary training to farm duties. An education of this sort in his youth is essential to the thorough, up-to-date farmer, and such Mr. Mullen certainly has proven himself. He is enterprising, and with his energy is calculated to develop any latent resources in the soil he undertakes to cultivate. For fourteen years he farmed in Gratiot township, and then moved back to his father's old home, where he still resides.

On Dec. 9, 1873, Mr. Mullen was united in marriage with Miss Annie Rock, daughter of Abner S. and Fannie (Field) Rock. She was born in October, 1855, and grew to womanhood on her father's farm. Two children have come of this union: Eva, born in Gratiot in 1874, married Henry Gille, of New Diggings, now engaged in business in Shullsburg; and Abner, born May 18, 1877, a farmer in Monticello township, married Miss Nellie Moses, and has one daughter, Delva. Politically Mr. Mullen coincides with the views of the Republican party, and invariably casts his ballot in its support. The Congregational Church has found in him a warm supporter, and Mrs. Mullen has for many years been actively engaged in church work.

FREDERICK C. DUNN is senior member of one of the most prosperous mercantile firms of Milton, Rock county, a thriving business largely the creation of its present owners. Mr. Dunn has amply attested his ability and standard as a business man, his clean-cut methods and sterling integrity winning for him the lifelong respect and friendship of many friends.

Our subject was born in New Market, Middlesex Co., N. J., June 16, 1850, son of Martin and Margaret (Ayers) Dunn, both natives of New Jersey. The paternal grandfather, Joseph Dunn, was also a native of New Jersey, where he lived, a prosperous farmer, to the age of seventy-two years, and died leaving two sons. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Joshua Ayers, was for many years a resident of New York, near Lake George, also in Schenectady county, and at Boyleston. Martin Dunn, the father of Frederick C., was a lifelong farmer in his native State. He died in May, 1884, and his wife survived him three years, passing away at the age of sixty-seven years. Both were devout members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and in the community in which he lived Martin Dunn was a man of prominence, holding various local offices, and possessing the good-will and esteem of his friends and neighbors. Of his four children, two survive: Ellis J., of New Market, N. J.; and Frederick C., our subject.

Frederick C. Dunn was reared on the New Jersey homestead, and received a good common-school education. He left the farm at the age of eighteen, in 1868, to engage in carpenter work. Four years later he came to Milton, Wis., and for two years was a student at Milton College. Returning to New Jersey, he taught school during portions of three years, then, in partnership with his brother, Ellis J., he went into the general merchandise business at New Market, continuing thus until 1881. In that year they sold out, and Frederick C. returned to Milton, Wis. For six years he worked for his father-in-law, Robert Williams, in 1887 opening a clothing store in the adjoining store room. In 1891 Mr. Dunn erected his present store building, and three years later admitted to partnership George R. Boss. They purchased the interest of Mr. Williams, and have since then most successfully conducted a general store under the firm name of Dunn, Boss & Co.

Mr. Dunn married, June 5, 1879, Miss Flora E. Williams, daughter of Robert and Martha (Dodge) Williams, and seven children have been born to them: Clarence W., Mabel, Eleanor M., Charles Ellis, Margaret, Gladys, and one who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn and their older children are members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. In politics Mr. Dunn is a Republican.

DAVID C. SHOCKLEY, whose residence and farm are on Section 25, of the town of Lamont, Lafayette county, was a soldier in the war for the Union, and his long and honorable career in this community has given him more than a local standing as a thoroughly honorable and upright man.

Mr. Shockley is a native of the Buckeye State, and was born in Clermont county, Ohio, in 1839, and was a son of John and Eliza Jane (Carpenter) Shockley. The father was a native of Maryland and the mother of Kentucky. When the subject of this biography was a boy of some nine years the family moved to the West, and for about a year made their home in northern Illinois, and then effected a permanent settlement in the town of Fayette, Lafayette Co., Wis. Mr. Shockley was a mason by trade, and followed that occupation for many years, always keeping his home, however, in the town of Fayette. He died about 1883, and his widow a year later. David C.

was one of a family of nine children, of whom three sons and three daughters are living at the present time (1901).

David C. Shockley was reared to farming pursuits. In 1860, when the excitement was greatest concerning the discovery of gold in Colorado, he went to Pike's Peak, and was absent in the mountains some two years. In February, 1865, he enlisted as a member of the 50th Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged with his regiment when the service of soldiers was no longer needed. He was the only one of his immediate family to enter the Union army during that time.

In March, 1865, after he had enlisted, and before he was sent to the front, Mr. Shockley was married to his present wife, Mary Curry, who was a daughter of William M. and Sarah Curry, prominent farming people of Lafayette county, whose biography may be found elsewhere. Mrs. Shockley was born in Ohio in 1846, and is the mother of three sons and two daughters: Minnie Belle, a teacher; Hattie Luella, wife of Doctor Archibald Cuolahan, of Merrill, Wis.; Harlow O., a physician, who graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1896, and from Rush Medical College in 1899, and is now interne at the Presbyterian Hospital, in Chicago; Henry Irving, now engaged in business at Lamont and at Fayette; and Dale Curry, a student in the State University at Madison. Mr. and Mrs. Shockley have had their home in their present habitation since his return from the war about thirty-five years ago. He is a member of Harvey Post, G. A. R., at Darlington, where his genial and fraternal qualities, together with his genuine manhood and upright character have made him many friends.

Mr. Shockley has always taken an active part in all the progressive movements in his town and county, and was one of the first to advocate the organization of the township, of which he became the first chairman. He, too, was a prime mover in the establishment of the thriving country store in Lamont, of which his son is now a partner.

ANDREW JACKSON TRICKEL, for many years one of the representative citizens of Clarno township, Green county, was born Sept. 10, 1825, at Butler's Point, Vermilion Co., Ill. Robert Trickel, his father, a native of Hampshire county, West Virginia, came to Illinois in the early settlement of the State, having first migrated to Ohio, then to Indiana, and later to Illinois. He was a farmer by occupation, and became a factor in the frontier life of all those States. His death took place in Wisconsin, at the advanced age of nearly eighty-two years. He married Mary C. Bensyl, who died at the age of eighty-two. The children born of their marriage were: Polly, who married Riley Curry; Ashford; William; John; Andrew Jackson, our subject; Jesse; Joshua, a resident of the State of Washington; Robert, who resides in Colorado; and Edward, who lives in Browntown, Wisconsin.

Andrew Jackson Trickel is a self-made man, his early educational advantages having been confined to one month's schooling. Reared on a farm, he settled in Green county in 1850, and soon became thoroughly identified with farming interests, and by his own industry has accumulated the competency he now enjoys. He was considered one of the most substantial agriculturists of his locality, owning some 700 acres of fine land, located in both Clarno and Cadiz townships. Much of this land was wild when it came into his possession, and the Indians still roamed through it. Since April, 1901, Mr. Trickel has resided in the city of Monroe.

Mr. Trickel was married, in 1848, to Elizabeth Crothers, a native of Ten Mile Grove, Ill., who was a daughter of John Crothers. Two children were born of this union: John C., deceased; and Mary C., who married Elias Frame, of California. Mrs. Elizabeth Trickel lived but a few years, and in 1857 our subject married Mrs. Charlotte (Morton) Huffman, the children of this union being: Sarah Ellen, Jesse, Charles, William Andrew, Laura E., Martha, Matilda, Louis, Charlotte, Clara, Olive, Joseph, Albert, and Everett. Sarah E., Charlotte and Everett are deceased. The two children of Mrs. Trickel by her previous marriage were Mary Elizabeth and Nancy Jane. The posterity of Mr. Trickel includes fifty-one grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren, all but four of whom are living.

Born of a family of Democrats, Mr. Trickel advocates the principles of that party, of which he has been an active member all his life. Travel and a wide acquaintance have aided Mr. Trickel to become a very intelligent man, despite his early disadvantages, and although seventy-six years of age, he is mentally superior to many men in the prime of life. A recent trip to California has benefited his health, and his many friends and neighbors wish him a continued life of prosperity. Among his associates he is highly esteemed, and known to be a worthy citizen, a kind neighbor, and a man of exemplary character in all the relations of life. During his long residence in Green county he has watched with interest the many wonderful changes which have taken place in his locality, and he has done his share in the progress made in Clarno township.

ERNEST LIPMAN, proprietor of one of the largest dry-goods and carpet stores in the Northwest outside of the large cities, has an establishment in Beloit, Rock county, that for completeness of stock, elegance of appointments, and adaptation to the needs of the community, is not to be surpassed anywhere. Mr. Lipman is an active and pushing merchant, studying the public pulse, and quick to discern its changing moods. He is a genial and accommodating gentleman, and a popular character in whatever place he may be met.

Ernest Lipman was born in Milwaukee, Wis., July 14, 1857, and is a son of Louis and Lucy Lipman, both natives of Germany. His mother was a daughter of B. O. von Zastrow von Kuessow, and a descendant of an old and aristocratic house of Germany, tracing its authentic history back to the year 1180, beginning with Count Heinrich von Kuessow, and coming down to Friederica Gottliebe, Countess von Kuessow, daughter and only heir of Count Jochen Friedrich von Kuessow, from 1752 a knight of the Order of St. John. She married Obersten Otto Bogislav von Zastrow, who was the uncle of Mr. Lipman's grandfather, and as no children were born to this marriage the latter was the only direct descendant and heir to the Countess von Kuessow, being her nephew. In order that the family name might not die out or be lost he added the name von Kuessow to his own, and was afterward known as Bernhard Otto von Zastrow von Kuessow. He owned considerable property in Germany as well as in the United States. He was born Feb. 20, 1801, in Pomerania, in the north of Germany, and died July 14, 1872, at Port Washington, Wis. His wife, Henrietta Othelia von Papstein, was born Feb. 8, 1805, in Castle Blumberg, Germany, and was a resident of Port Washington twenty-eight years, surviving her husband seven years to a day. She died July 14, 1879, at Port Washington.

Louis and Lucy Lipman had seven children, all but one now living: Harriet, wife of Louis Heyn, of Milwaukee; Helen, deceased; Ernest; Miss Freddie, of Milwaukee; Louis W., of Milwaukee; Lucy, wife of E. G. Dallwig, of Milwaukee; and Henry, of Milwaukee. The father was a man of artistic temperament, and earned his living as a lithographer. He came to this country some time in the 'forties, and for a time lived in New York City, about 1855 coming West to Milwaukee and making a permanent home in the Wisconsin metropolis. He followed lithographing there, and was regarded as one of the best in the city. He died in 1869, at the age of forty-two. His widow still survives, living in Milwaukee. His father lived and died in Germany.

Ernest Lipman was reared in Milwaukee, and attended the German and English academy in that city. He was not quite thirteen years old when he was obliged to go to work, on account of his father's early death, commencing as clerk in a store. He clerked from 1870 to 1879, and then went on the road for John C. Olsen & Co., of Chicago, as a commercial traveler, for two years. In 1881 Mr. Lipman opened a dry-goods store in Beloit, and met with instantaneous and gratifying success. His business has increased every year, until now it commands the services of some eight or ten clerks, and is known as one of the popular trade centers of the city.

Mr. Lipman and Miss Emma Kruger, a daughter of Adolph and Anna (Bruesch) Kruger, were married Sept. 29, 1881. Mrs. Lipman is a lady of most estimable character. She is the mother of three sons and two daughters, Ernest, Carl, Viola, Theodore and Lucile. Ernest died when five years old. Mr. and Mrs. Lipman attend the Episcopal Church. They have a hospitable and well-appointed home at No. 136 Bridge street. He is a prominent Mason, belonging to Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M., Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T., and Wisconsin Consistory; and is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mrs. Lipman belongs to the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. Lipman is a Republican, and is a man of standing in his party councils.

E. Lipman

JOHN H. C. SNECLODE is serving as justice of the peace in Cassville, Grant county, a position he has filled continuously since 1855 in a most creditable and acceptable manner. He was appointed notary public the same year, and is still serving as such. He was one of the prominent pioneers and highly respected citizens of that place, and it is, therefore, consistent that he be represented in a work whose province is the portrayal of the lives of the leading men of this section of the State.

Mr. Sneclode was born in 1820, in Holstein, Germany, of which place his parents, Nicholas and Esther (Plagman) Sneclode, were lifelong residents. The father was a soldier in the German army, and followed farming as an occupation. There were four children in the family: John; Joachim, who died in Holstein in 1868; Mrs. Catharine Klindt, who died in Schoenburg, Holstein, in 1886; and Anna, who died in Kiel, Germany, in 1894.

The early life of John H. C. Sneclode was spent on a farm in his native land, and there he was educated. At the age of fifteen he became a sailor and followed that life for some time, making several trips on an emigrant ship to American ports. He was in New Orleans in 1838, and in 1843 came to New York with the intention of making a permanent home on this side of the Atlantic. He first located in Ann Arbor, Mich., and in 1844 settled in Galena, Ill., where he worked at the carpenter's trade for about six years. In 1850 Mr. Sneclode came to Cassville, Wis., which place at that time contained only twenty-five houses, and he is now the oldest living resident of the town. Here he continued to work at the carpenter's trade and also conducted a cabinet shop for some time, but is now engaged in the raising of small fruit. He is propagating a raspberry that is of fine quality and a great producer. In early days he also followed surveying, and served as county surveyor of Grant county and as deputy surveyor for a time. He assisted in laying out many lines and boundaries in territorial days.

On March 13, 1856, in Cassville, Mr. Sneclode was united in marriage with Miss Jane Van Ausdale, a native of Virginia. Her ancestors, who were from Holland, came to this country as early as 1756, and settled in New Jersey. Mr. Sneclode lost his wife at Cassville July 2, 1871, and three of their children died of typhoid fever the same year. He has two daughters still living, namely: (1) Nancy Ann first married William McCamish, by whom she had three children, Anna, Nellie, and Florence. She is now the wife of Charles S. Inglieb, and they have two children, Gladys and Henry. (2) Margaret S. is the wife of Benjamin Stevens, of Cassville, and they have two children, Sylva and Belva. Mr. Sneclode was again married, in 1872, his second union being with Miss Amelia Phitteyplace, a native of Iowa, and a daughter of Solomon Phitteyplace, who, as a soldier of the Mexican war, received a land warrant, which he located in Clayton county, Iowa, where he spent his last days. Mr. Sneclode was also in the United States service during the Mexican war, enlisting at Galena, Ill., in 1847, and he took part in the battle of Chapultepec. In early life he was a Democrat in politics, but at the time of the Mexican war he joined the Whig party, with which he affiliated until 1854, when he was one of the band of forty-three that met at Lancaster and formed the Republican party in this section. He has since been actively identified with that great political organization, and was the only delegate to the first Republican County Convention from Cassville from his section of the county. Socially he is a prominent member of Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., was elected senior warden on its organization, and filled the office of worthy master for many years. He is also a member of the Chapter, R. A. M., and was connected with the Odd Fellows Lodge at Galena for many years. For half a century Mr. Sneclode has been prominently identified with the interests of Grant county, and having prospered in his business undertakings here, he is now the owner of about twenty building lots in that place. His life has been one of industry and usefulness, and he well merits the high regard in which he is uniformly held by his fellow citizens.

JAMES DAVIS belongs to the older generation of Rock county farmers, who have done such brave and noble work in the reclaiming of a wilderness and the building of a great State. They came to Wisconsin when it was a vast forest, with stretches of open prairie, and have converted it into a State that is the peer of any in the Union. Much of this transformation Mr. Davis has witnessed, and, so far as his strength permitted, has helped in its accomplishment. He lives in a fine home in Section 8, Harmony township, Rock county, and contemplates with wonder the change that has been wrought around him.

Mr. Davis was born in Oneida county, New York, Dec. 22, 1837, and is a son of David and Elizabeth (Williams) Davis, or, as it was originally written, "Davies." They were natives of Wales, and had six sons and four daughters, three of their children now living: William, of Wallula, Wash.; James, whose name appears at the opening of this article; and John, of Westmoreland, Kans. The father was a cooper by trade, and came to this country about 1830, locating in Oneida county, N. Y., where he engaged in farming. In 1841 he came to Wisconsin, and, settling in Racine, engaged in work as a cooper. He died in Racine in 1844, and his wife survived him but two days. They were Calvinistic Methodists. His father died in Wales at a venerable age. His wife's father came to this country after his daughter's marriage, and spent his last days in Racine; his wife and all his other children died in Wales.

James Davis lived with a family by the name of Deberard in Racine nearly four years after his parents' death. In 1849 he came to Rock county, Wis., and made his home with Joseph Spaulding, with whom he lived until he was twenty-one. He attended the district school, and found in Mr. Spaulding and his good wife kind and faithful friends. For the first three years after he had attained his majority he worked out by the month, saving his money, and at that time was fore-handed enough to buy a small farm of seventy-seven and a half acres in Harmony township. This land he has thoroughly improved, and has added to it eighty acres in Section 9, the two making a very complete and productive farm. He has given much attention to fine stock, raising his own horses, hogs and cattle; of the latter he prefers Durham cattle, although he has some Jersey stock.

Mr. Davis and Miss Helen Holmes were married June 22, 1869. She was a daughter of Harvey and Abbey (Waterman) Holmes, and became the mother of two children: Helen A. and John Edward, both of whom are still under the home roof. Mrs. Davis died in 1875, at the age of forty-one. She was a member of the Milton Congregational Church, and a lady of fine character. Mr. Davis is a Republican, and has served one year as assessor of the town. He has a beautiful home, a modern house, neat and attractive in every particular, and owns a finely improved farm.

JACOB BAUMGARTNER, of Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Wurlitz, Landgericht Rehan, Kreis Oberfranken, Bavaria, Germany, Nov. 26, 1830, where he was sent to learn the trade of calico dyer and printer May 14, 1844. He finished his work in the shop Oct. 12, 1846, and after the old German custom, was turned out to seek work in different shops and places. He spent three years on the road, and in his travels visited over four hundred different cities and villages, and covered over five thousand miles of road on foot. During the first six months of this itinerary the young man had a hard time and often suffered for the want of food and shelter. When he began his journeyings to and fro in Germany he also began the keeping of a diary, which he has maintained to this time. It is full of curious and valuable information, and is rapidly becoming a historical document. It records the names of all the cities and villages he has visited, the distance from one city to another, the weather, his income and expense, his hardships and pleasures.—everything is set down during this long period of time. Mr. Baumgartner is very proud of this interesting story of personal experiences.

In the spring of 1850 he came to this country. He left for America on the schooner "Reform" May 2, and landed at New York June 17. There were eighty passengers aboard, and the captain was assisted by a crew of five men and a boy. Mr. Baumgartner left New York on the day following his arrival, on a Hudson river steamer, bound for Albany. There he took the canal for Buffalo, where he arrived June 28. Ten days from New York to Buffalo is a statement that shows how rapidly we have advanced. From Buffalo Mr. Baumgartner went around the lakes on the steamer "Allegheny," under the command of Captain Marsden, to Milwaukee, where he arrived July 5, 1850, and found it a city of about nineteen thousand people. He left his trunk with the hotel-keeper and started for Jefferson on foot, for this was before the advent of a railroad in Wisconsin. He had an uncle at Jefferson, who got his trunk, and sent him on to Cassville, where he had a brother living.

Mr. Baumgartner spent a few days at Cassville, and from there took a river steamer to St. Louis, where he sought in vain for employment at his trade. He did any thing that came along, however, and sold fruits and clerked in the city lunch hotel on Second street, and then worked in a tannery. On Sept. 1, 1850, his means did not amount to eight dollars, and if he could, he would have gladly returned to Germany. The following spring he went back to Cassville, where he worked several months on the farm at $8 per month. He returned to St. Louis, and had work in the same tannery. In 1852 he had thoughts of California, but spent the summer in Wisconsin. The following year at Mineral Point he made entry of the following described land: The east half of the northwest quarter, the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter, and the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 3, Town 6, Range 2 west, in the town of Fennimore. Mr. Baumgartner moved from Jefferson to Fennimore, a distance of 105 miles, constructing his own wagon for the journey. This wagon must have been a unique creation. He cut down an oak tree some three and a half feet in diameter, and sawed off five wheels, each three and a half inches thick. He bored holes through the center, and made wooden axle, tongue and box of rough boards. On the way to Fennimore he met a man who asked him to stop a moment while he went into a cabin to get a pencil and paper that he might make a picture of the outfit. Mr. Baumgartner readily consented, as he was proud of his work, having had no money to pay for a wagon. He made the journey safely, by making use of the extra wheel he carried along, one wheel having split. Upon his arrival in Fennimore, Nov. 5, 1853, he at once applied himself to the building of a log house 16x18 feet, which cost him $7.80. He split five hundred rails for his first calf. In 1855 Mr. Baumgartner sold his land in Section 3, and bought the southeast quarter of Section 5, where he lived until 1899, when he moved into his house in Lancaster.

On Oct. 23, 1852, at Jefferson, Wis., Mr. Baumgartner wedded Anna Maria Winterling, and nine children blessed their union: Louisa, born in 1853, married Martin Oswald, Nelson, a farmer, married Lisette Frike. Harrison died in 1859, and Franklin in 1865. Leo married Anna Muesse, and is a hardware dealer at Armour, S. Dak. Peter married Millie Duffner, and is a farmer in the town of Fennimore. Frank married Matilda Menkhausen, and is a farmer in Iowa. William married Martha Masow, and is a farmer, having charge of the old homestead in the town of Fennimore. Cora is single, and is living with her parents in Lancaster. Mr. Baumgartner takes a justifiable pride in the fact that he has led a long and busy life without going to law with any man. He has never knowingly swindled a man, and belongs to the Evangelical Lutheran Church, where he has been a working member and a liberal supporter. He was elected a member of the board of supervisors in the town of Fennimore in 1873, and again in 1875. In 1876 he was chairman of the town board. He was treasurer of the town of Fennimore in 1882, and was re-elected for nine years. He does not waste much time on politics, but usually votes the Republican ticket.

SIMON HARKER, deceased, one of the well-known and highly respected merchants and stock dealers of Cuba City, took a very important part in the upbuilding of this portion of Grant county, and his loss was deeply felt when death claimed him for its own. He was born in England Sept. 30, 1832, a son of George and Elizabeth Harker, who came to Big Patch, Wis., settled on a farm, and there lived and died. In their family there were six children: John, George, Isabella, Anna, Sarah, and our subject. Anna is still living, and wife of Bonson Spacely; John is a resident of Bremer county, Iowa.

Simon Harker received his early education in his native land, but also attended the district schools of Wisconsin. While still in England he met with a sad accident in a woolen mill, which resulted in the loss of his left arm. In spite of this misfortune Mr. Harker managed to accumulate sufficient to purchase a farm at Big Patch, and later bought another farm at Elk Grove, where he resided for some years, then removed to Galena, and engaged in smelting ore for eight years. About this time he returned to Big Patch, lived there four or five years, and then came to Cuba City and embarked in business with a Mr. Cooper and a Mr. Wilson under the firm name of R. A. Wilson & Co., continuing this connection until within two years of his death, when he was compelled to retire on account of failing health. His death occurred Feb. 22, 1896.

On July 9, 1856, Mr. Harker was married to Miss Mary A. Raw, of Grant county, a daughter of Thomas and Annie (Bonson) Raw, both natives of England, who came to America after marriage, settling in Platteville, Mrs. Raw being the only white woman in that village for a number of years. Later Mr. Raw removed to Big Patch, purchased prairie land, and made a home for his family, remaining there until his death, which occurred in 1868, his wife surviving him until 1890. Their family consisted of four children: Margaret married Thomas Peters, resided first in Grant county, then removed to Iowa, where Mrs. Peters died, in 1896, leaving a family; Simon is now a resident of Iowa; Mary A. is Mrs. Harker; Sarah, wife of John Bell, resides in Springfield, Mo., and has a family. Mrs. Harker was born at Big Patch Oct. 14, 1838, received a district-school education, and is a very pleasant and agreeable lady. To herself and husband were born children as follows: Annie, born in January, 1860, wife of Thomas H. Peacock, residing near Big Patch, has four children, Mary A., Roscoe, Alice and William. Edward, born in August, 1862, died when fifteen years old. Thomas Grant, born in 1865, married Miss Sarah Peacock, and now resides at Big Patch; he has two sons, William and Alvin. Sarah, born in 1867, wife of George Dent, of Cuba City, has one daughter, Gladys, and one son, Kenneth. Isabella, born in 1869, wife of George Hoffman, of Cuba City, has no family. Mary H., born in 1874, graduated from the high school of Cuba City, and in 1899 married Charles Waters, of Platteville, a farmer of that locality. Hayes D., born in 1876, studied in the high school of Cuba City, and is now a watchmaker; he married Kathryn E. Yeager, of Grundy Center, Iowa. Jennie, born in April, 1879, was educated in Cuba City, and married John Bonson, of Platteville.

Mr. Harker never took any active part in politics, but was prevailed upon to accept the office of mayor one term, and that of assessor several years, as well as other local positions, his sterling integrity making him peculiarly fitted to hold positions of public trust, a fact which his fellow townsmen recognized. When casting his vote Mr. Harker was always influenced by his conscience, supporting the man he thought best fitted for the office. He took an active part in the erection of the M. E. church building, and, on account of his zeal, it may almost be regarded as a memorial of his virtues. Both he and Mrs. Harker early connected themselves with this church, and Mrs. Harker trained her children in the same faith. Strict or rigid integrity, positive convictions, superior intelligence placed him and kept him to the front in all matters of morals or public interest. The memory of the good man, whose life history here appears, will linger in the minds of the people of Cuba City for many years, and those among them who can point to deeds of charity and gentle kindness on his part are legion.

HON. THOMAS JENKINS, retired business man and ex-representative of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Cornwall, England, born in June, 1832, and is a son of Benjamin and Martha (Carlvolth) Jenkins, the former of whom was born in 1800, and the latter a few years later. His grandfather, James Jenkins, born in Cornwall, England, died in Guatemala about 1832.

Benjamin Jenkins in 1837 took his wife and family to Brazil, South America, and there worked in the mines until 1842, when he returned to England. Afterward going to Mexico, he was a miner there until 1848. In the meantime, in May, 1848, his wife, with two sons, came via New Orleans to Mineral Point, Wis., where they were joined by the husband in a short time after his leaving Mexico. He next removed to Platteville, and was employed in the lead mines until his death, in 1857, his wife surviving until 1866, when she died, in the faith of the Methodist Church. Nicholas, their eldest son; born and educated in England, accompanied his father to Mexico and thence to Platteville; in 1850 he crossed the Plains to California, but died on his way home, at the Fraser river. James, the second child, came with his mother from England, engaged in mining in Platteville, married Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, and died in 1860, leaving his widow with two children; the widow and son Thomas are now deceased. Martha, the youngest child, is the wife of A. A. Stephens, a drayman of Platteville.

Hon. Thomas Jenkins was educated in England, and on coming to America commenced mining and prospecting for lead in Grant county, Wis. In 1851 he made a trip to California, via New York and the Isthmus of Panama, and after six years of successful mining returned to Platteville. In 1861 he again went to California, via the Plains, spent two years in Helena, Mont., and at other points, and in 1868 came down the Missouri river and relocated at Platteville.

F. Jenkins Jr

In October, 1859, Mr. Jenkins married Miss Sheba A., daughter of William and Jane Martin, who came from England in 1848, and settled at Dodgeville, Wis., dying in this State. Mrs. Jenkins was born in England in 1839, was educated in the Platteville Academy, for a number of years taught school in the State, and was a lady of culture and refinement. She always resided in Wisconsin during her husband's long absence in the West. In November, 1899, Mrs. Jenkins passed away in the faith of the Congregational Church, leaving her husband with two daughters: Ida A., born in September, 1862, was graduated from the State Normal, Platteville, in 1885, and for six years was a successful teacher in that city and in Milwaukee. Netty E., born in February, 1871, was also graduated from the State Normal, and was for three years a school teacher; in 1898, she married Freeling Fox, of Hampton, Iowa, where they reside on a farm, and they have one daughter, Frances Marion, born in 1900. Our subject's son, B. M. Jenkins, now deceased, was born in July, 1860, and married Josephine De Voe, of Muscoda, who survives him with two children, Jesse and Wilma.

Mr. Jenkins was postmaster at Platteville during Cleveland's second administration, and has been mayor of the city four times. He is a Regent of the Platteville State Normal School, and president of the First National Bank of Platteville.

SYLVESTER REUBEN STEPHENS, one of the old and highly respected pioneer farmers of Green county, is now spending his last years in a well-deserved freedom from the cares and burdens of an active business life.

Mr. Stephens is a son of Reuben D. and Sallie (Milk) Stephens, both natives of the State of New York, where he was born Sept. 22, 1822. At the age of twelve he accompanied his parents into Erie county, Penn., and in 1842 they all came to Green county, Wis. This was in the early days, when the country was wild and rough, and six years before the admission of the Territory as a State into the Federal Union. He drove a team and wagon from Erie county to Green county, and two years later made a return trip to Erie county, driving over the route three times in all. For seven years he was engaged in teaming between Green county and Milwaukee, and he has also drawn wheat to market at Chicago. After his marriage he entered 160 acres of government land, including the site of the present railroad station at Juda, there being not a single house where that thriving village now stands. He helped to build a log school house there, which was the first building in the place. His father was the prime mover in organizing the school and putting up the building. Mr. Stephens is a musician of considerable local repute. He has a violin which has been in his possession nearly three-score years, and has played for many parties and entertainments including the first 4th of July celebration in Monroe, held in 1843.

Mr. Stephens and Miss Wealthy Ball were married in Green county, Wis., Oct. 16, 1844. Mrs. Stephens was born in Springfield, Erie Co., Penn., the daughter of Gary Ball, who settled at Joliet, Ill., in 1836, and granddaughter of Daniel Ball, who came from England, and first settled in Maryland. He died in Erie county, Penn., aged about eighty years. His bachelor brother left a large estate in Philadelphia and Virginia, of which the descendants of Daniel Ball are the rightful heirs, though they have never come into possession. To Mr. and Mrs. Stephens were born ten children: Alfred, now a farmer near Flandreau, S. Dak.; Susan, widow of Quincy Davis, of Shenandoah, Iowa; Wilder, who died at David City, Neb., Jan. 30, 1901, aged fifty-two years; Alba, a resident of Henderson, Neb.; Edward, living in Juda, Wis.; James, in Juda; Theo R., wife of Jehiel Davis, a farmer of Sylvester township; Malvina, who died Nov. 24, 1886, aged thirty-six years; Ezra and Etta, who both died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens have thirteen grandchildren, and fourteen great-grandchildren.

Mr. Stephens started out in life a poor man, and when he was married was rich only in courage and in hope of the future. After many years he became the owner of a choice Wisconsin farm of 160 acres, which he has recently sold, that he might move into the village of Juda, and be care-free. For some forty years he owned and operated a threshing machine in the county. Mr. Stephens is an honored veteran of the war of the Rebellion, having served as a member of Company K. 22d Wis. V. I., and is now in receipt of a liberal pension for injuries sustained during his service. With his wife he belongs to the Methodist Church. He is a Republican, and a good citizen. During his years of active life he was a hard-working man, and was known to be very honorable and upright in all his transactions.

FRANK BARNUM, deceased, was a farmer and school teacher by occupation, and was a son of Horace and Caroline (Curtis) Barnum, of the State of Connecticut, the former a relative of the late P. T. Barnum, the celebrated showman. Horace Barnum was the father of three children: Frederick, born in 1832, died in childhood; Frank; and Marietta, born in 1836, married Benjamin Barnhouse, of Albany. Horace Barnum came from Michigan to this State, and thence to Kansas, where he died.

Frank Barnum was born of English descent Nov. 6, 1834, and died Aug. 21, 1896. While a child he was taken to Crawford county, Penn., thence to Cass county, Mich., where he grew to manhood, and received his education. In 1856 he came to Wisconsin. In 1858 Mr. Barnum married Sarah Jane Myers, of Spring Grove township, born March 19, 1844, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Kline) Myers, early settlers of the county [See sketch of John Myers elsewhere in this volume]. Mrs. Myers, the mother of Mrs. Frank Barnum, is still living in Spring Grove in her eighty-fifth year. Mr. and Mrs. Barnum were the parents of the following children: (1) Josephine, born March 19, 1863, married John Krider, Sept. 5, 1880. Mr. Krider is a farmer of this county, and is the father of two children. (2) George, born April 8, 1865, married Miss Samantha Holmes, of Monroe, Sept. 6, 1885, and is the father of one child. He resides on the old Barnum homestead farm. (3) Mary E., born Sept. 8, 1873, died Jan. 18, 1894. (4) Caroline Gertrude, born Dec. 4, 1881, lives with her mother at Twin Grove, and is unmarried. All the daughters are ladies of marked ability and special gifts in the field of music. Miss Caroline holds a certificate as a teacher in the public schools of Green county, and has won a very enviable position in the work of musical instruction. She is devoting much attention to the piano and the violin, and if her work in this direction is continued she will undoubtedly develop into an artist of marked ability.

When Mr. and Mrs. Barnum were married, the united resources of himself and his devoted wife, save their youth, strength and courage, were not worth enumerating. By hard work, economy and wise management they became wealthy, and Mr. Barnum owned over fourteen thousand dollars at the time of his death. A member of the Lutheran Church, his life was square and upright. In politics he was a staunch Republican, and as clerk, treasurer and school director he served his town well and faithfully. For some years before his death, he had left the farm, and was living with his family in an elegant home in the village of Twin Grove at the time of his demise.

HENRY HORSLEY, an active and energetic farmer in the town of Benton, Lafayette county, was born on the Isle of Man, Eng., Aug. 16, 1847, and is a son of William and Mary (Bramwell) Horsley, both born in England. The father was born Oct. 16, 1822, and the mother in August of the following year. They were married in England, where they had a family of six children before their arrival in America. They crossed the ocean on a sailing vessel and landed in New York in 1854, coming directly to Benton, Wis., where he was engaged as a miner. This was his occupation in Lafayette county until 1882, when he moved to Jerauld county, S. Dak., in which State he still resides. There he engaged in farming, and there his wife died in August, 1889, leaving him with six children. Of their fourteen children, eight died young. Their children were: (1) Henry, the oldest now living, is the subject of this sketch. (2) John, born in England in 1851, was married to Miss Margaret A. Alderson, is a farmer in the town of Benton, and the father of three children, James, Mary, and Rosie. (3) Hudson, born in England, was married to Miss Lela Hill, of Minnesota, lives in South Dakota, where he is engaged in farming, and is the father of seven children, Cora, Arlo, Emery, Bertha, Carrie, Mary and Mabel. (4) William, born in England, was married to Miss Ella Hewitt, of Lamont, Iowa, where they now reside; he is a brick manufacturer, and they have two children, Max and Harry. (5) Bramwell, born in Wisconsin in 1858, was married to Miss Rosa Alderson, is now living on his farm in Beadle county, S. D., where they are rearing a family of six children, Elmer, Guy, Roxie, Alta, Arthur, and Rosana. (6) Sarah J., born in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1856, married James Meikeljon, of Canada, and is living in Washington, where they have one son, Ernest.

Henry Horsley had his education in England, and after his arrival in Wisconsin worked in the mines with his father. During the Civil war he was a member of the 43rd Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war. Part of this time he was under the command of General Thomas in the Army of the Cumberland. At Jacksonville he took part in the battle against General Forrest, was with his regiment through all its campaigns, and was discharged in June, 1865. Mr. Horsley learned the trade of a blacksmith after his return from the war, and lived at Linden, Iowa county, while he was engaged in the acquisition of this extremely honorable and useful trade, which he followed for six years, and then began mining, which was his business until 1895, when he rented a farm in the town of Benton. In 1878 he worked in the Black Hawk Mines of Colorado, and spent about a year with good results in the mines. The career of Mr. Horsley has been singularly successful. Beginning life with only his own resources, he has his own energy to thank for his standing to-day.

On Christmas Day, 1873, Mr. Horsley was united in marriage with Rosa Murry, who was born Aug. 31, 1857, a daughter of David and Sarah (Adny) Murry, old pioneer people in this part of the world. David Murry was born in Canada, May 4, 1820, and his wife at Hazel Green, Grant county, Feb. 17, 1829. She is the daughter of William Adny, who lived in Dubuque. David Murry lived in Benton over forty years, and died in March, 1880. His widow still survives him at the present writing. They were the parents of a large family, of whom nine are still living: Nelson, born Feb. 3, 1846; Harriet, born Oct. 25, 1848; Julia A., born July 1, 1851; Samuel, born Jan. 20, 1854; Rosa, born Aug. 31, 1857; Joseph H., born Dec. 7, 1862; Sarah E., born June 15, 1864; William, born March 21, 1866; David, born Sept. 29, 1869.

Mr. and Mrs. Horsley are the parents of the following children: Sarah, born in August, 1874, had her education in the town schools, and is living at home; William, born Sept. 8, 1876, is now one of the managers of the home farm; David, born in Lafayette county in 1882, is single and at home; Lester, born in 1884, is a student of the home school; Clyde, born in June, 1889; and Lola, born in 1894. Mr. Horsley is a Republican, and has held the office of constable in Benton for several years. He belongs to Thomas H. Oates Post, No. 96, G. A. R., of Shullsburg. The wife and family are members of the Catholic Church.

COLLINS CHAPMAN, an honored veteran of the Civil war and a representative farmer of Waterloo township, Grant county, was born in Davenport, Iowa, in 1842, and comes of good old Revolutionary stock, his paternal grandfather, Collins Chapman, having aided the Colonies in their struggle for independence. He was a native of New England and is said to have been descended from one of the passengers of the famous Mayflower. He made his home in Connecticut until death. In his family were three sons, Amyson, David and Alma, the two latter being soldiers of the war of 1812.

Amyson Chapman, the father of him whose name introduces this review, was born in Hartford, Conn., Aug. 31, 1800, and about 1820 left his New England home to come West. In 1827 we find him at the lead mines of Galena, Ill., and the same year he was married in Quincy, that State, to Miss Mary Drulard, a native of Ohio. For many years he made his home in Jo Daviess county, Ill., and in 1850 he came to Grant county, Wis., locating in the town of Harrison, where the family lived for several years before going to the town of Waterloo, where the father died June 9, 1881, at the age of nearly eighty-one years. As a pioneer of the West he took in the Black Hawk war, and was identified with other historical events of early days. His wife departed this life in 1858. In their family were twelve children, eight sons and four daughters, of whom four sons and three daughters are living at the present time (1901). Amyson, the oldest surviving son, was a soldier for the Union in the Civil war, and is now a resident of Cassville, Wis.; Collins is next in order of birth; Peter also lives in Cassville; Jefferson was a member of the 43rd Wis. V. I., and is now a resident of Nebraska; Mary Ann, the eldest daughter, is the wife of John Knox, of California; Lois is the widow of Frederick Lang and a resident of the State of Oregon; and Florence is the wife of Hubbard Shelters, of Cassville, Grant county. Those deceased died in early life.

Collins Chapman came with his father to Grant county, and lived at home and in its vicinity until he entered the service of his country during the dark days of the Civil war. On Aug. 25, 1861, he enlisted in Company F, 7th Wis. V. I., and was in active service with that regiment until Aug. 22, 1862, when he was wounded by a pistol shot in a skirmish at Catlet Station, just after the battle of Gainesville. Being taken prisoner by Mosby's Cavalry, he refused to accompany his captors, and was shot by one of them in the right hand, the ball coming out of the wrist, which was rendered permanently stiff. He determined not to remain a prisoner, and by a well-laid plan, it being night and the flashes of lightning frequent, he made his escape. He was confined in the hospital at York, Penn., until Dec. 4, 1862, when he was discharged on account of his wound and returned home, but in June, 1863, Mr. Chapman re-enlisted in the one hundred day service, becoming a member of Company A, 41st Wis. V. I. Since the close of the war he has resided most of the time in Waterloo township, and has devoted his time and energies to agricultural pursuits, in which he has met with marked success. He is now the owner of a valuable and well-improved farm of 245 acres, and is surrounded by all the comforts which make life worth the living.

On July 16, 1865, Mr. Chapman married Miss Frances A. Hall, a native of Fort Madison, Iowa, and a daughter of David and Sarah (Elwell) Hall. During childhood she lost her mother, who died near Hazel Green, Grant county, and her father subsequently went to Missouri, where he married again and made his home for about forty years. There his second wife died, and he is now living with Mr. and Mrs. Chapman in this county, the latter being his only child. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman have six children, three sons and three daughters, namely: Minnie, Henry, Frederick, Annie, David and Vesta T. As he grows older Mr. Chapman feels more and more the effects of his army life, and will always carry the mark of a Confederate bullet as a reminder of the famous Mosby Cavalry. He is a Republican in politics, and both he and his wife are worthy members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. A loyal and patriotic citizen, and a true friend and neighbor, he is justly deserving the high regard in which he is held by all who know him.

CHARLES W. TOMKINS. Among the flourishing industries of Albany, Green county, is that of milling, and a progressive firm doing business in that line is that of Warren & Tomkins, custom millers, who own a large grist and flour mill, and also manage the city electric light plant. The younger member of the firm is Charles W. Tomkins, the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Tomkins was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, Feb. 29, 1832, a son of Charles and Margaret (Warren) Tomkins, both of whom were natives of Ireland. A family of nine children was born to them: Elizabeth, deceased wife of Simpson Tilley, of Albany, Wis.; John W., of New Town, Ireland; Peter, of Milton, Wis.; Margaret, widow of Thomas James, of Rathdrum, Ireland; Charles W., our subject; Mary Ann, who lives with her brother John in the old home in Ireland; Robert and William, both deceased; and Joseph, who lives in County Wexford, a prosperous farmer. Our subject's father was a miller by occupation. He died in Ireland at the age of eighty-four, in 1861, his wife, who survived a number of years, being ninety-three at the time of her death. In religion she was an Episcopalian, but Mr. Tomkins belonged to the Walkerites, old Scotch seceders. Two of his brothers belonged to the Yeomanry.

Peter Tomkins, the paternal grandfather, a native of Ireland, was a miller by occupation. He lived to be about ninety years old, and died leaving six children. John Warren, the maternal grandfather, was about eighty-eight at the time of his death. He was a farmer in the old country, and had been a successful business man.

Charles W. Tomkins was reared in Ireland, and early taught the value of honest toil, entering his father's mill as soon as he was old enough to work. He attended the common schools of his district. In 1850 he came to America and located at Milton, Wis., where he remained but a short time, removing later to Janesville, and there securing employment in the mill of Jackman & Smith, in which place he continued for two years. At Albany, was located the large mill property of the Warrens, and at this time Mr. Tomkins entered their employ, in 1868 becoming a partner of Eugene Warren; this partnership has lasted to the present time, the firm name being Warren & Tomkins.

E. J. Buck, M.D.

The marriage of Mr. Tomkins to Miss Lucy Ann Hoyt, a daughter of Benjamin and Abigail (Emmons) Hoyt, took place Aug. 3, 1860, and of the children born of their union one son, Arthur W., survives. He married Miss May E. Lockridge, of Albany, and they have two interesting children, Ethel E. and Charles Neil. Two other children were born to our subject and wife, whose decease cast a lasting shadow over their lives: Warren, a brilliant young man, died at the age of twenty-two, when within one year of graduation from the Wisconsin State University, at Madison; and their only daughter, Estella, passed away at the age of twelve. In 1885 our subject erected his pleasant home in Albany, where he still resides, and is considered one of the most respected citizens of the town. During his years in this locality, Mr. Tomkins has seen many changes, and has borne his part in the advancement of every interest in favor of religion, education and temperance. Politically he calls himself an independent, using his own judgment regarding his ballot. Both he and Mrs. Tomkins belong to the religious society denominated Christians, Mr. Tomkins having been one of the prime movers in locating the branch in Albany.

Benjamin Hoyt, Mrs. Tomkins' father, was born in 1809 in Maine, and married Abigail Emmons, who was born in that State in 1811, and is still living. They had nine children, all yet living, the youngest now (1901) forty-five years of age, a remarkable record. John Emmons, Mrs. Hoyt's father, was born in Maine in 1787.

JAMES DOLAN, a popular and rising young attorney at law of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Belmont, Lafayette Co., Wis., in December, 1863, and is a son of Owen and Jane Dolan, the former of whom was born in Ireland June 23, 1833, and the latter in Greenville, Bond Co., Ill., March 4, 1842.

Owen Dolan came to America in 1853, and located at Mauch Chunk, Penn., where he worked two years in the mines, in 1855 coming to Platteville, Wis., and in November, 1861, he was married. He then purchased a farm at Belmont, where he engaged chiefly in stock raising. Later he passed two years in prospecting in California, and returned overland, riding one pony a distance of over 1,800 miles from the Golden State to Omaha, Neb.; at that place the pony broke away from a carriage to which he was tied and escaped with a herd of wild ponies. Mr. Dolan then settled in Lafayette county, Wis., and farmed until 1884, when he returned to Platteville. He died Feb. 12, 1899, on his farm in Belmont, in the faith of the Catholic Church; in politics he was always a Democrat. His estimable wife had passed away in 1892, leaving one son and two daughters.

James Dolan, the eldest of the family of three children, was educated in the State Normal School, Platteville, and was also graduated from the Law Department of the State University, at Madison, Wis., with the class of 1897. In the meantime, however, after having graduated from the State Normal, in 1891, he was for some years principal of the Highland (Iowa county) schools, and before entering upon the practice of the law, was also principal of the public school in Platteville. In 1897 Mr. Dolan opened his law office, and at once secured an encouraging clientele. In 1898 he was elected a justice of the peace on the Democratic ticket, although the city was largely Republican, and in conjunction with the duties of this office continued the practice of his profession. It is stated that it was rarely that a case he had passed upon as a justice was carried to a higher court.

Miss Mary E. Dolan, the elder sister of James, was also born in Belmont, and educated in the Platteville State Normal, is a lady of culture and refinement, was one of the successful teachers in the State, and now resides at the home in Platteville. Miss Margaret R. Dolan, the younger sister, now deceased, was likewise born in Belmont, was graduated from the State Normal, and was one of the leading young teachers in Grant and other counties. She died in 1898, while on her way from Arizona, where she had been for the purpose of recruiting her failing health. She was of a most amiable disposition, and was greatly beloved in Platteville, as well as elsewhere, and stood very high in the esteem of the members of her profession. She was, as are her brother and sister, devout in the Catholic faith.

James Dolan is a scholarly gentleman, and an able and astute lawyer; is liberal in his views on all questions; is broad-minded; despises hypocrisy and sycophancy in any and every form; never takes an unfair advantage of an opponent; and is therefore held in the highest esteem by his fellow members of the Bar and the incumbents of the Bench.

PETER GNAGI is one of the prosperous and esteemed citizens of Green Co., Wis., who after a long and busy life has retired from active duties to a handsome home in the city of Monroe. He is a son of Benedict and Elizabeth (Gye) Gnagi, and was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, on Oct. 9, 1828. His parents lived and died on a farm in Switzerland. After leaving his native country, in 1847, Mr. Gnagi came first to New York, thence to Ohio, where he remained only for a short time, returning to New York, whence after six years he spent about eight years in the State of Michigan. Reared in rather humble circumstances in his native country, he there attended school and after coming to America to better his condition, he spent two terms at a seminary in Lima, New York.

In 1865 Mr. Gnagi migrated to Wisconsin and settled in Clarno township, Green county, where he bought over eighty acres of land, which is one-half the farm he now owns, and he has the satisfaction of knowing that his present possessions, of a fine farm with a handsome residence and modern buildings upon it, an equally comfortable home in the city of Monroe, with an accumulation of means sufficient to maintain the same, have been the result of his personal efforts. At intervals before and after coming to Green county he worked at the carpenter trade.

On March 4, 1858, Mr. Gnagi was married to Miss Elvira Marsh, who was born June 1, 1830, in the State of New York, of New England ancestry, a daughter of Clark and Amanda (Drake) Marsh. Mrs. Gnagi came to Michigan in 1845, with her parents, receiving an education in a select school at Battle Creek, and becoming a proficient teacher. Mr. and Mrs. Gnagi became the parents of one child, who died in infancy, and they then adopted a son, William B., now a practicing physician in Monroe, Wis. In politics our subject has always been an active Republican, and has served his township in various offices, having been clerk and assessor, and in 1900 was census enumerator. He was one of the prime movers in organizing the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of the town of Clarno, and was secretary of the company for over nine years following its incorporation. Both Mr. Gnagi and his wife are consistent members of the M. E. Church, at Monroe, and socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having become connected with it thirty years ago. With his wife he spent the years of 1882-3-4 in California, but did not make a permanent residence there, as the old home in Wisconsin proved a stronger attraction. Surrounded by neighbors and friends of years standing, they possess the esteem of all, and richly deserve the ease which attends their advancing years.

WILLIAM S. HOLMES, a retired farmer residing in Platteville, Grant county, and a valiant ex-soldier of the United States volunteer army, was born in Sugar Grove, Penn., March 23, 1839, a son of P. A. and Rosanna (Bulsom) Holmes, the former a native of the State of New York, and the latter of the Keystone State.

P. A. Holmes brought his wife and child to Grant county, Wis., in 1840, and settled on a farm near Platteville, where he died in 1874, leaving his widow with ten children. The widow is at present living in Georgetown, Grant county, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Graham. Of the family of ten children, William S., is the eldest; James W., born in Grant county, Wis., was a soldier for two years in Company F, 3d Wis. V. I., in the Civil war, was wounded at Cedar Mountain, was honorably discharged and settled in Missouri, where he died, leaving no family; Martha M. is the deceased wife of John Henderson, of Missouri; Emmett was a soldier in the 20th Wis. V. I., was wounded at Prairie Grove, and there died; Mary E. is the wife of James L. Graham, of Georgetown; Joseph W. is married and lives in Wilsonville, Neb., but has no children; John C. is a farmer at Sanborn, Iowa, and has a family of eleven children; Abigail E., deceased wife of Robert Quingley, left no family; Robert is a resident of Dubuque, Iowa; Susan, widow of Marshall Cooper, also resides in Dubuque with her children.

As he was the eldest of the family, William S. Holmes received but a limited education when young, and worked on the farm until he enlisted in 1861, in Company F, 3d Wis. V. I., with which he took part in numerous battles, including Maryland Heights, Antietam, Gettysburg, Chancellorsville and Beverly Ford, and was with Gen. Pope in his retreat across the Potomac; was also at Winchester, served under Gen. Hooker, and likewise was with Gen. Sherman on his celebrated march through Georgia. His military career ended at Averysboro, N. C., where he was shot through the leg by a minie ball, from the effects of which wound he was confined in hospital for four months on David's Island, New York Harbor, and there received an honorable discharge, and returned to Grant county.

In July, 1873, Mr. Holmes married Miss Selena J. Piddington for his first wife. He then purchased the old home place on which he lived until 1896, when he retired to Platteville and erected for himself an elegant dwelling. In May, 1897, Mrs. Selena Holmes passed away, leaving him with one daughter, Elizabeth, now the wife of Charles Rouse, of Grant county, and the mother of one child, Ethel. In March, 1898, Mr. Holmes chose for his second wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoadley, a sister of his first wife. Mrs. Elizabeth Holmes was born near Manchester, England, in 1843, and is a daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Piddington, who came to America in 1849, and settled on a farm in Grant county, on which they passed the remainder of their lives. At their death they left two daughters—Mrs. Holmes, and Mrs. Sarah Hindman, of Harrison, Grant county. By her first husband Mrs. Holmes became the mother of two children, namely: George W. Hoadley, who resides near the Block House, in Grant county, and is the father of two children, Guy W., and Cynthia E.; and Gertrude Hoadley, at the age of sixteen years, was graduated from the State Normal School, at Platteville, and is now a popular teacher in the public schools of the county. In politics Mr. Holmes is a Republican, but has never been an office seeker nor an office holder. He and wife have made many friends since they came to reside in Platteville, and their life would be one of unalloyed enjoyment, but for the fact that Mr. Holmes at times suffers greatly from the serious wound he received in his gallant defense of his nation's flag.

JOHN WHITEHEAD (deceased), one of the pioneer settlers of Green county, and a man well remembered for his many good qualities, was born in Ohio Aug. 25, 1825, and died at his country home in this county in 1879. Mr. Whitehead was one of the four sons of Edward and Delilah (Hawk) Whitehead, the others being William, Levi and Henry.

John Whitehead was married Feb. 16, 1860, to a Miss Iseminger, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Beatey) Iseminger. They were the parents of the following family: Hattie, Sarah (who is Mrs. John Whitehead), Mary, Jane, Levi, Rebecca, Frank, Martha, John and Alice. Joseph Iseminger, the father of the above family, is still living in Graysville, Tenn., at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead became the parents of the following children: Emma is the wife of Charles Palmer, a farmer in the town of Cadiz; William has charge of the old homestead; Isaac is a farmer in the town of Clarno; Minnie is the wife of Louis Wolf, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Effie Jane is the wife Ira Long, of South Wayne, Wis.; and Milton is a farmer in the town of Cadiz.

John Whitehead was a man of ability and attained a very considerable success in farming, beginning as a poor boy, and at the time of his death, Jan. 6, 1879, owning 300 acres of very fine farming land in Green county, making a choice farm, well-improved, and provided with good buildings. His success was not an accident, nor the result of the help of friends, though he had many, but it came from hard work and careful and persistent savings; it came from his development of a trustworthy character; it came very largely from the helpful cooperation of his good wife and loyal children. All worked together, and after a time they secured their handsome and attractive country home. When Mr. Whitehead settled on his farm it was covered with timber, and was barren of all improvements. To-day it is one of the most desirable country estates in the southern part of the State.

Mr. Whitehead was a staunch Democrat, and was a man of much character and resolution. Well liked by his neighbors, he was upright and honorable in all his dealings. Mrs. Whitehead retains eighty acres of land in the town of Cadiz, from which she receives a cash rental of $225. She has lately removed to Browntown, Wis., where she has made herself a pleasant home, buying a neat and attractive village property. A devoted and faithful member of the United Brethren Church, she is known as a good Christian woman, and commands the unstinted respect and esteem of all who know her.

WILLIAM W. DAVIS has devoted himself to the agricultural interests of the town of Platteville, Grant county, and now in his old age has a wide circle of friends who esteem him for his upright and manly life, and love him for those personal qualities of heart and mind that have been conspicuous throughout his career.

Mr. Davis was born in Franklin county, N. Y., April 27, 1833, and is the son of Thomas Jefferson and Mary (Bell) Davis, who were both natives of the State of New York, and born on the shores of Lake Champlain. Thomas Davis was the son of John and Eunice (Butler) Davis, the former born in England, and the latter in the State of New York, where they both died; they left a large family, of whom Daniel Davis was a resident of Canada. Thomas Davis settled in Franklin county, and was a fruit farmer for many years. He sold out, and re-established himself in Monroe county, in the same State, and this became his home until his death. They both lived to be very old people, and reared a family of seven children. (1) Amelia was born in New York, and died when a young woman. (2) Benjamin married and settled in his native State, where he died some years ago, leaving a wife but no children. (3) Ruth is the wife of Harvey Chase, and resides near Rochester, N. Y. (4) Chauncey was a soldier in the 13th N. Y. V. I. during the Civil war; he married a lady of Monroe county, settled on her farm, and has two children, Frank and Emma, both residents of that State. (5) Joseph M. was a soldier in the 140th N. Y. V. I. during the war of the Rebellion, and lived in New York a number of years after the war. He then came West and took up a government claim near Yorktown, N. Dak., and made his home in the Prairie State some years, after which he moved to Minneapolis, and engaged in lumbering. He married a lady from his native State, and she died in Minneapolis, leaving two children, William and Emma. (6) Emma is married and lives on a Minnesota farm.

William W. Davis, who completes the above family, was reared to manhood under the parental roof in Monroe county, where he received an excellent education, and for a time followed the vocation of a teacher. In 1856 he came to Platteville on a business errand for a stock firm in New York, and, after transacting the business entrusted to him, concluded to remain in Platteville. Here he was engaged in mining and in other work until the breaking out of the Civil war. In 1861 he enlisted in Company C, 7th Wis. V. I., and was the first of that noble army that rallied to the support of the imperilled Republic. He was under Captain Naysmith, and was sent to the army of General McDowell in Virginia, and his first experience in real warfare was at the battle of Bull Run. He participated in many small battles, and was at Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. His regiment was engaged at South Mountain, and here Mr. Davis was seriously wounded, and was detained in the hospital seven months. When the young soldier had regained his health, he rejoined his regiment at Culpeper Court House, in time to bear a hand in the terrible struggle in the Wilderness in May, 1863, and there he was again wounded, in the eye. There was a continued fight until the line of battle was stretched in front of Petersburg, where Mr. Davis was twice wounded. He was knocked down at Gettysburg by an artillery wagon, and had ribs broken and other injuries inflicted on him. While lying on the ground he was taken prisoner by the Rebels, and imprisoned in Libby prison and on Belle Isle. He was exchanged at City Point, and he was honorably discharged from the service at Madison, Wis., in September, 1864. The war-worn veteran resumed peaceful occupations with a zest that only those can know who have led stormy years on the tented field, and engaged in farming near Platteville for two years.

In 1871 he married Miss Martha E. Bennett, the estimable daughter of Anson and Elvira J. Bennett, old and honored residents of Grant county. Mrs. Davis was born in February, 1851, and grew up on the Bennett homestead. She was educated in the public schools, and is a lady of character and refinement. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Davis settled on what was known as the Phillbrook farm, where they still live. They are the parents of four children: Benjamin A., born in 1872, married Miss Elsie Nicholas, and resides on a Platteville farm; they have one son, Raymond. William A., born in 1875, married Miss Cora Austin, and has his home on the Davis homestead. Jennie M., born in 1881, married Warren Vanetta, and lives on a Harrison township farm. Nellie B. is a student of the home schools. Mr. Davis has been a Republican since the Civil war, though his father was an old Jackson Democrat. He is a member of Platteville Post, G. A. R. Mrs. Davis belongs to the Free Methodist Church.

ABNER S. ROCK. a venerable retired farmer of Shullsburg, is one of the few men living to-day whose knowledge of Wisconsin extends back to the days when Indians and buffalo roamed through the country, and when the cultivated farms of the present were unbroken, uncultivated tracts of wild land. He was born in Logan county, Ohio, Feb. 8, 1827, son of George and Clarinda (Snoddy) Rock, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Germany. They were married in Ohio, and came to Wisconsin in 1844, settling at New Diggings, where the father followed mining and teaming until his death in 1852, leaving his wife with seven children, five of whom are living: Sarah and Kemper, both deceased; Francis, born in Ohio, now a resident of Sioux City, Iowa; George S., a farmer near Sioux City, Iowa; Margaret, wife of John Williams, of Jo Daviess Co., Ill.; Clarinda, residing with her sister, Mrs. Williams; and Abner S., our subject.

Abner S. Rock received but a few months schooling during his boyhood in Ohio, and after the removal of the family to Wisconsin he followed mining or teaming until he moved to his farm, which he purchased in 1854. This he greatly improved by the erection of good buildings, and the breaking of the wild land of which it consisted wholly when he made his purchase. He was very poor, and only by his untiring energy and dogged perseverance has he ever succeeded as he has. In 1886 he bought the George Proctor farm near the line of White Oak Springs, and now has one of the best farms in the township.

In 1852 Mr. Rock was wedded to Miss Fanny Field, who was born Feb. 12, 1835, daughter of William and Sarah Field, who came early from Kentucky to New Diggings township. Their union was blessed with three children: Annie, born in 1854, married Samuel Mullen, a farmer of Shullsburg, and has two children, Eva (wife of Henry Girley) and Abner (a farmer of Monticello township); Charles H., born in August, 1858, residing on a part of his father's farm, married May Urin in 1896, and has two children, Fannie E. (born in 1897), and Abner C. (born in June, 1900); Eliza, born in 1863, is now deceased. In religious connection Mr. and Mrs. Rock are identified with the Congregational Church, which they attend regularly, and are interested in its work, contributing to the support of same. Politically Mr. Rock is always found in the ranks of the Democratic party, and has been honored with a number of local offices, such as member of the town board and school director, the duties of which he has conscientiously fulfilled.

THOMAS MARSDEN. The greater portion of Mr. Marsden's long and useful life of sixty-five years has been passed in Grant county, his father having been among the pioneers of that section of the State, the family coming to this country from Yorkshire, England.

Henry Marsden, father of Thomas, was born in Leeds, England, Aug. 12, 1807. For many years he was engaged in overseeing one of the large woolen manufactories near the place of his birth, continuing in this business, and the difficult business of pattern making, as long as he remained in England. In 1832 he was married to Hannah Maria Riley, and in 1842 they emigrated to America, bringing their family of five children with them. Immediately upon reaching this country they came West, first to Chicago, then to Racine, and a little later to what is now Waukesha county, Wis., where they resided ten years. It was here that Mrs. Marsden died in 1844. In 1853 the elder Marsden moved with his children to Grant county, in the same State, and purchased a farm east of Lancaster, in the township of Liberty. Here, with the assistance of his family, he created a home, and lived among the old settlers of the county. His five children are all living: Rebecca is now Mrs. John Rook, of Lancaster; Thomas and William reside in the township of Fennimore; Jane lives in Kansas, the wife of Zackaria Thomas; and John lives in California. The elder Marsden lived to see his seventy-fourth birthday, and passed away in 1880, honored by his neighbors and acquaintances for his industry, his moral worth and his irreproachable life.

Thomas Marsden was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1835, and among the most vivid recollections are the impressions made upon his young mind, when, a boy of seven years, he first landed in New York and crossed more than a third of the continent to find a home whose character and surroundings were totally different from anything with which his previous short experience had made him familiar. As he grew older he aided his father upon the homestead, and soon after reaching manhood he married, his wife's name being Sarah Fry. Her father, John Fry, was a Pennsylvania farmer, who had migrated first to Iowa, and afterward to Grant county, Wis., settling in Ellenboro township in 1854. To Mr. and Mrs. Marsden five children have been born, one of whom, Julia, died at the age of seventeen. Those yet living are Olive, Henry, Cora and Riley. Olive is the wife of W. E. Lathrop. Henry is a practicing physician.

In 1864 Mr. Marsden moved to the farm in Fennimore which is his present home, and which, through his efforts and energy, has become one of the most attractive homes in Grant county.

MARION F. ROSS. Among the sturdy people of Wisconsin there is an element of New England ancestry, schooled to effort and achievement, typical representatives of enlightenment and progress, yet standing for the conservative forces of society. When a lad of nine years the subject of this sketch was one of a family which, in that steady migration from New England for nearly two centuries, left home and friends to people the West. The father, Augustus Ross, was a man of superior intelligence. He was reared on a farm but received a good common school education, and in his youth attained, also, a good medical education. He practiced medicine for some years, but later returned to farm life.

The Ross family is of Scotch extraction.

Leonard Ross, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Connecticut, but removed to Vermont, where he engaged in farming and lived to a good old age, leaving a large family of children. Augustus, his son, was born in Vermont in 1816. In his native State he married Amanda Smith, daughter of Asahel Smith, a native-born farmer of Massachusetts, of English ancestry, who reared a large family and lived to an advanced age. Migrating with his family to Wisconsin in 1854, Augustus Ross bought 100 acres of land in Exeter township, Green county, and there lived until his death, which occurred in 1863, when he was forty-seven years of age. Augustus Ross was a prominent citizen in the new community. He served as town superintendent of schools and was elected justice of the peace. Among other local offices, he filled that of town supervisor. Himself and wife were members of the Universalist Church. His widow still survives, living at the old homestead in Exeter township, now in her eighty-fifth year. Eleven children, six sons and five daughters, were born to Augustus and Amanda Ross, of whom six are now living, namely: Joseph W., of Oak Park, Ill.; Marion F., our subject; Ann E., wife of Thomas Parkin, of Pine Island, Minn.; Ada E., wife of Simeon D. Ace, of Exeter township; Louisa A., wife of Robert Parkin, of Pine Island, Minn., and Carrie, wife of John Stuckey, of Pine Island, Minnesota.

Marion F. Ross was born in Ludlow, Vt., Nov. 15, 1844. He attended school in Vermont when a boy, and after his long journey to Wisconsin with his father and family in 1854 he continued his education amid the new surroundings. He early gave his attention to school teaching, beginning while yet a pupil at the district schools and continuing it in all for twelve years. Marion was but nineteen years old when his father died, and at the age of twenty years, like his brothers, he was allowed his time. At that age he took charge of his father's farm and conducted it for one year. Then, upon completing his majority, he had the usual aspiration of the young man to seek his fortune, and, an opportunity presenting itself in the selling of sewing machines, he seized it, but this venture did not prove especially rich, and Mr. Ross returned to farming. Buying a farm of 120 acres at Attica, in Brooklyn township, he lived there for fourteen years, then traded the property for his present farm in Exeter township, then consisting of 302 acres, but now of only 297. This has been his home since 1882. Mr. Ross has brought the farm to a high state of cultivation, and while he engages profitably in general farming, he devotes considerable attention also to stock raising.

Mr. Ross married, Nov. 4, 1866, Miss Alma J. Gassett, daughter of Lucius and Sallie B. (Butterfield) Gassett, natives of Ludlow, Vt., who, in 1853, migrated to Exeter township, Green county, Wis., and located on a farm of 160 acres. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Ross was Darius Gassett, a native of Vermont, of English extraction, and a farmer, who had a large family and lived to the age of almost ninety years. Her maternal grandfather was Joseph Butterfield, a farmer, native of Massachusetts, of English descent, who had six children, and lived to the age of seventy years. To Lucius and Sallie B. Gassett were born three children: Alma J., wife of our subject; Almina, unmarried; and Julius L., of Belleville, Wis. In 1880 Lucius Gassett sold his Exeter township farm to Julius, his son, and moved to Belleville, where he died Jan. 28, 1901, in his ninety-first year. His wife died Feb. 14, 1893, aged seventy-five years.

Six children were born to Marion F. and Alma (Gassett) Ross, four sons and two daughters. Of these (1) Archie F. is a traveling salesman, living at Mt. Horeb. He married Florence Cate, and after her death wedded for his second wife Marv Gillett, by whom he has one child living, Vernon L. (2) Lucius A. married Mary E. Christler, lives in Exeter township, and has one child living, Velma M. (3) Curtis H. married Ada Kirkpatrick and lives at Belleville, where he owns a livery stable. He has one child, Mildred. (4) Mabel A. married Rodney Judd, and lives in Dane county near Belleville. (5) Vernon M. and (6) Winnifred A. are at home. While living at Attica Mr. and Mrs. Ross were members of the Methodist Church located there, but are not now actively identified with any religious society. While at Attica Mr. Ross was for a number of years justice of the peace. He has served as town clerk and as school clerk for many years in both Brooklyn and Exeter townships. In politics he is a Republican. In the political and social life of Exeter township he is recognized as a leader, and one whose judgments are clean-cut and based upon right thinking, and one who in active life is ever ready to maintain and defend those policies and principles which work for the public welfare.

REV. JOHN T. ETTER, after a long life of usefulness, devoted to the ministry of the German Reformed Church, now lives retired in Monroe, Green county, Wis. He was born in Buehler, Canton Appenzell, Switzerland, Dec. 28, 1832, of a family that for several generations was represented in the ministry.

Rev. John Jacob Etter, his grandfather, was a minister of the German Reformed Church, and passed his life in Switzerland. His death occurred at the age of eighty-eight years, after he had preached for forty years to one congregation.

Rev. John Ulrich Etter, son of Rev. John Jacob, followed in his father's footsteps, and for thirty years was in charge of one parish. He married Mary Magdalene Rehsteiner, who died in 1833, at the age of nineteen, leaving one child, Rev. John T. After the death of his first wife, Rev. John Ulrich Etter wedded Barbara Steiger, and four of their five children are yet living: Gottfried, of Monroe, Mich.; Lydia, of St. Gallen, Switzerland; Ulrich, an artist of Detroit, Mich.; and Paulina, wife of Jacob Halter, a dentist of St. Gallen, Switzerland. Rev. John Ulrich Etter died suddenly of apoplexy in 1870, at the age of sixty-one.

Rev. John T. Etter was reared in his native land and educated in the theological schools in that country. He began preaching about 1852, and the next year emigrated to America. In 1854 he returned to Switzerland and was married, returning to America the following year. His first charge was in Tennessee, where he remained for two years, and then was transferred to Indiana, where the Synod assigned to his charge the three counties of Clay, Greene and Owen. He was meeting with much success in his work, but owing to the chills and fever, was obliged to leave and seek a different climate. He preached one year in Sauk City, Wis., when he was called to New Glarus, and there for thirty-seven years he was the spiritual adviser of the German Reformed Church. His long pastorate there attests to his popularity, and it was with genuine regret that his parishioners allowed him to retire, which he did Nov. 8, 1896 purchasing his present home in Monroe, and locating there.

On Feb. 26, 1855, Rev. Etter was married in Switzerland to Miss Eliza Zehner, daughter of John and Katrina (Gross) Zehner, and seven children were born to them: John Huldreich, born in Tennessee; Robert, born in Clay county, Ind.; Bertha Rosalia; John Theodore; Johanna Lydia; Bertha Lydia; and one that died in infancy. John Huldreich and Bertha Rosalia both died at the age of six months. Robert married Adelia Campbell, and has two children, Nellie and Inez; he is at present postmaster at Monroe. John Theodore, Jr., a dry goods merchant in Monroe, married Mary Wittwer, and has four children, Minnie Louisa, John Theodore, Arthur, and Reuben Robert Roland.

John Zehner, father of Mrs. Etter, was a manufacturer and dealer in muslins and embroideries in Switzerland, where he died in 1870, aged seventy-three years. His wife, Katrina Gross, died in 1865, aged sixty-nine years. Of their nine children, two are yet living: John, of Heiden, Switzerland; Heinrich, of the same place. Both are widowers.

On Feb. 26, 1901, Rev. Etter was called upon to mourn the death of his faithful wife, who that day entered into rest. The funeral was held on March 1, 1901.

HENRY SCHEEL, a retired farmer of Platteville, Grant county, is the possessor of a handsome property, and is enabled to spend his declining years in the pleasurable enjoyment of his accumulations. The record of his early life is that of an active, enterprising, methodical and sagacious business man, who bent his energies to the honorable acquirement of a comfortable competence for himself and family.

Mr. Scheel was born in Holstein, Germany, May 1, 1818, a son of Hans and Catharine (Wolfe) Scheel, also natives of Holstein, who in 1846 emigrated to America. The family sailed from Hamburg, Germany, to England; from Hull to Quebec, Canada; and by the chain of lakes to Chicago, whence they proceeded across the country to Galena, Ill., where the mother died the same year. The father made his home with his son Henry after coming to this State, in 1847, and died in Elk Grove, Lafayette county. In early life he was a sailor and fisherman on the Baltic sea, and also followed farming, owning and operating a tract of land in Germany. He had only two children, Henry being the only son. Anna was married in Germany to Peter Schroeder, who died in California, and her death occurred in Platteville, in 1896. To their union were born five children: Henry, a resident of Platteville; Mary, of Platteville; Frederick, of Elk Grove; Christopher, deceased; and Catherine, of St. Paul, Minnesota.

Henry Scheel was reared and educated in his native land, and was there married, in 1841, to Miss Catherine Kay, also a native of Germany, and a daughter of Joseph Kay, who spent his entire life in that country. On the emigration of the family to America, in 1846, they stopped first in Galena, Ill., where they spent one winter, and the following year took up their residence in Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis., where Mr. Scheel opened up and improved a farm. For about thirty-five years he was successfully engaged in general farming and stock raising, and is now the owner of a large amount of land at Elk Grove, having several good farms. This property has all been acquired through his own industry, perseverance and good management, and he well deserves the prosperity that has come to him. In 1881 he moved to Platteville, and has since lived a retired life.

Mr. Scheel has been called upon to mourn the loss of his estimable wife, who died in Platteville in 1897. To them were born five children, namely: Anna, deceased; William, who died at the age of twenty-two years; John, deceased; Jane, Mrs. Niehaus; and Mary, at home.

As a Democrat Mr. Scheel has taken quite an active interest in political affairs, and served on the town board in Elk Grove seven years, and in the town council of Platteville two years. Religiously he holds membership in the Lutheran Church. He has been identified with the interests of Wisconsin since Territorial days and has witnessed almost its entire development and progress. He is one of the prominent men of Platteville, honored and respected by all who know him.

REV. SAMUEL WHITNEY TROUSDALE, A. M., PH. D., D. D., one of the most highly esteemed and prominent residents of Platteville, Grant county, presiding elder of the Platteville district of the M. E. Church, was born at Fayette, Lafayette Co., Wis., Nov. 12, 1853, the worthy son—the only one—of Henry School .

William P. and Mary Ann (McKee) Trousdale. Seven half brothers and sisters of our subject are living at this writing: W. W. Parkinson; Jane, Mrs. Ellison; William J. Trousdale; Polly Ann, Mrs. Perrigo; Robert M.; John W.; and James W. Bashford.

Samuel Whitney Trousdale is of Scotch-Irish parentage on both sides, and the record of his ancestors is very interesting. Before the Revolutionary war his paternal ancestors settled in North Carolina, and took such valiant part in that struggle that the government presented them with a tract of land in Tennessee (the city of Gallatin now occupying that tract), and the family name has been perpetuated in one of the counties of that State. The grandfather of our subject moved from Tennessee to Kentucky, and in that State William P. Trousdale was born. In course of time he moved to Madison county, Ill., and thence to Lafayette county, Wis., while the State was still a Territory. He settled on a farm near Fayette, and in that town he died, Sept. 18, 1889, at the ripe old age of eighty-six.

Not less interesting is the record of the early maternal ancestors of our subject. His mother was born in Mason county, Ky., Dec. 11, 1817, eldest child of Robert and Letitia McKee, the former a grandson of that well-known old pioneer, John McKee, and the latter a great-granddaughter of pioneer Robert McKee, both of whom came to America from the North of Ireland with the Scotch-Irish emigration of 1738. They had settled, with their other brothers, first at Lancaster, Penn., removing in 1757 to Virginia, and locating permanently in Rockbridge county. There Robert died June 11, 1774. His son, William McKee, was a man of great prominence. He served his country as a captain in the Revolution, was made high sheriff of Rockbridge county, and was its representative in the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1788, to consider the plan of Federal government for the United States, as recommended by the Federal Convention that met at Philadelphia.

William McKee married his cousin, Miriam McKee, a daughter of the old pioneer John McKee, and about the year 1790 removed with his family to Kentucky, settling in Garrard county, where later he was joined by other members of his family connection. However, the branches became numerous, and are now to be found in Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, always representing the best element in the community, many of them having occupied very prominent positions in the various walks of life. John McKee, the eldest son of William McKee, and the father of Letitia McKee, was appointed register of the land office at Edwardsville, Ill., in 1816, and he and his son, William P., continued in the office for the succeeding twenty years. Robert McKee and his young wife and infant daughter removed to that place in 1818, and settled on the farm where they spent the remainder of their lives.

Mary Ann McKee, the mother of our subject, when eighteen years old was (first) married to Carroll Parkinson, and soon after, with her husband, removed to Wisconsin, traveling overland with teams, and settling in Fayette, Lafayette county, this being then known as Parkinson's settlement; this was in the spring of 1839. Here this lady made her home until her death, on Jan. 31, 1896. She had lived a good and busy life, and had fully done her part in the pioneer work of building a firm foundation for the great State which came out of the wilderness of the Northwest.

Samuel Whitney Trousdale, the subject of the present sketch, spent his boyhood days on the farm at Fayette, attending both public and private schools until the fall of 1871, when he took up the preparatory course of the State University of Wisconsin. From this institution he graduated, from the Ancient Classical course, in 1877. Mr. Trousdale seems to have thoroughly understood the reason why he was sent to college, for his average in his studies was uniformly high, while he also found time and opportunity to take charge, for a time, of the editorial columns of the "University Press," the college paper; was president of the Athenæan Literary Society; and for a year was president of the college Y. M. C. A. In his Senior year Mr. Trousdale won in the college oratorical contest, and also represented the State University in the inter-collegiate contest. After his graduation he was offered a position as tutor of Greek and Elocution in the State University, which position he occupied for one year, and then entered the School for Theology in Boston University, from which he graduated in 1881. Since that time Mr. Trousdale has received the degrees of A. M., from the State University; Ph. D., from the Ohio Wesleyan University; as well as D. D. from Lawrence University.

While in the Theological Seminary Mr. Trousdale spent two years at West Quincy and Newton Lower Falls, Mass., and in the fall of 1882 joined the West Wisconsin M. E. Conference, of which he is a member at the present time. His Conference has honored him by appointing him to some of the strongest churches, he having served as pastor at Hudson; First Church, Eau Claire; First Church, La Crosse; and Platteville. For a number of years Mr. Trousdale was chairman of the board of examiners of his Conference, and during this time great advancement was made in the method of conducting such bodies, a change being made in the examination of candidates from oral to written examinations. Twice has Mr. Trousdale been honored by being elected the head of the delegation to represent his Conference in the General Conference.

Rev. Trousdale was first married, in the fall of 1882, to Miss Alma L. Baker, a daughter of John U. and Elizabeth Baker, both of whom were English born. Mrs. Trousdale was born near Linden, in Iowa county, on May 17, 1861, and died at La Crosse, Wis., on Oct. 9, 1895. She was a woman of superior character, ambitious, but discreet, and of such a natural strength of character that she impressed herself upon all who had even a passing acquaintance with her. Of this marriage two children were born: Elizabeth Dale and Paul Whitney. Mr. Trousdale, for his second wife, wedded Miss Minne E. Taylor, a Pennsylvanian by birth, of English-French descent, and an accomplished and estimable lady. Before her marriage to Mr. Trousdale she had charge of the Oral Deaf School at La Crosse, Wis., of which she had been principal for five years. Of this second marriage of our subject two sons have been born: Theodore and James Bashford. Samuel Whitney Trousdale's ideals have, from childhood, been high ones, and he has never fallen into the vices and follies of the world, hence his look backward over his life contains nothing which may not appear upon record. He is respected and esteemed, both in church and in the community, and worthily represents the great religious denomination which the immortal John Wesley founded.

MRS. CATHERINE BOWELL. A record of Green county would not be complete without mention of this highly esteemed lady, who resides on her well-improved farm of 100 acres, located about five miles northeast of Monroe.

Mrs. Bowell was born in Fayette county, Penn., Oct. 1, 1817, a daughter of Isaac and Sarah (Stowe) Smith, natives of the same county, whose parents were among the early English settlers there. She was one of a family of eleven children: Samuel Smith, Catherine (our subject), Sabina, Margaret, Elizabeth, Moses, Eliza Ann, John, Sarah, Rachel, and Isaac, of whom four survive, Catherine, John, Rachel, and Sarah. Growing to womanhood in her native State, Catherine Smith married a neighbor, William Bell, who survived but a few years, and died, leaving her with a son, John S. Bell, now a citizen of Fort Scott, Kans. Mrs. Bell then became the wife of Thomas A. Bowell, who was born in Fayette county, Penn., Jan. 21, 1815, and about 1845 they came to the State of Wisconsin, locating in Sylvester township, Green county. Alluring tales of the fertility of the land, of the beauty and convenience of its many waterways, and its speedy settlement, had attracted the young couple, and tempted them to found their homes in what was then almost a wilderness. During the long life which Mr. and Mrs. Bowell were permitted to spend in association, she worthily did her part in accumulating the large fortune which he left at his decease, Dec. 25, 1890, for he was at that time the owner of 300 acres of the best land in the township. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bowell: Frances A., who married William Treastus, of Roswell, S. Dak.; Isaac J., in Shenandoah, Iowa; Sarah E., who married Lewis Roub, of Clarno township; Basil B., a farmer of Madison, S. Dak.; William, a farmer on the old homestead; Err Kyle, of the Black Hills, S. Dak.; and Henry J., who lives in Merrill, Wis. Mrs. Bowell has twenty-eight grandchildren and twenty-five great-grandchildren. No terms are too high in which to speak of Mr. Bowell, for he was an example in every relation in life.

As a type of the brave, cheerful and devoted woman of pioneer days Mrs. Bowell is well remembered, and in her own family her record as a faithful, helpful and devoted wife and mother has won the devotion and esteem of every one who has come under her kind influence. For sixty-five years she has been a consistent member of the Baptist Church, with all that the name implies, living a life full of Christian deeds, and setting an example worthy of emulation.

THOMAS TIGHE, an old and venerable agriculturist of Grant county, was born in Roscommon, Ireland, Dec. 3, 1820, a son of Hugh and Margaret (Ratekin) Tighe, born, reared and died in Ireland. The father died in August, 1836, and his widow a few years later. Seven children were born to them. Thomas, Bridget (who died in New Orleans), and Bartholomew (who returned to Sheffield, Eng., where he still resides) were all of the family who came to this country.

In Ireland, in 1842, Thomas Tighe married Miss Bridget Carrell, whom he left in the old country with three children, while he was seeking a home for them in America. After leaving them a year and a half he sent for them, and they settled in Trumbull county, Ohio, where they lived some six years. In 1852 he came to Wisconsin and purchased 170 acres of wild land, two miles north of the village of Ellenboro. Here he put up a log cabin and began life in the wilderness, seeing many hardships in the early days. Mr. Tighe later purchased eighty adjoining acres, and cleared up a fine farm, which he devoted to farming and stock raising. A few years ago he retired from active life, having accumulated an ample competence. Many friends have come to prize his plain and rugged character, kindly disposition and downright honesty. A few years ago he lost his home by fire, but now he has a fine modern home. Mrs. Tighe died in August, 1865, leaving him a family of seven children: Michael died in St. Louis; John died in Oklahoma, where he had married and settled; Thomas is a resident of Lebanon, Kans.; Herbert lives in the gold and silver mining region of Arizona; Mary is the wife of Andrew Omsted, of Oketo, Kans.; Maggie is the widow of Mack Regan, of Lebanon, Kans., and the mother of seven children; and Susan, wife of John Head, of Prescott, is the mother of one daughter.

In 1865 Mr. Tighe married his second wife, Mrs. Freeman Vaughn, nee Phillips, daughter of David and Harriet (McKee) Phillips, who came West from Connecticut to Ohio, and from there to Wisconsin. Here he became wealthy, and was noted as one of the leading men of this county. Mrs. Tighe, his daughter, was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1838, and is a lady of culture and education, and for some years was one of the most successful teachers in Grant county. There was one son, Dorus Vaughn, who owns a fine farm in Kansas, by her first union, and to Mr. and Mrs. Tighe was born one daughter, Amy, in 1880. She is the wife of John Berregan, and they reside with her father, and are the parents of one child, Ivy. Mr. Tighe has always been a Democrat, but has never aspired to office. Brought up a Catholic, he has never been able to take part in the church work on account of the remoteness of any organized body of his fellow believers.

EDWIN TREVITT, a well-known farmer, fruit grower and dairyman of Monroe, Green county, was born in Erie county, N. Y., Nov. 26, 1833, son of Constant and grandson of Benjamin Trevitt.

Benjamin Trevitt was a native of Vermont, of French and English descent. His mother was a granddaughter of Capt. Ben Churches, the New England Indian fighter. By occupation Mr. Trevitt was a mechanic, although in early life he was a salt-water sailor. His death occurred in Vermont, when he was well advanced in years. His wife was a member of the Carter family, of which the first representative in this country came over in the "Mayflower."

Constant Trevitt was born in Vermont, and was a blacksmith by trade, following it all his life. He came to Wisconsin in 1880, locating in Monroe, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1885, when he was aged ninety-eight years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, in the Maryland line, and took part in the defense of Baltimore against the British after the burning of the public buildings at Washington. In religious faith he was a Universalist. He married Louisa Stewart, who was born in New York, daughter of Benjamin Stewart, a farmer of English descent. To Constant Trevitt and wife were born eight children, six of whom are yet living, as follows: Constant; Franklin; Diana, widow of Harlow Ferry, of Madison, Ohio; Edwin, our subject; George, of Sonoma, Cal.; and Ellen, wife of Albert Winters, of Madison, Ohio. The mother of these died in the faith of the Baptist Church, in 1865, when she was aged sixty-five years.

Edwin Trevitt passed his early days and grew to manhood in his native county, receiving such literary training as the common schools afforded. He learned all the details of farming in boyhood, but also learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed in Pennsylvania. In 1867 he located in Lake county, Ohio, engaging in farming in Madison township, where he met with great success, but in 1874 he determined to make his future home in Wisconsin, and accordingly moved his family westward, making his home in Monroe, and purchased his present home in the south part of the city. He has fifteen acres of highly improved land, and raises a fine grade of fruit and vegetables, and has engaged to some extent in dairying. His good business methods and his prompt fulfilling of every obligation have won him a high place in the business world.

On June 20, 1864, Mr. Trevitt was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Darling, daughter of James and Maria (Hogle) Darling, and to this union have come two children, namely: Charley L., a carpenter of Citronelle, Ala., married Cora White, and has one daughter, May; Edith D., a graduate nurse from Sherman Hospital, in Elgin, Ill., where she is now located. Both Mr. and Mrs. Trevitt are active in the work of the Methodist Church, Mr. Trevitt at present serving as steward. Socially he is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and politically is a staunch Republican, and active in the work of the party, and also for all movements he thinks calculated to aid the temperance cause. He and his wife are popular among their friends, and are highly respected citizens.

James Darling, father of Mrs. Trevitt, was a native of New York, as was also his wife. His occupation was that of a mechanic, and his death occurred in 1861, when he was aged sixty-five years. His wife lived to the advanced age of seventy-eight. Both were faithful adherents of the Congregational faith. In their family were eleven children, nine of whom are now living: Mary, wife of Alexander Marvin, of Pierpont, Ohio; James, of Missouri; Oliver, of Conneaut, Ohio; Susan, wife of O. C. Peters, of Winslow, Ill.; Jennie, wife of Jonas Scramling, of Climax, Mich.; Eliza, wife of George De Wolf, of Genoa, Ill.; Caroline, wife of Albert Hildum, of Garland, Penn.; Harriet, Mrs. Trevitt; and Esther, wife of Richard Marvin, of Columbus, Pennsylvania.

SIMON SMITH, junior member of the firm of Johnson & Smith, painting contractors, of Beloit, Rock county, is a man of character and standing, and takes the common-sense business view of any subject proposed to his attention. He is a level-headed, practical man of affairs, and his administrative ability has been recognized by his election to the chief position in the city, he having served as mayor of Beloit in 1899, 1900 and 1901.

Mr. Smith was born Nov. 14, 1839, and is a son of Samuel and Mary Ann Smith, who had four sons, all of whom are living: Samuel, Simon, Sidney, and Sandy. In 1856 the parents came to Beloit, where the father engaged in painting. He died in 1881, at the age of sixty-nine, and the mother survived him several years, reaching the age of seventy-five. Both were members of the Episcopal church. He was treasurer of the city at the time of his death. Both the maternal and paternal grandfathers of Simon Smith died in England.

Simon Smith grew to manhood in Beloit, where he attended the city schools, and made fair progress in the acquisition of an education. When the Civil war broke out the young man enlisted in Company D, 15th Ill. V. I., and served as a private from May, 1861, to October, 1865. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Vicksburg, and all the engagements on the "march to the sea," closing with the battle at Bentonville, N. C. After the war had ended Mr. Smith returned to Beloit, and took up the painter's trade, which has been his life calling. For the last twenty years he and J. T. Johnson have been in partnership, and their business has been large and important.

Simon Smith and Miss Sarah A. Bright, daughter of Henry and Sarah Bright, were married Nov. 2, 1865, and they have a handsome home at No. 838 Fourth street. Their union has been blessed by the birth of five children, Edith, Stella, Louis, Sidney and Fred. Mr. Smith is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 10 A. F. & A. M., Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M., and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T.; is also a member of the United Work-

Simon Smith

L. A. Jenkins

C. W. Tomkins

men of America, and of the Home Forum. He has been a member of the county board for fourteen years, and in 1898-99 was chairman of the board, of which he is still a member.

GEORGE LEE, prominent in agricultural circles, and widely known as one of the leading farmers and stockmen of the town of Lima. Grant county, was born at Allens Heads, in Northumberland, England, April 18, 1842.

John and Ann Lee, his parents, were both also natives of Northumberland, the father born in 1811, and the mother in 1816. In 1849 they came to Jo Daviess county, Ill., by way of New York, Buffalo and Chicago. Mr. Lee was engaged in mining for some seven years, and then moved into the town of Highland, Iowa Co., Wis., where he bought a farm of eighty acres, and had his first experiences in the cultivation of the soil. On this place they lived until 1863, when Mr. Lee sold it, and moved into the town of Lima, two and a half miles northwest of Platteville, where he died the following year. Mr. Lee was well known, and very popular among the early settlers, who knew him not only as a kind and courteous man, but as a good neighbor and a trusty friend. Mr. and Mrs. Lee were members of the Methodist Church, and sincerely lived the faith they loved. After his death the widow moved into Platteville, where she lived some years, dying in 1874. They reared a family of seven children: (1) John, born in 1838 in England, where he was educated, married Miss Ann Leese, of Iowa county, Wis., and settled in Dodgeville. Moving to the Lake Superior country, he followed mining until 1856, in which year he went to Pike's Peak, Colo., working in the gold mines there until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted to fight the hostile Indians. After some time he moved his family into Kansas, where they still reside. Returning to the Colorado gold mines, he died in 1897. (2) Mary Ann, born in England, died when a young woman, in Illinois. (3) George is the third in the family. (4) Jane, born in 1844 in England, married Robert Graham, of Grant county, and they now reside in Platteville, where Mr. Graham is living retired. John Graham, their son, is a resident of that city. (5) Hannah F., born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., is the wife of James Butson, of Marshall, Minn., where he is known as one of the wealthy farmers of that section. Four children have been born to their union, Annie, Harry, Minnie, and John. (6) Matthew H., born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., married a Miss Egan, of Highland, for his first wife. She died soon afterward, leaving him one daughter, Nellie, who now resides with her father in the State of Iowa. Mr. Lee married for his second wife a Miss Newman, of Iowa. (7) Thomson, born in England, died in childhood in Illinois.

George Lee acquired his early education in the district schools in Jo Daviess county, Ill., and Iowa county, Wis. While still a boy he worked in the lead mines in Illinois, and in Wisconsin did the same work until fully grown. When his parents moved to Lima he became the manager of the farm, and after his father's death rented the place until 1872, in which year he pre-empted a quarter section of land in Lyon county, Minn., moving his family from Platteville by wagon. The grasshoppers destroyed all farm products, and he came back to Wisconsin in the winter of 1873, after proving up his Minnesota land. Buying the old home farm in the town of Lima, which contained 160 acres, he has added eighty acres of timber land thereto. The quarter section of land in Minnesota he has retained, and it is now a valuable and well improved farm.

In 1865 Mr. Lee married Miss Susan J. Butson, of Lima, daughter of Thomas and Susan Butson, old pioneers of Grant county, who came from Cornwall, England, among the very early settlers of Grant county. Our subject and wife are now living in the old Lee homestead, where they have reared a family of nine children: (1) John, their eldest son, was born in Grant county in 1867, married Miss Ida Eastman, and is now living on his farm in the town of Lima. They have had two children, Gretta and the baby. (2) Susan, born in 1869, married Thomas Edge, and lives in the town of Ellenboro, on his uncle's farm; they have two children, Emma and Harry. (3) George William, born in Grant county in 1872, attained manhood under the parental roof, and is now the manager of his father's farm in Minnesota. (4) Henry, born in Grant county in 1877, is unmarried. (5) Charles was born in 1881; (6) Minnie, in 1884; (7) Ernest, in 1886; (8) Frank, in 1889; and (9) Elsie, in 1891. The younger children are at home.

In politics Mr. Lee is a Republican, and in religion he and his family are intimately associated with the Methodist Church. His career affords a conspicuous illustration of the value of pluck and energy, when backed up by a disposition to make the most of all passing opportunities, and do the best thing possible every day. He began with nothing, and has gradually accumulated a very handsome property. Some years ago Mr. Lee met with an accident, receiving a severe injury on the spine, which left him a cripple for life.

ALPHEUS HAROLD WOODLE, whose venerable figure has for years been a familiar sight in Monroe, is one of the oldest settlers of Green county, and he has a personal knowledge of early scenes and events that covers more than sixty years in this county. He has seen the transformation of a wilderness, and has rendered no trifling contribution to the making of the great commonwealth where once prevailed the wilderness and the unbroken forest. In his advanced age he commands the respect of a host of friends, and many there are who will sadly learn some day of the breaking of the golden thread that keeps such men as he alive to recall the courage and loyalty of a vanished generation.

Mr. Woodle was born in Fayette county, Penn., Oct. 10, 1823, a son of Joseph and Hannah (Batton) Woodle, both natives of that State. They had six children, only two of whom are now living: Alpheus H.; and Sarah, wife of Stephen Mackey, of Monroe. The father was a farmer, and came to Wisconsin in 1836, selecting a farm in Sylvester township, Green county, and the next year he brought his family to it, and opened a new home in the West. In 1856 Mr. Woodle sold this farm, and went to Fillmore county, Minn., where he remained but a few years. He was then established in Clayton county, Iowa, and later in Jasper county, Mo., where he died when over seventy years of age. His wife died in 1855, at the age of sixty-five years. He was a man of prominence in those early days, and served as sheriff of Green county under the territorial laws. His father, Thomas Woodle, was a native of Delaware, and a life-long farmer, and came West with his son in 1836, and entered land. He lived to be about seventy years of age, and was the father of five sons and four daughters. Thomas Batton, the father of Hannah Batton, lived in Fayette county, Penn., and died there at an advanced age. He was a farmer, and had a small family.

Alpheus H. Woodle was thirteen years old when he came with his parents into Green county, and here he has continuously resided since 1837. He grew to manhood in Sylvester township, and lived there until the fall of 1899, when he moved into the city of Monroe—a brief summary of so long and useful a life, a life of singular modesty and of genuine worth. When a boy Mr. Woodle attended the district school, and lived with his parents until he reached man's estate. When he became of age, or a little before, he made a claim of 160 acres, which he partly improved. He then sold that, and bought his father's farm, which consists of 126 acres. This he made his home, and still owns, although he has now settled in the city to enjoy whatever comfort there may be in the life of the town, as contrasted with the pleasures that belong to the country.

On Nov. 7, 1844, occurred the marriage of Alpheus H. Woodle and Miss Hannah Fincher, a union that has proved singularly fortunate, and which has been blessed by the birth of six sons and six daughters, Mahala Jane, Susanna Esle, Sarah Delilah, Mary Elmira, Joseph William, Joel Allen, John Alpheus, Thomas Emsley, Hannah Cornelia, Ellsworth Sherman Grant, Harvey Lyon, and Theo May. Susanna Esle married William Coldren, and lives in Spring Grove township, Green county; they have two children living, Frederick and Chauncey. Sarah Delilah married Seth Austin, of Monroe, and has two children, Rolland and Alice. Mary Elmira died when nine years old. Joseph William married Matilda Crow, who bore him three children, Grace, Levern and Lucy Fay, and is now dead; he married for his second wife Rose Reen. Joel Allen died when four years old. John Alpheus married Miss Elizabeth Cato, and lives in Page county, Iowa; they have five children, Alice, Gay, Vesta, Effie and Chauncey. Thomas Emsley married Lelah Stevenson, and lives in Monroe. Hannah Cornelia died when two years old. Ellsworth Sherman Grant lives on the old homestead, with his wife, who was Etta Hill; they have one child, Cassius. Harvey Lyon married Carrie Bowen Nold, and is the father of three children, Reginald Emsley, Mildred Lola and Dorothy Catharine. Theo May died when seven years old.

Politically Mr. Woodle is a pronounced Republican. He cast his first vote for Buchanan, but when the division of the parties became more defined on the question of slavery he ranged himself with the Republicans, and votes that ticket to-day. He was road supervisor one term, and pathmaster several terms. Mrs. Woodle's father was a native of England, where his father worked in the Queen's Ward, and her mother was born in South Carolina. Mr. Fincher was the father of four sons and seven daughters, and three of his children are now living, John, of Colfax, Wash.; Hannah, wife of Mr. Woodle; and Emsley, of Penawawa, Washington.

Mr. Woodle and his noble wife have lived together fifty-six years, and she has faithfully and bravely done her part in the great work of life. A large family has grown to manhood and womanhood under her motherly care, and now they rise up and call her blessed. She has been a member of the Christian church since childhood.

CAPT. ORRIN E. MINOR, a popular and successful druggist at Belmont, has been intimately identified with the business and commercial interests of Lafayette county for many years, and has largely contributed, by his public spirit and enterprising character to the general prosperity of this region. Integrity and industry are essential to success, and he possesses these to a marked degree.

Mr. Minor was born at Michigan City, Ind., April 27, 1842, and is a son of Orrin and Louisa M. (Geer) Minor, born in 1810 and 1818, respectively. They were reared and married in New York, and very soon afterward came West to Michigan City, Ind., where they lived until 1844. That year the worthy couple made their appearance in Mineral Point, Wis., where Mr. Minor at once engaged in business as a grocer. Five years later he fell a victim to cholera, which was then epidemic in the Northwest. His widow is still living, and makes her home in Chicago, with her granddaughter, Mrs. Hattie L. Post, the widow of Loring Post, once an eminent lawyer of that city. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Minor, two sons and one daughter. The daughter, Celeste, married D. N. Gates, who lived in Mineral Point, Wis., where he acquired a handsome property; he is now dead, and his widow has her home in Denver, Colo., with her two sons, Minor and Maurice. Her only daughter is Mrs. Post, of Chicago. Maurice J. Minor, the only brother of Orrin E., was born in Mineral Point, married Miss Kate Sterling, and has a family of six children. He is one of the leading business men of his native town.

Orrin E. Minor acquired his education very largely in the public school of Mineral Point, where his childhood and youth were spent, and where he became a clerk in a store while still a boy. He held this position for five years, and then secured a position with the American Express Company, on the Mineral Point railroad, and was in the employment of the express company when the Civil war broke out. He soon enlisted, and became a gallant soldier of the Union. In 1862 he was mustered in as regimental commissary of the 30th Wis. V. I., a regiment recruited from Mineral Point and the northern part of the State, and remained in the army until the close of the war. He was on duty with his regiment wherever it was sent, and participated in some of the bloodiest scenes of that great strife. In 1864 he was sent with his regiment to join General Sully, and take part in the campaign against the Indians on the northwestern frontier, and in this expedition he acted as commissary sergeant, and helped to build Fort Wadsworth, on the Missouri river. They went to the Black Hills to protect settlers against marauding Indians, and when the West seemed quiet they went to Louisville, Ky., where they were mustered out in 1865. Mr. Minor has a record as a soldier that is an enviable one, and when he was no longer a soldier he hastened to resume the occupations of peaceful life with an ardor that was shared by thousands of his comrades. That great army of veteran soldiers, trained and disciplined to a degree unsurpassed anywhere in the world, broke up, and disappeared in the great industrial world, with a passion for civil life that astounded old-world critics. Like Mr. Minor, however, they had gone to fight for the Union, and when that was secure they could not get home to friends and neighbors and business cares any too soon.

Mr. Minor came back to Mineral Point, Wis., and engaged in the lumber business as a member of the firm of Geo. W. Cobb & Co., acting as general manager. Mr. Cobb was superintendent of the Mineral Point railroad, and a man of extensive personal associations, which brought a large patronage to the new firm. In 1869 Mr. Minor and Miss Nina D. Garden, of Mineral Point, were united in marriage. Mrs. Minor is the daughter of William and Eliza J. Garden, one of the old Mineral Point families. Her father was born in Philadelphia, Penn., in 1826, and her mother in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Garden lived for some years in Pittsburg, where he was a civil engineer, attached to the Pennsylvania railroad, with Thomas Scott as superintendent. In 1865 Mr. Garden came to Mineral Point and surveyed the Milwaukee railroad from Calamine to Platteville. In 1868 he located a survey for the new corporation of Belmont, and engaged in general business in the new and growing town for many years. In 1898 he went out of all business associations, and is now leading a retired life. Mrs. Minor was born in Blairsville, Penn., in 1850, and obtained her education very largely in a female seminary in Pittsburg.

Mr. Minor spent one year at Mineral Point after his marriage, and then moved to Belmont, and in 1870 started a general store. He studied pharmacy after his arrival in Belmont, and very soon after his establishment as a general merchant he added a stock of drugs to his other lines, and has carried on the drug store with his other interests very successfully. Mr. Minor manufactures and ships to all parts of the country a liniment which is known as "That" Liniment, one of the most popular proprietary medicines of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Minor have a family of four children: (1) William E. was born in Belmont in 1871, was a student in the military academy at Delafield, Wis., for seven years, and graduated from that school with honor. For a time he was editor and publisher of a paper at Clinton, Ill., and is now baggagemaster on the Illinois Central, and is a young man of more than ordinary ability. (2) Charles S. was born in 1884, and is now a student in the Belmont high school; he is interested in the photographic business in this town, and seems to have a certain future before him already indicated. (3) Amy S., who was born in June, 1887, is a student in the local high school. (4) Loring J., born March 15, 1889, is a student in the Belmont grammar school. Mr.

Minor is a Republican, and has filled various local offices, but has never been an aspirant for political honors. Mr. Minor and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church, and he belongs to George A. Legate Post, G. A. R., at Mineral Point, and is one of the leading Masons of his town. He is one of the charter members of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias, is also a charter member of the Modern Woodmen, and belongs to the Royal Neighbors. He is counted one of the best citizens of the town, and is known all over the county as a man of wide business experience and upright character.

JEFFERSON J. NEWMAN, prominent among the prosperous and honorable farmers of Green county, is a son of William and Elizabeth (Kendall) Newman, of Springhill, Fayette Co., Penn., and comes of English ancestry.

William Newman was born March 20, 1798, and died in 1864. Elizabeth Kendall became his wife in 1821. To this union were born the following children: (1) Hannah married John Batty, and died in 1873. (2) Samuel died in 1876. He married Mary Roderick. (3) Jefferson Jackson is the subject of this writing. (4) Ephraim K. died while serving in the Civil war, at Nicholasville, Ky., where he was serving as second lieutenant of Company K, 22d Wis. V. I. (5) Elizabeth married Jacob Roderick. (6) Nancy resides in the town of Decatur. (7) William S. is a prominent farmer of the town of Jefferson. William Newman, the father of these children, lost his first wife in 1846, and in 1847 married, for his second wife, Vastia De Bolt. That year he came to the Territory of Wisconsin with his family, and here he died in the fulness of years.

Jefferson J. Newman was born Nov. 2, 1827, and was about twenty years of age when the family removed to Wisconsin from his native State, Pennsylvania. Coming with them, he has made his home here to the present time. On Jan. 27, 1853, Mr. Newman married Miss Lydia Shadwick, of Green county, Wis., daughter of J. Hugh and Polly (Scudder) Shadwick. Mr. and Mrs. Newman have had children as follows: (1) James, born Jan. 25, 1854, is now in Cheyenne, Wyo. (2) Mary, born Oct. 28, 1855, is the wife of Charles Edwards, of Albany township, Green county. (3) Gilbert, born Sept. 14, 1857, is a farmer of the town of Jefferson. (4) Ira, born May 9, 1860, is a farmer of Shenandoah, Iowa. (5) William, born Aug. 21, 1862, is a farmer in Spring Grove, Green county. (6) John, born Sept. 10, 1864, died in childhood. (7) Elizabeth, born March 7, 1867, is the wife of Henry Schnader, of Spring Grove. (8) Frank, born Sept. 3, 1869, is a farmer in the town of Spring Grove. (9) J. Parker, born March 28, 1872, resides on the old home farm in the town of Spring Grove. (10) Thornton LeRoy, born Jan. 25, 1876, and (11) Ross, born June 13, 1878, died in childhood.

J. J. Cheverman

Lydia S. Newman

Mr. Newman was reared on the farm, and received his education in the common schools. Starting out in moderate circumstances, he began farming, and by hard work, good judgment and a fortunate combination of circumstances, he has come to own 900 acres of choice farm land in Green county, and a number of houses and lots in Juda. He is considered one of the leading farmers of the county. He is a staunch Democrat, and a faithful member of the Baptist Church. His reputation is of the highest character, both as a man and as a citizen.

CHARLES W. KEMMERER. Few if any better examples of agricultural success in Rock county could be found than that presented by the life of the subject of this sketch, who has scarcely more than passed the half century mark. He is a native of Rock county, began life for himself by renting land, and now owns 480 well-tilled acres in La Prairie and Turtle townships, Rock county. His father was a pioneer of Rock county, and one of its successful farmers.

Our subject was born in Rock township, Rock county, Nov. 12, 1850, son of S. H. and Elizabeth (Gish) Kemmerer, natives of Pennsylvania. Both grandfathers of Mr. Kemmerer died in Pennsylvania. The paternal grandfather, Conrad Kemmerer, lived to the age of ninety, and had a family of thirteen children. He was born in Pennsylvania, of German extraction, and was a lifelong farmer. The maternal grandfather was a sailor early in life, and after his marriage became a miller. He lived to the age of about sixty years, and had six children.

It was in 1848 that S. H. Kemmerer, the father, migrated from Pennsylvania to Wisconsin. He was a farmer, and settled on a small tract of forty acres which he purchased in La Prairie township. To this little homestead he afterward added 212 acres of adjoining property in La Prairie and Turtle townships. This he improved, and upon his land in Section 32, La Prairie township, he reared his family. In 1885 he sold his farm and removed to Janesville, where he lived retired until his death, March 6, 1901, at his home in that city. He was a member of the Methodist Church, to which his widow also belongs. Six children have been born to them, four sons and two daughters: Abram, of Spink county, S. Dak.; Charles W., our subject; Miss Blandena, of Janesville; John F., of Clinton, Rock county; Louis, of Janesville; and Ida, wife of W. Van Valen, of Atlanta, Georgia.

Charles W. Kemmerer was reared on the farm, and has passed all his life in Rock county. He attended the district schools, adopted farming as his vocation, and by his industry, thrift and good business judgment has had a most successful career. He began for himself by renting land, and the second year after he became of age purchased forty acres. This he sold later, and bought other land. Mr. Kemmerer has dealt quite successfully in farming lands, and now owns 480 acres, including the place of 240 acres in Section 32, La Prairie township, where he resided until recently; a tract of eighty acres in the same township, and 160 acres in Turtle township. In the spring of 1901 he retired from farming, and moved to Janesville to reside.

Mr. Kemmerer married, Sept. 5, 1877, Miss Jennie E. Loucks, daughter of Adam H. and Magdalene Ann (Van Wie) Loucks, natives of New York State. Mr. Loucks in 1854 came West, and located at Shopiere, in Turtle township, Rock county. Two of the great-grandfathers of Mrs. Kemmerer, both of Holland-Dutch ancestry, were Revolutionary soldiers—Henry Loucks and Andrew Van Wie; the latter married the sister of Gen. Philip Schuyler, of the Revolutionary war, and a resident of Albany, N. Y. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Kemmerer, Adam Loucks, was a shoe merchant in New York State, and died comparatively early in life. Her maternal grandfather, Philip Schuyler Van Wie, a farmer of New York State, migrated to Rock county, Wis., in 1857. He died the year following, aged fifty-seven years. Adam H. Loucks, the father of Mrs. Kemmerer, was a shoemaker in his earlier years, and later a farmer. After his migration to Wisconsin, in 1854, he was a resident of Turtle township for many years, becoming a prominent citizen. He served as a member of the school board and as supervisor for a number of years. In 1885 he removed to Janesville, for two years conducted a shoe business, and then retired from the active duties of life. In 1896 he moved with his wife to California, and engaged at Burbank in fruit growing. He died in December, 1897, aged sixty-nine years. Seven children were born to Adam H. and Magdalene Ann Loucks: Mary Catherine; Charles N.; Annette, wife of George C. Hield, of Chicago; Jennie E., wife of our subject; Clark N., of Chicago; George C., of Chicago; and Olive Belle, wife of George B. Mier, of Daggett, California.

To Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer have been born five children, three sons and two daughters: Herbert C., who died, aged four years; Lee C., who died at the age of two years; Eugene M., who died, aged six years; Ina Belle; and Olive May. Mr. and Mrs. Kemmerer are prominent members of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Kemmerer is a member of the board of stewards. He is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, and himself and wife are members of the Royal Neighbors. Politically Mr. Kemmerer is a Republican. He is now serving as school clerk, and has held various local offices. He is highly respected and esteemed by his wide circle of friends and acquaintances for his sterling traits of character, for the admirable business results of his career, and for his interest and devotion to the many affairs of local welfare, which for their success depend upon the encouragement and support of prominent and influential citizens.

JOHN W. INGERSOLL. Among the fine stock farms of Lafayette county, Wis., that owned by John W. Ingersoll, in Elk Grove township, would attract the admirer of fertile, well cultivated fields, productive herds, and stock of the best breeds. Mr. Ingersoll owns a large estate, and is considered one of the best farmers and stockraisers of his locality. He was born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., in August, 1845, and was a son of Risley and Mary (Metz) Ingersoll, the former of whom was a native of New Jersey, the latter of Missouri, she being the daughter of Elias and Lydia (Patterson) Metz, of Kentucky. John Ingersoll, the grandfather of our subject, moved from New Jersey to Missouri, and was a local preacher in the M. E. Church for a number of years, and later became a preacher at Mt. Carmel, Ill., preaching on the same circuit with that celebrated apostle of Methodism, Peter Cartwright.

Risley Ingersoll removed to Apple River, Ill., where he lived a few years before removing to Jo Daviess county, one year later migrating to Wayne township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he purchased 160 acres, and died at that place in 1849, leaving his wife with three children, our subject being four years old. The other two children were: Flora, born in Calhoun county, Ill., married Albert Richardson, now of Spokane, Wash., and has a family of nine children, Claribel, Minerva, Flora, Charles, Marvin, Carrie, Adelia, and Roy and Rex, twins; and Lydia, the youngest of the family of three, born in Lafayette county, received an excellent education and was one of the early teachers in Lafayette county, later marrying Charles Neff, now of Monticello, and has two children, Clara and Albert. Mrs. Ingersoll married, for her second husband, Joseph Yaw, and remained in Lafayette county, where she died in 1871, leaving by her second marriage one son, Joseph Yaw, who resides in the State of Iowa.

John W. Ingersoll, being so early deprived of a father's care, was brought up under maternal supervision, and of his good mother learned lessons of industry and honesty which he has never forgotten. His education was acquired in the district schools of Lafayette county and one year in the old Platteville Academy. His place seemed to be on the old family homestead, in Wayne, and there he remained, taking an active part in agricultural activities until he enlisted for service in the Civil war, entering Company E, 43d Wis. V. I., and was under Gen. Thomas, in the Army of the Cumberland. Mr. Ingersoll saw some hard fighting during the progress of the war, being at the second battle of Nashville, and then being sent to perform provost duty, guarding railroads and other property, returning home without injury. He settled down to farm work, and in 1895 purchased his present home in Elk Grove. In February, 1871, he was married to Miss Sarah Teasdale, who was born in Cumberland, England, Dec. 24, 1848, a daughter of Thomas and Annie Teasdale, who came from England to Grant county in 1850, locating at Vinegar Hill, where Mr. Teasdale followed mining some four years and then purchased a farm in Elk Grove, now Seymour township, where he remained the balance of his life, dying in 1870, his wife in 1869, and they left a family of twelve children, nine of whom are still living. Mrs. Ingersoll received a district school education in Lafayette county.

After his marriage Mr. Ingersoll settled on the old home farm, which he purchased from his mother, and remained there until 1895, when he purchased the Justine Reicher farm of 300 acres of finely cultivated land. Six children have been born to him and his wife: (1) Mary A., born in Wayne township in 1872, was well educated in the schools of Warren, was a highly accomplished musician, becoming a successful teacher of music, and is now the wife of E. A. Chapman, of the village of South Wayne, Lafayette county, where they are rearing their three children, Wesley A., S. Harold, and Alita B. (2) John, born in 1874, received a common school education, attended Warren high school and Warren Academy several winter terms, and now resides on a part of his father's farm, which he purchased, and where he has erected a fine new home since his marriage, in 1898. He married Kate Miller, of Elk Grove, Lafayette county, and has one daughter. (3) Hannah F., born in 1875, was a student at the Warren Academy for two years, and was also a student in the Platteville Normal School, and has taught for twelve terms in Lafayette county. (4) Lydia J., born in 1877, was educated in the Warren Academy, and married Charles Dawson, of Gratiot, Lafayette county. They reside on a farm, and have two sons, James Lyman and Orval I. (5) Bay, born in 1880, graduated from the schools of Elk Grove, and later became a student at the Platteville Normal, since then being a teacher in the county. (6) Roxy, born in 1887.

Religiously Mr. Ingersoll and wife are members of the M. E. Church, and as a token of the esteem in which our subject is held in his church connection, he has been made a member of the Quarterly Conference, is a steward, and a member of the church board, and has long taken an active interest in the Sunday school work, for many years being superintendent. In public and political life Mr. Ingersoll has done his duty, being ever ready to assist worthy objects of civic importance, and as a Republican has always done a voter's duty. As a member of the town board he has given efficient service, and is socially connected with Warren Post of Lafayette county, and with the United Workmen, of Warren.

GEORGE H. HORTON, of the town of Fennimore, Grant county, an old settler of the county, is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion. He came to Grant county in the early part of 1857, and has been identified with all its subsequent history.

Mr. Horton was born Feb. 16, 1835, at Grafton, N. H., to which State his father, Elisha P. Horton, removed from Connecticut after his marriage there to Avis Wheaton, a native of the latter State. Elisha P. Horton was a farmer by occupation. He died in New Hampshire when our subject was a mere child, and left his widow with ten children. Mrs. Horton also died in New Hampshire about twenty-five years after her husband. George H. Horton was reared in New Hampshire, worked at various occupations when a young man, and in 1857, at the age of twenty-two, came to Wisconsin. He was at Prairie du Chien for a time, and then came to Fennimore, where he was employed on the farm of John Switzer, a well-known citizen of the community, working for him a year. He then engaged in breaking land by the acre, his first contract being for one hundred acres for Michael Bower—the place now owned by William Rogers. He bought and sold several pieces of land, continued breaking land, and gradually accumulated considerable money. In 1861 he and Miss Mary Switzer were married. Mrs. Horton was born in the town of Fennimore Sept. 17, 1844.

Mr. Horton became a member of Company K, of the famous 47th Wis. V. I., the company being under the command of Charles Baxter, and the greater part of our subject's military service was rendered in Tennessee. The principal duty of the command was to keep watch of wandering bands of guerrillas that infested that part of Tennessee. Mr. Horton was taken sick on his way to the front, at Louisville, and was detained at the hospital at that city. He was anxious to be with his command, and rejoined the regiment at Nashville, only to be rendered worse by the exposure, and at Tullahoma, Tenn., he had to succumb, being taken to the hospital, where he was still under treatment when the war was ended. He was honorably discharged at Nashville, Tenn., in 1865. Mr. Horton never fully recovered from the effects of his army life, although a quiet farm life has greatly modified his troubles.

Soon after his return from the army Mr. Horton was appointed administrator for the estate of his father-in-law, who died Jan. 11, 1863. He made his home for some time on the Switzer homestead farm, in the meantime investing his own money in a fine farm of 280 acres near the village of Fennimore. He also owned a quarter section elsewhere, and has devoted his life to farming and stock raising.

Mr. and Mrs. Horton have had four children: George G., who married Mary Duncan, now resides in Patch Grove, Grant county, engaged in farming; they have three children, Clarence, Lossen, and Hazel. Charles G. married Maggie Smith, and they have three children, Hattie, Gracie and Mabel; he is a farmer in Fennimore township. Frank is engaged at present in railroading. Clyde S. graduated from the Platteville Normal, in the class of 1900. Mr. Horton is a well-known and highly respected citizen of the county. He is a Republican, and he and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church. Socially he belongs to Sam Monteith Post, No. 173, G. A. R.

JAMES S. ALEXANDER occupies a conspicuous place among the honorable and useful citizens of the town of Spring Grove. Green county, where his honest character and industrious habits command general respect. He is a son of Hugh and Elizabeth (Stewart) Alexander, who came to Green county in 1857, and settled on the place now owned and occupied by their son, James S. Hugh Alexander was born July 3, 1813, and died Nov. 5, 1896, and within these limits led an earnest and useful career. Elizabeth Stewart, his wife, was born Dec. 20, 1820, and died May 3, 1887. They were married Nov. 5, 1840, and became the parents of nine children: Marion, born July 18, 1841, is the wife of William Bussey, of Durham, Ill.; Josephine, born July 23, 1843, died in 1850; James Stewart, born Nov. 12, 1845; Calvin B., born Feb. 8, 1848, resides in Spring Grove; Annie, who died in childhood; Robert F., born Aug. 12, 1851, married Olive Taylor; John, born Feb. 9, 1854, lives in Oakley; Reed, born Sept. 17, 1856, lives in Virginia; and Alfred, born May 22, 1866, lives at Oakley.

James S. Alexander was married to Miss Orilla J. Clark, of Ohio, Nov. 24, 1866. She was the daughter of James and Mary Ann (Stowe) Clark, of Sandusky, Ohio, and her marriage has been blessed with the following children: Mary, born June 2, 1875, married Frank Montville, of Spring Grove; Maud, born in 1879, married Ray Ties, of Spring Grove; Jay Treat, who is the youngest of the family.

Mr. Alexander was reared on the family homestead, and received his education in the common schools. He has made farming his life work, and brings to the cultivation of his fine farm of 155 acres a natural enthusiasm for his work, and a profound conviction that it is the noblest occupation for a strong and honest man at the present time. This farm has been materially improved since it came to his hands, and it is regarded as one of the more desirable farms of the county. In 1863 Mr. Alexander enlisted in Company B, 18th Wis. V. I. He was with his regiment when it was attached to the Army of the Tennessee, and accompanied General Sherman to the sea. Honorably discharged in 1865, he counts his army experiences among the most sacred of his life. Mr. Alexander is among the most respected citizens of Spring Grove. Never uniting with any church, he holds honesty and square dealing as the fundamental characteristics of all true living.

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON, a stock and grain farmer of the town of Platteville. Grant county, has all his life been associated with the agricultural interests of the southwestern part of the State, and is a man whose years and character alike command respect.

Mr. Robinson was born March 30, 1847, on the farm on which he is now living, son of William and Mary S. (McBride) Robinson, and grandson of Mark Robinson, who came to America, and is buried in Grant county. The maternal grandparents were John (Sr.) and Rosa McBride, natives of Ireland, where they were married in 1818; she was born in 1798, and died at Elk Grove, Wis., Aug. 26, 1883. Our subject's father was born in Yorkshire, England, Sept. 22, 1811, and the mother was born in New York in 1824. In 1837 William Robinson came to Grant county, Wis., where he rented a farm for a few years, and, when warranted by his financial condition, he bought the present homestead. It consisted at that time of about two hundred acres, to which he added 150 acres by subsequent purchases. In 1851 he erected a brick house, and put up fine barns and other buildings, his property being now one of the finest and most attractive farms in Grant county. In 1866 he moved to Platteville, and lived retired, having accumulated a very handsome competence, and he was regarded as a man of means in the community. In 1840 he married Miss Mary S. McBride, who died in May, 1867, and he survived until June, 1886. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom seven are living. In 1868 Mr. Robinson married Nancy Blalock, of Platteville, who is still living; she is the mother of four children, three now living. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were members of the Episcopal Church, and were regarded as among the best people of the community. A brief mention of the children is herewith given:

(1) Sarah A., born in May, 1841, married Peter J. Walker, and lives at Algona, Iowa. (2) Eliza J., born in March, 1843, is the wife of John Huntington, of Luverne, Minn. (3) Mary E., born in May, 1845, was the wife of A. W. Bell, now deceased, a prominent lawyer of Milwaukee; they were living at Platteville at the time of her death, Oct. 3, 1886. They were the parents of three children, Jennie B., Ora (wife of Jesse S. Jones, Jr., of Platteville), and Robert C. (4) William J. is the subject of this article. (5) Rosanna died in 1869, when a young woman. (6) James, born in July, 1851, died in childhood. (7) Richard H., born in July, 1854, married Etta Robinson, and they live at Richland Center, Wis. (8) Robert S., born Oct. 18, 1856, died in childhood. (9) Helena L., born in February, 1861, is the wife of James Jones, and has four children, Clyde, Willie, Ina E. and Raymond. They live at Atchison, Kans. (10) Emma E., born in October, 1864, is the wife of Fred Pausch, of Atchison, an engineer on the railroad, and has one son, Frederick. (11) Margaret L., born Feb. 12, 1867, lost her mother soon after she was born, and was reared in the home of her sister, Mrs. Eliza J. Huntington; she is now the wife of William Wright, a merchant of Luverne, Minn., and has one son, Stewart. Of the children born to the second marriage, Benjamin S., the eldest, was born in January, 1870, and died when a young man; he was a student of the Platteville Normal, and had a bright future before him. Nora A., born in April, 1876, is a graduate of the Normal. Ida R., born in May, 1878, is a student at the same school, as is also Lillie A., born in October, 1882.

William J. Robinson obtained his education in the Platteville public school, and when he became a young man rented his father's farm, which he cultivated for nineteen years. After the death of his father he purchased the interest of the other heirs in the family homestead, and now owns a handsome and well-appointed farm of 350 acres. On March 29, 1877, Mr. Robinson married Mrs. Elizabeth (Atkinson) Johnson, daughter of Archibald and Phyllis (Adams) Atkinson, and widow of William E. Johnson. Her parents were born in England, in 1807 and 1808, respectively, came to America in 1834, locating in Dubuque, Iowa, then removed to Illinois, and in 1843 came to Wisconsin, settling at Hazel Green. Archibald Atkinson died April 12, 1880, at Hazel Green, and Phyllis Atkinson on Nov. 3, 1895, at Minneapolis. They reared a family of eight children: (1) John, born in England April 29, 1832, married Miss Annie Roberts April 29, 1869, at Hazel Green; they are now living at Hampton, Iowa, and are the parents of five children. (2) Mary, born in New York July 7, 1834, is the wife of Rev. John Hooper, of Minneapolis. (3) Joseph, born in Iowa Feb. 18, 1837, is now a resident of Hampton, that State. He married Miss Annie Lukey, of Hazel Green, and they have five children. (4) Isabel, born Nov. 1, 1839, near Chicago, married E. M. Sandford, of East Dubuque, and has three children. (5) Catherine, born near Chicago Nov. 20, 1842, married Robert Gale, of Colorado Springs, Colo., where he is a contractor and builder. They have three sons. (6) Archie, born at Hazel Green Feb. 20, 1844, married Miss Hester Lory, of Platteville, and has five children. They now have their home in Minneapolis. (7) Elizabeth, wife of our subject, was born at Hazel Green May 6, 1846, and was educated in the Platteville Academy. (8) Phyllis A., born on the old homestead at Hazel Green Dec. 12, 1848, is the wife of Edward Beard, of Britt, Iowa, and has seven children.

William Atkinson, Mrs. Robinson's paternal grandfather, was a native of England, where he died. His wife's name was Catherine. Their children were: Elizabeth, born May 27, 1792; Ralph, April 13, 1794; William, June 24, 1796; Mary, Dec. 9, 1798; Eleanor, May 26, 1801; John, Dec. 8, 1804; Archibald, Feb. 8, 1807; Thomas, March 8, 1809; Henry, June 1, 1812.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Robinson came to the old homestead, where they have lived to the present time. This is one of the most desirable properties of Grant county. They have two children, a son and a daughter: Ernest E., born Dec. 19, 1877, resides with his parents; he has had a good education, and is a young man of character and enterprise. M. Estella, born Nov. 29, 1879, was educated at the Platteville Normal School, graduated with the class of 1900, and is now teaching at Fennimore. By her first marriage Mrs. Robinson had one son, William E., who died Oct. 25, 1898, while serving in the Spanish-American war. Mr. Robinson is a Republican, and has been supervisor for twelve years. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

MILES DIXON COTTINGHAM, a retired farmer of Benton, Lafayette county, and one of the well-to-do citizens of that village, was born in Swale Dale, Yorkshire, England, Dec. 5, 1836, son of Anthony and Jane (Hunt) Cottingham, the former of whom passed away in 1838, the father of eight children, four of whom died young. In 1854 the widowed mother and her four children came to America, and located in Benton, Lafayette county, where her death occurred four years later. The children were: Timothy, mentioned elsewhere in this work; Anthony married Miss Maggie Harker, who died, leaving him with three daughters, Mary J., Margaret E. and Emma A., all of whom reside with their father in Cherokee county, Iowa; John married Maggie Metcalf, and has three sons,—John, Miles D. and Timothy—and they make their home in Fennimore, Grant Co., Wis.; and Miles Dixon, the youngest in the family.

Miles Dixon Cottingham received a fair education in the private schools in England, and, after coming to this country, found employment as a miner, which vocation he followed until 1866, when he purchased a farm in New Diggings township. He had always had a desire to own a farm and engage in agricultural pursuits, and during his career as a miner practiced rigid economy that he might at some time in his life gratify that desire. He commenced on wild land, which he has carefully improved by systematic cultivation and the erection of good buildings. His success has been entirely due to his own efforts, as he began life a very poor man. He has ever displayed remarkable judgment in business affairs, and he now ranks as one of the substantial farmers of the county and, with it all, has ever been progressive and public-spirited in his efforts to improve the condition of the community in which he lives, by the building of churches and schools. In 1894 he retired from business, and purchased his present comfortable home in Benton.

In 1858 Mr. Cottingham was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Alton, daughter of William and Esther Alton, natives of England, who came to this country in 1860. Mrs. Ellen (Alton) Cottingham was born in England in 1838, and came to America in 1853, making her home with her sister, Mrs. William Calvert, until her marriage. A large family of children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Cottingham, all of whom were brought up by their estimable parents to be worthy members of society. They are as follows: Esther J., born in June, 1859, died in 1875, at the age of sixteen; William, born in February, 1861, now engaged in farming and mining in Benton, married Hulda Looney, daughter of James and Jane Looney, prominent citizens of Benton, and eight children have been born of this union, Charles L., Viri, Orville (deceased), Glenard, Benjamin, Archie L., Letha M. and Gabriella; Mary E., born in February, 1863, married James Ayer, a farmer of New Diggings township, this county, and has two children, Eleanor and George; Henrietta, born in 1865, died in January, 1887; Timothy, born in January, 1867, died the same year; Timothy (2), born on March 4, 1868, is now a traveling salesman for Rider Wallis & Co., a dry goods house of Dubuque, Iowa; Margaret L., born May 4, 1869, married Sherman Dodge, of Benton, and has three children, Henrietta, Catherine and Ellen; John R., born in December, 1870, now a clerk in Buchan & Allen's store in Benton, married Miss Minnie Stephens; Sarah E., born in February, 1872, died in childhood; Joseph A., born in June, 1873, died in November, 1874; Joseph (2), born in May, 1877, is a traveling salesman for a boot and shoe firm of Dubuque, Iowa; Sarah (2), born in March, 1879, died in 1880; and Miles D., born Jan. 25, 1882, is a bright student in the Benton high school. For forty years Mr. Cottingham and his wife have been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has held the offices of trustee and steward for many years. Politically he has been a voter of the Republican party since its organization, but has never aspired to office. Socially he is identified with the I. O. O. F., being a charter member of Lead Mine Lodge, No. 168.

E. FRANK NEWTON, superintendent of Lafin & Rand's Powder Mills, at Platteville, Wis., was born in Dubuque, Iowa, June 11, 1840, son of Edward and Mary Newton, both of whom were born in England, and, in the early days, came westward to Dubuque, where the former died in 1842 and the latter in 1876.

The death of the father while his son Frank was yet in infancy made it necessary that as soon as the latter was large enough to do anything, he should work to assist in the support of his mother. He returned to Maryland, and there clerked in a Baltimore hardware store until he was twenty-one years of age. In 1862 he returned to the West, and entered the employ of the Powder Manufacturing Company, in the capacity of clerk, and later as traveling salesman, remaining nine years. In 1869 he was appointed to his present fine position, which he has efficiently filled for over a quarter of a century. His ability to look after his employer's interests, as well as his thorough knowledge of the business, made his services invaluable.

In 1863 Mr. Newton was united in marriage with Miss Susan Shaffer, daughter of William Shaffer, of Illinois, who later located in Platteville, where he died. Mrs. Newton was an invalid for many years, and died in September, 1882. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Newton was born one son, Charles A., who is now sales agent for the Lafin & Rand Powder Co. Charles A. Newton married Miss Alice A. Vehmeyer, of Chicago, in which city they make their home.

Mr. E. Frank Newton is a thirty-second-degree Mason, and a member of the Wisconsin Consistory, and of the Mystic Shrine. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and takes an active interest in party work, and he is the present mayor of his home city. In religion, while not identified with any denomination, he gives liberally to church work, and takes a deep interest in all religious work.

JOHN SWITZER, one of the earliest settlers of Grant county, Wis., was born in Virginia Feb. 20, 1803, and when he was but three years of age his parents removed to Ohio, and later to Indiana. In 1840 John Switzer came to Grant county, Wis., settling in Sec. 8, in the town of Fennimore, and two years later he was married to Mary A. C. Dillon, who was born in Missouri. Of this marriage the following children were born: Mary A., born Sept. 17, 1844 (Mrs. George H. Horton); I. W., born Dec. 5, 1846; Sarah E., born Aug. 11, 1849; Eliza, born July 30, 1853; Stella, born Oct. 8, 1858; and Ada, born April 7, 1861. Mr. Switzer became one of the well-known and successful farmers of Fennimore, and resided in that town until the day of his death, Jan. 11, 1863. Mrs. Switzer, at this writing, in 1901, resides with one of her daughters, in Fennimore, and is now one of the oldest residents of the town where she has lived such a useful, busy life.

THOMAS WISEMAN, a prominent and highly respected farmer of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, where he has made his home for half a century, was born in Yorkshire, England, Jan. 1, 1843.

Christopher Wiseman, his father, was born in 1813, and his wife, Elizabeth Slack, was born in 1816. They came to America in the year 1845, making the voyage in a sailing vessel to New Orleans, thence by boat up the Mississippi to Galena, Ill. Mr. Wiseman engaged in mining in New Diggings for many years, and then purchased a farm two miles west of the village, where he made many improvements in the way of buildings, and in clearing the land. Out of this he made a good farm in which he took great pride. His death occurred in 1887. His only brother, Henry, came from England to work in the mines at New Diggings, and there met his death. To Christopher Wiseman and wife were born twelve children, of whom three were born in New Diggings, and died in infancy: Thomas; Ann is the widow of Christopher Hagelet, and lives in Benton, Lafayette Co.; Mary, born in 1840, is the wife of William Page, of South Wayne; Elizabeth, born in 1847, is the wife of C. Turnbull, of Benton; Sarah, born in Lafayette county, married George Clark, of Clinton Co., Ill.; James, a farmer of Benton, married Lizzie Beadee; Christopher, engaged as a merchant and stock buyer in Benton, married Nellie Harker; Henry, a farmer residing with his brother Thomas, is unmarried; and Tamer married Mark Richardson, of New Diggings. The mother is still living, being now at the advanced age of eighty-five. She makes her home with her son Thomas, who tenderly cared for both father and mother until the death of the former, and now is lovingly guarding the latter from all care and responsibility.

Thomas Wiseman grew to manhood in New Diggings township, and, as he was the eldest in a large family of children, his opportunities for attending school were most meager, as at a very tender age he was obliged to assist in the support of the family by work in the mines. He studied and read by himself until he has become well posted on general topics, and has, in a large measure, overcome his lack of school training. He continued to work in the mines until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted in Company G, 46th Wis. V. I., under Capt. Hughes, of Darlington, and participated in the work under Gen. Thomas, in Alabama and Tennessee. He was discharged at Nashville, Tenn., and returned to his Wisconsin home. He purchased his father's farm, and since then has had the care of his parents.

Mr. Wiseman has ever been a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and has always taken an interest in party affairs. The family were communicants of the Church of England before coming to America, and have continued in that faith. Mr. Wiseman has been faithful in the discharge of his duty to his country and to his home, and is highly respected in the community in which he has lived so long.

MATTHEW PRESTON, a retired farmer, now residing in Platteville, Grant county, is one of the leading representatives of the sturdy pioneers who made the wilderness "blossom as the rose," and to whom so much is due as a recompense for their hardships and privations.

Matthew Preston was born in the North of England March 29, 1829, a son of William and Jane (Woodard) Preston, who were natives of England, and died there, leaving our subject an orphan at the age of four years. Growing to manhood in his native land, he in 1851 came to this country, settling first at Hazel Green, Wis., where he worked at teaming for two years. At that time he purchased a farm near what is now Preston Station, improved it, built substantial buildings, and there resided for twenty-four years. In 1884 he sold this property, removed to Platteville, and purchased his present pleasant residence, a brick structure, on Main street.

Prior to embarking for the New World Mr. Preston married Miss Elizabeth Little, a native of England, who died at Preston in 1865, leaving six children: Jane, born at Hazel Green, is now the wife of Ezra C. Hazeltine, a farmer near Preston; James, born at Preston, is now a business man of Duluth, Minn.; Thomas S., born at Preston, in 1857, died in 1893, leaving a wife and four children, who now reside in Grant county; John F., born in October, 1859, is now a resident of Minnesota; Margaret, born in September, 1861, is the wife of John McMurray, of South Dakota, and has a family; Matthew Moreland, born in Preston in 1863, is married and has three children, and resides on a farm near Rewey, in Iowa county, Wis. All are prosperous.

In 1868 Mr. Preston was married to Miss A. J. Hazeltine, of Yorkshire, England, who died in March, 1888, leaving seven children: Elizabeth, born in May, 1869, now wife of Edward Tiffany, of Iowa; Charles E., born at Preston in 1870, commercial salesman for a Chicago house (he is married and resides in Highwood, Ill.); Albert E., born at Preston in 1871, a salesman now residing in Platteville; Wesley, born in Preston in 1873, now a banker and commission merchant of Chicago; Tirza May, born at Preston in 1874, wife of Dr. Anner, of Potosi, Grant county (they have one child); Fred Chapman, born in Preston in 1876, graduate of a Chicago business college, now teaching at Wausau; and Eli E., born in 1878, a clerk in Burg's clothing house, Platteville.

In 1895 Mr. Preston married Miss Fanny E. Perry, daughter of Homer Perry, one of the pioneers of Grant county, where Mrs. Preston was born and reared. They have one daughter, Delia M., born March 31, 1900.

Matthew Preston

Both Mr. and Mrs. Preston are members of the M. E. Church. For many years Mr. Preston voted the Republican ticket, but his principles now require him to support the candidates of the Prohibition party, their platform meeting with his views more nearly than that of any other party. While residing in Preston Mr. Preston held a number of local offices most acceptably.

JOHN MYERS, a prosperous farmer of Green county, Wis., comes of German ancestry, and was among the earliest settlers of this county. Born March 22, 1839, he was the first white child born in the town of Spring Grove, and is the son of Samuel and Sarah (Kline) Myers. Henry Myers, his grandfather, came from Germany when a boy and settled in Pennsylvania about 1775.

Samuel Myers was born in Bucks Co., Penn., in 1806, and died in town of Spring Grove, Green Co., Wis., May 2, 1863. He was taken by his parents to Ohio when about a year and a half old. His marriage with Sarah Kline occurred about 1830. Isaac Kline, her father, was one of the early settlers of Ohio, and came of Dutch lineage. This marriage was blessed with a numerous family: Isaac and George, both dead; John; Jane, who is widow of Frank Barnum, and lives in the village of Twin Grove (a sketch of Mr. Barnum may be found elsewhere); Eli, who is a farmer of Fayette county, Iowa; William, deceased; James, a farmer in Iowa; Miles, a resident and a farmer of Jefferson township; Samuel, living in Twin Grove, where he is in the sawmill business; and Frank, a farmer of the town of Jefferson.

John Myers was born March 22, 1839, and was married to Miss Fannie H. Bussey, Spring Grove, March 19, 1863. Mrs. Myers was born of English ancestry. April 26, 1844, a daughter of G. W. Bussey, of Juda, Green county, who stood high among the early settlers of the county. She was reared on a farm, and educated in the common schools. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Myers the following children were born: Laura J., born Aug. 28, 1864, married Samuel Holmes, of the town of Jefferson, Nov. 2, 1887, and is the mother of two sons, Ransom and Grover; Elmer W., born April 17, 1867, married Miss Anna Wiggins, of Green county, Oct. 3, 1887, and is the father of two sons, Floyd D. and Alvin R.; John D., born May 1, 1871, is a farmer, and married Miss Ida Douglas, by whom he has two sons, Herbert and Glenn; Emily, born Aug. 17, 1872, married Frederick Adkinson, of Decatur, and is the mother of one daughter, Vera.

Mr. Myers was educated in the public schools, which were very poor at that time, and began life with no resources except his own strength and courage, but has been greatly blessed in the years that have come and gone since he began the battle of life. For eight years, when a young man, he taught school in his native county. The farm of 214 acres on which he lives is one of the fine country homes of the county, and he has a fine residence property in Brodhead, where he lived about four years, and where he is a stockholder in the Green County Bank. Mr. Myers is a staunch Republican, and cast his first vote for Lincoln in 1860, and while living in Spring Grove township he served as town clerk. Successful in all his undertakings, he attributes his success largely to hard work and good management. Never uniting with any church, he holds to honesty and right living as fundamental to any true character. In every relation of life he is highly spoken of by those who know him best.

HENRY ADAMS, late of Patch Grove. Grant county there lived a retired life in the enjoyment of a rest, which by reason of his industrious efforts of former years, he truly earned and richly deserved. Accomplishment and progress ever imply labor, energy and diligence, and it was those qualities that enabled Mr. Adams to rise from the ranks of the many and stand among the successful few. He was one of the highly respected citizens of Patch Grove, and his long residence in Grant county and the active part he had taken in its development, well entitled him to representation in its history.

A native of New York, Mr. Adams was born in Montgomery county, in 1820, a son of Samuel and Jemima (Judd) Adams, and was the first of the family to come West. Arriving in Grant county, Wis., in the fall of 1841, the following year he made a claim of government land in Patch Grove township, which became his homestead. To the arduous task of clearing and improving his farm he at once turned his attention, and in due time the tract became one of the best cultivated farms in the locality.

In 1845 Mr. Adams married Miss Hannah Ashly, since deceased, and of the nine children born of that union six are living at the present writing in 1901. Mr. Adams was again married, Aug. 6, 1865, his second wife being Mrs. Emma J. Hitchcock, a native of Illinois, born Aug. 15, 1840, and a daughter of Amos and Rebecca (Fonce) Barrows. Her first husband was Eli Hitchcock, by whom she had three children, but only one is now living. Six children have been born of the second marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Adams, all of whom are living, while Daisy and Henry are still under the parental roof.

Mr. Adams continued to reside upon the farm until March, 1900, when he removed to the village of Patch Grove to spend his remaining years in ease and quiet, free from the cares and responsibilities of business life. Notwithstanding he was well advanced in years, he enjoyed good health, though rheumatism made it difficult for him to go around much, until his death Jan. 1, 1901, from heart disease. For the long period of sixty years he was identified with the interests of Grant county, and in early days when engaged in the work of improving his farm he endured all the hardships and privations incident to frontier life. He watched with interest the marvelous transformation that had taken place during his residence here, and as a generous, liberal-minded and progressive citizen aided in the development of his town and county. Mr. Adams led a life of honest toil, and his death caused genuine sorrow among his friends.

WILLIAM BURROWS, whose residence on the farm he now occupies dates from March 1, 1854, is one of the highly esteemed pioneer settlers of Lafayette county. He was born in Albany county, N. Y., July 7, 1823, son of Alexander and Rose Burrows, of Scotch-Irish parentage.

Mr. Burrows' parents were both born and reared in Ireland, where their marriage was consummated. The young couple at once started for America, and made their first home in Albany county, N. Y., where two of their children were born. From Albany county they removed to Oneida county, N. Y., and there passed the rest of their lives, engaged in farming. Seven children were born to them: John, of Oneida county, N. Y., who married Adeline Ferguson, daughter of Jacob Ferguson, of Booneville, N. Y.; William; Andrew, of Lewis county, N. Y., who married Lavinia Stimpson; Margaret Jane, widow of John Anderson, of Monticello township, Lafayette county; Sarah, wife of Edward Wetherstine; Miss Mary, of Booneville, N. Y.; and Nancy, wife of Joseph Carmichael, of Booneville, N. Y. All are yet living, their ages now ranging from sixty to eighty years. William Burrows has in his possession a picture of the entire family, father and mother included, which was taken many, many years ago, and is now very highly prized. The father passed away at the age of ninety years, and the mother when she was aged eighty-five.

William Burrows was reared on his father's farm in Oneida county, and there married Mary Jane Carmichael, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Carmichael, owners of the farm adjoining the Burrows' home. Playmates in early childhood, schoolmates as boy and girl, lovers in youth, and wedded in early manhood and womanhood! Well may it be said that they have traveled life's pathway hand in hand!

Joseph and Elizabeth (McCulloch) Carmichael were born in Ireland, of Scotch-Irish parentage, and came to America in their youth, their marriage occurring in Albany county, N. Y. For a time Mr. Carmichael worked on the construction of the Erie canal, and after its completion served as lock tender. From Albany county he moved to Oneida county, when Mrs. Burrows was but two years of age, and settled on the farm adjoining that owned by Mr. Burrows. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael: Mary Jane, born Nov. 15, 1830, became Mrs. Burrows; Margaret is the wife of Robert Fillmore, of Warren, Ill.; Susan is the widow of Robert Glindining, of Shullsburg, Wis.; and Joseph occupies the old home in Oneida county. The father died in 1865, aged seventy years, and the mother passed away at the age of eighty-four.

Four daughters and one son have brightened the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burrows: William married Ida Haffele, daughter of Jacob Haffele, of Monticello; Jennie married Oscar Haffele, son of Jacob Haffele; Josephine is at home; Anna wedded George Haffele, and lives at Apple River, Ill.; Addie married Webb Glindining, of Shullsburg. Three daughters also came who have preceded them to the "great unknown." Susan, who died at the age of fourteen years; Elizabeth, whose earthly career ended when she was but one year old; and Rosetta, who died in early infancy.

In his political views Mr. Burrows has always been a Democrat, and in religious faith he has for thirty-four years been identified with the Presbyterian Church, while Mrs. Burrows has for forty-five years been a member of the Methodist denomination. Their pleasant home has been the scene of much happiness, and is open at all times to their many friends. They are very hospitable, and stranger and friend always find them bright and genial companions.

HON. FRANKLIN MITCHELL, prominent in the agricultural circles of Green county, Wis., is an old and honored resident, and is a son of Abner and Hannah (Leonard) Mitchell. The father was a native of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, and came to Wisconsin in 1857, and bought the land now owned by his son Franklin. It cost him two dollars an acre from the government, and is now worth at a modest computation at least eighty dollars an acre. He was born in 1790, and died in 1874. James and Elsie (Jennings) Mitchell, his parents, were residents of Pennsylvania, and were of English origin. Six children were born to them: Benjamin, James, Abner, John, Ralph, and Elsie. Abner Mitchell was a prominent man in his time, a member of the State Legislature, in 1853, and a member of the committee which founded the State Agricultural Society. He was long a deacon in the Baptist Church. In 1812 he was married, and became the father of the following children: Jesse, Benjamin, Owen, Cynthia, Julia, Joseph, all of whom are dead; Washington, of Brodhead; Franklin; Louisa, of Janesville, Wis.; Naomi, deceased; Ralph, of Juda; Alexander, deceased in infancy; Elizabeth, who died in childhood; Martha and Judson, both of whom are dead.

Franklin Mitchell was born Oct. 21, 1824, and married Miss Jane McVean, of Rock county, Wis., Oct. 6, 1857. Mrs. Mitchell was a daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Moore) McVean, who came from New York in 1842, and were among the very earliest settlers of this region. They were of Scotch origin and had all the virtues of that sturdy race. To Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell were born four children: (1) Edward P., born Sept. 12, 1858, resides in Monroe, Wis., where he is engaged in the lumber business. His wife, Meta Girford, was born in Green county. (2) Abner, born Nov. 28, 1860, married Miss Sylvia Raymond, of Green county, Wis. (3) Elizabeth, born Sept. 23, 1863, married E. W. Clinton, of Brodhead. (4) Katie L., born May 23, 1868, married James Lyman, at the present time clerk of Green county, and now residing at Monroe, Wisconsin.

Mr. Mitchell is a self-made man, whose advent in southwestern Wisconsin was made while it was still largely a wilderness, and he has made his way to a comfortable position chiefly by his own thrift and industry. A fine farm owned by him in Spring Grove township consists of 273 acres, and he owns another of 120 acres, in Decatur township. In addition to this he also owns considerable other property. Mr. Mitchell has served his country in various ways. In 1877, '78 and '79 he was a member of the Wisconsin Assembly, and he served on the Agricultural Committee at each of those sessions, being chairman of that committee in 1879. He secured some valuable legislation in the interests of the farmers of the State, and he also introduced and secured the passage of a bill increasing the fee of witnesses in Courts of Record from one dollar to one dollar and fifty cents per day, although the measure met with strong opposition in both houses of the Legislature. He has been school director, and has filled other local positions. Mr. Mitchell has always been a stanch Republican. For forty-five years he was a deacon and trustee of the Baptist Church of Juda. A great worker in the church, he is known as a solid and substantial citizen. In February, 1901, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell removed to Monroe, where he is erecting a fine modern residence and where he expects to finish his days on earth.

CONRAD K. ELMER, in his life time one of the most prominent and most extensive farmers of Monroe, Green county, was a native of Canton Glarus, Switzerland, born March 6, 1842, and was brought by his parents to America when a little child.

J. Ulrich Elmer, his father, was a native of Switzerland, where he was engaged as a trader and stock dealer. He brought his family to this country in 1850, and settled in Green county, Wis., where he followed farming until his death in 1893. He had married Ferina Marty, in his native land, and by her had a family of fourteen children, nine of whom are now living: John; Ulrich; Henry; Jacob; Adam; Barbara, wife of Abraham Kubli; Lenke, wife of Isaac Stauffacher; Mary, wife of Peter Stauffacher; and Ferina, wife of Peter Elmer. All but the last named make their homes in Green county, and she resides in Austin, Minn. Mrs. Ferina (Marty) Elmer was a daughter of a Mr. Marty, a native of Switzerland, who came to America and joined the early settlers of Green county, Wisconsin.

Conrad K. Elmer was early educated to the life of a farmer, and continued to follow it as an occupation throughout his entire life. His literary training was all acquired by an attendance at the district schools, although by careful observation and intelligent reading in later life, he became a well-informed man. When he first started out in life for himself, he rented land, and his first purchase consisted of 120 acres, which he afterward disposed of, and in company with two of his brothers, purchased 300 acres in Sylvester township. This partnership continued for two years, at the end of which time Mr. Elmer purchased the interests of his two brothers, and conducted this large farm alone for three years, and then sold it, purchasing in its stead 200 acres in the township of Monroe, where he made his home the remainder of his life. In all this time he continued to add to his original purchase, at one time being the owner of 520 acres of well improved real estate, but at his death his farm consisted of but 156 acres, the remainder having been sold off or divided with his children. He was honest, industrious and a highly esteemed citizen. He was loyal to his adopted country, and when, in 1861, the Civil war threatened the dissolution of the Union he became a member of the 31st Wis. V. I., becoming a private in Company B, and served three years. He took part in Sherman's famous march to the sea, and was at Washington, D. C. When the war was over, he returned to his farm, and busied himself again with the pursuits of peace.

On Nov. 23, 1866, Mr. Elmer was united in marriage with Miss Lisetta Wenger, a daughter of John Wenger, who came to America in 1854, with his ten motherless children, his wife having passed away in 1847.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: John A., mentioned below; Freny E., who married John Babler, and lives in New Glarus township; and Henry, who died at the age of two years. In their religious belief both Mr. and Mrs. Elmer were faithful and consistent members of the German Evangelical Church. In politics he was a Republican, and acceptably filled the office of supervisor for one term. Though in feeble health for two years previous, Mr. Elmer's last illness was in reality but a week in duration, and the end came peacefully Feb. 2, 1901, when he was aged 58 years, 10 months and 27 days. Besides his widow and two children, he left four sisters and five brothers to mourn his loss. His eldest brother, Mathias, preceded him to the better land by but a few days.

JOHN A. ELMER, who inherited the old homestead and 200 acres of fine land, is an industrious young farmer, a worthy successor of his highly respected father. He was married Feb. 11, 1897, to Miss Alice Discher, daughter of John and Louisa (Bruni) Discher, and they have two interesting children: Freddie Roy and John Conrad. John Discher was a native of Switzerland, as was also his wife, and his death occurred there in 1883, at the early age of forty years. His widow bravely sought to make a home for her little ones, and with four of the six children came to America in 1887, and her other two children, Louisa and Alice, followed two years later. The four accompanying their mother were: John, Fred, Rosa and David. Mrs. Discher married again, her second husband being Martin Hanselmann, who has since departed this life. They had three children, only one of whom survives, Andrew, now a resident of Clarno township, Green county.

AUGUST C. PRIOR, the well-known manager of the general store of Mrs. G. Prior, at Cassville, Grant county, is a native of Wisconsin, his birth having occurred March 5, 1850, in Racine.

Gottfried Prior, his father, was born in Prussia, Germany, and in early life came to America, locating first in Milwaukee. Subsequently he was married, in Racine, to Miss Margretha Theiss, a native of Bavaria, Germany, and a daughter of Theobold Theiss. She became a resident of Racine in the early forties. In 1856 the family came to Cassville, where Gottfried Prior engaged in the hotel business, continuing same until the spring of 1862. In 1861 he was proprietor of the "Denniston House." In the spring of 1862 he, with his son August C., went to Woodman, Wis., where he had a building erected during the summer, in the fall of the same year commencing the business of general merchandising, his wife and the other children moving there in the summer of 1863. Mr. Prior continued business in Woodman until the summer of 1866, when he removed back to Cassville, where he conducted his successful business until his death, in 1891. His widow continues the business, her son August C. acting as general manager. He is the eldest of four living children, the others being Mrs. Mary Holst, a resident of Cedar Bluffs, Neb.; Mrs. Christena Losch, of Elkader, Iowa; and Mrs. Gertie Peterson, of Pilger, Nebraska.

Coming to Cassville with his parents at the age of six years, August C. Prior was reared at that place, and attended the public schools until the spring of 1862, when he had just reached the age of twelve years. This was all the schooling he received, though through experience in business he has acquired a good education. Throughout his active career he has been interested in business pursuits. From 1871 to 1875 he was the junior member of the firm of G. Prior & Son, also from 1876 to 1879. In 1875 he traveled as a salesman for a Milwaukee dry-goods house. In 1879 he engaged in business in Glen Haven, which terminated in 1881. He now has full charge of the business established by his father in 1866, and in its management is meeting with excellent success.

August C. Prior was married, at Glen Haven, to Miss Martha Stewart, a native of Beetown, Grant county, and a daughter of David and Emeline (Hudson) Stewart, who came to this State at a very early day in its development. As a merchant the father engaged in business first at Beetown, and later at Glen Haven, where his death occurred; her mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Prior have two children: Mamie, a teacher in the public schools of Cassville; and Gertie, who is also a teacher, but now assists her father in the store. Mr. Prior is connected with Cassville Lodge, No. 335, F. & A. M. In business circles he occupies an enviable position.

FRANKLIN PATTERSON, whose fertile farm at every point shows the most thorough cultivation and careful management, has had his residence for many years on Section 28, in the town of Brooklyn, Green county, where he is numbered among the oldest and most respected farmers and citizens of the community.

Mr. Patterson was born in the town of Oak Hill, Allegany Co., N. Y., April 17, 1823, and is a son of James and Sarah (Crawford) Patterson. The father was a native of Massachusetts, and the mother of the town of Madison, Madison Co., N. Y. They had eight children, only two of whom are now living: Franklin, whose name appears above, and his sister, Nancy, who is Mrs. James Kearney, of St. Paul, Minn. James Patterson was a farmer and moved from his native State to New York, where he lived for a number of years. While there he served as captain in the State militia. From New York he journeyed west into Lorain county, Ohio, where he died in 1840, while still in middle life. His widow survived him until February, 1892, when she passed away in her ninetieth year, at the home of her son Franklin, with whom she had lived for many years. Both father and mother were reared in the Presbyterian faith, but in their later years were associated with the Congregational body.

James Patterson, the father of James Patterson, and the grandfather of Franklin, was born in Massachusetts, and was a descendant of one of three brothers, who came into New England from Belfast, Ireland, and were thought to be of Scotch-Irish descent. They followed close after the Mayflower, and their posterity has been prominent in New England for many generations. Mr. Patterson was always a farmer, and died when quite old in New York. He had been married three times. His first wife bore him four children; his second, one; and his third, two. The father of Sarah Crawford, noted above as the mother of Franklin Patterson, lived in New York many years, and then removed to Michigan, where he died when upwards of ninety years of age. He was a farmer, and was father to three sons and two daughters.

Franklin Patterson was about six years old when his parents made a new home for themselves and family in Ohio, and he remained in their home until he was of age. In 1844 he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, and for two years traveled extensively through the West and South. He went to New Orleans, but returned to Milwaukee, busying himself about various things. In 1846 he began farming in the town of Brooklyn, where he and his brother, James N., preempted a quarter-section from the government. A year later they took separate deeds for eighty acres each, paying the government price for it. Franklin Patterson deeded his eighty to his brother, James N., and then in company with his brother, Emerson, bought 200 acres of land at four dollars an acre. At the present time he owns 260 acres, and has lived here since 1846. His first home was a log cabin, but it was replaced in 1868 by a brick and frame building. Since his settlement in 1846, Mr. Patterson has moved but once, and that was from the old log house to the new home.

On Sept. 10, 1847, Franklin Patterson was married to Maria McCredy, a daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Holt) McCredy. Four children were born to that union, three of whom are now living: Sarah Ann died in infancy; Hiram H. married Emma Winter, and lives on the old farm in a house adjoining the homestead (he has one child, Nellie); William R., of Union township, Rock county, married Rosa Lay, and has two children, Dora E. and Elsie Maud; Lawrence A. married Elnora Weaver, and lives on the old home farm. Mrs. Franklin Patterson died Jan. 20, 1897, at the age of seventy-two years and twelve days. She is remembered as a true-hearted and devoted wife and mother, a good neighbor and a kind friend. Franklin Patterson is quite independent in politics, although during the life of the old Greenback party he was one of its most active workers. In religious belief, he is equally independent, and is identified with no denomination.

JAMES EDWARDS. a hardware merchant and postmaster of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born in that town Nov. 30, 1847, and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Ingram) Edwards, both natives of England, who came to this country when young people, and here were married. In 1837 they both reached the United States, and after their marriage they lived at Hazel Green, Wis., until 1851, when he crossed the Plains to New Mexico on his way to the gold fields of California.

In the spring of 1852 he was killed by the Mexicans on the latter part of his journey from New Mexico to California. Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards was left with a family of three children: (1) Thomas H., born in Lafayette county, Wis., in April, 1846, grew to manhood, and acquired his education in Hazel Green, where he learned the trade of wagon making, which has been his occupation there for many years. He married Miss Agnes Thompson, who was killed in the tornado which passed over this town in March, 1876. Mr. Edwards also lost a son in the same great calamity. Some time afterward he contracted a second marriage with Miss Annie Carter, and is now living in Madison, Wis., where he holds a clerkship in the office of the Secretary of State. They have one daughter, Annie E. (2) James, mentioned below. (3) Eliza J., born in March, 1850, is now the widow of Thomas Major, of Hazel Green. After their marriage they moved to Wyoming, where he died leaving her with eight children, and she now has her home in Baggs, Wyoming.

James Edwards, whose career forms the subject of this article, began life in the town of Hazel Green, where he received the benefits of a common school education, and when a young man learned the tinner's trade. In 1863 he started a hardware store in his native village, which he has conducted ever since with the exception of one year, when he was a resident of Utah.

In 1871 Mr. Edwards wedded Miss Mary A. Metters, who was born in January, 1848, in Devonshire, England, a daughter of Thomas Metters, now of Hazel Green, who came from England to the United States when Mrs. Edwards was a young girl. After their marriage Mr. Edwards settled in the village where he was born, and there he has continued in the hardware business to the present time. Mrs. Edwards died in May, 1900, leaving eight living children: (1) Ada L., born in 1875, had her schooling in her native village, and is now Mrs. John Oats, of Hazel Green. (2) Elizabeth A., a graduate of the Hazel Green high school, was born in 1876, is now one of Grant county's most successful teachers, having taught for six years in her native village. (3) George M., born in 1878, is engaged in a printing office in Platteville. (4) Thomas P. and (5) John L., twins, were born in August, 1879. John married Miss Stonebraker, and lives in Hazel Green. (6) Alice, born in 1883, is a graduate of the Hazel Green high school, and lives at home with her father. (7) Clinton L., born in 1886, and (8) James, born in April, 1891, are both in the village schools. (9) Eva died in May, 1897, at the age of ten years.

Mrs. Edwards was a member of the Methodist Church, where she was regarded as a devoted Christian woman. Mr. Edwards has always been identified with the Republican party, and has been postmaster twelve years, receiving his first appointment from President Arthur, his second from President Harrison, and his third from the present administration. In local affairs Mr. Edwards has taken a prominent part, having been president of the village board for six years, and for the same time has been clerk of the school. He is a member of the town board, and is secretary of the creamery company of the village. Mr. Edwards belongs to No. 43, F. & A. M., Hazel Green, one of the oldest lodges in the State.

Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards was married a second time, becoming the wife of Thomas Richards. They lived in Hazel Green, and here she was killed in the tornado of 1876. She had three children by Mr. Richards: Ada E., now the wife of William Oates, of California; Johnson died as the result of injuries received in the same tornado in which his mother lost her life; and Elizabeth A. was killed in the same tornado. Mrs. Edwards, after the death of her husband in the far West, started a small store, and her business so increased under her careful management that she became very successful.

GEORGE W. TURNER, a citizen of Darlington and a blacksmith by occupation, was born in England July 26, 1856. He came with his parents to the United States when a young boy, in 1869, and located in New Diggings, Lafayette Co., Wis. In the year 1877 the family removed to Darlington, where with his father, he engaged in the work of blacksmithing, and continued in that business for more than twenty-one years.

In 1898 Mr. Turner was elected on the Republican ticket to the office of sheriff of Lafayette county, and held the position for two years, conducting the same in an efficient and satisfactory manner.

Mr. Turner was united in marriage October 17, 1882, to Miss Belle Huntington, daughter of James and Sarah Huntington, of the town of Seymour in this county; they have one daughter, Jeanette, now in her seventeenth year.

FREDERICK A. WASHBURN, residing in Section 15, Clifton township, Grant county, bears an honorable record for brave service in the war between the North and South. Responding to his country's call for aid, he enlisted Dec. 17, 1861, in Company F, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, and when discharged, on Dec. 6, 1863, at Red Bone, Miss., he re-enlisted, the following day, in the same company and regiment, being finally mustered out at Madison, Wis., Dec. 16, 1865, after four long years of arduous service on Southern battlefields. He was on active duty with his regiment nearly the whole of this time, being for a brief period confined in hospital during his first enlistment, and a few days in the hospital at Galveston, Texas, during his second term.

This gallant soldier was born in Lake county, Ill., in 1844, and is a son of B. F. Washburn, a native of New York State, who also served in the war of the Rebellion, as a member of the 20th Wis. V. I. At the time of his enlistment the father owned the farm where his son Frederick now resides. He never returned to his family and friends, being one of the large number in every army who are reported missing. His fate was never known, though it is supposed that he was a victim of some marauding band of guerrillas. Of his family four sons and two daughters reached adult age. One son, George W. was a member of the same company as our subject, and was with him until his death, in Memphis, Tenn., while another son, Benjamin F., Jr., served throughout the latter part of the war in the 17th Wis. V. I., and is now a resident of Excelsior, Richland Co., Wis. It will thus be seen that the family furnished four defenders of the Union, two of whom, father and son, never came back.

Frederick A. Washburn has passed nearly all of his mature years on the homestead farm where he now lives. He has been twice married, his first wife being Miss Senena Taylor, by whom he had two children: Albert E., now in the Klondike; and Ida D., wife of Henry Franklin. His present wife was in her maidenhood Miss Clara May Fields, and to them have been born five children, namely: Dora May, Arthur E., Ica L., Roxy M. and Adelbert L.

Mr. Washburn's health was greatly impaired by his long service in the army, and as the years pass by his infirmities caused thereby increase in intensity. He is a good citizen, and is highly respected and esteemed by all who know him.

WILLIAM H. DICK, who is the very efficient and popular postmaster at Dayton, Green county, was born here May 1, 1844, and is a son of John and Sarah (Lawler) Dick. The father was born in Scotland, and the mother in Ireland. They were the parents of a family of eight children, of whom the following still survive: William H.; Marion, who is the wife of Byron Babbitt, of Evansville, Wis.; and Sarah, who is the wife of Norman Hook, of McFarland, Wis. John Dick was a shoemaker, and came to America in 1842, locating on a farm in the town of Exeter, Green county, where he took up a tract of eighty acres from the government. This he afterward sold, and established himself as a shoemaker in the village of Exeter. In 1854 he removed to the village of Dayton, where he followed the business of shoemaking until 1862. In the month of August, that year, he enlisted in Company F, 31st Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged in June, 1865, with a record of which his family and friends are justly proud. When the war was over, Mr. Dick returned to Dayton, where he resumed his work as a shoemaker. In 1867 he removed to a farm which he had bought near Mt. Vernon, Dane county, where he made his home for fifteen years. At the end of that time he sold his farm and removed to Brooklyn, Green county. There he died in the fall of 1897, being at the time of his death in his eighty-fifth year. His first wife, the mother of Postmaster Dick, died in 1881, at the age of sixty years, and he married for his second wife, a Miss Post, who is still living. Mr. Dick in his faith was a Presbyterian, though not connected with any church. The first Mrs. Dick was a Catholic.

The paternal grandfather of William H. Dick was James Dick. He was a coppersmith, and also a tinsmith, and was the father of five sons. He died in middle life from the effect of a paralytic stroke. Mrs. Sarah (Lawler) Dick was a daughter of Patrick Lawler, who died in Ireland before his daughter came to America, which she did when a young girl. He was a farmer, and had seven children.

William H. Dick spent the first ten years of his life in the town of Exeter, and has since that age lived in the village of Dayton, except the time he spent in the army. In 1864 he enlisted in Company F, 42nd Wis. V. I., and served at the front until the close of the war, making about one year of active duty. When the war ended, Mr. Dick returned to Dayton, and spent another year in school, and then became an apprentice at the tinner's trade, and that trade has been his occupation to the present time.

On March 16, 1870, Mr. Dick was married to Miss Mary Francisco, a daughter of Francis and Elizabeth Francisco. Four children were born of this marriage: John, Edith, Grace and Bessie. Edith married Perry Wisch, of Janesville, and they have one daughter. The other three children are all living at home. Mrs. Dick is a member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Dick belongs to Belleville Lodge, No. 74, I. O. O. F., to Joseph Mower Post, No. 121, G. A. R., and to the M. W. A. He is a Republican, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. For one year he has been town clerk and also clerk of the school district. Mr. Dick was appointed postmaster of Dayton, June 17, 1898, and is still satisfactorily performing the duties of that position. He owns a good home in the village, and is president of the board of health for the town of Exeter.

JOHN A. YOUNG, of Brodhead, Green county, is a dealer in fresh-water pearls, raw furs and ginseng, and in these rather uncommon lines of trade and barter has succeeded in amassing a very comfortable competence. He has had little help from friends or fortune in his life work, and may be written down as a thoroughly self-made man, the architect of his own fortune. He is a man of good heart, generous disposition and kindly feeling, who has combined keen business sense with the utmost integrity of purpose, and is known as a thoroughly honorable and reliable gentleman.

Mr. Young was born in Bern, Albany Co., N. Y., Aug. 5, 1832, a son of Peter and Rebecca (Austin) Young, natives of New York. They had eleven children, nine of whom are now living: John A.; Charles W., of Whitewater, Wis.; William, of Voorheesville, N. Y.; Henry, of Albany, N. Y.; Govnier, of White-water, Wis.; Sarah Van Patten, of Centralia, Kans.; Louis Van Patten, of the same place; Maggie Gemlick, of Albany, N. Y.; and Eliza Severson, of Guilderland Center, N. Y. The father was a carpenter and joiner, and in the latter part of his life a farmer in New York, where he died at the age of seventy-eight. His wife survived him, dying when about seventy-seven. They were Methodists. He belonged to the State militia. The paternal and maternal grandfathers of John A. Young were of Dutch descent, followed farming, and lived to advanced ages. Both reared large families. The latter, John Austin, came to Wisconsin in 1844, and located in Rock county. He owned a tract of 1,100 acres.

JOHN A. YOUNG

John A. Young was reared in Albany county, N. Y., where he obtained his early education. His father, though a man of limited means, gave him his time from the age of ten. John A. learned the carpenter business with his father, but spent his time principally in farming, beginning work as a farm hand in New York State at the age of fifteen, for a man by the name of Thomas Tygart, with whom he remained something over two years. His wages were $4 per month the first year; the second year he received $8 per month, with the understanding that he should deliver farm produce at Albany, twelve miles distant, by early daylight, on account of the cholera scourge in the city. In the third year he was taken sick, and had to return to his father's home for recuperation. In 1858 Mr. Young came to Wisconsin and located on a farm in the town of Lima, Rock county. In 1861 he began the business of keeping hotel at Johnstown Center, Wis., where he spent the next two and one-half years, and in 1863 he went to Brodhead and engaged in the hotel business. Here he has since remained, continuing the hotel business until 1895, since which time he has given his entire attention to the business of buying and selling fresh-water pearls and raw furs. He is considered an expert in the business, and has made it very profitable. He built the "Young House" at Brodhead in 1868-69, a fine building in its day, which still attracts admiration; it is a three-story brick structure, 52x62 feet, its entire cost being about $16,000, and in it Mr. Young did a large and profitable business.

32

Mr. Young and Miss Maria Groat, daughter of Abraham and Julia Ann (Ostrander) Groat, were married June 28, 1852, and they have had nine children, Julia A. A., Rebecca, John F., Teresa, Alice, Manley, Mary J., Maud, and Florence. Julia A. A. died June 11, 1854, when a child; Teresa died Oct. 20, 1859; John F., May 4, 1864; Rebecca, July 18, 1864; Mary J., Feb. 1, 1867; and Manley, May 18, 1900. The last named married Miss Anna Snyder, who survives him, and they had one son, Loyal, who is now five years old. Alice married E. M. Lyons, of Brodhead, and is the mother of five children, Maud, Eddie, Ray, Alice and Genevieve. Maud married F. K. Vance, of Brodhead. Florence is at home. Mr. and Mrs. Young belong to the Dutch Reformed Church, and he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which fraternity he has taken high rank. He has filled all the chairs of the subordinate lodge, is a member of the Patriarchs Militant, and has been a member of the grand lodge for many years. Mr. Young is a Republican, has served on the county central committee of the party for several years, and has been a delegate on several occasions to the Republican State Convention. He was mayor of Brodhead two successive terms. Mr. Young is a member of the State Municipal League, and believes in public ownership of public utilities.

Mr. Young owns one of the finest residences in the village of Brodhead, built in 1895, and thoroughly modern and up-to-date in every respect. He also owns considerable residence and business property in the place. There was not a foot of sidewalk in Brodhead when Mr. Young settled there, and he has the honor of having taken the initiative in this improvement of the city, having laid the first sidewalk in the place in the spring of 1864.

Mrs. Young's parents were born in the town of Guilderland, N. Y., where she was born in 1833. Her father always followed the life of a farmer, though he became noted throughout New England as the owner of two superior race horses, "Sorrel Pony" and "Black Maria." In their old age Mr. and Mrs. Groat moved to a new home in Guilderland Center, where he died at the age of seventy-eight years. His widow went to Albany, N. Y., to live with a daughter, and passed away at the age of eighty-six. They belonged to the Dutch Reformed Church. His father, Simon Groat, a soldier of the war of the Revolution, died when seventy-five. He was the father of nine children. Mrs. Young's maternal grandfather, John Ostrander, was a shoemaker by trade, but was keeping hotel at the time of his death. He had eight children. He enlisted in the Rensselaer war. Both her grandparents were of Holland-Dutch descent, natives of Albany county, N. Y., and followed farming.

PRESCOTT W. PUFFER, the present able and courteous local representative of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad at Monroe, Green Co., Wis., where he is station agent, was born in Andover, Windsor Co., Vt., Aug. 29, 1833. His parents, Ephraim and Rosamer (Chandler) Puffer, were also natives of Vermont, and of their family of children two are now living: (1) Rosamer married Dr. Putnam Burton, and both are deceased. (2) Chandler died in Ohio in 1844. (3) Lucinda is deceased. (4) Ryland is deceased. (5) Elizabeth married Isaiah Lovejoy, and is deceased. (6) Prescott W. is our subject. (7) Augusta is the wife of A. W. Wells, of Shelburn Falls, Mass. Ephraim Puffer was a carpenter, later in life becoming a farmer, and died on the old homestead in Vermont in 1848, at the age of sixty-two. His widow survived to the age of ninety-five years. They were Baptists in early life but in after years she became a Universalist. He was a man of considerable local importance, and held various offices. His father died over fifty years ago, when he was past eighty years. He was a farmer, and had reared a family of five children.

Prescott W. Puffer was reared in Vermont, and received an excellent common-school education. He attended Black River Academy, a local institution of more than local reputation, and was well prepared for the world when he left home, at eighteen years of age, to work in a woodenware factory. In 1851 he went to Troy, N. Y., where he was employed in the post office some three years. In 1855 the young man came to Wisconsin, and engaged in the furniture business at Janesville for two years. About that time he secured an appointment as clerk in the office of the Northwestern Railway Co., at Janesville, and was with that company six years, at the expiration of which time the St. Paul Company offered him a better position, in their Janesville freight office. He accepted it, and entered the services of that corporation, with which he has remained to the present time. The following year he came to Monroe as station agent, and has been here since January 15, 1866.

Prescott W. Puffer and Miss Helen R. Noggle, a daughter of the late Judge David and Anna (Lewis) Noggle, were married Dec. 23, 1856, in Janesville, Wis. They have one daughter, May Louise, who became the wife of J. C. Hood, of Monroe, and is the mother of one daughter, Marguerite. Mr. and Mrs. Puffer are members of the Episcopal Church, and are very popular in church and society. He belongs to Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., Janesville, Wis., and to Palestine Chapter, No. 21, R. A. M., Monroe, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Puffer and daughter are charter members of St. Omar Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, Monroe, Wis. He is a staunch Republican, and a man of fine record and unblemished character. Mr. Puffer has a commodious and attractive home on the corner of Market and Emerson streets, and has lived in Monroe thirty-five years.

JOHN ANDERSON was one of the early settlers of Monticello township, Lafayette county. He was a native of Lancashire, Scotland, born March 15, 1822, and died of a cancer at his home in Monticello township, March 12, 1900, aged seventy-eight years lacking three days. He came of sturdy Scotch ancestry, and his mother died in her native land, but his father, William Anderson, emigrated to America in 1830, with his two sons, John and George (the latter died in 1863), and settled in Oneida county, New York.

John Anderson grew to manhood in Oneida county, and on March 6, 1854, was married to Miss Margaret Jane Burrows, daughter of Alexander and Rose Burrows, and a sister of William Burrows, now of Monticello township. She was born May 17, 1830, and now resides at her pleasant home where she and her husband passed the many happy years of their married life. Soon after his marriage in 1854, Mr. Anderson came to Lafayette county, and became one of the early pioneers of Monticello township. He improved the farm that was his home during the remainder of his life, and became a prominent and highly esteemed citizen, identified with the growth and development of his town and county. In his political views he was a Democrat, and was always active in the work of his party, serving for a number of years as chairman of his town, and in 1875 as a member of the State Legislature. All his relations with his fellow men were characterized by the strictest integrity, and his word was ever accepted unquestioningly. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, having joined the Order at Shullsburg, in 1863, but later, as a matter of greater convenience, affiliated with the lodge at Apple River, Ill. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, seven of whom yet survive: Alexander died in New Mexico Nov. 22, 1884; Sadie is the wife of Robert Charlton, of Cherokee, Iowa; Ray resides at Holly, Colo.; Cora is the wife of George Pillmore, of Geddes, S. Dak.; John is at home; Charles is a telegraph operator at Dickens, Iowa; Libbie and George are at home.

JAMES W. HARMS, one of the energetic and progressive business men of Platteville, Grant county, who has for many years been prominently identified with the mining interests of that place, is a native of Grant county, born in Smelser township Feb. 20, 1852.

Mr. Harms is a son of Dedrick and Maria M. (Melvin) Harms. The father was born March 30, 1805, in Hanover, Germany, where he was reared and educated, and in 1834 set sail from Bremen, and after a long and tedious voyage landed in New Orleans. By flatboat he came up the Mississippi river to Dubuque, Iowa, where he at first worked at day labor, and later found employment in the mines. The same year, however, he came to Grant county, Wis., and commenced working in the mines here. He was at that time unmarried, and in very limited circumstances. In 1839 he was joined by his brother John, and together they invested their money in land, always doing business under the firm name of D. & J. Harms. Their first purchase was the claim of a Mr. Hazard, who had commenced to break the land, and to it they added from time to time, as their financial resources increased, until they owned a large amount of property. The partnership between the two brothers continued until the death of Dedrick, Sept. 3, 1882. He was married in Galena, Ill., Aug. 6, 1843, to Miss Maria M. Melvin, a native of Bloomington, Ind., and a daughter of James A. and Sarah S. (Roberts) Melvin. Her mother was born in Virginia, of Holland ancestry, while her father was born near the city of Baltimore, Md. He brought his family to Grant county, Wis., about 1831, becoming a farmer of Belmont township. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk war, and during those troublesome times his family stayed at the block-house at Mineral Point. Both Mr. and Mrs. Melvin died in Nebraska. After his marriage Dedrick Harms located on the old homestead in Smelser township, where he engaged in farming and stock raising throughout the remainder of his life. Although he came to the New World empty-handed, by industry and good management he became one of the most successful and substantial citizens of his community. Politically he was a Democrat, and religiously both he and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. She departed this life March 10, 1898.

To this worthy couple were born the following children: (1) John C., born June 6, 1844, followed farming until his death, March 13, 1871. He was married, Oct. 8, 1866, to Elizabeth Speth, who survives him, and to them were born three children: Emma M., Mary C., and Johanna, all deceased. (2) Mary I., born Oct. 23, 1845, is the widow of Christopher Schroeder, and a resident of Platteville. To them were born four children, George, Anna and James, all living; and Ellen, who died in infancy. (3) Henry H., born Feb. 16, 1848, also a farmer, died Nov. 9, 1898. He was married March 16, 1880, to Dora Werfellmann, and to them were born four children, one of whom died in infancy. Those living are Mary, John and Emma. (4) Dedrick William, born Jan. 30, 1850, died April 23, 1856. (5) James W. is mentioned below. (6) Louis L., born Oct. 7, 1853, was married, Sept. 16, 1880, to Mary Anna Riege, by whom he had four children, Benjamin H., Lily A. (deceased), Purl L., and Edith J. (deceased). (7) Martha Jane, born April 15, 1855, died June 25, 1886. (8) Sarah E., born May 8, 1857, was married in 1884 to Dr. Law, of Madison, Wis., and the children born to them were Blossom, Maria (deceased), Robert and John. (9) Emma M., born April 9, 1860, lives on the old homestead. (10) George L., born April 25, 1862, is also living on the old homestead. (11) The youngest, born Nov. 3, 1864, died in infancy.

On the home farm James W. Harms grew to manhood, obtaining his education in the district schools of Smelser township, and on starting out in life for himself he engaged in farming and mining. Since coming to Platteville, in 1886, he has been interested in mining, and has met with excellent success in business affairs.

In Platteville, March 1, 1883, Mr. Harms was united in marriage with Miss Sophia M. Logemann, a native of Hanover, Germany, who in 1866 came to the United States with her parents, Cord H. and Gesche A. (Bruning) Logemann, also natives of the same place. The family sailed from Bremen, and landed in New York, whence they came to Platteville, Wis. In 1866 they located on a farm in Platteville township, but Mr. Logemann is now living in Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis. Mrs. Logemann died Feb. 1, 1900. They had six children: (1) Albert H., also a resident of Elk Grove, married Mary Warfellman, and to them were born five children, Sophia, Henry, one who died in infancy, Dora S. and William. (2) Henry J. died in Grant county Oct. 2, 1878. (3) Dora died Oct. 30, 1878. (4) Mrs. Harms is next in the order of birth. (5) Mary D., Mrs. Henry Albers, of Platteville, is the mother of five children, Laura, Inez, Alta and Herbert, all living, and Clarence, deceased. (6) Herman H. married Fredericka Speth, who died in 1894, and they had two children, James, and one who died in infancy.

In his political views Mr. Harms is a staunch Democrat, and in religious belief both he and his wife are Lutherans. He is a worthy representative of one of the honored pioneer families of Grant county, whose identification with the county dates back to territorial days, his father having located here in 1834, when this region was all wild and unimproved. In the work of development and progress the family have always borne their part, and are justly numbered among the valued and useful citizens of the community.

CHARLES F. DODGE, mine owner and speculator of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, was born in New Diggings township Dec. 28, 1850.

Amni Dodge, his father, was born in New Hampshire in 1809, son of Alpheus Dodge, of good old New England stock. In 1848 he married, in New Diggings, Ann E. Dering, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1828, daughter of John Dering, who located in New Diggings in 1840. For the three years following his marriage Mr. Dodge engaged in mining. A typical pioneer, popular with all who knew him, he played an important part in public affairs, and in 1855 was elected sheriff of Lafayette county by the old-line Whigs. When his term of office expired he retired to a farm in New Diggings, determining to engage in agricultural pursuits for the remainder of his life. His wife died in 1889, and after her death he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Harry C. Martin, of Darlington, who cared for him until he entered into rest, in 1894. He was the father of the following children: (1) John, born in 1848, now makes his home in South Dakota. He married Jennie Chamley, and has four daughters. (2) Charles F. (3) William died in boyhood. (4) Thomas, born in December, 1854, settled on the old home farm, which he managed for a number of years, and then moved to Cripple Creek, Colo., where he is now engaged in mining. He married Miss A. Vickers, and has six children, Ammi, Thomas, Jessie, Mary, Kittie Helen and Charles. (5) Frank, born in 1856, moved to South Dakota, where he died in 1885, leaving five children, who now reside in Shullsburg, William, Katie, Frank, Annie and Harry. The mother died on returning to Wisconsin, and left her children under the guardianship of their uncle, Charles F. Dodge. (6) Kittie E., born in 1858, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and is now the wife of Senator Martin, of Darlington. She has one daughter, Anne Dodge. (7) Abby died in childhood. (8) Sherman, born in 1864, now lives in Madison, where he holds a political position. He married Maggie Cottingham, daughter of Miles Cottingham, of Benton, Lafayette county, and has three children.

Charles F. Dodge received a good education in the district schools and in the Platteville Normal, remaining in the latter institution as a student for a number of years. In early life he worked with his father on the home farm, but after the death of his mother, when his father gave up active work, he became interested in mining and speculating in ore. In 1896 he discovered and opened the Lafayette Mine in Shullsburg, which has proven a most valuable acquisition. He received

$8,000 for a part interest, and it continues to be a good paying investment. In politics Mr. Dodge is identified with the Republican party, and in religious faith, like all his family, is a member of the Episcopal Church, in which his mother was so well known for many years as a most earnest worker in the cause of religion. Socially Mr. Dodge belongs to the Lead Mine Lodge, of the I. O. O. F. He is highly esteemed in the business world, his wisdom and prudence making him a much desired adviser. He has also acquired extensive mining interests in Leadville, at present being a stockholder in one of the good producing mines there.

JAMES T. SHERMAN is a noble representative of the last business generation of Wisconsin, and is one of the few survivors of that period of stress and strain that made Wisconsin great and rich. He is now spending the late afternoon of his long and useful life in a richly-earned peace and retirement in Brodhead, Green county.

Mr. Sherman was born in New Haven, Conn., April 17, 1819, and is a son of Charles and Jennet (Taylor) Sherman, natives of Connecticut and New York, respectively. They were the parents of thirteen children, and of this large and interesting family only three remain: James T.; John T., of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Jennet T., of Elizabeth, N. J. Andrew T., of Wilmette, Ill., was the last to pass to the unseen world. The father was a merchant tailor in New Haven, but late in life retired to a farm near Suffield, in the same State, where he passed a number of years as a gentleman of leisure. He was known as Colonel Sherman, having been at the head of a regiment during the war of 1812. He died in 1844, at the age of sixty-two; his wife died Aug. 6, 1843, at the age of forty-nine. They were members of the Congregational Church, in which he was a deacon. He was nominated for the position of State Senator in his State the year he died.

John Sherman, father of Charles Sherman, was the oldest son of Roger Sherman, a native of Connecticut, born in 1750, of English lineage. He was a colonel in the Revolutionary war, and died at Canton, Mass., in 1801. His wife was Rebecca, the daughter of David Austin, of New Haven, Conn. They had seven children. Roger Sherman was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and at different times held prominent official positions. He was mayor of New Haven for a number of years, and received the degree of M. A. from Yale College in 1786. He moved to New Haven in 1761, and was a member of the Continental Congress in 1774. He was one of a committee of five, and was associated with Franklin, Jefferson, Livingston and Adams, in the preparation of the Declaration of Independence. He was United States Senator from Connecticut from 1791 until his death, July 23, 1793, and by John Randolph was termed the "Siccus Dentalus" of the United States Senate. The maternal grandfather of James T. Sherman was John Taylor, of Edinburgh, Scotland. He was a merchant in the city of New York, where he died at the age of eighty. He was the father of seven children.

James T. Sherman was reared from early childhood in Suffield, Conn., where he received his common-school education. He attended the academy at Greenwich, and finished his schooling at Westfield, Mass. He began life for himself as a farmer on the old homestead, and engaged in that occupation until he came West. In 1856 Mr. Sherman came to Brodhead, Wis., where he and his brother Henry opened the first dry goods store at that place. They did not remain in the store very long, and Mr. Sherman went to farming in the town of Decatur, a mile from Brodhead, where he bought two tracts of land, an eighty-acre and a fifty-acre piece. He farmed for several years, and then disposed of the larger piece, keeping the homestead and fifty acres.

Mr. Sherman and Miss Abigail Talcott Morgan were married Feb. 9, 1842. She was the daughter of Deacon Joseph and Abigail (Talcott) Morgan, of Windsor, Conn. Ten children were born to this union, James Morgan, Abbie T., Eliza Morgan, Anna Maria, Charles Jasper, John Taylor and Jessie Taylor (twins), Helen Mabel, Edwin D. Morgan, and Fannie Boyington. James Morgan married Miss Mary E. French, and lives in Chicago, where he is a commission merchant on the Board of Trade; they have four children, Edwin M., Roger, Martha E., and Mary F. Abbie T. married Normal Hall, and lives in Chicago; they have two children, Edwin M. and James. Eliza M., at home, is a writer of marked ability, and is a contributor to several of the leading papers and magazines; she has quite a reputation as a writer of hymns, of which she has composed over three hundred. Anna Maria married A. S. Moore, the cashier of the Green County Bank at Brodhead, and has four children, Sherman, Charles A., Roger Sherman and Eunice. Charles Jasper is a farmer, and lives in Brodhead; he married Miss Kate Rockwood, and has one son, John R. John Taylor died unmarried at the age of thirty years. Jessie Taylor lives at home. Helen married Charles S. French, of Chicago, and had two children, one of whom is now living, Helen; both father and mother died of scarlet fever only about twenty days apart. Edwin D. Morgan died when four weeks old. Fannie B. married George A. Metcalf, of Janesville, and is the mother of three sons, Earl S., Charles Winthrop and George Stanley. Mr. and Mrs. James T. Sherman are members of the Congregational Church, where he has officiated as deacon for many years. Mr. Sherman was a Whig in early life, but on the organization of the Republican party, united with it, and has voted its ticket to the present time.

The parents of Mrs. Sherman had six children, and two of these are now living. Catherine A., the widow of Charles A. Dressback, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. James T. Sherman. The father was a farmer, and died at Windsor, Conn., in 1862, at the ripe old age of eighty-seven. His wife died in 1832, at the age of forty-eight. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Sherman was William Avery Morgan, a native of Georgetown, Conn., and a soldier in the war of the Revolution, participating in the battle of Bunker Hill when he was twenty-one years old. He was the father of seventeen children. The maternal grandfather was Daniel Talcott, of Windsor, Conn., a descendant of that Governor Talcott who presided over the destinies of Connecticut in the old Colonial days. At the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman, celebrated in 1892, there were seventeen relatives present. They have a beautiful home in Brodhead, and a winter home in Florida. She is a sister of Governor Morgan, who was governor of New York during the Rebellion.

WILLIAM BATCHELOR, a prominent brick and stone mason and one of the leading contractors of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Pittsburg, Penn., in 1844, a son of Frederick and Elizabeth (Lendon) Batchelor.

The mother died in that city in 1848, and in 1854 the father came to Wisconsin. He lived for some time in Platteville, but now makes his home in Ellenboro, Grant county. By trade he is also a stone mason.

William Batchelor was only four years old when brought to Platteville, and is indebted to its public schools for his educational privileges. In early life he learned the brick and stone mason's trade, which he has since followed, and as a contractor has met with good success, receiving a liberal share of the public patronage.

Mr. Batchelor was among those who went to the defense of his country during the dark days of the Rebellion, enlisting at Platteville Aug. 8, 1862, in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war. He was mustered in at La Crosse, Wis., and joined the Army of the Tennessee, taking part in the sieges of Vicksburg and Atlanta, and in Sherman's march to the sea. He was also in the Carolina campaign, and participated in the grand review at Washington, D. C. In June, 1865, he was honorably discharged at Madison, Wis., and returned to his home in Platteville.

Later in that year Mr. Batchelor married Miss Mary Atkinson, a native of England, and a daughter of George and Mary Atkinson, who were also born in England, and came to Grant county, Wis., in 1850. Mr. Atkinson died in Ellenboro in 1888. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Batchelor are Fred W., Frank, Lillian and Clyde. Fraternally Mr. Batchelor is a prominent member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he has held office. He is identified with the Republican party, and takes an active interest in politics.

JOHN ALFRED TROW. Among the prominent and influential farmers who have done much toward the improvement of Green county, Wis., is John Alfred Trow, the subject of this sketch, who is located on a fine farm of 300 acres in Albany township, where he makes a specialty of the raising of cattle and sheep.

Mr. Trow was born in Albany township, on Dec. 16, 1852, one of the family of children born to John and Ann (Griffiths) Trow, both of whom were natives of England. Other children of the family who yet survive are: Michael, who lives in Albany township; Susanna, who married Hugh Mason, of Kingsley, Ia.; Mary, who lives in Kingsley, Ia.; Sarah, who married Albert Richardson, of Plymouth county, Ia.; and Evangeline, who married George Evans, of Kingsley, Iowa.

John Trow was born in Beguildy Parish, Radnorshire, Wales, in 1805, and grew to manhood on the farm there known as Llanreese. About 1839 John Trow married Ann Griffiths, a daughter of John and Sarah Griffiths, of Lower House farm, in Radnorshire, and from there came to the United States in 1846, locating first at Burlington, Wis., where they lived until the winter of 1846. In the spring of 1847 John Trow and his family removed to Albany, Wis., where they bought 220 acres, and there lived until the death of the father, in 1880, aged seventy-five. The mother died in 1875, aged about sixty-seven. Both were consistent members of the M. E. Church. The paternal grandfather was named Horatio Trow, and was a native of England. A farmer by occupation, he pursued this calling all his life; had four sons and two daughters, and died in England when about seventy. The maternal grandfather, John Griffiths, was also a native of England, where he died aged about seventy years, having been a farmer all his life. His family consisted of six children.

John A. Trow was reared in Albany township, attending the district schools, and living with his father until he reached the years of maturity. His first venture on his own responsibility was the purchase of eighty acres of fine land in Plymouth county, Ia., where he remained two years. At that time, having received a good offer for his property, he sold out and returned to Wisconsin, there buying 230 acres in Albany township, Green county, which now forms his present home, although he has since purchased additional land until he now has 300 acres. On his well-cultivated fields Mr. Trow carries on general farming and stock raising, making a specialty of breeding fine cattle and sheep, which always command excellent prices.

On Nov. 21, 1880, Mr. Trow married Miss Almira Tilley, daughter of William and Mary Ann (Griffith) Tilley, natives of England, who had four sons and two daughters, five now living: William, John, Mortimer, Mrs. Trow, and Wallace, all of Albany. Mrs. Trow's father died when about thirty-eight years of age, but her mother is still living. Sampson

Tilley, the grandfather of Mrs. Trow, came to America, was a carpenter by trade, and died in Albany township, well advanced in years. In his family there were four sons and three daughters. Mrs. Trow's maternal grandfather, James Griffith, came to America, residing for some years in Green county, Wis., and died in Denver, Colo., aged about sixty-nine. Before coming to America he was a prosperous merchant, but after locating here he engaged in farming. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Trow: Wallace, Vira, Horatio, Don, Delle, and Tressie. Fraternally Mr. Trow is a member of F. & A. M., Albany, No. 36; politically he is a Republican, and has served his party as supervisor for five years, and as school clerk a number of years. He and his family are among the most highly esteemed residents of Green county, where they are well known.

CHARLES WAMSLEY, one of the well-known and prosperous citizens of Waterloo township, Grant county, justice of the peace, clerk of the school board, and an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion, was born in Staffordshire, England, in 1837, a son of Charles and Sarah (Malah) Wamsley, also natives of England.

In 1842 the mother and four children came to America, the father following two years later, and they were among the first settlers in Cassville, Grant Co., Wis., where both parents died many years ago. The father was a silk weaver by trade. To Mr. and Mrs. Wamsley four children were born: Ellen, who died in Nebraska; Mary, now Mrs. Wells, of Ozark, Mo.; Charles; and Jeremiah, who enlisted in the 25th Wis. V. I., was mustered out after the siege of Vicksburg, re-enlisted in the 42d Wis. V. I., and died at Cairo, Illinois.

Our subject was reared and educated in Grant county, and has followed the occupation of farming. In 1844 he returned to England, but again crossed the ocean, and has since resided in America. Mr. Wamsley enlisted in Waterloo township, in 1865, in Company D, 42d Wis. V. I., for one year or until the close of the war, being assigned to the Army of the West, was mustered in at Madison, Wis., in February, and joined the regiment at Cairo, Ill. On account of his ability in that direction Mr. Wamsley was detailed at Cairo to look after the sick and wounded, and was honorably discharged in June, 1865, returning to Cassville township. In 1871 he removed to Waterloo.

In 1860 Mr. Wamsley was married to Mary Brady, who was born in Ireland, daughter of Patrick Brady, an early settler of Waterloo, Wis. To Mr. and Mrs. Wamsley four children have been born: Mary Ann, now wife of Thomas Eversoll, of Waterloo township; Charley, of Waterloo township; Rosa, now Mrs. Welch, of Glen Haven township; and Jeremiah, of Waterloo township. In politics Mr. Wamsley is a Democrat, and he takes an active part in political matters. By his judicial discharge of the duties of his office of justice of the peace he has gained the respect of his fellow townsmen, and he enjoys the confidence of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

MRS. MARGARET A. GRINDELL. widow of William Grindell, late a leading furniture dealer in Platteville. Grant county. was born in Quincy, Ill., in 1830, a daughter of John and Mary McMurray.

JOHN McMURRAY was a native of Kentucky, born in Washington county in 1801. He was a young man when he migrated to Illinois, was there married, and located near Springfield, later moving to Quincy, where he purchased several hundred acres of land, and followed farming and stock raising until 1847. He then brought his family to Lafayette county, Wis., where he purchased another farm, on which he resided until his death, in 1858. His widow was left with six children: Valentine, who migrated to California, engaged in mining a few years, then embarked in mercantile trade, and was so engaged when he died, in 1897, leaving a widow and three children, who still reside in the Golden State; Mary is now the widow of Ephraim Fletcher, of Galesburg, Ill., and has had two daughters, Louisa (deceased) and Lizzie (wife of F. Turner, of Quincy, Ill.); Margaret A. is the subject of this biographical review; Caroline is the wife of A. Potter, a leading grocer of Platteville; George is in business at Evansville, Wis.; and Peter is a stockman of Parker, Mo. Mrs. Grindell was educated in the higher schools of Platteville, there followed teaching for eight years. In 1857 she was married to William Grindell, the leading furniture dealer of the city.

WILLIAM GRINDELL was born in Ireland in 1819, came to Platteville in 1845, and here at once engaged in cabinet-making and the manufacture of household furniture in general, using the material cut by the local saw-mills. In this business he continued until his death, which occurred in 1895. Mr. Grindell was twice married, and by his first wife had three sons: Wesley, now a business man in Platteville; William, who was killed by the cars when a young man; and Samuel, now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. To his marriage with Miss Margaret A. McMurray were born six children, in the following order: Lydia J., born in 1858, was a teacher in the Platteville schools for about six years, and later a teacher in Nebraska; she is now the wife of William Kepner, of Osceola, Neb., and the mother of one daughter, Marguerite, and one son, William R. J. Fred, born in 1860, married Margaret Eastman, in Montfort, moved to Arkansas, where he followed lumbering until his health failed, and then returned to Platteville, and here died in 1897, leaving a wife, but no family. Clara L., born in 1863, was educated in the State Normal School at Platteville, and has been a teacher in the Milwaukee schools for the past eleven years. Mary, born in 1866, was also educated in the State Normal, taught school one term, later graduated in music at the Dixon (Ill.) College, and for ten years has been a successful music teacher. Thomas, born in 1869, was graduated from the Platteville State Normal in 1890, later attended the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and was a professor of mathematics in the Territorial Normal School, at Tempe, Ariz., which position he resigned to become one of Roosevelt's "rough riders" in the war with Spain; after being mustered out he was appointed deputy United States marshal of Arizona, and he is now clerk of the supreme court of that Territory; he is unmarried. Edward, the youngest of this family of six, born in 1873, was also educated at the State Normal, but on account of failing health went to Arizona in 1897, and is there living on a ranch; he is unmarried.

William Grindell, the father of the above named family, was a man of sincerely religious convictions, and in early manhood united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he was class-leader and Sunday-school superintendent, to which he was a liberal contributor, and in which his work was ever zealous, faithful and active; he was charitable in thought and act, and no needy or suffering one sought his aid in vain. In 1848 he became an Odd Fellow, and in 1856 was made a Mason, was ardent in his work in both brotherhoods, and constantly filled some office in each, having served seven years as Worshipful Master in the latter, and many times as Noble Grand in the former. In politics Mr. Grindell was a staunch Republican, and, although he never had ambition for public office, served on the school board thirty years as a matter of public duty. He left behind him a pure and spotless name—a legacy to his estimable widow and her children more precious than his wealth, and one which will be honored as it endures in the memory of the residents of Platteville.

WILLIAM GRINDELL

WILLIAM W. CURWEN is a well-known miner and farmer of Shullsburg, Lafayette county, whose undertakings have proved eminently successful. He was born May 27, 1852, a son of John and Ann (Smith) Curwen, who were both born in Manchester, England, the former on May 1, 1826, and the latter on May 12, 1822.

Our subject's parents were married in their native country, and came to America shortly after, reaching Wisconsin in April, 1852. They made the voyage in a sailing vessel, the "Forest King," and were thirteen weeks on the water, landing at New Orleans, whence they came by boat up the Mississippi to Galena, Ill. The trip from Galena to New Diggings, Wis., was made overland, and in the latter town the father secured work as a miner. He was successfully engaged in that pursuit until 1865, when he purchased what was known as the Harker farm, of 200 acres. He greatly improved that place, and made of it a beautiful home, on which he and his family passed many happy, prosperous years. Of late years he has lived retired in Benton, in a modern home which he owns. He and his wife have celebrated their Golden Wedding, and were the recipients of many hearty congratulations. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom James, John and Ellen are deceased. William W. is the eldest. Margaret, born in New Diggings March 10, 1859, married Roland Chamley, of Egan, S. Dak., and has eight children, William, Charles, Roland, Frank, Joseph, Emma, John and Cora. Mary, born Aug. 6, 1856, married Joseph Godfrey, a druggist of Benton, and died Nov. 3, 1893, leaving four children, Edith S., John R., Joseph Oaks and Ann F.; Mr. Godfrey died in 1888. Emma M., born Aug. 31, 1861, is the deceased wife of John Harker, who died in 1887, and had one son, John C. Elizabeth, born March 3, 1864, married William Richardson, of Mitchell, S. Dak., and died Jan. 18, 1892, leaving three children, Maud, Joseph and Mary. Sarah J., born April 5, 1867, resides on the old home. John H., born Nov. 2, 1871, married Mary Wilkinson, of Galena, Ill., and resides on his farm in New Diggings; they have three children, William J., Howard and Emma O. Benjamin F., born in December, 1874, resides on the old home farm. John Curwen, the father, was a charter member of Lead Mine Lodge, I. O. O. F., was a prominent man among the early settlers, and held a number of local offices. At present he is taking life easy, full of years and honors.

William Curwen, brother of John Curwen, and uncle of William W., came to America and became an engineer on a railroad, working for the Columbus, Cleveland & Cincinnati Railroad Co. for over thirty years. Later in life he made his home in Little Rock, Ark., where he died in 1889, leaving a widow, but no children.

William W. Curwen received his education in the district schools of New Diggings, and early in life learned all the details of farm work through a course of practical instruction on his father's farm. When he started out in life for himself he made his first location in New Diggings, where he was quite successful as a miner, discovering the Crystal Cave Mine and also the Lead Mine Mine. He was the owner of half of the Sally Waters Mine, and made a substantial fortune from his work in that line, all of his mines yielding him large returns. In 1892 he purchased his present fine farm, known as the De Rocher farm, three miles west of Shullsburg, which he has developed into one of the beautiful country homes of the county.

On Oct. 30, 1875, Mr. Curwen was united in marriage with Miss Mary Coulthard, who was born Aug. 26, 1856, in the town of New Diggings, a daughter of John and Ann Coulthard, a pioneer couple of Lafayette county, who came from Durham, England, in the early days. Eight children blessed this union, two of whom, Ann and Emma, died in infancy. Maggie I., born Jan. 18, 1880, was educated at the Lead Mine and Shullsburg schools, and was left at her mother's death the eldest of six children; although but fifteen at that time, she proved herself a capable little woman, and holds with dignity and grace her position as manager of her father's household. Charles, born June 4, 1882, a student in the Shullsburg high school, has much natural mechanical ability. Eva M. was born Aug. 6, 1887. William Harry, Jan. 17, 1889. Ella N., July 27, 1891. John Fred, born Jan. 10, 1893. The mother, a conscientious Christian woman, died at her home April 28, 1895. She was a consistent member of the Primitive Methodist Church, and ever active in the work of her chosen faith. Politically Mr. Curwen has always been identified with the Republican party, but has never indulged in official aspirations. Socially he belongs to the Knights of the Globe. He is a man of prominence in the town and county, highly respected among his business associates, and greatly esteemed as a friend.

WILLIAM LOY, M. D. Prominent among the citizens of Grant county who have witnessed the marvelous development of this section of the State in the past half century, and who have, by their own well-directed efforts, succeeded in acquiring a handsome competence, and are now able to spend the sunset of life in quiet and retirement, is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch.

Dr. Loy was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, Sept. 9, 1825, a son of John and Mary Ann (Wesley) Loy, natives of Pennsylvania who at an early day emigrated to the Buckeye State, and spent the remainder of their lives in Trumbull county. They were the parents of the following named children: George; Catherine; Esther; John, a physician of Trumbull county, Ohio; Mildred; Mary; William; Jacob, a physician of Cedar Rapids, Ia., formerly of Platteville, Wis.; and Elizabeth, a resident of Shenandoah, Iowa.

In his native State Dr. William Loy was reared and educated, and after completing his literary training entered the Ohio Medical College, at Cleveland, where he prepared for his chosen profession. On Oct. 16, 1849, he came to Grant county, Wis., first located in Liberty township, afterward practiced several years in the village of Platteville, and in 1854 settled at Annaton, Wis., where he purchased a farm, in connection with its operation successfully engaging in the practice of medicine throughout that section of the county for forty years. He was also largely engaged in stock raising, and, being a man of good business ability, sound judgment and strict integrity, he prospered in his undertakings, becoming one of the most substantial citizens of his community. In 1890 he moved to Platteville, and has since lived a practically retired life, enjoying the fruits of former toil.

In Liberty township Dr. Loy was married, in 1852, to Miss Susannah E. Wanamaker, a native of Liberty township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. Her parents, Jonas and Esther (Everett) Wanamaker, were born in Pennsylvania, at a very early day moved to Ohio, and in 1838 or 1839 came to Grant county, Wis., locating in Liberty township. This was during Territorial days, when this section of the State was still in its primitive condition, being all wild and unimproved. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wanamaker died in Crawford county, Wis. The Doctor has been called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who departed this life July 1, 1899. Of the seven children born to them, William and Arthur, the fourth and fifth in order of birth, are now deceased. Those living are as follows: (1) Viola F. is now Mrs. Dennis, of New California, Grant county. (2) Sarah Ellen is Mrs. Mellor, of Clifton, and has seven children, Anna, Frank, William, Clara Bell, John, Flossie and Everett. (3) Clara Estella is Mrs. Rosemeir, of Annaton, Wis., and has two children, Leon and Archibald. (4) L. W. married Frances Sweeney, and has three children, William, Donald and Susannah E. (5) A. W., a graduate in law at the State University of Madison, married Frances A. Burris; he is now serving as city clerk of Platteville.

During the latter part of the Civil war Dr. Loy enlisted, in Clifton township, and was mustered into service at City Point, Va., March 3, 1865, as surgeon of the 6th Wis. V. I.; while in camp, however, he was transferred to the 7th Regiment, which formed a part of the famous Iron Brigade. He was stationed in Virginia during his entire service of four months and twenty-four days, and was honorably discharged at Madison, Wis., in July, 1865. He now holds membership in W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R. In politics the Doctor is a Democrat. During the long years of his residence in Grant county he has championed every movement designed to promote the general welfare, has supported every enterprise for the public good, and has materially aided in the advancement of all social and moral interests. After a useful and honorable career he can well afford to lay aside all business cares and live in ease and retirement.

JOHN F. HEBERLEIN, a worthy and honored citizen of Fennimore, Grant county, was a member of an Ohio regiment in the war for the Union. He was born in Prussia, Germany, Sept. 27, 1843, and in 1852 emigrated to America with his parents, Philip and Margaret (Hoffman) Heberlein. The family located first in Pennsylvania, but in 1857 moved to Lawrence county, Ohio, where the father died in 1861, leaving a widow and nine children, all of whom had attained maturity, John F. being the youngest of the family.

On Aug. 3, 1862, Mr. Heberlein enlisted in Company K, 50th O. V. I., for three years, and was discharged July 21, 1865. His first service was in Kentucky, under Gen. Buell, and then under Gen. Rosecrans, and he was later transferred to the Army of East Tennessee, under Gen. Burnside. In the spring of 1864 he was placed in Gen. Schofield's command, and finished his service under that leader. He took part in the famous battle of Perryville, Oct. 8, 1862; in Sherman's Atlanta campaign: the battle of Dallas; and the fight in front of Atlanta, where Gen. McPherson was killed. He was also in the battles of Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek and Jonesboro. After Sherman started on his memorable march through Georgia to the sea, Mr. Heberlein, with his regiment, in the 23d Army Corps, proceeded to Franklin, Tenn., and they were under the command of Gen. Thomas in the battle of Nashville, where the Confederate army met with signal defeat. The Union troops then went in pursuit of Hood to Wilmington, N. C., and thence to Goldsboro, where they rejoined Sherman's army, remaining in North Carolina until the war ended. Mr. Heberlein's regiment was stationed at Salisbury when mustered out.

Our subject then returned to his home in Lawrence county, Ohio, where he was married Oct. 15, 1866, to Miss Mary C. Arnold, and started immediately for Grant county, Wis., being accompanied by his bride and mother, who made her home with him until her death, in 1871. He located on a farm near Lancaster, and in connection with its operation also followed the trade of a mason for a number of years. Since August, 1894, he has made his home in the village of Fennimore. Mrs. Heberlein died at Fatch Grove, Grant county, in September, 1890, leaving nine children, five sons and four daughters, namely: Margaret, Wilhelmina, Frederick C., Jacob, Edward A., Sarah L., Frank, Joseph and Mary C. Edward A. was a member of Company C, 4th Wis. V. I., in the late Spanish-American war.

Mr. Heberlein is a worthy member of Sam Monteith Post, No. 173, G. A. R., of Fennimore. He served faithfully as a soldier for the Union, and during his long service was only absent from his regiment from April 5, 1865, to June 1, same year. During this short period he was confined in hospital by sickness, brought on by long and arduous service and the malaria of North Carolina swamps. He is a patriotic and loyal citizen of his adopted country, and ever stands ready to discharge any duty devolving upon him.

WILLIAM H. ROSS, a retired farmer in the village of Dayton, Green county, was born in the town of Exeter, that county, Sept. 8, 1840, and his entire life has substantially been passed in his native environments.

Mr. Ross is a son of Leonard and Sarah (Burritte) Ross, the former a native of Vermont, and the latter of Indiana. They had eight sons, three of whom are now living: Milton and Leonard, of Belleville, Wis., and William H., of Dayton. The father was a cabinet maker in the East, and in his early life conducted a hotel. He left home when quite young, and came to Wisconsin, working in the lead mines at Wiota for a number of years, and marrying there. After a period of several years he came to the town of Exeter, and there bought a farm, gradually increasing his real estate holdings until he became the proprietor of about 900 acres of land. In 1856 he died at the comparatively early age of fifty years. His widow still survives him, and makes her home with their son, Milton, in Belleville. Mr. Ross was a Universalist, while his widow is a Presbyterian. Mr. Ross came to Wisconsin as early as 1836, and was known as Capt. Ross. His widow remarried, and her second husband, a Mr. Turner, is also deceased.

The paternal grandfather of William H.

Ross also bore the name of Leonard Ross, was a native of Vermont, where he died when he was an old man, after having reared a large family. Mr. Ross's maternal grandfather bore the name of William Burritte, and was a long-time resident of Indiana. In 1828 he came to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Wiota, Lafayette county, where he became a well-known farmer. He took an active part in restoring confidence against the attacks of the Indians, and became a prosperous farmer, dying in Wiota at an advanced age. He was much interested in public affairs.

William H. Ross has lived all his life in the town of Exeter, with the exception of three years which he spent in the army during the Civil war. His education was secured in the district school, and in the spring of 1899 he moved into Belleville, where he spent a year, but, not liking the condition of things there, moved to Dayton at the expiration of that time, where he is now found exceedingly pleasantly situated. The farm is rented to his oldest son.

In the fall of 1861, on his twenty-first birthday, Mr. Ross ran away from home and enlisted in Company H, 8th Wis. V. I., serving three years in the ranks. He was a participant in both battles at Corinth, the siege of Vicksburg, and, in all, fought in twenty-seven heavy engagements. After the war in which he made a creditable record both as a soldier and as a companion and friend on "the tented field," he returned home and resumed the peaceful occupation of farming, to which he had been trained.

On Dec. 12, 1871, Mr. Ross was married to Miss Margaret Greidenwise, a daughter of Nicholas and Catherine (Dausch) Greidenwise, and by this union became the father of four children: Duane, Eldora, Bertha and Theron. Duane married Miss Stella Parks, and lives on the home farm. Eldora died at the age of seven years. Bertha was killed when four years old by being run over by a wagon. Theron is a student at a business college in Monroe. Mr. Ross is a member of the Joseph Morrow Post, No. 121, G. A. R., and in politics is a Republican. His farm contains 174 acres, and all the improvements found on it represent his own hard and honest labor.

Mrs. Ross's parents were natives of Bavaria, Germany, and had three sons and two daughters, of whom Margaret, the wife of Mr. Ross, and Joseph, of Jennings, La., are now the only survivors. Mr. and Mrs. Greidenwise came to America, and found a home in the town of Johnstown, Rock county, where they remained three years. They moved after that time into Green county, and settled in the town of Exeter, where he owned at his death 170 acres of land. He was a blacksmith, and always followed his trade. He died July 21, 1856, at the age of thirty-seven years. His widow survived him until June 2, 1857, when she died at the age of thirty-six years. They were both Catholic in their faith.

WILLIAM R. SPEARS, an honored soldier of the Civil war, was born near Cleveland, Ohio, in 1838, son of William and Eunice Spears. In 1842 the family migrated from Ohio to Wisconsin, and made their home in the town of York, later removing to Moscow, Iowa county, where the parents passed the rest of their lives. Of their children, four sons offered their services to their country in the days of the Rebellion, Earl becoming a member of the famous 8th (or Eagle) Regiment of Wisconsin Infantry (he now lives at Eagle Grove, Iowa); Dexter, who resides at Valley, Vernon Co., Wis.; James; and our subject, William R. These four met at Chicago in August, 1900, during the Grand Army Encampment held in that city, it being the first meeting with Earl in thirty years.

William R. Spears bears on his body honorable scars obtained in battles for his country. In the spring of 1864 he became a member of Company C, 37th Wis. V. I., enlisting in the town of Moscow, and joining the regiment at Madison. They were ordered to Arlington Heights, and a few days later were in the front in the vicinity of Cold Harbor, participating in one of the bloodiest battles of the war. Mr. Spears remained with his regiment during Gen. Grant's Virginia campaign, and took part in the many sharp encounters of that part of the war, including the siege of Petersburg. On June 17, 1864, he was badly wounded by a fragment of a shell, and on the 6th of July, following, was present when the noted mine explosion occurred, taking part with his regiment in the charge and battle following the explosion. In this battle his left hand was badly shattered by the explosion of his own gun. He was sent to the hospital at Alexandria, Va., and thence transferred to Fairfax Court House, where he was discharged at the close of the war. He was practically an invalid for a long time after his return home, in fact has never been able to do any manual labor. He returned to his farm, and made his home there until March, 1897, when he removed with his family to Blanchardville.

Mr. Spears has been twice married. His first wife, Harriet Vanhorman, whom he wedded before the war, died in 1875. She, too, came of a patriotic family, and had three brothers who served in the Union army. For his second wife Mr. Spears married Miss Caroline Nancy Corbin, who was born in Pennsylvania, daughter of Lewis and Jane Corbin, natives of Pennsylvania, who removed to Wisconsin, where they both died, their remains lying at rest in the town of Moscow. Mrs. Spears has three brothers who participated in the Civil war, two of them in the Union army, and one, most unwillingly, in the Confederate. Benjamin served in an Illinois regiment, Ashael in a Wisconsin regiment; Granville, the eldest, was living in Texas at the opening of the war, and his wife was a daughter of the famous Confederate Gen. Morgan. By his first marriage Mr. Spears has three children, Jacob, Polly and George; to the second nine children have been born, Ida, Winnie, Charlotte, Florence, Warner, Charles, John, Bertie and Richard, all of whom are living except Richard. The family are highly esteemed by those who know them best, and very popular in a social way.

THOMAS JEFFERSON BRAGG. The Green county pioneers of sixty years ago are rapidly being numbered among the countless thousands who have lived and suffered, played well their part in life's battle, and been called from the field of action to the rest of the quiet churchyard. Their memory is cherished and revered, and their lives of self-denial will be long remembered; and it is no cause for wonder that the few who yet remain are held in affectionate reverence. Of such is the distinguished citizen of Monroe whose career forms the subject of this biographical sketch.

Thomas J. Bragg comes of Virginia stock. His parents were Doshur and Hannah (Mofatt) Bragg, and at the time of his birth his father was serving as a soldier in the war of 1812. His parents were poor, and the father found it necessary to take the first employment that offered in order to secure a support for his rapidly increasing family. He was born and reared in a section where slavery was regarded as a divinely appointed institution, and for fifteen years he was a slave overseer. The position was one repugnant alike to his convictions and his inclinations, and both he and his wife resolved, as soon as circumstances and their slender means would permit, to seek a new home in a latitude where the legal equality of all men was recognized. In 1822 they removed with their eight children to Kentucky, and in that State a ninth was born. Their earnest wish, as has been said, was to remove to a free State; and to aid her husband in the accomplishment of this project Mrs. Bragg weaved and did other work suited to her sex and strength. In 1829 they found that by patient industry and strict economy they had accumulated sufficient means to enable them to cross the Ohio from Kentucky to Illinois. The husband and father settled upon public lands first in Clark and then in Edgar county, in that State, and subdued the unbroken prairie soil to subjection. The following year death called from his side the helpmeet of his life, and in 1841 he followed her to the grave, dying on the farm which he had earned and cultivated through so much industry and manly self-denial. Of the nine children born to Doshur and Hannah Bragg only two sons and a daughter survive, although the family may be said to have been noteworthy for its longevity. Those who have died were: Louisa, who married Absalom Pitcher, survived her husband for many years and died, comparatively recently, at the age of ninety; William; Mary, who became the wife of Rev. Stephen R. Goll; Lucy, who was married to Rev. Pettigrew; Elizabeth (Mrs. Samuel Milburn); and Catherine, the wife of Frederick Shuey. Of the surviving members of the family—Strother, Thomas Jefferson and Hannah—the first named is the eldest. He was the second child and first son, and was born in 1807, and is yet living, in Edgar county, Ill., at the age of ninety-three. Thomas J. was fifth in the order of birth. Hannah, the youngest daughter, is the widow of George Brown, and also lives in Edgar county, in the Prairie State.

Thomas Jefferson Bragg was born Jan. 15, 1813, in Fauquier county, Virginia. He left the home farm when a young man of twenty-three years, going from Illinois to Wisconsin in May, 1836, making his migration in the capacity of a teamster for one Jonathan Corey, for whom he drove six yoke of oxen, attached to a wagon bearing the family and all the household goods of his employer. The destination of the party was southern Wisconsin, and the journey, while long and tedious, was by no means uneventful. There were no roads, and the cumbersome vehicle, with its clumsy, heavy method of draught, had to make its way across unbroken prairies, through trackless swamps, and across streams which were at times so swollen as to be scarcely fordable. A rider on horseback was employed as a sort of advance scout, whose movements were closely watched, and whose tracks were as closely followed. The laborious (and often painful) toil attendant upon such an expedition can scarcely be appreciated by the luxuriously accommodated traveler of to-day, but to the pioneers of sixty years ago it counted for little in comparison with their abiding courage and deep-seated hope. Mr. Corey intended to locate just south of the Illinois State line, and nearly three weeks were spent in reaching that point from Grand View, Illinois.

Mr. Bragg remained with his fellow travelers long enough to aid in the erection of a cabin for the shelter of the family; and then set out—with others of the party which had accompanied them—for the locality which is the present site of the city of Monroe. Among these more adventurous explorers was Daniel S. Sutherland, with whom young Bragg made his home for many months. For some two years he worked as an assistant to the early farmers, with their primitive methods of cultivation, and in 1838 bought four yoke of steers, a wagon and a breaking plow for himself. These he used with industry and good judgment during the summer months, although the winter found him at work in the lead mines. He carried on this mode of life for about five years, and in 1841 he felt that he might take to himself a wife. In October of that year he married Emily Jane Nobles, whose father, Peter Nobles, had shortly before settled in what is now Green county. At the time of his wedding the hardy young pioneer was making his home with his prospective father-in-law, but immediately after his marriage he entered a claim to government land, in the present township of Monroe. His industry was unflagging, his energy inexhaustible. His success exceeded his anticipation, and as time went by he found himself the owner of 700 acres of well-improved land. On this farm he resided for more than forty years, and there were born his five children, one of whom, Alice, has died. Those who yet live are: William F., an influential citizen of Monroe; Emma, wife of R. D. Gorham, of that city; and Thomas J. and Charles, whose homes are in Nebraska. Some two decades ago, his hard work, good judgment and unwavering probity having brought their merited reward, in the shape of a comfortable competence, he abandoned active toil, and he and his wife took up their home in Monroe. In that pleasant city they are passing their declining years, surrounded by every comfort, happy in the mutual love which has weathered many a storm, and serenely awaiting life's termination in the hope of a glorious immortality. Despite his eighty-seven years Mr. Bragg is vigorous in both mind and body. His memory recalls the new country as he first beheld it; and as he views the great advance made by modern civilization, with its handmaids—steam and electricity—he sometimes wonders whether the glories of nature are not more enduring than those of art, and the handiwork of God grander than that of man.

HERMAN J. STEVENS is a well-known citizen of the town of Monticello, Lafayette county, and a representative of one of the pioneer German families of the county.

Casper Stevens, his father, was born in Hessen-Cassel, Germany, in April, 1819, and was early bereft of both of his parents, his mother dying by the time he had reached his sixth year, and his father when he was thirteen. He was one of four children thus early thrust out to shift for themselves. He grew to manhood in his native land, and in 1847 was united in marriage to Miss Theresa Gosman. A year later they sailed for America, hoping to better their condition in the newer country. They had an infant daughter, Anna, but left her in Germany until they had made a home here, when she followed. Like many other emigrants of that day, they were not possessed of any means, but found it necessary immediately upon their arrival to go to work to earn the veriest necessities of life. Their ambition was to own a farm, and with that object in view they rented some land in Monticello township, Lafayette Co., Wis.

which they tilled for a time. They then purchased eighty acres, which they continued to occupy until 1866, when Mr. Stevens found himself able to purchase the farm upon which their son Herman J. now resides. On this farm Mr. Stevens made a comfortable home, and finally retired from active work, purchasing a home in the city of Shullsburg, where he and his wife spent their declining years. Mrs. Stevens passed away April 5, 1882, and Mr. Stevens died suddenly Feb. 15, 1892, at the home of his son Herman, aged nearly seventy-three years. He had been gifted by nature with a powerful frame, and his industrious habits had given him greater physical strength than was ordinarily allotted to one man. When in his prime, it was said of him that he was capable of doing the work of two men of ordinary strength. He was prudent in his investments, and frugal in his habits, and with the faithful assistance of his wife, and also of his children, as each one became old enough to work, was enabled to secure sufficient means to make himself and his wife comfortable. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion he and his entire family were members of the Roman Catholic Church. The family consisted of one son and three daughters: Anna, the eldest, and the only one born in Germany, is now the wife of Amand Hillenburnt, of Newton, Kans.; Lizzie became the wife of Joseph Aurit, and died in Shullsburg June 7, 1875; Herman J. is the third in order of birth; and Mary is the wife of John Hebenstreit, of Shullsburg.

Herman J. Stevens was born in the town of Monticello, within a half mile of his present home, March 7, 1854. He was but twelve years old when his parents removed to his present farm, and there he grew to manhood, assisting in the work on the farm, and attending the district schools, where all of his literary training was received. His father was a careful and systematic farmer, and, being the only son, young Herman was quite well acquainted with all the details of farm work at an age when most boys are still at play.

On May 22, 1877, Mr. Stevens was united in marriage with Miss Cecelia Hebenstreit, who was born in Prussia, Germany, Feb. 3, 1856, daughter of Vincent and Rosa Hebenstreit, who came to America in the early 'sixties, and now live in Shullsburg. To Mr.

and Mrs. Stevens have come two sons: Herman, born Jan. 27, 1879, and John, born Jan. 5, 1881. Mr. Stevens takes much pride in his fine farm, and has greatly improved it with good buildings, modern in every particular. He is highly respected for his fair business dealings and his unswerving integrity.

ALFRED H. HAWTHORN. Among the prosperous and substantial farmer citizens of Clarno township, Green county, none is better or more highly esteemed than Alfred H. Hawthorn. The large farm of 322 acres which constitutes the home of Mr. Hawthorn, is located two miles southwest of Monroe, Wis., where fine dwellings, commodious barns and outbuildings of modern style, proclaim it to be one of the most desirable in the neighborhood.

Mr. Hawthorn is a son of James and Mercy (Boyles) Hawthorn, the former of whom was born Oct. 22, 1797, in Orange county, N. Y., of Irish ancestry. In 1817 he decided to visit other states, and with his knapsack in hand started from his home, in time reaching Pittsburg, Penn., where he took passage on an Ohio river boat and made his way to New Orleans, returning to New York by means of a sailing vessel. Soon after this he made his way West, and for a time engaged in mining in Wisconsin, but finally purchased the home where our subject now resides, and in 1833 built thereon a small log cabin. Mr. Hawthorn was of the stuff of which real pioneers are made, possessing the perseverance, industry and courage which have been the means of founding the cities of the world. Amid the rush and strife of modern environment, we too seldom pause to remember the debt we owe to those who have blazed through the wilderness, the path which we so easily follow. Three years later Mr. Hawthorn married Miss Mercy Boyles, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1812, a daughter of William Boyles, one of the early settlers of Green county. She proved a valuable helpmate to the sturdy young pioneer, and her death occurred ten years prior to his, in 1881. Thirteen children were born of this union: Andrew, of Monroe; Mary, who married Hickman Bryant, now deceased; Phebe, who married Aaron Eely, resides in Monroe; Ellen, who married Thomas Millmon, resides in Monroe; William, of Monroe; Matilda, who married Edward Trickel, of Clarno, and is deceased; Maria, who married Joseph Bender, deceased; James, deceased; Lucinda, deceased; French, a resident of Colorado; Alfred H., our subject; John E., mentioned elsewhere in this work; and Charles, a resident of Monroe.

Alfred H. Hawthorn was born on Jan. 18, 1851, and was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the public schools. His tastes were different from those of his father, his life having been passed in industry on the old homestead, which he has improved and added to until he owns a very large tract, little resembling the place upon which his parents settled nearly seventy years ago. He is extensively engaged in stock raising and feeds a considerable number of animals for market annually. He raises Durham cattle, Cotswold and Shropshire sheep and Shire and Norman horses.

Mr. Hawthorn was married Sept. 14, 1884, to Miss Nettie A. Connet, who was born June 15, 1851, a daughter of Daniel and Hester Connet, of Green county, and four children have been born of this union: Ida Ellen; Alfred Roy; Wallace C.; and John N. An active member of the Republican party, Mr. Hawthorn has served as school director, and for some time was the efficient road supervisor. He is one of the leading and highly respected citizens of Clarno township.

HON. JOHN MONTGOMERY SMITH is one of the leading members of the Bar in southwestern Wisconsin, and for nearly half a century has taken an active part in the development of its business, political and social interests.

Mr. Smith represents a family which, for at least three generations, has been identified with important affairs of the State and nation. His grandfather, William Moore Smith, was a prominent citizen of Philadelphia, and in 1803 was appointed, by the government, one of the commissioners to England to adjust and settle the demands of British claimants under the sixth article of Jay's Treaty. His father, William Rudolph Smith, son of the last named, was born at Trappe, Montgomery Co., Penn., Aug. 31, 1787, five years later removed with his father to Philadelphia, and at the age of sixteen went as his private secretary to England. While there he began a course of legal study which was continued upon his return to Philadelphia, and in 1809 he began practice at Huntington, in the same State. He served six years as deputy attorney general for Cambria county, and was a member of both houses of the Pennsylvania Legislature. During the war of 1812 he did active duty as colonel of the 62d Regiment of Pennsylvania Reserves, and in 1836 or 1837 he and Henry Dodge (afterward governor of Wisconsin) were appointed commissioners to treat with the Chippewa Indians for the purchase of their Wisconsin lands. After concluding this treaty, which was made at Fort Snelling, Mr. Smith settled at Mineral Point, in 1838. The next year he was appointed by Gov. Dodge as adjutant general, a position which he filled about twelve years. He afterward held various positions of trust and responsibility in the county and State, including those of chief clerk of the State Senate and attorney general. In 1852 he was authorized by the Legislature to prepare a documentary History of Wisconsin, to which he devoted much diligent labor for the next two years, when the first and third volumes were published by the State, the manuscript of the second volume having been lost in some unaccountable manner. He presided over the first Democratic convention held at the seat of government, in 1840, and was a member of the Constitutional convention of 1846. His death occurred while on a visit to a daughter, in Quincy, Ill., Aug. 22, 1868. Mr. Smith was a man of wide experience and noteworthy attainments, commanding the respect of all with whom he came in contact. It had been his good fortune to become acquainted with many of the most distinguished men of the nation, and to participate in many historical events. He had seen every President from Washington to Lincoln, and related many impressive reminiscences of the former, and other statesmen who participated in the formation of our government. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Van Dyke, was born in Alabama.

John Montgomery Smith, whose name heads this article, was born at Bedford Springs, Penn., Feb. 26, 1834, and has been a resident of Mineral Point almost continuously from the age of four years. In 1852 he went by the overland route to California, and spent four years in that famous Eldorado. Upon his return to Mineral Point he studied law in his father's office, and with J. H. Clary and Judge

J. Montgomery Smith

Crawford. In 1862 he was formally admitted to practice, and for a time was a partner of the last named jurist, but for many years has carried on an independent business. He has been retained on many of the most important cases in his portion of the State, and holds an enviable position among the members of his profession. A staunch Democrat in political principle, he has always taken a leading part in the councils of the party; was twice a delegate to national conventions, in 1880 and again in 1888; in 1892 was a Presidential elector, and cast his vote for Grover Cleveland. In 1879 he was nominated for attorney general of the State, on the same ticket which was headed by Judge Jenkins, of Milwaukee, for governor, but shared the disaster which befell his party throughout the State in that campaign. The regard in which he is held by the community in which most of his life has been spent is attested by the numerous positions of trust and responsibility which he has filled in the city and county—mayor three terms, superintendent of schools two terms, district attorney two terms, member of the board of supervisors, court commissioner, and other local offices. In 1892 he represented the district in the State Assembly. During President Cleveland's first administration he was appointed a member of the Southern Ute Indian Commission, and during the second term of the same President he served on the Chippewa Indian Commission, a position filled by his father near sixty years earlier. Besides attending to all these interests, Mr. Smith has been a promoter of numerous business enterprises calculated to advance the welfare of the city of Mineral Point and adjacent country.

Mr. Smith was married, in 1862, to Antonia Hildebrand, who died six years later, leaving one son, Richard M. In 1870 he married Jennie M. Crawford, widow of his former preceptor and partner, Judge Crawford, of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin. His only daughter, Etta M., is the wife of H. N. Laffin, of Milwaukee. In 1893 he was again bereaved by the death of his wife, whose health was impaired by her arduous duties while acting as a member of the World's Fair Commission.

I. N. BASYE, a retired business man, now living in the village of Arthur, Grant county, was born in Jacksonville, Ill., June 8, 1832, son of Dr. J. J. and Annie (Watson) Basye. Dr. Basye was born in St. Louis county, Mo., Sept. 24, 1799, and his wife in South Carolina, Dec. 28, of the same year; they were married in Missouri.

Dr. Basye started life as a merchant in a modest way. He practiced medicine for over fifty years, and was a local preacher in the Methodist Church for more than sixty years. In 1836 he came to Grant county, Wis., and purchased 200 acres of land in the town of Clifton, which is now known as the "Wells Farm." There he opened a general store, and while he improved his farm he also dealt in goods which he shipped from St. Louis and hauled over country from Galena, Ill. Mr. Basye had men employed in prospecting for Galena ore during the remainder of his life, in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin, but was unsuccessful in locating any lodes. In 1840 he sold his farm to Francis Merritt, and located in Platteville, where he opened a general store with his son-in-law, J. F. Kirkpatrick. They continued same a few years, when he sold out to his son-in-law, and confined himself to his medical practice, which had become extended, and occupied his whole time. The Doctor was tendered many political positions of honor and trust, all of which he declined, contending that business and politics would not assimilate. In his later years he was an inmate of the home of his daughter, in the town of Lima. Mrs. Basye, who had shared with him all his early hardships, died in Platteville, in October, 1873, and he followed her to the unknown land Jan. 8, 1877. She was a Christian woman, and reared her family in the church to which her life had been devoted. Twelve children were born to them:

(1) Eliza J., born in Illinois in December, 1820, married J. F. Kirkpatrick, who was a merchant in Platteville for some years, and then in Cassville. While living in Cassville his wife died, leaving two children, Julia and Benjamin. Julia grew to noble young womanhood, and died, greatly regretted by a host of friends. Benjamin died when a child. (2) N. M., a farmer, born July 24, 1822, married and settled in Grant county. In 1871 he moved to North Dakota, where he purchased lands, and died, in 1889, leaving a son and a daughter in that State. (3) J. W., born in Illinois in October, 1823, died when a young man. He was an earnest Christian, and very prominent as an Odd Fellow, and was the first noble grand of Platteville Lodge, I. O. O. F. (4) Frances A., born June 9, 1825, was the wife of William Clifton, of Grant county, a farmer and popular citizen and official. They lived in Lima for some years, and then moved to the village of Arthur, where he died in 1885. Mrs. Clifton died in January, 1900, in Lancaster, and is remembered as a woman of unusual ability and strength of character. Four children are left of this union—Rev. Theodore, of Chicago; Rev. J. J., in the ministry at Omaha; I. N., living in Platteville, a retired farmer and veteran pensioner; and Carrie, Mrs. Arnett, of Fairfield, Iowa. (5) S. T., born Oct. 24, 1826, began life as a farmer in Grant county, and afterward was a merchant in the village of Arthur. He owned two or three farms in the county, and has been a prominent man in public affairs and church work, occupying various offices of trust in his town. He is now living retired with his daughter, at Grinnell, Iowa. Two daughters were born to him—Mrs. Anson Brown, of Grinnell, Iowa; and Mrs. Frank Cushman, of Evansville, Wis. (6) J. J., born in August, 1828, was educated in the old academy at Platteville, and studied medicine with his father. In 1850 he moved to California, where he was engaged in gold mining for six years. Coming back to Grant county, he there married Miss Hannah E. Williams in 1857, and they settled on a farm in the town of Lima, where they remained until 1863, after which he was a merchant and postmaster in the village of Arthur for about a year. In the fall of 1864 he died very suddenly of dysentery, leaving a wife and two daughters—Annie, wife of Mr. Jewet, cashier in a bank at Fergus Falls, Minn.; and Bessie, who is the wife of a Congregational minister in Massachusetts, and with whom Mrs. Basye lives. (7) Eleanor S., born in Illinois April 28, 1830, died in 1846, in the bloom of her early womanhood, greatly beloved. (8) I. N. is the eighth in the family. (9) Mary M. and (10) Martha L., twins, were born in May, 1835. Mary was the wife of John Hamilton, a merchant, who lived in Platteville, where she died in 1864. Martha died in 1843. (11) Maria J., born in 1837, died when six years old. (12) Sarah C., born in June, 1839, died in 1843, the three last named dying of small pox.

I. N. Basye began his early education in 1837, in a little log school house, practically erected by his father, in the town of Clifton, and attended the old Platteville Academy, under Profs. Carrier, Magoon, and Pickard, who in 1852 erected the old stone academy at Platteville, now the State Normal. He finished his schooling at the M. E. Collegiate Institute, under Prof. John Nolan. One of a Latin class of four students, consisting of J. M. Roundtree, Lois Atwood, and J. M. Harlan, of Kentucky, besides himself, Mr. Basye feels that in his early life he had good company.

Mr. Basye left home after his graduation, and went into southwestern Missouri, seeking for Galena ore, and discovered what are known as the "Granby mines," in that State. Remaining there a year, he came back to Platteville, studied law with George W. Lakin, and then taught in the public schools of Grant county. In 1853 he became a photographer, under the instruction of Hesler & Johnson, of Galena and Chicago, Ill., and established the first gallery in Platteville, which is still continued there, by J. L. Nye.

In September, 1857, Mr. Basye married Miss Susan Slater, of Platteville, daughter of Rev. Isaac Slater, of Duquoin, Ill. After his marriage he taught school in Lafayette county, Wis., for two years, and in 1860 came back to Platteville, engaging with G. Hexter & Co. as a salesman and bookkeeper, and later with Pettijohn & Rewey, in the same capacity. In 1863 he took charge of the general store of H. Hoyt, with whom he remained seven months. In 1864 he bought out J. R. Stevens of Platteville, and engaged in the grocery trade, which he continued for some time. At the death of his brother, J. J., who was postmaster and general merchant in the village of Arthur, he administered his estate, and combined his business, continuing at Arthur some two years. Selling out, he became again an employe of G. Hexter & Co., at Platteville, and continued with them until 1870. That year he became manager for Laughton & Sons, general merchants, and was with them some four years. At the end of that time the firm was changed to Laughton Brothers, and a year later Mr. Basye entered again into the grocery business, owning one of the finest stores in the city, and doing a fine trade for some three years. Since 1884 Mr. Basye has lived for the most part retired in the village of Arthur, where he is interested in the poultry business. He has been commissioner of highways for some six years, and notary public.

Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Basye, four are now living: (1) Katie, born in 1858, was a student of the State Normal at Platteville, and was one of the successful teachers of Grant county for several years. Going to California in 1881, she was for some years a teacher, and contributor to the local press, and then married Oscar De Witte, a fellow teacher. Mrs. De Witte died in 1886, leaving one son and one daughter, Eugene and Susie, who are now with their grandmother in Platteville, attending the Normal School. (2) Cora E., born in Grant county in 1860, obtained her education in the State Normal, and was for some years one of the successful teachers who have gone out from that institution. She is now the wife of J. H. Cushman, of Platteville, and the mother of four children, Nettie, Dora, Katie, and Leon, all students of the Platteville Normal. (3) George T., born in November, 1864, lives at Pipestone, Minn., where he is engaged in the sale of Indian curiosities and jewelry; he is known as "Pipestone George" all over the country. (4) William R., born in Platteville, received his education there. When fifteen years of age he became foreman of the Platteville Democrat, and was manager of that paper for a year. Becoming a fine musician, and a composer of music, he was a professor in the musical department of a ladies' college at Galesburg, Ill. Moving to Milwaukee, he studied under a German teacher some two years, and taught for a time at La Crosse, Wis. At Winona, Minn., he established a Conservatory of Music. After some four years of work in Winona he found his health shattered, and went to an infirmary in Chicago. There he remained for a year and a half, and was about to return to Platteville when he took a sudden relapse, and died June 29, 1900. His remains were interred at Platteville. As a composer and publisher of music he had attained considerable prominence, and from his pen had come a popular book of instruction in music which is quite generally used in schools and by private instructors. (5) Helen V., born in Platteville in 1872, had a normal training, and a fine musical schooling, appearing frequently before the public as a prominent soprano. She married George Hughes, and they live in Omaha, where Mr. Hughes is a motor conductor. They have two children, Lenice and a little son. (6) J. Virgil, born in Platteville, in 1873, the youngest of the family, lives at Owatonna, Minn., where he conducts a temperance billiard hall, tobacco business and news depot. He is married, and has one child.

Mr. Basye has been an independent Republican, and has been active in local affairs. In religion he was reared in the Methodist Church. Mr. Basye studied medicine with his father, and was his prescription and financial clerk for a number of years. He has instructed private and public classes in vocal music for over forty years, and is still active in training children in the Sunday-school and in the church. He established the first choir in the Methodist Church in Platteville, and trained same for eighteen years; he introduced the first organ into a Platteville Church, and organized the first choir in the Episcopal Church.

PETER S. PEDLEY, a successful stock farmer of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, was born in that township Aug. 11, 1853, son of William and Alice (Spensley) Pedley. He grew to manhood on his father's farm, and received such education as the district schools of the day and neighborhood afforded. Early trained to work on the farm, he has made agriculture his life work, and resides on a farm his father had purchased previous to his death. He has made general improvements on his place, and now finds himself the proud possessor of one of the best farms in the township.

On March 20, 1878, Mr. Pedley wedded Miss Elizabeth A. Garth, who was born in 1858, and by this union has become the father of five children, viz.: Walter L., born Jan. 10, 1879, was educated in the home school, called the Leadmine Graded School; Ralph W., born in December, 1880, was graduated from the Shullsburg high school; Alice, born in December, 1882, graduated from the Leadmine Graded School in 1898; Chester A., born in May, 1885, is a graduate of the home school; and George Garth, born in January, 1889, is at home. The family are all members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are highly respected residents of the community in which they live. In his political connections Mr. Pedley has always been a Republican, and he has been honored by his townsmen with election to a number of offices, among them being those of school treasurer and clerk; he is treasurer at the present writing.

William Pedley, father of Peter S., was born in Yorkshire, England, April 24, 1817; his wife, Alice Spensley, was born in the same county in 1819, and came with her husband to America in 1848. Mr. Pedley purchased a farm in New Diggings about a quarter of a mile north of Leadmine, which he cleared and improved, this being the first farm cleared up in that section of the town. Mr. Pedley's industry won for him prosperity and comfort for the last days of his life. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in company with Mr. Looney and Mr. Johnston Mr. Pedley founded the church in that district. They were all liberal supporters of the cause of religion, and became prominent members of the community, universally respected. To Mr. and Mrs. Pedley were born four children, three sons and one daughter: (1) John S., born in 1842, was a farmer on the old homestead until his death, Dec. 20, 1896, the result of an accident with a corn shredder. He married Miss Mary A. Harker, daughter of Thomas Harker, and by her had three children, Alice L., William and Eva. (2) Hannah, born in 1844, married Joseph Alderson, who died at his home in Mineral Point in September, 1895, leaving a son, John W., of Mineral Point. Joseph Alderson was born in England in 1833, and in 1859 came to America, where he engaged in mining and shoe-making. (3) James, born in 1846, now farms the Warren Johnson homestead in New Diggings. He married Miss Maggie Alderson, daughter of Joseph Alderson, of Leadmine, and has three children, Wesley, Edward and Nina. (4) Peter S. is the subject proper of these lines.

ROBERT W. DENNIS was born in Missouri April 28, 1843, son of William and Sarah (Sparks) Dennis. The father was born in 1814, in Kentucky, and the mother in 1819 in Missouri. They were married in Missouri, and came to Wisconsin in 1841, at that time making a stay of one year only in this State, then a Territory. They returned to Missouri, making the trip homeward by wagon. In 1847 they came back to Wisconsin, and bought a farm in the town of Clifton, making some improvements, and later Mr. Dennis purchased his present home in the same town, where he and his wife are passing their last days in peace and comfort. To them were born five children, of whom four are still living. (1) Robert W. is the eldest. (2) Stephen was born in Missouri in March, 1846, married Miss Almira Hake, and is now living in Clifton. Mr. Dennis was a prosperous and well-to-do citizen of the town of Lima. Ora, their daughter, lives in Platteville, and is a stenographer for Sawyer Ellis. (3) Mary J., born in Missouri in 1847, is now the wife of William Kies, of Clear Lake, Iowa, and is the mother of three children, Ethel, Albert and Ray. (4) John J., born in Grant county in September, 1850, married Miss Viola Loy, a daughter of Dr. Loy, of Platteville, and is the father of four children, Eugena, Sarah, William and Stella.

Robert W. Dennis obtained his education in the district schools. In 1865, in company with an expedition for the gold fields of Colorado, he left Omaha, and crossed the Plains. He was a teamster in the West until December, 1867, when he came back to Grant county and bought a farm, and of late years he has been very successful as a general farmer and a stock raiser. In October, 1869, he married Miss Emma Wannamaker, of Grant county, daughter of Jonas and Esther (Everett) Wannamaker, who came to this State from Pennsylvania by way of Trumbull county, Ohio, where Mrs. Dennis was born in 1844. Two years later her parents moved to Liberty, Grant county, where they settled on a farm. They had a family of twelve children, eight of whom are now living.

Mr. Dennis and his wife settled on a farm in Clifton, which was purchased at their marriage, and there they made substantial improvements. In 1881 Mr. Dennis bought the "Sparks Farm," of 280 acres, to which he has added 100 acres, which makes it one of the large farms of the town. Mr. Dennis is a capable farmer, and his land shows in every part the ownership of a practical man. He has at this time one hundred head of cattle and eighty hogs.

To our subject and his wife have been born children as follows: (1) Alta May, born in 1871, is at home. (2) Lee W., born in 1873, married Miss Agnes Bayley, of Lima, and lives on one of his father's farms. (3) Cary J. was born in 1874. (4) John Everett died when sixteen years old. (5) Robert P. was born in 1878. (6) Jay, in 1880. (7) Roy, in 1882. (8) Clyde, in 1883. (9) Harley died when seven years old. (10) Fern was born in September, 1889. These children have all been students of the Lima schools. In politics Mr. Dennis is a Democrat, and he has held the position of school director for twenty years.

JOSEPH WITZIG. one of the prosperous representatives of the agricultural interests of Grant county, residing in Section 6, Clifton township, was born in Prussia, Germany, May 15, 1844, a son of Martin and Annie Witzig, both natives of Prussia.

In August, 1854, the parents left their native land, and after a voyage of five weeks landed in New York. By various means they reached Milwaukee, and thence made their way with ox-teams, the children walking, to Clifton township. Here the father took up 160 acres of government land in Section 13, Liberty township, on which he settled in 1855. Here he resided, improving his property, until his death, which occurred July 30, 1862. The mother survived until May 27, 1900, when she, too, passed away, aged ninety. To these worthy people the following children were born: Adam, who resides in Minnesota; Josephine, now Mrs. Whitish, of Fennimore; Peter, who died in Fennimore in 1874; Mary, Mrs. Stich, who died in Clifton in 1897; John, who died in 1862, on the battlefield, having enlisted in an Illinois regiment; Frank, who resides in Mt. Ida township, Grant county; Joseph; Johana, Mrs. Bunsell, who died in Iowa county, Wis., in 1875; Rose, Mrs. Hufal, who died in Chicago; and Catherine, Mrs. Abram, of Chicago.

Our subject was ten years of age when the family came to Wisconsin, and, small as he was, he bore his part in clearing the land, attending school as chance offered. As soon as he was able to begin life on his own account he purchased eighty acres, in 1869, in Section 13, town of Liberty, to which he added eighty acres in Section 7, Clifton township. To his first purchase in Clifton township, in Section 6, Mr. Witzig has added forty acres. All of the property was heavily timbered, and the work of clearing difficult, but he has accomplished this feat, and has built a good story and a half residence 34 by 26 feet, and a good barn 29 by 29 feet with 16-foot posts, upon his last purchase. Upon his first farm he also erected a story and a half house, 16 by 26 feet, with an "ell" 14 by 16 feet, as well as a barn 30 by 48, with 16-foot posts and a good basement. The farm is supplied with a windmill, and is all fenced. The land is devoted to grain and stock raising, and the horses, cattle and hogs are bred from excellent strains, therefore commanding good prices.

In 1867 Mr. Witzig married Miss Ruth Bacon, a native of Ohio, a daughter of John and Sally (Kenyon) Bacon, who were natives of Connecticut and Rhode Island, respectively. They came to Clifton township in 1850, and opened up a farm. Here the father died about June, 1880, aged ninety-four; the mother died some years later, in 1889, aged eighty-six. To Mr. and Mrs. John Bacon were born ten children: Mrs. Mary Wanamaker, of Lancaster; Thomas; Mrs. Aurora McLimans, of Fennimore; Joseph, who died in 1884; Janette, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, now of Rewey; Mrs. Sarah Mann, of Dubuque; Mrs. Oral Frye, of Boscobel; Austin, who died in 1842; Mrs. Ruth Witzig; and Miss Ellen, who died in 1894. To Mr. and Mrs. Witzig have been born ten children: Bertha, now Mrs. Scheel, of Clifton; John, of Minnesota; Ben, who is married and on the old homestead; Minnie, now Mrs. Ellis, of Iowa county, Wis.; and Joseph, Cora, Willie, Sallie, Beatrice and Emma.

Having attained his present comfortable circumstances through his own unaided efforts, Mr. Witzig deserves high praise for his industry and thrift, and enjoys the confidence of a large circle of friends, who appreciate his many admirable qualities of heart and mind.

JACOB REGEZ. The dairy interests of Wisconsin have redeemed the agriculture of the State, and brought a vast flood of wealth into pockets that would otherwise have been empty. Within the lifetime of this generation the advocates of a bold and progressive system of dairying, in harmony with the times, have wrought incalculable good to the people of the State. Particularly is this true of the southwestern portions. Here the results of the old methods of farming had become doubtful and uncertain. The farmer was threatened with ruin. Conditions were becoming altogether hostile and unfriendly, but the vast and rapid development of the dairy was his salvation. He is rich, and faces a golden future. Butter and cheese, and especially cheese, have done it. In this work the gentleman whose name begins this article, and whose home is in the city of Monroe, Green county, has been very efficient. He has helped the farmer, and the farmer has helped him, and both have become wealthy.

Jacob Regez was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 18, 1849, and is a son of Jacob and Belle (Lehnherr) Regez, both also natives of Switzerland, and lifelong residents of that country. They had a family of six sons and six daughters, and nine of their children are now living: Jacob; Rudolph, of Monroe; Ernest, of Blanchardville, Wis.; Eliza, wife of Fred Meier, of Darlington, Wis.; Belle, wife of Jacob Roth, of Mineral Point, Wis.; Amelia, wife of Rudolph Lehnherr, of Blanchardville, Wis.; Emma, a widow, who first married Charley Regez, and later Fred Rueggseger; August, of Blanchardville; and Emil, of Wimmis, Switzerland, where he is engaged in the cultivation of the old home farm. The father was a notary and a public man in the home country, was mayor of Wimmis for a period of twenty-one years, and was very highly thought of by those who knew him best. He became a farmer in his later life. He died in 1880, when fifty years old, and his widow in 1888, at the age of fifty-eight. They were Lutherans. Mr. Regez served his time in the army, as captain. His father, Rudolph Regez, was a farmer, and met an early death, by drowning, in middle life. He had only two children. Peter Lehnherr, the father of Mrs. Belle Regez, was a farmer, and died in advanced age. He had a family of two daughters and one son.

Jacob Regez, our subject, came to the United States in 1867, but not long afterward went back to France. In 1871 he again came to this country, with the intention of making a permanent home here, and on this occasion one brother came with him; later four brothers and four sisters came. They spent a year in Iowa, and in 1873 made their first appearance in Monroe. Here they found satisfactory conditions, and here Mr. Regez at once engaged in the manufacture of cheese. He struck the chord of success, knew his business thoroughly, and it rapidly assumed large proportions. At one time he was running twenty factories, and had on his regular payrolls the names of more than fifty employees. He now has factories in many parts of Wisconsin, and his patronage and business reach into Iowa.

On Jan. 20, 1876, Mr. Regez and Miss Louisa Wittwer, daughter of Gottlieb and Kristina (Itten) Wittwer, were married. They have become the parents of six children, Edith, John Jacob, Louisa, Edward, Robert and George Herman. Edith married John Strahm, and lives in Monroe. John Jacob married Otilie Durst, and is in the employ of his father. Louisa died at the age of one year, Edward when seven years old, and Robert at the age of five. Mr. and Mrs. Regez are members of the St. John Evangelical Association, and he is a member of the Deutsche Gesellschaft. Politically he is a Democrat, but has never been an office seeker, having given his time and thought to his business. He lives in a beautiful home, and owns several fine residences in Monroe.

ALBERT G. HAWLEY, a well known citizen and prominent business man of Argyle, Lafayette county, is a representative of one of the pioneer families of southwestern Wisconsin.

Rev. Aaron Hawley, his grandfather, was a missionary of the Methodist Church and was sent westward from Vermont in 1826. He was in charge of the district in northwestern Illinois, and his earnest efforts were being crowned with success when the Black Hawk war broke out and turned the Indian from every white man, regardless of any previous friendship. In 1832 Rev. Hawley acted in the capacity of mediator between the white men and the Indians. Black Hawk and his band of bloodthirsty savages were raiding northward through Illinois and Wisconsin. Rev. Hawley approached a camp of warriors at Wadham's Grove, near Warren, Ill., on a mission of peace, when he was shot and killed by the savages. A full account of this tragedy is found in the history of the Black Hawk war.

Daniel S. Hawley, son of Rev. Aaron Hawley, was nine years of age when brought by his father to Illinois from the New England home. He married for his first wife Heleann Read, of Brattleboro, Vt., and then settled at Orangeville, Ill. In 1850 he removed to Argyle, Wis., where he was long one of the prominent business men of the town. In 1856 he erected what is known as the Rock hotel, and owned a half interest in the flourmill. His wife died in 1871, leaving five children, as follows: Albert G., our subject; Henry J., who has resided in Colorado since 1859; Charles A., who died at Worcester, Mass., in 1897; Louisa, who became Mrs. Campbell, and died at Argyle; and Theodore A., the youngest, who was accidentally drowned in Colorado, in 1894. After the death of the mother of this family, Daniel S. Hawley was twice married. Mr. Hawley passed the last years of his life in Evansville, Wis., dying May 18, 1893. His third wife still survives.

Albert G. Hawley was born in Orangeville, Stephenson Co., Ill., in 1845, but has been a resident of Lafayette county, Wis., since childhood. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, 31st Wis. V. I., "for three years or during the war," and was mustered out with his regiment at St. Louis, Mo., June 20, 1865. Company E was composed principally of volunteers from the towns of Argyle, Darlington, Fayette and Wiota. Its officers were as follows: Captain, James B. Mason, who died October 17, 1863, and was succeeded by Daniel B. Dipple; First Lieutenant, Daniel B. Dipple, promoted to captain, and succeeded by Hiram Stevens; Second Lieutenant, Hiram Stevens, promoted, and succeeded by Charles R. Bridgman. The company rendezvoused at Prairie du Chien, and thence went to Madison. On leaving the State, the regiment went down the Mississippi to Columbus, Ky., and was assigned to the 6th Division, 16th Army Corps, and was ordered into camp at Fort Halleck. While there it was engaged on picket and guard duty (passing twenty days on guard on the line of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad), and in reconnoitering the surrounding country. From Fort Halleck they marched to Murfreesboro. On July 3, 1864, the 31st was transferred to the 3d Brigade, 1st Division of the 20th Army Corps, and was actively engaged during the siege of Atlanta, and took part in the famous march to the sea, participating in the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville. After the surrender of the Confederate General Johnson, they marched to Washington, and there took part in the Grand Review. On June 23, 1865, the regiment arrived at Madison, Wis., and on July 8, following, the men departed for their respective homes, veterans of many of the important engagements of the greatest struggle the world has ever known.

After Mr. Hawley returned from the war, he served an apprenticeship to the miller's trade, and then for eighteen years operated the mill at Argyle, being part owner of the same after 1875. His chief occupation for many years has been the rearing, purchasing and selling of live stock. His sons now assist him in the stock business, in which they have been very successful. Mr. Hawley in all his dealings has sustained a high reputation for integrity, and holds the respect of the entire community.

On March 25, 1866, Mr. Hawley was united in marriage with Miss Mary L. Osgood, daughter of Warren and Lydia Osgood. Four children have come to bless their union: Dan S., born in 1869; Elbert E., born in 1872; Ellen M., born 1876; and Homer F., born in 1878. While Mr. Hawley escaped the bullets of Confederates, he contracted asthma from the exposure, and is still at times a great sufferer. Fraternally he is a 12th Degree Mason, and a Knight of Pythias.

Warren Osgood was born in Ontario county, N. Y. He, too, was a soldier in the Union Army, enlisting at West Union, Iowa, where the family then resided, in Company G, 38th Iowa V. I., and died in the service at New Orleans, La., in January, 1864. The following year Mrs. Lydia Osgood (who was a native of Virginia) came with her children to Green county, Wis., and her death occurred at Argyle, in 1878. She was the mother of six children, three of whom survive, namely: Lemuel K., of Sac City, Iowa; John A., of Monroe; and Mrs. Hawley, who was born in 1848 in Green county, Wis., subsequently removing with her parents to Iowa. The family is one of the oldest in the State, and has played an important part in the development of the country.

JOHN YARWOOD, who has held a conspicuous position among the successful agriculturists of Green county, is now living retired from active labors in the village of Brooklyn, Wis. He was born in Manchester, England, Jan. 31, 1835, and is a son of William and Maria (Barker) Yarwood, both natives of England. They had four children, two sons and two daughters, and John, whose name appears above, is the only one of the family now living.

William Yarwood was a weaver and a spinner in his early manhood in England, but in middle life he left the mill, and secured employment in locomotive works. In 1894 he died at the age of eighty years. Mrs. Maria Yarwood died some six years prior to that time. They were both members of the Episcopal Church.

Hugh Yarwood, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a gardener by trade, and the father of four children. His widow survived him many years, making her home with her son, and was over eighty at the time of her demise. The father of Maria (Barker) Yarwood, noted above, was an Englishman, and died in his native country.

John Yarwood passed his early life in his English home, where he grew to manhood, and was educated in the local schools. For a number of years he worked in a warehouse, and in 1856 made his way to the United States, seeking the larger opportunities that waited on thrift and industry. The first work which came to him was that of a farm hand, in the employment of his father-in-law, on the farm which he subsequently purchased. It contained 240 acres, and here he lived until 1898. Another farm of forty acres was also purchased by him, and he is still the owner of both tracts of land.

Mr. Yarwood was married Jan. 24, 1859, to Miss Anna, a daughter of Moses and Alice (Potter) Briggs, and by that marriage he became the father of a large family of children: Mary Ann, William Henry (deceased), James Edward, Alice Maud, Moses (deceased), Moses (2), Walter Frederick, Charles Stewart, John, Frank, and Thomas Richard. William Henry married Roxie Greatsinger, and had twin children, Claude William, who died at the age of three months, and Maud Wilda. James Edward died when about sixteen years old. Alice Maud married Rupert Lewis, and has two children, Mabel Maud and Prentice. The two Moses died in infancy, as did Walter Frederick. Charles Stewart married Lillian West, and they make their home on the old farm, where they are rearing a family of three children, Stanley, Hazel and Archie. John, who married Mary Nelson, also lives on the old farm, where they have one child, Mildred. Frank married Katie Norton and is living on a farm in the town of Brooklyn. Thomas Richard is still single. The wife of Mr. Yarwood, and the mother of this family, died Jan. 22, 1899, at the age of fifty-seven years. She was a Methodist in faith, and her noble and unselfish life gave a meaning and reality to her religious life. Mr. Yarwood is a believer in Christianity, but has never identified himself with any religious organization.

In politics Mr. Yarwood has been a Republican since 1860, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. For two terms he has served as a member of the board of supervisors, and he has filled the office of school director and also that of road commissioner for many years. Since the death of his wife he has made his home with his children, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, of Brooklyn. For forty-five years he has been a resident of Brooklyn.

CHESTER STEPHENS (deceased) long sustained the reputation of a capable farmer and upright man in the town of Jordan, Green county, where he had his home at the time of his death. Born in Missouri, Sept. 15, 1841, he was a son of John and Elizabeth Stephens, who were among the early settlers in Green county.

John Stephens, the father of Chester, was born in New York, and made his way to Missouri in the early days. In 1849 he came to Green county and settled on section 6, in the northwestern part of Jordan township. He and his wife had a family of six children, four of whom are now living: Mary is the wife of Louis Robb, of Nebraska; Chester is our subject; Nancy is deceased; Lamira, of Illinois, is the wife of George Brass; Helen is the wife of Delavin Pickett, of Iowa; Maranda is the wife of Sanford Cluxton, of Omaha, Nebraska.

Chester Stephens was married Nov. 6, 1869, to Miss Rosa E. Hobbs, of Green county, Wis., a daughter of John and Eliza (Proctor) Hobbs, her parents both born and bred near Gloucester, England. They came to America in 1846, and very soon made a location in Lafayette county, Wis. To Mr. and Mrs. Chester Stephens came children as follows: (1) Ralph, born Oct. 30, 1873, remains at home, and is unmarried; (2) Lettie May, born May 24, 1877, is the wife of Henry Wieman, of Woodford, Lafayette county; (3) Marble C., born Dec. 30, 1880, is at home, unmarried, as is his younger brother, (4) Clay Irving, who was born May 23, 1882.

MRS. CHESTER STEPHENS

CHESTER STEPHENS

Chester Stephens was one of the pioneer settlers in Jordan township, had made his way to a comfortable and independent position, and owned at the time of his death a splendid farm, comprising 360 acres, well improved; he also had considerable personal property. He passed away May 12, 1896, and is remembered as a man who more than met the expectation of his neighbors in many important particulars.

Mrs. Stephens was born in England Aug. 20, 1842, and is now spending her days on the old home place. A woman of more than ordinary character, she has a good memory, is a wide reader, and is well informed on items of current interest. She is a kind neighbor, and enjoys the esteem of a host of friends. For many years in her younger days she was a teacher in Green county, and she has never allowed her intellectual faculties to dull for want of use. Her judgment is good, her manners genial and hospitable, Mrs. Stephens knowing full well how to entertain those whom she receives in her hospitable home.

JOHN F. TALMADGE. Among the many prosperous farmer citizens of Albany, Green county, who have retired to that flourishing town to spend at ease their declining years, is John F. Talmadge, the subject of this sketch, who is also a veteran of the Civil war.

Our subject was born in Morris county, N. J., July 23, 1837, a son of Rudolph and Anna (Ayers) Talmadge, both of whom were natives of New Jersey. Of a family of five children, but three now survive: John F., our subject; Virginia, who is the wife of George W. Winter, of Durand, Ill.; and Samuel V., of Beloit, Wis. Mr. Talmadge's paternal grandfather was of Holland descent, and was a farmer in the State of New Jersey, where he died in 1856, well advanced in years, leaving a family who have all since passed away. The maternal grandfather was a well-known physician in New Jersey, and died in that State. He reared a large family, and had a son in the Mexican war.

Rudolph Talmadge, the father of our subject, was a hatter by trade, following that line for many years in New Jersey. But when he saw a family growing up about him he decided to move to the great West, and secure lands on which to rear them and provide for their future comfort. In 1856 he came to Wisconsin, locating at a small place called Jug

Prairie, in Union township, Rock county, where he bought sixty acres of land, which he farmed for seven years. Selling this farm, which he had improved, he bought 120 acres in Brooklyn township, Green county, which he later sold to his son, our subject, and bought the adjoining 100 acres, in 1866, living on that place for a number of years; his wife died there, at the age of seventy-two. A number of years later his son Samuel became the owner of the place, Mr. Talmadge moving into Belleville, where his death occurred in 1889, when he was aged seventy-six. Although not identified with any church, he was a good and worthy man; his wife belonged to the M. E. Church for many years.

John F. Talmadge, our subject, was reared in Morris county, N. J., and attended the district schools, remaining there until the family removed to Wisconsin. He has been a resident of Green county since 1862. Beginning to make his own way in life, he worked by the month at first, then farmed land on shares for several years, meeting with encouraging success. On Jan. 1, 1864, he enlisted in the Union army, for service in the Civil war, entering Company K, 3d Wis. V. I., and faithfully performed the duties of a private soldier until the close of the struggle. Returning to his home after the end of the strife, Mr. Talmadge exchanged his musket for a plow, and settled down to agricultural life upon the 120-acre farm which he purchased from his father. This he rented in 1891, and in 1892 sold it, having bought a comfortable home in Albany, where he now resides at his ease, enjoying the reward of his early life of toil.

Our subject was married, Sept. 24, 1865, to Miss Sarah J. Carle, a daughter of B. F. and Mary Carle, and five daughters were born to this union: Francena, who married George S. Smout, lives on a farm in Albany township; she has two children, Roscoe and Merl. Hattie, who married Sherman Butts, lives in Green county, and has one child, Wesley. Mary, who married Henry Montgomery, lives in Swea. Iowa, and has two children, William and Blanch. Lota keeps house for her father. Gertrude died in her fourth year. Mr. Talmadge was bereaved by the death of his wife, in 1894, when she was aged forty-eight; she was a devout member of the M. E. Church.

Politically our subject belongs in the ranks of the Republican party, and has been called upon to fill the position of district clerk a number of times. Socially he is connected with Erastus Hoyt Post, No. 69, G. A. R., and is highly esteemed by his comrades. His position in Albany is considered to be that of a representative citizen, who well typifies the best element of substantial, honest citizenship.

WILLIAM TENNANT, one of the well-known veterans of the war of the Rebellion, who gladly offered his life for the Union, and fought bravely to maintain the government he loved so dearly, was born in Yorkshire, England, May 25, 1844, a son of William and Margaret Tennant, also natives of England. In 1852 the family immigrated to America and located at New Diggings, Wis., in Lafayette county. In 1857 the father and children moved to Mount Ida, the mother having died some time previously, and settled in Section 33. There the father died in 1872. After the death of his first wife he was married again, to a widow with two sons, David and William May, the former of whom is deceased. Our subject was one of a family of seven, three sons and four daughters.

The war record of William Tennant is very interesting. He enlisted Oct. 19, 1864, in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I., commanded by Col. Rusk. The regiment had already been in the field, and our subject joined it at Atlanta, participating in the famous march to the sea, and also up through the Carolinas; he was then taken sick with the terrible Southern fever, and sent to hospital. Later he was taken to convalescent camp, and finally rejoined his regiment and marched to Washington, where the 25th was mustered out. Mr. Tennant, however, was transferred to Company B, 12th Wis. V. I., and sent to Louisville, Ky., where he was honorably discharged on July 16, 1865, participating in the exercises at that city when Gen. Grant reviewed the troops. After the close of the war he returned to Grant county, where he has made his home ever since.

William Tennant was married, in Grant county, to Miss Mary Frances Trapp, daughter of James V. Trapp, a native of Pennsylvania, who removed to New York, where he married Abby Willis, and thence migrated to Wisconsin, locating at Mount Ida. Mr. Trapp enlisted in Company C, 20th Wis. V. I., in Capt. McDermott's company, serving three years and thirteen days. His death occurred Feb. 19, 1892, at his home in Mount Ida township; his wife died some years before. Mr. and Mrs. Trapp had three children; George, who died at the age of twenty-two; Alphonso; and Mrs. Tennant. Mr. and Mrs. Tennant have two children, James William and Cora.

In politics Mr. Tennant is a Republican, and ardently supports the candidates of that ticket. Upright in all his dealings, he has gained a name for himself throughout the community as a man whose word is never to be doubted, and has many friends.

JAMES EDMUND MCKINNY, for many years a resident of Lancaster, Grant county, represents one of the oldest pioneer families of the county of which he was long one of the most respected and opulent citizens.

Joseph McKinny, father of James E., was born near Nashville, Tenn., in 1802, a son of John McKinny. He first married, in his native county, Miss Susan Overby, and then moved to Kentucky, thence to Sangamon county, Ill., living in the latter county about seven years. Thence, in April, 1835, he came overland with an ox-team and an old-fashioned wagon to Grant county, Wis., and purchased government land in Boyce Prairie, Lancaster township, Andrew Jackson being at that time President of the United States; the land office was at Mineral Point. Mr. McKinny improved his tract, and resided upon it until 1875, when he sold out and moved with his wife to Texas, for climatic reasons. They became homesick, and returned north, but as their youngest daughter had married in Texas and remained there they eventually returned South. Mr. McKinny died in Kaufman, Texas, Jan. 12, 1892, and there his second wife, Mrs. Anna (Robbins) McKinny, whom he married in 1857, is still living, at the age of eighty-one years. Joseph McKinny was a strong man physically, and exceedingly industrious. He joined the Methodist Church at the age of twenty-four years, and was faithful to his belief to the last. By his doors were always open to the clergy. By his first marriage he became the father of twelve children, only four of whom survive: Richard, who lives in Pottawattamie county, Iowa; James E., whose name opens this biographical review; Charles Wesley, in Montana; and Joseph Henry, in Pottawattamie county, Iowa. Those who passed away were Nicholas H., the eldest son, who entered the Union service in 1861, and died at the close of the war in hospital at Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. Sarah Jane Borah; Mrs. Mary Jones, who died in California; Mrs. Susan Ann Richards and Mrs. Emily Utt, in the same state; and three who died in childhood. By the second marriage there were born four children: George is in Pennsylvania; Luther died at the age of twelve years; Albert is in Oklahoma; and Mrs. Luella Lyde lives in Texas.

James E. McKinny was born on the homestead in Lancaster township, Aug. 13, 1838, and was the only one of the family to cling to the place of his nativity, where he lived continuously from his birth until 1900, with the exception of three years, when he was first married, during which time he had his residence in Potosi township. His marriage took place in 1861, to Miss Eliza Ellen Reed, daughter of John and Sarah (Foraker) Reed, who came from Ohio to Grant county, Wis., in 1858. To this happy union have been born five children: Laura, Mrs. Fahay, of Lancaster; Ellsworth; Nellie, wife of Mr. Ames, a teacher at River Falls, Wis.; Cora, Mrs. Hoover, of Illinois; and Marie, who is still under the parental roof.

Mr. McKinny was one of the most successful farmers and stock growers in Grant county, owning a splendid tract of land in Sections No. 22 and 23, with a beautiful modern dwelling. On Feb. 28, 1900, he left Grant county and settled in Barron, Barron county, Wis., where he built a nice modern dwelling. He and his son Ellsworth bought out the lumberyard in that place, and are now conducting a retail lumber business. The son has also erected a nice residence in Barron. For twenty-four years Mr. McKinny voted the Democratic ticket, then became a Republican, and is now a strong Prohibitionist. In religion he is a Methodist, and there lives no more highly respected man in his community, his wife fully sharing in the esteem in which he is held.

JACOB MILLER, one of the veterans of the war of the Rebellion, and ex-sheriff of Grant county, is one of the influential factors in the political and social life of Boscobel, Wisconsin.

Mr. Miller was born in Des Moines county, Iowa, in 1845, son of William and Lucinda (Duke) Miller. William Miller was a native of Kentucky, and was married there, his wife also have been born in that State. After their marriage they migrated to Des Moines county, Iowa, in 1843, while it was still a Territory. About 1849 the family removed to Iowa county, Iowa, where they resided at first on a farm, but later William Miller purchased and operated a sawmill. During the war of the Rebellion he not only served himself, but gladly contributed all of his sons who were old enough to shoulder a musket, David Duke and Solomon J., both of whom were members of Company I, 28th I. V. I., with their father. The latter served about sixteen months, and then was honorably discharged for disability. David D. Miller entered the regiment at its organization, and served faithfully until the close of the war; while Solomon J. Miller, who was too young at the time of organization, enlisted as soon as old enough. David D. Miller now resides near Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and Solomon J. Miller is a resident of South Dakota. Another son, a noted blind musician, resides at Millersburg. Henry Ward Miller, another son, died at the age of fourteen. A daughter, Elizabeth, married George Dedmore, who also served in Company I, 28th I. V. I., and died in the service; she is now the wife of Peter Cardy, who served in the same regiment and is now a resident of Millersburg. Another daughter, Mary Ellen, married Alfred Redmond, a lumber dealer at Missouri Valley Junction. William Miller, the father, died in 1878, and the mother passed away in 1872.

Jacob Miller passed his boyhood days with his parents. Upon the breaking out of the Civil war he was fired with the same spirit of patriotism which animated his father and brothers. Twice he enlisted, only to be rejected on account of his youth, but undaunted, the brave boy enlisted for the third time, and was successful, this last enlistment being at Washington, Iowa. The captain of the company wrote his mother, and she, realizing that he was determined to go, gave her consent, especially as this officer was a friend of the family and an excellent man. Thus, after many struggles, Jacob Miller became a soldier, and a member of Company I, 18th I. V. I. The regiment went direct from Iowa to St. Louis, thence to Sedalia, and from there to Springfield, Mo., where they did garrison duty for a year. When Gen. Marmaduke attacked Springfield the 18th took a prominent part in the conflict, in which the Confederates were defeated and pursued to the Ozark mountains, in Arkansas, where they were overtaken at the foot of Boston Mountain. The 18th then went to Clarksville, Ark., remaining there for a short time; proceeded to Pea Ridge, and then to Van Buren, Ark., doing garrison duty for several months. They were then ordered to Fort Smith; thence to Darden, on the Arkansas river, where they again did garrison duty until Gen. Banks' Red River expedition, when they were sent to Prairie d' Ann. There the Union forces repulsed an attack of Gen. Price's troops, and proceeded to Camden, in the same State, with the expectation of reinforcing Gen. Steel's command at Shreveport. La., but, Gen. Banks suffering defeat, that part of the programme was not carried out. However, the 18th participated in a battle at Poison Springs, about sixteen miles from Camden, with three companies of the 2d Kansas Colored Regiment, against a large force of Confederates. The Union troops were guarding a wagon train which was engaged in foraging. Owing to the superior numbers of the Confederate force the train was captured, but the Union troops escaped, and started for Little Rock. The enemy pursued them, and a battle ensued at Saline river, in which the Confederates were defeated. Crossing the river, the Union troops encountered another force of Confederates, and were thus between two fires, but finally reached Little Rock, and from there proceeded to Van Buren. From this point they marched through the Indian Territory to a place near Fort Scott, Kans., for the purpose of intercepting Gen. Marmaduke. Returning to Van Buren, the regiment remained at that point until the close of the war, going thence to Little Rock, where it was honorably mustered out July 19, 1865.

After the war Jacob Miller engaged in teaching school in Iowa for some time; then worked at the carpenter's trade, which he had learned before the war, and also farmed. In 1877 he became a resident of the town of Lancaster, Grant Co., Wis., where he worked at his trade, removing to Fennimore in 1884. In 1892 Mr. Miller was elected sheriff of Grant county, and proved himself a very conscientious and efficient official. In addition to this office he has served as justice of the peace, town clerk, and trustee in Fennimore, giving unbounded satisfaction.

In 1878 Jacob Miller was married to Mrs. Mary Ellen Lickel, a native of Pennsylvania, and four children grace their home: Garfield, born Jan. 24, 1880, who, following the example set by his brave father so many years before, enlisted in the 4th Wisconsin Regiment; Vesta, born in 1884; Carrie Anna, born in 1888; and Josephine, born in 1893.

Mr. Miller is a member of John McDermott Post, G. A. R., of Boscobel; is also a member of the Masonic, Odd Fellows and K. of P. fraternities, and is a Republican in politics. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are very popular, and justly so, possessing as they do so many admirable qualities, and may be regarded as true representatives of the best interests of the community in which they live.

ALONZO B. TEASDALE, a prominent citizen of Cassville, now retired from active business cares, is a native of Grant county, born in Beetown Jan. 21, 1849, a son of Wilson and Maria S. (Smith) Teasdale, the former a native of New York, the latter of Indiana, where their marriage was celebrated. The father was born in 1810, and in early life came West. In 1844 he moved to Muscatine, Iowa, and a year later came to Cassville, Wis. In 1847 he located in Beetown, where he worked at his trade, that of a blacksmith, for two years. Going overland to California in 1849, he was engaged in blacksmithing in Sacramento for a time, and in 1850 returned to Beetown, Wis., by way of the Isthmus and New York City. In 1853 he moved to Cassville, where he continued to follow his chosen occupation throughout the remainder of his life, dying there in 1879. He was a Democrat in politics, and was widely and favorably known throughout Grant county. His wife also died in Cassville, Jan. 2, 1895. To this worthy couple were born five sons, namely: James L., a resident of Cassville; Theodore, who was killed on the railroad at Cassville, in 1898; Alonzo B.; Frank W., who died in 1898 in Cassville; and Clark, a resident of that place.

The boyhood and youth of Alonzo B. Teasdale were spent in Beetown and Cassville, and in the schools of the latter place he acquired his literary education. On starting out in life for himself he entered the government employ, being connected with surveys and harbor work, and for twenty-three years he was engaged in similar operations on both the upper and lower Mississippi. A man of good business and executive ability, industrious, energetic and persevering, he accumulated a handsome competence, and in 1895 was able to lay aside all business cares. He is now living a retired life, enjoying the fruits of his former toil. He is, however, interested in mining. He owns a fine brick residence in Cassville, where he makes his home, and also has a good brick business block at that place.

Mr. Teasdale was married at Cassville, in 1895, to Miss Clara Voigt, a native of that place, and a daughter of Peter Voigt, whose sketch appears on another page of this volume. To this union have been born two children, Charles William and Harold T. In his political views Mr. Teasdale is a Democrat, but has never cared for the honors or emoluments of public office, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to his business interests, and he is one of the prominent and influential citizens of his town. His has been an active and useful life, and he well deserves the prosperity that has come to him. Socially he is a member of Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M.

ARCHIBALD McKELLAR, M. D., who since 1888 has been engaged in the successful practice of his profession in Blanchardville, Lafayette county, is a young man of fine personal address and high attainments. He was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, in 1862, son of Archibald McKellar, Sr., who still resides in Canada, his family consisting of three children, Archibald and two daughters.

Dr. McKellar was educated at the Western University and Collegiate Institute, in London, Canada, and was graduated in his medical course in 1888, after which he went immediately to New York City, where for six months he pursued a post-graduate course in polyclinics. He then located in Belleville, Wis., but the removal of Dr. K. T. Rostad, who for eleven years had been Blanchardville's popular physician, to a new field of labor at Spring Valley, Wis., caused him to relinquish his office at Belleville, and remove to Blanchardville. Through his Scottish ancestry he inherits careful business qualifications, and has opened a drug store in connection with his practice, which has proven a most successful venture. He has built up a large and lucrative practice in his profession, and is one of the most popular physicians in the county. Outside of his profession, Dr. McKellar is highly educated, and is a great student, spending nearly all the time not actually demanded by his business and profession in close study and reading. For five years before entering upon his medical course he engaged in teaching.

Dr. McKellar wedded Miss Jessie Monteith, daughter of William Monteith, who with several brothers settled early in southwestern Wisconsin and became prominent in public affairs. The Doctor's happy home has been brightened by one daughter, Jessie May, and the entire family are very popular.

C. D. BLANCHARD, one of the prosperous farmers and enterprising citizens of Marion township, Grant county, is one of the native sons of that settlement, having been born there April 15, 1851, a son of David L. and Clarissa (Walker) Blanchard, both natives of New York.

The father of our subject was a single man when he came to Grant county, entering land from the government, and settling in Section 36. Here he married, his wife being a daughter of Robert and Lydia Walker, who were also born in New York. The newly-married couple settled down to farm life upon the place our subject now occupies, but in 1862 the father removed to Boscobel, and died the following year. His wife survived until 1865. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and he left an untarnished name to his four children: C. D.; George, a resident of Fennimore; Lydia, now Mrs. Clark, of Fennimore township; and R. D., who enlisted in the Spanish-American war, was located at Anniston, Ala., and is now collector at one of the ports in the Philippines.

Our subject was reared and educated in Boscobel, after which he worked until he accumulated sufficient money to purchase the old homestead. After coming into possession of same Mr. Blanchard made many improvements, erected new buildings, and now has one of the finest farms in the county.

In 1877 Mr. Blanchard married, in Marion township, Mary Ann Reeve, daughter of William and Ann (Feer) Reeve, natives of England, who came to Marion township in the early days of Grant county. Mr. Reeve died in Marion township in 1891, but his wife still survives, living at Elroy, Wis. Six children have been born to our subject and his wife:

Leon Manuel (a resident of Hickory Grove township), Burton, David, Paul, Mattie and Gladys.

Mr. Blanchard is a member of the school board, and has served as school clerk. He is an active Republican in politics. He is highly respected throughout the community, and is justly regarded as one of the representative men of Grant county.

REUBEN T. HOLCOMB, the present popular and efficient clerk of the circuit court of Green county, has been a resident of Monroe, Wis., for a number of years, and is regarded as one of the brightest and most progressive representatives that the younger generation of the State presents. Mr. Holcomb was born in the town of Adams, Green county, Feb. 12, 1864, and is a son of Reuben and Sarah (Wilderman) Holcomb, the father being a native of New York and the mother of Illinois. They were the parents of three sons and two daughters, and four of their children are now living: James A., of Woonsocket, S. Dak.; Ernest H., of Adams township; Reuben T.; and Jennie, the wife of Henry Knowlton, of Canton, S. Dak. The paternal Holcomb was born in Monroe county, New York, May 16, 1816, and was brought by his parents to the town of Hartland, in that State, when a year old. Five years later his father died, and his childhood and youth were passed in the homes of various kinsmen. When he was twenty-five he went west into Michigan, and had homes first in Lapeer county, and afterwards in Oakland county. In 1844 he made a brief visit to what was then the Territory of Wisconsin. He returned to Michigan to spend the summer, and late in the fall of the same year he returned to what was then Iowa county, and entered land near the town of Fayette. He spent several years working at his trade of carpenter and joiner, and in 1849 became the owner of eighty acres of land in the town of Adams, Green county. This was in Section 13, and he soon after entered adjoining land, and was the owner of a very considerable farm. In 1855 Mr. Holcomb and Sarah E. Wilderman were married, and began their domestic life in a small log house that was standing on the farm in Section 13. In 1866 they put up a large and attractive frame house which was their home until they left the farm to live in Monroe, in October, 1897. When Mr. Holcomb retired from active farming he was the owner of three hundred acres of land, and for some years had been actively engaged in cattle breeding. He died May 12, 1899. His father, Apolas Holcomb, died when a young man, leaving three sons and one daughter. James Wilderman, the father of Sarah, whose name appears above, was born in Pennsylvania, of Dutch descent, and all his life was a farmer. He moved to Illinois in the early days, and settled in St. Clair county, near East St. Louis, where he died well advanced in years. He had a numerous family.

Reuben T. Holcomb, the present clerk of the circuit court of Green county, grew to manhood on the farm in Adams township, and received a very fair schooling in the local schools. He became especially proficient in all matters relating to a business and commercial life, and early turned his attention to trade as an appropriate field for his energies. He was clerk in a store at Monticello two years, and in the fall of 1896 was elected clerk of the circuit court, again in 1898, and again in the fall of 1900, and is serving the county in that position to the general satisfaction of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Holcomb was married Nov. 6, 1890, to Miss Amber Fessenden, a daughter of Elliott and Aurilla (Loveland) Fessenden, and two children have been born of this union: Trella May and Ralph Elliott. Mr. Holcomb belongs to the Masonic order, and is a member of Smith Lodge, No. 31, A. F. & A. M. He also holds membership in the Knights of the Globe. He is a Republican, and lives at No. 830 East Russell street. He owns a quarter section of land in Roberts county, South Dakota, and, with his two brothers, holds an undivided interest in the old homestead in the town of Adams.

SAMUEL H. HAMAN is one of the prosperous farmers of Sylvester township, Green county, owning a finely improved farm of 200 acres, located within five miles of the pleasant little city of Monroe.

Frederick W. Haman, his father, was born in Saxony, Germany, June 20, 1808, and came to America in his youth, settling at Reading, Penn. In 1834, in Berks county, that State, he married Mary Edelman, a daughter of Peter Edelman, the latter one of the early German settlers of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Haman removed to Green county, Wis., in 1852, their family consisting of two children: Margaret C., Mrs. C. Meythaler, died in April, 1899, in her fifty-ninth year; Samuel H. is the only survivor. The death of the father took place in Monroe in 1884, and Mrs. Mary Haman died in July, 1885, aged seventy-five years.

Our subject was born in Berks county, Penn., Aug. 6, 1844, and was reared to manhood on the farm in Green county, where he attended the district schools, and where he has been engaged almost all his life. During the war of the Rebellion he was among those who volunteered to preserve the Union, on Aug. 10, 1862, entering Company H, 3d Wisconsin Cavalry, under Capt. Stout; he was principally connected with the Army of the West as a scout, being honorably discharged on June 10, 1865, at Little Rock, Arkansas.

Returning to his home in Sylvester township, Mr. Haman resumed farming, and has attained great success, his fertile land, brought to a perfect state of cultivation, his fine house, and excellent barns and buildings, testifying to the success which has rewarded his efforts. He is quite extensively engaged in dairying, and in 1894 built a cheese factory on his farm, which is still in successful operation, being liberally patronized by many of his neighbors. Although he started in life a poor man, he has by his own efforts accumulated possessions, and at the same time has retained the esteem of the neighbors among whom his life has been passed.

Mr. Haman's first marriage, to Miss Angeline Stauffacher, of Green county, took place on Jan. 6, 1870. She was a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Speich) Stauffacher, of Sylvester, who were born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, and were among the old settlers of Green county. Seven children were born to this union: Jacob F., born in 1870, is station agent of the Illinois Central railroad at McConnell, Ill.; Mary E., born in 1872, is the wife of Edward Kundert, a hardware merchant of Monroe; John W., born in 1873, is studying theology in the Evangelical College at Naperville, Ill.; Samuel W. was born in 1876; Levi H. was born in 1878; Lydia A., born in 1880, is a teacher in the common schools of Green county; and George L. was born in 1883. Mrs. Haman died Oct. 24, 1885, and our subject was married (second) to Miss Minnie C. Schaffer, of Monroe, Wis., on Feb. 16, 1887. Mrs. Haman is the daughter of Karl G. and Augustina L. (Giese) Schaffer, who were natives of Germany, and came to America about a half century ago, settling in Monroe, where Mr. Schaffer followed the trade of blacksmith for many years. Of this union have been born four children: Karl H., in 1888; Howard M., in 1890; E. Eugene, in 1893; and Theodora L., in 1897.

Mr. Haman is a staunch and ardent Republican, and has been called to serve in many of the local offices of the town, efficiently performing the duties of school director, treasurer and member of the township board. For thirty-seven years he has been a member of the Evangelical Church of Juda, giving freely to every good cause, and by precept and example testifying to the honesty of his professions. His aim has been to thoroughly equip his children with good educations, and he has taken a deep interest in the progress of everything looking to the advancement of his section, being justly regarded as one of the best citizens of Sylvester township.

WILLIAM HENRY JACQUES. Prominent among the soldier citizens of Fayette, Lafayette county, whose gallant deeds contributed toward the making of history during the stirring days of the Civil war, is the well-known subject of this sketch.

William Henry Jacques was born in Luzerne county, Penn., in 1846, a son of Lewis V. Jacques, who had a family of four sons and five daughters. One of the brothers of our subject, Isaac Jacques, is well known throughout Lafayette county.

The war record of our subject commenced with his enlistment, in February, 1864, and closed with his honorable discharge, on June 17, 1865. Prior to his enlistment he had gained valuable experience in the Pennsylvania State militia, and he was actively engaged in the field at the battle of Gettysburg. He took part in the siege of Petersburg, as well as Richmond, at which latter city he remained on duty until his discharge, on account of a severe injury received at Petersburg, from which he has never fully recovered. While our subject was engaged in defending his country his parents removed to Wisconsin, settling in Lafayette county, and upon the young man's return from the scene of battle he also located in Lafayette county.

Mr. Jacques was married to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Ethridge, and their home has been made happy by the birth of three sons and two daughters. Mr. Jacques is a member of Harvey Post, No. 45, G. A. R., and is very popular in the organization, as well as among the people in the community, where he bears an honored name.

WILLIAM C. MEYER, retired harness merchant of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, born Sept. 22, 1828, and in that country his parents, Carl and Regina Meyer, passed their entire lives.

Mr. Meyer was quite well educated in his native city, where he also learned harness-making, upholstering and paper-hanging. He was a soldier in the German army in 1849, at the time of the Italian revolution under the leadership of Garibaldi, and in 1852 came to America in a sailing-vessel, landing at New Orleans during a yellow fever epidemic. He started by steamboat up the Mississippi river, and was quarantined two weeks at St. Louis. Eventually, in company with a friend, he reached Galena, Ill., before the expiration of the year, found work as a day laborer, and later at his trade, for a Mr. Miller. At Galena, the same year, he (first) married Miss Fredericka Kohler, who was born in Germany in 1831, and came to America in the same vessel with himself. In the same year, 1852, Mr. Meyer brought his bride to Platteville, which city has ever since been his home. In Platteville Mr. Meyer worked at his trade of harness-maker for a Mr. Lambert, and then purchased a farm near the city, cleared off the superfluous timber, erected a dwelling and other necessary buildings, and in 1861 placed his father-in-law in charge, while he returned to the city and resumed work at his trade. He is interested in the Platteville Canning Factory, and is a member of the board of directors of that concern.

In 1869 our subject had the misfortune of losing his wife, who left him five children, viz.: William, who was born in Platteville, married a Miss Kopp, who has borne him six children, Charles, Paulina, Samuel, Laura, Elsie and Emma; the father now carries on a harness trade in partnership with a brother-in-law, Peter Pitts. Rosie, the wife of Peter Pitts, is the mother of seven children, Leora, Mabel, Albert, Edward, Ella, Herbert and Wilbur. John, also a harness-maker, lives in Whittemore, Iowa; he has one child, Edna. Samuel, a carriage trimmer at Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., is a married man, and the father of two children, Reuben and Lanette. Martha was educated in the State Normal School in her native city of Platteville, where she is at present a teacher in the graded schools.

In 1871 William C. Meyer married for his second wife Miss Paulina Geyer, a resident of Platteville, but a native of Potosi, born in 1851, and a daughter of George G. Geyer, who came from Germany, settled on a farm in Grant county, and here passed the remainder of his life. To this second union was born, in August, 1872, George F. Meyer, who was educated at the State Normal of Platteville, and is at present engaged in the lumber business with Thomas Metcalf; he married Miss Ida Frederick, daughter of A. B. Frederick, a graduate from the State Normal and a school teacher.

In politics Mr. Meyer is a Republican, and served as alderman from 1880 until 1887; was one of the committee appointed to superintend the erection of the city hall; has also served on the school board twelve years, and for eleven years was treasurer of that board, of which responsible position he is the present incumbent. In religion Mr. Meyer and family are devout Presbyterians, Mr. Meyer having been an ardent worker in his congregation for upward of forty-five years.

Mr. Meyer has seen Platteville grow from a small village to a thriving city of magnificent homes and prosperous business industries, and has been no small factor in promoting that progress. In 1861 he purchased a lot on which he erected his pleasant home, and drew to his neighborhood many others who made similar improvements. Although comparatively poor when he first came to the city, his integrity and excellent management have brought him to the front, and he and his family now stand among the most substantial and most highly esteemed residents of Platteville and Grant county.

REV. H. H. BROCKHAUS. Few historical topics are more replete with interest than the story of the development and growth of the church upon the frontier, when the minds and energies of men and women alike were concentrated chiefly upon material growth, and brawn usurped the place of piety. It was in such soil (far from fertile) that the Evangelical Association first dropped its seed, prayerfully, perhaps fearfully. The primal gatherings of the denomination were held in one of the early school houses, Rev. J. Sill being the first preacher. He was stationed at New Glarus, Green county, but found time to minister, as occasion required, to the spiritual needs of the mission at Monroe. He was succeeded by the Rev. L. Buehler, under whose direction a Sunday school was organized in 1858, the first church edifice being erected two years later. His structure was primitive, alike in its exterior and in its furnishings; its cost exceeding $160. The sum seems ridiculously small, yet it must be borne in mind that the amount named covered only the cost of material, the labor of erection being cheerfully and gratuitously rendered by willing hands. It was the first church to be erected in Monroe where the truths of the Gospel were proclaimed to the people in the German tongue. The members of the church were liberal in their conception of the niceties of creed, and broad in their treatment of their fellow Christians. They esteemed their brethren of the Lutheran Church, and for a time all dwelt in spiritual harmony, the comparatively small number of German families virtually necessitating a community of religious effort, and a homogeneity of worship. Little by little, however, the numerical strength of the Lutherans increased, and the members of this sect erected their own house of worship, thus virtually separating themselves from their former collaborators in the religious field. The history of the denomination in Green county is, however, full of interest. After Mr. Sill's time services were conducted at the mission by Rev. L. Buehler, and the first resident pastor was the Rev. T. Von Wald, who remained for two years, followed by the Rev. Andrew Taruntzer, and after one year Rev. J. G. Esslinger succeeded him, and he in turn was followed by Rev. W. F. Schneider, whose pastorate extended over one year. He was a man of ripe learning, and subsequently became connected with the publishing house of the denomination, and continued to sustain that relation until his death. During his term of service here a new church building, costing $1,800, was erected, which was dedicated by the presiding elder, Rev. C. A. Schake. After Mr. Schneider's departure in 1864, Rev. J. G. Esslinger returned. Succeeding pastors were Revs. C. F. Finger, William Huelster, and J. M. Hammetter. The last named was succeeded by Rev. L. Buehler, in 1871, and he was followed by Rev. J. C. Brendel, in 1876. In the spring of that year the first Conference of the Association was held in Monroe. Rev. H. Uphoff followed, remaining three years, when he gave way to Rev. Peter Held, and he in turn to Rev. C. Gruen, who remained for only one year, being sent by the Conference as a home missionary to California. He was followed by Rev. C. Lahr, who is now living in retirement at Judd, Monroe county. Then came Rev. P. Speich, at present pastor of a church at Milwaukee, and he was succeeded by Rev. N. H. Messerschmidt, the present Presiding Elder of the Illinois Conference. His pastorate began in 1891, and during its continuance the present church (the third built by the congregation at Monroe) was erected, the membership having increased to 232. Rev. C. C. Wellso came after Mr. Messerschmidt. Rev. M. Gaurke followed him, and both these gentlemen are now stationed at Milwaukee. Mr. Gaurke was succeeded by the present pastor, the Rev. H. H. Brockhaus. The present church membership numbers 270, and the church itself, under the devoted zeal and piety of the eloquent clergyman who is its spiritual head, is in a most flourishing condition, and a potent element for good in the community. The congregation owns a commodious house of worship and a good parsonage.

Wm C. Meyer ^{Sen}

Frederick Brockhaus, the father of Mr. Brockhaus, emigrated from Germany, and settled in Brown Co., Wis., in 1845, and there the reverend gentleman himself was born, in 1860. Both parents are yet living, the father at the age of eighty and the mother, Mary Brockhaus, ten years her husband's junior. Mr. Brockhaus received his early educational training in the schools of Brown county, and was educated for the ministry at the Northwestern College. His first pastoral charge was at Forest Junction in Calumet county, Wisconsin, where he remained for two years. The following year he was pastor at Arlington, in this State, and afterwards spent two years at Arcadia, three at Alma and four at Mauston. From the last named place he came to Monroe, in May, 1899.

On Jan. 6, 1886, Mr. Brockhaus was married to Miss Augusta Barnetzke, daughter of William and Johanna Barnetzke, and seven children have blessed their union—three sons and four daughters.

THOMAS KINSMAN is one of the highly respected citizens of Platteville, Grant county, whose useful and well-spent life has not only gained for him the confidence of his fellow men, but has also secured for him a comfortable competence, which enables him to spend his declining days in ease and retirement.

A native of Wisconsin, Mr. Kinsman was born at Mineral Point Feb. 17, 1843, a son of Thomas and Mary (Wasley) Kinsman, natives of Cornwall, England, who at an early day crossed the Atlantic, taking up their residence in Iowa county, Wis., in 1841. There the father followed mining, but after his removal to Lafayette county, in 1849, he purchased land in Fayette township, and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. There he died in 1871. He was one of the first settlers of Iowa county, and was prominently identified with the early development and upbuilding of the State. Mrs. Kinsman also died in Lafayette county, in 1873. To them were born three children: Nicholas, now a resident of Dubuque, Iowa; Joanna, who died in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1869; and Thomas, Jr., our subject.

The boyhood and youth of Thomas Kinsman, Jr., were passed in Lafayette county, and after reaching man's estate he engaged in farming there, still owning a good farm, which he himself improved and placed under cultivation. In March, 1893, he laid aside all business cares, and is now living retired in Platteville. He was one of the gallant soldiers of the Civil war, having enlisted in Fayette township, Lafayette county, Aug. 14, 1862, in Company E, 31st Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war. After being mustered in, at Prairie du Chien, the regiment was assigned to the 20th Corps, Army of the Cumberland, and with that command participated in the battles of Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta, Averysboro and Bentonville. Mr. Kinsman was all through the Carolina campaign, was in the grand review at Washington, D. C., and was honorably discharged at Madison, Wis., July 7, 1865, after three years of faithful and arduous service on Southern battlefields.

In Lafayette county Mr. Kinsman was married, in 1865, to Miss Emma Jerusha Harris, who was born in Cornwall, England, and came to the United States in 1853, with her parents, John and Jerusha (Francis) Harris, also natives of Cornwall. The family located in Lafayette county, Wis., where the father was first engaged in mining, but he later turned his attention to farming, and improved a good farm in Fayette township, where he died in 1888. His widow now makes her home in Mineral Point. Their family numbered eight children, namely: Mrs. Emma Jerusha Kinsman; Mrs. Celia Farell, of Iowa county, Wis.; Mrs. Eliza Reynolds, of Mineral Point; John H., of Fayette township, Lafayette county; Mrs. Jane Cookings, of the same township; Mrs. Anna Dawe, of Mineral Point; George, of Des Moines, Iowa; and Melvina, of Mineral Point. Mr. and Mrs. Kinsman have six children: Delos, Marietta, Mabel, John, Flora and Thomas. Delos is a graduate of the Platteville Normal School, was at one time an instructor in the University of Chicago, and is now a teacher in the Wisconsin State University at Madison. He married Nellie Williams, of Cuba City, Grant county, and has one child, Georgia.

Fraternally Mr. Kinsman is a member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., and religiously both he and his wife are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His political support is always given to the men and measures of the Republican party, and he takes quite an active interest in politics, having served as town treasurer six years, assessor one year, and chairman of the town board one year while a resident of Fayette township, Lafayette county. As a citizen he ever stands ready to discharge any duty devolving upon him, and has manifested the same loyalty in days of peace as when he followed the old flag to victory in the Union cause.

JACOB HUFFMAN, a thrifty and wealthy farmer, resides on his well improved land, located three and one-half miles west of Monroe, Green county.

Our subject is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Jones) Huffman, who were among the pioneer settlers of Green county, coming here about 1845. By trade Mr. Huffman was a carder, and he built a carding mill in Jordan township in the early days, and also engaged in farming. He died in 1853. To him and his first wife were born eight children who reached mature years: Absalom, deceased; Solomon, deceased; William, deceased; James, a thrifty farmer of Clarno township; Ellen, who married Isaac Miller, and died in 1862, while on the overland trip to California, to join her husband in that State; Christina, who married John B. Starr, and now resides in Hardin county, Iowa; Elizabeth, who married Andrew Hiserote, of Nebraska; and Jacob. The second wife of Jacob Huffman, Sr., was Barbara Day, by whom he had two children: Daniel, who lives in Nebraska; and Mary, who married Herbert Barnes, of the same State. Mrs. Barbara Huffman, now Mrs. Block, lives near Oakdale, Nebraska.

When only one day old our subject lost his mother, but her place was supplied as nearly as possible by Abner and Anna Drake, close friends and schoolmates of Mrs. Huffman, who took him when a babe and gave him the love and tender care of parents. They were among the estimable and honored citizens of the community. Our subject was born in the town of Cadiz, April 8, 1847, reared on the farm now known as the John E. Hawthorn farm, and received his education in the district schools. Choosing an agricultural life, he is now one of the wealthy farmers of Clarno, his estate aggregating about 400 acres, well improved, with comfortable dwellings and a fine barn—the latter just completed—on the home place. Since 1877 Mr. Huffman has given considerable attention to bee culture, his apiary at one time comprising 225 swarms. He gathered 15,000 pounds of honey one season. On several occasions he has been called upon to prepare and read articles on bee culture at Farmers Institutes held at different points in the State. In recent years he has devoted much of his attention to dairying and the breeding of Poland China swine and Durham cattle.

The marriage of Mr. Huffman to Adelaide Day, a native of Jordan township, Green Co., Wis., was celebrated on April 7, 1871. She is a daughter of John and Maria (Tree) Day, of German origin, who were among the early settlers of Green county. A family of six children has been born of this union: Everett

A., born in 1872, resides at home, on the farm; John L., born in 1873, died in 1890; Annie May was born 1875; William E., in 1877; Cora Ellen, in 1881 (died in 1883); and Florence, in 1884 (died in 1889).

Although his ancestors and brothers are Democrats, our subject is a staunch Republican, and has been active in that party, upholding its principles. For the past twenty-five years he has held the office of school director, has served on the township board, and has been both agent and president of the Clarno Fire Insurance Co. Both he and his wife have long been consistent members of the U. B. Church, in which Mr. Huffman has held many of the offices, and has done much for the interests of the Sunday-school. Mr. Huffman has lived a life above reproach, and takes a just pride in the fact that he has neither sued a neighbor nor been sued, all differences of opinion having been amicably settled. A kind and indulgent man in domestic life, he is known as an honest citizen, and no man has lived for fifty-four years in Green county who enjoys higher regard than does our subject, Jacob Huffman.

ADOLPH LOEWI, the proprietor of a fine clothing and furnishing store in Beloit, Rock county, illustrates in his own career the possibilities of life in this country. He began life with little or nothing save a brave spirit, good natural abilities, and a profound determination to win out; and to-day, while he is by no means an old man, he has already achieved a success that many men fail to reach in a long life.

Mr. Loewi was born in Germany, near Nurnberg, Bavaria, June 2, 1854, and is a son of Jacob and Minnie (Scherer) Loewi, both German born and bred. They were the parents of six sons and six daughters, and six of their children are now living: Louise, wife of Abraham Strauss, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Herman, of Philadelphia; Joseph, of Baltimore; Sigmund, of Adelsdorf, Germany; Adolph; and Fannie, wife of Simon Strauss, of Adelsdorf. The senior Loewi was a dealer in leather, shoemakers' supplies, and crockeries, and afterward in grains and hops, in addition to the other lines. He died in 1878, at the age of seventy-six. His wife died in 1870, when fifty-seven. They were Hebrews, and always held loyally to their ancestral faith. His father lived to be ninety years old, and reared a family of three sons and five daughters. Mrs. Loewi's father died in Germany after reaching the age of ninety.

Adolph Loewi received his early schooling in Germany, attended business college at Bamberg for a year or more, and was well fitted for a commercial life. In 1868, when he was fourteen, he left home, and emigrated to the United States. He landed in Brooklyn, and secured an engagement as clerk in a clothing store the day after his arrival. He was steadily employed as a clerk until 1881, in March of which year he came to Beloit, and opened his present establishment, which under his efficient management has become a pronounced success. For twelve years Mr. Loewi was a partner with Moses Reitler, under the firm name of M. Reitler & Co. At the end of that time Mr. Loewi bought out his partner, and the style of the firm since the purchase has been A. Loewi & Co. His store is known as the Golden Eagle Clothing House, and he requires the help of four clerks and a lady cashier. Our subject was a director in the Second National Bank of Beloit for three years.

On Oct. 8, 1884, Adolph Loewi and Miss Sarah Cohen were united in matrimony, and they have one son, J. Victor. Mrs. Loewi's mother is Mrs. Rosina Cohen. Mr. and Mrs. Loewi are of the Hebrew faith, and are true to their faith and blood. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen, and is much esteemed as a devoted and reliable member of these fraternities. He is a Republican, and prides himself upon the fact that he votes a straight ticket. His home is at No. 623 Park avenue, where he built a fine residence in 1898.

Mr. Loewi is a prosperous and successful merchant, has an elegant store, and does a large business, which he has very largely developed by his own capacities and business energies. He is a typical self-made man, as he began a poor boy, and has conquered fate unaided, and is a highly respected citizen of the community.

AUGUST KETTLER, a retired business man of Platteville, Wis., came from the Fatherland, and the strongest and most creditable characteristics of the Teutonic race have been marked elements in his life, and have enabled him to win success in the face of opposing circumstances. He possesses the energy and determination which mark the people of Germany, and by the exercise of his powers he has steadily progressed, and has not only won a comfortable competence, but has commanded universal respect by his straightforward business methods.

Mr. Kettler was born in Hanover, Germany, July 3, 1837, a son of Henry and Louise (Kraus) Kettler, also natives of Hanover. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, came to the New World in 1856, taking passage at Bremen on a sailing vessel, and landing in New York after a voyage of six weeks. He came at once to Platteville, Wis., and opened up a farm in Smelser township, Grant county, to the improvement and cultivation of which he devoted his energies throughout the remainder of his life. His death occurred in 1877, and his wife died in the same township in 1886. They had four sons: Henry, a resident of Platteville; Conrad, who died in that city in December, 1899; August, of this review; and Frederick, a resident of Nebraska.

August Kettler passed his boyhood and youth in his native land, and was there educated. Coming to America in 1856, he has, since November of that year, made his home in Grant county, Wis. He learned the trade of a shoemaker, which he followed in Platteville until 1863, and then embarked in general merchandising at that place, successfully conducting a store there until 1888. The first building he owned on Second street was destroyed by fire, and he then erected a two-story frame building on the same street, which he occupied until purchasing a building on the corner of Main and Second streets. This building on Second street, and later (in 1873), his building on the corner of Main and Second streets, which he was occupying as a dry-goods store, were also destroyed by fire. Since then he has erected a good two-story brick block on the corner of Main and Second streets, which he still owns and which is now occupied by Henry Sanders as a general store.

In 1860, in Grant county, Mr. Kettler was married to Miss Julia Thompson, a native of Norway. Her father, Thomas Thompson, brought his family to America in 1849, and located on a farm in Green county, Wis., where he continued to make his home until death. Mr. and Mrs. Kettler have two children: Louise, wife of Henry Schambow, of Platteville, by whom she has one child, Clara; and Carrie, wife of Frank Burg, a clothing merchant of the same place, by whom she has two children, Frankie and Leo. In his political views Mr. Kettler is a Republican, and has faithfully served his fellow citizens as a member of the city council. He has also filled the office of jury commissioner of the county for the past three years, and has ever taken an active and commendable interest in public affairs. Religiously he and his wife hold membership in the Lutheran Church. Pleasant and genial in manner, he makes friends of those with whom he has come in contact either in business or social life, and is one of the popular and honored citizens of Platteville.

HENRY RODERICK, one of the old and honored citizens of the village of Juda, Green county, comes from German ancestry, and was born in Pennsylvania Nov. 1, 1816, where his parents, David and Magdalena (Landis) Roderick, were thrifty farming people of Fayette county, Penn. They had a family of seven sons and one daughter, John, Daniel, David, Jacob, Andrew, Samuel, Henry and Elizabeth. All except Henry are now deceased. The daughter married Daniel Smith. The Roderick family came from Germany some generations ago, and the remote ancestors of our subject were all Dunkards.

In 1842 Henry Roderick married Miss Mary Greenlee, of Fayette county, Penn., daughter of Jacob Greenlee, of the same county. They had ten children: Thomas J., deceased; William, of Green county; Samuel, who died in August, 1900; Jacob L., a farmer in the town of Decatur; Charles, deceased; David, a farmer in the town of Spring Grove; Lydia Ann, at home; Oliver, who died in childhood; Albert, a farmer in Sylvester; and Emma, wife of George Hemstreet, of Juda.

Henry Roderick was reared in the country, and obtained his education in the public schools. He grew to manhood on the farm, and removed from Fayette county, Penn., to Green county, Wis., in 1862. He began life a poor boy, and has made his own way in the world, and what he has he owes to his own courage, strength and persistence. Success has crowned his years in this State, and he owns a fine farm, consisting of 425 acres of well-improved land, worth at a low valuation at the present time, on a depressed market, at least sixty dollars an acre, together with much personal property. Mr. Roderick is now living in Juda, where he is retired from the cares of an active business life. He is a staunch Republican, and a consistent member and deacon of the Baptist Church. Mrs. Roderick was born in 1822, and died Oct. 17, 1900. She was a good Christian woman, and had proved herself a faithful wife and mother through fifty-eight years of married life. Mr. Roderick has a retentive memory, and is well posted on all the topics of the time. An honorable and upright life has been his; he has fashioned a noble character, and will leave behind a name of which his posterity may well be proud. Over sixty years ago he signed the Washingtonian pledge, and all these years has been a total abstainer from the use of intoxicating liquors and tobacco. His children have wisely followed in his teachings, and he earnestly advocates abstinence from the use of intoxicating beverages and tobacco for all young people.

ALLEN KIES. It is a well proved fact that the United States has shown above other countries examples of men rising by their own efforts, and also that here the tillers of the soil have had advantages over other professions. Every neighborhood has its worthy examples, and our subject, Allen Kies, of Belmont township, Lafayette county, has shown how successful a man may be when he devotes proper energy and industry to the development of a fertile soil.

Mr. Kies was born in Chenango county, New York, on July 14, 1828, and was a son of Daniel and Celia (Cole) Kies, who were both born in Massachusetts, the grandfather having been a soldier in the war of 1812, a son of Harry Kies, who bravely bore a musket in the Revolutionary war. Daniel Kies removed to the State of New York with his parents when a boy, developed there into manhood, married and remained until 1836, when he moved to Coles county, Ill., where he followed farming for some eight years. In June, 1844, he removed to Smelser, Wis., in which township he bought eighty acres of land and made his permanent home there, his death taking place in 1863, his wife surviving for three years. The family consisted of six members: Daniel, a soldier in the Civil war, married and settled at Fennimore, where he died; Ursula, deceased, married Isaiah Moody; Lucinda, deceased, married James Patterson;

Cynthia, deceased, married Samuel Vanatta; Louisa, the widow of James Ashmore, of Fenimore; our subject and Mrs. Ashmore being the only survivors of the family.

The educational advantages of our subject were limited to a few years while living in the State of New York, the family being in straitened circumstances, when removal was made to the West, and his help was required to assist in the upbuilding of a new home. In 1851 Mr. Kies married Miss Katherine Ashmore, of Belmont, Lafayette county, who belonged to one of the old pioneer families of Lafayette county. Samuel Ashmore, her father, was born in Tennessee in 1800, and married Margaret Loveless, a native of Kentucky. The young couple moved to Coles county, Ill., in 1828, and in 1846 located on a farm near Platteville, where they made a permanent home until late in life, his death occurring at the home of his son, in Dakota. Mrs. Kies was born in Coles county, Ill., attended the district schools and married there. Soon after locating in Smelser our subject entered 160 acres of government land, paying $1.25 per acre, and upon this he made many improvements, and in the fall of 1865 was able to sell at a very good price. After the sale of his first farm so advantageously, Mr. Kies purchased 400 acres near the Mound, in Lafayette county, this property having a few improvements, a small house and stable being included. Here our subject made preparations to carry on extensive farming and stock-raising, erecting a barn 126 feet in length for his cattle, and also put up other barns and out-buildings. This property remained the family home until 1890, when he bought the place of Thomas Bramley, consisting of 168 acres, near the line of Platteville township, and here he erected a new house and made many substantial improvements which have given him comfort for the declining years of himself and beloved helpmate, to whose cheerful companionship he owes so much.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kies were: Albert, born in 1852, married Alice Vanatta and they reside in Belmont, with six children, Cora, Emily, Walter, Edwin, Lewis and Jennie; Mary, born in 1854; George, born in 1856, married Mary Ganame, of Belmont, and has one daughter, Mary; James, born in 1860, married Etta Trenary, lives on a farm in Belmont township, and has one daughter, Gladys; David, born in 1863, married Delia King, of South Dakota, and resides on a farm in Clark county, Wis., with two children, Katie and Frederick; Daniel, born in 1865, married Nellie Bazinet and they reside near the Mound, with six children, Allen, Charles, Webster, Gideon, Helen and Frank; Amos, born in 1868, married Edith Nicholas, lives near his father's farm, and has one daughter, Ada; Eliza, born in 1870, was educated in the Platteville Normal school; Bertha, born in 1874, married George Ascott, and resides in Clark county, Wis.; Katie, born in 1878, was educated at the Platteville Normal school, where she was also thoroughly educated in music, and is now a successful teacher of the same. Politically Mr. Kies in his earlier years was a Democrat, but for the past twenty years has affiliated with the Republican party. Both he and wife are valued members of the M. E. Church and possess the esteem of every one in the community. Although Mr. Kies began life with many discouragements, his success is all the more creditable. During the many years he has lived in Wisconsin he has seen many changes and has been an active factor in the development of the township and county, ever ready to encourage any measure for the benefit of either.

SAMPSON UREN TREGONING, for the past fifty-five years a resident of Iowa county, and now living retired in the village of Cobb, is a native of Cornwall, England, born Feb. 21, 1830, in Redruth.

Barnard Tregoning, father of our subject, was also born in Cornwall, coming to the United States in 1845, and settling in the town of Linden, Iowa Co., Wis., where he successfully followed mining and farming. He died there in 1857, aged seventy-five years, a Whig in politics, and member of the M. E. Church, although reared in the Episcopal faith. In Cornwall he had married Frances T. Uren, who died in Linden township, Iowa Co., Wis., in 1860, aged sixty-eight years. This honored couple were the parents of four children: Elizabeth (Mrs. William Harris), who died in Michigan; John, who died at Mineral Point, Wis.; Frances (Mrs. T. Jaffray), who died in Australia; and Sampson U.

Sampson U. Tregoning came to the United States in 1846, and joined his father and brother in Iowa county, Wis. At the age of about twenty-seven years he bought a 160-acre farm in Eden township, then a part of Highland township, which he still owns, and which at that time was wild land, but under his diligent care became one of the finest and most productive farms in the township. Since 1891 Mr. Tregoning has lived in the village of Cobb.

On March 14, 1857, our subject was married to Mary Hallam, who was born in Great-ham, County of Rutland, England, a daughter of William and Mary (Clark) Hallam, both English people. Mrs. Tregoning came to the United States in 1855. Three children came of this union: William B., living in Nobles county, Minn.; and John C. and Mary Frances (Mrs. George Billings), both residing in Cobb, Wis. All the children have received liberal education, and are capable, useful citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Tregoning have nine grandchildren. In politics he is a lifelong Republican, and in religious faith he and his wife are consistent members of the M. E. Church in Cobb, which they helped to organize.

WILLIAM F. JOHNSON holds an enviable position among the prosperous and time-honored citizens of the town of Sylvester, Green county, in which town he owns a fine farm, on which he makes his home. He has become noted for his industrious habits and neighborly spirit.

Mr. Johnson was born in the East, a son of John and Nancy (Leeper) Johnson, both of whom were natives of Lawrence county, Penn., where John Johnson was born Sept. 9, 1797, and where he died Jan. 21, 1837. He was a son of John and Margaret Johnson, both natives of Ireland, from which country they came to America in the days preceding the American Revolution. John Johnson and Nancy Leeper were married about 1820, and to them were born seven children, the eldest of whom, (1) Margaret, became the wife of Harvey Baldwin, and both are now deceased. (2) David C. was married to Mary Cale, of Ohio, and is now living at Johnsonville, in that State. (3) Mary married Arney Biddle, and both are now deceased. (4) Robert was married to Miss Delia Dunn, of Pennsylvania, and both are now deceased. (5) William F. was born Feb. 1, 1830. (6) John is living in Ohio. (7) Martha, the widow of John Hoyette, lives at Newcastle, Pennsylvania.

William F. Johnson wedded Miss Sarah

Catherine Gilson, of Illinois, the marriage taking place at Newcastle, Penn., May 13, 1856. She was the daughter of James Gilson, a tailor by trade. To this union were born five children: (1) Annie M., born Feb. 24, 1857, is now the wife of George H. Pengra, a thrifty farmer of the town of Sylvester. (2) Franklin R., born Aug. 11, 1861, married Miss Fannie Ostrander, of the town of Jefferson, and is a prosperous farmer near Brooking, S. Dak. (3) Mary L., born March 25, 1864, is the wife of Charles Coats, of Juda. (4) Ada M., born Nov. 30, 1867, married Frank Mitchell, of Rock county, Wis. (5) Ira D., born Aug. 23, 1876, is unmarried, and is living at home. Mrs. Sarah Catherine Johnson died May 21, 1899, aged sixty-four years, seven months, one day. She was a consistent Christian, a devout member of the Methodist Church, and a loving wife and mother, and was a great help to her husband during the forty-five years they were together. She was a good woman, a cheerful and inspiring companion, and much of the success our subject has attained may fairly be attributed to her co-operation.

In the fall of 1856 Mr. Johnson came to the town of Sylvester and effected a settlement on section 14, and here he has followed farming for the last forty-five years. When he entered Wisconsin he was a poor man, but in the intervening years, by industry, thrift and wise management, he has become the owner of a fine farm of 210 acres, well equipped with everything that makes modern agriculture successful and attractive. He occupies a comfortable and cosy residence, and has erected farm buildings suited to all the needs of his work. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a Methodist. His character and standing in the community are above question, and his long and useful life merits and receives the good will of the people of the town.

ALEXANDER MORTON is one of the highly esteemed citizens of Green county, and enjoys the distinction of being the oldest pioneer settler of the county, having located there in 1836. Mr. Morton's grandfather, Thomas Morton, was a colonel in the war of 1812, serving at the battle of New Orleans with Andrew Jackson, in 1815. The father of our subject, James Morton, was a native of Tennessee, and married Mary Montgomery. They became the parents of twelve children: Elizabeth, Mary, Alexander (our subject), Thomas, William, Jane, James, Nancy, Francis, Sarah, Susan and Lottie.

Alexander Morton was born Nov. 29, 1814, in Spencer county, Ind., and spent the early part of his life on the frontier, in early life learning to swing an ax, drive a plow and fight both Indians and the wild beasts of the forests. Little of what we now deem an education was afforded the youth of that time in the frontier schools. Mr. Morton possessed an active mind, and his knowledge is that of experience, which is often of much more value than all the learning of books to a poor man struggling to conquer the hard conditions of pioneer life. The present home farm, consisting of 200 acres of fine land, worth $100 per acre, has been won by his own energy and honest toil, and he deserves credit for it, and the ease of life it enables him to enjoy.

The marriage of Mr. Morton took place in 1848, to Amy Kelley, of Green county, who was born May 3, 1829, in Vermilion county, Ind., her parents being among the first settlers there. The family came to Green county, Wis., in 1836. The marriage has been blessed with children as follows: Joseph, born in 1850; James, in 1852; Mary, in 1854; Olive, in 1859; Elizabeth C., in 1861; Laura Ellen, in 1863; and Charlie, in 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Morton have twenty-seven grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren. During his early years Mr. Morton was a strong Whig, but ever since the formation of the Republican party has advocated its teachings. Since residing in Green county he has been a witness to its wonderful development, and has always taken an active part in whatever seemed to promise benefit to his neighborhood. With his neighbors he has lived in peace and amity, and as an honorable citizen he well represents the prosperous township of Clarno.

WILLIAM MONROE, M. D., a member of the medical firm of Monroe & Monroe, is an old settler of Monroe, and has a host of friends throughout Green county and southern Wisconsin.

Dr. Monroe was born July 30, 1818, near Cincinnati, Ohio, son of William and Harriet (Thurston) Monroe, both natives of New York. They had two children, Lucy Ann and William, the former of whom married Major Robert W. Gray, of South Carolina, and is now deceased. The father was a student from boyhood, and when he became a man took up the practice of medicine, which was his calling throughout life. He prepared for his professional career in New York, and practiced in Ohio, dying near Cincinnati, when his son William was an infant of two months. His widow married, in 1831, Dr. John Loofbourow, and died in 1835, when forty-six years old. She and her first husband were members of the Baptist Church. Lemuel Monroe, the grandfather of our subject, was a veteran of two wars, the Revolution and the war of 1812. He lived to old age, was twice married, and had children by both wives. Daniel Green Thurston, the Doctor's maternal grandfather, was of English descent, and was a relative of Gen. Green, of Revolutionary fame. By occupation he was a farmer. He reached the age of eighty-two, and was the father of fourteen children.

Dr. William Monroe, whose name introduces this article, came to Mineral Point, Wis., in 1831, with his mother, sister and stepfather, and grew to manhood under their fostering care. He attended the Mineral Point school, and when he had completed the course of instruction there went back to Blendon, Ohio, that he might attend Washburn's College, then a celebrated Ohio institution. When a young man he followed lead mining near Mineral Point for several years, in the meantime reading for the medical profession, his preceptor being Dr. O. E. Strong, and later his stepfather, Dr. Loofbourow. He began the practice of medicine in the village of Fayette, twelve miles from Mineral Point, having an office there from 1844 to 1868, in which latter year he came to Monroe, where he has since remained, a diligent student of the more abstruse phases of his profession, and a faithful practitioner in the city and adjoining country.

Dr. Monroe and Miss Mary Jane, daughter of Zera and Caroline Beebe, were united in marriage Nov. 28, 1841, and five sons and five daughters have been born of this union. Six died in infancy and early childhood, four living to maturity, namely: Harriet L., Mettie Jane, William B. and Zera W. Harriet L. married Rev. M. B. Balch, a Methodist minister, now deceased, and she is living at Minneapolis; they had one child, William B. Mettie Jane lives at home. William is a physician, associated with his father; he is a graduate of Bellevue Hospital Medical College. Zera W. is also a practicing physician, associated with his father and brother, and is a graduate of Rush Medical, of Chicago; he married Miss Annie Benson, lives at Argyle, Wis., and has four children, Marie, Helen, Frances and Catharine.

William Howler M.D.

Dr. and Mrs. Monroe are members of the Christian Church at Monroe, and he is one of its trustees. He is a member of Smith Lodge, No. 31, A. F. & A. M., Palestine Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M., and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; also belongs to the I. O. O. F., and the Knights of Pythias. He is a valued member of the State Medical Society, and at an early day was associated with the physicians in the southern part of Wisconsin in what was known as the Southwestern Medical Society. Politically he is a Republican, and he was treasurer of Fayette township, Lafayette county, two terms. In 1867 Dr. Monroe was a member of the State Assembly, and made a good record in that body. He was a private in the Black Hawk war, and now draws a pension for his services in that struggle. He has made his home in Monroe thirty-two years, now living on West Washington street, and has been a resident of Lafayette and Green counties for over seventy years.

WILLIAM BEEBE MONROE, M. D., a representative of a family in which the practice of the healing art seems a kind of heredity, is now associated with his father and brother at Monroe, Green county, as a partner in the medical firm of Monroe & Monroe, and has built up a wide and flattering practice.

Our subject was born at Fayette, Wis., Oct. 5, 1861, a son of Dr. William and Mary J. (Beebe) Monroe, whose biographical history appears elsewhere. He was about nine years old when his parents removed to Monroe, and here he has since resided, with the exception of his school days abroad, and the time he was engaged in practice at Brooklyn. The elder Monroe believed in laying broad and deep the foundations for any career, and young William B. was kept in the Monroe schools until he had completed the high-school course, in 1877. He went from home to matriculate at Madison as a student of the ancient classical course in the State University. This was completed with honor in 1884, and the young collegian became a student of medicine at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York, in the same year. He graduated in 1887, and returned to Monroe to open an office and practice his profession, after one year going to Brooklyn, Wis., and building up a general practice there, remaining eight years. At the expiration of that time his father began to feel the need of assistance, and Dr. William B. returned to Monroe and formed a partnership with his father, under the name of Dr. William Monroe & Son, taking the brunt of the hard work off his father's shoulders. In 1901 Dr. Z. W. Monroe moved to Monroe, and formed a partnership with his father and elder brother under the firm name of Monroe & Monroe.

Faternally our subject is a member of Smith Lodge, No. 31, A. F. & A. M., and also of the Knights of Pythias, and he was a member of the Wisconsin National Guard for some five years. He is a member of the State Medical Society, and is the present health officer of the city of Monroe. Politically he is a Republican.

THOMAS BUTSON (deceased) during his life time was closely identified with the agricultural interests of Grant county, where he was known as a representative stockman and farmer; and, in the town of Lima, where he made his home, he had a large circle of warm friends, who admired his sterling worth, and appreciated at its true value his genuine character.

Mr. Butson was born in Cornwall, England, Aug. 29, 1839, and was the son of Thomas Butson, Sr., and Susan (Richards) Butson, both English born and bred. The marriage of this worthy couple occurred in their native land, and they came to this country as early as 1840, settling on a farm in the town of Platteville, and then moving to a tract of wild land in the town of Lima, which he had purchased from the government. There Mr. Butson erected a substantial log house, and made many improvements, making his home on this farm until his death in 1871. Mrs. Butson died five years previously. Eight children constituted their family circle: Thomas, whose name appears above, was their oldest son; Marv A., born in Grant county, married Thomas Dobson, of the town of Lima, and is now deceased; Isaac is a resident of Pomeroy, Iowa; James, born in Grant county, is a resident of Marshall, Minn., where he has a family; Susan is the wife of George Lee, whose biography appears elsewhere; John married Miss Jennie Bratton, of this county, and is now a farmer in Franklin county, Iowa; Elizabeth married George Smith, and lives in Colorado; Eliza is the wife of Thomas Smith, of Colorado.

Mr. Butson reached his manhood on the farm of his parents, and had the benefits of a common-school education. On March 30, 1865, he married Miss Mary M. Gill, the worthy and estimable daughter of Isaiah and Jane (Bonson) Gill, long settled in Lafayette county, Wis., where they were well and favorably known. Mr. Gill and his wife were both born in England, and came to this country where they were married. Mr. Gill found a home for his family at Elk Grove, Lafayette county, and was for many years the honored and useful local minister of the Plymouth Methodist Church, working in Grant and Lafayette counties, where he was much esteemed for his sincere convictions and fine character. Mr. Gill died at his home Feb. 1, 1892, and the wife, who had shared with him the privations of their early life, passed away Feb. 16, 1894, the mother of twelve children: (1) Abel married Miss Sarah Chapel, and resides at Corning, Iowa, where he has a family of eight children. (2) Mary M., born in December, 1848, had her education in the public schools, and married Thomas Butson. (3) Robert married Miss Carrie Pierce, of Elmo, and settled in Iowa. While attending his mother's funeral he was taken sick, and died in a very short time. His widow and their three children, Nettie, Roy and Walter, still live on the home farm in Iowa. (4) Thomas, born in Lafayette county, married Miss Ollie Mace, and located at Lemars, Iowa. Both husband and wife are now dead, leaving four children, Jessie, Hattie, Roy and Mertie, and the two oldest are now adopted in the family of John Kittoe, of Benton. (5) Richard married Miss Dunbar, and lives in Iowa, where they have a family. (6) Jane died when a young lady. (7) James married Miss Mary Bell, of this county, and lives in Platteville, where two children were born to him, Percy and Donald. (8) Isaiah is now the teller in the First National Bank of Platteville. (9) Rose is single, and lives in Platteville. (10) Frank lives in Iowa. (11) Maggie died when twenty-two years old.

(12) Sarah is the wife of Ally Chapel, and lives in Iowa, where they have four children.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Butson settled on a rented farm in the town of Smelser, and then moved to the town of Platteville, where they lived a year. Here Mr. Butson rented a farm and they lived on it four years, when he moved to Darlington, Iowa county. In 1872 Mr. Butson bought a farm of 140 acres in the town of Lima, and improved it with a new residence and many other necessities and conveniences, and, closely cultivating it, made a fine country home, in which he lived until his death, July 11, 1898. This sad event cast a gloom on the community, which had come to highly appreciate his unaffected manliness and genuine goodness. A good Christian, he was a member and worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he was a Republican, and had held the office of school treasurer for a number of years. Mr. Butson left his wife with seven children: (1) Jennie, born in Smelser township in April, 1866, married Henry Manny, of the town of Lima, and is the mother of three children, Arthur, Mary and Clarence. (2) Susan, born Feb. 10, 1868, is the deceased wife of Dewane Hall, of Lima, and had one daughter, Jessie. (3) Isaiah, born Feb. 23, 1870, married Miss Fannie Johnson, resides on his farm in the town of Lima, and has three children, Susan, Warren and Ina. (4) Mary A., born Nov. 8, 1872, is the wife of Benjamin Edge, lives on his farm in the town of Lima, and has one son, Raymond. (5) Thomas A., born May 27, 1875, educated in the district school, remained at home until his marriage, in February, 1897, to Miss Emma Edge, a member of a well-known Grant county family, and is now living on a rented farm, where he is the father of two children, May and Jennie. (6) Charles W., born Oct. 3, 1877, married Miss Annie Edge, daughter of William and Sarah Edge, an honored couple in the town of Lima, and lives at home, where he has charge of its cultivation. (7) Sarah L., born Aug. 11, 1880, married J. W. Edge, who owns and lives on a farm in Lima. (8) Harry G., born Sept. 30, 1882, is the youngest son of his parents, and assists his brother Charles in the cultivation of the home farm. Mr. and Mrs. Butson reared a family of honorable and useful men, who have a work to do in the world, and are a comfort to the mother in her declining years.

ALBERT POOLE, of the town of Darlington, Lafayette county, is a son of John Poole, Jr., who was born in Johnstown, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1803, and a grandson of John and Esther (Van Antwerp) Poole, both of whom were native to New York, and descendants of old Holland-Dutch stock. The grandfather was born in 1783, and died Dec. 23, 1861. The grandmother was born Oct. 18, 1784, and died March 1, 1836. They were married Nov. 9, 1802. At its introduction to this country the family name was Vanderpool, but in time became shortened to its present form.

John Poole, Jr., was one of a family of seven children, and was the eldest child of his parents. (2) Maria, born Feb. 17, 1805, became Mrs. Knight, and died in her native State, New York. (3) Eleanor, who became Mrs. Grout, was born Feb. 21, 1807, moved to Wisconsin with her husband, and settled at Fall River, where she died in 1870. (4) Rachel, born Dec. 25, 1808, married Daniel Grems, and they located with their family in the town of Wiota, Lafayette county. In 1857 they moved to Minnesota, and settled near Mantorville, Dodge county, where she died in 1866. (5) Abram, born July 25, 1819, came West, locating in Delaware county, Iowa, and afterward moved to Kansas, settling near Lovewell, where he died Feb. 15, 1901. (6) David, born March 7, 1821, is still living in New York. (7) Catherine, born Aug. 5, 1823, married Stephen Cowan, and came to Wisconsin with her husband and family in 1855. They lived in Lafayette county until the spring of 1857, when they moved to Minnesota, living near Mantorville in that state for several years. Mr. and Mrs. Cowan afterward moved to Luverne, Rock Co., Minn., where she died in 1898. About 1820 John Poole, Sr., transferred his family from Montgomery county to Jefferson county, New York.

John Poole, Jr., as did the other children of the family, attained adult years in his native State, where he was married, March 2, 1826, to Miss Elizabeth Coates. This union was but a brief one, as it was broken June 5, 1826, by the death of the wife. On April 5, 1828, he was again married, to Miss Barbara Crowner, who was the mother of all his children. In 1854 they made their first appearance in Lafayette county, and for a short time were located in Wiota township, later in the same year settling in the town of Darlington, where they passed their remaining years. The wife and mother was the first to go, her death occurring Jan. 9, 1885. The husband and father died June 29, 1890, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. The story of his life is interesting, as it shows the power of energy and industry, when united with a good character and laudable ambition to carve success out of most unpromising material. Mr. Poole began life with but little money, and reared his family well, leaving an ample competence at his death. He possessed native ability of a high order. In early life he was a Democrat, but later became a Republican, and at one time he was a member of the New York State Legislature. Both husband and wife belonged to the Methodist Church.

Of the four sons born to this estimable couple, Albert is the only one now living. John C., the eldest son, born Jan. 5, 1829, was a soldier in the war for the Union, belonging to Company D, 21st Iowa V. I., and died July 17, 1863, when coming home on sick leave. George, the second son, who was born Aug. 28, 1837, also wore the Union blue in the Civil war, as a member of Company I, 16th Wis. V. I.; his death occurred May 14, 1862. The similarity attending the death of these two brothers is noteworthy. Both started for home on sick furlough, and both died on the way, between Cairo and St. Louis, while ascending the Mississippi river on steamboats. Ambrose, a third son, died in 1839, while yet a child.

Albert Poole, the only surviving member of his father's family, was born at the paternal home in Jefferson county, N. Y., June 23, 1843, and was about eleven years of age when he came to Wisconsin with his father's family. His Wisconsin or western home has always been where he is now living, or in its immediate vicinity. His education was obtained in the public schools of Darlington, and in his youth he gave special attention to surveying. In 1876 he was elected surveyor of Lafayette county, and re-elected in 1878. Mr. Poole has given his attention chiefly to farming and dairying, and owned and operated a creamery for a number of years, but converted it into a cheese factory in 1890, and is now quite extensively engaged in the cheese business.

Mr. Poole was married, Feb. 24, 1876, to Miss Sarah Ann Colebeck, who was born in the town of Darlington July 10, 1855, a daughter of Henry and Jane (Tyson) Colebeck. Her father was a well-known citizen of Lafayette county, coming here from England (where he was born May 3, 1821) in company with several of his friends, in 1843. For a little time he lived in New York State, and later near Kirkland, Ill., but in 1846 he located in Darlington, which was the home of his family until death. In 1850 he went to California, where he spent two years in the gold fields, returning to Wisconsin in 1852. On Jan. 1, 1853, he was married to Miss Jane Tyson. Mr. Colebeck became in later years a prominent citizen. He carried on extensive farming operations, dealt in stock, and imported fine sheep. He died Dec. 3, 1891, in his seventy-first year. His first wife died June 29, 1873, and on March 15, 1877, he was married to Mrs. Jane Davis. By the first union he was the father of twelve children, of whom eight died in early life. Of the four who reached maturity, Sarah Ann married Albert Poole; Emily Jane became the wife of Richard Thomas; George married Jane Hanning April 10, 1890; Julia Ella married William Chapman, of Darlington, Oct. 10, 1899.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Poole have three children: Ambrose C., born July 3, 1878; Arthur G., Aug. 14, 1880; and Beulah B., Aug. 27, 1884. Blanche, who was born Dec. 31, 1887, died Nov. 23, 1895.

GEORGE JAMES SMITH, a well-known citizen of Linden, Iowa county, is with one exception the oldest living native of that place. He was born May 28, 1836, a son of Mark and Mary (Stephens) Smith, natives of Cambridge, England.

Mark Smith followed tin mining in England, and in 1836 came to the United States, making his way at once to Wisconsin and locating in what is now the village of Linden, but which then consisted of a few rude log cabins. His own first home was in a "dug-out." He combined mining and farming until 1850, when he went to California, by way of the isthmus. During his four years' sojourn in the gold fields of the Far West he met with fair success, and at the end of that time returned to Linden, and began making improvements on the land he had secured from the United States government. His death occurred May 14, 1876, when he was aged sixty-eight years. His wife, Mary (Stephens), passed away in February, 1887, at the age of seventy-two years. Her mother, Mary Stephens, came from England, and made her home with her daughter for some time, dying at the venerable age of fourscore years. Of the children born to Mark and Mary (Stephens) Smith, three died in childhood. The others were: George J.; Mark, who served three years as a member of Company E, 7th Wis. V. I., in the Civil war, and now resides in Madison, Wis.; James S., who was a member of the 30th Wis. V. I. during the Rebellion, and died at Linden Dec. 24, 1889, at the age of forty-nine, leaving a widow and family; Richard, born June 22, 1842, who died in Linden Nov. 18, 1884; Caroline M., who married James Smith, and died in Dodgeville April 11, 1872, aged twenty-eight years; Elizabeth Jane, married to James J. Rule, of Linden; Samuel, born in March, 1848, who resides in Linden; and Lavinia, born in September, 1850, the widow of John Quillesh, living in Sanborn, Iowa.

George J. Smith had but little opportunity for schooling in his boyhood, but after he was grown took advantage of night instructions. At the age of twenty-one he began mining, and in 1865 went to Virginia City, Nev., thence to Idaho, and Helena, Mont., passing in all four years in gold mining. Upon his return to his native county, in company with his brother Richard, he engaged in general merchandising for a time. His next venture was in farming, in which he was very successful, and he now lives in practical retirement in a substantial home built in 1892. He has taken a prominent part in public affairs, and has served as a member of the village council. In politics he is a lifelong Republican.

On Jan. 8, 1863, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Mary Ann Heathcock, daughter of William and Mary (Thomas) Heathcock. She was born April 12, 1837, and died Jan. 26, 1901. In religious connection she was a member of the Methodist Church, with which she had been united for forty-five years. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith were born seven children, of whom five survive: Minnie Edith, born July 6, 1867, married Eli H. Horsch, of Corwith, Iowa; Mary Jane, born June 9, 1868, married John W. Batten, of Midway, Kans.; Ida Lavinia, born Dec. 3, 1870, married H. J. Hicks, of Linden; George Albert, born Nov. 10, 1875, resides in Linden; and Susie Evalena, born Dec. 18, 1877, is at home. All of the children have been highly educated, and are cultured, refined members of society. Mr. Smith has been a liberal supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and fraternally is a Mason, identified with the local lodge, Iowa Chapter, and Mineral Point Commandery, Knights Templar.

William and Mary Heathcock, parents of Mrs. Smith, were the first couple married in Linden. Mr. Heathcock came to Wisconsin from Staffordshire, England, during the Black Hawk war, and settled at Linden in 1833. He was successfully engaged in mining for the greater part of his life. In religious work he was most enthusiastic, and was a member of the Methodist Church, the first service of that church in this place having been held in his home. He died March 4, 1891, aged seventy-one years. His wife, Mary (Thomas), was born in Cambridge, South Wales, and died Dec. 8, 1868, aged fifty-six years.

ENOCH J. BLACKFORD, a retired farmer and business man, as well as the former postmaster of Juda, has been for many years a prominent figure in the business and commercial activities of Green county, and is now one of the time-honored and venerable residents of Juda.

Mr. Blackford is the son of William and Rachel (Johns) Blackford, both natives of Fayette county, Penn., who came of Welsh ancestry. They were married in 1822, and to their union were born seven children, of whom Enoch J., the eldest, was born May 12, 1824, in Fayette county, Penn. Thomas died in Nodaway county, Mo. William lives in Monroe, Wis. Samuel is a resident of Louisiana. Rebecca is the wife of Stephen Mann, and has her home in Page county, Iowa. Lavina was the wife of Samuel Hutzler, of Juda, Wis. Rachel married Peter Roub, and is a resident of Chickasaw county, Mississippi.

Mr. Blackford was married to Miss Margaret Chryst in 1848, and to this union were born seven children: John W., of Albany, Wis.; Rebecca R., wife of James Stull, a farmer in Missouri; James E., who died in Hampton, Iowa; Martin, who died in childhood; Franklin, who died in childhood; Thomas J., of Juda; and Clella May, who died in Page county, Iowa. Mr. Blackford's wife died while they were returning from Iowa to his native State, in 1869. In 1870 he married Mrs. Jane Clemmer, of Green county, Wis., who died in 1891. Mr. Blackford married Miss Harriet Mitchell, of Green county, Aug. 3, 1893. She is the daughter of Washington Mitchell, and was born in the town of Decatur, Green county, where her father was one of the pioneers.

Mr. Blackford came to Wisconsin in 1845, and was rich only in courage and the resources of an honorable and upright manhood. Hiring out to work on the farm of Rev. G. R. Patton, he gained a standing for himself. Afterward he taught school on the Sugar river, and began farming for himself in Green county while yet a young man. In 1867 he moved to Iowa, and in 1870 located at Juda, where he engaged in carpentering, and where his home has been to the present time. Mr. Blackford has been justice of the peace for ten years, and was made postmaster at Juda under the second administration of President Cleveland. He was the first town clerk in the town of Jefferson, in which he has also served as chairman, and filled all the principal offices, and was several times nominated by his party for the position of county clerk. Mr. Blackford is a member of the Baptist Church, and is a man highly esteemed by the community in which he has lived for so many years. His life has been honorable and upright, and he is a good neighbor and an honorable citizen.

HON. JOHN HAWKINS ROUNTREE, Platteville. The ancestral record of this eminent and venerable pioneer settler of Grant county is as follows: Randall Rountree, his great-grandfather, emigrated from Ireland in 1720, settling in Virginia, where he resided until his death. His grandfather, Thomas Rountree, in 1795, moved with his family from Virginia to the vicinity of the Mammoth Cave, Warren Co., Ky., where he remained until he died. John Rountree, his father, also settled in the same place, and there resided until his decease. In the same locality John H. Rountree was born, March 24, 1805. The education received by "the Major" at this period he himself described as "very common-school," the school house being one of those primitive affairs so common in earlier times, constructed of unhewn logs, with holes cut for windows, while a broad fireplace, with its huge open chimney, furnished the heat for the room in frosty weather. Major Rountree moved from Kentucky to Hillsboro, Montgomery Co., Ill., in February, 1824, was there appointed deputy sheriff, and served as such until he reached his twenty-first year, when he was elected sheriff, an office that he held until his resignation, upon his return trip to Wisconsin, in 1827. On May 24 of that year he reached New Diggings (now a portion of Lafayette county), and afterward came to Platteville, then just coming into notice; there he ever after resided. On Aug. 7, 1828, Major Rountree was married to Mary Grace Mitchell, of Galena, Ill., and the next day, with his bride, moved to his log cabin in Wisconsin. Mrs. Rountree died in 1837. On Sept. 3, 1839, he was again married, to Miss Lydia H. Southworth, of Platteville, who after a long and pleasant companionship, extending over nearly a half-century, passed on to her reward, her death occurring June 16, 1881.

The numerous positions held by Major Rountree are the best evidence of his high standing among his neighbors for the numerous decades hidden beneath the swiftly-revolving wheel of Time. In May, 1826, he was commissioned major of Illinois militia, and the same year elected sheriff of Montgomery county, in the same State. In 1829 he was appointed postmaster at Platteville, and was several times re-appointed; also, the same year, appointed and commissioned justice of the peace for Iowa county, Michigan Territory, of which Wisconsin then formed a part. In 1832 he was elected captain of a company of mounted volunteers enlisted by him to serve in the Black Hawk war. In 1834 he was appointed Chief Justice of the County Court of Iowa County by the governor of Michigan, which position he held until the Territory of Wisconsin was organized, in 1836. In 1837 he was appointed Judge of Probate of Grant county, which was organized that year. In 1839 he was commissioned as aid to the governor, with the rank of colonel. In 1838 he was elected a member of the Territorial Council for four years, with the rank of colonel, and in 1842 was re-elected to that position. In 1847 he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention, serving in that body on the committee on General Provisions (which embraced a large number of the most important articles under consideration), as well as upon several select committees. In 1850 Major Rountree was elected to the State Senate, and the following year was appointed a Regent of the State University. In 1853 he was appointed major-general of militia of the Second District of Wisconsin. In 1857 he was appointed postmaster of Platteville. In 1863 he was elected member of Assembly, and in 1866 was again elected to the State Senate—thus serving in the Territorial and State Legislature longer than any other citizen.

From early life Major Rountree was a leader in church affairs, and his judgment and counsel were always sought and trusted. It is recorded that, as early as 1832, he with his wife and two others met in the Rountree log cabin and took the preliminary steps towards organizing a Methodist Episcopal Church, which is claimed to have been the first organized church of that denomination in Wisconsin. Through the vicissitudes of church life he was loyal and constant in his affections for the church, which he loved and revered as a dutiful son would his mother. Time and again, as the church edifice grew old and became too contracted for the needs of the growing congregation, Major Rountree was one of the chief planners and most liberal contributors in devising for the new and greater edifice.

Major Rountree had a notable Masonic record, covering a period of sixty-two years. He received the Master's degree in Far West Lodge, Galena, Ill., in 1828. As soon as there were a sufficient number of representatives of the order in Platteville and vicinity he took an active part in organizing a lodge, and became a charter member of Melody Lodge, No. 2, which received its first charter from the Grand Lodge of Missouri. In 1844, there being three lodges in Wisconsin, delegates from these met, and organized the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin, in which organization Major Rountree took an active and prominent part; he served as Grand Treasurer in 1846, and Grand Junior Warden in 1847. He was one of the founders of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Wisconsin, which was organized in 1850, and at this organization was elected Grand King, serving one year; the next five years he was Grand Treasurer, and in 1861 was elected Grand High Priest—the highest honor in the State within the gift of his brethren. He became a member of the order of Knights Templars at Madison in 1869. For over sixty years he was an ardent and zealous member of the different orders of Masonry, and until the infirmities of age weighed down upon him he took an active part in the work, through which he could see an avenue of dispensing charity without heralding it to the world. He was a Knight Templar, and Knight Templarism points to the end. The cross and crown constitute one of the most interesting and instructive emblems—the cross of trial surmounted by the crown of victory; the cross of struggle and the crown of triumph; the cross of earth and the crown of heaven; and in the golden halo which surrounds these emblems is the legend, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

This lengthy recital of honors and official positions bears upon its face the highest testimonial that could be furnished of the unbounded esteem and confidence of the communities in which the Major lived in the sterling worth, integrity and ability of this veteran representative of pioneer times. When he first entered the present State it was divided into two counties, and contained but a few thousand inhabitants, scattered over the vast territory; to-day it numbers its inhabitants by hundreds of thousands. Major Rountree was the witness of the growth of a new empire; took part in an Indian war; saw the aboriginal inhabitants pushed back, foot by foot, until they now possess hardly a rood of land which they can call their own. He saw the commencement, growth and prosperity or obliteration of every city and village, with the exception of two or three military posts, in the State—all the improvements, indeed, that in fifty years have converted a great and uncivilized wilderness into a series of powerful States. In the immediate vicinity of his own home the change has been no less great; in place of the rude miner's cabin is seen the stately mansion; the few hundred seekers after mineral have been swallowed up in the many thousands whose cozy farm houses dot the landscape in every direction. To but a few has such an experience been vouchsafed; Gen. Rountree may well have been regarded as a landmark between the past and the present, one who lived over the whole term of our local history, and served as a prominent factor in making it.

The end of life came to this venerable pioneer June 30, 1890. The funeral service was held under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, of which he had so long been an honored member. Brethren of the order and many friends from different parts of the State assembled to pay tribute to his memory, the crowd being so great that the services were held in the beautiful park which surrounds the Rountree home. Six of his children survive him: Mrs. Ellen R. Jewett, of Chicago; Mrs. Laura R. Smith, who with her two daughters lives in the old homestead; Mrs. Cora Hathaway, of New York; and Miss Lilly T. Rountree, Philip S. Rountree and Harrison H. Rountree, who all live in Chicago.

SAMUEL R. AUSTIN is one of the highly respected and prominent farmers of Belmont township, Lafayette county, who have retired from the active duties of an agricultural life to enjoy the fruits of their honest labor.

Mr. Austin was born in Sumner county, Tenn., Jan. 31, 1825, his parents being William and Edith (Dickinson) Austin, both of whom were natives of Maryland. William Austin moved to Tennessee, where for twenty years he followed farming and conducted a large tobacco plantation, in 1828 removing to Coles county, Ill., where he purchased an improved farm and passed the balance of his life. The mother of our subject dying when he was a little child, his father later married Rebecca Woodhall, and many children were born to this union, seven daughters and five sons. Of this large family only our subject and his brother James B., of Oklahoma, are living.

Our subject grew up on the farm in Illinois, where he became the manager of a large estate while he was quite young. In 1845 he married Maggie M. Ashmore, who was born in Illinois in 1826, a daughter of Samuel and Margaret Ashmore, who were born in Kentucky, and settled in Illinois. In 1846 Mr. Austin, with his wife and one child, came to Wisconsin, and lived for a short time in Lima, Grant county, but in 1847 he bought a quarter-section of land from the government, in Lafayette county, where settlement was made, and the home in the new country instituted. The early days of his pioneer life were full of hardship, but toil and energy accomplished wonders. Mr. Austin has been one of the men who have made Wisconsin what it is, for the tillers of the soil have been the real elements in the progress of this great State. While there was much that was picturesque and exciting in the new life to those who had come from a thoroughly civilized community there were also many elements of danger, and the deprivations which only heroic spirits can endure. The first desire of Mr. Austin was to complete buildings to make his family and stock and cattle comfortable, and these in time were erected, some of them still standing, in good repair. When the Civil war broke out our subject made three applications for enlistment before he was accepted, finally joining Company K, 44th Wis. V. I., but his discharge followed, on account of disability, and he returned to his farm, where he has lived ever since.

The children born to our subject and wife are among the esteemed residents of this locality, and, as he has always taken a deep interest in their welfare, it is with pleasure that he can see their worldly prosperity, many of them settled around him. William is a resident of Belmont; Elizabeth is the widow of Elijah Eushnell; John is a resident of Platteville; Eliza, who married Sidney Stephens, resides in Lima, Grant county; Margaret is deceased; Samuel is a resident of Dubuque, Iowa; Frank resides in Platteville; Ellen, who married William Shepherd, lives in Platteville; Edith (deceased) married William Thomas; Emma is the widow of Eldred Trenary, and lives in Platteville; James resides on a part of his father's homestead. The grandchildren which gather around Mr. and Mrs. Austin are happy and healthy, and give fair promise that the good old name will not soon die out in Wisconsin.

For some twelve years Mr. Austin has been retained on the school board, an evidence of the confidence and esteem in which this worthy citizen is held in an intelligent community. His connection with the Republican party has been long and active, as he fully believes in the principles he professes. Both Mr. and Mrs. Austin are highly valued in their connection with the M. E. Church, and socially he is connected with Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Platteville. Mr. Austin has always been a hard-working man, and thoroughly believes in the value of toil, having proven its worth, as by it he has been able to accomplish so much.

RUFUS M. DAY, a leading business man of Mount Hope, Grant county, ex-soldier, ex-legislator, is a native of the State of Kentucky, having been born near West Liberty, Morgan Co., that State, Nov. 18, 1835, a son of John and Elizabeth (McKinnie) Day, natives of Virginia.

About 1840 John Day and his family migrated to Wisconsin, coming directly to Grant county, and settling on land near Lancaster. Here Mr. Day died April 1, 1846. Mrs. Day survived many years, dying in the same township, but not upon the original land taken by her husband. Of the three children in this family, Jemima, the eldest, became the wife of Antone Bailey, and now resides in Kansas; Theodore enlisted, at the outbreak of the Civil war, in Company C, 2d Wis. V. I., took part in the first battle of Bull Run, in July, 1861, and after his three months' term expired re-enlisted, and served through the war, now residing in the State of Oregon; Rufus M. is our subject. All are highly respected.

Rufus M. Day enlisted, Aug. 14, 1862, in Company I, 20th Wis. V. I., and participated in many of the important events of the war, taking part in the battle of Prairie Grove and the siege of Vicksburg. He was subsequently on detail duty at Gen. Herron's headquarters for about a year; was then transferred to the corps headquarters of Gen. Granger, where he remained until the end of the war, on duty constantly as orderly; and was mustered out of the service at Galveston, Texas, when the war closed.

Upon his return from the army Mr. Day resumed farming in Mount Hope, but later retired from farm life, and engaged in mercantile pursuits in the same town, being very successful. In political matters Mr. Day has always been a Republican, and he was honored by election to the State Legislature in 1885, 1886, 1887 and 1888. While in the Legislature Mr. Day proved himself worthy of representing his constituents, and may well be proud of his record in that body. Taking an active interest in town affairs, he is an important factor in the conduct of the affairs of the municipality, and has served most acceptably as chairman of the town for eleven years, and was a member of the board for many years prior to his occupancy of the head position.

In September, 1866, Mr. Day was married to Miss Almira Whiteside, daughter of William Whiteside, and two daughters have been born of this union: Jennie E., widow of Augustus Milner; and Alta, wife of W. J. Lambert. Socially Mr. Day is a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities, and is very popular in the lodges. Being by nature genial, and possessing the faculty of gaining friends, he may well be regarded as one of the most popular as well as representative men of Mount Hope and the surrounding country.

Rufus M. Day

EVAN ARTHUR, a well-known and esteemed pioneer of Grant county, was born in Tredegar, South Wales, England, about the year 1815. At an early age he was apprenticed to the trade of tool turner in a rolling mill, and before his term of service was over his father was killed in the mill, leaving a wife and four children, of whom Evan was the youngest. However, the family was left in fair circumstances, and all of the children were given a common-school education, in Welsh.

At the age of eighteen Evan Arthur left his native land for America, and after a voyage of nine weeks landed in New York City, where he secured a position as master workman in the iron works. Attending night school, he soon perfected himself in the English language. Some years later he was sent to the Pennsylvania rolling mills, and a year and a half later to the rolling mills at Richmond, Va., where he remained about two years. His next removal was to Nashville, Tenn., where he took charge of a rolling mill, and remained until the gold fever broke out and he migrated to Iowa, settling upon a farm about thirty miles below Dubuque. Later Mr. Arthur sold this farm and bought another, about four and one-half miles from Dubuque, at Table Mound. The excitement over the discovery of lead soon induced him to sell his farm and engage in mining, which pursuit he followed until a few years before his death, March 21, 1881, at the old homestead, at Muscalonge, Grant county. In 1850 Mr. Arthur and his eldest son, David, bought a mine at Cassville, Wis., to which place he removed his family in 1851. Later they removed to Beetown, and then to Muscalonge, where a son, Christmas E. Arthur, still resides.

About 1835 Mr. Arthur married Martha Bivan, who bore him eleven children, seven of whom are still living. Mrs. Arthur died at Cassville with her infant son, in 1852. Of a happy, jovial disposition, Mr. Arthur made many friends, and was a man of deeds as well as words. Early in life he became a devoted Christian, and his first thought in settling in a new home was to organize a church and Sunday-school. When he came to Cassville there were four stores and two saloons, but no school house or church, in the town of 350 souls. Soon after his arrival rooms were secured, a Sunday-school organized, and a minister engaged to come occasionally from Beetown; thus a church was commenced. When it was impossible for the clergyman to be present "Father" Arthur, as he was usually called, preached in his stead, and he was afterward ordained as elder, with the privilege of administering the sacraments, burying the dead, and performing the marriage ceremony. The illness of this good man was very short, and his last words were: "I am ready to go. My peace was made with God many years ago."

GOTTLIEB HARTWICH, an old and highly respected citizen of Green county, was born in Germany March 23, 1831, and for many years has been a resident of the village of Juda. Christian and Sophia (Zimmermann) Hartwich, his parents, were honorable and industrious people of Danzig, Prussia, where the father followed cattle herding and farm labor. Soon after coming to this country, in 1870, he died at the town of Sylvester, Green Co., Wisconsin.

Gottlieb Hartwich married Miss Frezeka Reasa in 1855, and the following year the newly-married couple came to this country, where they have had a family named as follows: (1) Wilhelmina, born Sept. 22, 1855, died Feb. 15, 1865. (2) Herman, born May 16, 1857, is now a farmer in South Dakota. (3) Carl, born Oct. 22, 1858, is a farmer in Lafayette county, Wis. (4) Julia, born July 11, 1860, is the wife of William Bronco, of Green county, Wis. (5) Louisa, born Sept. 23, 1861, married Ferdinand Miller, of Green county, Wis. (6) Elizabeth, born Oct. 1, 1867, married John Fox, of Nebraska. (7) Henry, born Feb. 28, 1873, is a farmer at Brodhead. (8) Martha, born Oct. 24, 1871, died in 1873. Mr. Hartwich lost his wife June 16, 1896. She was born Aug. 3, 1832, and through her useful life proved herself a faithful wife and a true Christian woman. Mr. Hartwich and his devoted wife came to this country very poor people, but before she died their circumstances had greatly changed, and their last years together were very comfortable. Mr. Hartwich recently sold a half-section of good farming land in South Dakota, and has recently disposed of two farms in Green county. He is now spending his last years in a very comfortable home in Juda. Mr. Hartwich has always been a staunch Republican, and for forty years was a consistent member of the Evangelical Church.

ROBERT MCBRIDE, late of Platteville, Grant county, a skillful mechanic, prosperous farmer and highly respected citizen, was a native of the State, born Jan. 20, 1833.

John and Rosa McBride, parents of Robert, were born and married in Ireland, and early came to the United States, landing in New York City. John McBride for some time worked on the Erie canal, aiding in its construction, and later went to Philadelphia, Penn., where he worked as a linen weaver. After a short sojourn there he came to Wisconsin, purchasing a farm in Lafayette county, on which he spent the remainder of his life. He raised a family of ten children, of whom two live in Platteville, John and Mrs. Robert Brown. The children were all well educated in the old Academy of Platteville.

When a young man Robert McBride purchased a farm near Platteville. In December, 1861, he married Miss Sabina Robinson, of Platteville, a daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Bratton) Robinson, natives of England, who were prominent pioneers of Grant county. On coming to Wisconsin, in 1841, Mr. Robinson settled on the farm near Platteville on which he died in 1888. He was three times married, and Mrs. McBride, who is the eldest child of the first wife, was born in 1841, and was educated in the schools of Platteville. At his marriage Mr. McBride located on a farm, and there lived until 1889, when he removed to Platteville, where he had purchased a beautiful residence and other real estate. Here he died May 20, 1890, and here his estimable widow still has her home.

The union of Mr. and Mrs. McBride was blessed with four children, viz.: Jesse, who was born in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1862, was graduated from the State Normal School of Platteville, and married Miss Georgia Meeley, of Kansas, who has borne him three children, Robert B., Eunice and Douglas; the family now reside in Minneapolis, Minn., where Jesse is bookkeeper for a milling firm. Lucina, born in 1865, was likewise graduated from the State Normal, is a stenographer, and has an office in the Bailey block. Robert Lester, born on the home farm in September, 1869, also graduated from the State Normal, married Miss Lillie Eastman, of Platteville, and is at present stenographer for the Minneapolis Implement Machine Co. Lillian R., born in 1872, graduated from the State Normal and the State University, and is now principal of the graded schools of Plymouth, Wisconsin.

In religion Mr. McBride was a devout Methodist, and Mrs. McBride, a lady of strong religious convictions, has always taken an active part in the work of the church, in the faith of which she has carefully reared her children. In politics Mr. McBride was a staunch Republican, held several local offices when living on his farm, and in 1880 was census enumerator of his district. He was a loving and devoted husband, a fond and indulgent father, a sincere friend, and his death was truly mourned by all who knew him. His widow, than whom no more estimable lady resides in Platteville, is passing her days in ease and comfort, esteemed and beloved by a large circle of true friends.

DANIEL B. BECHTOLT, whose residence in Jordan township, Green county, covers half a century, is a native of Ohio, born Feb. 22, 1837, in Licking county, where he passed his early years.

Mathias Bechtolt, Sr., his grandfather, was a native of Germany, whence he emigrated to America before the Revolutionary war, settling in Berks county, Penn. His family consisted of eleven children, namely: Isaac, George (who was a minister), Frederick, Daniel, Mathias, Jr., William, Elizabeth, Catherine, and three who died young. Of these, Mathias, Jr., father of Daniel B. Bechtolt, was born July 6, 1788, in Berks county, Penn., and in 1813 married Miss Christina Epler, of Berks county, born June 10, 1795, who bore him eight children: Christina, Catherine, Mathias, Lydia, Peter, Permelia, Elizabeth and Daniel B., all deceased except Mrs. Permelia Dewit, of Iowa, and Daniel B. The family came to Wisconsin when our subject was fourteen years of age, settling in Jordan township, Green county, where the father homesteaded forty acres of government land. He died Nov. 19, 1872, the mother on Sept. 21, 1856.

Daniel B. Bechtolt received his education in his native State, and was trained to agricultural pursuits on his present farm, which he has continued to carry on most profitably, having a well-improved farm, now comprising 160 acres, equipped with good barns, etc. When he commenced life on his own account he had not a dollar to his name, but he has succeeded by dint of perseverance in acquiring a comfortable competence, and at the same time has made for himself an honorable name among the best citizens of his community. As one of the leading farmers of the township his influence in local affairs is strong, and always exercised in the cause of right. His political support is given to principle and not to party, and he may always be depended upon to aid by his ballot the best men and the best measures, regardless of their political sponsors. In religion he is inclined toward the faith of the United Brethren.

On March 12, 1857, Mr. Bechtolt was united in marriage with Miss Matilda Wagner, who was born Feb. 19, 1839, in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Charles and Lydia (Shultz) Wagner, and eight children blessed this union, namely: Maria, who died Feb. 3, 1861; Albert B., who is a minister and farmer, residing in Cadiz township, Green county; Lydia, wife of Charles Blain, of Jordan; Samuel, of Iowa, who married Ettie Lafever; George, of Monroe township, Green county, who married Ina Wells; Ervin, who remains on the old home place, and is married to Isa Wells; Ida Elmedia, wife of Walter Kessler, of Jordan; and Orpha Lois, who died in infancy, Feb. 19, 1879. Mrs. Bechtolt passed away June 19, 1880. She was a true Christian woman, sharing in the high esteem in which her husband has always been held, and was deeply mourned by her neighbors and friends throughout the township.

PHILLIP GERHART, a retired farmer of Harrison township, Grant county, richly deserves the rest and peace that have come to him in his last and declining years. He has been all his life an industrious and hard-working man, has kept close to the soil, and wrought a good work in the oft-recurring sowing and reaping. Now that the sun is casting the long shadows, it is fitting and proper that he should surround himself with those things that he has accumulated by honest toil, to comfort the afternoon of his day on earth.

Mr. Gerhart was born on the river Rhine, in Germany, in 1837, and is a son of Valentine and Mary (Post) Gerhart, who lived and died in the Fatherland. His father followed the work of a weaver, and in his time served as a soldier in the German army. Phillip Gerhart, with one brother and one sister, came to this country in 1855, and worked in the coal mines at Pottsville, Penn., for a year. He then came West to Grant county, Wis. The brother, Valentine, settled on a farm near Platteville, and married Miss Mary J. Lory, who was born in England. They have had six children: Susan, who married Rev. Mr. Farnsworth, of Grant county, and is now deceased; Jane, of Iowa; Mary, who married Rev. Richard Carns, of Iowa; Miss Louisa; and Carrie and Jessie, also unmarried. Charlotte Gerhart, sister of Phillip, married Lewis Hable in Germany; they came to Wisconsin, and settled on a farm in Harrison township, where he died in May, 1900, leaving a widow and six children: Mary, wife of Charles Brunton, of Harrison township; Lewis; Lizzie, Mrs. Eslip; and Carrie, Mrs. Edward Ivan—all of Harrison township; Frank, of Platteville; and Nettie, who died at the dawn of womanhood.

Phillip Gerhart was eighteen years old when he came to America, and though he had been thoroughly educated in the German schools his English education was mostly acquired after coming to this country. He did farm work by the month in Grant county until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted in Company B, 43d Wis. V. I., and served mainly in the Army of the Tennessee, under Gen. Thomas. His regiment was badly cut up at Nashville, and throughout the war he saw many hard-fought battles, and made many long and dreary marches. He was mustered out in November, 1865, and, coming back to Grant county, married Miss Mary Lawrence, the estimable daughter of Henry and Sophia (Faacier) Lawrence, both of whom were German born and bred. After coming to America they spent some years in the hard coal region near Pottsville, Penn., where they were married. In 1845 they came to Grant county, Wis., and settled on the farm near Platteville which was their home until death. Four of their children are still living: Charles, of Grant county; Maggie, Mrs. Peter Cabley, of Harrison township; Carrie, Mrs. John Lory, of Crawford county, Wis.; and Mary, Mrs. Phillip Gerhart. The last named was born in Pennsylvania in March, 1845, and came to Wisconsin when a child.

After their marriage Mr. Gerhart and his wife settled at Platteville, where he went into business as a general merchant. He did well, and displayed good business habits, but his health so failed that he was compelled to seek out-of-door work, and he rented a farm near Platteville, which he continued to cultivate until he purchased it, in 1896. He has erected a new home, and made extensive improvements. Mr. and Mrs. Gerhart have reared a family of seven children: Henry was born in Platteville in 1870, married Miss Ida Burkholder, of the town of Harrison, and resides on a part of the present homestead; they have two sons, Arche and Earle, Edith, (deceased), married Edward Morshead, of Grant county, and bore him two sons, John and Roy. Hannah, born in 1875, married Jefferson Rice, and resides in the town of Platteville, on a farm; they have six sons, Frank, Alvin, Charles, Ornie, Samuel and Harry. Carrie died when eleven years old. Charles, born in 1878, married Ollie Lauthain, and lives in the town of Harrison. Frank, born in 1880, married Rena Burkholder. Mabel, born in 1882, is now the wife of Charles Moses, and lives on a farm in Grant county.

Mr. Gerhart has always been a member of the Republican party, and he and his wife were brought up in the Lutheran Church. They are honorable and upright people, and are highly respected by all who know them.

EDWIN L. MCNETT, deceased. Among the sturdy pioneer families of Wisconsin, who as early as 1836 located on what was then the remote northwest frontier of civilization, that of McNett was well known as one of the most prominent; and during the succeeding years, as the wild country has been subdued and changed into one of the best cultivated and most desirable regions of that part of the Union, the same family is known as honest and energetic, still displaying those qualities which assisted in the founding of the social and commercial life of those early days.

A worthy representative of the McNett family was to be found in the lamented subject of this sketch, Edwin L. McNett, who passed out of life, in the old homestead where he was born, June 12, 1897. His birth occurred Nov. 24, 1836, in Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis. The parents of our subject were Lorenzo and Roxie (McCumber) McNett, the former of whom was a son of Capt. Samuel McNett, a native of Massachusetts, who located in Otsego county, N. Y., early in the last century, for we learn that he was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was appointed light-keeper on Horse Island, near his home in Smithfield. His official position was conferred upon him by Gen. Brown, for gallant conduct at the battle of Sackett's Harbor, where his last days were spent, his death occurring at the age of eighty-nine.

Lorenzo McNett was born Aug. 11, 1807, and in 1833 married Roxie McCumber, of the State of New York, soon after migrating to Lafayette county, Wis., and locating upon government land near the line of Grant county, in Elk Grove township. Here Mr. McNett made his home in a log house, where his family lived and thrived until 1841, when he erected one of the first frame houses built in the section. He added to his purchase of land, which he cleared and improved until he made it one of the best farms in Elk Grove. Here his wife died March 30, 1870, he surviving her thirteen years. Two sons and two daughters were born to them, the eldest being Edwin L., our subject; Frank, born in 1838, married Elizabeth Curkeet, of Elk Grove, and after the death of his wife, in Elk Grove, he removed to New York; Mary married John McBride, of Platteville; Julia, born in 1842, married Evan Barnes, of Platteville.

Our subject received the major part of his education in the little district school house located on the farm which he owned at the time of his death, later being given one term in the Platteville Academy. The usual occupation of the young men of the locality was farming, and our subject entered into it in all its branches, making an innovation in the methods of some of the laborious work by the purchase of a thresher, his being among the first in the neighborhood.

The marriage of our subject was celebrated in 1863, to Miss Amanda Whitham, a daughter of Emanuel and Isabel (Cameron) Whitham. Mr. Whitham was born in Yorkshire, England, March 22, 1797, and came to America as early as 1819, although he returned to England, coming again to America in 1829. Then settling in Pennsylvania, he engaged in business there until 1846, when he moved to Elk Grove, and later to the village of Elmo, where he afterward resided, with the exception of some years spent in Galena. The death of Mr. Whitnam took place in January, 1887. He was twice married, the children of the first union being Mrs. Sophie Wade, of England, and Mrs. Mary Hilt, of Philadelphia. In the spring of 1829 he married Isabel Cameron, a native of England, the children of this union being: Mrs. Jane Beebe, of Cherokee, Iowa; Caroline, of Elmo, Wis.; William, of Elk Grove; John, of St. Joseph, Mo.; Emanuel, of Platteville, Wis.; Wesley, of Webster City, Iowa; Mrs. McNett; Annie, of Platteville; and Mrs. Martha Hahn, of Philadelphia. Mrs. McNett was born in Doylestown, Penn., in December, 1839, and was educated in the schools of Grant and Lafayette counties.

After marriage our subject and wife settled on the farm which his father owned, following farming there some four years, when he purchased the old Capt. Leslie homestead, where the old fort once stood. In this home the family lived for fifteen years, and then Mr. McNett bought the old family homestead, joining the two farms. Many improvements were being continually made on both places, our subject being a man who thoroughly understood farming, and the value of substantial buildings, good implements and careful cultivation of the land.

The family left by our subject is well known through the neighborhood: Mary, born in 1864, married Lewis Bunt, resides in Elk Grove and has children, Hazel, Edna and Lenys. Lewis, born in 1866, married Amy Bunt, and lives near Elmo; he has two children, Ethel and Velma. Julia, born in 1868, is residing at home. Howard, born in 1870, married Bessie Webster, and resides on a farm near the old home; they have three children, Odessa, Lois and Dow. Frank, born in 1872, assists in the management of the home farm. Cameron, born in 1874, married Lizzie Fox, of Big Patch, and resides in Kendall township; they have one son, George. Caroline, born in 1879, is a student. George was born in 1876; Elmer, in 1882; and Harry, in 1885.

In politics Mr. McNett was a Republican, and efficiently filled the greater number of the local offices of his town. The whole family has been reared in the M. E. Church, where they are held in high esteem. The affectionate name of "Grandmother" is given Mrs. Mc-

Nett in the community, her kind and benevolent nature making her beloved by all. Many interesting tales are told by her of the early pioneer days, when she and her late husband struggled through many difficulties, but she is now surrounded by the loving care of children and grandchildren, with every comfort of life.

PHILIP KOLB, a highly respected citizen of Platteville, Grant county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war, was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, in 1827, and came to America with his parents, John and Amelia (Junge) Kolb, the family locating in Mercer county, Penn., in which State the father died in 1849. The mother's death occurred in Platteville, Wis. In their family were six sons and three daughters, of whom are named: Elizabeth; Philip; Henry, who died en route to California, in 1850; Jacob, a resident of St. Paul, Minn.; William, of Platteville; John, also a resident of Platteville, who was in the Union army during the Rebellion; George, of Vermilion, S. Dak.; and Mrs. Frances Elgar, of Platteville.

Philip Kolb began his education in the schools of his native land, and during the residence of the family in Mercer county, Penn., he attended school to some extent. In 1850, at the age of twenty-three years, he came to Platteville, Wis., where he at first worked on a farm, and later engaged in carpentering. In that city he was married, in 1853, to Miss Barbara Leibert, a native of Bavaria, Germany, and a daughter of Chrisman and Mary (Samson) Leibert, who were also born in that kingdom, and on coming to America, in 1856, located at Galena, Ill. There the family lived on a farm for some time, and then moved to Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., where Mr. Leibert died in 1869, his wife in 1868. Their children were Andrew, a resident of Nebraska; Mary, deceased; Amelia; Mary; Margaret; Nicholas; Frederick; Eva. Mrs. Oettiker; and Barbara, Mrs. Kolb. Mr. and Mrs. Kolb have six children, namely: (1) John makes his home in Chicago, Ill. (2) Joseph, a resident of Lewistown, Ill., married a Miss Hillyer, and they have four children, Earl, Flo, Beulah and Anna. (3) Flo, also of Lewistown, Ill., married a Miss Hoffman, and has one son, Percy. (4) Philip is a teacher of music in the Platteville State Normal. (5) Mary is the wife of Thomas Brooking, of Macomb, Ill., and they have four children, Melvin, Philip, Flo and Vivian. (6) Christine, Mrs. Harris, of Platteville township, Grant county, has one child, Bertie.

At Platteville, in 1865, Mr. Kolb enlisted in Company K, 44th Wis. V. I., for one year or during the war, and was mustered into the United States service at Madison, Wis. He was on regular duty at Nashville, and later at Paducah, Ky., where he was honorably discharged in September, 1865, the war having ended and his services being no longer needed. He is now an honored member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., and is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, in the welfare of which he takes an active interest. Mr. Kolb and his wife both hold membership in the Congregational Church, and are among the prominent representative citizens of Grant county.

JOHN M. COTTINGHAM is a son of Timothy Cottingham (deceased), who was born in Yorkshire, England, Feb. 18, 1829, and for some years before his death lived retired in the town of Benton, Lafayette county. He had been an active miner and a miller, and was favorably known as a good workman and an honest man. His parents were Anthony and Jane Cottingham, the former of whom died in England, and years afterward the widow came to her son in Wisconsin, where she died Jan. 18, 1858.

Timothy Cottingham was reared in England, where he married Miss Jane Metcalf, daughter of John and Sarah Metcalf, both of whom were born in England, where they lived and died. Of their children, ten in number, Mrs. Cottingham is the only one in this country. In 1853 Mr. and Mrs. Cottingham came to New York in a sailing vessel, being five weeks on the way. They made the journey to Buffalo by rail, and from that city to Big Patch, Grant county, they made the journey by wagon. There they lived a short time, and then moved into the town of Benton, where he was engaged in mining for several years before he took up the milling business. For many years he was an extensive shipper of grain and flour, investing very largely in good farm lands in this State and in Iowa. Mr. Cottingham was an active business man almost to the time of his death, which occurred

Aug. 6, 1898. He was an active worker in the Methodist Church, frequently filling pulpits in Cuba, Hazel Green, Benton, and other stations for many years. An ardent Republican, he took an enlightened interest in public affairs. Previous to his death he had purchased a building lot and begun the erection of a beautiful home, which has been carried on to completion. Of the ten children born to Mr. and Mrs. Cottingham, seven attained mature years: (1) Anthony H. is living on his father's old farm near Lead Mine; he married Miss Lizzie Caton, and is the father of seven children, of whom are named Lona M., Jay T., Russell A., Ethel J., and Irwin. (2) Sarah M., born in England, married William Natrass, and settled in Aurelia, Iowa, where he is engaged in the hardware business. She died in March, 1893, leaving the following children—Zella (who is the wife of Bertram E. Lloyd, of Aurelia, the editor of the Sentinel of that place, and has one daughter, Dorothy), Marietta, Olliver, Alma, Josephine, Sadie E., and Cedric. (3) Jane E., born in Grant county, became the wife of William Harker, who settled in Aurelia, Iowa, where Mrs. Harker died in 1885, leaving five children, Walter (deceased), Willie (of Billings, Mont.), Joseph H., Mamie (with her father at Preston, Wis.), and Jennie E. The last named, adopted by her grandparents, lives in Benton, where she attends the high school. (4) John M. is mentioned more fully below. (5) Joseph H., who was educated in the State Normal at Platteville, married Miss Josie L. Bratton, and they are the parents of three children, Aletha, Claude and Lucile. They are living in Oklahoma. (6) May A., who remains at the family home with her mother, was educated in the State Normal at Platteville, making a good reputation as a student and a musician of marked ability. She leads the church choir. (7) Timothy J. is now a traveling salesman for the H. B. Glover Co., Dubuque, Iowa. He married Miss Minnie Clarkson. Mrs. Cottingham and the family are members of the Methodist Church, in which all are known as devoted and faithful workers.

John M. Cottingham was born in Benton, and was educated in the Lead Mine schools. On reaching manhood he engaged in farming, and learned the miller's trade with his father, and for a number of years previous to the death of that gentleman the milling interests of the family were in his hands. He married Miss Mary M. Side, who was born in 1859, and whose parents, John and Mary Side, were old and respected citizens of Lafayette county, locating here at an early day. Mrs. Cottingham obtained her education in the Lead Mine schools. Mr. and Mrs. Cottingham have had the following named children: Rupert N. (born in June, 1880), George, Mary, Mamie, and Bessie (born in 1896).

After his marriage John M. Cottingham moved to the milling property, which he purchased in company with Thomas Miller, under the firm name of Cottingham & Miller, and is now engaged in grain dealing and milling. They have one of the largest roller mills in Lafayette county, and are doing an extensive business. Politically Mr. Cottingham is a Republican. His wife and children are members of the Methodist Church. Socially he is a member of Lodge No. 268, F. & A. M., of Benton; Lodge No. 134, K. of P.; Lodge No. 21, I. O. O. F., and with his wife belongs to the Order of Rebekahs.

SAMUEL JENKIN enjoys the distinction of having been actively engaged in mercantile life in Mineral Point, Iowa county, longer than any other citizen of that thriving municipality. In the course of his long business career he has acquired an enviable reputation both as a man and as a citizen.

Mr. Jenkin was born in Redruth, Cornwall, England, Oct. 28, 1824, a son of Samuel and Jenny (Repper) Jenkin, both also natives of Cornwall, where the ancestors of the Jenkin family have lived for many generations. John Jenkin, the grandfather of our subject, was an assayer by profession, and was employed in tin, copper and lead mines. The elder Samuel Jenkin was born in Redruth, where he learned the stone-mason's trade. In 1841 he came to the United States, reaching Mineral Point in July of that year, and immediately entered upon the work of his trade, building upon an extensive scale, and having in charge the construction of a number of the most important business blocks in Mineral Point; he became widely known as an upright and thoroughly reliable contractor and builder. He died in 1880, at the advanced age of eighty years. Mrs. Jenkin passed away some years previously, and she was about seventy when called away. She was born near St. Austell, Cornwall, where her mother lived to reach a great age. Samuel and Jenny Jenkin were the parents of three sons and eight daughters, of whom one daughter, Mrs. Catherine Collins (a widow, and now a resident of Waukesha), and Samuel are the only survivors. Only one of these eleven children died before reaching maturity.

Samuel Jenkin attended school up to the age of twelve years, when he began to learn the stone-mason's trade. In his seventeenth year he came to Mineral Point, and took a place in the lead mines, where he spent the ensuing five years. At the expiration of that time he set himself to the learning of the tinner's trade, which to a very large degree has been his occupation up to the present time. In 1851 Mr. Jenkin made the journey to the California gold fields, overland, being six months on the way, and spent one year prospecting and mining in that distant State. He then returned to his home by way of the Isthmus and the city of New York. Coming back to Mineral Point, he was for a time in the grocery and dry goods line, and in 1861 went to Leavenworth, Kans., but did not make a prolonged stay in that frontier town. Coming back to Mineral Point, he resumed his trade, and since 1866 has dealt continuously in hardware. In 1876 he took up several new lines, adding agricultural implements, wagons, carriages and sleighs, in which he has dealt up to the present time. Mr. Jenkin also does all kinds of plumbing and tinning work, and has built up a very extensive trade.

Our subject was married, in March, 1853, to Miss Elizabeth Waters, of New York City, and of the children born to this union nine are living, all of whom have enjoyed excellent social and educational advantages. (1) Martha died when fifteen years old. (2) One child died in infancy. (3) Nettie, who married Christian Weiber, lives in Chicago. (4) Samuel is also a resident of Chicago. (5) Agnes, who married Dr. H. P. Mix, lives in Highland, Wis. (6) Sally is in Chicago. (7) John and (8) Edward are interested in business with their father. (9) Gertrude, who married Frank De Volt, lives in Chicago, as does (10) Anna, who married James Green. (11) Amy is at home. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkin have nine grandchildren.

Mrs. Jenkin is a member of the Methodist Church, but others of the family belong to the Episcopal Church. Mr. Jenkin has been repeatedly elected city treasurer, and for a number of years was supervisor, during which time he supported the measure to erect a county asylum. As alderman of Mineral Point he did much to promote the general interests of the city, and he has always been classed among the enlightened and progressive residents of that place.

DAYTON D. TYLER, the prosperous proprietor of a sawmill in Cadiz township, Green county, and one of the foremost citizens of his community, was born in Chenango county, N. Y., Dec. 5, 1843, son of Simeon and Martha Jane (Card) Tyler, natives of New York State, who were wedded in 1830.

Simeon Tyler was a son of Broadstreet Tyler, who was born in Connecticut, and after the close of the Revolution located in New York. He was of English parentage, and served with great bravery throughout the war for independence, enduring the hardships of the terrible winter at Valley Forge, and serving under George Washington. He lost an eye at the battle of Brandywine. Thrice married, he became the father of twenty-one children. His death occurred when he was aged ninety-eight years. Simeon Tyler, father of Dayton D., was the father of six children, as follows: Martha J., deceased; Dolphus, who resides in Tennessee; Aurelia, wife of H. B. Mack, of California; Nathan C., of Martin, Wis.; Lucian D., who died at the age of twenty; and Dayton D.

Dayton D. Tyler came with his parents from New York to Stephenson county, Ill., when he was but six years of age, and two years later was left an orphan by the death of both his parents, and, when a little past seventeen, was thrown out in the world to depend entirely upon his own resources. On Sept. 10, 1861, he became a member of Company B, 46th Ill. V. I., and served four years and twelve days. He participated in the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, siege of Vicksburg, Hatchie, siege of Jackson, Miss., and was taken prisoner while moving on Mobile, Ala., in March, 1865. He received an honorable discharge Sept. 22, 1865. His brother Dolphus served in the 92d Ill. V. I., and his brother Nathan was a member of Company A, 92d Ill. Mounted Infantry, was taken prisoner, and passed eleven and one-half months in Andersonville. Mr. Tyler now conducts his sawmill on the old Saucerman farm, and is meeting with well-deserved success. He has ever been active in all that tended toward the welfare of his town and county, and is one of its most influential citizens. In politics he is a Democrat, has filled the office of justice of the peace at Browntown, Winslow, Ill., and Blanchardville, Wis., and was deputy sheriff of Green county for six years under S. Morse and Edward Reuger. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, becoming a member of that great order in 1866, and being a charter member of Winslow Lodge, No. 564; he now belongs to Smith Lodge, No. 31, Monroe, Wisconsin.

On Oct. 5, 1865, Mr. Tyler was married to Miss Mary A. Rodebaugh, daughter of Thomas and Luvina (Ferguson) Rodebaugh, early settlers of Stephenson county, Ill. Five children have come to bless their marriage, namely: Jennie L., wife of W. P. Steer, of Winslow, Ill.; Mary M., wife of Simon P. Lynch, a farmer of Cadiz township; Charles D., in partnership with his father (he married Kate Kelley, and has two children, Mary and Retha); Annie V., wife of William Clarno, of South Wayne, Wis.; and Florence E., a dress maker at home. The family are highly esteemed socially, and their friends are all assured of a hearty welcome in the hospitable Tyler home.

BURR SPRAGUE, a lawyer at Brodhead, Green county, is one of the most prominent and influential citizens of that place. His thorough knowledge of the principles of law, and his wide familiarity with business forms and proceedings, give his counsel high value. He is an excellent pleader, and presents a case to the court and jury in a calm and dispassionate manner, which carries conviction by its sincerity and candor.

Mr. Sprague was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., April 30, 1836, a son of Almerin and Asenath (Noyes) Sprague, both also natives of New York. Seven children were born to our subject's parents, of whom three are now living: Edwin R., of DeFuniak Springs, Fla.; Burr; and Sylvia A., wife of Dr. L. B. Beebe, of Evansville, Wisconsin.

Almerin Sprague, an old and experienced school teacher, having a record of thirty terms in the school room, was also a cabinet maker and wood worker. He was town school superintendent and justice of the peace in New York, and also served as justice of the peace several years in Wisconsin. In an early day he served as an appraiser of Wisconsin University lands. Moving to Wisconsin in 1846, he located in the township of Spring Valley, Rock county. Here he took up a farm of 160 acres, and afterward bought more land from time to time. He was one of the first Free Soilers, a Republican at the organization of that party, a radical opponent of the Fugitive Slave Law, and always an influential and leading citizen. In October, 1868, he moved to Brodhead, where he died in 1887, in his eighty-sixth year.

Currier Sprague

Asenath (Noyes) Sprague was a daughter of John B. Noyes, a descendant of one of the early settlers of Massachusetts. She was a woman of rare strength of character. Ambitious and hard-working, amid all the toil and privations of pioneer life she yet kept the strength and sweetness of a generous and loving nature, and her memory still lives in the hearts of all who knew her. She died in November, 1893, in her ninetyeth year. She and her husband were Unitarians.

Burr Sprague was ten years old when he came with his parents to Rock county, Wis., and he lived with them until he was seventeen, attending the district school at Spring Valley Corners. In 1853 he began teaching, and followed that profession, in connection with other occupations, for nine terms, also conducting an evening writing school for several terms. In 1854 he bought out the general store at Spring Valley Corners, and took charge of the post office, remaining there from 1854 to 1861, excepting one year, in 1857-58, when he attended a business college in Rockford, Ill. He then moved his store to Orfordville, in the same township, where he sold goods for six years, was postmaster five years, and served as justice of the peace and assessor. He was clerk of the town of Spring Valley ten years. It was during these early years of business contact and association with the people of Rock county that he laid the foundations of the confidence and esteem in which he is held in that county, and which are so marked a feature of his later years. Mr. Sprague moved to Brodhead, Green county, in 1868, and went into a general store as salesman. In 1871 he established a book store, and was appointed postmaster under President Grant. He was postmaster eight years, and served as justice of the peace ten years. For six years he also held the position of school superintendent, and identified himself closely with the educational interests of the growing town.

On Nov. 14, 1859, Mr. Sprague was married to Miss Vina B. Abbott, of Monroe, Wis. Mrs. Sprague is the daughter of Luke and Tamar (Davis) Lanphear, who were natives of Massachusetts, and early settlers near Milton, Wis. After the death of her mother, Mrs. Sprague was adopted by Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Abbott, then of Spring Valley Corners. To her excellent womanly qualities, literary attainments, love of home, genuine home-making and cheerful encouragement, Mr. Sprague is largely indebted for the measure of success and enjoyment that has fallen to his lot. Mr. and Mrs. Sprague are the parents of three children: Louis A., Jessie E. and Wilson Abbott. Louis A. Sprague married Miss Martha E. Barber, of Brodhead, and lives in Elgin, Ill., where for eight years he was the foreman of the printing department at the Elgin Watch Factory, and is now with the Willson Printing Co., of that city; he has two daughters, Leila and Gladys. Wilson A. Sprague married Miss Marguerite K. Brice, of Brodhead, and is employed in his father's office; he has two children, Jessie Brice and Burr Sprague, Junior.

Mr. Sprague and his wife are Unitarians. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, but is best known fraternally in the Masonic order, of which he has been an active member for over thirty years. He has been six times elected master of Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M. He is a Royal Arch Mason, having joined Evansville Chapter, No. 35, in 1867, and is thoroughly versed in the mystic lore of the craft. Many brother Masons have requested him to conduct the ceremonies of the order at their burial, and in response to such requests Mr. Sprague has officiated at nearly forty Masonic funerals in Wisconsin and Illinois.

Mr. Sprague has been identified with the Republican party ever since its organization, and for many years has been a leader in local and county politics. The last year of his residence in Orfordville he represented his district in the State Legislature, being the youngest member, but one, of that body. In 1879 he was again chosen to represent his district in the State Legislature, and at the following election he was a third time made a member of that body. During these winters at Madison he formed valuable and lasting associations with men of prominence throughout the State, and has always remained a well-known figure at the Capitol. In the winters of 1880 and 1881 he served on the Judiciary committee, and was one of the leaders of the Capital Punishment debate, which was the most hotly contested matter before the House in 1880.

Mr. Sprague began the study of law in 1867, but did not devote his entire time to his profession until about 1879. During the years 1889 and 1890 he served as district attorney for Green county, removing temporarily to Monroe during his term of office. In 1890 he returned to Brodhead. During nearly the whole of Mr. Sprague's active business life he has conducted a real-estate and loan business, which has been carried on with such quiet care and uniform reliability that few, if any, of his clients realize the extent of his operations in this line alone. For many years his annual loans have amounted to fifty thousand dollars, and the sums safely entrusted to his direct care by non-resident parties have aggregated hundreds of thousands of dollars. Always taking cheerfully upon himself more than his full share of the duties and cares of good citizenship, he has yet given to these multitudinous business cares such unfailing personal attention, such keenness of judgment and strict integrity of conduct, as to establish himself unassailably in the confidence and respect of all who know him. So well known is his character that never, even in the heat of political campaigns, is the question of his honor raised.

His ancestry reaches back through successive generations of American citizens, through the Revolutionary period, to the early Colonial history of our country. Bred upon American soil, and thoroughly imbued with American principles, stanch, patriotic and reliable, Burr Sprague presents an example of good citizenship which the rising generation may well emulate.

JOHN STEPHENS, one of the organizers and most prominent men of Cuba City, Grant county, is the well-known and popular station agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad at that point, which position he has held since the establishment of the station, twenty-eight years ago.

Mr. Stephens was born in Cornwall, England, in June, 1843, being a son of William and Catherine (Dadow) Stephens, who were born and married in England. Later these two came to Wisconsin, with their family, settled at Benton, Lafayette county, and engaged in farming, and here they died, the father in 1888, the mother in 1894. They had a family of five boys and three girls: Alexander, born in England, is now married and a resident of Bremer county; William, born in England, married Miss Harriet Pascoe, of Grant county, and settled at Cuba City, where he died, in 1895, leaving a widow and four children, Francis, Ada, Everett and George; Richard M., born in England, married Mary Pascoe, and is a prominent clergyman of Perry, Iowa; Agnes, born in Wisconsin, is now the wife of William Goldsworthy, of Cuba City, and has four children, John, Roscoe, Kate and Eva; Samuel, born in Wisconsin, married Mary Hannah Rowe, is a resident of Lafayette county, and has six children, Lillie (now Mrs. Buchan, of Benton), Minnie (married to a prominent merchant of Benton), Nellie, Annie, Pearl and Roy; Mary J., sixth child of William and Catherine Stephens, married Rev. James Barnett, a prominent divine of Wisconsin, but is now deceased, having been called away in 1889, leaving no family; Martha, born in Lafayette county, married William Tarrell, and moved to McCook county, S. Dak., where Mrs. Tarrell died in 1896, leaving a family of five children, who still reside in South Dakota; John is our subject.

John Stephens grew to manhood in Benton, Lafayette county, where he pursued the ordinary life of a country boy, attending school during the winter months, and working on the farm in the summer. When the war broke out Mr. Stephens was fired with patriotism, although still a boy, and in 1863 he enlisted in Company C, 2d Wis. Vol. Cavalry, joining his regiment at Memphis, Tenn. He was in active service for two years, until the close of the war, participating in a number of engagements, including Bentonville, New Madrid, the noted Grierson raid into Louisiana, and siege of Vicksburg, and was always at his post of duty. At the close of the war Mr. Stephens was honorably discharged at St. Louis as first sergeant, but afterward detailed for special duty. The climate so affected Mr. Stephens that he was taken sick, was sent to a hospital, where he remained two months, and it was three years after his return home before he in any way recovered.

After the war Mr. Stephens settled in Smelser township, Grant county, Wis., where he opened a country store, and was appointed postmaster of the Saint Rose postoffice. In October, 1874, the Chicago & Northwestern railroad was built, established a station, calling it Cuba City, and appointed Mr. Stephens station agent, he also retaining the postoffice for twelve years after. The position of station agent he still holds, to the entire satisfaction of the railroad company, as well as the patrons of the road. For twenty-four years Mr. Stephens served most acceptably as postmaster, and has been chairman of the council board since the town was incorporated, for six different times, has been justice of the peace continuously for twenty-eight years, as well as holding various other local offices, his fellow townsmen feeling that Mr. Stephens is the man to represent them in almost any capacity which requires honesty, ability and uprightness of purpose. Upon coming to Cuba City Mr. Stephens invested largely in real estate, a portion of which he has sold, and owns two large farms, well improved, in Lafayette county.

In 1864 Mr. Stephens came home on a furlough and married Miss Elizabeth Read, of Wisconsin, daughter of Samuel Read, a native of Missouri, whose strong Union sentiments forced him to remove to Wisconsin. Mrs. Stephens was born in Missouri in 1844, and was well educated in her native State. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stephens: (1) Samuel W., born in Cuba City in 1868, entered his father's office when thirteen years old, learned to be a telegraph operator and became his father's assistant, and now has charge of the office, on account of Mr. Stephens' health. In 1889 Samuel married Miss Laura Clemens, of Cuba City, her father being one of the pioneers and a prominent merchant of the town. Samuel and his wife have two children: Fred C., born in Cuba City in 1894, and Dwight, born in September, 1899. (2) Charles, born in Cuba City in 1875, was for eight years station agent at Layton Park, Milwaukee, for the Chicago & Northwestern, and is now holding a very lucrative and responsible position in the cashier's office of that road at Chicago. (3) Frank H., born in Cuba City in 1878, learned railroad work in his father's office, and is now one of the trusted employes of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, serving as relief agent and operator of the Madison division.

Politically Mr. Stephens has for many years been a Republican, but late issues have made an independent of him, and he now votes as his conscience dictates. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stephens are earnest members of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Stephens is a member of the G. A. R. Post of Hazel Green, and also the one at Cuba City. The home of these estimable people is one of the finest residences in the town, and Mr. Stephens is constantly improving it. So closely is Mr. Stephens identified with the growth of Cuba City that the history of one is but the account of the progress of the other. During all the years of his steady advancement Mr. Stephens has made few, if any, enemies, while he can scarcely count all his friends, their number being legion. Kind, genial, hospitable, faithful in the discharge of his duties, both as a private citizen and as a public official, Mr. Stephens is one of the best types of the veteran in private life, under his own "vine and fig tree," surrounded by "olive branches."

GEORGE TUFFLEY, a retired farmer living at Lancaster, Grant county, and an ex-soldier of the United States volunteer army, was born in Warwickshire, England, April 10, 1818. His parents, John and Margaret (Hopkins) Tuffley, removed when George was about six years old to Birmingham, where at the age of eight he began to work at making pearl buttons, and so continued two years. Dissatisfied with this trade, he tried several others, and at the age of fourteen years was apprenticed to a gunmaker, learned the trade thoroughly, and followed it in both England and America.

When twenty-three years of age Mr. Tuffley married Miss Mary Ann Darby, a native of Birmingham. Having already decided to sail for America, Mr. Tuffley, in February, 1850, with his wife and three children, embarked on board the sailing vessel "Camillius" for the port of New Orleans, and after a voyage lasting seven weeks and four days arrived in safety. He had early formed a high opinion of American institutions, and longed to become a citizen of the country in which every voter had a voice in shaping the laws, and within thirty minutes after landing in the Crescent City he had sought out a justice of the peace, and had taken the oath of allegiance to the United States government.

From New Orleans Mr. Tuffley and his family went on a large steamer to St. Louis, and there transferred themselves and their baggage to a smaller one, bound for Galena, Ill., at which place Mr. Tuffley worked three weeks at his trade. He then came to Grant county, Wis., April 10, 1850, for five years worked at gunsmithing in Platteville, then abandoned it for farming, buying government land in Marion township for fifty cents an acre. Within two years from the time of his first purchase he was the owner of 400 acres of fine woodland, and although he had no experience in farm life, or as a woodman, he acquired the necessary knowledge quite rapidly, and eventually became one of the best and most prosperous farmers of the county. As time passed on, however, the clouds of war began to lower, and soon the cry of secession rang throughout the land. Mr. Tuffley, as a patriotic American citizen, almost at once responded to the call to arms, although the day was fast approaching when he would be exempt from military service. But a desire to preserve the integrity of the flag of his adopted country filled his heart, and he enlisted in October, 1861, in Company K, 12th Wis. V. I., and served three years and twenty days, his discharge papers being dated Oct. 30, 1864. For nearly a year and a half Mr. Tuffley was with his regiment in Kansas, engaged in active operations, but the first severe fighting in which he took part was at the siege of Vicksburg, Miss., in which the gallant 12th Wisconsin held a prominent and conspicuous position. Mr. Tuffley also served with his regiment in the Atlanta campaign, participating in its most deadly battles, including the battle of Atlanta itself—the deadliest of all—on July 22, 1864. He also fought at Kenesaw Mountain, and in many other important engagements. About the time that Gen. Sherman was prepared to start on the famous march to the sea the term of enlistment of the 12th Wisconsin expired, and it was honorably discharged and mustered out. Thomas Tuffley, eldest son of George, enlisted at the same time with his father, served until the end of the war, and is now a resident of Boscobel, Grant county.

Mr. Tuffley, although he resumed farming on his return from the war, and calls the old farm his home, passed much of his time, together with his son Thomas, in the city of Lancaster. To the marriage of George and Mary Ann (Darby) Tuffley came twelve children, of whom seven were left with their mother when the father started off for the war, and two were born during his term of service. Five are still living, viz.: Thomas, mentioned above; Margaret, wife of Joseph Frazier, who resides near Mount Hood, Oregon; Clara, wife of Matthew Lambert, of Marion township, Grant county; George, the present recorder of deeds of Grant county; and Lincoln, the youngest, who resides on the old home farm in Marion. Mr. Tuffley has had his share of family afflictions. While in the service of his adopted country five of his children were called away, between the ages of eight months and seventeen years. His lamented and estimable wife, who was three years younger than himself, died in April, 1886, most deeply mourned by her husband and surviving children.

In politics Mr. Tuffley has been a Republican from the time he became entitled to a vote, and exercised his first Presidential franchise for John C. Fremont, in 1856. He has himself been honored with election to several offices, having served as chairman of the Marion town board two years, as town clerk for five years, and for many years as justice of the peace, and he has proven himself to be at heart a true and patriotic American. His record is one in which his descendants may well take pride in years after he has, in due course of nature, succumbed to the inevitable. His religion is governed by the Golden Rule of the Master, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them," and no man in need ever passed unaided from his door.

WALTER LITTLE, one of the prominent, representative farmers of Janesville township, Rock county, residing in section 19, was born in Roxburghshire, Scotland, Aug. 12, 1839, a son of John and Elizabeth (Blythe) Little, also natives of Scotland. His paternal grandfather died in Scotland. The father of our subject was an only son. The maternal grandfather, Thomas Blythe, who also died in Scotland, when about eighty-six, was by occupation a farmer. He had two children, one son and one daughter.

John Little, father of Walter Little, was a contractor, and also operated a limekiln in Scotland. Coming to America in 1853, and locating in Janesville, Wis., he died there in 1865, aged seventy-six. John Little was married twice, and his first wife, mother of our subject, died in Scotland in 1841; both were stanch Presbyterians. Nine children were born to them, eight sons and one daughter, five now living: Thomas, John, James and Walter, all of Janesville township; and Andrew, of Blue Earth, Minnesota.

Coming to America with his father when fourteen years of age, Walter Little worked upon the home farm until old enough to start out in life for himself. In order to gain necessary funds to carry out his plans, he hired himself to his father for two years; then bought a yoke of oxen and broke ground. In time he came to have six yoke of oxen, and also ran a threshing machine for a number of years. "All things come to him who waits," as the saying goes, and, after some years of patient, persistent endeavor, Walter Little had sufficient money to purchase, in 1864, a fine farm of 260 acres in Janesville township, in section 19, where he has since resided, and which he has greatly improved.

On Dec. 31, 1864, Walter Little was married to Miss Lizzie Spence, daughter of Bartholomew Walker and Elizabeth (Dixon) Spence, and five children have been born of this union: Joseph W., George Dixon, Harvey Henry, Ellen Elizabeth and Walter Blythe, all of whom are still unmarried and residing at home.

Mr. Little's life is a good example of what can be accomplished by hard work and careful management, and his success is something to be justly proud of, as it has been won by his own efforts, and in the face of business adversities which would have overwhelmed many a man. In the early part of his business career he had a partner in the buying, selling and shipping of stock, to the Eastern markets, and when they ceased to do business together, unfortunately for Mr. Little, no settlement was made. Taking advantage of this, the former partner took the matter to the courts, and, after many years of litigation, Mr. Little was left, as he says, "With $25,000 less than nothing." However, his credit was good, and he was trusted for a few Short Horn cattle and Clydesdale horses, which enabled him to begin again, with what success his present position amply testifies. He makes a specialty of breeding blooded stock, of the best strains only, among which are Short Horn cattle, Clydesdale horses, and blooded hogs of several varieties. Although he had but little time to devote to educational purposes after coming to this country, he had been thoroughly grounded in the common branches in Scotland, and his own native intelligence supplied the rest. Politically Mr. Little is independent in his ideas, with a leaning toward the Democratic party, and has served most acceptably as town supervisor, township assessor, and chairman of the school board. Mr. and Mrs. Little have a very pleasant home, on their highly cultivated farm, and are highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends.

FORDYCE R. MELVIN, who is spending the last years of his honorable and upright life in Brooklyn, Green county, in a well-earned freedom from the cares of active life, was born in Geauga county, Ohio, July 23, 1832, a son of Alonzo and Roenna (Lyman) Melvin, both natives of Massachusetts. They were the parents of a family of thirteen children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Fordyce R.; Sarah E., wife of J. G. Rowley; Elihu Oliver, of Washington; Austin A., of Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; Crisilda R.; and Edward P., of Sanborn, Iowa. The father was always a farmer, and when he came to Coshocton county, Ohio, about 1817, located on a farm. A few years later he went to near Natchez, Miss., where he stayed five years, and then went to Massachusetts, soon after moving with his father to Geauga county, Ohio, as early as 1823, and there he made his home until 1848, in which year he went to Cattaraugus county, N. Y. In 1851 he came to the town of Brooklyn, and settled on what is now the Alsop place, where he owned 500 acres. Here he died in 1873, at the age of seventy-eight; his widow survived until the spring of 1880, when she died at the age of seventy-five. They were both members of the Congregational Church, and their worthy lives reflected no discredit on their faith. In Ohio Mr. Melvin was town supervisor, and there he also filled other positions. Reuben

Melvin, his father, was a native of Massachusetts, and of Scotch-Irish descent. He was the only son of an only son, and moved from Massachusetts to Ohio, where he settled, and died in Geauga county at the age of seventy-eight years. When a boy he was old enough at the closing of the Revolutionary war to bear arms, and had started for the seat of war with his gun on his shoulder when he heard that peace had been concluded. By occupation he was a farmer. The maternal grandfather of F. R. Melvin was Azariah Lyman, a farmer and a native of Massachusetts. He was of English descent, and could trace the Lyman ancestry back to the time of William the Conqueror. The Lymans were among the early settlers of New England.

Fordyce R. Melvin lived, until he was sixteen years of age, in Ohio, where he was reared on a farm. He was instructed in the district schools, and in Geauga Seminary, at Chester, Ohio. In the spring of 1851 he came to Wisconsin with his parents, and settled on a farm, which is now a part of the present village of Brooklyn. He remained under the parental roof until he reached adult years, when he went to farming on rented land. In May, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, 2d Wis. V. I., serving until the following August, when he was discharged on account of sickness. Recovering his health, he again entered the service as a member of Company K, 24th N. Y. V. I., where he continued until October of the following year, when he was again discharged for disability, on account of being shot through both arms in the second battle of Bull Run. During this time he had been promoted to corporal. While in the 2d Wisconsin he fought in the first battle at Bull Run. Mr. Melvin was under fire in several other smaller engagements, and always bore himself as a gallant soldier. After his discharge from the service he spent some time canvassing, and doing other work, such as his wounded arms would permit.

In politics Mr. Melvin is a stanch Republican. In 1868 he was elected county commissioner, and was filling that office in 1869, when the law creating it was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Mr. Melvin was elected county treasurer in 1870 and filled the office six years, during which time he lived at Monroe, but always claimed Brooklyn as his home. When Mr. Melvin retired from office at Monroe he came back to Brooklyn, and for two years carried on the farm belonging to his father's estate. He was elected to the General Assembly in 1879, and served one term. For ten years following this he was agent for the American Express Company, at the same time doing fire insurance and public conveyancing. He is still a notary public, insurance agent and conveyancer.

On May 27, 1874, Mr. Melvin married Miss Emily Bartlett, a daughter of Joseph and Ann P. (Willetts) Bartlett. Mrs. Melvin holds to a faith that is both of the Quaker and Presbyterian persuasion. Mr. Melvin belongs to Brooklyn Lodge, No. 251, F. & A. M. As might well be expected from his devoted and loyal service, he is a member of T. L. Sutphan Post, G. A. R., of Evansville, Wis. For fifty years Mr. Melvin has been a resident of this town, and here he erected a fine home in 1881.

E. D. PEAKE, Esq., the popular and genial postmaster at Jamestown, Grant county, is one of the representative men of his part of the county, and well deserves mention in a volume like this, devoted as it is to the earnest and capable men who have brought Southwestern Wisconsin to its present position.

'Squire Peake, as he is commonly called, was born in Delaware county, N. Y., in July, 1836, son of Warern L. and Amy (Chase) Peake, both natives of Delaware county, where the father was born in 1814, and the mother two years later. Their marriage was celebrated in their native county, and there they settled. Mr. Peake was a lumberman and farmer during the greater part of his life, and died in Delaware county in 1862. Mrs. Peake is still living, in Greene county, N. Y., and has a home near the Hudson river. Two of their four children are still living: George, born in 1845, died when a young man. Adaline was drowned when a child, in 1862. Matilda, born in 1837, is the wife of Donald B. Smith, of Greene county, N. Y., and is the mother of three children, Amy, Edward and James B.

E. D. Peake was the eldest of his father's children, and grew up under the parental roof, receiving unusually good educational advantages, both in the public schools and in Walton Academy, a somewhat celebrated school of Delaware county. When he was eighteen years of age he engaged in school teaching, which he followed with considerable success until 1865. During the Civil war, however, he was a lumber contractor for a time at Jacksonville, Fla., dealing with the Quartermaster's Department, and acting therefor.

In 1865 Mr. Peake came West to Illinois, and settling in the northwestern part of the State followed mining during the summer and public-school teaching during the winter. In April, 1866, he came to Grant county, Wis., and opened a school at Georgetown, where he spent some months teaching. This did not seem to be a satisfactory location, and he later came to Jamestown, where he followed the same lines, mining and teaching.

Mr. Peake and Miss Martha E. Judd were married in 1871, in Varysburg, Wyoming Co., N. Y. Mrs. Peake is the daughter of Jefferson and Amy (Nichols) Judd, both born in Vermont, and both died when Mrs. Peake was a child. They located in Genesee county, N. Y., where she was born in 1844, and she was well educated, being for a time a teacher in the public schools of her native State. Mrs. Peake has three brothers living: (1) Harvey C. Judd, born in Genesee county, N. Y., lives at Detroit City, Minn. (2) Henry C., a resident of Bloomington, Wis., is a prosperous farmer. (3) Jefferson D. lives at Monticello, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Peake settled on a farm in Jamestown, Grant Co., Wis., where they have lived to the present time. They have no children, but their kindly disposition is felt throughout the community. In politics Mr. Peake has always been a Republican, and he cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. For about eight years he has been justice of the peace, and for a long time has been notary public. He has been comparing clerk for the State Senate. Under President Harrison he was appointed postmaster, and holds the position to the present time. In religion Mr. Peake and his wife are members of the Methodist Church, and they are among the best people of the community.

JOHN BUNT, deceased. Ever since its settlement Lafayette county, Wis., has been noted for its fertile land and attractive inducements to settlers, but for many years the farming was so conducted as to bring no great measure of success to the resident. A change was wrought when a number of English agriculturists settled upon this beautiful rolling country, and began to practice those thrifty and thorough methods of cultivating the soil which make of their own country a garden spot the world delights to see. Among those who made here an attractive home and almost revolutionized farming methods in his immediate locality was John Bunt, the subject of this sketch.

John Bunt was born in Cornwall, England, May 8, 1825, a son of Nicholas and Mary (Kay) Bunt, both of whom died in England, where John grew to manhood. In 1848 he there married Miss Elizabeth Sowden, a native of Cornwall also, born June 24, 1826, daughter of William and Elizabeth Sowden, both of whom lived out their honorable lives in their native country. Not long after marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bunt came to America, and soon settled in the locality where they continued to make their home. Attracted to California by the tales of the riches of that country, Mr. Bunt went there in 1852, and remained until 1854, when he returned and bought the farm which he afterward converted into one of the finest in the county. Many of those who came to Wisconsin had been miners in England, but Mr. Bunt had been a farmer, and thoroughly understood the business in a scientific way, which was soon evidenced in the improvement which took place in the land he owned and operated. These methods of farming have since been adopted by many others in the locality, resulting in a state of perfection in agricultural activities which may well call forth words of admiration. This is conceded to be one of the richest agricultural districts in the whole State, and the farmers live as do the landed gentry of other countries, with their blooded cattle and stock, their handsome, modern residences, and all the culture and refinements of life.

Children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bunt as follows: Mary J., born in Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wis., married John Reed, a farmer near Galena, Ill., and has two children, Charles W. and Myrtle; Anna E. married James Nicholas, who resides at Cuba City, and has one son, John E.; William S. married a Mrs. Slater, of Pennsylvania, and resides on his farm in Ipswich, Wis.; John H. married Dorothy Clayton, of Elk Grove, and they reside on the old homestead at Elk Grove, with one son, John C.; Delia, a cultured, educated lady, has devoted her life to the care of her aged mother; Lewis M. married Mary McNett, and they reside on a part of the old homestead, it being divided into two farms (they have three daughters, Hazel, Edna and Louise); Amy L. married Lewis McNett, who resides on a farm near Elmo, and they have two children, Ethel and Velma; Richard, after finishing a district-school education, graduated at the Platteville Business College, and then entered the Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., but on account of ill health gave this up, and with his brother Charles located for a time on a ranch in Iowa; Charles, who was educated in the State Normal School, conducts the Iowa farm.

The death of Mr. Bunt took place on June 8, 1888. He left his family two large farms at Elk Grove, comprising several hundred acres of land under a high state of cultivation. As a stock raiser he had been very successful, his products in this line being always the best in the market. The home of Mr. Bunt had been made by him one of the most attractive in this part of the State, a beautiful lawn surrounding the elegant brick mansion, giving it an air of seclusion and refinement seldom observed in the ordinary country home.

For some time previous to his death Mr. Bunt had been troubled by a serious affection of the kidneys, but a naturally robust constitution prolonged his life. When the time of his release came he was sincerely mourned by the whole community, as he was universally respected and esteemed. Many in his vicinity had reason to know of his generosity and liberality, and, although he was never formally connected with any religious denomination, he was a liberal supporter of the M. E. Church, and his influence was always in the direction of morality. In 1897 Mrs. Bunt and her daughter Delia removed to Platteville, where they have rented a beautiful home, and they are among the most highly esteemed residents of that city.

EDWARD MACDONALD, M. D., one of the leading representatives of the medical profession at Cuba City, Grant county, has been very successful and built up a large and constantly increasing practice. Being a native of Grant county, the people of Cuba City feel especially proud of his distinction, recognizing in him a son of the county who is a credit to his birthplace.

Edward MacDonald was born at Rockville, Grant county, in July, 1851, a son of Henry and Mary (Hall) MacDonald, of Scottish parentage, who married in the East and came to Wisconsin in the early days of this section of the country, settling in Grant county, where the mother died in 1878. Later Henry MacDonald married again, and moved to Wausau, Wis., where he died in June, 1898, deeply mourned by all who knew him. By his first marriage he had two sons, Edward (our subject) and William, the latter born in Harrison, Grant county, where he received a good common-school education; he is now a railroad man, residing in Tomahawk, Wis., is married to a native of the State, and has two daughters.

Our subject received his early education at the Platteville Normal, attending that institution of learning from 1869 to 1874, after which he taught school in Iowa and Lafayette counties for several terms. He then entered the Miami Medical College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and later Rush Medical College, Chicago, graduating from the latter in the class of 1879, with honors. After his graduation Dr. MacDonald located at Hawkeye and New Albin, Iowa, where he followed his profession until his removal, in 1891, to Cuba City, where he purchased a beautiful home on Main street; he has since resided in the city, engaged in very successful practice. Keeping fully abreast of all the new discoveries in his profession, Dr. MacDonald brings to bear in his practice not only skill, but knowledge, and wisely treats his cases according to the latest scientific methods.

In 1881 Dr. MacDonald married Miss Maggie Gunand, of Belmont, Lafayette county, daughter of Justin and Margaret Gunand, old pioneers, of French extraction, of Lafayette county. Mrs. MacDonald was born in Lafayette county, where she grew to womanhood, and received her education. To this union one daughter has been born, Emily, a member of the class of 1902, Cuba City high school.

Politically Dr. MacDonald is a staunch Republican, but has never aspired to office. Fraternally he is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 185, Georgetown, Wis.; of the order of K. of P., Benton Lodge, No. 134; and of the Modern Woodmen, of Georgetown, Lodge No. 6084. Although Dr. MacDonald has been forced to rely upon his own efforts in the struggle of life, he has already succeeded wonderfully well, and is destined to secure still greater honors in his profession, as well as in private life, for he enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow townsmen, and the regard of a large circle of friends.

Ed Mac Donald. M.S.

SAMUEL ARTHUR is one of the prominent stock raisers and influential farmer citizens of Elk Grove township, Lafayette county. He was born in Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., Nov. 30, 1851, and his parents were John and Mary A. (Rolins) Arthur, both of whom were born in England. They came to this country and settled at Hazel Green as early as 1845, later moving to Platteville, where Mr. Arthur successfully followed mining for a number of years. His trade was that of a plasterer, which occupation he followed for some years prior to his retirement from active life, and he is now one of the respected residents of Platteville. The mother died in 1853, two sons surviving her, James and our subject.

James Arthur was born in Elk Grove township, grew to manhood in that locality, and learned the trade of plasterer, which he followed during his younger years. He married Emma Phillips, of Elk Grove, and they removed to Sioux City, Iowa, where he became a contractor, and then moved to Oto, Iowa, where he still resides, and is one of the prominent citizens of that town.

Our subject was educated in the Platteville schools and learned the trade of plasterer with his father, following same for some years. On account of ill health he was obliged to give up that work, and commenced to farm. In 1873 he was married to Miss Lydia Bennett, a daughter of Anson and Elvira Bennett, who was a graduate of the Platteville Normal School, and taught for a number of years in Lafayette and Grant counties. Our subject settled on the George Huntingdon farm, and there Mrs. Arthur died in June, 1876. In January, 1878, Mr. Arthur married Miss Sadie Robinson, who was born in Grant county in July, 1853, a daughter of Winthrop and Mary A. (Umpstead) Robinson, and received a fair education in East Dubuque and in Grant county. After this marriage our subject settled on his father's farm for the following three years, and then, in 1881, rented the Henry Scheel farm, near the Grant county line, in Elk Grove, which he still continues to occupy. It is a 400-acre farm, and Mr. Arthur's case in this respect is probably without a parallel in his section, he having paid Mr. Scheel over $26,- 000, in cash, for rental. On this place he has erected good, substantial buildings, and he has one of the best cultivated farms in his locality. He owns a farm of 334 acres near Lancaster, which he rents.

The children of our subject's second union are: Samuel Willie, born in 1880, a bright young man, now taking a course in the Platteville Business College; Charles, born in 1884; Eva May, in 1886; Jennie, in 1889; John Lester, in 1890; Nelson, in 1892; and Clarence, in 1894. All of them are students in school.

Politically Mr. Arthur has been identified with the Republican party, and for a long time has held the office of road commissioner. He is one of the largest and most successful stock raisers of the locality, and is considered an authority on many agricultural matters. The esteem in which he and his refined and cultivated wife are held in the community is very genuine, and they may be justly regarded in the light of representative people of Elk Grove township.

FRANKLIN R. DERRICK is engaged in the fire insurance business in Brodhead, Green county, and is one of the leading men of the place in regard to general character, standing and personal integrity. He is a genial and courteous gentleman, and enjoys a wide circle of personal friends.

Mr. Derrick was born in Spring Grove, Green county, Wis., May 25, 1850, and is a son of Franklin H. and Harriet A. (Boslow) Derrick, natives of New York and Canada, respectively. A sketch of his father appears elsewhere in this work, to which the reader is referred for fuller information as to family history and ancestral data. It is said that the grandfather of Franklin R. walked from Illinois to New York guided by his compass. His maternal grandfather was John Boslow, was a native of Canada, and of German descent. He moved into Ohio, and early in the '40s came to Wisconsin, and followed farming in Green county, where he died well advanced in years. He was the father of a numerous family.

Franklin R. Derrick grew to manhood under the parental roof in the town of Spring Grove, and secured his education at the district school, and at the high school in Brodhead. He studied dentistry in this city, and was engaged in its practice about fifteen years. Tiring of office practice he went on the road, and sold specialties for five years. In 1898 he bought the fire insurance business of Joseph Thompson, and is devoting himself to its expansion. Mr. Derrick was married, August 22, 1876, to Miss Arabella N. Moore, daughter of William H. and Susan (Moore) Mocre. To their union was born one daughter, who died in infancy. Mr. Derrick was formerly a Republican, but is now a Prohibitionist, and is a candidate on the State ticket of that party for the office of railroad commissioner.

BENJAMIN SHINOE (deceased) was a farmer in the town of Paris, Grant county, where he long sustained an enviable reputation as an honorable and upright man, a good citizen and an industrious and successful farmer.

Mr. Shinoe was born in Virginia Jan. 26, 1817, a son of Jeremiah and Deborah (Reed) Shinoe. The father was born in Rouen, France, and came to this country in 1806, settling first in Virginia, and then moving to Ohio. In 1853 he moved to Wisconsin, and made this State his home until his death. With his wife he is buried near Platteville. They had a large family, all of whom are deceased except four: (1) Oliver resides in the town of Waterloo, Grant county. (2) Jane is the wife of W. H. Cooper, of Cuba City. (3) Margaret is the widow of Joseph Head, of Platteville. (4) Annie is the wife of James Crisp, of Ohio.

Benjamin Shinoe reached his majority in Ohio, and there received part of his education in the public schools; he was also for a time in attendance upon a school in Virginia. When a young man, in Illinois, he married Miss Elizabeth McClees, daughter of William and Diana (Wells) McClees. William McClees was a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and his wife was a native of Columbus, Ky. They married in Kentucky, but very soon afterward removed to Tazewell county, Ill., where he followed farming and died in 1841, his wife surviving him many years, and passing away in 1875, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Shinoe, who is the only one of the family now living. She obtained her education in the public schools of Tazewell county. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Shinoe found a home in the town of Paris, Grant county, in 1847, while it was still a part of the territory. Mr. Shinoe secured a quarter section of good farm land one and a half miles east of Dickeyville, and here he cleared up a fine farm, making his home there until 1883. That year he purchased the "Big Platte Ferry Farm," a magnificent estate of 260 acres, where he made his home until his death, in 1899. Mr. Shinoe was a Republican, and long took an active part in political work.

To our subject and wife were born twelve children: (1) Lewis, the eldest son, born in Grant county, grew up at home, married Miss Nancy Rister, and is now residing on his farm in the town of Paris. His family consists of two children, William H. and Cora, the latter now the wife of Martin Bolan, of Paris. (2) Mary, born in February, 1849, is now the widow of Cyrus A. Hornbeck, a veteran of the Civil war: she has had six children, Melvin H., Albert, Orvil L., George, Minnie E., and Earl. (3) Josephine, born in Paris in 1850, married Henry Harvey, and moved to Farley, Iowa, where he died, leaving a wife and five children, Alfred, Mortimer, Guy E., Viola and Walter. (4) Albert, born Oct. 24, 1852, has had an extensive and varied experience. He obtained his education in the public schools. When a boy of seventeen years he lost his right hand by accident, in a threshing machine. During his early manhood he was engaged in railroading, and had a situation on the barges on the Mississippi river. As a homesteader he located near Lake Superior, in Wisconsin, where he remained three years, and in 1894 went to Montana, spending some months as a prospector in that region. On the death of his father he came back to Wisconsin, and has remained with his widowed mother to the present time, never having married. (5) Sophia, born in January, 1855, is the wife of George Rich, of Dubuque, Iowa, where he is engaged as a ship carpenter. They have a family of four children, Florence, Lottie, Jessie and Raymond. (6) Dianna D., born in Paris Feb. 28, 1857, is the wife of Henry Miller, a machinist of Minneapolis. (7) Viola, born Nov. 18, 1859, is the wife of Capt. L. Brenen, of West Superior, Wis., where he has a good standing as one of the leading steamboat captains on the Lakes. They have two children, Olive and Ethel. (8) Margaret J., born in November, 1861, married William Sheffield, and is now living in Dubuque, Iowa, where their two sons, Claude and Clarence, are attending the city schools. (9) Elizabeth, born in April, 1864, married Fred Johns and lived in Cuba City, where he died, leaving one daughter, Huldah.

Mrs. Johns later married Benjamin Magner, and now resides in Minneapolis. To this union one son has been born. (10) Benjamin, born in September, 1866, married Miss Catherine Jungles, and they have one daughter, Maud S. He is now a ship builder in West Superior, Wis. (11) Charles H., born June 9, 1869, grew up on the homestead, where he is still living with his mother. (12) Minnie died in childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Shinoe celebrated their Golden Wedding, and she now holds her badge as one of the members of the Wisconsin State Centennial.

Mrs. Elizabeth Shince is a member of the Christian Church, with which she united when a young girl. She is a lady of character and ability, is the present health officer of the town of Paris, and is now vice-president of the Union Church Society. She was elected president of the Soldiers Aid Society, serving during the Civil war. Mrs. Shinoe comes of old patriotic stock, and her grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. She is well versed in national affairs, is a strong advocate of prohibition, and is a cultured lady, engaging in her manners, and of charming conversational ability.

GEORGE ZIMMERMANN, one of the well-known veterans of the war of the Rebellion located in Grant county, is a native of Bavaria, Germany, where he was born, May 28, 1836, a son of Joseph and Mary Ann Zimmermann. When the subject of this sketch was still a boy his parents decided to leave their native land and seek a new home across the ocean. Severing the ties of a lifetime, these worthy people made the long and dangerous journey, and after landing in the United States located at Buffalo, where they remained until their death.

The spirit of emigration burned, however, in the breast of their son, and in 1854 George Zimmermann left the parental roof-tree, and setting his face westward, journeyed throughout the West, and finally, in 1858, settled in Prairie du Chien, Wis., the next year locating in Elgin, Fayette county, Iowa. In his native land this young man had learned the trade of wagonmaker, and he has followed it all his life. When the Civil war broke out, like so many German-Americans, George Zimmermann entered the service of the United States army, being enrolled in 1862 as a member of Company H, 38th Reg., I. V. I., for three years. Mr. Zimmermann was mustered in at Dubuque, Iowa, and soon after left for the seat of war, participating in many important engagements, including the siege of Vicksburg, under Gen. Grant; capture of Forts Morgan and Blakely, and many others. At Houston, Texas, Mr. Zimmermann received an honorable discharge, in 1865, and obtained his final pay, from the government, at Davenport, Iowa. Shortly after the war Mr. Zimmermann located at Prairie du Chien, Wis., where he successfully followed his trade, and remained until 1873, removing then to Mount Hope, and two years later to the neighboring village of Patch Grove, where he lived about eight years, and then returned to Mt. Hope, where he has since made his home, and is now engaged in the repairing and making of wagons.

In 1859 Mr. Zimmermann was married to Miss Henrietta Koepp, a native of Germany, and seven children have been born to this worthy couple: A. G., an attorney of Madison, Wis., recently elected county judge; Mary, now Mrs. U. T. Schneyer, of Mount Hope; Oscar S., who displayed the same patriotic spirit that so many years ago animated his good father by enlisting at Tomah, Wis., and going to Porto Rico, as a member of Company K, 3d Wis. Regt., in the late war with Spain, and his family mourn his death, which occurred in Porto Rico in 1898; George J., principal of the Mt. Hope high schools; Fred J., cashier and stockholder in a mercantile establishment at Fennimore, Wis.; Edwin L., a journalist at Fargo, N. Dak.; and Miss Lou, a teacher.

Few men have better demonstrated their love for their country than has this brave old soldier, who not only risked his own life, but offered up his young son on the altar of his country's honor; and during the long years of peaceful citizenship has done his duty as a man, a husband and a father, and therefore justly enjoys the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen.

JOHN R. MUFFLEY is one of the earliest residents of Boscobel, and among the pioneers of the State, having emigrated to Wisconsin in 1846, two years before it was admitted to the Union.

Mr. Muffley was born in Westmoreland county, about thirty miles from Pittsburg. Penn., Jan. 22, 1824, son of Joseph and Eliza (Echols) Muffley, both natives of Pennsylvania. Joseph Muffley was a son of John Muffley, a soldier of the Revolution, who fought in that war for six years, was a school teacher, and when the subject of this sketch was ten years old, removed his family from the old homestead of the grandfather to a new home, a few miles from Greensburg, the county seat, where he continued teaching, both English and German. When he died he was buried in the old cemetery where his father was interred, not far from the old homestead. The mother made her home with her children after his death, finally passing away at the age of eighty-nine, in 1894, while residing with her daughter, Mrs. Barbara Houghtatalling, in Martin county, Minn. There were eight sons and two daughters in this family, and six of the sons and one daughter are still living at this writing, in 1900.

John R. Muffley grew to manhood in his native State, learning the trade of cabinet-maker, but as soon as he had served his apprenticeship he decided to come West, and started with a young man named John Fritz, who had been a fellow apprentice, and the latter's brother, Conrad Fritz. These three started from home March 17, 1846, and reached Galena, Ill., April 3 following, making the trip from Pittsburg by water, down the Ohio to St. Louis, and thence to Galena, on a boat named "La Clede." From Galena they went directly to Fairplay, town of Jamestown, Grant Co., Wis., where our subject made his home, has worked for a short time at his trade, but soon engaged in carpenter work, and followed that occupation for many years. Among other things, John R. Muffley also tried mining, meeting with considerable success, and in 1854 entered a half section of land in the town of Watterstown, about two miles east of Boscobel. Two years later, a few months before the completion of the railroad to this point, Mr. Muffley removed to Boscobel and purchased two lots in anticipation of the growth of the place, erecting a residence on his lots. The winter following was so severe that but little work of any kind was done, but the following spring he found plenty of employment as a carpenter and also throughout the season. In the fall of the same year Mr. Muffley purchased a carload of furniture and embarked in the furniture business, which he has successfully pursued ever since. In 1858 Mr. Muffley erected the building he has since occupied as a place of business.

On May 18, 1851, John Muffley was married to Miss Mary Jane McCormic, a native of Ohio, born April 20, 1833, a daughter of Ezekiel McCormic, one of the pioneers of Grant county. Seven children have been born of this union, four sons and three daughters, of which three sons and two daughters are living in 1901: Eliza J., born April 11, 1852, on Easter Day, married Morris Wells, of Northfield, Minn.; William A., born July 17, 1856, a resident of Kansas City, Mo.; Charles E., born in the building which has been occupied so many years, Aug. 12, 1863, and associated with his father in business; John R., born Sept. 8, 1872, a resident of Boscobel; Harriet P., born Jan. 11, 1854, widow of H. P. Hackney, who died in Nebraska in December, 1899. Those deceased are: Franklin J., born May 17, 1858, died July, 1891, and Luella May, who died at the age of two.

John R. Muffley has seen Boscobel grow from a hamlet to its present size, and has been an important factor in its material welfare. For fifty-four years he has been in business here, and is still hearty and active, notwithstanding his age. Although reared in the Democratic school, Mr. Muffley entered the ranks of the newly formed Republican party, voted for John C. Fremont, and has ever since supported the candidates of that organization. For thirty-six years Mr. and Mrs. Muffley have been consistent members of the Congregational Church, and both are worthy and highly esteemed people.

THOMAS MAHER. Coming from his native Ireland to America when a young man, our subject, by energy and economy, combined with the honest qualities which have gained him friends all through life, has conquered the disadvantages which limited means entailed, and is now one of the substantial and esteemed citizens of Sylvester township, Green county.

Thomas Maher was born June 28, 1827, in Kilkenny, Ireland, where he grew to manhood. He became anxious to make a home and competency under more favorable conditions than were offered in his own locality, and, leaving his parents, Dennis and Honor (Whalen)

Maher, in the old country, he set sail Feb. 25, 1852, and reached New York on the 28th of the following month. He remained in that State, engaged at various kinds of work, until 1857, when he came to Milwaukee, soon afterward—about 1858—locating in Green county, and settling on the fine farm he now owns in 1890. Mr. Maher has been one of the most energetic and industrious farmers of his locality.

Our subject was united in marriage in 1862 to Miss Julia McDonall, a native of Oswego, Ill., born Sept. 27, 1846, and this union has been blessed with a most excellent and interesting family, who have become esteemed citizens of the neighborhood, viz.: Dennis, born in 1863; James, in 1864; Nora, in 1866; Catherine, in 1867; Michael, in 1869; Margaret, in 1871; John, in 1873; Charles, in 1875; Thomas, Jr., in 1876; Julia Ann, in 1878; Ellen, in 1882; Mary, in 1885; Edmond, in 1887.

Born in the faith of the Catholic Church, Mr. Maher has continued an earnest advocate of its principles. The views of the Democratic party are those best suited to his own, and he has voted the ticket of that organization since he obtained the rights of a citizen of this country. By sheer pluck Mr. Maher has worked his way to his present position among his neighbors, and receives from them well-deserved esteem for his many excellent traits of character.

JOHN McCLAIN is a well-known farmer in the town of Paris, Grant county, who has lived a long and useful life, devoted to honest industry and manly purposes, and is still alert and vigorous.

Mr. McClain was born in Warren county, Tenn., Sept. 15, 1827, and is a son of Matthew and Mary (Holland) McClain. The father was born in South Carolina in 1797, and the mother came from North Carolina. They were married in Tennessee, and lived in that State until 1830, the time of her death, when father and son journeyed westward to Jefferson county, Ill., where they found a home for some two years, and in June, 1843, came into Wisconsin to work in the lead mines near Potosi.

In the spring of 1850 John McClain crossed the Plains to seek a fortune in the gold fields of California. Four months were required to make the journey. The Indians were numerous and dangerous, and the little company in which he traveled had many close calls for their lives. John McClain met with remarkable success in mining, and in three months took thirteen thousand dollars from his claim. With this he returned to Wisconsin and purchased from Nelson Dowe a tract of wild land near Potosi, on which he made extensive improvements, clearing it up, and making a fine farm, on which he lived for some years. In 1852 he married Miss Annie Rupp, the daughter of John and Margaret (Houff) Rupp, both born in the Rhine country, Germany. Mr. Rupp and his family came to Pennsylvania in 1836, where he worked as a mason until 1842, when he came West to Wisconsin. Mrs. Rupp died in Pennsylvania a short time before the removal of the family to the West. Mr. Rupp died at Potosi. Mrs. McClain was born in Germany in 1834, and spent the latter part of her girlhood in Wisconsin.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McClain went to Kansas in 1857, with the intention of making a permanent home in that State. After a thorough inspection they were satisfied Grant county offered more attractions for a farming career, and they came back to Wisconsin. Mr. McClain purchased an extensive tract of wild land in Grant county, to which he has added from time to time until he now owns a choice farm of five hundred acres, over half of which is under cultivation. In 1868 he put up fine and substantial farm buildings, and from time to time has improved and beautified his residence until this has become one of the more desirable country homes in Southwestern Wisconsin. For many years, in addition to his ordinary farming, he has carried on extensive operations in raising stock. Mr. and Mrs. John McClain have had a family of twelve children: (1) John, born in Grant county in 1853, married Miss Grace Thurtell, and lives on his farm and cattle ranch in South Dakota. They have five children: John, Grace, Bertha, Glenn and Henry. (2) George, born in Grant county in 1855, married Miss Laura Shadrick, and is a farmer in the town of Paris. They have three sons, Charles, Arthur, and Willard. (3) Mary, born in 1857, is the wife of David Wilson, and lives in the town of Paris. They have three children: George, John and Alice. (4) Margaret, born in 1859, married S. S. Vannatta, who is a farmer in the town of Harrison. They have four children: Albert, Maggie, Hattie, and Lillian. (5) Albert, born in 1861, married Miss Alice Richards, of British Hollow, and lives in South Dakota, where he does an extensive business as a horse dealer, buying for the eastern markets. They have two children, Bessie and Mabel. (6) Charles, born in April, 1864, died in 1879, in the flower of his early manhood. (7) Laura, born in May, 1866, is the wife of Antone Rupp, a resident farmer in the town of Harrison. They have three children: George, Archie, and Florence. (8) Edward, born July 8, 1868, had a good education in the high school at Valparaiso, was for some eight or ten years a miner in Colorado, and now lives at Deadwood, S. Dak. (9) Henry, born at the present family home in September, 1870, went to the Alaska gold fields in 1895, making three journeys to that region, and met with a rich reward for all his privations and perils. The young man returned in 1899, and is now a resident of his father's home. (10) Thomas, born in 1872, died when fifteen years of age. (11) Annie, born in July, 1875, is now the wife of George Woodrome, of Jefferson county, Ill., and the mother of one son, George H. (12) Archie, born in April, 1882, was a student in the Normal, preparing at Platteville for a teacher's career, and is now at home.

Mr. McClain was formerly a Whig, but later supported the Democratic party. In 1896 he voted the Republican ticket, and is now strongly in favor of territorial expansion. For forty-one years without a break he has held the office of school district treasurer in the town of Paris, and has never been requested to give bonds. Mr. McClain has also served on the town board. He started in life without a dollar, and by his own industry and thrift has come to be one of the most prosperous and extensive farmers and stock dealers of this part of the State. The confidence and esteem of the community are extended to him without measure, and his reputation for honesty and integrity is not questioned.

ALPHEUS N. McDONALD. Among the respected citizens of Beetown township, Grant county, is the subject of this review. A native of the township, he was born March 21, 1837, a son of Joseph and Rebecca McDonald, the former of whom came to Grant county among the earliest pioneers. The mother of our subject came to the county some time later than her husband, and here they passed the remainder of their lives, the father dying in 1854, the mother surviving until 1876. The survivors of their family are: Alpheus N., our subject; William; Mrs. Minerva McElhaney; and Mrs. Margaret McGahan. William served in the Civil war from 1861-65, as a member of the 44th Wis. V. I., valiantly doing his duty to his country.

Our subject became a soldier in the Union army in August, 1864, entering Company H, 43d Wis. V. I., and was with his regiment during the whole term of his enlistment, except for about two months, when he was sent to a hospital at Nashville, later to Louisville, Ky., and thence to Quincy, Ill., the surgeon fearing for his life unless he was sent into northern air. Mr. McDonald has never fully recovered, and he has just cause for pride in his record as a soldier.

The marriage of our subject to Miss Mary Jane Hayden, a sister of J. M. Hayden, of Beetown, was celebrated in 1855, and a family of nine children has been born to them, two sons and three daughters living. Mr. McDonald is one of the respected and industrious citizens of Beetown, where he and his family have resided so long.

WILLIAM HARTWIG in his life filled an honorable place among the industrious and useful citizens of Green county, who were content to return an honest day for a day's wages, and glad to deal squarely and fairly with all they met.

Mr. Hartwig was born in Germany in 1825, and married Sophie Haberman in his native land, the young couple coming to the United States in 1849. Here Mr. Hartwig made the beginning of an industrious and highly useful career by doing day's work. His children were: (1) Christian, born in 1850, married Elizabeth Henn. (2) William, born in 1852, married Mary Ansmeir, and died in 1887. (3) Ferdinand, born in 1855, died thirty years later. (4) Mary, born in 1861, married Ferdinand Ausmus, a farmer in Green county. Mrs. Sophie Hartwig, born in 1825, survives her husband, who died in 1890.

Mr. Hartwig was in very desperate circumstances at the time of his arrival in Wisconsin, but his industry, economy and unflinching integrity, aided by the efforts of his faithful wife, in the course of a few years greatly changed conditions, and he soon became one of the large land owners of the county. He was a Republican politically, and a member of the Evangelical Church at Juda, Wis. Mr. Hartwig in his later years disposed of the greater part of his farming land, and was about to move to Juda, where he had bought property and planned to spend his old age with his cherished wife, when he died. Mrs. Hartwig lives in Juda, and her granddaughter, Miss Lydia Hartwig, lives with her, and is highly cherished by her acquaintances. Mrs. Hartwig has been a member of the Evangelical Church for many years.

NICHOLAS FUNK, deceased. This is the name of an honest and hard-working son of Germany, who came to Wisconsin, and gave his life to the development of Grant county. He was modest and unassuming in his personal habits, but was a man of genuine worth, and he is remembered most kindly and regretfully by those who knew him best.

Mr. Funk was born in Prussia in 1827, where he was reared to manhood. He had his education in the Prussian schools, and remained in the Old World until he was a full-grown man. In 1856 he emigrated to this country, and settled in Grant county, Wis., where he followed the occupation of a lead miner at Potosi. In 1859 he married Miss Mary Schordt, who was born in Germany in 1841. She was the daughter of John and Mary (Pick) Schordt, and her mother died in the old country in 1856. Her father with his two children, Mary and her brother, Frank, now of Grant county, came to this country. In 1866 Mr. Funk bought a farm of eighty-two acres on the line of Harrison and Platteville townships. There he erected good substantial buildings, and made his home until he died, in May, 1891, leaving a wife and ten children. (1) Katie, the eldest, is now the wife of Frank School; they live in Rockville, Iowa, and in their family of children are, Peter, Nicholas, Albert, Jennie, Nellie, Arthur and Leo. (2) Mary is the wife of Herman Lankamp, of the town of Harrison, and is the mother of two children, Mary and Susan. (3) Gertie is the wife of Nicholas Heinze, of Grant county, Wis., and is the mother of Louisa, Annie, Herman, William and Tressie. (4) Annie, born on the present homestead, in Grant county, married Joseph Reiter, of Bremer county, Iowa, and is the mother of Mary, Susan, Frankie and John. (5) Lizzie is the wife of Nicholas Lipfred, resides at Sherburne, Martin county, Minn., and has eight children. (6) Susan, now the wife of Peter Linden, lives in the town of Platteville, and is the mother of four children, Katie, Mary, Laura, and Joseph. (7) Maggie, wife of John Langkamp, now resides in the town of Harrison, and is the mother of three children, Willie, Leo and Josephine. (8) NICHOLAS H. FUNK, the only son, was born on the old homestead, Feb. 17, 1877, and was educated in the public schools. Since the death of his father the charge of the homestead has fallen upon his shoulders, and he has tenderly cared for his aged mother. His ability as a farmer, and his honest and open-hearted nature, have brought him to the front. On May 30, 1900, he married Mary A. Doyle, of Platteville, where she acquired a fine education in the Normal School, attending that institution in 1896 and 1897. Her parents are highly respected citizens of Platteville. Through his careful management the farm has constantly improved in value. (9) Josephine is now the wife of Robert Lyght, of Big Patch, Grant county, and has one son, Lester. (10) Lena was born at the old homestead, and lives with her mother. Mr. Funk was a Democrat, and Nicholas H., his son, votes the same ticket. The Funk family are members of the Catholic Church at Platteville, and are counted among the best people of the county. Its various members have led clean and careful lives, avoided the tongue of slander, and have developed an enviable reputation for charity and neighborly deeds.

ISAAC G. DEWITT, ex-postmaster of Wingville, Grant county, is a veteran soldier of the Civil war, and a man of prominence in his locality. He was born in Morrow county, Ohio, in 1843, a son of Peter and Lavina (Bowles) DeWitt. Peter DeWitt was a native of New Jersey, and a prominent physician and surgeon, who came with his family, to Grant county, in 1853, locating later at Montfort, Lafayette county, where he remained until his death, on Nov. 21, 1882. His second wife did not long survive. To Peter DeWitt were born children as follows: Mrs. Elizabeth Loy, who died in 1899, the widow of an ex-soldier; Martin, resident of Kansas; Mary A. married and residing in Nebraska; Thomas B., of Montfort; John, who enlisted in 1861, in the 6th Missouri; and was killed in April, 1866, while in old Mexico; and Isaac G.

Isaac G. DeWitt was educated in Wisconsin. In July, 1862, he enlisted at Montfort, in Company F, 20th Wis. V. I., and served for three years, participating in the battles of Prairie Grove, Yazoo City, siege of Vicksburg; was stationed at New Orleans, at Spanish Fort, and at Fort Blakely, and other points, being honorably discharged, in August, 1865, at Madison, where each soldier received the money due him. During the entire war, Mr. DeWitt proved himself a brave soldier, and his record is one of which he and his children may well be proud. After the war he engaged in newspaper work. During President Harrison's administration, Mr. DeWitt was honored by the appointment of postmaster, which office he filled with credit.

In 1884, Mr. DeWitt married Miss A. Taylor, a native of Hazel Green, Grant county, and a daughter of James T. and Anna Taylor, a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere in this work, who settled in Hazel Green in 1848. Mrs. DeWitt's father is still living, residing in Montfort, but her mother died some years ago. To Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt were born three interesting children: Martin Roy, Jesse Alfred and Daisy L.

In political matters, Mr. DeWitt has always been an adherent to the principles of the Republican party, and takes an important part in local affairs. Coming of one of the old pioneer families of the State, being himself a man of education, well read, conversant with the leading questions of the day, Mr. DeWitt is a pleasant companion, and has made his influence felt in the community in which he resides, and where he is so highly respected.

PETER B. LIPPOLT, a popular and successful farmer in the town of Paris, Grant county, is a native of the Grand Duchy of Baden, Germany, where he was born March 6, 1831, and there his parents, Wende and Christina Lippolt, were also born and died.

Mr. Lippolt came to this country alone in 1857, worked a year in a factory near Freeport, Penn., and then removed to Philadelphia, where he had factory work until 1860, the year of his coming West. While in Philadelphia he married Miss Elizabeth Harmon, a German born and bred young lady. Together they came to Wisconsin and settled at Platteville, where he found work for a time among the neighboring farmers, and then purchased a small farm near the line of the towns of Platteville and Paris, settling down to the work of making a home. The breaking out of the Civil war stirred the military fever of his race, and he enlisted in Company B, 43d Wis. V. I., serving in the Army of the Tennessee, and receiving his honorable discharge at Nashville in June, 1865. As a soldier he did his duty well, and participated in several serious battles.

After the war Mr. Lippolt came home sick and broken in health, and was able to do very little work for several years. Mrs. Lippolt died in March, 1875, leaving one daughter, Fredie. icka, who is now the wife of John Shambo, living near Platteville. Mr. Lippolt subsequently married Miss Louisa Clare, a daughter of John and Magdaline Clare, old pioneers of Grant county, and to this union have been born four children: (1) George, born in 1877, is unmarried, and is a resident of Grant county. (2) Louisa, born in 1879, is the wife of Melvin Bowman, who resides on his farm in Paris, Grant county. They have one daughter, Gladys. (3) Miss Lena, born in June, 1882, lives at home. (4) William, born in 1885, is at home.

In politics Mr. Lippolt has always been a staunch Republican, and he is a member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., at Platteville. He is also a member of the German Hutten Lodge, of Philadelphia. In religion both he and his wife are members of the Platteville Lutheran Church, to which for many years he has been a liberal contributor, and while it was building he took an active part in its behalf. He is still one of its strongest friends, and was an officer in the organization for a number of years. As a worthy citizen and an upright man his standing is beyond reproach.

THOMAS LEWIS, one of the wealthy retired farmers of Albany, Green county, is the subject of this review, and his life history begins away across the ocean, in Radnorshire, Wales, where he was born Oct. 19, 1829. His paternal and maternal grandfathers, John Lewis and Robert Lewis, respectively, were natives of Wales, and spent their whole lives in that land, where they were agriculturists.

David Lewis, the father of our subject, was born in Wales, and there married Sarah Lewis, to which union came a family of seven children: Thomas (our subject), John, Emma, Martha, Richard, Sarah and Frances. John, Emma, Sarah and Frances are still residing in Wales; the others are deceased. David Lewis died when about sixty years old, and his wife has also passed away. She was one of thirteen children.

Margaret Lewis & Thomas Lewis

Thomas Lewis was reared on a farm in Wales, and came to America in 1854. His educational advantages were meager in his native land, but since his location in the United States he has not only learned the language, but has become a well-informed man. The first nine months in America he passed in Waukesha county, Wis., and later came to Green county, where he first purchased forty acres of fine land in Albany township, subsequently adding 160 acres in Brooklyn, and another 149 acres in Albany. Mr. Lewis lived in Albany until 1888, at which time he rented out his farms and moved into the town, where he purchased a very comfortable home.

In 1855 our subject was married to Mrs. Margaret (Jones) Swancott, the widow of John Swancott, and a daughter of John and Mary (Sheen) Jones, both of whom were natives of Wales, where Mrs. Lewis was born Nov. 7, 1823. Her father died in Albany township, aged sixty-eight years; his father, who bore the name of Edward Jones, died in Wales. The mother of Mrs. Lewis died March 31, 1845, aged fifty-seven years; she was a worthy woman, and had long been identified with the Episcopal Church. William Sheen, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Lewis, was a farmer in Wales. By her first marriage Mrs. Lewis had nine children: Philip, John, David, Mary, Elizabeth, David (2), Thomas, David (3), and John (2), all now deceased except Philip and John (2). Philip married Kate Flint, and resides in South Dakota; he has two children, Earl and Maggie. John married Judie Butts, and has one daughter, Luella; they reside in Brooklyn, on a farm. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have had two children: Hiram, who died when five years old; and William A., who married Miss Jane Williams, and resides on the farm; they have five children, Della, Orrin, Ray, Inez and Birdie.

Mrs. Lewis owns a fine farm of eighty acres in Albany township, Mr. Lewis also retaining a farm of 189 acres, having sold his tract of 160 acres in the fall of 1900. Since 1888 our subject and estimable wife have resided in comfort in the pleasant town of Albany, where they enjoy the comforts suited to their age and circumstances. Although no politician, and opposed to joining any of the political parties, Mr. Lewis exercises his right to the ballot, but reserves to his own judgment the decision as to which is the best man for the position. Although not formally connected with any religious denomination, both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are Christian people in their daily living, kind to the needy, generous to worthy objects, and they are among the most respected citizens of Albany.

GUSTAV CANDLER, an honored pioneer settler of Cassville, Grant county, and one of the brave defenders of the Union during the Civil war, was born in Brandenburg, Germany, in 1822, a son of John and Catharine (Schon) Candler, lifelong residents of that country, where the father died in 1865. He served as a soldier in the German army in 1813. His wife long survived him, dying in 1885, at the advanced age of ninety-two years. Only two of their family came to America, these being Gustav and Adolph. The latter located in Chicago in 1851, but is now a resident of Colorado.

The boyhood and youth of Gustav Candler were passed in his native land, and he served in the German army from 1842 to 1844, and again during part of the years 1849, 1850 and 1851. Bidding good-by to home and friends in 1852, he sailed from Hamburg, and after a long and wearisome voyage of sixty-three days landed in New York. After stopping for a short time in Chicago, he went to Minnesota, and in 1855 took up his residence in Cassville, Wis., where he still makes his home. He is now interested in bee culture, and has an apiary of seventy stands. For many years, however, he followed the carpenter's trade, but has now retired from that business.

His loyalty to his adopted country was manifested during the Civil war by his enlistment, in 1862, in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war. Mr. Candler was mustered into service at Cassville as fourth corporal, and was promoted to sergeant in July, 1864. His regiment became a part of the 16th and later the 17th Army Corps, of the Western Army, under command of Gen. Sherman, and was in the battles of Buzzards Roost, Atlanta and Dalton. Mr. Candler was on picket duty at Dalton for a time, later was in the Carolina campaign, and participated in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C. Before being sent to the actual seat of war the 25th Wisconsin was sent to Minnesota, against the Indians at New Ulm. From there they went to Vicksburg, where the whole regiment, with the exception of sixty men, became sick. They then proceeded to Chattanooga and Atlanta. Being laid up with a bad foot, Mr. Candler was away from his regiment some time, but returned in the spring of 1865. This regiment lost 365 men from sickness alone, and fifty-six in battle. He received his discharge in Washington, D. C., in June, 1865, and was paid off and mustered out of service at Madison.

In 1866, at Galena, Ill., Mr. Candler was united in marriage with Miss Johanna Baensch, also a native of Germany, and to them were born two children: Matilda and Adolph, both residents of Chicago. Socially Mr. Candler affiliates with Joseph Mueller Post, No. 218, G. A. R., of Cassville, and politically is identified with the Republican party. He was a member of the town council of Cassville for two years, and is one of its most highly respected and honored citizens.

IVER JACOBSON, the proprietor of the well-known Jacobson homestead farm of 200 acres in Sections 33 and 34, in the town of Clinton, Rock county, is in possession of a magnificent rural estate, which has long been held by the family, and which became his in 1890. He is a good type of the American farmer, intelligent, courteous and hospitable, a man of steady habits, inured to hard work, and doing his business with his mind as well as with his hands.

Mr. Jacobson was born in Beloit, Rock county, May 22, 1855. He was reared to manhood under the parental roof, and attended the district school and Clinton Academy, working for his father until 1876. That year he began to work as a carpenter in Clinton, and followed the trade for two years. Then he went to South Dakota, and took up a homestead of 160 acres in Brookings county. In 1879 he constructed the first building in Brookings, now a city of considerable importance. In 1880 Mr. Jacobson returned to Rock county, where he worked at his trade two years. He spent about the same time in North Dakota, as a foreman of an elevator building company, and was grain buyer two seasons. In 1884 he came back once more to Rock county, this time to stay, and took charge of his father's farm, which he managed for him several years, buying it in 1890.

Mr. Jacobson and Miss Bessie Larson were married in Clinton May 29, 1890. Mrs. Jacobson is a daughter of Nels and Martha Larson, who were at that time living in Clinton, Mr. Larson having come here from Chicago, where he was a wagon maker, that he might spend his last days on a farm. He died on his farm in the town of Clinton Nov. 20, 1894, at the age of seventy-two.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson have four children, Martha, Nina, Julius and Ella. He has held the office of supervisor five years in succession, and was on the county board for two years. He is a steadfast member of the Lutheran Church, and politically a strong adherent of the Republican party.

Jacob Jacobson, the father of Iver, was born in Norway in November, 1824, a son of Jacob Jacobson, a farmer. He was married in 1850 to Miss Randie Iverson, at Racine, Wis., having come to Wisconsin two years before his wedding, and worked at the carpenter trade two years in that city. He spent two years each at Janesville and at Beloit, and from Beloit came to Clinton, where he bought 100 acres, the nucleus of the present farm. He and his wife still live here, in the home of their son Iver. They have had ten children, of whom six are now living.

NATHANIEL PRESTON (deceased) was long and favorably known in Green county. Born June 13, 1822, in Portsmouth, England, he was the only child of Nathaniel and Mary (Peters) Preston, both of London, the former of whom kept a shoe store at Portsmouth.

Nathaniel Preston, Jr., came to this country after the death of his father, bringing his mother with him, and lived for a time in Cincinnati, Ohio. From that city they removed to Monroe, Wis., and later to the town of Jefferson. In England he married Mary Dixon, who died there, leaving two sons: William, now a farmer of Brownsville, Ore., who married Lizzie South, of Monroe; and Nathaniel, a miner of Butte, Montana. Both were reared to manhood by Mrs. Charlotte Preston, whom they still regard with filial affection. On June 12, 1852, Mr. Preston married Miss Charlotte Cook, of Rock county, Wis., who was the daughter of John J. and Charlotte E. (Stopforth) Cook, both natives of England, of pure Saxon origin. Two children were born to them, one son and one daughter: Mary Ellen Preston, born Nov. 2, 1853, is now the wife of W. S. Pengra, a retired farmer, living in Madison, Wis.; and Arthur T. Preston, born July 18, 1856, married Susan Newman, and owns a fine farm in the town of Jefferson. Nathaniel Preston died in 1857, an exemplary citizen, a kind neighbor, and a loving husband and father. A strong advocate of the principles of the Republican party, he gave that party his adhesion on its formation, having been an Abolitionist previous to that time.

Mrs. Preston, when left a widow, had nothing but their farm of eighty acres, which was partially paid for. However, by hard work and good judgment, she managed to remove the encumbrance from it, reared her children to a useful life, and is now prosperous and well thought of in the community. Coming from a fine old English family, she was born June 21, 1831. Having come with her father and her stepmother into Wisconsin in 1843, practically her entire life has been spent in this State. John J. Cook, her father, became one of the leading citizens of Rock county, and was justice of the peace for more than twenty years. Farming was his life work. Mrs. Preston is now residing with her son on the home place, where they have a fine home and splendid outbuildings. As honorable people and upright members of the community their standing is without question. Mrs. Preston is a bright and interesting lady. With a good education, in her younger days she taught school in Green county for six years, continuing one year after her marriage. Like her husband, she has been associated during her entire life with the Episcopal Church. A good woman, a Christian spirit, a loving mother, and a devoted grandmother, her name is very precious to those who know her best.

MRS. MARY J. SHINOE, not now actively interested in the business cares which absorbed her attention for many years, and living quietly and at her ease in the town of Paris, Grant county, was born in Allegheny county, Penn., Aug. 18, 1838.

Alexander and Jane (Dalgril) McPherson, her parents, were both natives of Scotland, where they were reared. While they were still young people they came to Allegheny county, Penn., and there they were married and made their home some five or six years. Mr. McPherson was a shoemaker, and followed his trade while living in Pennsylvania. In 1844 Mr. and Mrs. McPherson, with their family, moved West, and effected a settlement at the mouth of the Big and Little Platte rivers, in Grant county, where he ran a ferry boat for a number of years. While living on the Platte he purchased a farm of 160 acres of wild land two miles west of Dickeyville. This place he cleared up, erected good farm buildings, and made a comfortable home for his family, occupying same until 1881, when he sold out and moved to Phillipsburg, Kans. There he purchased a home and lived until his death, in 1898. Mrs. McPherson died in 1882, in Kansas. Of their family of nine children, three died while children: (1) Mary J., Mrs. Shinoe, was their eldest child, and received her education in the common schools of Grant county. (2) James McPherson, the eldest son and second child, was born in Pennsylvania in 1840, and died while a soldier in the Civil war. He was a member of Company I, 25th Wis. V. I. (3) Robert McPherson, born in Pennsylvania in 1844, was a soldier in the Civil war, serving until its close as a member of the 33d Wis. V. I. He married Miss Montie Dickey, of Dickeyville, Grant county, and now resides on a farm near Phillipsburg, Kans. They have three children, Frank, Estella and Maggie. (4) Alex McPherson, born in Grant county, enlisted when a boy of sixteen in the 43d Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the Rebellion. Returning from the war, he married Miss Henrietta Meighey, and now resides on his farm in the town of Paris. They a family of nine children, Estella, Alex, John, Arthur, Emaline, Bessie, Maggie, Gertrude, and Etta. (5) William McPherson, born in Grant county, is married, and now lives in Ironton, Iowa. He is the father of four children; we have record of three. Susan, Jennie, and William. (6) Julia McPherson, born in Grant county, is now the wife of John Ferguson, who lives near Phillipsburg, Kans. They have one son, James.

In March, 1856, Mary J. McPherson was married to Lewis Shinoe, a native of Virginia, then living in Grant county. Jeremiah Shinoe, his father, moved into Ohio when Lewis was very young, and after a short stay in that State came to Wisconsin, where the family made a permanent location. During the Civil war, in September, 1862, Mr. Shinoe enlisted in Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., and served with his regiment on the Minnesota frontier, in Kentucky and Missouri, and then with Gen. Sherman on his famous March to the Sea. While in the campaign around Atlanta Mr. Shinoe was taken sick, and his malady proving serious, he was sent home on a furlough. He died in January, 1864, after having faithfully performed his every duty as a citizen and a soldier. Mr. Shinoe was greatly honored and esteemed by his comrades, as well as by the people of his own community. Mrs. Shinoe was left at the home in Dickeysville with four little children. After her husband's death she bought the Allen Taylor farm, and there lived until recently, now making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Folts. (1) Martha J. Shinoe, the eldest child of this estimable lady and her honored husband, was born in the town of Paris in 1857, and is now the wife of James Harvey, of Remsen, Iowa. They are the parents of six children, Orvil, Maud, Bessie, Benjamin, Roy and Carl. (2) John L. Shinoe, born in Grant county in 1858, married Miss Othie Rister, and is now living in Bottineau county, N. Dak. They have six children, Pearl, Ernest, Effie, Nellie, Burt and Bertha James. (3) Nora Shinoe, born in February, 1861, married Benjamin Folts, now of the town of Paris, a veteran of the Civil war, in which he was a member of Company K, 44th Wis. V. I., serving throughout that desperate struggle. They have one son, Leslie B. Mr. Folts was born in Milwaukee in 1846, a son of David and Mary Folts, who came West from Pennsylvania, and settled in Jamestown, Grant county, where the father is still living at a ripe old age. In 1891 Mr. Folts purchased his present home in the town of Paris, and here he has since followed farming. (4) Benjamin F. Shinoe, born in 1863, is unmarried, and resides on his farm in North Dakota.

Mr. Shinoe was always a Republican in politics. Mrs. Shinoe is a member of the Congregational Church of Mount Zion. She deserves more than passing mention in a work like this. Left a widow, with a family of small children, and smaller resources, she has battled successfully with the difficulties of life, and has reared a family of children in whom she takes much pride and comfort.

MRS. NANCY E. BAREMORE, an old and honored resident of Green county, has the distinction of being one of the oldest settlers of this part of the State in point of continuous residence, and was among the very earliest pioneers of this region.

Mrs. Baremore is a daughter of Deacon David and Mary (Ross) Davis, of Fayette county, Penn., who were married in 1815, and had the following family: (1) Joshua P., who was born Sept. 15, 1816, and died in Green county, Wis.; (2) Nancy E., born Oct. 7, 1818; and (3) Kezia S., born July 18, 1820, who married James Kildough, of Fayette county, Penn., and is now a widow, living in the town of Spring Grove, Green Co., Wis. Deacon Davis was born in 1793, and died in 1882. His first wife, "Pollie" Poss, was born in 1798, and died in 1821. Mary Woodle, his second wife, was born Nov. 2, 1802, and they had the following children: Thomas W.; James N., of Green county, Wis.; David M., born Nov. 22, 1829, a farmer of Monroe, Wis.; Joel P., Jr., born Jan. 8, 1832, a farmer in Green county, who died Jan. 2, 1890; Samuel, born March 8, 1834, now living in Iowa; Henry, born Nov. 20, 1836, died Oct. 25, 1865; Doctor E., born April 12, 1839, residing at Albany, Wis.; Zachariah P., born Jan. 2, 1841, who was killed in the battle of Resaca, having enlisted in Company K, 22d Wis. V. I.; Joseph J., born Nov. 18, 1843, who died June 13, 1871 (he served as a soldier in the Civil war, in the same regiment as his brother Zachariah); John O., born May 26, 1848, who died in 1876; and Nancy E.

On Oct. 7, 1840, Nancy E. Davis married for her first husband James Chadwick, a son of J. Hugh and Mary (Jameson) Chadwick, and to this union came the following children: (1) James was born April 2, 1841, in the Territory of Wisconsin; (2) Louisa married William Penn, of the town of Jefferson; (3) Mary J., born Dec. 3, 1844, was the wife of J. M. South, of the town of Jefferson, and died in 1896. Mr. Chadwick died Sept. 17, 1846, and our subject was married, a second time, Feb.

21, 1850, to Alfred Baremore, of Green county, who was a thrifty farmer. He was born June 30, 1818, and died Aug. 14, 1882, leaving a fine name. He was a consistent member of the Baptist Church. To this union came: (1) Harvey D., born Oct. 28, 1851, is a farmer in the town of Sylvester. (2) Thomas J., born March 14, 1855, is a farmer on the old home place in the town of Sylvester. (3) Kezia, born July 2, 1859, died in 1862.

Mrs. Baremore is one of the pioneer settlers of the Northwest. She has been a member of the Juda Baptist Church for more than sixty years, and was one of the original fourteen who formed this church when it was organized, by Rev. William Stillwell, in 1840. Mrs. Baremore and her sister are the only ones now living who united with the church at that time. Mrs. Baremore has a good property, and uses it to the advancement of the church and the comfort of those who need it. She is a worthy Christian woman, with a kind heart and a broad spirit.

ANTON SCHMITT, for years the principal horticulturist of Lancaster township, Grant county, was born in the grand duchy of Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, Nov. 4, 1830, a son of Jacob and Marie (Briel) Schmitt.

Jacob Schmitt, father of Anton, was a miller and farmer by occupation. His father was also named Jacob. Our subject's father died when Anton was sixteen years old, and left his wife with three sons and one daughter, Anton being the eldest. The latter had attended school until fourteen years of age, and had assisted his father in the mill until the latter's death, when he took charge of the business. In 1852 he married Miss Anna Elizabeth Weber, a most estimable young lady, and in April, 1854, he and his wife and child sailed from Bremen, and after a voyage of thirty-six days landing in New York, whence they came direct to Lancaster, Wis. They arrived June 10, of the same year, and located in the township of Beetown, Grant county. Mr. Schmitt, in April, 1855, moved to the farm of Allen Barber, in the township of Lancaster, which he worked, also operating his mill for about two years, when he bought the property. In 1869 he sold the mill and farm and settled in what is now the city of Lancaster, engaging first in merchandising, and later entering upon the great enterprise of his life in horticulture. He succeeded wonderfully in fruit culture, and not only prospered in this particular line of industry, but by his example, advice and teaching led many others to follow in his footsteps, and to make the horticultural region of Wisconsin what it is to-day. In 1895 he sold his orchards and nurseries and built a fine residence, one block south and west of his old home. In 1896 he laid out a tract of land adjoining his present home, into blocks and streets, platted and recorded as Schmitt's Addition to the city of Lancaster. Since then a number of residences have been built thereon, and in a short time this will become the continuation of one of the nicest streets in Lancaster.

In 1891 Mr. Schmitt began building ice-houses and constructing ice-ponds, with the intention of supplying the residents of Lancaster with the purest possible ice during the summer months. These he still owns, but he has relinquished all active participation in the trade, and leased the premises and industry as already established to others, advancing years precluding his giving them further attention. Mr. Schmitt began life as a business man with but little of this world's goods, yet during his forty-six years in Wisconsin he has not only realized a competence, but has himself aided in the remarkable development of Lancaster and Grant county, and is to-day recognized as an influential and substantial citizen.

To Mr. and Mrs. Schmitt were born five daughters and two sons, of whom Carl was called away in 1872, when fifteen years of age. This was to Mr. Schmitt one of the saddest events of his life, although his second son, Adolph, met with a tragic death in a railroad accident in California, May 10, 1890, when thirty-one years old. The eldest daughter, Louise, is the wife of James Knott, of Oakland, Cal.; Caroline is married to J. W. Graves, of Lathrop, in the same State; Amelia, now Mrs. Charles Lischerness, lives in Lancaster, Grant Co., Wis.; K. Elizabeth and Veronica are still at home. On Aug. 8, 1900, Mrs. Schmitt met with an accident which resulted in her death on the 11th of the same month.

In politics Mr. Schmitt was first a Republican. He became entitled to the rights of citizenship as soon as possible after his arrival in the country by "declaring his intentions," and two years later voted for John C. Fremont, the first nominee of the Republican party for the Presidency of the United States; he also voted for Abraham Lincoln, at each of the two elections which seated the martyr in the Presidential chair, and continued a Republican until the second nomination of Stephen Grover Cleveland for the Chief Magistracy of the Union, when, being a man capable of thinking for himself he changed his politics, and has since voted the Democratic ticket, especially at National elections.

In religion Mrs. Schmitt was reared in the Lutheran Church, but the younger of the two daughters at home is a member of the Congregational Church. Socially the family stand very high, and deservedly so. Mr. Schmitt, beginning with a home in a log cabin in the township of Beetown, Grant county, has reached affluence, and occupies as fine a dwelling as there is in Lancaster city.

JOHN CLARE, a miner of Platteville, Grant county, and for many years a tiller of the soil in that county in connection with his mining, was born in Prussia in April, 1817. He was reared to manhood in his native country, and was given a fair education in the schools there. In 1842 he came to Pennsylvania, and found employment in the sawmills and coal mines of that State for about two years. In 1844 the young man made his first appearance in Wisconsin, and was given work in the lead and zinc mines near Platteville. Fired by the stories of the golden West, he crossed the Plains to California in 1850, and John Harms, of Grant county, is the only one now living of all the brave and goodly company who made that eventful journey with him. Mr. Clare was one of the few successful prospectors who sought the mines. He spent two years in the far West, and then returned to Platteville, bringing with him fine results of his enterprise and judgment. Around Platteville he was a lead miner some years.

Mr. Clare married Miss Magdaline Kramer, who was also of German birth, born in 1822, in the same kingdom as her husband. They settled in Platteville, and lived in the city a short time before going to their farm of eighty acres. He bought it as wild land, and presently converted it into a home for his wife and family, and they have resided there to the present time. Mrs. Clare died in 1891, leaving him eight children: Louisa is the wife of Peter B. Lippolt, a farmer of the town of Paris, and has four children, George, William, Lena and Louisa.

Maggie is the wife of William Martin, of Platteville. John married Dora Wickendoll, and resides in Platteville; they have two children, Florence and Edward. Mary is the wife of Jacob Davis, of Pleasant View, and has a large family. Peter is unmarried, and lives at home; he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Frances married Henry Snyder, of Grant county, Wis., and has a family. Valentine, born in February, 1861, was educated in the public schools, and always remained with his parents on the farm; he has charge of his father's business, and is a young man of many good qualities. Carrie, the youngest of the family, is now the wife of George Carl, and resides near the blockhouse in the town of Platteville; she has two sons, Robert and Harry.

Mr. Clare has always been a Republican. Mrs. Clare was a member of the Lutheran Church, and our subject was reared a Catholic. Since coming to this country he has never been actively associated with any denomination. He is one of the old-time pioneers of this State, and has always held the respect of his fellow townsmen.

GEORGE M. BROWN, a pushing and energetic business man of Belmont, Lafayette county, knows very well that the high road to permanent success lies only along the way of industry, thrift, and the wise economy that counts real generosity and appreciation of friends its most potent weapons. He is willing to work, willing to stand by his friends, and willing to accommodate and assist his patrons to the best the market affords. By occupation he is a lumberman and a farmer.

Mr. Brown was born in the town of Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., in November, 1861, and is a son of William and Mary Brown, natives of County Wicklow, Ireland, where they grew up and were married. They came from Ireland in an early day, and settled at Hazel Green. The father engaged in mining during his life, and died in 1898, after reaching the venerable age of eighty-eight years. The mother passed away in 1869, leaving five sons and one daughter. The eldest of these children, (1) Thomas, was born in Grant county, and after he had attained his majority went to Colorado, where he devoted himself to gold mining near Leadville, and at other points. He bought ground, and became very successful as a mine owner. He died at Cripple Creek, Colo., and his remains are interred in the cemetery at Platteville, Wis. (2) John was born in Grant county, obtained a good education, and when he reached manhood followed the calling of a civil engineer at Tower, Minn. One extensive firm gave him all their business for twenty-five years. He has a wife and three children. (3) William, born in Grant county, is also located at Tower, Minn., where he is engaged in business. He has a large family. (4) Kate, the only daughter, was born in Grant county, where she grew up and received a common-school education. She is now the wife of Lewis Hebe, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has two daughters, Clara and Lulu. (5) George M. is fifth in the order of birth. (6) James, born in Grant county, for twenty years has been clerk of the "Park House," at Platteville. He is unmarried.

George M. Brown was partly educated in the schools of Hazel Green, and largely in the Dominican Sisters' School at Benton, where when a boy he lived in the home of Father Pen-degrast until he was sixteen years old. He was well instructed in the requirements for a successful business life. When Mr. Brown became a young man he secured a position with Bradley Brothers, of Milwaukee, as general lumber salesman and manager, doing business for that firm at Belmont. In 1887 he purchased their interest in the lumber yard and business which is now in his hands. He has done well for himself, and manifests the same stirring and practical methods that made him successful as a salesman for the Milwaukee firm. He handles all kinds of worked and rough lumber, as well as sash and doors, and for a number of years has done a business exceeding $20,000 per annum.

Mr. Brown and Miss Mary T. McDermott were married in 1887. Mrs. Brown is a daughter of Bernard and Johanna McDermott, old and prominent pioneers of Lafayette county. She was born in May, 1863, was well educated in the county schools, and for a number of terms was a successful and popular public-school teacher.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Brown settled in the home in Belmont, which he had just purchased and extensively remodeled. It is one of the most desirable residences in the city. They have two sons and one daughter: Mary Mabel, born on St. Patrick's Day, 1888; Henry H., in September, 1890; and George E., in August, 1892. They are students in the Belmont local schools, and are bright and promising children.

Mr. Brown has always been a Democrat, and has served as a member of the village board. Socially he is a member of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and of the Modern Woodmen, and with his wife belongs to the Catholic Church. He is an active and enterprising young business man, and is well posted in the various industries of his region; his large experience in the lumber business has given him an extensive acquaintance among the prominent men of the State. He has a clear head and good judgment, and is often consulted by older men regarding business enterprises, his opinions having great weight. He is popular, and highly esteemed by the people of Belmont.

SAMPSON H. CALLAWAY, a leading dairy farmer and prominent citizen of the town of Platteville, Grant county, is now in the prime of life, and commands the respect of the general public, both for his conspicuous business ability and for his manly and attractive personal qualities.

Mr. Callaway was born in the town of Platteville March 7, 1852, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Butson) Callaway, who were both born in Cornwall, England, the former on Aug. 3, 1807, and the latter on June 23, 1811. They were married in England in 1834, and some six years later came to Wisconsin, and settled two and one-half miles north of Platteville. He mined in the winter and farmed in the summer. In 1850 he purchased one hundred acres of timber land two and one-half miles west of Platteville, from Major Rountree. Here he built a log house and barn, later a frame house, and made it his home for the remainder of his life. Later he purchased eighty acres of J. Aultland, in Lima township. He came to this country a poor man, and by constant and unflagging industry and careful management became fairly prosperous. He died June 26, 1878, and his widow Nov. 29, 1884. They were members of the Methodist Church, and were numbered among the Christian people of the town. He was a Republican, and his sons without exception follow in his steps in this respect. Joseph, their eldest son, was born in England, and died unmarried; he had a district-school education, and when a young man of twenty-one crossed the Plains for California, and was a gold miner some seventeen years, being fairly successful; in 1872 he received injuries from a runaway, which proved fatal. Elizabeth, born in England, is now the widow of Francis Woodruff, of the town of Lima, and has two children,—A. J. and Elsie May (who is the wife of George Maiben); all this family reside in and near Lancaster. Thomas, born in England, married Miss Sarah Hale, and now resides in Jewell county, Kansas, where he is a farmer; they have the following children: John, Charley, Lester, Belle, Maria, Tom, Archie and Jennie. John married Lizzie Hale, and lives on the farm purchased by his father; they have had seven children, Leora (deceased), Sampson H., Minnie, Nellie, Ruby, Nettie and Frank. Martha J. is the wife of I. N. Clifton, and lives in Platteville; she has two children, Welsey and Libbie Rickard, by her first husband, Daniel Rickard. Sampson H. is the subject of this article. George A. lives in the town of Harrison, and is the subject of a biographical article appearing elsewhere in this volume. Jesse, when a young man, went with Sampson H. to California, and drifted to Arizona, where he became a railroad engineer; he was stricken with paralysis, and brought home, dying in May, 1892. William, born at the old home near Platteville, died March 28, 1866, aged eighteen years and twelve days.

Sampson H. Callaway was educated in the schools of Platteville. In the spring of 1873 he went to California, and spent nine years in that State, engaged in various labors. In 1880 he came back to Platteville, and married Miss Emma C. Weittenhiller, a lady of that city. She was born in 1858, a daughter of Sebastian and Annice Weittenhiller, old and respected residents of Grant county, and was educated in the Platteville schools. After his marriage Mr. Callaway purchased a farm in Jewell county, Kansas, where they resided two years. Kansas did not please him for a permanent residence, and he sold out, came back to Wisconsin, and purchased his father's old homestead. He built two new barns, thoroughly remodeled the house, and now owns one of the choicest farms of the county. He owns 160 acres in his home farm, and 240 acres in Lima township. Seven children have brightened his home: Arthur L. was born in Jewell county, Kansas. Ethel G. was born in Grant county, as were Myrtie M., Jessie H., Adelbert S., Clara E., and Hazel E. The younger children are earnest and bright students of the Platteville schools. The family attends the Congregational Church. Mr. Callaway belongs to the Masonic order, and holds his membership in Melody Lodge, No. 2.

HENRY RUSH, an honored veteran of the Mexican war, bears on his body the scars won in active service of his adopted country. He was born near Mannheim, Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, Feb. 24, 1821, a son of Adam and Eve (Beobel) Rush, who came to America in 1830, with the hope of making a new home in Seneca county, Ohio. The mother died in Massillon, Ohio, and two years later the father followed her to the grave. Of their ten children, all but Henry died in childhood.

Henry Rush grew up in Ohio, and, as might be supposed, received but little schooling. In May, 1846, he volunteered for service in the war with Mexico, becoming a member of Company F, 3d Ohio Volunteers, and served with Col. Samuel R. Curtis, under the command of Zachary Taylor. He took part in many of the hard-fought battles of the war, and was wounded three times at the battle of Buena Vista. He was honorably discharged from the service in June, 1847, and then went to Wisconsin, where he bought 200 acres of government land in Cadiz township, Green county. His energy and courage under all difficulties won him a substantial place in the world, and he is now the possessor of 500 acres of valuable land, and is the heaviest tax-payer in his township. For forty years he engaged in farming almost exclusively, and then went into the saw-mill business, but after six years he sold out and engaged in the hardware, wood and lumber business in Martintown. Of late he has lived retired, making his home in Martintown, where he owns a number of buildings, and he is one of the most highly esteemed citizens.

In 1847 Mr. Rush was united in marriage with Miss Nancy H. Warren, who died in 1857, leaving five children: Roderick and Mary J., who died young; Lucetta E., wife of Willis Breon, of Juneau county, Wis.; Nancy, wife of J. J. Parker, a farmer of Cadiz township; and Rufus, who married Mary A. Robinson, and lives in Boone county, Iowa. In October, 1857, Mr. Rush wedded Maria Shockley, who became the mother of two children: Elgin, of South Wayne, Wis.; and Flora B., wife of Franklin Holoway, of Akron, Ohio. For his third wife Mr. Rush married Katie Ann Frame, of Cadiz township, and to this union was born one child, now deceased. His present wife, a native of Norway, was Mrs. Mary Golaxson, who was born July 5, 1854, and came to Green county with her parents when six years of age. In politics Mr. Rush is a stanch Democrat, and he has served in a number of township offices, having been member of the town board (of which he served eight times as chairman), member of the county board, and also school director and road supervisor for many years. He has always been an active, industrious man, and during his life of over eighty years has missed very few days. Now as the evening of his day gradually passes into night, he can look back over a well-spent life. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1856, and is connected with Palestine Chapter, No. 21, R. A. M., at Monroe.

HENRY RICH

CYRUS A. HORNBECK, deceased, was, in his time, a prosperous and successful farmer in the town of Paris, and was known throughout this part of Grant county, as a thoroughly honorable and upright man of good intentions and a fine spirit.

A native of Indiana, Mr. Hornbeck was born Feb. 28, 1842, a son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Mitts) Hornbeck, old and prominent settlers in this part of Wisconsin, who were born in 1812, in Pickaway county, Ohio. They were married Feb. 14, 1832. Moving from Ohio to Indiana, they located on the Tippecanoe river, three miles from the historic Tippecanoe battle ground, now known as Lafayette, where the Old Soldiers Home is located. This was the birthplace of our subject. In 1844 Mr. and Mrs. Hornbeck came overland to Paris, Wis., with teams, one an ox-team, named Polk and Dallas, after the 1844 candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency. The family settled on a farm a half mile north of the village of Dickeyville, where their home was maintained until their removal to the village in 1899. Mr. Hornbeck died in July, 1900, and his aged wife is still a resident of the village. Out of a family of twelve children born to them five are still living: M. V., born in Ohio, is now a resident of Butte, Nebraska; Sarah is the widow of Lewis Beckett, of Dickeyville; Martha J. is Mrs. Henry Smith, of Centerville, S. Dak.; Cynthia A. is Mrs. W. Williams, of Lancaster, Wis.; and Mary E. is unmarried and is living at home.

Cyrus A. Hornbeck was the sixth child born in his parents' family, was reared in Grant county, and had his education in the village schools. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted, when but nineteen years of age, in Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., serving under Capt. Nash, and seeing much of the most tremendous struggles of that great war. One of the magnificent army that Gen. Sherman led to the sea, he had part in the grand review at Washington, and was mustered out at Madison. Returning to his own home, he bought a farm northwest of Dickeyville, and when he was married, in 1870, this became his home during the first years of his married life. Mrs. Hornbeck is the estimable daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (McLees) Shinoe, an old and prominent family in Grant county. She was born in the town of Paris, Feb. 2, 1849, and had her schooling in the village of Dickeyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Hornbeck made their home on the place mentioned for seven years, when they sold out and purchased of George W. Griffin the property known as the Archer estate, situated on the Big Platte river, on the road leading from Dickeyville to Potosi, and where the Archer ferry, known later as Hickory Dell ferry, was operated. At this home for eight years every opportunity was improved that presented itself, and their labors were crowned with success. Mr. Hornbeck owned and operated the ferry, and when in the spring the head waters of the Mississippi backed the waters at times to the depth of sixteen feet over the bottom land of his farm, the small steamers from Dubuque, Iowa, would tow wood barges up to his place. Mr. Hornbeck would load them with wood, and ship to Dubuque to be sold. He also made several rafts from the large elms which grew in the bottom, and floated them to the sawmills at Dubuque to be sawed for paddles, to be used in making stern-wheels for the boats that plied the Mississippi.

In the spring of 1888, Mr. and Mrs. Hornbeck bought the Piddington Farm, on the Little Platte, three miles east of Dickeyville. On this farm of 239 acres new and valuable buildings were erected, and the place improved in every possible way as time, money and strength permitted, until it became one of the most desirable country homes in the town of Paris, and was known as the Iron Spring farm. There Mr. Hornbeck died in December, 1898. He was reared in the faith of the Christian Church, and lived the life of a good and just man, with many friends and few enemies. He was a Republican and entertained strong political views. For many years he was assessor of the town, and during his long incumbency of a trying position he was held in high esteem by the people for his honest and upright conduct of the office, and his fair and accurate judgment. With the Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., of Platteville, he was connected for many years, and had a host of friends among the old veterans. He was also a member of the State Centennial Veterans of Madison. Mr. Hornbeck left his wife with five sons and one daughter: (1) Melvin H., born in Paris, Dec. 12, 1870, married Miss Sophie Reese, of Grant county, who died some six years after marriage, leaving three children, Huldah L., Hettie L., and Virgil L. (2) Albert O., born Oct. 2, 1872, is living at home with his mother. (3) Orvil L., born Nov. 7, 1874, graduated from the State Normal at Platteville, in 1897, and is one of the highly educated young men; he is living at home. (4) George H., born Jan. 15, 1877, married Miss Christina Lange, of this town, and now lives at Cuba City. (5) Minnie E., the only daughter, was born July 21, 1881, and educated in the State Normal at Platteville. She is a young lady of much culture and refinement. (6) Earl D. V., born Nov. 29, 1884, is at home with his mother. Mrs. Hornbeck is a member of the Congregational Church, Cornelia, Wis., and is known as one of the Christian women of this community. She is a member of the Ladies' Relief Corps of Platteville. She is still in the prime of life, and has manifested much business ability in the management of her farm and other valuable interests, and is the mother of a family which is a credit to any motherhood. Their honorable instincts, refined and cultured manners, and sound moral qualities evidence the guiding of a gentle hand and loving heart.

DANIEL W. VANCE was for many years one of the most respected and esteemed citizens of the town of Sylvester, Green county. Of late he has been retired from active farming, and on March 1, 1901, moved into the city of Monroe with his family, to spend his last days in well-earned rest and repose.

Mr. Vance is a son of Samuel and Lavina (Johns) Vance, both natives of Fayette county, Penn., who came to Green county, Wis., about 1845, four years after their marriage. Samuel Vance was the son of Hugh and Margaret (Detrick) Vance, who were among the early settlers of Fayette county, Penn. Hugh Vance was born in 1784, and died Jan. 11, 1827. About 1809 he married Margaret Detrick, who was born in 1790, and to them came the following children: Marie, born Sept. 15, 1810; Melinda, May 9, 1812; Elia, March 5, 1814 Samuel (whose name appears above), Feb. 21, 1816; Ezekiel, Feb. 1, 1818; Keziah, Feb. 26, 1820; Robert A., May 30, 1823; George, March 27, 1825; Hugh, Jr., May 16, 1827. All are deceased. Samuel Vance died Oct. 11, 1898, his wife on April 4, 1883, at the age of sixty-nine years. They were the parents of seven children: James P., who died in the town of Sylvester May 19, 1871, aged twenty-eight years, four months, nineteen days; George D., of Kansas; John B., a farmer in the town of Sylvester; Hugh J., a miner in California; Ezekiel T., a retired farmer, in Monroe, Wis.; Daniel W.; and Rebecca R., the wife of William Roderick, of the town of Jefferson.

Daniel W. Vance was born Jan. 13, 1855, and Sept. 19, 1888. was married to Miss Eliza M. Deal, of Green county, a daughter of Isaiah and Veronica (Hutzell) Deal, the former a thrifty farmer of Green county. Mr. and Mrs. Vance are the parents of one daughter, Mae Erma, born Dec. 11, 1889. Mrs. Vance was one of a family of nine children, and was born July 4, 1865.

Mr. Vance grew to manhood under the parental roof and acquired his education in the district school. Bred to farming, he has made that business his life work. He began poor at the age of twenty-one, but by hard work, industry, honesty and economy he has come to own a half section of land, well cultivated and provided with all modern improvements, which he now rents. He is comfortable and independent in his situation beyond the general run of men. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religion a member of the Baptist Church. Though never seeking office, he has from time to time been called upon to fill local positions as part of the obligations of his citizenship, having served as judge of election, school director, and in other minor positions. In his own community he has a good standing, and is spoken of as one of the representative farmers of his region.

H. L. WINSKELL, who by business foresight and acumen in his younger days is now enabled to live retired from active work, is one of the citizens of whom Benton township, Lafayette county, is most justly proud.

Mr. Winskell is a native of Lafayette county, born in New Diggings township, Jan. 17, 1853, son of Joseph and Eliza A. (Laforce) Winskell, the former of whom was born near Carlisle, Cumberland, England, Aug. 20, 1821, and came to this country when a young man, arriving in New Diggings, Lafayette Co., Wis., in 1846. He engaged in mining, an occupation he had also followed in England. On Oct. 4, 1849, he married Mrs. Eliza A. (Laforce) Bethel, who was born Oct. 11, 1823, in Clarks-ville, Mo., daughter of Randolph and Martha (McGee) Laforce. Her father, a native of Virginia, was of French descent; her mother, a native of Kentucky, was of Scottish descent. Our subject's mother arrived at Galena April 29, 1844, coming by steamboat, and immediately proceeded to New Diggings, Wis., where on Jan. 27, 1846, she married Seaton Bethel, of that township; they resided there until his death, Feb. 4, 1848. One son was born of this union, James W., who grew to manhood in Lafayette county, there wedded Annie Gibson, and then removed to Wright county, Iowa, where he followed farming until his death, in May, 1890. He left a widow and four children, Jennie, Carrie M., Robert G. and Alice, all residents of Clarion, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Winskell made their home in New Diggings township until his death, Feb. 21, 1856. To this marriage were born two children: H. L. is our subject. Octavia, born in 1855, married L. N. Townsend, of Shullsburg, Wis., where he is engaged in stock buying; they have three children—Laurena, a student at the Platteville Normal; Almeda, wife of Fred Hammond, a banker of Stockton, Ill.; and Clyde, a student at the Wisconsin State University, Madison. After Mr. Winskell's death Mrs. Winskell married, Oct. 10, 1861, Nimrod Brown, who was born near Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8, 1808. In 1842 he came to the Wisconsin mining region, where he engaged in mining until 1850, when he crossed the Plains, and later was one of the men who helped to cut the Sutro mill dam away in search of gold. Not having much success in the gold region, he returned to Wisconsin, by way of Panama, and after a visit to his old Maryland home reached Benton, Wis., in 1852. In 1861 he opened up and worked what is still known as the Brown range or mine of lead, one which was a large producer. He died March 16, 1896, at New Diggings, to which place he removed in 1873. They had one daughter, Antoinette, who died at the age of two years.

H. L. Winskell received a good education, attending the Shullsburg high school, and when still quite young engaged in mining in New Diggings township, spending six years at that work. In 1878 he purchased a farm in Wright county, Iowa, and there engaged in farming and stock raising. For a short time Mr. Winskell resided in New Diggings, and then purchased real estate in the town of Benton, where he put up a fine modern home, equipped with all the improvements and conveniences, comfort and luxury dictate. This home was erected in 1895, and has since been one of the social centers of the county. Mr. Winskell is largely interested in real estate in Iowa, and is a stockholder in the State Bank of Benton. He is one of the wide-awake men of the town, in fact has been a prominent factor in the business life of whatever town he has made his home.

In February, 1879, Mr. Winskell was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Strowbridge, who was born April 21, 1854, daughter of John and Sarah Strowbridge, old pioneers of Lafayette county, who originally came from Ireland. Mrs. Winskell died at her home in Wall Lake township, Wright Co., Iowa, July 23, 1890. She was a devout member of the Protestant Methodist Church, and was a loving wife and mother. To this union were born three children: J. N., who died in infancy; Horace E., who died one month after his mother; and Maud, born in August, 1880, a bright little girl, who died June 9, 1892. In October, 1893, Mr. Winskell was married to Miss Elizabeth A. Turnbull, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Hewitson) Turnbull; she was born in August, 1865, and was educated in the schools of New Diggings. Three children have come of this union: Alma A., born Sept. 28, 1894; Joseph Alvin, April 3, 1896; and Horace L., March 4, 1898. In political life Mr. Winskell is known as a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, and has always taken an active part in politics. During his residence of thirteen years in Iowa he was a member of the town board for seven years, also holding a number of other offices. He has also been a member of the town board of Benton, and for three years was a member of the village board, and one year president of the same. Socially he belongs to the I. O. O. F., at Lead Mine, Wis., and to the K. of P., Sylvan Lodge, No. 134, of Benton, having been an officer since the lodge was organized, in March, 1896. Mr. Winskell is responsible for his own success, which may be attributed to his own industry and attention to business, his honesty in his dealings with his fellow men, and his loyalty to his friends.

Joseph Turnbull, father of Mrs. Winskell, was born in Brough, County of Durham, England, as was also his wife, and came to this country in an early day, locating in New Diggings, where he followed farming and mining, and there died in May, 1866. His wife, who has since wedded John Vickers, still resides in New Diggings. Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull had two children: Elizabeth A., Mrs. Winskell; and Joseph H., who married Susan Willy, of Benton township, and has three children, Francis O., Edna and Willard.

LYCURGUS HAKE, a prosperous farmer in the town of Lima, Grant county, was born in Clifton township, that county, Aug. 14, 1859, son of George W. and Phoebe (Derwater) Hake. The father was born in Pennsylvania, and the mother in Ohio, and both came to Wisconsin with their parents when young people. George Hake, the grandfather of Lycurgus, came to Wisconsin from Ohio at a very early day, and settled in Liberty, Grant county. There were five sons and one daughter in his family: Eli, William, Levi, George W., Israel, and Caroline (who became the wife of John Sparks, of Iowa).

George W. Hake located for a time in the town of Clifton, where he owned a considerable tract of land, at one time over six hundred acres. The farm where Lycurgus Hake is now living was bought by him, and thoroughly improved. In 1889 he retired from active life and settled in Platteville, dying at his home there in February, 1896. Mrs. Phoebe Hake is still living in Platteville, at the age of seventy-four. To this estimable couple were born five children: (1) Laura, born in the town of Clifton, married Riley Dennis, and settled on the present home of her brother, Lycurgus; she died soon afterward, leaving no family. (2) Almira, born in Grant county, is now the wife of Stephen Dennis, and lives in Clifton. To this marriage was born one daughter, Ora, who is a graduate of the Platteville Business College. (3) Lycurgus is our subject. (4) Grant, born in Clifton township in 1874, married Miss Nora Bushnell, and is now residing on his farm in Clifton. They have three children, Mabel, Wesley, and Melvin. (5) Mirtie, born in Clifton, married Cirtus Craven, a farmer in the town of Lima.

Lycurgus Hake grew up on the old home farm in the town of Clifton, where he received a good common-school education. He remained with his parents until his marriage, in December, 1880, to Miss Annie Bushnell, of the town of Lima, Grant county. Hiram and Louisa Bushnell, her parents, came from Trumbull county, Ohio, to the town of Harrison, Grant county, at a very early day, and were numbered among the most honorable and highly respected families of this part of the State. Mrs. Hake was born in 1858, and obtained her education in the local public schools. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Hake settled on the farm, where they made their home until 1888, that year moving back to the old Hake farm in the town of Clifton, where he spent five years in farming and stock raising. In 1893 Mr. and Mrs. Hake came back to their present home, and the next year put up a large barn, also building one of the modern commodious homes of the town. The house is finished in hard wood, and has every modern convenience possible to obtain in a farm home. In this fine estate there are 180 acres of as choice land as southwestern Wisconsin affords.

Mr. and Mrs. Hake have had five children: (1) Leslie, born in 1882, in the town of Lima, has studied at the State Normal in Platteville for some years, and is a bright and charming young lady, living at home. (2) Ira, born in 1884, (3) Jessie, born in 1885, (4) Sadie, born in 1891, and (5) Donald, born in 1897, are also at home. In politics Mr. Hake has been a Republican. He and his wife are church-going people. They are courteous and kindly, possessed of high character, and highly esteemed by all who know them.

HERMAN BERGHEGER has been engaged in the mercantile business at Stitzer, Grant county, since 1880, and is one of the earlier merchants of that place. He came to the town of Liberty in 1870, engaged in farming, and still owns a handsome farm near the village.

Mr. Bergheger was born in 1845 in Germany, where his father died when he was a small child. His mother married A. Wefel not many years afterward, and Mr. Wefel brought his family to America in 1859. Herman was the only child of the first union, and three children were born to his mother's second marriage. She died in the fall of 1899. In 1870 Mr. Bergheger returned to Germany to settle up his father's estate, and was there married to Miss Louise Piper; her parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Bergheger are the parents of two sons and one daughter, Adolph, Edward and Louise. They have lost one daughter, Lydia, who died at the age of sixteen years. Mr. Bergheger is a Republican politically, and a man of character and standing in the community.

C. H. RUSSELL, M. D., of Darlington, Lafayette county, may almost be said to be a physician by heredity, his great-grandfather, Dr. G. W. Russell, having been a noted physician in his home in Wethersfield, Conn., where he was born in 1754, and he left his business and reputation to his son, George Washington Russell, grandfather of our subject.

Dr. George Washington Russell was born at Litchfield, Conn., Sept. 21, 1800. In 1801 his parents removed to Bradford, Penn., the following year going to the State of New York, and in 1815 returning to Connecticut, where his mother died the following year. After various experiences he studied medicine at Windham, Penn., and was prominent as an officer of militia, in Bradford county, that State, both as adjutant and as major. For some time he acted as agent for the obtaining of land bounty for the soldiers of the war of 1812, and finally obtained possession of many hundred acres of land in Wisconsin and Iowa. In 1857 he became a resident of Lafayette county, his death occurring there Nov. 2, 1870. His wife survived him, passing away Oct. 1, 1879. They were the parents of eleven children, one of whom, Read Russell, is the father of our subject. The mother of Dr.

Russell was formerly Miss Sarah Schellenger, a daughter of Rev. George Schellenger, who came to Lafayette county in 1828. Later Mr. Schellenger married Miss Beulah Lamb, who in the summer of 1828 opened a private school near Gratiot's Grove—in a log building erected for school purposes, chiefly through the influence of Henry Gratiot—becoming the first school teacher in Lafayette county. This most estimable lady is still living, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years, her home being in the town of Wiota.

Dr. C. H. Russell, our subject, was born in 1862, in the town of Gratiot, where his parents were residing. His early education was obtained at the common schools. Later he attended the high school at Warren, Ill., from which he graduated in 1885, and he graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1888. Dr. Russell first located at Shullsburg, where he began the practice of his profession, later removing to Darlington.

The marriage of Dr. Russell took place Dec. 18, 1890, to Miss Anna Rose, a daughter of James R. and Phoebe A. (Budlong) Rose, the former long a well-known lawyer of Darlington; he was the father of the present mayor of Milwaukee. Two children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Russell, one daughter and one son, Phebe R. and Charles R. Since locating in Darlington Dr. Russell has built up an extensive and lucrative practice, and thoroughly deserves the high regard and esteem in which he is held by the community.

GEORGE W. THURMAN. Within the last few years an extensive industry has been developed in southwestern Wisconsin, where it is found that the fresh water clams are peculiarly rich in pearls. Many very valuable ones have been discovered, and thousands of dollars paid out along every water course in this part of the State. Their proper handling and most profitable conversion into cash requires considerable capital and not a little business ingenuity. Mr. Thurman, of Albany, Green county, has taken it up, and become widely noted as an extensive dealer in fresh water pearls. For many years back he has dealt in horses, and still continues in this line.

Mr. Thurman, born in the town of Mag-nolia, Rock county, Wis., April 10, 1848, is a son of Richard and Minerva P. (Roberts)

Thurman, natives of Troy and Plattsburg, N. Y., respectively. They had four children, Carrie, George W., John and Mary, of whom two are now living. Mary married J. G. Babcock, and lives in the town of Magnolia. George W. is at Albany. The father was a nail cutter in the city of Troy, N. Y., and came to Wisconsin in the early days. He bought forty acres in the town of Magnolia, and after a time took an interest in a sawmill. He died in Magnolia in 1860, at the comparatively early age of forty-seven. His widow survived him until 1896, and reached the age of seventy-four. He was a Universalist and she a Methodist. Richard Thurman, the grandfather of George W., was born in New York, of English lineage, and was a man of strong character. He followed the trade of a wheelwright, and died in the South, while engaged in bridge building near Nashville. He had four sons and several daughters, and died when about eighty years of age. The father of Minerva P. Roberts, referred to above, was also a native of the State of New York, of Holland-Dutch descent, and died in middle life. He was the father of one son and two daughters.

George W. Thurman was reared on the farm, and attended a district school for one year only. He began life for himself by working by the month, and presently had saved enough to buy a horse. He had something of an instinctive sense of the value of a horse, and became quite a successful dealer in horses, buying and selling on a large scale. He bought a farm of eighty acres in the town of Magnolia, and lived there a year, and then sold, moving into the town of Sylvester, where he lived on a rented farm a year. In 1886 Mr. Thurman became a resident of the village of Albany, and here he has since had his home. Mr. Thurman donned the Union blue in 1864, when he went out as a member of Company H, 42d Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war.

Mr. Thurman and Miss Helen F. Bump, daughter of W. H. and Fannie (Briggs) Bump, were married in August, 1866. To this union twelve children were born, Carrie, Alice, Dell, Fannie, Richard, Otis, Hattie, Helen, George, John, Grace and Allen G. Carrie married Edward Lee, of the town of Decatur, and has three children, Orrie, Marvin and Helen. Alice married Allen C. Ballard, and lives one mile east of Evansville; they have two sons, Floyd and Lyle. Dell married P. O. Heide, and lives in Prairie du Chien; they have one daughter, Marie. Fannie married Frank Barton, of Albany, and has two children, Morris and Alice. Richard is a painter and is single. Otis married Maud Barney, and lives in Albany. Hattie is single. Helen married Elmer Seeley, and lives in Albany. The other children are all unmarried. Allen G. died in the winter of 1898, at the age of six months.

Mr. Thurman belongs to the William Hoyt Post, G. A. R., and also the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a Republican, as are all his sons. He has served as a trustee of Albany two terms, and is a highly respected member of the community. He owns a fine home in Albany, and is becoming wealthy. As mentioned at the introduction of this article he is a very extensive dealer in fresh water pearls, in which he became interested as early as 1890. In these ten years he has built up a reputation throughout the United States as an expert dealer. He buys and sells entirely on his own judgment, and is quick in his decision. He sold one pearl for eight thousand dollars recently, and completes some of his most important transactions, involving many hundred dollars, in from three to five minutes. He frequently makes long journeys to buy some article that is considered perfect in this line.

FREDRICH KROG, the well-known proprietor of the creamery in Platteville, Grant county, is a man who thoroughly understands his business.

Mr. Krog was born June 4, 1856, in Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Germany, and is a son of John and Christine Krog, the former of whom died when our subject was but seven years of age. He was educated in the public schools of his native land, and in 1873 he came with his mother to the United States, locating at Chicago, Ill. For four years he worked on a farm in the vicinity of the city, and there learned the business which he now follows. He advanced to the position of manager, and later became the owner of two or three creameries near Elgin, Ill., from which he realized fair profits. Afterward, he was joined by his father-in-law, Charles F. Schultz, and together they carried on the business about five years, when Mr. Krog sold out his interest. In 1894 he came to Platteville and became half-owner in the Platteville Cheese & Produce Association, which is officered as follows: President, Thomas Dyer, of Chicago; secretary, J. C. Kackle; treasurer, Fredrich Krog, who is also manager of the company's business in Grant county. Before locating in Platteville Mr. Krog was interested in the creamery business at Ontarioville, Ill. At present he is connected with seventeen different creameries in Wisconsin, the office for all these companies being at Platteville, under the general supervision of our subject. He is secretary-treasurer of the Belmont Creamery Co., of Belmont, Wisconsin.

The marriage of Mr. Krog took place in 1880, to Miss Sophie Schultz, daughter of Charles F. Schultz, a native of Germany, now residing in Bartlett, Cook Co., Ill. Mrs. Krog was born and educated in Illinois. This union has been blessed with seven children: Edwin, who was born July 1, 1881 (at the same hour that President Garfield was assassinated), is at present bookkeeper for the firm of which his father is a member; Amelia, born in 1883, is a student in the Platteville high school; Bernhard was born July 20, 1885; Alfred, Nov. 1, 1887; Lucy, in 1893; Walter, in February, 1897; and Gertrude, in February, 1899. Mr. and Mrs. Krog are members of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Krog has always been a Republican, and in his fraternal relations is a member of the American Order of Woodmen and the Equitable Fraternity Union of Neenah, Wisconsin.

Mr. Krog, although he started life in his adopted country a poor young man, has, by his keen observation of the details of the business in which he is engaged, his industrious habits, energy and perseverance, in the pursuit of one main end or object, succeeded in acquiring a fortune, and stands among the respected and honored men of the community, with a name that bears not a blemish.

JOHN E. HAWTHORN is a prominent and substantial farmer, who resides in comfort on his farm three and one-half miles southwest of Monroe, Green county.

Mr. Hawthorn is a son of the late James and Mercy (Boyles) Hawthorn, the former of whom was born in Orange county, N. Y., Oct. 22, 1797, and died Oct. 20, 1888, being buried on his birthday. His marriage took place in 1836, and children were born to this union as follows: Andrew, a retired farmer of Monroe, Wis.; Mary, who married Hickman Bryan, now deceased; Phebe, the widow of Aaron Eely, of Monroe; Ellen, the widow of Thomas Millmon, of Monroe; William, a retired farmer of Monroe; Matilda, who married Edward Trickel, deceased; Maria, who married Joseph Bender, deceased; James and Lucinda, twins, deceased; French, who lives in Colorado; Alfred H.; John E., our subject; and Charles, a retired farmer living in Monroe.

James Hawthorn, the father of our subject, was one of the very first settlers of Green county. During the war of 1812 he was a soldier in active service, stationed at Brooklyn, as a substitute for another man. At the age of seventeen he walked from New York to Pittsburg, and from there to Ohio; thence taking passage on a flat-boat, he went down the rivers to New Orleans, and from there on a sailing vessel to New York, being of an adventurous and investigating spirit. Soon after he reached New York he decided to return to Illinois, going West with a party of miners, and again returning to New York. In 1833 he decided to make a home in Wisconsin, and located in Green county, on Sections 8 and 9, in the town of Clarno, where he became one of the leading citizens and farmers, and also one of the wealthiest land owners. When Mr. Hawthorn made settlement in Green county his first home was a log cabin, with but one room, but peace, happiness and industry reigned there, and when the family grew larger a more commodious home was ready to accommodate them. His long life was spent in the development of his Western home, and before death he had the pleasure of seeing his chosen State become one of the best cultivated in the Union, and fostering some of the most highly intelligent and worthy interests.

John E. Hawthorn, our subject, was born April 10, 1854, and on June 14, 1885, married Clara E. Carson, of Monroe, Wis., a daughter of Charles and Frances H. (Davison) Carson, who were among the early settlers of Green county. An interesting little adopted daughter, Gladys Ruth, born Sept. 5, 1897, is the only child in the home, she receiving all the love and care of our subject and his estimable wife. Mr. Hawthorn is one of the reliable and substantial citizens of Clarno township, has successfully followed farming all his life, and is now the owner of a fine farm of 327 acres of fertile Wisconsin soil. For some years past he has been quite extensively engaged in breeding and feeding live stock, and has quite a village of first-class buildings to accommodate this branch of his business. In politics Mr. Hawthorn is a Republican, and although not a member he is an attendant of the Methodist Church, and a cheerful contributor to its support. An honorable and honest citizen, a man of exemplary life and character, John E. Hawthorn may be justly called one of the representative citizens of Green county.

JACOB LOUIS SPELLMAN, a wholesale and retail dealer in tobacco and manufacturer of cigars in Janesville, Rock county, is a capable business man, a thorough workman, and a man of pronounced integrity. Those who know him best speak most highly of his many commendable qualities, and at home and abroad he is much respected.

Mr. Spellman was born in Rotterdam, Holland, July 24, 1844, a son of Louis and Sophia (Harpman) Spellman, both also natives of Holland. To them were born six sons and two daughters, seven living, viz.: Henrietta, the widow of Mr. Heilagas; Annie; Samuel, of Columbus, Ohio; Jacob Louis, whose name appears above; Emanuel, of the city of New York; and Anthony and Andrew, of Rotterdam, Holland. The father was a surgical dentist in Holland, and was a man of much medical erudition. In 1852 he came to this country and located at Syracuse, N. Y., where he did not remain long, however, being successively established at Cincinnati and Memphis, and again at Cincinnati, where he lived until 1865, when he returned to Holland. He died in 1892, at the age of eighty-three. His first wife died in 1850, and he married her sister Florence, by whom he had a family of six children, Isaac, Sophia, Annie, Mary, Rachel and Mitchell. Louis Spellman was a soldier during the Civil war, and helped to drive Morgan out of Ohio.

Jacob L. Spellman was eight years old when his parents came to this country, and had already made some progress in school in Holland. He attended school at Syracuse, and in that city began learning the trade of cigar making with an uncle, when about ten years old. When the Rebellion broke out he was residing in Jackson, Miss., and, yielding to the war fever that overswept the country, he enlisted in Company C, of the Jeff. Davis Legion, Hampton's Brigade, and served the lost cause well and faithfully for four long years. He was a courier on Gen. Hampton's staff, and took part in many of the bloodiest scenes of the great war, being in the seven days' fight before Richmond, the battles of the Wilderness, Antietam, Second Bull Run and many other fierce and bloody combats. He was wounded in the nose and the right thigh at Antietam. During the war he was assigned with his company from the Jeff. Davis Legion to the 10th Kentucky, under the command of Gen. Basil Duke, together with nine other companies, selected from other regiments, to join Gen. Morgan. The day before the death of that distinguished officer Mr. Spellman was taken prisoner at Paris, Tenn., and sent to Camp Douglas, Chicago. In April, 1865, he took the oath of allegiance to the United States, in company with twenty-six others, and was at once set at liberty. He resumed his trade of cigar maker, and was engaged in various cities. In 1885 he came to Janesville, and opened a cigar manufactory and a tobacco jobbing house for plug and smoking tobaccos, which he still owns and operates.

Mr. Spellman and Miss Melinda Minney, a daughter of Peter and Susan (Martin) Minney, were married Nov. 27, 1873, and they have two daughters, Jessie and Florence. Mrs. Spellman belongs to the Episcopal Church, while her husband is welcomed in many fraternal societies. He is a Mason of high degree, belonging to Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Consistory; he also belongs to the Janesville Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F., and the Knights of the Maccabees. He is a Republican, though never a politician. His home is at No. 308 South Jackson street, and he has been a resident of Janesville for fourteen years. Mr. Spellman has had an eventful and varied career, and is an interesting conversationalist.

JOSEPH UNOSH, one of the representative men of Muscoda, Grant county, and a veteran soldier, enjoys the distinction of having been a member of the famous 6th Wis. V. I., which formed a part of the Iron Brigade.

Jacob L. Spelman

and rendered such efficient service in the great civil struggle between the North and the South.

Mr. Unosh was born Jan. 6, 1844, in Bohemia, a son of Joseph and Catherine Unosh, and in 1856 was brought to America by his parents. The family had originally consisted of six children, but four had died prior to the immigration to this country, so that Joseph and his sister Ellen were the only survivors; the latter, after attaining womanhood and marrying, also died. Upon coming to America Mr. and Mrs. Unosh located on land in the town of Castle Rock, Grant county, and remained there for years. The mother died in Castle Rock; the father, surviving her, passed his last days at Muscoda, and died highly respected by all.

Joseph Unosh, the subject of this sketch, enlisted in Company B, 6th Wis. V. I., in October, 1864, and participated with his regiment in Gen. Grant's Richmond and Petersburg campaign, being badly wounded in the right leg at the battle of Hatcher's Run, Feb. 6, 1865. A musket ball struck his right ankle, shattering the limb, and Mr. Unosh lay where he fell until captured by the enemy, who had obtained possession of the part of the field in which he had fallen. Owing to poor facilities for caring for the wounded, and the large number of both Union and Confederate soldiers who needed attention, Mr. Unosh suffered untold pain, and has never fully recovered from the effects of the neglect then experienced. Gangrene ensued, and the wound has never permanently healed, although after the close of the war, when he was released from captivity, Mr. Unosh remained in a hospital at Madison, Wis., for some time, and was honorably discharged from the service in that city. For a number of years succeeding the war Mr. Unosh resided on Blue river, and then removed to Muscoda, which has since been his home.

On Aug. 16, 1893, Mr. Unosh was married to Miss Mary J. Sedivy, a native of Bohemia, who was born Nov. 18, 1871, daughter of Frank and Veronika Sedivy, and came to America with her parents in 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Sedivy are well known and highly respected residents of Orion, Richland Co., Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Unosh have three living children, Jennie, Freddie and Celie; their youngest, Frank J., died when an infant of a few days.

Mr. Unosh and his family are pleasantly located at their comfortable home in Muscoda, and enjoy the esteem of a large circle of friends. In the G. A. R. Post of Muscoda Mr. Unosh is a prominent member, and he is justly regarded as an estimable and representative citizen.

THOMAS H. PEACOCK. Tourists who come from foreign countries to criticise pause to admire when they reach some of the beautiful, cultivated farms of Wisconsin. Among these there is none more attractive than that owned by Thomas H. Peacock, the subject of this sketch. He was born in Smelser, Grant county, in January, 1860, a son of William and Mary A. (Thomas) Peacock, both of Yorkshire, England.

William Peacock came when a young man to Grant county, where he married and settled on a farm. He was one of the pioneers of the county, rearing his family here, and clearing up the land. At the time of his death he owned considerable property and a comfortable residence in Big Patch, where he died in 1884, his wife passing away in 1878. They were members of the Primitive Methodist Church of Big Patch. They left a family of six sons and one daughter, of whom John W., born in 1858, married Caroline Fathers, of Darlington, Lafayette county, and they live on the old home farm with their four children, Eunice, Clinton, Wonda, and Lawrence. Abraham Lincoln, born in 1862, married Ellen Hilton, of Platteville, and resides on his farm near Smelser; they have three children, Sarah, Charles, and Flossie. Isaiah, born in Smelser in 1865, married Annie Hilton, and they first lived on a farm, but now reside in Platteville; they have one daughter, Mary. Sarah, born in Smelser township, is now the wife of Thomas G. Harker, who lives in the old Harker home in Big Patch; they have two children, William and Alvin. Samuel, born in Smelser in 1868, married Sarah Hilton, and resides on a farm in Smelser. James, born in 1870, married Jennette Vanetta, of Germantown, Grant county, and resides near Big Patch; they have one daughter, Fleta.

Our subject received a district-school education in the township of Smelser, grew up on his father's farm, and was taught in the home circle those lessons of thrift, honesty and industry which have been of value to him since. Purchasing a farm in that township, after marriage he settled upon it, later selling that place and renting land for six years. In March, 1900, he purchased what is known as the Henry Harbicut farm in Smelser, containing 240 acres, all in a fine state of cultivation; there are fine barns, and a comfortable, modern house. This is considered one of the finest farms in Smelser township. Mr. Peacock is a progressive man, believing in up-to-date machinery, of which he has purchased considerable, and he has stocked his farm with improved and reliable breeds of cattle.

The marriage of our subject was celebrated in March, 1884, the bride being Miss Anna Harker, the worthy daughter of Simon and Mary A. Harker, old and prominent residents of Grant county. Mr. Harker was a well-known merchant in Cuba City for a number of years before his death. Mrs. Peacock was born in January, 1860, and grew up in the township of Smelser. Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Peacock: Mary A., born in 1884; Roscoe, in May, 1888; Alice, in June, 1893; and William, in November, 1899.

Since early manhood our subject has been a member of the Republican party. He and his family attend religious services, and are cheerful supporters of church work. Mr. Peacock takes a pardonable pride in his fine farm and excellent stock, as he realizes that he has earned all these pleasant rewards by his application, and the memory of the lessons learned at his mother's knee.

D. J. GARDNER, a native of Platteville, Grant county, and a distinguished lawyer in the prime of life, was born Feb. 26, 1853, son of David and Mary (Murphy) Gardner, both natives of Ireland.

David Gardner was born in County Meath, Ireland, March 4, 1818, and came to the United States in 1836. In 1844 he married Miss Mary Murphy, a native of County Cork, Ireland, and a daughter of Dennis Murphy, who settled in New Orleans, La., in 1840, and died there the same year. David Gardner came up the Mississippi river from Grand Gulf, Miss., to Ottawa, Ill., in 1838, and to Platteville, Wis., in April, 1842, settled on a farm one and a half miles southwest of the then village, and began prospecting for lead. He first discovered the Boots mine, and later the Gardner and Hayden mines, both the latter on the Gardner homestead, and successfully operated them a number of years, also following farming. Mr. Gardner was a man of energy and of splendid character. He died on his homestead in 1876, a devout member of the Catholic Church, and his widow, who was a lady of culture and refinement, descended from a family noted for generations back as highly educated people, survived until Dec. 12, 1893. Mr. and Mrs. David Gardner reared a family of seven children: John M., a retired farmer and surveyor, was born in 1845, and has always been a useful citizen; he has never married, and resides with his brother, D. J. David married Miss Drusilla Works, who has borne him two children, Dorothy and Helen, and lives on the old homestead at Platteville. James V., who was educated in the Platteville State Normal School, has recently retired from the general merchandise business; he married Miss Kate Martin, of Belmont, and they have had five children, David, Jr., Mary, Marguerite, Cyril and Claude. Mary E. is housekeeper for her brother D. J. Our subject is next in the order of birth. Bee A., a graduate of the State Normal, is the librarian of that institution. Cecelia, who was also educated at the State Normal School, is a successful teacher in the public schools of Platteville.

D. J. Gardner, after graduating from the State Normal School, in his native city, was engaged as principal of the Cassville school for three years. In 1880 he entered the law office of Carter & Cleary, as a student, was admitted to the Bar in 1882, and opened his office for practice in the same year; in December, 1885, he was admitted to practice in the Supreme court of the State, and to the United States courts in April, 1888. In 1887 Mr. Gardner associated with J. W. Murphy in practice, and until the dissolution of the firm, in 1895 they did a very extensive business. Mr. Gardner has continued practice at the old office until the present time. In 1891 he was appointed a member of the Board of Regents of Normal Schools of Wisconsin, on which he served five years, being vice-president of the Board the last year. During his membership the Board erected two Normal School edifices, one at Superior and one at Stevens Point, and Mr. Gardner was present at the dedication of both buildings, and delivered an address at the dedication of the Superior building, in 1896. Through his efforts the Platteville school has been very much enlarged, and it is now furnished with every modern appliance, and is a credit to the State. In February, 1893, Mr. Gardner greatly aided in the organization of the Platteville State Bank, was elected its vice-president, being a man of business ability as well as a stockholder, and held that position until October, 1899, when he disposed of his stock.

In politics Mr. Gardner is a hard-working Democrat, and has been honored by his party, having been elected to various offices, including those of town clerk, justice of the peace and city attorney, holding the last named for five years. He has always been one of the foremost public-spirited men of the city, ever keeping in view and aiding its progress. Individually he is one of the most generous and broad-minded of men, and to aid a friend there is no task too arduous for him to undertake. As a professional man, his career, as even here inadequately recorded, is sufficient to show that he is far in advance of the average lawyer who has had the same educational advantages and the same professional opportunities.

FRANK I. MOORE, engaged in the grocery business at Brodhead, Green county, where he carries a full line of everything usually found in a first-class establishment of the kind, including provisions and queensware, has, by strict attention to his business, and a very clear understanding of the requirements of his trade, built up a large and profitable patronage.

Mr. Moore was born in Danville, Vt., March 21, 1855, and is a son of Isaac and Amelia (Snow) Moore. His father was born in New Hampshire, and the birthplace of his mother is now lost to memory. Their children were: Amanda, wife of A. A. Ten Eyck, of the town of Decatur; Adin S., of Brodhead; Belle C., the widow of J. H. White, of Aurora, Ill.; Ella M., of the same city; Frank I.; and Anna J., wife of E. L. Whitney, of Mendota, Ill. The father was a farmer, and came to Wisconsin in 1860, locating on a farm of 125 acres, to which he subsequently added about sixty acres. After the death of his wife, in 1894, at the age of seventy-four, he made his home with his daughter, until his own death in 1898, at the age of eighty-two. They were

First-Day Adventists. He was justice of the peace in Vermont, and held various town offices in his more active days. His father, John Moore, was a native of Scotland, who came to this country, and settled in New Hampshire. He died in Vermont when old. He was a farmer, and had a large family. Adin Snow, the father of Amelia (Snow) Moore, was the father of five children. He was of English descent, and was engaged in milling in New Hampshire, at the time of his death from an accident in the mill.

Frank I. Moore was six years old when he came to Green county, Wis., with his parents. He attended the district school and was a student in the State Normal, at Whitewater. He began for himself as a clerk in Brodhead, and was in the same store for eight years. For the last twelve years he has been engaged in the grocery business for himself, and in that time has come to the front as a capable business man.

In May, 1877, Mr. Moore was united in marriage with Miss Carrie M. Cortelyou, a daughter of Timothy T. and Ann (Stillwell) Cortelyou. Mr. and Mrs. Moore have two children, F. Stillwell and Carrie Ella. The family are members of the Methodist church, where he serves as trustee and treasurer. Socially he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, and politically has always been a Democrat. The family reside in a pleasant home on South Center street.

SAMUEL BIRKBECK, Ph. G., M. D., of Gratiot, Lafayette county, succeeded Dr. A. L. Bushby in practice in April, 1898. The latter is now a resident of Primghar, Iowa.

Dr. Birkbeck is a native of Illinois, born in 1866 at Council Hill, Jo Daviess county, where his father, Thomas T. Birkbeck, was also born. Samuel Birkbeck, the grandfather of Dr. Birkbeck, was born in England. He went into the lead regions of northwestern Illinois, where in company with his brothers-in-law he owned one of the earliest lead smelting works established in that part of the West.

Dr. Birkbeck received his early education at the common school, and for a time was a student at the German-English College in Galena, after which he taught in the common schools for three years. He entered Highland Park College of Pharmacy, and graduated from that institution in 1894. Having decided to enter the medical profession, he entered upon the study of the healing art in 1895, and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1898. Soon after leaving college he located at Gratiot, and here he has won many friends. Dr. Birkbeck has established an extensive practice, and both as a citizen and as a physician he is held in high esteem.

Mrs. Birkbeck was formerly Miss Hattie Lauterbach, and is a lady of many charms and attractions.

PATRICK J. BRIDE, a prosperous and highly respected dairyman farmer in the town of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Toronto, Canada, in March, 1847.

Patrick and Catherine (Redmond) Bride, his parents, were natives of Dublin, Ireland, and were married in their native city. In 1844 they came to Canada, where they followed an agricultural life. In 1852 they entered Wisconsin, and settled on a farm in the town of Lima, Grant county. Four years later they moved to Platteville, where they spent the rest of their days. He died in 1880, and she in 1891. They were both members of the Catholic Church, and he was a Democrat. They were the parents of eight children, of whom James, Patrick and Mary A. died young. Edward, born in Ireland in 1839, served in the 3d Wisconsin Cavalry during the Civil war; he married Miss Catherine Dongan, of Omaha, and made that city his home until his death, in 1898; he left a wife and four children, John, James, Anna and Mary, who still reside in Omaha. Michael, born in Canada in April, 1845, was a small child when his parents came to Wisconsin; he married Miss Nettie Mace, and now resides in Kingsley, Iowa, where he is engaged in farming; they have had a family of fourteen children, twelve living—John, Edward, Fannie, Katie, May, Nellie, James, Annie, Walter, Adaline, Cecilia, and Clara. Patrick J. is our subject. John, born in Canada in 1849, obtaining his education in the Wisconsin schools; he married Miss Jane Welch, of Lima, where they lived until her death, in 1889; she left four children, Thomas (born in 1870), Mary (1872), Nellie N. (1874), and Jane, 1880. John Bride subsequently married Miss Katie Holzer, and is now living on his farm north of Platteville.

Patrick J. Bride was reared and educated in Grant county, and here he has been engaged in farming during the greater part of his life. In February, 1870, he married Miss Annie Connor, daughter of Patrick and Annie Connor, of Ireland; her mother belonged to the Doyle family. Her parents came to Toronto, Canada, while still young people, and lived there some years. In 1851 they came to Platteville, where the father died nine years later. The mother later married Peter Clark, and died in 1887. Mrs. Bride was born in January, 1847, and is the only surviving member of a family of eight children. She received her education in the public school. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bride took up their abode in the town of Platteville, where he bought what was known as the old Bass farm. To this he added fifty acres, and is now the owner of 100 acres of fine farming land, two miles north of Platteville. He has comfortable buildings, and has made a choice farm. Mr. and Mrs. Bride were blessed with no children of their own, but are rearing two: Cordelia Holzer, born Aug. 5, 1884, in Platteville; and Leo Pitts, born in July, 1882. They are bringing up these children as they would their own, and both are now students in the public school. Mr. and Mrs. Bride are members of the Catholic Church, and he is a member of the Catholic Knights. He is a Democrat, and though never an aspirant for public office was clerk of the school district a number of years, and is a man held in the highest esteem by all who know him.

J. R. WALKER, one of the leading representatives of the agricultural interests of Waterstown township, Grant county, owns and occupies a fine farm, which, by his efforts, has been developed into a very productive piece of property.

Mr. Walker was born in Hickory Grove township, Grant county, April 14, 1857, a son of Joseph Newcomb and Isabella (Ham) Walker. The paternal grandfather of our subject came to Hickory Grove township some ten years before his death, which occurred in Boscobel, when he was aged eighty-one. His wife died at the age of seventy-eight. Both were very highly respected. J. Newcomb Walker, the father of our subject, was born in Michigan in 1823, was reared in that State, and came with his parents to Grant county, settling in Hickory Grove township. Here he took up government land, improved it, and is now one of the leading farmers of his section as well as a prosperous banker, being prominently identified with one of the banking institutions of Boscobel. His marriage occurred at Fennimore, and to himself and wife were born thirteen children, of whom are mentioned: Norah, Mrs. Murley, of Hickory Grove; Justin, of Hickory Grove; Cornelius, of Hickory Grove; Lizzie, of Rockton, Ill.; Leona, Mrs. Richter, of Centerville, Wis.; Gertrude, Mrs. Sabins, of Hickory Grove; Myrtie, Mrs. Botten, of Hickory Grove; Leatea, Mrs. Updyke, of Hickory Grove.

J. R. Walker was reared and educated in Hickory Grove township, remaining there until he attained his majority, when he went upon the road as a traveling salesman for machinery, in Illinois. Later he located in Boscobel, handling machinery and vehicles, pianos, organs and sewing machines, until 1899, when he purchased a fine farm of 173 acres in Watters-town township, from C. Olesen, and has since devoted his attention to its cultivation and improvement.

On Feb. 18, 1893, Mr. Walker was married to Miss Helen Botten, a native of Norway, daughter of Martin Botten, of Hickory Grove township. Four children have been born of this union: Leonie Isabel, Jerome Newcomb, John Fulten, and Stella Annetta. In politics Mr. Walker is a stanch Republican, and takes an active part in the work of that party. Thoroughly identified in all movements having for their object the advancement of the material welfare of the community, Mr. Walker is well known throughout the county, and is highly respected for his many excellent qualities.

ISAAC LEWIS WILLIAMS, whose well-cultivated farm of 120 acres in Section 19, Monroe township, Green county, speaks well for the thrift and industry of its owner, was born July 13, 1851, in Punxsutawney, Jefferson Co., Penn., where his father still resides.

Stacy B. Williams, his father, was born in New York State, and when quite small was brought by his father to Pennsylvania. He is a merchant and lumberman, and has engaged in school teaching to some extent, although of late years he has given the major portion of his attention to farming, residing within a mile of his father's old home. He married Caroline Lewis, daughter of Isaac Lewis, and of this union ten children were born, four of whom survive: Thomas M., of Punxsutawney; Isaac Lewis; George, of Jefferson county, Penn.; and John C., of western Virginia. The mother of these children died in 1864, and Mr. Williams married for his second wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Law, widow of Harrison Law, and daughter of Theodore and Matilda Morris. To this second union came six children, but Joseph and Martha alone survive. Stacy B. Williams was a son of Thomas Williams, a native of New York State, who migrated with his family to Pennsylvania, Stacy B. being the youngest of fourteen children. Isaac Lewis, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Isaac Lewis Williams, was a farmer of Pennsylvania, where he raised his family of five children.

Isaac Lewis Williams lived on his father's farm until he had attained to man's estate, and received his education in the common schools of Punxsutawney, after which he worked at the lumbering business in the employ of his father for nine years. In 1877 he located in Green county, Wis., and for five years worked by the month. In 1882 he purchased his present farm of 120 acres, which he has since improved and brought to a high state of cultivation. He has seen his efforts crowned with success, and can now look over his broad fields, and see the wonders his systematic labors have wrought.

On Feb. 23, 1882, Mr. Williams was united in marriage with Miss Clara Russell, who was born in Beloit, Wis., Jan. 31, 1859, a daughter of John Milton and Teresa J. (Morris) Russell, and one son, Stacy Hurley Williams, born July 29, 1883, has come to bless this union (he is a graduate of the business college in Monroe). Socially Mr. Williams belongs to the Modern Woodmen, and he and his wife in their religious belief are Methodists, but not identified with any one church.

Mr. John Milton Russell was born in Indiana, and when quite small accompanied his parents to California, but later returned East, and was married when quite young in Monroe, Wis. A year after his marriage he started back to California across the Plains, but he was not heard of again; it is believed he was murdered while on the way. His wife, Teresa J. (Morris) Russell, never married a second time, but makes her home with her daughter. She is a Universalist in religious belief. John Russell, father of John Milton Russell, was a native of Indiana, and after his removal to California engaged in farming and became the owner of a large ranch. He died there aged sixty-seven years, and his wife, Margaret, died Jan. 11, 1892, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Muzzy, in her ninetieth year; she was a devout member of the Baptist Church, having been converted in her girlhood, and her love of prayer and deep attachment to the Bible characterized her private Christian life. William Morris, father of Mrs. J. (Morris) Russell, and grandfather of Mrs. Williams, was a native of Virginia, of English descent, was a farmer by occupation, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. He married Mary Kilgore, who died in 1884, aged eighty-one. He came to Wisconsin in 1844, and lived in Green county until 1877, when he passed away.

MARTIN McNEIL, the manager of the McNeil estate in Section 25, Clinton township, Rock county, is a man of much character and energy. He is not afraid of hard work, and is a student of modern and progressive farming, joining thrift and industry, in his personal career, and is getting ahead in the world.

Mr. McNeil was born in Beloit, Rock county, July 15, 1861, and obtained his education in the district schools of the town of Clinton. When he became a young man he worked on the farm for his father, and in 1885 and 1886 was a train hand on the Burlington & Missouri River railroad in Nebraska. In 1887 he returned home, and since that time has had charge of the paternal homestead, managing his father's property in a most satisfactory manner. He is capable and pushing, knows his business, and is popular among the neighboring farmers. He is well read, and takes much intelligent interest in public affairs. He is a strong Democrat, and religiously a member of the Catholic Church.

Martin McNeil, the father of the gentleman whose name introduces this article, was born in Ireland Nov. 11, 1817, and came to this country in 1842, settling first in Providence, R. I., and going from there to California in 1850. He spent two successful years in the gold mines, and then returned to Providence. In 1857 Mr. McNeil came to Wisconsin, and bought the present McNeil estate, paying for it in gold. Here he resided until his death, June 20, 1890. In November, 1857, he was married to Miss Eliza Lannon, a daughter of Michael and Winifred (McIntyre) Lannon, of Providence, R. I., who came to Wisconsin in 1862, and remained here thirteen years. They then returned to Providence, where they died in 1880. Mrs. McNeil is still living, at the age of sixty-one, with a daughter who is teaching school in Sharon, Wis. She is the mother of eleven children, Martin, John, Hugh, Charles, George, Mary, Ellen, Margaret, Agnes, Winifred and Frances. Hugh died at the age of sixteen. Ellen married Arthur Friedendahl, of Clinton, and has five children, Martin, Guy, Howard, Myrtle and Marie.

REV. P. J. JONES, pastor of St. Charles Catholic Church, of Cassville, Grant county, was born at Holy Cross, Ozaukee Co., Wis., Jan. 27, 1861, a son of Peter and Margaret (Schumacher) Jones. The father was born in Brussels, Belgium, in December, 1832, and was eleven years of age when he came to Wisconsin, locating in Ozaukee county. Peter Jones attended a college in Michigan, and for thirty-two years was engaged in teaching in the schools near Port Washington, Ozaukee Co., Wis. He served as town clerk thirty-five years, and also filled the office of postmaster. There he married Margaret Schumacher, a native of Luxemburg, Germany, who came to Ozaukee county at the age of seven years. To this union were born six children: Nicholas, a resident of Appleton, Wis.; P. J.; Mary, Mrs. Clohisy, of Eagle, Waukesha Co., Wis.; Michael and Maggie, Mrs. Corey, both of Milwaukee; and Anna, at home.

Father Jones attended the public schools of his native place, and at the age of eleven years entered Calvary College, Fond du Lac, Wis., where he was a student for five years. For two years he attended Grand Seminary, Montreal, Canada, and for three years pursued his studies at St. Francis College, where he was graduated June 29, 1885. After his ordination as priest he became pastor of the church at Eagle, Wis., where he remained sixteen months, and then took pastoral charge of the Catholic Church at Mazo Manie, Dane county, where he was located for twelve and a half years, at the same time having charge of two missions, at Blue Mounds and Mill Creek. He built St. Barnabas Church, at Mazo Manie, which was commenced in 1890, completed in 1891, and cost $18,000. He also erected a frame school house, and opened a parochial school, in charge of the Dominican Sisters, in 1889. From Mazo Manie Father Jones came to Cassville, July 16, 1899, and has since done a great work in building up the church at this place. He is a member of the Order of Catholic Knights. Broad in his views and sympathies, a friend of the poor and oppressed, ever ready with helpful counsel for the perplexed and sorrowful, he has a wide field for labor, and well does he discharge its arduous and sacred duties.

St. Charles Catholic Church. Services were first held in Cassville by Rev. Father L. Galthier, of Prairie du Chien, and a father from Sinsinawa also made occasional visits here. Early in the 'fifties Rev. Hobbs, then stationed at Potosi, said mass in private residences near Cassville, there being five or six Catholic families in the neighborhood at that time. In 1856 Rev. Vivaldi, of Potosi, held services in the public school building of Cassville, and this became a regular mission of Potosi, with Rev. Gibson for the English-speaking people, and Rev. Zuber for the German. Before the close of 1857 a brick church was erected by Rev. Vincent Verhof and J. M. Albers, both of Potosi. In August, 1865, Father Thiele took charge here, becoming the first resident pastor, and within two months had built a parsonage. In February, 1867, he was succeeded by Rev. J. A. Moes, who built the church at Glen Haven, and established a mission at that place. He was followed by Rev. J. M. Albers, who was stationed here from 1868 to 1871, and was succeeded by Rev. M. DeBecke, who was pastor here from May, 1871, to January, 1873; Rev. T. F. Schraudenbach officiated from March, 1873, to January, 1876. The latter died at Boscobel, Wis. The next in charge was Rev. J. Gemeiner, from February, 1876, to September, 1878. During his pastorate a frame school house, now the parsonage, was built. Father Meurer was pastor of St. Charles from October, 1878, to April, 1880, and was followed by Rev. J. Decker, who assumed his duties in Cassville the following May, but remained here only until November, during which time the parsonage was sold, and the former school building converted into a parsonage; he is now connected with the Milwaukee diocese. From April, 1881, to March, 1882, the church was under the pastorate of Rev. A. Gardthaus, now of Minneapolis, and of Rev. L. C. Drexel, now a professor in St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee, from August, 1882, to April, 1888, when he was succeeded by Rev. A. M. Rossbach. In the spring of 1889 the latter began the erection of the present church, the corner-stone being laid April 30, that year, and the church dedicated Nov. 20, by Rt. Rev. K. Flasch, of La Crosse, Wis. It is a fine brick structure, 50x100 feet, in the Gothic style of architecture, and cost $14,000, not including the inside furnishings. In June, 1893, the present school building was commenced, the corner-stone was laid Feb. 1, 1894, and the building was dedicated March 7, same year, by the Most Rev. F. X. Kratzer, Archbishop of Milwaukee, and the Very Rev. A. Salick, of the same place. The building contains two school rooms and an apartment for the Sisters and boarders, the school being under the direct control of the Franciscan Sisters, of Alvarno, Manitowoc Co., Wis. It was opened with sixty-two pupils in attendance, and now has ninety-five, while the church now has a membership of about 180 families. Rev. A. Rossbach was pastor from 1888 to 1897, and was succeeded by Rev. Francis O. Pichery, who in turn was succeeded by Rev. P. J. Jones, the present pastor, July 16, 1899. During the pastorate of Father Jones the church indebtedness has been raised, and there is now money in the treasury, while a contract has been made with Henry Gaertner, of Milwaukee, for inside decorations to cost $1,200. In connection with the church there is a society, known as the Catholic Order of Knights, which now has about sixty-five members, with Patrick McDermott, president; G. P. Diedrich, vice-president; J. W. Niemer, treasurer; Michael Esser, trustee; and A. J. Diedrich, sentinel.

LEWIS W. TERRY, a general merchant of Brodhead, Green county, has by close application to his business, together with a readiness to accommodate and please his customers, and a uniform integrity and fair dealing with all, built up a large and flattering trade, and is placed among the representative men of the county.

Mr. Terry was born in Durand, Ill., Sept.

17, 1855, and is a son of Nirie and Sarah (Quisley) Terry, natives of Norway. They were the parents of seven children: Thomas, of Sweetwater, Neb.; Lewis W., of Brodhead; Bessie, the wife of Fred Krogh, of Chicago; Ole E., of Stoughton, Wis.; Carrie, the wife of W. Lee, of Sweetwater, Neb.; Tillie, of Chicago; and John, of Sweetwater, Neb. The father was a farmer and came to America about 1845, locating at Durand, Ill. He worked in the northern pineries for several years during the winter season. After a time he married, and bought a farm near Durand, Ill., where he lived some twenty-five years. At the expiration of that period this land had become too valuable for farming purposes, and the senior Terry sold it and moved to Brodhead, Wis., living here for some two years. After this he went to Nebraska, and settled at Sweetwater, which is his present home. His wife died in 1873 at the age of forty-eight. They were both Lutherans in their religious faith. His father died in Norway. Mrs. Terry's father bore the name of Lars Quisley, and was a Norwegian farmer, dying in his native country at an advanced age. He was the father of a numerous family.

Lewis Terry was reared on the farm at Durand, attending the high school at that place, and the Rockford business college. He was a farmer for a time, and then entered a store at Lyle, Minn., where he was a clerk for some months, and then for a year engaged in similar work at Clear Lake, Iowa. After this he came back to Brodhead, where Jan. 1, 1877, he entered the store of B. R. Clawson, and was in his employ three years. In 1880 he formed a partnership with G. C. Aurand, and bought out Mr. Clawson. The firm was Aurand & Terry until 1885, in which year Mr. Aurand sold his interest to Ole E. Terry, and the firm was changed to Terry Brothers. In 1897 Lewis W. Terry bought his brother's interest and has since continued the business alone. He has made a large success of it, dealing extensively in wool and tobacco, and is one of the leading country merchants in the southern part of the State.

On Sept. 8, 1880, Mr. Terry was married to Henrietta M. Bayliss, a daughter of Henry M. and Angelette (Batchelder) Bayliss. Two children were born to this union, Mabel E. and Maude L. Mrs. Terry died in 1890, when only twenty-nine years old, and her loss was deeply felt by a large circle of friends and relatives. She was a woman of much character and a fine spirit. On Oct. 5, 1895, Mr. Terry wedded Miss Anna B. Burtness, the daughter of H. T. Burtness. Socially Mr. Terry belongs to Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M., the Knights of Pythias, and the Modern Woodmen of America, and is a valued member of these various organizations. Politically he is a Republican. He resides in a comfortable home on Main street.

SAMUEL HUTZEL, a wealthy and retired farmer of Green county, who is spending his last years in peace and comfort at Juda, was born Dec. 3, 1827, and is a son of John G. and Elizabeth (Shultz) Hutzel, of Somerset county, Pennsylvania.

The Hutzel family is of German origin, and George Hutzel, the grandfather of Samuel, was a native of Germany, coming to America before the breaking out of the American Revolution. John G. Hutzel and Elizabeth Shultz were married in 1826, and to this union were born ten children, the eldest being Samuel, whose name introduces this article; Veronica, who married Isah Deal, of Pennsylvania, and died in Wisconsin; Jeremiah; George, deceased; Abraham, deceased; Joel, deceased; William, deceased; Peter, deceased; Eliza, wife of John Geise, of Wyoming; and William. The mother of these died in 1848, and Mr. Hutzel married for his second wife Miss Hannah Suder, of Pennsylvania. To this union were born five children, all of whom are residing in Nebraska.

Samuel Hutzel came to Wisconsin in 1852, and the following year married Miss Lavina Blackford, daughter of William Blackford, of Green county. To them were born the following children: (1) Elizabeth married William Baird, a Green county farmer; (2) Rebecca is the wife of Daniel Stull, of Shenandoah, Iowa; (3) John married Miss Alice Gans, and lives in Iowa; (4) Ida is the wife of William Keefer, of Green county; (5) James married Miss Edith Bloom, and is a farmer in Nebraska; (6) Alice married Emory Blackford, and is now deceased; (7) Ada married Frank Carter, of the town of Jefferson; (8) Nora is the wife of Edward Hefty, of Iowa.

Mr. Hutzel lost his first wife in 1881; she was born in 1835. For his second wife he married Miss Mary Berryman, who died in 1888, after four years of wedded life. Mr. Hutzel's third wife was Mrs. Minerva Harrington, the widow of Abraham Harrington. She was born in 1834, and married our subject in 1893. Mr. Hutzel was reared on the farm, where he received a common-school education and invaluable lessons in honor, manliness and self-reliance from the teachings and example of his parents. Mr. Hutzel began life for himself with an axe and a grubbing hoe, and worked in Pennsylvania at grubbing and cleaning up forest lands. In 1852 he came to Wisconsin, and settled in Green county, and up to this time had scarcely made any headway. Here he has worked hard, taken advantage of the opportunities, and, by industry, economy and perseverance, is now counted among the wealthier farmers of this region. Two farms belong to him, and he owns over 500 acres of land, in a high state of cultivation. Mr. Hutzel is a Prohibitionist, and belongs to the Baptist Church. He is a man of strong domestic virtues, and has lived a life of honor and integrity.

Samuel Hutzel Minerva Hutzel

BENNETT W. NIEHAUS is one of the well-known veteran soldiers of the war of the Rebellion who are residents of Fennimore, Grant county. Mr. Niehaus was born in Hanover, Germany, Aug. 4, 1845, a son of Herman Niehaus, and eleven years later the family came to Wisconsin, locating in Platteville, where the elder Niehaus found work at his trade as a merchant tailor. He died in Platteville in 1861. His wife died before he left Germany. Four of the children accompanied him to the United States, Bennett W., Charles W., Minnie and Frederica May, all of whom are yet living except Minnie.

Bennett W. Niehaus learned the wagon-making trade at Platteville, in the shop of Alexander Butler, and was becoming an excellent workman when he determined to enlist. In 1864. In May of that year he became a member of Company A, 41st Wis. V. I., which became a part of the Western Army, and was engaged most of the time in guard and garrison duty. His first term of enlistment expiring, our subject re-enlisted. in January, 1865, as a member of Company K, 47th Wis. V. I. He served in the Army of the Tennessee, in the rear of Gen. Sherman. Mr. Niehaus was finally discharged from the service in September, 1865, and came back to Wisconsin much broken in health, but proud of the fact that he had been permitted to fight for the nation that had welcomed him as a son. He brought out of the service a severe case of hernia, the result of some painful injuries received while on duty, and he has never fully recovered.

Mr. Niehaus came back to Platteville, and resumed work at his trade. In 1866 he removed to Annaton, Grant county, and thence to Danville, Ill., only remaining fourteen months at that point, however, and returning to Annaton. There he made his home until 1870, when he became a resident of Fennimore, and here he has since carried on wagon-making and repairing, with a good patronage and many friends throughout that part of the county.

Mr. Niehaus married Miss Mary Schmidt, and they have one son and one daughter. Their daughter, Minnie, is the wife of Albert Weber; and their son, Charles J., is a drug merchant at Fennimore. Mr. Niehaus belongs to Sam Monteith Post, Grand Army of the Republic, at Fennimore, and is popular among its members. He was a good soldier in the war for the Union, and is a worthy and respected citizen at home.

EDWIN A. LOVELAND, a contractor and builder at Monticello, Green county, was born in the town of Washington, that county, May 7, 1855, and is a son of Argalus and Jane (Orwick) Loveland, the former a native of New York, and the latter of Ohio. They were the parents of nine sons and four daughters, and eight of their children are now living: Franklin, of the town of Washington; Orrilla, wife of E. N. Fessenden; Emina, wife of Thomas Lemon, of Iowa; Temperance, wife of I. W. Wilson, of Albany, Wis.; William A., of Coggon, Iowa; Edwin A.; Alfred E., of Coggon, Iowa; and Silas E., of Corona, South Dakota.

Argalus Loveland was a farmer, and came to Wisconsin in 1854, locating on a farm of 160 acres in the town of Washington, where he reared his family. He died in 1896, at the age of eighty-three years; his widow died in 1898, when eighty-one years old. In religion he was a Seventh Day Adventist, but she never identified herself with any church. In politics Mr. Loveland was a Republican, and took quite a leading part in local matters, having served on the board of supervisors for a number of years, and also as treasurer of the town some ten or twelve years. Andrew Loveland, his father, was a native of Pennsylvania, of English descent, followed farming as an occupation, and he died in 1869, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. He was four times married, and had twenty-two children by his first two wives. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Loveland, of Monticello, was also a native of Pennsylvania, and came of Dutch descent. He married an Irish woman, who bore him ten children. His death occurred when he was about fifty years of age, after having devoted his life to farming.

Edwin A. Loveland was reared on the farm in the town of Washington, and acquired his education at the district school. After his marriage he learned the carpenter's trade, and this has been his main occupation through life, although for several years he was a railroad man, and was foreman of the yards at Kearney, Neb., for the Black Hills & Kearney railroad up to 1891. That year he returned to Monticello, where he has remained to the present time, engaged in carpentering and contracting.

On June 27, 1875, Mr. Loveland was married to Miss Sarah Hutchins, a daughter of Ward and Mary (Parcell) Hutchins. To them were born eight children: Harry, Thomas Benjamin, Iva, Edwin, Virgil, Frances, Merle and Joy. Harry died at the age of fifteen years; Thomas B. died at the age of two years, and Edwin at the same age; Iva is a teacher; and the other children are living at home. Mr. Loveland, his wife and children have many friends in the community. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being enrolled in Riverton Lodge, No. 63, F. & A. M. He also belongs to the I. O. O. F., Monticello Lodge, No. 83; to Garrison, No. 6, Knights of the Globe; and to the Pilgrim Knights, or Oriental Order of the Palm and Shell. In politics he is a Democrat, and has been village clerk for the past four years. His home, which he built in 1892, is in the eastern part of the village.

HENRY H. FASSBENDER, one of the successful agriculturists of Wyalusing township, Grant county, is numbered among those who fought for the Union when the States of the South threatened its dissolution. He was born in Germany, in 1836, a son of Adolph Fassbender, and was about nine years of age when the family emigrated to the United States, locating in Dane county, Wis., where the parents spent the remainder of their lives. Of their nine children Henry H. was the only one in the war.

Our subject entered the service as a member of Company F, 1st Wisconsin Cavalry, being enrolled Nov. 19, 1863, as a private, but when discharged, July 19, 1865, he was holding the rank of corporal. He was in active service during the whole time, either with his regiment or on detached duty, and took part in the Chattanooga and Atlanta campaign, and also in Wilson's famous raid, near the close of the war.

Mr. Fassbender has resided on the farm in Wyalusing township, Grant county, which he now occupies, since 1862, and has successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Miss Melinda Sutton, came to the county with her parents when but two years old, and here made her home until called to her final rest, March 18, 1896, at the age of fifty-three. By her marriage to Mr. Fassbender she became the mother of ten children, four sons and six daughters, of whom all the sons and three daughters are living at the present writing (1900). The family have quite a comfortable home, and its members are people of prominence in the community where they reside. Notwithstanding his arduous service, Mr. Fassbender still enjoys fairly good health. He was a faithful soldier, is a good citizen, and is an honored member of Grand Army Post, No. 23.

RANSOM B. FOLTS, a well-known farmer of Jamestown, Grant county, was born in Onondaga county, N. Y., in 1843, a son of David and Mary (Hoag) Folts.

The parents of our subject were born in New York, the father in 1813, and the mother in 1811. They received a limited education, were married in 1836, and lived in New York until 1843, in which year they came West to Milwaukee, which was their home for a time. They moved into Kansas, and then came back to Wisconsin. Here Mr. Folts had one or two locations, and then settled at Louisburg, where he has lived for over forty years, now aged eighty-seven. Mrs. Folts died in Jamestown in June, 1875. Mr. Folts has been a Whig and a Republican. In religion he and his wife were connected with the Methodist Church. Of their seven children, three are now living: (1) Albert died in Milwaukee when a boy. (2) Richard, born in New York in 1840, enlisted in Company I, 3d Wis. V. I., was taken sick, and died in hospital at Fredericksburg in the fall of 1861. (3) William died when a young man while his parents lived at Fair Play, Wis. (4) Fred C., born in New York, enlisted in Company I, 3d Wis. V. I., served three years in the Army of the Potomac, and saw much hard fighting. He married Miss Jennie Wilson, of Grant county, settled in Iowa, and engaged in milling. He died in 1889, leaving a widow and six children, who settled in Wisconsin. (5) Ransom B. is our subject. (6) Mary M. is the wife of Edward Cummins, lives in Platteville, and has five children. (7) David B. when a boy enlisted in Company K, 44th Wis. V. I., and served in the Army of the Tennessee. He married Miss Nora Shinoe, and is living on his farm near Dickeyville; they have one son, Lisle.

Ransom B. Folts obtained a limited education in the common schools of Wisconsin. When nineteen years of age he enlisted in Company I, 25th Wis. V. I., and served in the Army of the Cumberland, Gen. Grant commanding. In 1863 Mr. Folts re-enlisted, in Company D, 43d Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war under Gen. Thomas.

In 1869 Mr. Folts married Miss Annie Thurtell, daughter of Edward B. and Amy (Burns) Thurtell, old pioneers of Grant county. Mr. Thurtell was born in England, and his wife in North Carolina in 1820. They settled on a farm one mile north of Louisburg, where they lived until his death, in 1876. Mrs. Thurtell still survives, at the age of eighty. There were nine children in their family: (1) Edward died in the Civil war. (2) Walter is a resident of Honolulu. (3) Mary is the wife of George Withrow, of Chicago, and is now in the Klondike. (4) Frank is a farmer in Iowa. (5) Frederick is a resident of the State of Washington. (6) Harriet is the wife of Hugh Cattnach, of Minnesota. (7) Grace is the wife of John McKann, of South Dakota. (8) Belle is the widow of Henry Travers. (9) Annie is the wife of Mr. Folts, was born in 1844, and received a district-school education in Jamestown.

Soon after his marriage Mr. Folts purchased the present home near Louisburg, where he and his family are living. Children have come to Mr. and Mrs. Folts as follows: (1) Edward R., born in March, 1870, obtained his education in the Louisburg schools, and for six years was one of the successful teachers of Grant county. He married Miss Julia Howard, and is now living on his farm in Dickeyville. (2) Eva May, born in Jamestown, in October, 1874, was a student of the State Normal at Platteville for two years, and was then a teacher for four years. She is now the wife of Harry Howard, a young business man of Platteville. (3) Mary A. died in childhood.

Mr. Folts has always voted with the Republican party. He and his wife both belong to old and honored pioneer families of the county, and for many years have been associated with all forward movements in the community. Both families were noted for their loyalty in the war, and were largely represented on the "firing line."

REV. THOMAS DEMPSEY. The face and figure of the Rev. Father Dempsey, pastor of St. Victor's Catholic Church at Monroe, Green county, are familiar, he having been in charge of that parish for more than eight years. Nor is it too much to add that by his gentle manners, kindly sympathy and consistent Christian life he has endeared himself, not only to his flock, but to the community at large, without distinction of creed.

St. Victor's was originally a mission station, established about 1850, and the first mass was celebrated by Rev. J. Colton, of Shullsburg. Masses were said from time to time, and the sacraments administered, as occasion permitted, by clergymen from that point and from Janesville until 1860, when the number of the Catholics in the locality appeared to the Bishop of the diocese to be sufficient to justify the establishment of a parish, and the appointment of a resident pastor. Rev. T. Sullivan was the first to fill the position. During his pastorate, which extended over a period of six years, the first church edifice was erected. Father Sullivan was transferred to Beloit, July 1, 1866, where he died, many years ago. He was succeeded by Father William O'Connell (until May, 1867), John Murphy (until June 18, 1868) and John Casey. Father Casey was a believer in the efficacy of a well-conducted religious paper, and in association with Dr. Nolan he founded the "Catholic Vindicator," the office of publication being subsequently removed to Milwaukee, and the name of the journal being changed to the "Catholic Citizen," under which caption it has attained a widespread influence and a large circulation. Father Casey was assigned to another parish in July, 1871, and finally closed his long life of active service and good works at Milwaukee, in the spring of 1900. His successor at St. Victor's was Rev. Michael Wenker, who was followed by Rev. E. McGinty. The latter, in 1880, was transferred to a parish at Janesville, where he still remains. The next pastor of the church at Monroe was the Rev. Father Wrynn, who gave way, in 1883, to the Rev. H. O'Brien. He remained until 1892, in which year began the pastorate of the devoted and zealous clergyman whose life is briefly sketched in the succeeding paragraphs.

In 1891 fire destroyed the sacred edifice around which centered, for thirty years, the pious aspirations of St. Victor's parishioners, and which was the focus of so many tender and sacred memories. It may be perceived, therefore, that the task confronting the new rector was no easy one. A weaker man, or one who had less faith, might have been appalled. But Father Dempsey's courage never faltered nor did his confidence in the sustaining grace and power of God for a moment desert him. He at once set about the task of rebuilding, in which he found the self-sacrificing piety of his people a cause for thanksgiving. In September, 1893, a new building was dedicated, in which the congregation still worship. It is a handsome structure of brick, and stands surrounded by large, well-kept grounds, on which has been built a neat, yet commodious parochial residence. The church and rectory are a monument—silent yet speaking—to the piety, self-denial and earnest zeal of the Roman Catholics of Monroe. The congregation comprises some 125 families, and in 1899 a new altar was built in the church, at a cost of eleven hundred dollars.

The Rev. Thomas Dempsey is a native of the State which he well loves, having been born in Dodge county, of which his father, Cornelius, was one of the pioneers. The father is deceased, but his widow (Father Dempsey's mother) is yet living, her home being at Spokane Falls. To them were born fourteen children, three of their sons having served with gallantry through the war for the preservation of the national integrity, one of whom laid down his life in the service of his country. Michael was a member of the 14th Wis. Inf.; James, who was killed in the battle of Corinth, was in the 17th Inf.; and Edward belonged to the First Heavy Artillery; another son, Dr. Peter Dempsey, was for several years a successful physician at Milwaukee, but failing health enforced his retirement from practice; he sought health in Mexico, and died in that country. The only surviving daughter of the family is in the convent of Notre Dame, and is known as Sister Edgar.

Father Dempsey received his early education in the public schools, and studied theology at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, where he was ordained to the priesthood in June, 1876. For six months after ordination he was assistant to Rev. George Willard, of St. Joseph's, Fond du Lac, where he was given pastoral charge of the congregations at Eden and Byron, in Fond du Lac county. His next charge was at Highland, Iowa county, from which post he was transferred to Monroe.

DAVID B. WALKER, a worthy representative of an old and prominent pioneer family of Grant county, was born there April 2, 1847.

Our subject is a son of John and Jane (Bradbury) Walker, both of whom were born in Yorkshire, England, in 1814, and came to Wisconsin in 1840. Both at that time were unmarried. Mr. Walker came immediately to this State, feeling confident that plenty of work awaited him. Mrs. Walker, then Jane Bradbury, went to visit with friends in Meadville, Penn., remaining there several years. After she came to Grant county the old friends met, and were married in Potosi, where they lived until 1846, Mr. Walker in that year buying eighty acres of land in Smelser township, Grant county. This farm was purchased from Henry Snowden, who bought the eighty acres adjoining, paying $25 per acre. On this place Mr. Walker erected a house, and the young people settled down to pioneer life in the great Northwest, as it was then regarded. Until 1873 the family resided there, and Mr. Walker then purchased a small farm near Big Patch, on which place they remained until their deaths, which occurred in 1892 and 1895, respectively. Always to be found at the post of duty.

it is no wonder that these good people were sincerely mourned, not only in the P. M. Church, where they had long been members, but in the community at large. In politics Mr. Waiker was a Whig, then a Republican, and for many years his services were in demand on the school board of the township. The family born to the parents of our subject numbered six: David B.; Margaret A., who died in childhood; Mary E.; Harriet A.; Sarah E., born in Grant county in 1849, who married James D. Bell, of Seymour, Wis., and has six children, Margaret, John W., Nellie, Jennie, Edward and Woodward; and Hannah A., born in 1852, who married James Kay, and now lives in Platteville, Wis. (she has one son, Albert).

Our subject was reared in the present home and was educated in the district schools of Smelser township. Being his father's only son, he remained on the farm, where his services were needed, and became the efficient manager of the farm some years before his father's demise. On Jan. 16, 1873, he was married to Miss Mary J. Douglass, of Hazel Green, the estimable daughter of John and Jane (Bradley) Douglass, both of whom were born in Scotland, and on coming to America located in Michigan, later moving to Hazel Green, Wis., where Mr. Douglass engaged in mining. Mr. Douglass became interested in the mines of California, and crossed the plains to that State, but accident must have terminated his life, as he has never returned; Mrs. Douglass is still a resident of Big Patch, Wis. Five children were born to them: John resides in California; James resides in California; Wealthy married John Jones, of Smelser; Abner resides in California; Mary J. is the wife of Mr. Walker.

After his marriage our subject made a great many improvements about the farm, making it one of the finest homes in the township. He owns 500 acres of fertile land, and has been for some time one of the largest cattle dealers in the county. To him and his wife have come four children: John D., born in November, 1873, was graduated from the Platteville Normal School in the class of 1895, engaged in teaching in the public schools for one year, and followed that with a year in the great University of Chicago, where he took up the study of vocal music, now occupying that chair in one of the institutes at Fort Worth, Texas; Nellie J., born in 1877, was educated in the Platteville Normal School; James E. was born in October, 1883; and George W., in August, 1887.

Mr. Walker has been identified with the Republican party, has served as chairman on the town board, and has been school director. Both he and wife are valued members of the M. E. Church, to which he liberally contributes. He has taken a great pride in the adornment of his farm, and has made his property a beautiful and ideal spot. The family has the respect of the neighborhood, where all are personally popular.

CHARLES P. SCHNEIDER is one of the honored veterans of the Civil war and one of the highly esteemed citizens of Lancaster township, Grant county. He was born May 25, 1843, near Sinsinawa Mound, Grant county, a son of Frederick and Mary (Fager) Schneider.

Frederick Schneider, his father, emigrated from Germany with his family in 1839. In the Fatherland he was a comb maker, but after coming to this country he was employed in lead mining, and later followed the life of a farmer. His home was near Hurricane, Grant county, where he died in 1899, after reaching the age of eighty-five years, having buried his wife many years before. Of his thirteen children, nine—five sons and four daughters—are yet living: Charles P., Lewis, Joseph, Mary (Mrs. Hoffman), Frederick, Samuel, Louisa, Emma (Mrs. Schaub), and Carrie (Mrs. Pollock).

Charles P. Schneider, together with a younger brother, Lewis, enlisted in Company K, 47th Wis. V. I., and served with that organization, with marked gallantry, until the regiment was mustered out, at the close of the conflict. At the outset he was chosen corporal, and was later made color-bearer, and as such bore the regiment's standard safely and triumphantly home at the end of the war. He keeps his memory of these stirring experiences green, and at the same time perpetuates old comradeship by membership in Tom Cox Post, No. 132, G. A. R., of Lancaster. Mr. Schneider's health was badly shattered through exposure and privation while in the service, and it is unlikely that he will ever regain his former strength and vitality.

On March 24, 1874, our subject married

Mary Magdalena Schneider, who was born at Platteville, Grant county. The issue of the marriage has been ten children, three sons and seven daughters, namely: Lydia A., Minnie M., William C., Elsie E., Martha M., Lillian H., Estelle H., Alberta J., Edgar P. and Elgar H.

JOHN A. BOSSI, an honored and highly respected citizen of Grant county, whose home is on section 34, Wyalusing township, is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, having served his adopted country faithfully and well as a member of Company I, 43d Wis. V. I. A native of Switzerland, he was born in Canton Graubunden Sept. 1, 1844, a son of John Francis and Barbara Bossi. He lost his mother when he was a small child, and his father died about 1861.

In 1863, at the age of eighteen years, Mr. Bossi came to America, leaving Switzerland June 15, and arriving in Grant county, Wis., July 15. He is the only one of his father's family who ever came to the New World. On reaching the shores of this country he could not speak a word of English, but after working on a farm one summer he entered school at Bradtville, Wyalusing township, and made such rapid advancement in his studies during the winter that he was soon able to speak English with very little foreign accent.

On Aug. 29, 1864, Mr. Bossi entered the service in defense of his adopted country, as a member of Company I, 43d Wis. V. I., and with his regiment went directly to Nashville, and thence to Johnsonville. He fought under Gen. Schofield, in the 23d Army Corps, in the engagement at the latter place, and was with Gen. Thomas in the famous battle of Nashville. After that engagement the command to which he belonged, like a large part of Thomas' army, did guard duty most of the time until the close of the war. Mr. Bossi had many narrow escapes from the bullets of the enemy, but was never seriously injured. He was honorably discharged at Nashville June 24, 1865, and is today the youngest but one of those belonging to Grand Army Post No. 23.

After receiving his discharge Mr. Bossi returned to Wyalusing township, Grant Co., Wis., where he has always made his home since coming to the United States. On Sept. 30, 1869, he married Mrs. Martha G. Gulick, widow of Edward D. Gulick, who was also a soldier in the war for the Union, being a member of Company C, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry; he died in the service, at Helena, Ark., Oct. 2, 1862. Mrs. Bossi was born in the town of Sherman, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., in 1840, and bore the maiden name of Martha Goodrich Barnes, being a daughter of Charles D. and Sophia Barnes. Her family came to Grant county, Wis., in 1853, and the parents made their home in Wyalusing township until death. Of their nine children, Mrs. Bossi is now the only survivor. Her brother, Allen J. Barnes, enlisted at the age of eighteen years in the 33d Wis. V. I., and died at Memphis, Tenn., in March, 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Bossi have one daughter living, Mrs. Catherine Isadore Glass, of Wyalusing township. They have lost two children: Barbara Sophia, the eldest, who was married March 19, 1890, to Clarence E. Patch, of Patch Grove, and died Jan. 1, 1900, at the age of twenty-nine years; and Charles Francis, who died at the age of twenty months. Mrs. Bossi has two daughters by her first marriage: Ann, now the wife of Charles Schuyler, living near Sioux City, Iowa; and Rosa, wife of Henry Day, of Wyalusing township. Her stepdaughter, Nancy Jane Gulick, born Aug. 5, 1855, married Christopher Eggleston, a soldier, who died three years ago; Mrs. Eggleston now resides at her old home in the town of Wyalusing.

Mr. Bossi's army life broke down his health and from the effects of the same he has never recovered. To add to his misfortunes he has become almost entirely deprived of his eyesight, being practically blind. In many respects he is quite a remarkable man. As stated, he came to this country when but a youth, and found himself a stranger in a strange land, ignorant of the habits and language of the people; but applying himself to study he soon mastered the language, and adapted himself to the conditions of his new surroundings. Scarcely had he been in the country a year when he volunteered to fight in defense of the flag of his adoption, and his war record was an honorable one, being that of a good and faithful soldier.

To the general public, perhaps, Mr. Bossi is best known for his skill as a musician. He organized the Wyalusing Cornet Band, of which he was long the popular leader. He is a natural musician, playing with equal facility all musical instruments. His daughter seems to have inherited much of her father's talent in this direction, while the little son, though not two years old at the time of his death, displayed a remarkably musical ear and discernment of harmony in musical sounds. Mr. Bossi's first vote was cast, in 1864, while at the front, and he is pardonably proud of the fact that he supported Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency.

Mrs. Bossi, the only living representative of one of Grant county's early families, deserves more than a mere passing mention in this article. In early life, only a short time before the inauguration of the Civil war, she married Mr. Gulick, and when the struggle began her young husband departed for the field of strife, never to return. She was thus left with two small children, one two years old, the other but two months. However, she bore her troubles with patience and resolution, as became the widow of a soldier. Like her husband, Mrs. Bossi is held in high esteem.

JOHN B. VANCE. Among the many excellent citizens and honest and prosperous residents of Sylvester township, Green county, none is more esteemed by his neighbors, or holds a higher degree of respect in every relation of life, than does our subject, who occupies a fine farm about four miles east of Monroe, Wisconsin.

The grandfather of our subject, Hugh Vance, was born in Pennsylvania June 13, 1784, and died in 1827. In 1809 he married Margaret Deitrick, who was born Oct. 20, 1790, and they reared a family of nine children: Mary, Malinda, Eliza, Samuel, Ezekiel, Keziah, Robert, George and Hugh, all of whom are deceased.

Samuel Vance, the father of our subject, was a native of Fayette county, Penn. In 1841 he married Lavina Johns, who was born Nov. 12, 1814, and died April 4, 1883. They came to Green county, Wis., about 1845, settling in Sylvester township. Mr. and Mrs. Vance reared seven children: James P., deceased; George D., who resides in Kansas; John B., our subject; Hugh J., who resides in California; Ezekiel T., a retired farmer, of Monroe; Daniel W., a retired farmer, of Monroe; and Rebecca R., the wife of William Roderick, a farmer of Jefferson. Samuel Vance died Oct. 11, 1898. He was a well-known citizen, and one of the first settlers in the township, where throughout life he followed agriculture. He was a consistent member of the Democratic party, and religiously one of the supporters of the First Baptist Church of Juda, Wisconsin.

John B. Vance, the subject proper of this sketch, was born Nov. 26, 1846, and grew to manhood on the farm, receiving his education in the district schools. As an agriculturist he has worked industriously all his life, and although he began as a poor boy his success has been as gratifying as that of many others who also began on a farm and later entered other professions. Mr. Vance is now the owner of one of the fine farms of Green county, comprising 120 acres of well-improved land, with excellent buildings and fences, and a comfortable and substantial dwelling. All the buildings are new, both house and barn having been destroyed by fire and rebuilt since 1894.

The marriage of our subject was celebrated on Nov. 26, 1871, to Mary E. West, who was born April 24, 1852, the daughter of George W. West, a retired farmer of Brodhead, Wis., and eleven children have been born of this union: Allie R., born in 1873, is now Mrs. W. J. Harper; Jessie M., born in 1874, is the wife of Patrick H. Ward; Nettie L., born in 1875, is the wife of James L. Stevenson; George N. was born in 1876; Clara Zoe, in 1880; Samuel J., in 1882; Susan Zell, in 1884; Kate W., in 1886; John G., in 1891; James B., in 1893 (died in 1894); and Mary G., in 1897. Both father and mother are still spared to this happy family.

In politics Mr. Vance has inherited his Democratic belief, all his family having been adherents of that party in the past. Although he does not belong to any particular religious denomination, our subject has always given his influence in the interests of morality, and lives up to the doctrine that honesty and fair dealing are necessary requisites in a man, whether he is bound by church discipline or not. He has reared a large family, and has been blessed with prosperity, and he possesses the esteem not only of his relatives, but of the whole neighborhood in which he has founded his home.

JOHN WARRICK, a well-to-do farmer in the town of Paris, Grant county, was born in his present home March 8, 1857, and is a son of Joseph and Annie (Esterbrook) Warrick, natives of Cornwall, England. They came to Pennsylvania in 1854, where he worked a year in the coal mines, then coming West to work in the mines at Jamestown, Grant county. In 1856 he purchased a large tract of farm land, one mile south of Dickeyville, and erected good buildings thereon, and has converted the land into a fine farm. The buildings which he put up almost half a century ago are still in a good state of preservation. The worthy wife, who shared with him the hardships and trials of a pioneer life, died in 1882, and he passed away in 1897. Both belonged to the Methodist Church, and were liberal supporters of its work. Mr. Warrick was in early life a strong opponent of human slavery, and always acted with the Republican party. To this marriage only one son was born, John, whose name introduces this article.

John Warrick had his early education in the home schools, and finished his school days in the State Normal at Platteville. Always remaining at home with his parents, the care and management of affairs naturally fell into his hands as his father grew old and feeble. In March, 1883, he married Miss Elizabeth Tracy, a daughter of William and Ellen (Carr) Tracy, natives of Ireland, and settlers of Grant county at an early day. William Tracy crossed the plains and spent some time in the California gold fields, but came back and died in 1869, his wife following him in the same year. Mrs. Warrick is one of twelve children, and she was born at Council Hill, Lafayette county, in 1856.

After their marriage John Warrick and his wife settled on the old homestead, where they have lived to the present time, becoming prosperous and universally respected. Their family consists of five children: Annie, the oldest, was born in 1884, and is now a student at the State Normal at Platteville; William J., born in 1886; Lillie, born in 1887; Cora, born in 1891; and Bessie, born in 1897. Mr. Warrick has followed his father's footsteps in politics, and has always been identified with the Republican party. For fourteen years he has been school treasurer. Mr. Warrick is one of the leading farmers of this section of the county, and is respected alike for his industrious habits and upright character.

CHARLES C. DICKINSON, sheriff of Grant county, and an extensive stockman, cheese maker and farmer of the town of Lima, that county, was born at his present home Aug. 29, 1861, a son of Ensign P. and Fannie S. (Whitcher) Dickinson, old and much respected pioneers of the county.

The father of our subject was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in May, 1819, son of Samuel and Elizabeth Dickinson, who moved from Massachusetts to Ohio, where they found a home in the wilderness at a very early day, and reared their children. Ensign P. Dickinson grew up in Ohio, where he was married. Fannie Whitcher, his wife, was born Jan. 23, 1823, daughter of John and Anna (Cuiver) Whitcher, who migrated from Ohio to Wisconsin as early as 1844, and settled in the town of Lima, where they lived until their death. Mr. Dickinson and his wife came to the town of Lima, Grant county, as early as 1843, made their first location on the property in the town of Platteville which A. Rewey now owns, and there put up a hewed log house on ground purchased from the government, making it their home for about three years. At the end of this period Mr. Dickinson bought eighty acres of good land in the town of Lima, and increased his real estate holdings from time to time until he owned nearly 300 acres of choice land. In politics he was a Republican, and for eighteen years served as treasurer of the town of Lima, also serving the people very efficiently as a member of the county board. In 1883 he was elected a member of the General Assembly, and served with distinction. During 1881 he made a journey to California, and returned with freshened devotion to his home in Wisconsin. He was a farmer, and by general consent a representative of the best farming interests of his generation. Mr. Dickinson was more or less intimately identified with the Methodist Church. He died Oct. 10, 1897, and his aged widow still survives, at the age of seventy-eight years. Eight children are living out of the family of eleven born to them: (1) Elizabeth, born in Ohio in October, 1842, married Eli McKee, who died March 10, 1901, of heart failure. Mrs. McKee lives in California with her family of seven children, Ida, John, Frank, Charles, Lilla, Flora and Anna. (2) John, born in September, 1844, was a soldier of the 43d Wis. V. I., in the Civil war. He married Clara Huling, of Grant county, and they have three children, Ensign, Fannie and Inez. He now resides at Lincoln, Neb., where he has become very prominent, and has been sent to the State Legislature. (3) Lorain, born in Grant county in September, 1846, is now the wife of Wright Cowell, of Stockton, Cal., who is an extensive ranchman. They have two children, Ensign and Francis. (4) Samuel, born in August, 1848, married Miss Luna Barstow, of Grant county, and lives in Stockton, Cal.; they have had three children, Frances (now married to J. Jones, of that State), Rosa, and Bert (who was accidentally shot while on an outing, in 1897). (5) Phoebe, born in June, 1850, is the wife of Warren Johnson, of Lima, Grant county. (6) William, born in 1852, is a miner in Arizona. (7) Everett C., born Nov. 18, 1854, was married May 14, 1882, to Miss Nellie L. Yapple, of Ripon, Cal., and they have had two sons—Clarence, born March 30, 1883, and Perry Yapple, Aug. 14, 1889. E. C. Dickinson graduated from the State Normal at Platteville. In 1878 he went to California, where he still resides. He followed school teaching there for some years, and is now a member of the firm of Wright & Dickinson, wholesale and retail dealers in grain and hay, warehousemen, and manufacturers of steamboats. At present they have a steam barge of 600 tons burden running on the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers and San Francisco bay. At one time Mr. Dickinson had three general stores and three large warehouses in the State, located, respectively, at Whitton, LeGrand and Dickinson. The latter place was named in his honor. (8) Ida died in infancy, in Wisconsin. (9) Ina, born in October, 1859, married Allie Grindell, of Platteville, now living in California, and died in 1884, leaving one daughter, Ina. (10) Charles C. is our subject.

C. C. Sickman

Charles C. Dickinson was reared to manhood on the home farm, and had the benefit of the excellent schools to be found in Grant county, including attendance at the State Normal, at Platteville. For several years previous to his marriage he was manager of his father's farm and business. In 1881 he married Miss Eva Stevens, of the town of Harrison, daughter of Leonard and Martha Stevens, old pioneers of Grant county, originally from Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson settled on the old homestead, which had come into his possession some years previously. In 1897 Mr. Dickinson erected a large modern dwelling, finished in hard wood, with every modern improvement, and this is counted one of the choice homes in the county. He has also erected on his farm a large cheese factory, and is doing a very extensive business in that line. To the old farm he has added 120 acres adjoining, and it is now one of the fine places in the town.

To Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson have been born seven children: Mabel, in May, 1882; Walter C., in December, 1883; Guy E., in October, 1885; Flora P., in November, 1887; Elizabeth, in August, 1889; Edward P., in April, 1894; and Susie W., in October, 1897.

Mr. Dickinson is a member of the Republican party, has been a member of the town board for several years, and on Nov. 6, 1900, was honored with election to the office of sheriff of Grant county, receiving a majority of 2,302, the largest ever given any candidate for the office in Grant county. Mr. Dickinson is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a leading spirit in the Knights of the Maccabees. The Dickinson family has long been held in high esteem, and our subject is one of the leading men of his town.

JACOB D. SCHINDLER. Canton Glarus, Switzerland, has contributed a number of the most highly respected citizens of Green county, prominent among whom is Jacob D. Schindler, now a retired merchant living at No. 221 West George street, Monroe. He was born April 4, 1852, son of Andreas Schindler, who was born in Schwandi, Canton Glarus, Switzerland, Feb. 14, 1821.

Andreas Schindler was a carpenter in Switzerland, where his father, Andreas Schindler, and his mother, Anna Zimmerman, both lived and died, the former at the age of seventy years, and the latter when she was aged sixty-nine years. Andreas Schindler, father of Jacob D., came to America with his family in February, 1855, and passed the first year in Monroe, Wis., and then removed to New Glarus, a settlement largely composed of people from his native canton, where he remained for eleven years, when he again located in Monroe, where his death occurred in the spring of 1897, at the age of seventy-six years. He married Katharina Knobel Oct. 3, 1844, who was born March 24, 1824, daughter of Adam and Anna (Schiesser) Knobel. Adam Knobel was an employe in a cloth factory in Switzerland, and lived until he had attained the age of seventy-three; his wife entered into rest when she was aged forty-seven years. Twelve children, of whom seven are yet living, were born to Andreas Schindler and wife: Anna, widow of Paschal Monti, of Denver, Colo.; Andrew, of Monroe; Katharina, wife of A. T. Thayer, of Denver, Colo.; Emma, of Monroe; Rose, of Monroe; Jacob D., our subject; and Fridolin, also of Monroe. Mrs. Katharina Schindler died April 23, 1900. Both she and her husband originally belonged to the Swiss Reformed Church, but later united with the German Evangelical. Mr. Schindler had been a soldier in the Sonderbund war in Switzerland in 1847, and for nine months he was a member of the 46th Wis. V. I. during the Civil war.

Brought to this country when but three years of age, Mr. Jacob D. Schindler has passed the greater part of his life in Green county, acquiring his education in the public schools. In his youth he learned the blacksmith's trade, working at it some three years, and now is a general mechanic. In 1879 he formed a partnership with Baltzer Heitz, and engaged in the grocery business in Monroe. A few months later Mr. Heitz sold his interest in the establishment to Mr. Schindler's brother Andrew, the firm then becoming known as Schindler Brothers, which continued with uninterrupted success for several years, when Andrew sold his interest to his brother, shortly after repurchasing it, and in 1888 Mr. Jacob D. Schindler sold out to Andrew, who then assumed entire charge of the store. In 1883 our subject purchased a beautiful home which he still occupies, and which originally had eight acres of ground. This ground, with the exception of some five or six lots, has since been sold. When Mr. Schindler retired from business it was to leave behind him an untarnished reputation for business integrity. His genial manners won him many personal friends who have heartily rejoiced with him in his prosperity.

On Oct. 26, 1879, Mr. Schindler was united in marriage with Miss Rosina Burgi, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Luchsinger) Burgi, and to brighten their home have come seven children: Frank S., a photographer at Monroe; Arthur J., a dental student in Chicago; Herman L.; Edna R.; Charles A.; Alice E.; and Olive E. Mrs. Schindler is an active worker in the Evangelical Church. Socially Mr. Schindler is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and politically is a strong Republican, although in no sense can he be called a politician.

Jacob Burgi, father of Mrs. Schindler, was born in Switzerland Jan. 23, 1837, and was a farmer by occupation. He came to America when twelve years of age, and located in Green county, Wis., about 1851, where he purchased land in New Glarus township. About 1893 he removed to Monroe, where he lived retired until his death in 1895. On July 1, 1858, he married Barbara Luchsinger, who bore him eleven children, one of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Burgi was born in Philadelphia Jan. 16, 1842, a daughter of John Luchsinger, and a sister of John Luchsinger, now a prominent attorney at Monroe, Wisconsin.

Jacob Burgi was a son of Jacob Burgi, Sr., who was a Swiss soldier in the French service, and participated in the wars of the restoration after Napoleon's downfall, later coming to this country. He died in Washington township, Green county, aged eighty-one years.

GEORGE W. BARROWS, of Cassville, Grant county, is carrying on an extensive business as a manufacturer of brick, and, being a man of superior executive ability and sound judgment, he occupies a good position in the commercial world.

A native of Grant county, Mr. Barrows was born in Cassville in 1858, a son of Joseph and Adelle (Lovely) Barrows, who were born in Canada, and came to Wisconsin in 1857, in company with the grandfather, John Barrows. After working for a time in the village of Cassville Joseph Barrows engaged in farming in Cassville township for some years, and also in the manufacture of brick. Returning to Cassville in 1867, he established a yard at that place, which he successfully conducted up to the time of his death, dying at his post of duty in the yard, May 24, 1899. In religious belief he was first a Baptist, but later in life united with the Methodist Church, of which he remained an active and consistent member. Politically he was a staunch supporter of the Republican party. His widow still survives, and continues to reside in Cassville. In their family were six children, two sons and four daughters. The latter, Mrs. Jane Totman, Mrs. Lilly Groom, Mrs. Olive Bryant and Mrs. Alice Wright, are all living in Storm Lake, Iowa; while William is engaged in the manufacture of brick at Lancaster, Wis.; and George W. follows the same business at Cassville.

George W. Barrows was reared and educated at Cassville, and at the age of eighteen years went West, making Denver, Colo., his headquarters while he traveled all through the Western country. In 1888 he returned to Cassville, where he has since engaged in the manufacture of brick, having charge of the yard established by his father in 1867. He is also a member of the firm of Barrows, Knapp & Millard, who are extensively engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of building brick at Oelwein, Iowa. He is thoroughly familiar with every department of the business, and in his operations is meeting with well-deserved success.

At Cassville, in 1889, Mr. Barrows was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Lawrence, a native of that place, and a daughter of Thomas and Deborah (Smith) Lawrence. Her father was born in Ireland, and was married in New York, where he made his home for a time, but in the early 'fifties came to Grant county, Wis., and took up his residence in Cassville. During the war he entered the Union army, and died in the service. His widow is still a resident of Cassville.

Faternally Mr. Barrows is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and as one of the popular and influential citizens of Cassville he has been called upon to serve as a member of the town council.

FREDERICK W. BYERS, M. D., physician and surgeon, whose home and office are in Monroe, Green county, has a reputation extending throughout the Northwest for both professional and personal qualities. He is an eminent physician, a skillful surgeon, and a genial and accomplished gentleman, with a legion of friends. His career has been in every way honorable and successful, and its record is a pleasing task for the historian's pen.

Dr. Byers was born in Shippensville, Penn., Feb. 10, 1837, a son of Jacob and Mary (Shakeley) Byers, natives of Maryland and Pennsylvania. They were the parents of six sons and four daughters, and six of their children are now living: Samuel W., of Nashua, Iowa; Elizabeth, wife of Daniel Kepple, of Ionia, Iowa; Jacob L., of Queenstown, Penn.;

Dr. Frederick W.; Maria, wife of Jacob W. Kahl, of Shippensville, Penn.; and Albert L., who lives on the old home farm at Venus, Venango Co., Pennsylvania.

Jacob Byers began life as an apprentice and mechanic, but after some years he turned to keeping tavern, became a farmer in middle life, and spent many years on a farm near Venus, in Venango county, where he died in 1876, at the age of seventy-eight. His widow survived him three years, and died at the age of sixty-seven. They were members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and he was a very active worker in that denomination. He was a Democrat up to near the breaking out of the Civil war, when he joined the Republican party, as did his sons. His father, Frederick Byers, was killed in 1800 while engaged in felling trees. He was of Irish descent, and two of his ancestors participated in the siege of Londonderry. There were four brothers of this name who came to America, settling in Virginia and Maryland, and from them the family under consideration has sprung. Henry Shakeley, the maternal grandfather of Dr. Byers, was of German descent, and a native of Pennsylvania. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and survived the dangers of the battlefield to be killed long afterward by accident at a house raising. He left a large family. Dr. Byers' maternal great-grandmother, who was in her maidenhood a Miss Snyder, was scalped by the Indians, when a girl, and left for dead. She recovered, and afterward married Nikolas Allimonge, who spoke both French and German, and is supposed to have come from Alsace or Lorraine.

Frederick W. Byers was reared to manhood on his father's farm in Pennsylvania, and spent his youth in hard work and study. He attended the public schools, and Coopers-town Academy, and then taught school for seven years, partly in the East and partly in Illinois, to which State he had come in 1857, seeking the opportunities that are said to abound in a new country. The young man taught school in that State four years, and in the meantime kept up his medical studies, with a view to adopting the healing art as a life calling. Early in 1862 he obtained appointment as nurse and hospital assistant in Camp Douglas, Chicago, and in February, 1863, was graduated from Rush Medical College. The young physician was appointed assistant surgeon of the 96th Illinois Infantry, and served with much credit throughout the war. His career was a commendable one, and he was promoted to chief surgeon of the artillery brigade of the 4th Army Corps, and later, while at Atlanta, was detailed to the field hospital of the corps. He was on continual duty with that hospital in the field until mustered out at Chicago July 7, 1865.

With a professional reputation thoroughly established, and an experience in the common ills and pains of mankind, as well as a fine knowledge of operative surgery, Dr. Byers established himself at Lena, Ill., and for twelve years was engaged in professional work in that part of the West. In 1877 he came to Monroe, and at once entered upon a lucrative practice. Dr. Byers received the appointment of United States examining surgeon for pensions in 1880, and is still serving in that position.

Frederick W. Byers and Miss Olive DeHaven were united in marriage July 5, 1865. The DeHavens were Huguenots driven from France. They went to Holland, but before the American Revolution, emigrated to Pennsylvania. Mrs. Byers is a daughter of Alpheus and Eliza (Hawley) DeHaven, and is of an unassuming and womanly character, devoted to home and church. To Dr. and Mrs. Byers have been born ten children: Morna, Winifred, Stanley, Harry, Mary, Joe Rodney, Grace, Amy, Fred and Ben B. Morna lives with her parents. Winifred married E. C. Cornelius, and died Sept. 20, 1899, leaving one child, Alice, now (1901) eleven years old. Stanley died Nov. 5, 1872, when three years of age. Harry lives in San Francisco, Cal., where he is in the service of a telephone company; he is married and has one daughter named Olive. Mary, Amy and Fred died in infancy. Joe Rodney was teller in a bank at Monroe six years, and now holds a similar position in a bank at Minneapolis. Grace is a teacher in the Monroe schools. Ben B. is a pharmacist at Janesville, Wis. Joe Rodney and Ben B. both enlisted in the Spanish-American war in 1898, the former being a first sergeant and the latter a bugler in the 1st Wisconsin Infantry. The family home at Monroe is quite a social center.

Dr. Byers had three brothers, Samuel W., Jacob L., and Joseph K., who were soldiers in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, and served until its close. Joseph K. entered the service as a lieutenant in the volunteer service, was transferred to the regular army, and retired a major. He lost an arm at Fredericksburg, and was a prisoner of war five months in Libby prison. He is buried in the National Cemetery at St. Louis.

Mrs. Byers is a member of the Episcopal Church, while her husband is of the Lutheran persuasion. He is well versed in Masonic lore, and his name appears on the membership rolls of Lena Lodge, No. 174, A. F. & A. M.; Lena Chapter, No. 105, R. A. M.; Freeport Commandery, No. 7, K. T.; and the Masonic Veteran Association of Illinois. This last body meets once a year, and he is its assistant chief. Gen. Byers has been an active worker in the Grand Army of the Republic since its organization and is past post commander and past medical director of the Department of Wisconsin. He is a member of the Wisconsin Commandery of the Loyal Legion, has been vice-commander, and is also a member of the commandery-in-chief of the United States.

The Doctor has received political honors of no slight importance from his fellow citizens. In 1885 and 1886 he represented his district in the State Legislature, was chairman of and rendered important service on the military committee, introducing and securing the passage of the bill that effected the reorganization of the National Guard of Wisconsin. He was surgeon in the National Guard of the State from 1882 to 1895, with the rank of major. In 1895 he was made surgeon general of the State of Wisconsin with the grade of brigadier general, which position he held until Jan. 7, 1899, when he was retired from active service with that rank. General Byers assisted in the organization and equipment of Wisconsin's Spanish-American volunteers, and officially inspected the camps and hospitals at Chickamauga, Jacksonville, Fla., and Charleston, S. C. He is a Republican.

Dr. Byers belongs to the Wisconsin State Medical Association, and the Southern Wisconsin Medical Association, and is an honorary member of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States. In addition to his course at Rush Medical, he attended lectures in the Medical Department of the University of Nashville; also the Missouri Medical College, St. Louis; completed the Sophomore year in Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio; and all his life has been a close student, a thorough reader and a hard worker.

Our subject's commander, Gen. John C. Smith, once wrote of Dr. Byers, and with his words this biographical sketch concludes :

So it is of the surgeon, to whom the writer once owed his life, who, in disobedience of his commander's orders, remained on the battlefield, up in what our comrades of the Spanish-American war would call the firing line, and in that dread night assault on Kenesaw Mountain, was beside his commander when he fell, stricken by a bullet, assisted him from the field, and carefully aided in dressing his wounds. There are three who will not forget that wild night in Georgia, Corporal Barnum, Surgeon Fred. W. Byers, and their commander. Brother and Sir Knight Dr. Byers, now surgeon general of the State of Wisconsin, is also a great sufferer from exposure and hardship endured in that famed Atlanta campaign and other marches and battles of the war of 1861-65.

Lying upon a rudely constructed table, with surgeons probing my wounds to extract the bits of flannel shirt, vest, uniform and over-coat, which had been driven by the bullet into the wound, I well remember one of the surgeons forcing a finger from opposite directions into my wound to find it clean, saying to Dr. Byers, "Reach higher thy hand, and put thy finger into the wound in his side," but the Doctor, who had been on the firing line, needed no such proof, and promptly answered, "I was with my colonel when he received the shot, and assisted him here that you may dress his wound."

Surgeon General and Sir Knight Fred. W. Byers was a member of my military family all through that long and dreadful struggle for our National existence; he is still of my family, and loved by every member of it as he is by myself.

JOSEPH GUNDRY, whose death occurred at Mineral Point July 17, 1899, was one of the most successful business men of that city, and was recognized by his associates as one of the most worthy and progressive citizens of Iowa county. During his residence of more than a half century there he advanced to a position of independence and influence in the community, and it was no fault of his if the material, moral and intellectual development of that community failed to keep pace with his individual progress, or if any of his fellow citizens did not attain the ideals which he sought to encourage by precept and example.

Mr. Gundry was born at Porkellis, parish of Wendron, Cornwall, England, May 11, 1822, a son of Richard and Jane (Murton) Gundry. The original home of his ancestors was in the south of Ireland, where, being Protestants, members of the family suffered more or less persecution in the time of Oliver Cromwell, and emigrating to Cornwall were numbered among the sturdy yeomen of the parish of Wendron for a number of generations. Richard Gundry passed his life there in peace and comfort. Having received such intellectual training as was afforded by the parish school, Joseph Gundry came to the United States in 1845. Following the example of many of his countrymen, he located at Mineral Point, Wis., where he purchased land and set about the improvement of his condition with a will and determination, while, by the exercise of good judgment and integrity, he established a reputation which secured the confidence and good will of those with whom he came in contact. For the next few years he gave most of his attention to lead mining, but in 1849 he engaged in mercantile business. Next year was virtually formed the firm of Gundry & Gray, which has ever since been one of the leading business houses of Mineral Point, being now entirely in the hands of the second generation of both branches of the partnership. Mr. Gundry retained an interest in the establishment until his death, though, on account of his health, he retired from active participation in the business in 1866. He also became interested in other important enterprises, among which may be mentioned a zinc smelting plant at La Salle, Ill., the ore being shipped from Mineral Point to that place on account of the advantages in the way of cheap fuel, etc., to be obtained there. He was also a stockholder in the First National Bank of Mineral Point, and a member of its board of directors for some years. He continued to be interested to some extent in agriculture and mining, and was always ready to assist in promoting any undertaking calculated to serve the best interests of the town. The large stone mansion which he built, upon an eminence overlooking the town, and the double stone store erected by the firm of Gundry & Gray in 1869, are still among the most conspicuous buildings in the city. A Republican in sentiment, Mr. Gundry never sought official position, but served his constituents well when chosen, in the capacities of alderman and member of the county board of supervisors.

In 1847 Mr. Gundry made a trip to his native land, where he was married, and returned the next year to the home of his adoption. The now venerable lady who became the partner of his joys and sorrows, and who survives him, was Miss Sarah Perry, daughter of William and Sarah Botterell (Reed) Perry, and was born in Carthew, parish of Wendron, her ancestors having also been among the Protestant emigrants from Ireland who settled in Cornwall during the wars of Cromwell. Of the ten children born to Joseph and Sarah Gundry, seven reached mature years, as follows: Joseph H., who died at Mineral Point in 1893; Richard, who died at El Reno, Okla., in 1900; William P., who succeeds his father in business; Jane, deceased wife of G. M. Lambertson, of Lincoln, Neb.; Mary R., of Mineral Point; John M., a banker of Cleveland, Ohio; and Margery, Mrs. H. W. King, of the same city.

WILLIAM PERRY GUNDRY, of the present firm of Gundry & Gray, and a well-known citizen of Mineral Point, was born in that place, receiving his early education in its public schools. Thence he went to the University of Wisconsin, but, his health failing, he abandoned the course in the Senior year, and went abroad, spending one winter in a French school in Paris. Having recuperated his health, he returned to the United States, and in 1876 became bookkeeper for the La Salle Zinc Co., of La Salle, Ill., in which concern his father was interested. In 1879 he went abroad and accepted a similar position with the London branch of the famous stationery house of Cameron, Amberg & Co., of Chicago, the junior member of which firm had once been a clerk in his father's store at Mineral Point. Since 1893 he has been a member of the firm founded by his father more than fifty years ago, and which is now the oldest customer of the wholesale house of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, and one of the oldest mercantile houses in the State of Wisconsin. Socially Mr. Gundry is identified with the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias, and is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity at Madison. He is a liberal Republican, though in no sense a politician, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of the people among whom most of his life has been spent.

PETER LESER, of Fennimore, Grant county, is one of the early settlers of this region, and a veteran soldier, who fought bravely to uphold the Union, when it had need of just such men as he.

Peter Leser is a native of Saxony, Germany, where he was born Feb. 18, 1835, a son of William Leser. In 1843, William Leser, his wife and five children, came to the United States, and settled in Albany, N. Y., where the mother died shortly after. William Leser died at the home of his son, Peter Leser, in Grant county, in March, 1887. Of the three sons and two daughters who came with the parents to America, four are living, in 1901: Adolph, a resident of Upper Sandusky, Ohio; Rachel, a resident of Albany, N. Y.; Peter; Regine, also in Albany. The other son, Albert, went to California, in 1860, and, as he has not been heard from for a good many years, his relatives are convinced that he is no longer living.

In 1855 Peter Leser came to Grant county, where he engaged in farming. On May 10, 1860, in company with Mike Conkel, and others, Mr. Leser started for Denver "across the Plains"—a most dangerous journey at that time, owing to the state of war existing between the Sioux and Cheyenne Indians, and the wild animals that then infested the unsettled country. The Indians were so afraid of one another that both tribes had forsaken their respective hunting grounds. Antelope and buffalo were frequently seen, and Mr. Leser was fortunate in killing several of the latter. He met Beckwith, the Crow Indian and old mountaineer, who raised the noted Kit Carson, and who, though over seventy years of age, was very influential with the Indians. Mr. Leser arrived in Denver about July 4, and then went about 120 miles back into the mountains. Three of the party engaged in digging a trench to drain a branch of the Platte river, for the purpose of finding gold in the old river bed. They found an abundance in the quartz, but as there were no crushers that was valueless to them. They were within the snow line, and water froze every night during July and August, but the days were quite warm. They left that region the latter part of August, at which time there was a four-inch snow on the ground. In Denver Mr. Leser hired out at $1.25 per day to make hay, and in September, in company with Bert Marshal, started home, with a pair of cows and a span of mules. They forded the Platte near Fort Kearney, and arrived home on election day—the day Abraham Lincoln was elected. Neither voted, as they had "paired off."

When the war broke out Mr. Leser decided to defend the Union at any cost, and enrolled, Aug. 11, 1862, in Company C, 25th Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged June 7, 1865, after serving two years, nine months and twenty-six days. The company was organized at Lancaster under Capt. Farquharson; the regiment rendezvoused at Camp Solomon, La Crosse, and was mustered into the United States service Sept. 14, 1862. On Oct. 19, 1862, the regiment left for St. Paul, to assist in quelling the noted Indian uprising of that year, after which the regiment was divided, part being sent to New Ulm and the remainder to Sauk Center. The insurrection was about subdued when they arrived, and in the latter part of November the regiment returned to La Crosse, and thence to Camp Randall. On Feb. 17, 1863, the regiment left for the South, reporting first at Cairo, and proceeded to Columbus, Ky. Here it was attached to Gen. Hulbert's command, and engaged in picket duty. In May, 1863, the 25th Wisconsin moved down the Mississippi to Young's Point, and thence to Sattara, on the Yazoo river. Their next stopping place was Snyder's Bluff, where they formed part of the force assailing Vicksburg. During this time the ranks were thinned by sickness as well as by the enemies' bullets. On July 26th the regiment left Snyder's Bluff, moved up the Mississippi to Helena where it was detached from the brigade and assigned to provost guard duty. The rapid marching, climate and excessive heat told upon the men and at one time scarcely any of them were fit for duty, but the regiment remained at Helena until Feb., 1864, when it moved down to Vicksburg, and joined Gen. Sherman's Meridian expedition, in which it did good service. From this time on, until May, 1864, the regiment did good service in Tennessee and Alabama, and at that date proceeded to Chattanooga to join the forces under Gen. Sherman, where, as part of the 16th Army Corps, they formed a part of the Army of the Tennessee, under Gen. McPherson. They took part in both advances on Resaca, and on the 14th joined the 17th Corps for an attack on the enemy's works on the left, and on that day distinguished themselves by charging across an open plain to relieve the 30th Iowa, which had run out of ammunition, and holding the crest of the hill in the face of three charges, in which the enemy sustained heavy losses. All the way to Atlanta the regiment took part in the various engagements, participating in the siege of that city, and also in the pursuit of Hood after the evacuation. Afterwards it returned to Atlanta and began to prepare for the march to the sea. All through Georgia to Savannah, the gallant 25th Wisconsin bore its part bravely; thence it moved to Beaufort, encamping there in January, 1865. The next move was through the Carolinas to Washington, where the brave soldiers of this noted regiment took part in the Grand Review, and returned to their homes, private citizens once more. Peter Leser was with his regiment during the whole term of its service, except a short period after the surrender of Vicksburg, when, being taken sick, he was sent to a hospital at Memphis, and remained about six weeks, rejoining his regiment at Helena, Ark., in time to participate in the Meridian raid; and thirty days after the siege of Atlanta, when he procured a furlough and returned home. At the expiration of this time, upon its return from the pursuit of Hood to Atlanta, Peter Leser rejoined his regiment. Here Mr. Leser was taken very sick, and had to be cared for by the surgeon as though in a hospital. Finally he was sent, in an ambulance, to Nashville, where with other convalescents he assisted in the defense in that place under Gen. Thomas, when it was attacked by Hood, and in the pursuit, after the battle. During the engagement Mr. Leser was so situated that he had a fine view of the conflict, and remembers it was a grand and thrilling sight. The regiment was then on its way to the coast, and Mr. Leser, with others, joined the command, traveling via Baltimore and Newbern, N. C. At Goldsboro Mr. Leser met his regiment, and took part in all the succeeding engagements in which it was a participant, including the Grand Review.

After his return from the army Mr. Leser resumed farming in the town of Liberty. In March, 1888, Mr. Leser with his family moved to Palo Alto Co., Iowa, where he resided five years, engaged in farming. In March, 1893, he returned to Fennimore, where he has since resided. Having acquired a competence, Mr. Leser retired, feeling he had worked hard long enough.

Peter Leser was married, in 1859, to Miss Sarah Short, a native of Missouri, who died May 1, 1884. Later Mr. Leser married Mrs. Hulda A. Doolittle, whose first husband was also a soldier in the war of the Rebellion. Four children were born of the first marriage: Carrie, Mary, Rena (who died in February, 1887), and Adolph. Fennimore has no better citizen than Mr. Leser, and he is prominent in the G. A. R., being a charter member of Sam Monteith Post, No. 173. In political opinions he is a Republican, and takes an interest in the various campaigns. Genial, kind-hearted, beloved at home, and with many friends throughout the county, Mr. Leser is now enjoying the results of his years of labor, and taking comfort in his surroundings.

WILLIAM LANYON represents a family which has been prominent in Mineral Point, Iowa county, for over sixty years. He was born in Henver, Parish of St. Allen, England, in 1833, son of William, Sr., and Mary Ann (Bennett) Lanyon.

His grandparents, John and Peggy Lanyon, were prominent members of St. Allen's Church, where a beautiful window has been placed to their memory. Other members of the Lanyon family were well known in England, five generations having resided in the one parish. Henry Lanyon, brother of John, won no little renown as an officer in the British Navy under Lord Nelson, by whom his skill and gallantry were frequently recognized. Another member of the family, Henry Searle Lanyon, of the Cornish Yeomanry Cavalry, was distinguished for athletic feats.

William Lanyon came to Wisconsin with his parents about 1837, and made his home in Mineral Point, where the father, William, Sr., followed blacksmithing many years, and died Feb. 7, 1898, aged eighty-six years. He was a thorough business man, and taught his son habits of industry and economy, and early instructed him in the blacksmith's trade, which he successfully carried on for a number of years, after which he opened a tinshop, later dealing in merchandise and grain. Since 1887 Mr. Lanyon has been interested in a large zinc works at Pittsburg and Iola, Kansas, where he spends much time, although he retains his residence at Mineral Point.

On Aug. 2, 1855, Mr. Lanyon was united in marriage with Miss Maria Thomas, daughter of Samuel Thomas, Esq., and born in Mineral Point, Oct. 20, 1836. Five children have brightened their home—William, of Pittsburg, Kans.; Ella, now Mrs. Vaughan, of Kansas City, Mo.; Colonel, of Iola, Kans.; Myrtle, now Mrs. Meserole, of Mineral Point; and Daisy, Mrs. Posey, of Chicago. The family are active in the work of the Methodist Church, and Mr. Lanyon is affiliated with the Masonic Order and the Eastern Star. The success Mr. Lanyon has attained has been largely the result of his own sagacity and intelligence, and he has conducted his business affairs both wisely and honorably.

THOMAS WILEY was one of the well-known pioneers of Lafayette county, where he arrived in April, 1827. His birth occurred in Maury county, Tenn., Feb. 3, 1808, and some time afterward the family removed to the State of Missouri, where the parents died, leaving four sons and two daughters. Mr. Wiley came to Wisconsin from Missouri, and made his first stop at Gratiot's Grove, soon after settling on land in Monticello township which he secured from the government, and upon which his sons now live. For a considerable length of time he was engaged in mining, being among the first to follow that occupation in the newly opened lead mines of southwestern Wisconsin. In 1850 soon after the discovery of gold in California, Mr. Wiley went overland to the Pacific coast, where he worked for some time in the gold mines, but eventually returned to his possessions in Wisconsin. He took an active part in the events of those early days, being a soldier in the Black Hawk war in 1832, and for his services received a pension during the latter part of his life. One of the several forts erected for the protection of the settlers against the Indians was located on his land, near the site of the present residence. Honest and industrious, he accumulated an estate of about 900 acres of the most valuable land in the township.

On May 28, 1839, Mr. Wiley married Miss Esther J. Houghton, who was born in Sunbury, Union Co., Penn., Oct. 31, 1820, and came to Wisconsin with a married sister, Mrs. Carpenter Miller, in June, 1827. After their marriage they settled on the land obtained by Mr. Wiley from the government in 1828, and there they passed away. Mr. Wiley's death occurred June 9, 1895, and Mrs. Wiley's Feb. 6, 1900. This aged couple now rest side by side on the home farm near the family residence, on land selected by Mr. Wiley as a last resting place for himself and wife when their long earthly pilgrimage was over. Four sons survive them, John S., Albert, Benjamin and Wesley. One son, Silas, offered his life a willing sacrifice to his country in the war of the Rebellion, and was killed at the battle of Shiloh in 1862. The sons occupy the old homestead where they were born, and are numbered among the prominent and wealthy citizens of the county.

MRS. ESIER H. WILEY

THOMAS WILEY

GEORGE FARWELL. Prominent among the veteran soldiers of the Civil war residing in Ridgeway, Iowa county, is George Farwell, a worthy representative of one of the early families of this part of the county. Mr. Farwell was born in Stephenson county, Ill., Oct. 3, 1838, a son of Russell and Patience (Vanvalkenburg) Farwell, both of whom were natives of the State of New York.

The genealogy of the Farwell family shows that two Farwell brothers came to America from England, previous to the Revolutionary war, one of whom, John Farwell, was the head of the branch in America to which George Farwell, of this biography, belongs. Russell Farwell grew to manhood in his native State, and there married, but in 1836 or 1837 emigrated to Stephenson county, Ill., and there opened up a new farm. In 1842 he removed to Shullsburg, Lafayette county, this State, where he engaged in mining, later removing to Darlington, and continuing there until the fall of 1851, when he removed to Blue Mounds, Wis. In this new home he carried on farming and also did some mining, until 1859, when he located on a farm in Ridgeway, Iowa county, and here passed the remainder of his life. The death of Russell Farwell occurred in April, 1895, at the age of eighty-three, and his wife passed away in 1890. They were the parents of three sons and two daughters, all of whom are still surviving, these being: Mrs. Minerva Ward, of Black Garth, Wis.; George; Frank, a resident of Dodgeville, who served in the 42d Wis. V. I. during the Civil war; Frederick, a resident of the town of Ridgeway; Ella, the widow of Daniel Jarvis, of Madison, Wisconsin.

George Farwell, the immediate subject of this sketch, resided under the parental roof until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he determined to enter the army, enlisting on Aug. 15, 1861, in Company G, 11th Wis. V. I., which rendezvoused at Madison, going thence to Missouri. The following winter was spent by this regiment in guarding the railroad between St. Louis and Pilot Knob, but in the spring of 1862 it marched South, through Missouri and Arkansas. The summer of 1862 was spent at Helena, Ark., and in the following September it moved up the river to the State of Missouri, and engaged in the campaign against the Confederate General Price. In the opening of the spring of 1863 the regiment returned to Sainte Genevieve, Mo., where it joined the army under Gen. Grant, in the campaign against Vicksburg, and took part in the battle of Port Gibson and other important events immediately preceding the siege of Vicksburg, including Raymond, Champion Hills and Black River Bridge. With his regiment Mr. Farwell took part in the famous charge on the Confederate works at Vicksburg, May 22, 1863, where he was severely wounded by a gunshot, which resulted in his confinement in the Union Hospital, at Memphis, Tenn., for a period of three months, when he rejoined his regiment, then at Brazier City, La., west of New Orleans, marching thence to Opelousas, a distance of 200 miles, to near the Texas line. Upon the return of the regiment to New Orleans it joined the army under Gen. Banks and crossed the Gulf to Texas. In the spring of 1864 Mr. Farwell re-enlisted, and upon his return to New Orleans he was given a furlough of thirty days, by virtue of his re-enlistment. The second rendezvous was at Milwaukee, in the last of April, and from there Mr. Farwell went with the regiment to Memphis, where it became a part of an expedition to Central Tennessee, thence to New Orleans, and a second time to Brazier City, in which locality the regiment was put on garrison duty for ten months. In March, 1865, the regiment returned to New Orleans, and joining Gen. Canby, took part in the Mobile expedition, and the last battle of the regiment was in April, 1865, in which Company G lost a number of men. The command marched then to Montgomery, Ala., where it remained until August, when it went to Mobile, and here was placed on police duty until in September of the same year, when it was mustered out. and soon after departed for Madison, where it was duly discharged, on Sept. 29, 1865, and these brave and loyal soldiers dispersed to the homes they had so valiantly fought to preserve.

As soon as Mr. Farwell could again accustom himself to the ways of peace, he entered upon farming, and continued in agricultural pursuits for seven years, and then opened up a mercantile business, in which he was engaged for the succeeding fourteen years, but again returned to a farming life for a time. This he found laborious, and again became interested in merchandising, but four years later retired from active duties, the wound in his arm, received in his country's defense, causing him much inconvenience and continual suffering.

In March, 1866, George Farwell was married to Miss Flora Meigs, a daughter of Brownson and Rebecca (Tuller) Meigs, early settlers who came to this county in 1857. Mrs. Farwell passed away in June, 1884. By this marriage Mr. Farwell has one daughter, Carrie M., who married Joseph Roberts, of Baraboo, Wis. The second marriage of Mr. Farwell was in September, 1885, when Miss Carrie Chamberlain, a niece of Mr. Farwell's first wife, and a daughter of Henry and Celia (Meigs) Chamberlain, became his bride. Mrs. Farwell was born in St. Johnsbury, Vt., and when a child of two years she removed to the State of New York with her parents. After the marriage of their daughter Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain resided at the home of their son-in-law, kindly cared for until the death of the mother in 1889, and the father, in 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Farwell have one son, Byron Chamberlain, a bright and intelligent boy, born in 1893.

At the time of the breaking out of the war Mr. Farwell had in view a professional career, and for some time had been a student in the high school in Madison, expecting to pursue a course of study in that city, but he yielded to his duty, and for four long years, or as long as his aid was needed, he stood at his post, with other wishes subdued. Entering the service as a private, he was promoted to sergeant, and finally, in March, 1865, for faithfulness, to lieutenant, and was mustered out as such. Returning with shattered constitution, he renounced, with little repining, his hope of a professional career, and pursued, as he was able, the occupations of farmer and merchant. Of such stuff our heroes are made. Although for many years he faithfully performed his duties as a civilian, it was under difficulties, as the wound in his arm has annoyed him greatly, and rheumatism, also, which afflicts many a brave veteran, has given him much trouble, and has been a leading cause of his retirement from active business life. In politics Mr. Farwell is a staunch Republican, and has ever been deemed a worthy and honorable citizen. Mrs. Farwell is a member of the Christian Advent Church, and also of the Woman's Relief Corps, while Mr. Farwell is socially connected with Williamson Post, G. A. R., of Dodgeville.

EDWARD E. BURNS, member of the State Senate from the 16th District, is one of the leading representatives of the Bar in Grant county, is a gentleman of unusual attainments, successful in the practice of his profession, and highly respected by his colleagues as well as his fellow citizens.

Mr. Burns was born at East Dubuque, Ill., Jan. 20, 1858, a son of Edward and Clara (Fairbanks) Burns, the former a native of Ottawa, Canada, the latter born near Watertown, N. Y. The father was born in 1828, of Scottish parents. The mother was born in 1832, and was the daughter of Silas and Caroline Fairbanks, descendants of prominent New England families, who were well known during the early days of the country. Edward Burns settled in Chicago, and for some time was in the employ of the Illinois Central Railway Co., later conducting a lumber yard at East Dubuque, Ill., where his first marriage—with the mother of our subject—occurred. After some years' residence there Mr. Burns removed to Jamestown, Wis., where he purchased the farm on which he still resides. In 1863 Mrs. Clara Burns passed away, leaving him with two children: Edward E. is our subject; Carrie L., a native of Jamestown, where she grew to womanhood, married Frank Neat, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and died in November, 1891, leaving no family. For his second wife Edward Burns married Miss Mary Tupper, and to this union two sons were born: Frank L., a graduate of the State Normal School at Platteville, of the class of 1896; and Clifford, now fourteen years old.

Our subject received an academic education in the State Normal School at Platteville, after which he entered the University of Wisconsin law school, at Madison, graduating in the class of 1887. The following year he opened an office for the practice of his profession at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., but after a short residence there returned and formed a partnership with W. G. Palmer, of Boscobel, Grant county. At the close of one year Mr. Burns removed to Platteville, forming a partnership with W. E. Carter on Dec. 1, 1890.

Five years later this partnership was dissolved, Mr. Carter locating in Milwaukee, Wis., and Mr. Burns continuing in Platteville.

When the war with Spain broke out Mr. Burns offered himself as a private, but was rejected on account of a defect in his left eye. Determined to serve his country, he returned to Platteville, and raised a company, of which he was elected captain, and which was mustered into the service as Company C, 4th Wisconsin Volunteers, at Camp Douglas, Wis. Later they were forwarded to Anniston, Ala., where they remained until Feb. 28, 1899, when the regiment was mustered out.

After the muster-out of the regiment Mr. Burns returned to Platteville and the peaceful practice of law. He is notably successful in his cases. In recognition of his ability, the common council of Platteville in 1897 elected him to the position of city attorney, and he has since been honored with election to the State Senate from the 16th District, in which body he is now serving, discharging the arduous duties of this incumbency with marked distinction. In addition to this honor Mr. Burns has also served as member of the county board, and brought to the deliberation of that body not only his legal knowledge, but also a calm, impartial judgment. In politics he is a member of the Republican party, whose principles he upholds upon all occasions. Mr. Burns is not connected with any religious body, but accords to every man the right to worship as his conscience dictates. In April, 1899, Mr. Burns purchased a fine building site on Round-tree avenue, erected a very comfortable home, and now resides there. Public-spirited, genial, thoroughly conversant with his profession, the future before this young man is a very brilliant one. Judging the future by the light of the past, his name is destined to become one of the best known in the State, even if he is not called to fill higher positions. Socially he is a very prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of the K. of P. lodge of Platteville.

HON. JOEL WHITMAN. The early settlers of Wisconsin are rapidly yielding their places to the generations who have succeeded them. With silvered hair, and sometimes with faltering steps, they are silently marching toward a land where faith is succeeded by vision, and hope gives place to realization. To chronicle their achievements and tell the story of their lives is, with the historian, a task at once of duty and of love; and among those who for more than half a century have been prominently identified with the material, economic and political development of the southwestern portion of the State, the names of few are better known or more widely respected than that of Joel Whitman.

Mr. Whitman comes of English lineage, as well as of "fighting stock." His American ancestors were among the early settlers of Long Island, when New York was a colony of the Crown, and his grandfather, Isaiah Whitman, a tailor by trade, was one of the intrepid army which, under the leadership of Washington, freed the new republic from the yoke of British domination. Isaiah Whitman, the elder, some years after the conclusion of the war for independence settled in Fulton county, N. Y., where he died in 1799, at the age of eighty-eight years. He was twice married. His first wife bore him one son and one daughter, Jesse and Phoebe. A few years after her death he was united to a Miss Platt, a member of the distinguished and historic family in whose honor Plattsburg, N. Y., was named. The issue of that union was three sons and five daughters, the youngest of the family, whose Christian name was also Isaiah, being the father of the eminent pioneer, public servant and man of affairs whose career constitutes the subject of this narrative.

Isaiah Whitman, Jr., spent his entire life chiefly in farming. He married Hannah Turner, and became the father of ten children, all of whom grew to maturity, and of whom five are yet living. Nelson, Joel, Phoebe, Clarissa and Louisa. Phoebe and Clarissa are widows, and make their homes in New York. Louisa is the wife of Judge W. H. Fry, of that State. Nelson is an ordained clergyman in the Methodist Church, and is now a resident of Fulton county, N. Y., where he was born. For four years he carried a captain's commission and did service in the army of the Union during the war of the Rebellion; about 1858 he came West, and was for a time connected with the Wisconsin Conference, having previously been attached to the Troy Conference for a number of years. Henry Whitman, a son of Rose Whitman (deceased), the eldest of the family, was also a soldier, and lost his life in the service of his country in the second battle of Bull Run, in 1862.

From the narrative given above it may be seen that Joel Whitman is the only member of his father's family to become a permanent resident of Wisconsin. He was born Feb. 2, 1823, in the town of Wells, N. Y., which was then a part of Fulton county, but is now, owing to a readjustment of county lines, within the limits of Hamilton county. His early educational advantages were of the sort enjoyed by the sons of well-to-do farmers of his time and locality, and he learned the trade of a carpenter in his early youth. In 1856 he settled in the town of Ridgeway, Iowa Co., Wis., entering a claim to government land. His natural ability soon won recognition, and, together with his innate energy, early brought him to the front in public affairs. Quick of comprehension, facile of speech, broad in conception, and resolute of purpose, the people found in him a most intelligent servant; while at the same time his high moral sense, which appeared in-born, insured his fidelity to every public trust. In 1860 he was first elected clerk of the circuit court of Iowa county. At that time the county seat was at Mineral Point, and there he resided until, in July, 1861, the seat of county government was changed to Dodgeville, when he removed to that town. With such ability and fidelity did he discharge every official duty that he was twice re-elected to the same important position, with its grave and sometimes perplexing responsibilities, filling the office for six years. So great has been the public confidence in him, however, and so deep-seated has been the faith of the people in his intelligence and integrity, that other offices have been thrust upon him. In 1866 he was chosen to represent his district in the State Senate, in which body he occupied a seat for two years. Of minor and local honors he has been a frequent recipient, having filled the offices of member of the board of town trustees, president of the village, and president of the Iowa County Agricultural Society. Between 1875 and 1879 he was postmaster at Dodgeville, filling the position for over four years.

Mr. Whitman's marriage took place in 1866, when he was united to Anna Belle McClure. Her father, Donald McClure, was a native of Prince Edward Island, where she, too, was born. The family seat was in Scotland, whence Mrs. Whitman's grandparents emigrated before her father's birth. In 1849 the family removed to Wisconsin, their home being in Dane and Iowa counties. Donald McClure long since entered into eternal rest, but his widow is yet living, at the age of eighty-two, and has her home with a daughter, in Omaha, Neb. Mrs. Whitman is the second of a family of four children. Her elder sister, Christina, is the widow of Willard Fisher, and lives near Omaha. Her two brothers are named George and Chester A. To Mr. and Mrs. Whitman have come three sons, George R., Platt and Ross. George R. Whitman was born in Dodgeville, Dec. 18, 1867, and, after graduating from the high school, he studied two years in the academic department of the State University, graduating from the law department in 1892; he was at once elected district attorney for Iowa county, re-elected in 1894, and subsequently he was chosen a member of the board of supervisors, an office which he held until his death, on Aug. 19, 1898. He also served with distinction as agent for the State Board of Immigration, and just before his death had been notified of his appointment as United States inspector of flour at Chicago. In January, 1896, he was married to Miss Nellie S. Bennett, of Mineral Point. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity, to the Knights of Pythias, and to the Royal Arcanum, and as a Pythian was Grand Master-at-Arms of the Grand Lodge of the Domain of Wisconsin at the time of his death. Platt Whitman, the second son of our subject, was born Feb. 6, 1871, and he, too, is a member of the Bar, having received the degree of A. B. from the State University in 1893, and graduating from the law department in 1895; he began the practice of his profession at Highland, Iowa county, but not long afterward removed to Boscobel, where his success has been commensurate with his recognized ability. Ross Whitman, the youngest son, was born June 5, 1881, and is a student at the Wisconsin University.

JOHN WALSH, a popular dealer in furniture, and undertaker, at Benton, Lafayette county, was born in Walshford, Ireland, Nov. 24, 1850, a son of John and Johanna (Day) Walsh. They were born and married in Ireland, and came to America in 1851, settling near Galena, where he engaged in the work of mining. In the early days of gold mining he crossed the Plains, and for four years was engaged in the mines in California. He did well in that distant land, where he remained four years. Coming back to Wisconsin with considerable wealth, he bought a farm on the pike in Jo Daviess county, where he lived until his death, in 1885. His widow and her son, John, whose name appears above, moved to Hazel Green, where she died in 1886. They were both devout Catholics, and were highly regarded by those who knew them best. Of their family of six children, (1) Thomas, the eldest, was born in Ireland. When a young man he enlisted in the Navy under Admiral Farragut, and was with him when he destroyed the rebel fleets in the Mississippi river. Later he enlisted in Company B, 45th Ill. V. I., serving until the close of the war. He is a single man, and lives at Dubuque. (2) Robert, born in Ireland, grew up in Jo Daviess county, enlisted in the 13th Ind. V. I., which became a part of the Army of the Potomac, and, with his regiment, participated in many battles. He was wounded by a bursting shell at Lookout Mountain. He is now living in Indianapolis, where he was married. (3) James, born in Ireland, is a saddler by trade, and lives in Hazel Green. (4) Johanna, born in Ireland, is the wife of Christopher McCane, a merchant in Hazel Green. (5) Mary, born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., is the wife of J. E. Kenney, of Cuba City, who is an undertaker and a furniture dealer. (6) John.

John Walsh had his early education in the district schools of Jo Daviess county, Ill. When a young man he learned the trade of a carpenter and builder, and this was his occupation for many years. Many public buildings and private residences through this part of the State attest his ability as a workman. The large school building at Cuba City was put up under his contract, as well as many other notable buildings in this section. In 1878 he went to the Black Hills, where he worked for four dollars a day framing timber for the mines. He was in that country when Deadwood City was destroyed by fire. For four years he remained in the Hills, and then came back to Wisconsin to take up the work of farming, which he followed until 1888, when he purchased ground and erected a furniture and undertaking establishment at Cuba City. In this business he continued for six years, and in 1893 disposed of his business in Cuba City to J. E. Kenney, and started a similar business in the town of Benton, which has proved highly remunerative, and where he is now engaged in business.

In July, 1889, Mr. Walsh was married to Miss Minnie, the daughter of Frank and Marv (Griffith) Brock, a pioneering and prominent family in Grant county. Mrs. Walsh was born at Big Patch in 1865, and her father was born near East Dubuque, Ill., and her mother in Delaware. They lived at Big Patch for a number of years, and then moved to Cuba City, where Mr. Brock died in 1892. Then family of children is as follows: Emma, now Mrs. Amos Cook, of South Dakota; Mary, who lives with her mother in Cuba City; Minnie, who married John Walsh; and Ira, a traveling salesman.

To Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were born the following children: (1) Mary A., born in Cuba City in July, 1890; (2) John F., born in the same place in 1892; (3) Lynn S., born in 1895; (4) Georgie O., born in 1897; (5) Clifford, born in September, 1900. The entire family are devoted adherents of the Catholic Church. Mr. Walsh has always voted with the Democratic party.

Mr. Walsh belongs to the order of Catholic Knights, where his loyalty and enthusiasm are much esteemed. As a man he has many friends, who know and admire his good qualities.

OLE JEREMIASON holds an enviable place among the farming people, as well as the citizens of the town of York, Green county, where he has his pleasant and inviting home on a farm of some 400 acres on Section 16. Born in Norway June 16, 1830, he is a son of Jeremias Oleson, and accompanied his parents to Wisconsin in 1853, and here they made their home in Green county.

Jeremias Oleson was the father of the following children: Ole, Lena, and four that are now deceased. Lena married Elliott Hanson, and is living in Iowa. Ole Jeremiason, following the Norwegian habit, took his father's given name, and added to it "son." Jeremias Oleson was born in Norway Feb. 6, 1796, and died in the town of York Nov. 16, 1881. His wife was born Jan. 1, 1800, in Norway, and died in York June 30, 1886. Both were buried in the Norwegian Cemetery in that town.

Ole Jeremiason and Miss Margaret Everson were married Nov. 26, 1876, and to them were born the following children: Ida, born Oct. 6, 1877; Julia, born Dec. 18, 1880; Nettie, born Dec. 21, 1882; Sophia, born June 14, 1884; Martin, born Feb. 2, 1887; and Milla, born Feb. 12, 1892. Mrs. Jeremiason was born March 19, 1854, near Brodhead, and was one of a family of six children: Sveino, of Rock county; Peter, of Brodhead; Even, of Dane county; Helena, the wife of Mangus Freeman, of Rock county; Margaret; and Amon, of Rock county.

Mr. Jeremiason was in very poor circumstances when he arrived in this country, and made the journey from Janesville to York township on foot. There he and his father took up a small tract of government land, and by hard work, economy and industry he has come to own one of the largest farms of Green county, which is entirely free from encumbrance. Mr. Jeremiason is a staunch Republican and a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, and is honest and square in all his dealings. At the present time he is engaged in farming and the dairy business. He milks some forty cows, and belongs to the Co-operative Cheese Manufacturing Company.

In the spring of 1865 Mr. Jeremiason enlisted in the 46th Wis. V. I., and served until the following fall. He made a good record, though late in entering, and his children may well be proud of their father's good name in every walk of life.

JAMES P. COX enjoys the double distinction of being a son of one of Wisconsin's pioneers, and a gallant veteran of the war for the preservation of the Union. He was born in the town of Potosi, Grant county, Jan. 11, 1836, his father being Judge James P. Cox, one of the foremost pioneers of this section of the State, whose name is held in reverential esteem.

Judge Cox was born in Philadelphia in 1802, and, being left an orphan at the age of eight years, was reared in a Quaker family, who gave him the ordinary advantages of rudimentary education and apprenticed him to learn the trade of a tanner. The occupation did not prove to his liking, and on reaching the age of twenty-two years, his mind was made up to seek fresh fields and pastures new in what was then regarded as the extreme West. Accordingly, in 1824 he came to Wisconsin, settling in that portion of the (then) territory which is now Grant county. By virtue of intelligence and industry, perception and probity, he soon forged to the front. During those early days when Wisconsin was yet a Territory, he held the office of sheriff, his official jurisdiction extending over the region which now embraces the counties of Grant, Iowa and Crawford. He was at Prairie du Chien, when the grizzled old veteran, Zachary Taylor, commanded the garrison and when Jefferson Davis, afterward the president of the extinct Southern Confederacy, was a successful suitor for the hand of Taylor's daughter. Judge Cox was a soldier in the Black Hawk war, and his widow yet draws a pension for his services in that conflict. Mrs. (Judge James P.) Cox was Miss Caroline Dawson before marriage, and her birthplace was Shawneetown, in Southern Illinois. Judge Cox finally settled on a farm near Potosi, Grant county, giving the place the name of Osceola, by which it is still known. He served in the territorial legislature, and was a man of wide influence, and was made one of the judges of the Territory. He was a man of broad mind and deep convictions, to which he was inflexibly loyal. A Whig before the formation of the Republican party, he acted with the latter from the outset of its existence, and was one of its chief organizers in Wisconsin. An ardent patriot, he warmly supported the war policy of President Lincoln, and lived to see the triumph of the old flag and the restoration of the Union. He pre-empted 400 acres of government land in the township of Lancaster, Grant county, and passed his later years in farming. He passed from earth in 1866 leaving an unblemished record in every relation of life, both public and private, and his demise was widely and deeply mourned. He was the father of nine children, all of whom attained maturity, although only four are yet living. Two of his sons, James P., Jr., and Thomas D., served in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion. Thomas D. was a member of Company C (Captain McKee's command), of the 2d Wis. V. I., and was killed in the first battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861, two days before completing his twenty-first year; he was the first soldier from Grant county to lay down his life as a sacrifice upon his country's altar, and his memory is honored and preserved in the naming of the Grand Army Post at Lancaster "Tom Cox."

A brief mention of the other members of the family cannot fail to prove of interest. Those who have died were Mrs. Harriet R. Clise, the eldest child, Mrs. Ann M. Clise, Henrietta and Rufus W. Besides Mr. James P. Cox there are yet living Charles, whose home is near his brother James P., on the old homestead; John T., a resident of the township of Paris, Grant county; and Mrs. Elizabeth Language, on an adjoining farm. Mrs. James P. Cox, Sr., the mother of this family, is still living, at the age of ninety years.

James P. Cox, the subject of this narrative, remained upon his father's farm until the outbreak of the Civil war. On Aug. 11, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I. The regiment was mustered into service at La Crosse, and after taking part in the suppression of an Indian outbreak was dispatched to Columbus, Ky., proceeding thence to Vicksburg, Miss., where it participated in the celebrated siege of that city. After the surrender of the Southern stronghold, the young volunteer became ill, and was sent home on furlough. He rejoined his regiment, however, at Helena, Ark., in time to take part in the famous raid on Meridian, Miss. His health giving way a second time, he was sent to the hospital at Vicksburg, whence he was transferred to Jefferson Barracks, in Missouri, and from that point to Prairie du Chien, Wis., where he remained until honorably discharged, at the close of his term of enlistment. His service as a soldier left him physically enfeebled, and he is yet a victim to those twin maladies of the old veterans—rheumatism and chronic diarrhoea. In 1866 he was elected sheriff of Grant county, and filled that responsible office for two years. In 1868 he retired to his farm, where he yet resides, broken in health, but with mental faculties undimmed, and happy in the recollection of a life well spent.

He was married in 1874 to Miss Margaret H. McKenzie, a daughter of the late James McKenzie, one of Grant county's honored pioneers, who was born in Philadelphia in 1794, a son of Alexander McKenzie, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, the story of whose life reads like a romance. While walking along the beach near his home, a mere youth, he was seized by the hated and dreaded "press gang," and forced aboard a British man-of-war, where he did compulsory service for three years.

During the war of the Revolution the vessel on which he was virtually a prisoner was cruising in American waters, and young McKenzie, with eleven companions, resolved to make an effort to escape. The coast was seven miles distant, yet they jumped overboard and swam for shore. Of the party that made this daring plunge for freedom, only five regained their liberty, the others sinking beneath the waves through exhaustion, or being struck by shot from the vessel's guns, which, after the fact of the escape was ascertained, kept up a perpetual firing. After landing upon American soil Alexander McKenzie lost no time in joining the patriotic army, and after a service of four years, had the pleasure of seeing the independence of the colonies recognized by the Crown. The remainder of his life was passed near Philadelphia, and there he died while his son James (the father of Mrs. Cox) was yet a child. He was the son of a royal house in Scotland, but unfortunately Mrs. Cox does not know its history well enough to relate it. James McKenzie was one of a family of five children, three of whom were sons. The eldest child is Mrs. Elizabeth Ellison, of Philadelphia; the second, Mrs. Margaret Hanley, resided with her husband on a large plantation in Kentucky, and died there many years ago; Thomas (also deceased) was an esteemed citizen of Terre Haute, Ind.; Alexander, a twin brother of James, lived and died on a Kentucky plantation, adjoining that of his sister.

James was apprenticed to the trade of cabinet maker while a youth, but before the close of his apprenticeship had expired he enlisted in the army to take part in the war of 1812. He served as second lieutenant in the regiment commanded by Col. Cadwallader, and at the close of the struggle was given the honorary title of Colonel, by which he was known during the remainder of his life, and his figure and martial bearing well substantiated his claim to the distinction. The name was long known and honored in both Kentucky and Wisconsin. It was in Kentucky that he married Lucintha Roundtree, and it was in the early days of their married life (in 1836) that the young couple removed to the Territory of Wisconsin, becoming the first settlers in what is now the township of Ellenboro. He erected a saw-mill and a flouring mill there, and "McKenzie's mill" soon became famous far and near. He was a man of quick intelligence, kindly disposition and absolutely unflagging energy. He was eminently social, a genial host, and while remarkably successful in business, his native generosity was a constant bar to his accumulation of wealth. He was a Mason of high degree, and in no relation of life was he ever found derelict. In 1850 he made a trip to California, returning after an absence of two years. In early life he was a Whig, but later affiliated with the Democratic party. He died upon his farm in Ellenboro Aug. 21. 1881, having rounded out a life of earnest perseverance and good work, honored by the community whose best interests he had labored to advance, and sincerely mourned by the many friends who had learned to love him for his many virtues, not the least of which was his quick, tender sympathy for all who were in distress.

To James McKenzie and his wife were born seven children, three of whom are deceased. Henry, the eldest son, died at Ellenboro in 1885. The youngest son, Harrison McKenzie, enlisted in May, 1861, in Company C, 2d Wis. V. I., and lost his life on the field of Antietam Sept. 17, 1862. John, whose home was near Stockton, Cal., died there at 6 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 4, 1901. Those of the family who yet survive, besides Mrs. Cox are Mrs. Barnett, of Milwaukee, Mrs. Nancy Clise, of Seattle, Wash., and Mrs. Belle Spencer, of Minneapolis.

MYRON A. BISHOP, proprietor of the "Gates House" at Platteville, Grant county, was born in Huron county, Ohio, Dec. 19, 1845, a son of Alonzo and Louisa (Reynolds) Bishop, the former of whom was born Dec. 28, 1809, in New York State, the latter Sept. 28, 1813, in Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Bishop lived in the Empire State for six years after their marriage, then removed to Huron county, Ohio, and in 1854 came to Wisconsin, locating in Beloit, where the father was engaged in farming. The latter days of the parents were passed, however, at the home of their son Myron A., in Platteville, where they passed away in 1881, the mother on Nov. 13, and the father on Nov. 18. They had born to them thirteen children, eight of whom reached mature years, the seven besides Myron A. being (1) George W., who was born in New York State in 1836, was educated in Ohio, and when a young man came to Wisconsin and engaged in the lumber business in the pineries. At the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted in the 10th Wis. V. I., and served through the entire struggle. After the war was over he purchased a farm in Perry, Dallas Co., Iowa, and married Miss Esther Arthur, of Wisconsin, who bore him three sons, George, Dr. Earnest and Ora, all residents of Iowa. George W. Bishop died in 1898. (2) Thomas, born March 25, 1844, was also a soldier in the Civil war, and was killed before Petersburg, Va., June 17, 1864. (3) W. H., born in 1847, came with his parents to Wisconsin, where he worked on his father's farm until enlisting, in the fall of 1864, in the 12th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war; he was with Sherman on the march to the sea, and while in the service sustained a sunstroke that left him in poor health for some time. He married Miss Sarah A. James, of Wyoming Iowa Co., Wis., was for many years employed as United States mail carrier between Mineral Point, Dodgeville and Arena, and in 1877 settled in Platteville, where he carried on a livery business until his death, in 1893; he left his wife with one son, Dr. T. W. Bishop, of Platteville. Of the surviving daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Bishop, (4) Amanda, born in New York in 1834, became the wife of A. W. Greene, of Beloit, Wis., who in 1857 settled in Arena, Iowa county, where Mr. Greene farmed until his death, in 1863. He left his widow with two children, Della and Lydia, the former of whom is the wife of D. C. Munyon, of South Dakota, and the latter the widow of George Burrow, and a resident of Minnesota. Mrs. Greene was married after her first husband's death to Frederick Beaumont, and resided at Lone Rock, Wis., until her death, Dec. 17, 1900. By her second marriage she became the mother of two children, Alonzo and Frances. (5) Mary J., born in Ohio in 1838, is the wife of J. N. Dodge, a farmer of Round Lake, Minn., and has three children, George, Minnie and William; the latter was educated at the Platteville State Normal School and the Chicago Dental College. (6) Sarah Louisa, born in Ohio in 1842, is the widow of George W. Billington, of Arena, Wis., who died Jan. 5, 1900. She now resides in Wyoming Valley and has six children living. Cora (wife of Robert Edwards, of Sibley, Iowa), Frankie (married to Dana Hickox,

Myron A. Bishop Mrs. Carrie A. Bishop of Clarion, Iowa), Minnie (wife of Louis Billington, of South Dakota), Iva (wife of Allen Olson, of Iowa county, Wis.), and William and Roy, at home. (7) Eva, born in Ohio in 1852, was married to Albert Green, who died in Brandon, Wis., leaving his widow with four daughters, Carrie, Sylvia, Anna and Minnie. Mrs. Green was later married to Hiram Dodge, and died in July, 1899, leaving two sons and one daughter by Mr. Dodge.

Myron A. Bishop was educated in the common and high schools of Beloit, Wis. At the early age of sixteen he enlisted in Company B, 34th Wis. V. I., under Capt. James M. Ruby, took part in several skirmishes, and was honorably discharged at the close of his one year's term of enlistment. After his return he again attended school six years, and then engaged in teaching, a vocation he followed about seven years.

On Aug. 19, 1868, Mr. Bishop married Miss Carrie Ward, daughter of William A. and Elizabeth Ward, of Arena, Wis. Mrs. Bishop was born in Nova Scotia Dec. 9, 1845, but early came to the Wolverine State, and here engaged in school teaching. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bishop taught school a year in Perry, Dallas Co., Iowa, and then returned to Wisconsin. For three years Mr. Bishop was engaged in mercantile trade, then for two years ran a stage between Platteville and Boscobel, and next conducted the "Park House," at Platteville, for about six years, at the end of which time he sold out and engaged in merchandising at Mount Hope for two years. He then disposed of his mercantile business and kept a hotel in Cassville for about five years, in 1893 purchasing the "Gates House," in Platteville, of which he has since continued to be the genial and popular proprietor. He and his wife are both well fitted for this business, and the kindly and hospitable faces of both are familiar to all travelers in the habit of visiting the town. The hotel is conducted on the temperance plan, and in the most orderly and homelike manner; the table is supplied with the best viands afforded by the local and city markets, and the sleeping apartments are clean, neatly furnished and comfortable in every respect. Mrs. Bishop is a lady of culture and refinement, and she possesses the happy faculty of making her numerous guests feel at home. For the past fifteen years, also, Mr. Bishop has acted as an auctioneer throughout

Grant and adjoining counties, and has gained for himself the reputation of being one of the best salesmen in this section.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bishop have been born three sons: Bert M., now the only survivor, born Jan. 15, 1875, is a graduate of the Platteville Business College, 1894, and of the State Normal School, Platteville, class of 1898, is well advanced in literature and music, and socially is one of the leading young men of the town; Willet J., born April 10, 1877, died the same month; and Harold, born Sept. 3, 1881, died April 22, 1886.

In politics Mr. Bishop has always identified himself with the Republican party, and has been very active in party work, especially in local matters. He is a member of Sherman Post, No. 62, G. A. R., of Platteville; of Platteville Lodge, No. 125, K. of P.; of the Knights of the Globe; and of the M. W. A.

During the drought in Nebraska, in 1894, when the farmers and others of that State had suffered heavy losses, an agent was sent to Platteville to solicit money for the relief of the more pressing immediate wants, and oats for the coming spring season. Through the efforts of Mr. Bishop and his influence with the G. A. R. 1,100 bushels of oats were contributed, and these, with a neat sum in cash, were freely divided among the veterans and Nebraskans in want. In 1899 Mr. Bishop purchased a farm of 160 acres in Petersburg, Neb., which he rents.

T. W. Bishop, M. D., a nephew of our subject, was graduated from the Platteville Normal in 1890, and from Bellevue Medical College, New York, in 1894, and is now a physician of Platteville. In 1896 he married Miss Floy Wheeler, of Baraboo, Wis., daughter of Rev. Bert Wheeler, D. D., of the M. E. Church.

William A. Ward, Mrs. Bishop's father, was born in Nova Scotia in 1804, son of Robert Ward, and was of English extraction. In 1827 he married Elizabeth Reid, a native of Nova Scotia, born in 1802, and they came with their family to Wisconsin in 1846, locating at Ridgeway, where he engaged in farming. He died in April, 1883. Mrs. Elizabeth Ward died in July, 1854 and in 1857 he married for his second wife Margaret McKenzie, of Ridgeway. By the first wife he had the following children who grew to maturity: G. S., born in November, 1828, now of Iowa;

Kate E., born in 1830, who married Alexander McKenzie; Sarah A., born in 1832, who married William J. Laughlin, and is deceased; John W., born Jan. 27, 1835, who died in 1900; James E., born in November, 1836, of Hollandale, Wis.; Nancy V., born June 28, 1838, who married William A. McKenzie; and Carrie, Mrs. Bishop. By the second marriage there were three children: Etta, born in 1858, wife of Robert Clark, of Chicago; William A., born in 1861, of Chicago; and Zella B., born in 1864, who is unmarried.

MATHEW BAINBRIDGE. Among the wealthy and leading farmers of Lafayette county, is Mathew Bainbridge, of Blanchard township, his finely improved farm lying two and one-half miles south-west of Blanchardville. This comprises 436 acres of fertile and well cultivated land, and its location on Sections 26, 27, 34, and 35, comprises some of the most valuable land in this part of Wisconsin.

Mathew Bainbridge was born in Durham county, England, July 13, 1846, a son of Henry and Jane (Hutchinson) Bainbridge, both of whom were natives of England, although the Hutchinson family originated in Scotland. These parents had a family of twelve children, nine of whom grew to maturity: John, Elizabeth and Henry, deceased; Thomas, a retired farmer of Lafayette county; Anthony, a resident of Benton, in this county; Dinah, deceased; George, who remains on the old English homestead; Mathew, of this biography; and Isabella, deceased.

Previous to coming to the United States, Mathew Bainbridge married Miss Hannah Bainbridge, in 1868, a daughter of Joseph Bainbridge, and her birth was in 1848. Eleven children have blessed this union: Joseph, at home; Jane died at the age of twenty-two; John H., at home; Margaret E. married Columbus Johns, of North Dakota; Charlotte married Clyde Robinson, of Ohio; Etta, at home; Mathew W., at home; Annie, at home, as are also Thomas S., Archie and Bessie B. In 1870, Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge came to America and first settled near Benton, in Lafayette county, where the former engaged in mining and successfully pursued this for the succeeding five years, and then began farming, renting land for the next five years, at the expiration of which he bought his present most desirable estate. In addition to this valuable property, he also owns a fine farm of 220 acres in the township of Benton, which may be of still greater value, as it has every indication of mineral wealth.

Mr. Bainbridge is a man of ideas, and not only successfully conducts extensive farming operations, but is also engaged in the dairy and cheese business on a large scale, and much of his time is occupied in the breeding of fine horses from imported stock. In politics, he is a Republican, and has taken an active interest in township affairs, efficiently filling the office of school director and has been chairman of the township board. The family is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which Mr. Bainbridge gives liberal support. Remembering that Mr. Bainbridge came to this country a poor man, there is something admirable in the success which he has won by his energy and business ability. His standing in the community is very high, and no one in Lafayette county can be named as a better husband, father, friend or citizen, than he.

LEWIS WHITEHEAD (deceased) was among the honorable and useful citizens of his time. As a neighbor and a citizen he was highly esteemed for his kind heart, his sympathetic disposition, and his manly and upright character.

Mr. Whitehead was a native of Berne, England, born June 15, 1815, spent his boyhood and youth in the community where he was born, and there obtained his schooling. He descended from a family of the purest Anglo-Saxon lineage, which far away was mingled with a royal strain. William and Annie (Tone) Whitehead, his parents, were born in Berne, England, where the father followed the double occupation of farming and fishing, and they were known as honorable and industrious people. They were the parents of thirteen children, those who came to this country being William, Lewis and John.

Lewis Whitehead, after coming to this country, in June, 1850, settled in Wisconsin, and became well established here. He was married in Green county June 3, 1866, to Miss Olive L. Minor, a daughter of Hiram and Parmelia (Grant) Minor. Mrs. Parmelia (Grant) Minor was a distant relative of President Grant. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead became the parents of the following children: (1) John W., born April 10, 1867, married Miss Statire Foote, of Medina, Ohio, and is now a farmer in that locality. (2) George Henry, born Aug. 21, 1868, married Miss Nettie Lichtenwaller, of Monroe, Wis., and is a farmer in the town of Jefferson. (3) Alvin K., born March 28, 1870, is a farmer in Iowa, and on Feb. 13, 1901, he married Elizabeth Greves. (4) Annie Maria, born Nov. 3, 1871. (5) Wakeman D., born March 25, 1873, resides with his mother on the home farm, and is engaged in its cultivation. (6) Parker M., born Sept. 24, 1874, is a merchant at Elgin, Neb. (7) Frank B., the youngest in the family, was born March 14, 1876, and is now engaged in farming in Indiana.

Mrs. Olive L. Whitehead was born Dec. 3, 1841, the eldest child in a family of nine, the others being Ruby J., William M., Cyrus T., Truman J., Perry, Franklin, Belinda, and Serepta (who died in childhood). Hiram Minor was born in 1812, and died in 1886, and was totally deprived of sight for twelve years previous to his death. Mrs. Hiram Minor was born in 1818, and died in 1855.

Lewis Whitehead began life in this country as a day laborer, but soon became a farmer, and at the time of his death, in 1884, owned a fine estate of 180 acres of very desirable farming land in the town of Jefferson. Mrs. Olive L. Whitehead is now making her home on the old place. Mr. Whitehead was a Republican, and thoroughly posted on the topics of his time. Honest and true to his convictions, he was well liked by his neighbors, and acted the part of a man wherever placed. To his family he left a good property, and his widow is passing her last years in peace and comfort. She is a woman of more than the usual force of character, and is highly spoken of by those who know her best as a sincere Christian, of kindly spirit and generous impulses.

HON. ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, a resident of the town of Brigham, Iowa county, since July, 1850, is one of the representative men of Southwestern Wisconsin, and his honorable and useful career since his arrival here deserves high commendation in this record.

Mr. Campbell comes of Scotch ancestry, and was himself born on Prince Edward Island April 28, 1828, being a son of James and Elizabeth (Montgomery) Campbell. The first Montgomery of this family to come to America bore the name of Donald, and was a thoroughbred Scotchman. Both the Campbells and Montgomerys were among the very early settlers of Prince Edward Island.

Archibald Campbell attained his majority in his native island. When he had reached man's estate he came, in company with a half brother, to Wisconsin, where another brother had already come, and established a home. James T. Campbell, who came with him, is in South Dakota; Alexander Campbell, who was already established here, is in Washington. Donald Campbell, a full brother of Archibald, is now living in Boston, Mass. For a time after his arrival in Wisconsin, Archibald Campbell was an inmate of the home of Squire Brigham, a well-known pioneer, whose name the township in which he settled bears.

Mr. Campbell was one of the early teachers in Wisconsin, teaching in the townships of Blue Mounds and Vermont, in Dane county. A farm was improved by him near Blue Mounds, where he made his home until February, 1865, when he settled on his present beautiful home farm in Section 3, in the town of Brigham. Early in 1865 Mr. Campbell enlisted in Company A, 49th Wis. V. I., and was made a sergeant of the company at its organization. Actively engaged with his regiment, he saw many of the stirring scenes of the closing months of the Great Rebellion, and though his military experience was brief, it was in every way creditable. Since the close of the war Mr. Campbell has resided on his present farm, and has passed his years in the quiet pursuit of his useful calling. His character is above and beyond all possible serious criticism.

Mrs. Campbell was formerly Miss Frederika Helmenstine, and she is a daughter of John A. Helmenstine, a well-known pioneer settler. To Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were born three daughters and six sons. A sad affliction befell them in the death of their oldest daughter, Elizabeth, who was killed by a cyclone in 1879, in the town of Moscow, Iowa county, where she was teaching school at the time. At the approach of the storm, which seemed to threaten the school house, she tried to escape with the children, but was killed, while the house was left uninjured.

Mr. Campbell was prominently identified with the early political history of Wisconsin, and enjoyed the acquaintance of many of the leading men of the State who have since passed from the stage of action. He voted for Gen. Scott in 1852. and was a delegate to the first Republican convention held in Madison in 1854, and since that event has been a steadfast Republican. In 1878 he was sent to the State Senate, where he made a creditable record. Before the adoption of the present system he was a county commissioner, and has since served on the county board a number of terms. Mr. Campbell has taken an active interest in educational affairs, and long served as school director, being treasurer for eighteen years. There are few men who have a wider acquaintance in this part of the State, or are more highly regarded than the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. Keeping in touch with the best thought of the time, he is universally recognized as a progressive and valuable citizen.

JAMES H. EARNEST. for over three score years identified with the farming and mining interests of Lafayette county, Wis., died at his old home June 12, 1900. His birth occurred in Franklin county, Ky., Jan. 11, 1818. and in that State his parents died while he was still quite young, and he was early thrown upon his own resources.

In 1836 Mr. Earnest came alone to Wisconsin, and found work in the mines in New Digging township, where he remained for fourteen years. About 1850 he purchased his farm, which was then unimproved, and erected good buildings for his family, with spacious barns and outbuildings for animals, of which he kept many. In politics Mr. Earnest belonged to the old Democratic party, and for sixteen years represented his county in the State Legislature. He was very prominent as a member, and was active in the promotion of many a law having for its object the welfare of the State. In the political work of his own county he was always in the front rank of workers and was looked upon as one of the most successful leaders.

In 1846 Mr. Earnest wedded Miss Mary E. McCoun who was born in Kentucky in February, 1824, daughter of Joseph and Esther (Eccles) McCoun, who were both born and raised near Harrodsburg, Ky., in which State they both died, the former when Mrs. Earnest was quite small, and the latter when eighty years of age. There were four children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. McCoun, namely: Arethusa is the deceased wife of Merritt Cunningham; William, born in 1822, married Miss Vienna Peters, and settled in Missouri, where he was engaged as a merchant, later going to Arizona, where he was killed by the Indians, leaving his widow with three children, the latter now residing in Missouri; Joseph, born in 1826, married Miss Louisa Pepper, and engaged in farming and distilling in Kentucky, later removing to Fort Worth, Texas, where his wife died, after which event he returned to Kentucky and there died in 1897, the father of three sons and three daughters—Perla, Hetty, Lueta, Robert, Samuel, and Joseph; and Mrs. Mary E. Earnest completes the family. Mrs. Earnest was educated in the Springfield Convent in Kentucky, and received a musical and literary education. She has, notwithstanding her life on the frontier, managed to keep up her education and is to-day a highly cultured woman and a fluent conversationalist. Her long years in home making in the early days are intensely interesting, and it is difficult to believe that one is listening to her own experiences. She proved herself a true helpmeet of her husband, ably seconding him in all his efforts, and taking an interest in the things about her. Eight children blessed their union: (1) Laura, born in New Digging in May, 1847, was educated partly by the Sisters of Sinsinawa, Wis., and later in Miss Edwards Seminary in New Haven, Conn., where she acquired a good classical and musical education. She married William H. Hughes, an employe in the post office at Milwaukee. She has no children of her own, but has adopted the daughter, Marie, of her deceased sister. (2) Kate, born in August, 1849, was educated in the Sinsinawa Mound Sisters School, whence she was graduated. She married John Dunlop, a railroad man, and has three children, Laura, Earnest and John. (3) Arethusa, born April 15, 1851, was graduated from the Sisters School at Sinsinawa Mound, and married Walter Le Clerc, of Prairie du Chien, Wis., now of Milwaukee, and has one daughter, Genevieve. (4) James E., born April 4, 1853, was educated in the high school of Shullsburg, and is now engaged in farming in Lafayette county. He married Miss May Patton, and has four children, Edna, Clara, William and Bertha. (5) Ida B., born April 1, 1855, was educated at the Sisters School at Sinsinawa Mound, and married Frank A. Porter, a farmer, and died June 29, 1892, leaving two children, Eugene and Marie. (6) Grattan, born in May, 1857, received a high-school education, and now superintends his mother's farm. He married Jennie Franklin, and has one son, Roswell. (7) Walter, born Feb. 22, 1859, received a good education, and is now chief clerk of the mail service at Helena, Mont. He married Miss Bertha Cunningham, of St. Paul, Minn. (although a native of Toledo, Ohio), and became the father of three children, all of whom died young. (8) Charles D., born Nov. 8, 1861, was educated in the home schools, and married Miss Eva Willcox, of Milwaukee, where he is employed by the St. Paul R. R. They have three children, Chester, Earling and Viola. This family is Roman Catholic in religion.

JOHN H. COOK, an energetic and progressive farmer residing on section 3, Waterloo township, Grant county, was born July 5, 1839, in Lewisburg, Greenbrier Co., W. Va., a son of Richard and Mary Ann (Smith) Cook, also natives of that State. The family have been residents of Virginia for several generations. In 1849 Richard Cook, his wife and eight children emigrated to Ohio. He died in Kentucky, while visiting a brother, after which his widow came to Grant county, Wis., but spent her last days at the home of a daughter in Minnesota, where her death occurred. Of their eight children, only three are now (1901) living: Addison, a resident of Little Grant, Grant county; Mrs. Elizabeth Mooney, of Cassville; and John H., of this sketch. All but one of the five who have passed away grew to mature years, Thomas dying at the age of fourteen. The others were Davis, William, James and Francis.

John H. Cook, the immediate subject of this biography, came to Grant county from Ohio in 1861, and was engaged in mining for a time. In 1862 he was married to Miss Letitia Tindell, a daughter of James Tindell, and to them were born nine children, four sons and five daughters, namely: Nettie, wife of Arthur Shanilley; Thomas, a resident of Lancaster township, Grant county; Mary, wife of John Wilson; Maria, wife of William Good, of Barron county, Wis.; Davis, a student at the Keokuk Medical College, where he was graduated in the class of 1901; William: Olive, wife of James Kendall; Everett, a student of dental surgery; and Theresa.

After his marriage Mr. Cook continued mining until he entered the service of his country during the Civil war. On Sept. 1, 1864, he enlisted in Company H, 43d Wis. V. I., and remained at the front until hostilities ceased, being honorably discharged at Nashville, Tenn., June 24, 1865. He was in active service with his regiment all of the time with the exception of about two months, when confined in the hospital by illness, being taken sick at Johnsonville by drinking foul water. Since the war Mr. Cook has engaged in farming, and now has a pleasant home in Waterloo township, where the family reside. His health was greatly impaired by his army service, and he has since suffered from heart trouble. He is one of the well-known citizens of his township and is justly deserving of honorable mention in the history of his adopted county.

THOMAS BUNBURY, who resides on Section 20, Town 6, Range 5, East, town of Brigham, Iowa county, is a veteran of the Civil war, in which he served as a member of Company A, 49th Wis. Vol. Infantry.

Mr. Bunbury was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, Jan. 4, 1827, and is a son of Patrick and Mary Bunbury. When he was a small boy he lost his mother, and his father came to this country to make a home for his children, stopping for a time in Pennsylvania, and then making his way to Michigan, where he secured a large tract of government land, where he was presently joined by his children Thomas, Henry, and a daughter who has been dead these many years. Henry Bunbury lives in St. Joseph, Mich., where he is greatly respected.

Thomas Bunbury came to the United States when a lad of ten years, in the company of his uncle, John Bunbury, and two sisters of that gentleman, and for a number of years lived with his father in Michigan. In the fall of 1846 he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, locating first in Mineral Point, and has made his home in Iowa county to the present time. For a time he was engaged in farming and mining, and then located on the farm noted above. This was in March, 1853, and under his industrious cultivation it has become one of the choice and desirable farms of the county.

Mr. Bunbury was married in November, 1852, to Miss Bridget McCann, by whom he had the following children: William Henry, John Edward, Thomas, Mary, Jane, Amelia, Anna, Jane, Bertha, and Agnes. Mrs. Bridget Bunbury died in 1870, and the following year Mr. Bunbury was married to Miss Ann Williams, by whom he has had one son, Thomas P.

Thomas Bunbury enlisted in the Union Army in February, 1865, and did faithful work in camp and field with his regiment until he received an honorable discharge at the close of the war. Returning to his farm when he laid aside his soldier blue, he has proved himself a thorough farmer, an honest and hard-working man, and is regarded as an upright and honorable man in every respect. His health was quite impaired by his military life, and he has never been perfectly well since his return to civil life. He was a good soldier, and is an honorable and conscientious citizen of the community in which he lives.

FREDERICK FREDRICKSEN, a venerable member of the farming community of Bergen, Clinton township, Rock county, has a personal character which intensifies the respect his years command.

Mr. Fredricksen was born June 25, 1829, near Stavanger, Norway, and he was brought up under the most unfriendly conditions. His father died when he was only three years old, and his mother seven years later, and the young lad was left to push his way unaided among strangers. He had practically no school education, having spent but three weeks in a school in all his youthful years; but he was attentive and observant, and has learned much as he has journeyed through life. At twenty-one Mr. Fredricksen came to the United States, and straightway made his way to Wisconsin, where he at once found farm work. He was a farm laborer for four years, saved his money, and was fore-handed enough at the end of that time to buy the farm that is now known as "Oak Hill" and consists of 113 acres located near the town of Bergen, in Clinton township.

Mr. Fredricksen and Mrs. Martha Larsen, daughter of a farmer in Norway, and the widow of Sven Larsen, were married in 1852. Mrs. Fredricksen came to this country in 1846, when a girl, in company with her brother. By her first marriage she had one son, Louis Larsen, who is now a resident of Chicago, and she has borne Mr. Fredricksen one daughter, Betsy, now the wife of A. V.

Peters, the manager of a coal and lumber company in Clinton. Mr. and Mrs. Peters have had five children, three living: Martha Elizabeth, Mary Frances and Luella; two sons died in infancy. Mr. Fredricksen's father, also named Frederick, was a sailor. He died in about 1832, at the age of forty-five. He married Carrie Johnnason, who died in 1839, at the same age as her husband.

Mr. Fredricksen is a member of the Lutheran Church, and a man of sterling character. He is a Republican, and has been active in promoting the advancement of that party since its organization. He is a highly respected citizen of the community.

A. W. MOORE, proprietor of the "Park Hotel" in Platteville, Grant county, was born in Lafayette county, same State, in March, 1830, and was the first white child born there. His father, Col. John Moore, was born in 1784 in North Carolina, and his mother, Nancy (Stalcup) Moore, was born in Tennessee in 1800. They came to Wisconsin after marriage, in 1827.

John Moore was a colonel of Reserves in the war of 1812, and fought under Gen. Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, and in 1832, during the Black Hawk war, had command of the fort at Mineral Point, Wis. In 1833 he settled on a farm near Belmont, Iowa county, Wis., on which he lived until 1849, when he passed away, his wife surviving until 1864. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Col. Moore was a Jackson Democrat, and a leader in the early politics of the state. He was a lifelong and close personal friend of Gen. Jackson. To Col. Moore and his wife came six children, in the following order: (1) Elvira J., born in Tennessee, in 1820, married Moses Whiteside in 1836, lived for a few years in Galena, Ill., and then moved to Belmont, Lafayette Co., Wis., where Mr. Whiteside died, leaving no children; Mrs. Whiteside then came to Platteville, where she died in 1899 at the home of her brother, A. W. Moore. (2) Emily P. Moore was born in Missouri in 1827, was principally educated in the schools of Lafayette county, Wis., and in 1845 was married to Dr. Edward Cronin, a native of Philadelphia, Penn., and a son of Edward Cronin, who was born in Ireland. Dr. Cronin was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, began practice in Platteville in 1844, and died 1893, leaving his widow with one son, Dr. Frank M. Cronin, at present practicing in Lancaster, Wis. Edward Cronin was the leading physician of Platteville in his day, was a profound scholar, having a knowledge of several languages, and was prominent in the better circles of society; his widow assisted in the management of the Park Hotel, in conjunction with her brother, A. W., until her death in April, 1900. (3) A. W. Moore is mentioned below. (4) Mary T. Moore, born in Lafayette county in 1832 was educated at the convent at Galena, Ill., and was married to E. B. Eastman, of the State of Maine, and a prominent merchant of Decorah, Iowa, who at his death left his widow with one son—Chauncey B. Eastman, now proprietor of the De Soto House at Galena, Ill. Mrs. Eastman subsequently married Thomas Hugin, but is again a widow and lives at the Park Hotel in Platteville, of which she is part owner. (5) Sarah A. Moore, born on the old homestead at Belmont, Lafayette county, was married to Peter Parkinson, a prominent and wealthy citizen of the county. This lady died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dr. W. Peck, in Darlington, Wis., April 7, 1899, leaving three children: Nancy M., wife of Dr. Peck, the leading physician of Darlington; Philip A., on the old homestead in Lafayette township; Mrs. Elizabeth E. Parkinson, a graduate from the State University at Madison, and now residing in Darlington with her brother-in-law, Dr. Peck. (6) Capt. John P. Moore, the youngest of the family, was born in Lafayette county, and when the Civil war broke out, raised a company of volunteers, of which he was commissioned captain, served over four years, was wounded in battle and still carries a rebel bullet in his leg. He is now employed at Fort Worth, Tex., as live stock agent for the Frisco Railroad Company.

A. W. Moore was educated in an academical course under J. L. Packard in Lafayette county. In 1850 he went to California, and for nine years was engaged in merchandising and in freighting his goods to the mines. In 1859 he returned to Lafayette county, lived on the family farm until 1878, when he married Mrs. Helen Ruble, of North McGregor, Iowa, widow of Henry Ruble, and then removed to Cassville, Grant county. In 1883 he came from Cassville to Platteville and has ever since had charge of the Park Hotel. Politically he is a Democrat. Mr. Moore is a genial, whole-souled man and one of the most popular landlords in Grant county. His hotel is equipped with every modern convenience, and his table is unsurpassed by any in a city of the size of Platteville, East, West, North or South.

RHEINHARD EVERSOLL. Among the honored pioneers of Grant county must be numbered Rheinhard Eversoll, a well-known farmer of Waterloo township, and one of the gallant defenders of the Union during the Civil war. He was born May 7, 1827, a son of Christopher and Elizabeth Eversoll, both natives of Switzerland, where they were reared and married. On their emigration to America they proceeded to Lord Selkirk's settlement in British America, and from there went to St. Louis. In the latter part of the year 1826, the family came to Grant county, and located at what is now Hazel Green, but was then known as Hard Scrabble. There the father engaged in mining for a time, and then removed with his family to Beetown, where the mother died. Subsequently he returned to Hazel Green, where he passed the last years of his life at the home of a daughter. During the greater part of his business career he followed the occupation of mining, and was always esteemed as a good citizen. His death occurred May 18, 1872, a few days after having celebrated the seventy-eighth anniversary of his birth. He and his wife became the parents of eight children, but only two, Rheinhard and Mrs. Elizabeth Dudley, of Lancaster, are now living, in 1900. All but three reached adult age. One son died on the ocean when the family were coming to the New World. The youngest son, Ferdinand, was a member of the 6th Wis. V. I., during the Civil war, which was a part of the Iron Brigade, and was killed in the battle of Gettysburg.

Rheinhard Eversoll has made his home in Grant county, of which his parents were early settlers. He was reared to the occupation of mining, but since the war of the Rebellion has engaged in farming. On Aug. 6, 1862, he donned the blue, becoming a member of Company G, 33d Wis. V. I., which was a part of the Army of the Cumberland. He participated in many important engagements, including the battle of Coldwater, Miss., April 19, 1863; the siege of Vicksburg; and Banks' Red river expedition. He was also in the battles of Yellow Bayou, May 18, 1864; Tupelo, July 14, 1864; and Old Town Creek, the following day. He was at Nashville under the command of General Thomas, and then went to Mobile, taking part in the siege of Spanish Fort. The war having ended, and his services being no longer needed, Mr. Eversoll was honorably discharged at Vicksburg, Aug. 9, 1865, and reached home just three years from the time he entered the service.

In 1848 Mr. Eversoll married Miss Sarah Bryant, and nine children were born of this union, but only three are now living, namely: Thomas, Adeline and Lincoln. The others had nearly all attained to mature years when they passed away. The eldest daughter, Martha Jane, was her father's housekeeper for a number of years. For a short time Mr. Eversoll lived in Cassville township, but has made his home in Waterloo township for many years. He has witnessed almost the entire growth and development of this region, and has been actively interested in its progress. In his political relations he is a Republican, having supported every presidential candidate of that party since voting for Fremont in 1856. Religiously he is an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. As has been seen from the above record, Mr. Eversoll was actively engaged during the whole of his military service, and took part in many of the most important engagements of the war. Considering the weary marches, the arduous campaigns and severe battles in which he participated he is still well preserved, though as he grows older he feels the effects of his army service more. As an honored veteran of the Rebellion, a prominent pioneer of the county, and a representative man of his community, he is worthy of the high regard in which he is uniformly held.

JOSEPH J. HEATHCOCK, one of the most influential and patriotic citizens of the village of Linden, Iowa county, Wis., was born there September 23, 1841, a son of John and Ann (Jones) Heathcock, who were among the earliest pioneers of that place.

John Heathcock was born in Staffordshire, England, where his father lived and died, although he once paid a visit to the United States. About 1830, John Heathcock came to the New World, and found employment in the Pennsylv-vania cold fields, and then, in company with his brother William, came to Wisconsin, reaching Mineral Point during the Black Hawk war. They helped to build and garrison the fort at that place, and when the excitement subsided, they located at Linden. Mr. Heathcock took up government land in Grant and Iowa counties, and speculated to some extent in real estate. He engaged in mining quite extensively, the ore being smelted at Linden, and then drawn by ox teams to Galena, Ill. He was very enterprising and assisted in the building of the first church and school house in the place, both buildings being of logs, and was, in all ways, a most useful and exemplary citizen. In politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican, and was the first to hold the office of town treasurer. He died Sept. 18, 1887, at the age of seventy-nine years. His wife, Ann Jones, who was also born in Staffordshire, where her marriage was consummated, died in April, 1881, aged sixty-seven years. They were the parents of ten children, of whom nine are living; Catherine Ann, now Mrs. W. H. Phillips, of Linden; John W., of Butte City, Montana; Joseph J., of this sketch; Sarah, now Mrs. Christopher Dolphin, of the town of Mifflin; Thomas J., of Linden; Martha Jane, now Mrs. John T. Wicks, of Bessemer, Mich.; Mary Josephine, now Mrs. William Passmore, of Pickford, Mich.; Daniel Clark, of Leadville, Colo.; Charles W., who died in 1887; and Samuel, of Linden, Wisconsin.

Joseph J. Heathcock grew up on his father's farm and received a common school education. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Co. H., 7th Wis. V. I., and was discharged in July, 1865. He took part in the second battle of Bull Run, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, and thirteen or fourteen minor engagements. At South Mountain, Maryland, he was wounded in the right side and disabled for six weeks, and at the battle of the Wilderness was captured and passed ten months in Andersonville, Florence and other prisons, and when finally exchanged, was sent home on veteran furlough, just before the assassination of President Lincoln. After the war was over Mr. Heathcock went to Tennessee, where he located coal mines and passed four years in their operation, and then returned to Linden, where he owns a fine farm of 170 acres with good improvements, and operates valuable mines of lead and zinc on his own land. These mines produce about 600 tons per annum, the greater part of which is marketed at Mineral Point.

Joseph J. Heathcock

On Oct. 19, 1887, Mr. Heathcock was married to Miss Louise Humbert, daughter of David and Mary Elizabeth (Spencer) Humbert, who located in Mineral Point about 1855. David Humbert was born in Bradford Co., Penn., and died in the town of Waldwick, Iowa county, Aug. 11, 1885, aged seventy-nine years; he was a carpenter by trade. Mrs. Humbert was born in Jersey Shore, Lycoming Co., Penn., of English descent in paternal lines, and Scotch-Irish in maternal, and died March 9, 1861, at the age of thirty-three. Mrs. Louise (Humbert) Heathcock was educated at the Platteville Normal School, and for four years thereafter was a successful teacher. By her marriage with Mr. Heathcock she has become the mother of one son, Ernest Harrison. The family is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which Mr. Heathcock is a trustee. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and for eleven years served as town clerk, and for three years as chairman of the town and a member of the county board. Socially he belongs to a number of local societies, and is a charter member and past master of Linden Lodge, No. 206, F. & A. M., Iowa Chapter No. 6, and Mineral Point Council, and is a most active worker in Geo. H. Legate Post, G. A. R., at Mineral Point.

LEWIS MCKAHAN. Among the well-known and highly esteemed farmer-citizens, of Albany, Green county, is Lewis McKahan, who has been a resident of the village since 1886, where he owns a comfortable home. Mr. McKahan was born in Washington county, Penn., thirty miles south of Pittsburg, March 18, 1821, a son of Daniel and Esther (Irwin) McKahan, the former a native of Pennsylvania, the latter of Ireland. The grandparents of our subject were all natives of Ireland, who settled in Pennsylvania, where they died, leaving large families. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. McKahan were: Lewis, our subject; Mary, the widow of Alexander Cunningham, lives in Middletown, Penn.; Esther M., the widow of Berry Mellick, of Knox county, Ohio; and Robert, who lives in Washington county, Penn. The father of our subject was a farmer and stock raiser, who moved to Knox county, Ohio, where he remained for some time, but returned to Pennsylvania, where he died about 1879, aged seventy-seven years. His first wife died in 1857; she was a member of the United Presbyterian Church. His second wife was Mary Moffit, who survived him several years.

Lewis McKahan was reared on the farm in Washington county, Penn., receiving his education at the district schools, and becoming proficient enough to engage in teaching while quite a young man. After the family's removal to Ohio, Mr. McKahan gave some time to teaching, but subsequently made arrangements to enter the business of sheepraising, in connection with farming, and was immediately successful. In October, 1861, he left Ohio, came to Wisconsin, and settled on a farm of 140 acres three miles northeast of Monroe, and there the family lived until 1881, when he rented his farm and removed to Monroe, where he was pleasantly located for five and one-half years. In the spring of 1886, our subject and family moved to Albany and have now one of the most comfortable homes in the village, where he lives retired from active life, although local matters engage his leisurely attention.

In 1846 Mr. McKahan was married to Ziporah Ealy, a daughter of Peter and Mary (Horn) Ealy, and three children were born of this union: George W., Mary Ellen, and James H. Mary Ellen, the only survivor, married Rev. N. A. Sunderlin, a Methodist minister, stationed at Woodstock, Ill., and has three children: Lulu B., wife of Willard Chilcote; Gertrude, and Harold. Mrs. McKahan died in Feb., 1854, aged twenty-eight years, having been a consistent member of the Christian Church. The second marriage of Mr. McKahan was celebrated on Sept. 5, 1856, when Miss Keziah Parks, who was born April 23, 1836, a daughter of James and Christianna (Ealy) Parks, became his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Parks were born and reared in Pennsylvania, and of their family of thirteen children the following are now living: William; Keziah; James, of Sutherland, Iowa; John, of Chicago; Mary, wife of Fletcher Busick, of Topeka, Kans.; Isaiah, of Oskaloosa, Iowa; Florence Jeanette, wife of Corwin Johnson, of Huron, S. Dak.; and Leonard, of Marshalltown, Iowa. Mr. Parks came from Ohio to Wisconsin and entered 300 acres of land, seven miles north of Monroe, in 1849, there reared his family and died in 1897, aged eighty-six, his wife dying in the spring of 1899, at the same age. Both they and family have always been connected with the Christian Church. The grandparents of Mrs. McKahan were John Ealy and James Parks. For more than forty years Mr. McKahan and his estimable wife have been members of the Christian Church, where they are highly esteemed. Formerly our subject was a Democrat, but since the organization of the Republican party, has espoused its principles. Both he and his wife possess the respect of the community where they have lived upright lives and been worthy descendants of fine old families.

CYRUS W. PATTERSON, a prosperous and prominent representative of the farming population of Grant county, was born July 18, 1858, a son of Parious P. and Elizabeth (Debsen) Patterson.

The father of our subject was born in the town of Potsdam, N. Y., in July, 1812, of Scottish parentage, and at the time of his birth, his father, who took an active part in the war of 1812, was a prisoner of war. His mother was a cousin of Ethan Allen, of Revolutionary fame. Parious P. Patterson married Elizabeth Dobson, who was born in 1826, in Yorkshire, England. When a young man he moved from New York into Illinois, where he lived a year before coming to Hazel Green, in 1833. He went to work in the lead mines, and for a number of years this was his employment. In 1837 he "took up" a quarter section of government land, and, clearing it, made his home there during his remaining years. The first house in which he lived was a small log shanty, which gave way to a large brick house in 1865, and there he lived until his death, in September, 1899. Mrs. Patterson died in December, 1894. They were members of the first Methodist Church organized in this community, and Mr. Patterson contributed liberally to the first building. In the building of the first school house in Hazel Green he also took a prominent part. He was a Whig and a Republican in politics, holding a number of local offices in his lifetime.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were the parents of eight children, and four of their sons lived to maturity: (1) Enoch R. was born at the present home June 26, 1851, attended the State Normal at Platteville, where he received a good education, and for several terms taught school in Hazel Green township. At one time he was a merchant in Fair View. He is now a teacher, being principal of the school at Gratiot, Wis. Mr. Patterson married Miss Alice Straw, of Grant county, and they have five living children—Laura (graduate of the State Normal at Platteville), Percival, Jessie, Roy, and Delbert. (2) Charles, born Nov. 23, 1853, engaged in stock farming in Oregon. He married Miss Almyra Eastman, a lady of Canada, and is the father of seven children, Frank, Ethel, Asenath, Mabel, Cyrus, Bertha, and Albert. (3) Parious, born in July, 1856, was an invalid throughout his life, and died in July, 1895. (4) Cyrus W. is the subject of this article.

Cyrus W. Patterson obtained his early education in the local schools of Hazel Green, and for three years was a pupil in the State Normal at Platteville. After leaving school he taught a term in the town of Hazel Green, and then became manager of the home farm, an arrangement which continued during the later years of his father's life.

In 1886 Mr. Patterson married Miss Mary E. Gray, of Lafayette county, daughter of Samuel and Mary Gray, very prominent English people of Platteville; Mrs. Patterson was a student of the high school of Galena before her marriage. They came to the old homestead, here making a permanent home, and Mrs. Patterson died in 1898, leaving one son, Cyril O., born in 1889. Mrs. Patterson was a member of the Methodist Church, and a woman of a fine character and sweet spirit. Our subject has been for many years one of the leading Republicans of the town, serving on the town board, and holding other positions of honor and trust, and is a man of sterling worth and genuine character. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

F. A. ELWELL, a prominent retired farmer and wealthy citizen of Cassville, has been a resident of Grant county for almost sixty years, and has not only watched with interest its growth and development, but has borne an active part in the work of improvement. It was in 1842 that he came from Lee county, Iowa, to Hazel Green, Wis., and he has since been identified with the interests of this section of the State.

Mr. Elwell was born in Preble county, Ohio, in 1831, a son of James Elwell, a soldier of the war of 1812, who enlisted at Philadelphia and was in active service. The father was born in New Jersey Jan. 4, 1789, and at an early day left his native State, moving to Preble county, Ohio, where he was united in marriage with Miss Frances Kellow, a native of Virginia, and a daughter of John and Frances Aminza (Atkins) Kellow. Her father was one of the heroes of the Revolutionary war, and an early settler of Ohio, where both he and his wife died. About 1834 or 1835 James Elwell moved to Lee county, Iowa, and made his home there until coming to Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., in 1842. There he was first engaged in mining, but having received a land warrant for his services in the war of 1812 he in 1852 secured a tract of land in Waterloo township, and in the midst of the wilderness developed and improved a farm, making his home thereon until his death, which occurred March 23, 1877. His wife died on the home farm in Waterloo township about 1861. In their family were nine children, namely: Joel, who died in Lee county, Iowa, at the age of twenty-seven years; Mary Ann, Mrs. Robinson, who died near Topeka, Kans., in 1893; John, who was drowned in the Mississippi river in 1855; Sarah, Mrs. Hall, who died in Hazel Green, Grant county, in 1846; James, a retired farmer of Waterloo township, who died in Cassville in January, 1897; Theodore, who died on the old homestead in Waterloo township in August, 1898, in his seventy-second year; William, who died in the same township in 1872, aged forty-three; F. A., the only one now living; and Eliza, Mrs. Droulard, who died in Lincoln, Neb., in 1885.

At the age of eleven years F. A. Elwell accompanied his parents on their removal to Grant county, and after completing his education in the public schools here followed mining at Hazel Green for a time. In 1852 he purchased an eighty-acre tract of land in Waterloo township, and immediately turned his attention to its improvement and cultivation. Meeting with success in his farming operations, he added to his landed possessions from time to time, until he owned 500 acres of valuable land, in one body. This place he improved in an excellent manner, and continued to successfully engage in general farming and stock raising for many years, but is now living a retired life, in Cassville.

In Waterloo township Mr. Elwell was married, in 1859, to Miss Harriet Zimmerman, a native of Wayne county, Ohio, and a daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Kaley) Zimmerman natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively. At an early day her father moved to Potosi, Grant Co., Wis., and his last days were spent in Beetown. By occupation he was a farmer. His first wife, the mother of Mrs. Elwell, died in Wayne county, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Elwell have five children: Minnie, Mrs. Doll, of Waterloo township, who has four children, Mary, Otho, Frank and Hobart Elwell; Alma, who married May Smith, and lives on the home farm; Frank S., who married Ella Smith, and is also on the farm; William, who is now residing in Colorado; and Ida, Mrs. Alcorn, a resident of Boulder, Colorado.

In 1891 Mr. Elwell and his wife left the farm and moved to Cassville, where they have a pleasant home, and are surrounded by all the comforts of life. They are earnest and consistent members of the Seventh-day Advent Church, and are highly respected and esteemed by all who know them. Socially Mr. Elwell is a member of Cassville Lodge, No. 235, F. & A. M., of which he is senior deacon, and politically he is a staunch supporter of the Republican party. He formerly took quite an active and prominent part in public affairs, assisted in organizing the school districts of his township, was a member of the town board, and efficiently served as justice of the peace for several years.

JOSEPH DELLER. The story of Mr. Deller's life reads almost like a romance. Born in Bavaria Jan. 12, 1829, he has been the architect of his own fortune. Beginning life in a strange land at an early age as a peddler, carrying a pack on his back, he has blazed out his own path to success through shrewd common sense, unflagging industry and unvarying integrity. But the narrative speaks for itself, and had best be told in plain, invariable detail. In reciting the events of such a life as his brevity is better than buncombe, and facts are to be preferred to adulation.

Joseph Deller was one of a family of three sons and five daughters born to his father, Isaac Deller. His parents were satisfied with their life and position in the country in which they had grown to maturity, married and raised their children, and they died in their native land, respected for their upright life no less than for fidelity to their faith. But the young are fond of change and adventure, and quick to perceive and grasp an opportunity to improve their condition in life, and the children of this worthy couple turned their eyes toward the New World, with its broader freedom and its wider possibilities. The first to cross the water was a sister of Joseph Deller, Janet, who accompanied her husband, Abraham Michaelbacher, about 1840. They settled in the city of New York, where they died in February, 1900, leaving a family. In 1846 Joseph and his brother Abraham also came to this country. Mrs. Sarah Hirsch, of New York City, and Joseph, our subject, are now the only survivors of the family.

For a time Mr. Deller carried a peddler's pack through New Jersey, but, believing that he would meet with better success in a territory where stores were less numerous, he made his way to Michigan. There he carried around a stock of miscellaneous merchandise weighing seventy-five or eighty pounds, selling his wares at a remunerative profit to the dwellers in sparsely settled districts. At that period of Michigan's history, however, malaria was almost universally prevalent, and the young Bavarian fell an easy victim to the scourge. Upon recovering his health, in a measure, he turned his back upon the Northwest, returning to New York City, where he found employment from 1847 to 1851 as a tailor. Yet his quick comprehension had perceived the possibilities of the Northwest, and in the latter year, together with a friend, A. Boscowitz, he went from New York to Mineral Point, Wis., where they engaged in business as proprietors of a general store. After a partnership extending over several years Mr. Boscowitz withdrew from the firm to engage in business as a wholesale furrier, elsewhere. Mr. Deller continued to carry on the establishment alone, and became one of the most prosperous merchants at Mineral Point. After 1865 he confined his energies solely to the sale of dry goods and clothing, opening a merchant tailoring establishment which proved highly successful. For thirty years Mr. Deller engaged in trade at Mineral Point, and in 1891, having acquired a handsome competence through the exercise of sound business judgment and fair dealing, he retired to enjoy a richly earned rest.

Not long after settling in his new home Mr. Deller married the widow of his brother Abraham, who, as has been said, emigrated from Bavaria with him, in 1846. The maiden name of this lady was Regine Gundelfinger. She was born April 12, 1825, and married Mr. Deller Dec. 31, 1855, her first husband having died two years previously. Two children were born to her first marriage, and six to her second. Fannie, the eldest, is the wife of Henry Gunzy, who is in the employ of the United States Government at Caibarien, Cuba, where they reside. Emma married William Strouse, of La Crosse, Wis. Abraham married Tillie Guttenstein, and has his home in Mineral Point. Lillie is now Mrs. M. Iskowich, of Streator, Ill. Minna is the wife of Leopold Freudenfeld, of Milwaukee. Nettie married Henry Zimmer, of that city. Clara is Mrs. Adolph Iskowich. Isaac, the youngest of the family, married Nettie, daughter of John J. Oswald, of Lancaster, Grant county. There are twenty grandchildren. Mrs. Deller died in 1891, and our subject was married a second time, to Eva Baer, who was born at West Bend, Wis., daughter of Lazer and Dina (Kahn) Baer, natives of Alsace, France, who came to Wisconsin about 1854. Mr. Baer engaged in mercantile business at West Bend, where he died about 1866. His wife died in Milwaukee, Sept. 26, 1889.

Mr. Deller is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, having joined the same in 1853, and took the Royal Arch degree in 1855. For over half a century he has been a resident of Mineral Point, taking a deep and active interest in all that has tended toward its up-building, and, at the age of seventy-two years, enjoys the undisguised and universal esteem of his fellow citizens. His palatial residence, built in 1883, is considered the finest home in the city.

JOHN PHILLIPS WILLIAMS, a successful business man of Linden, Iowa county, was born in Machen, Monmouth, Wales, March 3, 1854, a son of John and Ann (Branch) Williams, natives, respectively, of Withel and Guennap, Cornwall, England.

John Williams, the father, was the son of an inn-keeper at Withel, Cornwall. He had in his possession a seal used by his ancestors for many generations, which is now in the possession of our subject. John Williams engaged in mining in Wales and elsewhere, in 1858 came to the United States, and is supposed to have been killed in a mine soon after his arrival. He married Ann Branch, daughter of John and Ann Branch, the former of whom was a chain maker, and lived and died in Cornwall; the latter passed away at the advanced age of eighty years. Mrs. Ann (Branch) Williams became the wife of a Mr. Harper, of Bodmin, Cornwall, and is still living. By her first marriage, besides John Phillips, there were a son George, who now resides in northern Minnesota; and two daughters, Mrs. Ellen S. Oke, of Nanstallon, Cornwall; and Mrs. Celia Simpson, of Paington, Devonshire.

John Phillips Williams passed the greater part of his boyhood in Devonshire, and when fifteen years of age he joined the English Navy, passing three years in the service of his country; he also had a taste of land service during the Ashantee war. After leaving the government service he engaged in lead mining in Scotland, and in gypsum mining in Sussex. In 1876 he came to the United States, locating in Colorado, and spending two years in gold and silver mining there. He then came to Linden, Wis., but after two months went to Quinnesec, Mich., and there engaged in iron mining until 1884, in the meantime passing six months in Iowa, in the coal mines of that State. In 1884 Mr. Williams went to Tower, Minn., but after spending two years in the iron mines engaged in the flour and feed business, until 1891, in that year locating in Linden, where he has since been engaged in zinc mining, meeting with great success in his work, as indeed he has wherever he has made his home. He now employs some dozen or more men, and his mine produces from twenty to thirty tons per month, the ore being drawn by teams to Mineral Point. Besides his mining interests in Wisconsin he is the owner of considerable real estate in Minnesota, and also owns a charming cottage in Linden, where he resides.

Since becoming a citizen of the United States Mr. Williams has ever found himself in accord with the principles of the Republican party, and has taken an active interest in the political questions of the day. He has served three times as president of Linden village, and was a delegate to the Senatorial Convention held at Darlington in 1892. He has also served most acceptably as delegate to the State Convention, going to Milwaukee in 1896, and also in 1898, and declined to accept the office again in 1900, although an active supporter of the candidacy of Robert La Follette in both 1898 and 1900; he did considerable campaign work in northern Wisconsin in 1900. He has been a public-spirited man wherever his lot has been cast, and he served as city recorder of Tower, Minn., and as deputy coroner of Vermilion Iron Range. Mr. Williams became a member of the Knights of Pythias in 1886, and is a charter member of Achilles Lodge at Linden, of which he has served as secretary the greater part of the time, and has passed all the chairs; he is also a member and secretary of Highland Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Duluth Encampment, having joined the order in Perry, Iowa, in 1880.

On March 10, 1880, Mr. Williams was united in marriage with Miss Mary Ann Poad, who was born in Linden, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Bice) Poad, who came from Cornwall in the early days, and made their home on the frontier.

GEORGE WASHINGTON RYLAND, ex-lieutenant-governor of the State of Wisconsin, and retired banker of Lancaster, Grant county, was born Dec. 19, 1827, near Selbysport, Garrett Co., Md., a son of Sylvester Ryland.

Our subject's father was born in 1796 on a farm, on which place he died at the age of seventy-eight years. His ancestor, Paul Ryland, came from England to America in 1750, when twenty years old, settled in Berks county, Penn., was there married, and became the father of three sons, John, Andrew and James, the eldest of whom, with the father, served in the Continental army with Washington. John settled in Maryland after peace was declared, and from him is descended the gentleman whose name opens this biographical sketch; Andrew settled in Kentucky, and a number of his descendants went to Missouri, where they attained prominence—one as a judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and others as judges of lesser courts; James died young. The mother of George W. Ryland bore the maiden name of Hannah Collier, was born in Somerset county, Penn., in 1803, and died at the age of sixty-two years. Her father, who was born in 1766, was of English and Dutch parentage. Her mother was born in 1764, and was of German extraction.

George W. Ryland had but limited opportunities for an education in early youth, and after he left home, at the age of twenty-one years, he attended a graded school five months, working mornings, noons and evenings for his board. Subsequently he worked on a farm at $12 per month, taught a district school in the winter season, and in April, 1853, settled permanently in Lancaster. His first employment here was in the hay field for Gov. Dewey. The same season he engaged as a clerk in the store of John Alcorn, where he was employed for fourteen months. In the fall of 1854 the mercantile firm of G. W. Ryland & Co., of which Simon E. and John P. Lewis were members, was organized. The Alcorn store was at the present Ivey & Webb stand. The new firm was in the building across the alley, the first one to burn in the big fire of 1888. The firm continued in business until May, 1860, when it was dissolved. In 1860 a low two-story building, with gables to the north and south, stood on the ground now occupied by the Baxter block. George Cox kept a grocery store there. Mr. Ryland bought out his business, and in September of that year J. C. Holloway became associated with him, the firm establishing a new general merchandise business, including dry goods. The old building was pulled down, and they built the Milwaukee brick block which now stands there, and which was the first three-story house erected in Lancaster.

Here the firm began, in the fall of 1860, to buy and sell exchange, for this purpose keeping an account with a New York house. They purchased drafts on New York and on London. This business in exchange was conducted by the firm until 1865, in which year they put up a sign across the west end of the building inscribed, "Ryland & Holloway, Bankers." A room in the southwest corner of the building, with glass partitions, was set off from the store as the banking apartment. This was continued in connection with their mercantile business until the year 1869, when the latter branch was sold to Anton Schmitt, and Ryland & Holloway continued exclusively in the banking business until 1874. For this purpose they built and removed into the two-story block adjoining, east of the original block. In this there was a secure vault, the first in the place constructed for banking purposes. In 1874 Mr. Ryland bought out Mr. Holloway and became sole owner of the bank, continuing alone in the business until Oct. 1, 1880. At this date Richard Meyer, who had been the bank bookkeeper for a number of years, and his son, Richard Meyer, Jr., became partners, and the firm constituted of these three was organized under the name of "G. W. Ryland & Co." The existence of this firm lasted six and a half years. It was dissolved May 1, 1887, when Mr. Ryland retired, disposing of his interest to his partners.

At this time Mr. Ryland took a rest. He was out of business until the 1st of October, 1888, when, with others, he established the "State Bank of Grant County." Its officers were John Schreiner, president; G. W. Ryland, vice-president; Joseph Bock, cashier. The firm, with the same officers, continued in business for ten and a half years. Mr. Ryland resigned and withdrew April 1, 1899. This date marks the end of a business career running from 1853 to 1899, all but a few years in the banking business, and with no cessation except the short period above mentioned before the opening of the State Bank.

In politics Mr. Ryland is a Republican, was chairman of the town of Lancaster for twenty years, and for seventeen years chairman of the county board. He was for two terms State Senator from Grant county, and for two terms was lieutenant-governor. He was postmaster at Lancaster when Pierce was President, and again when Lincoln was President. In 1872 he was a delegate from his district to the National Republican Convention at Philadelphia that renominated Grant.

CALVIN MORSE, now living a retired life in Monroe, Green county, was born in Erie county, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1832, a son of Milton M. and Marie R. (Pierce) Morse. The father was born in New Hampshire, and the mother in Connecticut. They had five children, three of whom are now living: Calvin; Elias C., of Belleville, Wis.; and Mrs. Orrin Byington, of Wonewoc, Wis. The father was a shoemaker, and a school teacher for a number of years in the East, and in 1854 he came West, and bought land in Exeter township, Green Co., Wis., where he spent the balance of his days, dying in December, 1891, at the age of eighty-five years and five months. His wife died in 1890, when eighty-three years and six months old. They were liberal in their religious faith; he held various town offices when in his prime, being supervisor a number of terms.

Josiah Morse, the father of Milton M., and the grandfather of Calvin, was a native of New Hampshire, and had an English parentage. He died in the East when about seventy-five years old. Calvin Pierce, the father of Marie R., was a native of Connecticut. A farmer, and the father of several sons and daughters, he died in Erie county, N. Y., at the advanced age of eighty-five years.

Calvin Morse spent the first twenty-two years of his life in Erie county, N. Y., where he was reared on the farm, and given an education in the district school. He was a steadfast farmer until 1878, when he was elected sheriff of Green county. In 1884 Mr. Morse was again elected sheriff of the county, and in 1890 was appointed game warden of southwestern Wisconsin, and served about two years. Mr. Morse came West in 1854, and landed in Green county on the first day of May. In company with his father he bought the farm in the town of Exeter, noted above, and here he made his home until his first election to the position of sheriff. When he had served his term he returned to the farm, moving to Monroe permanently in 1881. The farm, which had been increased to 200 acres, was rented until 1898, when it was sold. Mr. Morse owned a half interest in it.

Calvin Morse enlisted in August, 1862, in Company F, 31st Wis. V. I., and served three years at the front. He was in the battles of Peach Tree Creek, the siege of Atlanta, was with Sherman in his march to the sea, participated in many battles and skirmishes, and bore himself as a gallant and loyal soldier throughout that terrible strife. Entering the service as a private, he was discharged a non-commissioned officer. The regiment was in the Grand Review at Washington, and was mustered out at Louisville, Ky. Mr. Morse returned to the home farm in Exeter when the war was over, and resumed the occupations of peaceful life as assiduously as if he had only been away over night.

On April 18, 1872, Mr. Morse was married to Mrs. Martha A. Dunham, daughter of Asa and Caroline (Norton) Wilson. Mr. Morse is a Mason, and is enrolled in Belleville Lodge, No. 74, I. O. O. F., where he has been active for forty-six years. He also belongs to O. F. Pinney Post, No. 102, G. A. R. He is a Republican, and takes pride in the fact that he cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. Mr. Morse owns a good home in Monroe, where he has lived about twenty years, and is very highly respected. The parents of Mrs. Morse were both born in New York. Her father was born near Albany, in Schoharie county, and the mother in Yates county. They had two daughters and one son, and Mrs. Morse is now their only living child. They came to the town of Exeter in 1854, and engaged in farming, buying a tract of fifty-eight acres. In 1864 he died, at the age of fifty-four years. His widow survived until 1885, when she died at the age of seventy years. He was a member of the Christian Church, and his widow united with the Methodist Church. William Wilson, the father of Asa, followed farming, reared a large family, and died when about seventy years old. Mrs. Morse's maternal grandfather was William Norton, a New York farmer, of Scottish descent. In 1846 he came into Green county, Wis., and took up land from the government in the town of Exeter, where he died in 1852.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Morse are well known throughout the county, and are highly esteemed by a wide circle of warm friends. Their long residence in the county, their genial disposition, and their warm-hearted hospitality, make them deservedly popular.

JUDGE JOSEPH T. MILLS was one of the men prominent in the early history of Southwestern Wisconsin. He fought the great battle of the anti-slavery party in the Federal court, and by both word and pen helped to form that public opinion which made the creation of the Republican party a necessity. He was an abolitionist from conviction, when it was considered disgraceful to be one. His childhood was spent in Kentucky, where he had seen the evil of slavery with his own eyes. He was always ready to battle for the right, at any cost to himself, as this incident shows: At one time an Abolitionist lecturer came to Lancaster. He was mobbed, and took refuge with Mr. Mills. The mob followed him to the home, and, planting an old cannon near the house, threatened to blow the house and its occupants into eternity if the lecturer were not delivered into their hands. Mr. Mills was in no wise dismayed. Taking his rifle, he warned them that the first man who moved near that cannon or entered that yard would be shot. His wife stood by him, also armed, and, like many frontier women, she was known to be a sure shot. Gradually one after another of the scowling, howling mob withdrew, until the intrepid couple were left in quiet possession of their home and of the cannon. Meanwhile the lecturer had escaped by a back window, into the woods which surrounded the house. He was not of the heroic mold.

One other time Mr. Mills faced a mob, and nearly unaided cowed it. It was when a young recruit deserted from the garrison at Prairie du Chien. He was followed by a detail from the garrison, and was overtaken near Lancaster. As he did not halt at the command he was shot and killed by the officer commanding the party. This officer was quickly arrested by the civil authorities. The youth of his victim, the feeling that the act, in a time of peace, was unwarrantably brutal, possessed the people, and lynch law was threatened. The mob was led by "some of our best citizens," and they dangled the rope before the eyes of the guilty man. Then Mr. Mills put himself between them and the murderer. He appealed to their sense of honor, their civic pride. He showed them the evil consequences which always follow a community when the law is outraged, and gradually their better sense prevailed. The writer has heard men characterize this protest of Judge Mills as the most eloquent defense of law and the most withering denunciation of lynch law which were ever made in that section of the country. In either of the above instances one can discern the splendid courage of the man, for it has been often said that a man who would face a pack of wolves may well run from a mob of angry men.

Judge Mills was apparently a timid man, but sometimes he dared fate to the extreme. He never sought a fight. In ordinary matters he was pacific to the extreme, but once roused he would not be downed. He was repeatedly told that he would never present his bill of exceptions in the Sherman Booth case to Judge Miller. He never said he would, but the bill was prepared, and when the time came he walked into the court and presented it. Miller refused to sign. Mr. Mills said: "I present you this bill of exceptions for your signature." Miller again refused. Mr. Mills said, "That bill will be signed before you leave the bench," and Miller signed it then and there.

There was a moral force in Mr. Mills which no coward or evil doer could withstand. He was incorruptible. He was a member of the Legislature at the time of the "forty thieves." In the investigation which followed the exposure of that session the agent was asked if he approached J. T. Mills. "No," he replied, "there isn't money enough in the whole United States to buy him." To his profession he has bequeathed the code. Of the Wisconsin code, copied closely from the New York code, he was the father and defender. As a writer recently said of him, "he was ever the advocate of reforms that reformed."

Judge Mills was born in Kentucky in 1811. He died in Denver, Colo., in 1897. During his whole life he was a great student, not only of the law, but of mathematics, sciences and literature. He was a man of extreme modesty, and his sense of innate worth would not allow him to push himself. If his merit was not recognized he would not vaunt it, and many times he was supplanted by those who were much his inferiors. His neighbors and friends thought nothing too good for him. He was judge of the 5th circuit from 1864 to 1872, an office he filled with honor to himself and the circuit, but probably no title ever gave him greater pleasure than the one by which he was universally known in Grant county. "Honest Joe Mills."

RUFUS CLARK WHITCOMB has for the past twenty-two years been the efficient and highly esteemed superintendent of the Poor Farm and County Insane Asylum of Green county, having assumed the responsible and difficult position at the age of thirty years. His long continuance in the office is the best testimonial to his eminent fitness in caring for the wards of the county, where he has resided since he was a year old, or more than half a century. He is a native of the Badger State, having been born in Rock county July 6, 1848.

James Whitcomb, his father, one of the pioneers of Wisconsin, was born May 17, 1812, in New York State, and there married Nancy Goltry, a native of the same State, born Aug. 7, 1814. A farmer by occupation, James

Margaretta F. Whitcomb

R. C. Whitcomb

Whitcomb early in his married life moved West, and lived for four or five years in Indiana. He then purchased eighty acres of land in Rock county, Wis., which he occupied until 1849, in that year trading it for a farm of 120 acres in Mt. Pleasant township, Green county, to which he moved, and where he lived until his death, in 1854, at the age of forty-two. His wife survived him until May 22, 1883, and was sixty-nine years of age at her death. They were devout members of the Baptist Church, in which he was for many years a deacon. Of the seven children of James and Nancy Whitcomb, three sons and four daughters, four survive: Rhoda M., wife of John A. Clemmer, of Monroe; Roxana, wife of E. L. Neal, of Clarksville, Iowa; Rufus C.; and James M., of Albany, Wisconsin.

Isaac Whitcomb, father of James, was born in Maine May 25, 1769, and died Feb. 26, 1816. His wife, Susanna Gregory, was born Sept. 1, 1784, and died July 7, 1839. Paul Goltry, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was born in New Jersey May 24, 1767, and died Sept. 28, 1845. His wife was Rachel Moffett. He was a fine musician, a talented violinist.

Rufus C. Whitcomb was reared in Green county, on a farm. He received his education in the district schools, and, possessing musical talent, he taught singing school for some time in his younger years. He was only six years old when his father died, and by the efforts of his boyhood and youth assisted in the support of his widowed mother and her family. He worked on the home farm, and also rented other lands which he farmed, remaining with his mother until his marriage, June 8, 1874, to Miss Margaretta Fitch, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah J. (Smith) Fitch, natives, respectively, of Ohio and Ireland. James Fitch, the grandfather of Mrs. Whitcomb, served in the war of 1812. He was a farmer of Washington county, Penn., and moved to Ohio, where he died at an advanced age, leaving a large family. His father, James Fitch, was killed in the Revolutionary war. Robert Smith, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Whitcomb, was a native of Ireland, of Scottish lineage. About 1822 he emigrated with his family to America, and settled in Ohio, where he engaged in farming, reared a large family, and lived to the age of eighty-four years. Benjamin Fitch, the father of Mrs. Whitcomb, moved from Ohio to Wisconsin in 1854, settling in Sylvester township, Green county, where he remained until 1869. In that year he moved to Oskaloosa, Iowa, and died in 1897, aged seventy-seven years. His widow survives, a resident of that city. Of their six children five survive: Margaretta, wife of Mr. Whitcomb; Mary, wife of L. P. Stanton, of Oskaloosa, Iowa; Dr. Edwin L., of Oskaloosa; and R. F. and Walter P., both of Oskaloosa.

Mrs. Whitcomb was educated in the public schools of Wisconsin and at Oskaloosa (Iowa) College, and taught in Iowa and Wisconsin for several years prior to her marriage. She was for some time the president of the local Woman's Relief Corps, is now serving her eighth year as treasurer of same, and has held the office of secretary. She is a member of the Woman's Club.

To Rufus C. and Margaretta Whitcomb have been born two children, Eva Grace and Walter J., both living at home. In religious faith Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb are members of the Baptist Church. Among the fraternal orders Mr. Whitcomb holds membership in the Knights of Pythias, in which he is past chancellor, and was deputy grand chancellor for five years; the Royal Arcanum, in which he has been representative to the Grand Lodge, and was also vice-grand regent; and the Knights of the Globe. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and he is recognized as one of the political leaders of Green county. He has been twice elected county coroner, now serving his second term in that office, and has also served twice as chairman of the town board. He has been one of the most prominent members of the Green County Agricultural Society and Mechanics Institute, and has served that organization one year as treasurer, one year as president, and three years as corresponding secretary. Mr. Whitcomb possesses great force of character and a winning personality, and his wide acquaintance among influential people extends beyond the limits of his own county.

HON. GEORGE G. COX, a well-known citizen of Iowa county, has passed the greater part of his life on the farm in Waldwick township which he now occupies, having been a resident thereof since 1849.

Mr. Cox was born on Long Island, in Suffolk county, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1842, son of Stephen and Mary A. (Halleck) Cox, and is descended from old New York families. His mother was a distant relative of Gen. Halleck, who rendered distinguished service to his country in the war of the Rebellion. There were six children in the family, four daughters and two sons, our subject and two of his sisters now surviving—Phebe, wife of William Compton, and Betsy, wife of Thomas Van Matre. The first of the family to come West was our subject's brother Charles, who settled in Wisconsin in 1846, and became a prominent merchant at Mineral Point. He entered the service of the Union during the Civil war, in the capacity of quartermaster of the 2d Wisconsin Cavalry. Resigning this position, he came home and raised a company of the 50th Wis. V. I. He was killed while in the service, by an insane soldier. Our subject's parents came to Wisconsin in 1849, settling on the farm where he now lives, in Waldwick township, Iowa county, and the father died three years later. The mother survived him many years.

George G. Cox passed the first few years of his life in his native State, and was but seven years old when the family settled in Wisconsin. He grew to manhood on the home farm, and attended the local public schools, receiving a good practical education. When the Civil war broke out he decided to enter the service, and in February, 1862, was enrolled as a member of Company D, 2d Wisconsin Cavalry, in which he served his full term, receiving an honorable discharge in March, 1865. This regiment entered the service in command of Gen. C. C. Washburne, and after his promotion was given to Lieut.-Col. Stephens. They took part in many important battles and campaigns, including the engagements at Prairie Grove, Hall's Plantation, Woodville, Yazoo City, and Egypt Station, and various raids through the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, etc. The 2d was one of the most efficient cavalry regiments of the Civil war.

Since his return from the army Mr. Cox has devoted the greater part of his time and attention to agricultural pursuits. He has a fine farm, and a beautiful home, and he attends systematically to all the details of the management of his estate, with what results the appearance of the place best testifies. However, though he has looked after his business affairs so carefully, he has found time to devote to public matters also, and takes the interest which every public-spirited citizen should feel in the general welfare. His fellow citizens, recognizing this, have chosen him for some of the most responsible positions in their gift, and he has four times represented his district in the State Legislature, being first elected in 1879. His re-elections are sufficient praise for the acceptability of his services. He is the present chairman of the town of Waldwick. Mr. Cox's political affiliations are with the Republican party, and he has been chairman of the town committee of that party for many years.

Mr. Cox has been for years connected with the Southwestern Wisconsin Fair, which he helped to reorganize as a stock company in 1883. For a number of years past he has been president of the association, which annually holds one of the best fairs in the State at Mineral Point, and the success of the enterprise can be attributed to a great degree to his disinterested efforts. Since 1898 he has been a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and has devoted much of his time to the interests of that position. In 1901 he was elected general superintendent of the State Fair Grounds at Milwaukee. He is a man of much native ability and force of character, and his honorable and useful life has commanded universal esteem. Socially he is a member of George Legate Post, No. 125, G. A. R., of Mineral Point, and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Cox was married Sept. 22, 1865, to Miss Sarah Whitford, daughter of Christopher Whitford, an early settler of Mineral Point, where Mrs. Cox was born, and six children have blessed their union, viz.: Amelia, Charles, George, Fannie, Dwight and Joseph D. Charles was in Chicago when the Spanish-American war broke out, and he enlisted in the 1st Illinois Volunteers, accompanying the regiment to Cuba, where he saw active service.

BOTOLF TOLLEFSON was one of the early settlers of Jordan township, Green county. He was born in Gorsvig, Flo-Anex, Hallingdal, Norway, Aug. 5, 1828 (Hallingdal is at some distance west from Christiana), and came to America with his mother, brother and sister in 1846. He settled first in Rock county, Wis., near the present town of Orfordville. In 1850 he came to Jordan township and settled on the farm which was ever after his home, engaging in agricultural pursuits. Though he was in very limited circumstances at the time of his emigration, Mr. Tollefson succeeded in acquiring a handsome property, and at the time of his death, Sept. 29, 1900, was the owner of 324 acres of valuable land, well improved and stocked, and without incumbrance of any kind. He was considered one of the best farmers in his section, and was highly respected by his neighbors and friends for his honorable, upright life and his many sterling qualities of head and heart, which won their good will as well as their esteem. He was a stanch Republican in political faith, and a Lutheran in religious connection.

Mr. Tollefson was thrice married. In 1853 he wedded Anna Reiersdatter, who was born in Sigdal, Norway. Two children were born to them: Gunhil, who is the wife of Hans H. Haug, of Willow Lake, S. Dak.; and Gurrie, wife of Elling Ellingson, of Sioux City, Iowa. Mrs. Tollefson died in 1858, and her remains were buried in the Norwegian Lutheran cemetery of Wiota township, Lafayette Co., Wis. In 1860 Mr. Tollefson married Anna Erickson, who was born in Fosse, Yttre-Sogn, Norway, Sept. 5, 1822, and four children came of this union: Thomas, who now owns the farm; Anna, wife of Golick Golickson, a farmer of Jordan township; Lena, wife of Lewis Boynton, a farmer of Jordan township; and Erick, who married Clara Olson, and resides at Willow Lake, S. Dak. The mother of these children died March 25, 1880, and her remains were laid to rest in the Norwegian Lutheran cemetery of Jordan township. In 1882 Mr. Tollefson was united in marriage with Marit Aslesen, who was born in Krodsherad, Norway, in 1845, and now lives on the old Tollefson homestead. On Sept. 29, 1900, after more than five years of sickness, Mr. Tollefson died, and his remains rest in the Norwegian Lutheran cemetery, beside those of his second wife.

THOMAS TOLLEFSON was born in Jordan township June 7, 1861, and has passed his entire life on the farm which is now his. His education was acquired in the local public schools, and he received a good practical training, which, aided by a retentive memory, has been of much use to him in his business life. He has given all his attention to farming, finding ample scope for his ability and energy in the management of his large property, which is under a fine state of cultivation, and has yielded good returns. However, he has found time for public affairs, and has served acceptably as school director, judge of election, justice of the peace and notary public, and member of the township board, in all these positions displaying clear judgment and an appreciation of all that is best for the advancement and welfare of his community. His high standards of citizenship and useful career have won him the unqualified respect of his neighbors and friends, and deservedly, for he is a man true to his convictions of right and sincere in his approval of every movement which promises to benefit the moral or material condition of mankind in general. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and an ardent Republican in politics.

JAMES J. DODDS, of the town of Mt. Hope, Grant county, is one of the veteran soldiers of the Civil war, in which he played the part of a man, and made a record of which his friends are justly proud. He was one of the first to enlist from the town of Woodman, which was then a part of the town of Millville.

Mr. Dodds was born in Yorkshire, England, May 18, 1832, son of William and Ann (Jackson) Dodds, who never came to this country, and he was but six years old when his mother died. He was the eldest of several children, and is the only member of his family who ever set foot on American soil. Having read of this country, and learned something of its institutions, he had resolved when a mere boy that he would come to "the land of the free" at some future time. In 1849, when seventeen years old, he came to this country with a paternal aunt, Mrs. Ann Solitt, and her family. They landed in New York Feb. 22, 1850, and Chicago being their destination, they were soon on the way westward. They reached that city in about two weeks after leaving the ocean, and from Chicago went to Rockford, Ill. His friends went from there to Will county, that State, but young Dodds remained in Rockford some two years, and then went East to Meriden, Conn., where he married Miss Harriet Pearson, a native of his native town. A year and a half later the young married couple went back to Rockford, and in 1858 they came to Grant county, Wis., to enter government land, within two miles of our subject's present residence. He improved his land, and after his return from the war sold it, buying the farm which is his present home.

Mr. Dodds enlisted, Aug. 24, 1864, in Company D, 42d Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged May 29, 1865. He was with his regiment during his entire term of service, though a portion of the time he was detailed for special duty. His health was somewhat broken by his military service, and as he grows older he feels more keenly that his vitality was weakened on account of his experience in the Union army.

After the war Mr. Dodds followed the trade of stone cutting, which he had learned at Rockford. He also gave his attention to farming, but he lately sold his farm, and intends changing his location to Mt. Hope. Mr. and Mrs. Dodds have four children: William H., of Nebraska; Jane Elizabeth, wife of James Crubaugh, of Mt. Hope; Clara H., wife of John Crubaugh; and Lillie, at home. Clara Augusta died when ten years old. Mr. Dodds is a Republican politically. With his family he belongs to the Methodist Church.

ORVILLE STRONG. The name of Strong is indissolubly associated with the early settlement and subsequent development of Iowa county. The successful banker and financier whose life story forms the subject of this brief biographical sketch is the son of Judge Luman Mastin Strong, pioneer and jurist, who was born in Orange county, Vt., Oct. 24, 1803. The sons of the Green Mountain State have left their impress and their influence in every nook and corner of the West, yet among them all there are few whose names deserve to be cherished with more respectful veneration than that of Luman Mastin Strong. The story of the life of such a man is at once an incentive and an inspiration, a harbinger and a benediction.

Judge Strong, as has been said, was born Oct. 24, 1803. When about two years of age his father died, and a few years later he was adopted by a Mr. Mastin, who soon afterward migrated to Ohio, settling on the Tuscarawas river. There he grew to manhood, working on the farm during the farming season, and attending the district school during the winter, acquiring a common-school education as taught in those times. At nineteen years of age he taught the district school himself. On March 7, 1824, he married Nancy Griswold. At the age of twenty-five he visited his own mother, walking the whole distance from Ohio to Vermont and return. His wife died March 25, 1835, and he found himself left alone with six small children. Leaving them in the care of friends, he pushed out for Iowa, then called the "Far West." He was one of the pioneers of Linn county, that State, and erected the first house in what is now the beautiful little city of Marion, the county seat of Linn county. On Oct. 30, 1837, he married, for his second wife, Mary Gabbert, who was born at Abingdon, within the limits of the present State of West Virginia. He then returned to Ohio, and brought his little family to Iowa. For many years he was prominently identified with the material and political development of Linn county, being elected to many minor offices, although always against his inclination. Among these were those of justice of the peace and county commissioner. He was also a delegate to the convention which framed the constitution for the State of Iowa, and was the first postmaster at Marion, being appointed by Van Buren.

The admission of Wisconsin to the Federal Union as a State in 1848 attracted many settlers to its borders. Among them was Judge Strong, who with his family settled in the town of Highland, Iowa county, in the midst of the lead mine region. His first location was near the present village of that name. Few of the early pioneers worked harder than he. He felled the timber and cleared and plowed the soil, and also found time to carry loads of lead to Galena, returning with loads of merchandise. Later he removed his residence to the village of Highland. In 1852 he was elected a representative to the Legislature from the northern district of Iowa county. His capacity for public affairs was too manifest to be overlooked, and his fellow citizens soon thrust other offices upon him, making him justice of the peace and town clerk. President Pierce appointed him postmaster at Highland in 1853, and he held the position until 1856. Meanwhile, despite his numerous and exacting duties, to the discharge of each of which he brought the power of his strong, clear mind, he had found leisure time to devote to the study of law, and had been admitted to the Bar in 1852. He continued in the active practice of that profession until his death. In 1854 he was chosen county judge, and re-elected in 1857, holding his seat upon the bench for eight years. During this time he had removed to Dodgeville. In 1865 he was once more re-elected judge, continuing to discharge the duties of the office until his demise, on Dec. 4, 1867, at the age of sixty-four years. Judge Strong may be said to have been a self-made man, in the truest and best sense of that frequently misused term. His early educational advantages were but meager, but on this foundation he reared a solid structure. Of strong physique, robust mentality, and incorruptible integrity, he attained success by virtue of his intense personality as well as his unwearying energy. His death was considered a public calamity, and was felt by scores of his personal friends as an individual loss. He was a sincere member of the Methodist Church, and in politics a Democrat. Fraternally he was a prominent Mason, being a member of the Blue Lodge at Dodgeville, and of the Chapter, R. A. M., at Mineral Point.

Judge Strong was the father of ten children, the issue of his first marriage having been seven, and of his second three. Three of the children by the first wife are yet living: Eliza, Mrs. Ringo, at St. Louis, Mo.; and Amanzer and Henry, who are both residents of Iowa, the home of the former being at Lake City, and that of the latter at Kenwood Park. Amanzer served with distinguished gallantry in the Civil war, carrying a lieutenant's commission in the 27th Wis. V. I. for three years. Of the three children born to Judge Strong by his second wife, the two eldest died in childhood, Orville Strong being the sole survivor of the family.

Orville Strong was born at Marion, Linn Co., Iowa, March 25, 1843, and accompanied his parents to Iowa county, Wis., when a child of five years. Highland and Dodgeville have since been his places of abode, with the exception of three years spent at the front during the war of the Rebellion. He received a good English education at the public schools and at Platteville Academy, his preceptor at that institution being Prof. Pickard, long justly famed as one of the most eminent educators within the State. In August, 1862, Mr. Strong—then a youth of nineteen years—enlisted, becoming a private in Company C, 31st Wis. V. I. His intelligence, correct habits and soldierly bearing soon won him the stripes of a sergeant major, and not long afterward he wore the uniform and shoulder straps of a second lieutenant. His regiment left the State in March, 1863, proceeding first to Columbus, Ky., and thence to Nashville, Tenn. While at Columbus it was assigned to the 6th Army Corps. From Nashville it was ordered to LaVergne, and thence to Murfreesboro, where it was transferred to the 2d Corps. Up to this time the regiment had been chiefly engaged in doing guard and provost duty, although making occasional raids into the enemy's country. From Nashville it was ordered, July 1, 1864, to join the forces of Gen. Sherman, before Atlanta. They reached the trenches before that city on July 21, and were then once more transferred, this time to the 20th Corps. The command took a prominent part in the siege, and afterward followed Sherman on the march to the sea, proceeding North through the Carolinas and Virginia, and taking part in the grand review at Washington May 20, 1865.

On his return home, after leaving the service, Mr. Strong entered the office of his father, who was then serving his third term as county judge. In 1868 he was chosen village clerk, an office which he held for eleven years. The same year he was elected county clerk, and served Iowa county in that capacity for three terms of two years each; in 1878 he was appointed deputy county treasurer, discharging the duties of that position during one term. It was in 1874 that Mr. Strong first embarked in business for himself, as a real-estate agent and loaner of money on mortgages. He has done business along these lines for a quarter of a century, gradually increasing his capital, and each year gaining fresh and stronger hold upon the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen. In 1881, in partnership with A. McArthur, he engaged in banking, the style of the firm being Orville Strong & Co. This copartnership was formed Jan. 8, of the year mentioned, and continued until 1883. Since its dissolution Mr. Strong has carried on business alone, his establishment being popularly designated "Strong's Bank." Mr. Strong has shown his faith in the little city where he makes his home by the erection of two buildings, which are a credit to the place—a business block, comprising a bank, stores and offices, with G. A. R. post room, and a beautiful residence, built in the latest style of architecture.

and equipped with all the modern conveniences.

That the son of so eminent a father should have made life a success is no cause for surprise, yet in reviewing Mr. Strong's career the impartial reader will not fail to perceive that his own resolute spirit, sound judgment and tried honesty have been the corner stones upon which he has built his fortune. He is a Freemason of high degree, being a member of the Blue Lodge and a Royal Arch Mason. The memories of his army life he keeps perpetually green through membership in Williamson Post, No. 109, G. A. R.

Mr. Strong has been twice married. His first wife, Louisa Sims, to whom he was united Jan. 9, 1869, became the mother of two sons and one daughter, and died in 1874. The daughter survived the mother but a short time, dying in infancy. The elder of the sons, George, resides at Prineville, Oregon, and is foreman of the Crook County Journal. The younger, Luman M., is at Chicago, in the Western Union building. Mr. Strong's second marriage took place in January, 1877, when he was united to Miss Minnie Carkeek. Her father, Thomas Carkeek, was born in Cornwall, England, came to America while a young man, and was for many years a prominent and influential citizen of Dodgeville, where he died in 1881, leaving five children. His eldest son, also named Thomas, is one of Dubuque's most distinguished architects. To Mr. Strong's second marriage six children have been born: Molly L., Throop M., Harry C., Arthur, Emily C., and Marjorie. The eldest daughter is a graduate of the State University at Madison, and Throop M., the eldest son, holds the position of cashier in his father's bank. Harry C. is with Marshall Field & Co., Chicago.

ISAAC CHARNNESS, a retired farmer of Monroe, Green county, was born in Wayne county, Ind., April 5, 1820, a son of William and Margaret (Hinshaw) Charnness.

Our subject's parents were both natives of North Carolina. To them were born nine children, four of whom are now living: Isaac, of Monroe; Joshua, of Indiana; Ruth, the wife of Lindsay Love, of Kansas; and William, of Valton, Sauk Co., Wis. The father was a farmer all his life. He moved from North Carolina to Indiana in 1819, and in 1846 came to Wisconsin, for three years making his home in Green county, and then returning to his old Indiana home, where he died when over ninety-six years of age. He was born June 17, 1793. His wife, born Oct. 17, 1800, died in 1846. Reared a Quaker, he was married outside of the faith, and he and his wife united with the Methodist Church. In his more active years he held several local positions, and he was a man highly esteemed in his community.

Joshua Charnness, the father of William, and the grandfather of Isaac, was born in North Carolina, where he lived and died. Bred to agricultural pursuits, he was also a miller, and operated a mill on Deep river. A Quaker in his religious convictions, he was much opposed to war, and was a man of strong personality. He reared a large family, and died when well advanced in years. Isaac Hinshaw, the father of Mrs. Margaret Charnness, was also a Quaker, a native of North Carolina, and a life-long farmer. A goodly family remained to perpetuate his name.

Isaac Charnness, whose name introduces this article, was reared on the farm in Indiana where his parents resided, and obtained his education in the public and subscription schools of the day. When a small boy he walked five miles to school and home again every day, such was the price the pioneer lads had to pay for their schooling. Mr. Charnness was married Oct. 5, 1837, to Miss Mary Millman, daughter of Robert and Abigail (Adamson) Millman. Both parties were very young, the husband but seventeen, and the bride just past sixteen. To this union were born four children: Louisa, Abigail, William Martin and Evangeline. (1) Louisa Charnness married Cyrus Dye, and lives in Monroe. They are the parents of two children, Mary Idell and Ida, the former of whom married Robert Crow, of the town of Monroe, and is the mother of six children, John, William, Ida, Elsie, Bertha and the baby. Ida married Gary Wells, and lives in Monroe. She has a family of three children, Vernie, Horace and the baby. (2) Abigail Charnness married Andrew J. Hawthorne, and has her home in Monroe. They have one living child, Isaac William, who was married to Jennie Shank, and is the father of four children, Josie, Vernie, and the twins, Everest and Arthur. (3) William Martin Charnness was born in 1846, and died at the age of nine years. (4) Evangeline Charnness married Stephen Potter, and lives at Chippewa Falls, Wis.; they have a family of three children, Fred, Cora and Ray, of whom Fred married Emma Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Charnness are both Methodists, and attend church whenever their strength permits, which is now not so often as they might wish. Mr. Charnness is a strong Republican. For more than twenty years he was district school treasurer, and was also road commissioner for many years. He is a total abstainer, and takes a justifiable pride in the fact that during a long and busy life, in times and scenes where it would not have been at all incongruous, he has never drunk a glass of liquor; he never smoked a cigar or pipe in his life.

Mr. Charnness and his wife came from Indiana to Green county, Wis., in 1843, making the journey in a lumber wagon drawn by two horses, and were seventeen days on the way. They brought along a cow and a calf, and a dozen sheep. They had two children, and three dollars in money. During the first winter Mr. Charnness got out rails to fence forty acres of what is at present the county farm. When he arrived in Wisconsin he had one good horse and one poor animal. The better horse, the wagon, and a hundred dollars he traded for eighty acres of farm land, which had been entered and contained some improvements, and on this place the family lived for twelve years. In 1855 this farm was sold, and another of 108 acres purchased, the family remaining there until 1892. That year the farm was rented, and a house and six acres of land in Monroe were bought, where Mr. Charnness and his good wife now live, in the enjoyment of many comforts—the result of long and honorable industry.

The father of Mrs. Charnness, Robert Millman, was born in Delaware, and he married a native of Tennessee. They were pioneer settlers of Indiana before that region of the West was freed of the Indians. They were the parents of eleven children, eight sons and three daughters, of whom at the present writing only three are living: William Millman, of Winston, Daviess Co., Mo.; Mary, who is the honored wife of Isaac Charnness; and John H., of Oakland, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Millman came to Wisconsin in 1845, and located in Green county, where he died in 1877, at the age of seventy-nine years and eight months. His wife died some years prior to this date, when she was aged sixty-four years. They were both devout Methodists, and were buried in the Hawthorne cemetery.

JOEL W. WALKER (deceased) was one of the pioneer settlers of the town of York, and in his active days one of its representative farmers and influential citizens. He was born in New York, June 29, 1838, and died Dec. 7, 1894. Ira and Lucina (Miller) Walker, his parents, were both natives of New York, of English origin, and came to Wisconsin in 1842, making a home on section 26, of the town of York, Green county. Ira Walker was the father of six children, all of whom are dead, with the exception of Minerva, who is living on the home place in the town of York, with her mother; and Clarinda, who is the wife of Nelson Robb, of the town of York.

Joel W. Walker was married Oct. 13, 1867, to Miss Anna R. Everett, of Monroe, a daughter of Lawrence and Matilda (Jennings) Everett, of New Jersey. Her parents were among the early settlers of Green county, where Mrs. Walker was born Sept. 29, 1846, one of a family of seven children, of whom Byron is in Michigan; Clayton is in Minneapolis; Jane is the deceased wife of William Campbell, of Green county; Anna is the wife of Joel W. Walker; Helen is the wife of James Green, of Beloit, Wis.; Lydia is dead; and Charles lives in Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Joel Walker became the parents of the following family: Minnie, born June 10, 1870, died in infancy; Lucina, born Jan. 22, 1872, is the wife of Clarence Devoe, of the town of Adams, and has two children, Roy and Helen; Charles, born Jan. 5, 1874, has charge of his mother's farm in the town of York, where he married Mary Soper, of the same town, who has borne him two children, Raymond and Hazel; Florence, born Jan. 5, 1874, was a twin to Charles, and died in infancy; Helen, born Aug. 22, 1875, is the wife of George Soper, of Blanchardville, Wis., and has three children, Minnie, Earl and Everett; Harry M., born Sept. 15, 1877, died young; B. W., born Oct. 14, 1880, is the youngest of the family, and remains at home, unmarried.

Joel Walker was four years of age when brought by his parents to Wisconsin, and was reared in the town of York, where he had his education in the public schools. In his politics he was a stanch Republican, and in his belief a Baptist. Beginning life a poor man, by industry, economy and a wise appreciation of the opportunity for progressive and intelligent farming in southwestern Wisconsin, he had become the owner of a fine farm of 230 acres, which was well cultivated, and equipped with all the modern conveniences for successful farming. During the war of the Rebellion he bore an honored part, as a loyal and intelligent soldier from his native State. In 1861 he enlisted in Company E, 8th Wis. V. I., and did a soldier's duty until he was discharged in 1864, on account of disability. The command to which he belonged was attached to the Army of the West, and Mr. Walker participated in many bloody battles along with his regiment, the most important being the battles of Corinth, Vicksburg, Iuka and Iron Mountain. He survived these and many other hard-fought fields, and returned home in safety.

Mr. Walker attained a prominent position in his community, where he served as school director and town assessor for years. As a citizen and a neighbor he was beyond reasonable criticism, and as a husband and a father he was all that love could desire. Mrs. Walker, his widow, is still living on the old homestead, which she rents. A devoted Christian woman, and an educated lady, in early life she was a successful teacher, and in her later years has been all that a devoted wife and a faithful mother should be.

ISAAC CLENDENING COMFORT, one of the most successful and public-spirited citizens of the village of Cobb, Iowa county, was born in Tioga county, N. Y., April 6, 1823, son of Thomas and Abigail (Deved) Comfort. The Comfort family came from England in Colonial times, and Richard Comfort, father of Thomas, and grandfather of Isaac C., served in the Continental army from New York all through the war of the Revolution.

Thomas Comfort was born in Orange county, N. Y., and served in the New York militia during the war of 1812. His company was called out at the time Buffalo was burned, but did not arrive in time to assist in the defense of the town. In 1833 he removed to Oakland county, Mich., living there until about 1860, when he came to Wisconsin, locating in Iowa county. His death occurred in the town of Eden, that county, July 4, 1880, when he was in his eighty-seventh year. He was a member of the Congregational Church in New York, but after his removal to Michigan, united with the Methodist. He was a man of good education, and for a number of years taught school in New York, and also in Michigan. He married Abigail Deved, who died early, and he afterward wedded Sarah Odell, who died in Iowa county. Six children were born to the first union, and eight to the second. Of the children of the first marriage there are living, besides Isaac C., Amasa, now eighty-seven years of age, residing at his home in Stillwater, Minn.; and Elam T., living in Cobb, Wisconsin.

Isaac C. Comfort attended the district schools in Michigan, and for a short time was a student in a private school in Birmingham, Mich. At the age of twenty-one he began teaching, and continued in that profession with much success for five years. In 1848 he came to Wisconsin, taught one winter in the town of Waldwick, Iowa county, and the following year purchased wild land in the town of Linden, upon which he located two years later, and began making improvements. He had 230 acres, and this occupied his time and attention for some time, when he sold it, and purchased 160 acres near the village of Cobb, as well as forty acres of timber. He was quite successful in his farming ventures, and for the last fifteen years of his residence on his farm, devoted himself to the breeding of Shorthorn cattle. He bred from the best stock obtainable, and his example and influence greatly improved the stock of the community; his herd, of sixty full-bred and high-grade cattle, all ages, sold finally for $6,000. In this we have one example of our subject's most distinguished characteristic—the thoroughness with which he carries out all his undertakings. Since December, 1883, Mr. Comfort has lived in the village of Cobb, where he erected a fine residence, the best in the town, with all modern improvements, surrounded by a spacious lawn, to the care of which he devotes much of his time. He has many choice fruit and ornamental trees, and, taken all together, his home is one of the most picturesque in the county.

Mr. Comfort has always been a student of public questions, and has spent considerable time in endeavoring to advance the moral and intellectual standing of the community. He was one of the prime movers in organizing the Grange of Cobb, and for two years acted as its master; this branch has since disbanded. For a number of years he was a member of the village board of education, and the development of the present excellent high school, which is probably the best to be found in a town of the size, is due more to his efforts than to those of any other one citizen. About 1870, with other farmers of Linden, Mr. Comfort organized a Farmers' Fire Insurance Company, of which he was vice-president for years, and did a great deal of the business, making surveys, etc. This company is still prospering, has a surplus to meet all demands, and is a great benefit to the farmers. The general confidence in his integrity has been shown by his neighbors and friends in his selection as administrator of a number of estates, and in several instances he has served without pay. He has rendered financial assistance to many of his fellow citizens, which in some cases has been but slightly appreciated.

E. C. Comfort

Our subject's first vote was cast in 1844, for James K. Polk, and he has been a consistent Democrat, upholding the principles of tariff for revenue only and anti-imperialism. For one year he served on the county board of trustees of the Insane Asylum and Poor Farm, and for a number of years on the board of supervisors from both Linden and Eden townships. He assisted in organizing the Adventist Church in Cobb, and is one of the elders and trustees of same. Mr. Comfort is also identified with the Masonic fraternity, being a member of the lodge at Montfort, Mineral Point Chapter No. 6, and Mineral Point Commandery, No. 12, Knights Templar.

Mr. Comfort has been twice married, his first union taking place on Oct. 16, 1850, to Miss Maria Martin, daughter of Ebenezer Martin; she was born in New York, and died in Cobb in 1889, aged sixty-one years. On Aug. 20, 1890, Mr. Comfort married Miss Rebecca Meigs, who was born in Iowa county, daughter of Gardner C. and Lovisa (Barnard) Meigs, and one daughter, Lovisa Ruth, has been born to this union. Mr. Comfort also reared and educated two children, of whom he was appointed guardian, Henry and Irene Robinson. He and his family are highly respected residents of the county in which so many years of their lives have been passed, and their beautiful home is ever open to their friends and neighbors.

41

WILLIAM NOBLE BILLINGS, a progressive and public-spirited business man of Cobb, represents one of the leading pioneer families of Iowa county. He was born in the town of Eden (then a part of Highland township) Jan. 1, 1852.

Henry Mortimer Billings, his father, was born in Vermont, a son of John Billings, who was born in Massachusetts, of Scottish descent, and served in the Revolutionary war, after which he removed to Vermont, where his death occurred at a ripe old age. Henry M. Billings came West in 1836, and for a few years was engaged in mining at Galena, Ill., whence he came to Mineral Point, Wis., to engage in mercantile business. In 1845 he went to Centerville, where he was one of the first to discover the existence of lead ore. He worked in the newly discovered mining fields until 1849 or 1850, when he purchased land in the present township of Eden, and passed the rest of his life in agricultural pursuits. He was accidentally killed in 1862, by the kick of a horse, when he was aged fifty-two years. He was a very prominent man in public affairs, represented his district in the Territorial and State Legislatures, and also in the State Senate. In political principles he was a Democrat, and in his fraternal relations he was a well-known Mason, having been grand master of the Grand Lodge in Wisconsin. Mr. Billings married Ann Bray, who was born in Kentucky, a daughter of John Bray, who died in Missouri during her childhood. John Bray was a son of a Revolutionary soldier. Mrs. Ann (Bray) Billings is a lady of many virtues and admirable executive ability; she now makes her home in Madison. Children were born to Henry Mortimer and Ann (Bray) Billings as follows: John Henry, of Cobb, Wis.; Douglas Mortimer, of Nevada, Mo.; William N., our subject; Frank, a prominent physician of Chicago; Charles Lewis, an attorney of Chicago; George A., a farmer near Cobb, Wis.; and Mary E., now Mrs. William Ferguson, of Madison, Wisconsin.

William Noble Billings received his education in the public schools and in the Platteville Normal, which latter institution he attended for a short time. He made his home on his father's farm until 1881, when he entered the employ of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Co., as station agent at Cobb, remaining there seventeen years, and giving good satisfaction to his company and its patrons. In 1898 he purchased a stock of goods, and has since dealt in general merchandise, including dry goods, clothing, groceries, etc. The firm is now Billings & Spencer, and as the trade has increased the stock has increased, the establishment being now a credit to a town the size of Cobb. In politics Mr. Billings is independent, casting his ballot for the men and measures he thinks best calculated to contribute to the general welfare of his town, State or country. In religious belief he is a member of the Adventist Church, in which he holds the office of deacon. His name appears on the rolls of Ferrin Lodge, F. & A. M., of Montfort, as a member in good standing.

On Aug. 15, 1884, Mr. Billings was united in marriage with Miss Florence Elger, daughter of Stephen and Mary Elger, of Platteville, and three children have been born of this union: Roxena, Eugene and Leonard.

JOHN P. WILLIAMS, miner and farmer in the town of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born in Devon, England, March 30, 1821, a son of Thomas and Ann Williams, both of whom lived and died in their native land. John P. and his brother Thomas, who settled and died in Pennsylvania, were the only members of the family who came to this country.

John P. Williams came through New York on his way to Wisconsin in 1848, and following his arrival in Grant county was engaged in lead mining for a number of years. While in England he married Miss Jane Thomas, who died in Hazel Green in 1879, leaving him with two children: (1) John, the eldest, was born in England in 1845, and acquired his education in the academy at Platteville. Miss Alice Cooper became his wife, and they live in Plainfield, Wis., where he is a hotel-keeper. They have a family of eleven children, Ida, Emil, John, Frank, Lute, Alice, Antes, Thomas, Robert, Una, and Florence. (2) Thomas, born in Grant county in 1851, married, and is now a hardware merchant in Necedah, Wis. He has three children, Irene, John M., and Jennie.

In 1850 John P. Williams made the journey to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama. His labors in the gold fields were attended with very good results, and he spent three years there, at the end of that time returning to Wisconsin, and working in the lead mines of this State until 1856. That year he went back to California, and was gone some ten years, engaged in business in that State. In 1864 Thomas Stephens sold him a fine farm in Hazel Green township, on which he made many improvements, and thereon made his home. In 1880 he married Miss Hannah Pedelty, of Hazel Green, a daughter of John and Hannah Pedelty, natives of Yorkshire, England, who came to this country in 1849, and settled in the town of Hazel Green, where Mr. Pedelty followed smelting on his homestead in that town. In the spring of 1864 he and his family moved to Platteville. In the fall his wife died, and in the spring of 1865 Mr. Pedelty moved back to Hazel Green; he died in 1879. Mrs. Williams was born in England in 1849, and received her education in the Grant county schools. She is one of four daughters: Mary A., wife of Anthony Shepherd; Hannah, Mrs. Williams; Jane, wife of Simon Nicholas, of South Dakota; and Ruth, widow of Henry Ingraham, of Lafayette county.

After his second marriage Mr. Williams settled on his farm, where he is now living retired. To this union came one child, Avis, who was born in 1882, and is now a student in the Hazel Green school. In politics Mr. Williams is a Republican, and in religion he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They are highly respected people, and he has been very successful in his life work.

NELSON ROBB is an old settler of the town of York, Green county, where he has won more than a local reputation as a successful farmer and an honorable and upright man. Mr. Robb was born in Stephenson county, Ill., a son of Davis and Lucinda (Makepiece) Robb, of English and German parentage, who came to Green county when young Nelson was only five years of age, and were among the very earliest settlers of York.

Davis Robb was born in Pennsylvania July 4, 1814, and died Jan. 11, 1895, and his wife, Lucinda Makepiece, was born in Ohio May 5, 1822. They were married in 1840, and to them were born the following children: Nelson, whose name appears above; Mary, the wife of John Hollister; Hiram, of Monroe; Louisa, the wife of F. Knorr, of Blanchardville; Frank, of the town of York; Joseph, of the town of Moscow, Iowa county; and Josephine, the wife of George Rickey, of the town of York.

Nelson Robb was married March 18, 1866, to Miss Clarinda Walker, a daughter of Ira Walker, one of the first settlers of Green county. To this union were born: Esther, born Dec. 19, 1866, married Charles Altemus, of Chase county, Kans., and has had three children, Emma, Ray and Phyllis, but Ray is deceased; Jesse, born June 26, 1869, died March 11, 1874; Myrtle, born June 7, 1875, is the wife of Edgar Altemus, of Chase county, Kans., and has two children, Nicholas and Hazel; Alta L., born April 20, 1879; Ralph, born April 25, 1884; Ella, born June 29, 1886, are all three at home. Mrs. Robb was born July 26, 1845, and is the daughter of Ira and Lucina (Miller) Walker, and was reared in a family of the following children: Esther, Joel and Edwin, all deceased; Minerva is at home, unmarried; Clarinda, whose marriage to Nelson Robb is noted above; and Rosetta, deceased. Ira Walker was born Oct. 1, 1811, and died Nov. 17, 1889. His widow is still living on the old home place with her daughter, Mrs. Robb. She was born March 3, 1816, and notwithstanding her advanced age bears herself surprisingly well.

Nelson Robb is a staunch Republican, and is a man of moral character and high principles. Beginning in life with nothing but himself to depend upon, he now owns a good farm which consists of some 200 acres, with a good dwelling and substantial farm buildings. During the Civil war Mr. Robb enlisted in Company A, 46th Wis. V. I., and in the fall of 1865 received an honorable discharge. Personally he is a good citizen, a kind neighbor, a devoted husband, an indulgent father, and his many good qualities have won him a host of friends.

SAMUEL RUNDELL. Perhaps no portion of the United States, of equal extent, can boast of a larger number of pioneers who hail from that famous mining region of England known as Cornwall than can Iowa county, Wis. They were a strong, hardy, honest class, drawn, naturally as by a magnet, to the rich mining country of southwestern Wisconsin, and their strong arms and willing industry have aided no less in developing the agricultural than the mining industries of the State. Among these should be mentioned prominently the name of Samuel Rundell, now living retired, who was long an active and successful resident of that section.

Mr. Rundell was born in Cornwall, Dec. 14, 1822, grew to manhood there, and on March 31, 1848, married Kezia Biddick, who was born in the same county April 28, 1826. Not long after their marriage the young couple came to America, and their first settlement was made at Platteville, Grant Co., Wis., where Mr. Rundell engaged in farming. Six years later they removed to the town of Mifflin, in Iowa county, where Mr. Rundell purchased a farm, and he continued to occupy that place until December, 1900, when he retired, taking up his home in the village of Livingston, Grant county. By industry and good management he was enabled to add to his original purchase from time to time, eventually becoming one of the prosperous and substantial farmers of the town, as well as one of its most respected citizens. His faithful wife, who assisted him so bravely in their early struggles, passed away Jan. 10, 1891. They were the parents of fourteen children, twelve of whom attained mature years, and ten—four sons and six daughters—are still living, all residing in the neighborhood of the homestead but one, Eli C., who resides in Hurley, South Dakota.

The generation of his family to which Samuel Rundell belongs is quite remarkable, for both numbers and longevity. At one time there were eleven living whose ages averaged sixty-five years, six months. Eight are living at this writing (1901), five brothers and three sisters, all residents of southwestern Wisconsin but Mrs. Eliza Carhart, whose home is in Mapleton, Iowa; she is now ninety years of age. Four have celebrated their Golden Weddings.

John S. Rundell, eldest living member of the family of Samuel Rundell, was born Jan. 5, 1851, in Platteville, Grant Co., Wis., and was about four years old when the family settled in the town of Mifflin, Iowa county, which has ever since been his home. He was educated in the common schools, and has engaged in farming, with what success is attested by the size and condition of his beautiful farm, which contains 200 acres, and is one of the most desirable places in the locality. On March 21, 1872, Mr. Rundell was married to Hannah Livingston, daughter of Joseph Livingston, a pioneer of the county, and five children have blessed their union: Lillie, the eldest, is the wife of Dr. C. W. Bushnell, a practicing dentist in Chicago; Nellie was educated at the Platteville State Normal School, and is a successful teacher; Charles L., Ada E. and Edgar are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Rundell have one grandchild, Florence Bushnell, a representative of the fourth generation now living.

Joseph Livingston, father of Mrs. Rundell, was a native of County Wicklow, Ireland, and came to America in 1846. In 1852 he married Miss Jane Mates, and six children were born to them, four of whom grew to mature years and are still living: Mary A., wife of Hiram A. Rundell; Hannah, wife of John S. Rundell; Robert F.; and Lizzie, wife of Hercules Rundell. Mrs. Livingston passed away Feb. 14, 1865, and Mr. Livingston survived her many years, his death occurring March 18, 1897. Mr. Livingston was an honest and useful citizen, and possessed many noble traits of character, his benevolence and readiness to assist the needy being proverbial among those who knew him best. By untiring industry and economy he acquired a competence, which he devoted to the good of his fellow men as well as to his own comfort, and he was highly honored in the locality where so many years of his life were passed. His integrity was above question, and in his death the community lost one of its most highly esteemed members, a man whose many sterling qualities of head and heart commended him to the affectionate regard of all who knew him.

JODERICH KUBLI, whose death June 11, 1901, removed one of the retired farmers of Jordan township, Green county, held high rank as a successful farmer, a wealthy and honorable citizen, and well sustained the honor and good name of the Swiss in America. Born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, Jan. 4, 1838, he was a son of Peter and Barbara (Marta) Kubli, both of whom lived and died in their native Switzerland. Joderich Kubli, the father of Peter, had three sons, Peter, Jacob and John. Peter Kubli was the father of the following children: Annie, the wife of Jakob Freikag, died in California; John remained in Switzerland; Joderich, whose name appears above; Peter remained in Switzerland; and Jacob made his home in Jordan township.

Joderich Kubli was married in 1868 to Miss Mary Hafty, who was born in Switzerland Nov. 22, 1844. To this union were born eleven children, as follows: Barbara, born Nov. 8, 1868, married John Kundert, of the town of Jordan; John P., born Jan. 18, 1870, now resides in Minnesota; Mary, born Nov. 18, 1873, is at home; Annie, born Nov. 13, 1875, is the wife of Otto Blum, of the town of Jordan; Minnie, born June 4, 1884, is unmarried and at home; John Henry, born Oct. 22, 1886; William, born April 12, 1891; and four others, now deceased.

The career of Mr. Kubli illustrates the power of pluck and push when combined with good character and a high degree of health. Mr. Kubli came to this country without money or friends to help him on his way, and by the most industrious and saving habits became the owner of a fine farm of 210 acres, on which he made his home, and a second farm of eighty acres, for which he had a cash rental. Mr. Kubli's broad acres showed the work of a faithful and intelligent farmer.

In politics Mr. Kubli was a Republican, and both himself and his wife belonged to the Methodist Church. A hard-working man all his life, he never had any trouble with his neighbors, and was never involved in any kind of a law suit. During his last years he retired from active farming, and enjoyed that peace and comfort to which he was so well entitled. Throughout his life he was guided by honesty and neighborly kindness, and lived to enjoy the rich results of these great principles in the respect of the community and in the warm affection of a host of friends.

JABEZ CLARK. The beautiful little town of Monticello, Green county, is fortunate in having located within its limits, a number of solid, substantial farmer-citizens, who by industry and energy have accumulated a competency which enables them to pass their advancing years in comfort. Among those so located may be mentioned Jabez Clark, whose birth took place March 8, 1828, near Lincoln, Lincolnshire, England. He was the son of John and Mary (Sims) Clark, both natives of England. The paternal and maternal grandparents were of English birth and rearing, the former being John and Mary Clark, who became the parents of six children. The maternal grandfather was William Sims, who lived to the unusual age of 101 years, leaving six children. The ancestors in both lines led agricultural lives, and were much esteemed in their respective neighborhoods.

John Clark, the father of our subject, was a farmer, stockman and shepherd in England, but died about 1828, his wife surviving until 1856, when she was sixty-six years old. Both had been consistent members of the Methodist Church.

Jabez Clark was reared on a farm in England, and had few educational advantages, attending no school after his seventh year, and receiving no instruction except that obtained in the Sunday school, where he was religiously sent by his parents. In 1857 our subject came to America, making his way finally to Mt. Pleasant township, Wis., where he bought forty acres of land two miles south of Monticello. Being possessed of limited means, great industry and perseverance, combined with self-denial, were required to enable him to keep adding to this first purchase until he had accumulated 240 acres, which he owned when he decided that his toilsome days were past and that he could enjoy the fruits of his labor. In the spring of 1900 Mr. Clark sold 120 acres of his estate to his son, rented 120 and removed to this town, where he and wife live in quiet, with comfortable surroundings.

Mr. Clark was married Jan. 1, 1858, to Miss Julia Dyson, a daughter of John and Esther (Royson) Dyson, and a family of six children were born of this union: Mary E., who married Anson Wood, of Decatur township, and has three children, Walter, Calista, and Burnett; William S., who married Geneva Button, and resides in Kansas, near Shorey, with three children, Lloyd S., Julian J., and Vira; George H., who married Emma Hickman, resides in Mt. Pleasant township; Elizabeth J. and Linda B., living on the old home farm; and Burnett L. is a veterinary surgeon, located in Monticello. The mother of these children died in 1897, aged seventy-four years, having been a member of the Christian Advent Church. The second marriage of our subject took place on April 18, 1897, to Mrs. Emma (Wood) Knight, widow of Ralsey Knight, a soldier in the Civil war, and a daughter of Samuel and Paulina (Upham) Wood. Mrs. Clark had two children by her first marriage, Ralsey Adelbert and George E. Ralsey Adelbert married (first) Imogene Taft, and had one child, Carrie; he married (second) Nellie Rice, and they live in Sibley, Iowa. George E. Knight married Clara Hilliard, and resides in Coggon, Iowa, with one child, Charles. The parents of Mrs. Clark were natives of New York, and reared four children: Sarah, who married a Mr. Wakefield, of Durand, Wis.; John Albert, who resides in Orleans county, N. Y.; Emma, who is Mrs. Clark; and Artemus, who lives in San Francisco, California.

Although Mr. Clark is a stanch Prohibitionist, and always ready to uphold his views, he has never aspired to any office. In religion he is a consistent member of the Christian Advent Church, while Mrs. Clark is identified with the Free-Will Baptist Church. Both are highly esteemed.

ISAAC W. NEWTON, the subject of this sketch, is an honored citizen and substantial farmer of Lamont township, Lafayette county.

Our subject's father, John Newton, was a well-known citizen. He was born in Lancashire, England, March 9, 1823, his boyhood and early youth being spent in his native place. In 1845 he married Elizabeth Wilde, and with his young wife came to America, locating in the State of Pennsylvania until the spring of 1853, when the family migrated to Darlington township, Lafayette Co., Wis. About two years later Mr. Newton removed to that part of Fayette township which has since become a part of Lamont. In the spring of 1866 he removed to the farm now owned and occupied by his son Isaac, and this was his home until his death, although he passed away at La Plata, Mo., while on a visit to a sister residing there, on April 25, 1893, when a little over seventy years of age. His wife died in 1885. The surviving members of the family are: Mrs. A. R. Mumford, of Freeman, Neb.; Isaac W., our subject; and John T., who lives near Newell, Iowa.

During life Mr. Newton was a representative citizen and was held in high esteem. His progressive methods and industrious habits were commended by the community, he improved considerable land and held many official positions, and for a number of years was the efficient chairman of the town of Fayette.

Isaac W. Newton, the only representative of the family now residing in Lafayette county, was born in Pennsylvania in 1852, and was about one year old when he came with his parents to Lafayette county, where he has always made his home, his residence being the old family homestead. Our subject married Mary A. Dixon, a daughter of Alvin M. and Mary E. Dixon, the former of whom was born at Platteville March 18, 1843, his father, who still survives, being one of the pioneers of Grant county, Wis. The death of Mr. Dixon occurred in Lamont township Dec. 27, 1900. For two years he served in the army in the war of the Rebellion, and although thirty-five years had elapsed since the close of the war his death was doubtless hastened by the hardships, privations and exposures incident to his army service. Mr. Dixon was an honored member of Harvey Post, No. 45, G. A. R., of Darlington. Mr. Dixon was twice married, and to the first union was born one daughter, Nellie, now Mrs. Brooks, of Freeport, Ill. The second marriage was to Mary Elizabeth Wood, who survives, and is the mother of Mrs. Newton, the latter having been born in Lafayette county in 1872. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Newton, Harland V. and Alice R. In his neighborhood Mr. Newton is highly esteemed, and is justly regarded as one of the substantial citizens.

THOMAS WATSON, one of the pioneer settlers of Green county, now living retired from active work in Browntown, is a native of Ohio, born Feb. 4, 1824, son of John and Elizabeth (Binger) Watson, who were of Irish descent. William Watson, the grandfather, was born in Virginia, and took part in the Revolutionary war, being with the army during the terrible suffering of the winter of 1777 in Valley Forge. He married a lady named Boyd, who was from Ireland.

John Watson, father of Thomas, was married in 1823, to Elizabeth Binger, daughter of John Binger, a native of Maryland. John Watson and his wife Elizabeth reared ten children to maturity: Thomas, Emily, Elaira (widow of Enoch Patterson), Sarah, Nancy (wife of Henry Host, of Ohio), Eliza (wife of William White, of Ohio), Jane (wife of James Wesley, of Ohio), John William, Joseph and Maria (wife of Daniel White, of Ohio).

Thomas Watson has received his education in the school of experience, as the public schools in his boyhood days were very limited in numbers and the scope of their work. In the early 'thirties he attended a little log cabin school. So far as farm work was concerned his education was not by any means neglected. In 1850 he came to Wisconsin, and settled in Cadiz township, which has been his home for the past fifty years. He began life without any capital whatever, but his indomitable will and natural energy, and by good management and untiring industry he has accumulated a competence, owning a good farm of nearly two hundred acres in Cadiz township, and a good home in Browntown, where he is now living at rest. Strictly honest in all his dealings, he has an untarnished reputation in the business world, and is a most highly esteemed citizen. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and, while a member of no church, is very charitable, and is a liberal contributor to worthy causes.

On March 29, 1846, Mr. Watson was united in marriage with Miss Mary Lynch, daughter of William Lynch, of Ohio. She was born in Ohio Dec. 24, 1828, one of a family of nine children, the others being John, Simon, Hugh, Absalom, Cornelius, Hattie, Susan and Katie. Mr. and Mrs. Watson became the parents of ten children, of whom five are now living: Jane is the wife of Wallace Skinner, of Winslow, Ill.; Luvina married Elias Martin, of Green county; Catherine is a teacher in the Green county schools; Viola is the wife of William Smith, of Wisconsin; and Aurora is the wife of James Robb, of Illinois. The others died in childhood. Mr. Watson was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife Feb. 19, 1896. She was a devoted mother and loving wife, and passed to her rest in the faith of the Methodist Church, of which she had long been a faithful member.

JOHN CORRELL, a successful farmer now living in retirement at Mineral Point, Iowa county, Wis., was born in Avoca, County Wicklow, Ireland, Aug. 27, 1837, son of Richard and Ann Correll, natives of the same locality.

Richard Correll was a farmer, as had been his father and grandfather before him. He died at the age of sixty-two years, and his wife, Ann, passed away at the age of sixty. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom four still live in Ireland, and Mary, now Mrs. Green, in Scranton, Penn., and our subject, are the only ones in America.

John Correll received fair educational advantages, and at the age of fifteen began to learn the grocery business, which he followed until May, 1861, when he embarked for Australia, passing four years there as clerk in a cattle station at Rockhampton. Upon his return to Europe, he passed one year in London and his native town, and in 1868 came to the United States, making his first home on a farm in the township of Clifton, Grant county, Wis. In 1882, he purchased a fine farm of 170 acres near Cobb, Iowa county, which he still owns. For some years he has devoted his attention to the breeding of short-horn cattle, having bred some of the best stock in the county. Among the animals he has owned was the 2-year-old bull "Chancellor" (106.791) which took the second premium at the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893, and the cow "Lovely Pride," which took fourth premium at the same place, and first at the Wisconsin State Fair in 1894. Stock owned by him has also taken many other premiums at fairs and exhibitions. Since 1898 Mr. Correll has lived in practical retirement at Mineral Point, where he has built a substantial modern residence on an eminence overlooking the greater part of the city, as well as of the beautiful surrounding country.

In September, 1869, Mr. Correll was married to Isabella Jane Greville, who was born at Shank Hill Castle, County Dublin, Ireland, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Robinson) Greville, who came to America in 1855, and reached Grant Co., Wis., on May 19, of that year. Mr. Greville purchased a farm in Clifton township, near the Crow Branch mines, and in 1882 moved to Montfort. His death occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Correll, Feb. 21, 1895, when he had attained the venerable age of eighty-three years. His wife, Mary Robinson, died in Grant county, Dec. 27, 1886, at the age of sixty-six years. George Washington Greville, grandfather of Mrs. Correll, was a printer in Dublin, and passed away in his eighty-fourth year, and his brother, who also attained an advanced age, operated the only coach factory in Dublin at that time. Mrs. Mary (Robinson) Greville was a daughter of Henry and Mary (Tuke) Robinson, the former being a damask weaver in County Roscommon, Ireland.

Five children blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Correll: Washington, a druggist at Prairie du Sac, Wis.; Richard Joseph, on the home farm; Henry Robinson, born Oct. 22, 1874, died Sept. 15, 1897; William Horace, a grocery salesman at Mineral Point; and James Archibald, who died Sept. 25, 1897, at the age of twelve years and eight days. The parents have taken care in the education of their children, who bid fair to add laurels to the honored name they bear—Washington being a graduate of the State University of Wisconsin, and William H., of the Platteville Business College. In religious views Mr. Correll is a member of the Methodist Church, and Mrs. Correll is a communicant of the Episcopal Church. Socially he is a member of Washburn Lodge, I. O. O. F., and politically has always affiliated with the Republican party, but has never yet consented to accept the honors of public office as well as the duties of citizenship.

DUDLEY C. BRIDGES, a venerable farmer of Platteville, Grant county, has led a long and useful life, influenced by noble motives, and is now passing his last years surrounded by a circle of kind and sympathetic friends.

Mr. Bridges was born in Vermont in September, 1816, a son of Chase and Cornelia Bridges, both of whom were born and reared in that State. When Dudley C. was a child his father moved to Columbus, Ohio, where he engaged in farming some twelve or thirteen years, and then moved to Clinton county, Ill. While living in Ohio Mrs. Bridges died. Of the children who survived her (1) Densy married Lorenzo Dow, and settled in Bond county, Ill., where she died, leaving three children, Mary, James and Milan; the sons reside in Kansas, and Mary, the wife of William Alexander, lives in Illinois. (2) Edward married and settled in Clinton county, Ill., where he died. (3) Omeerie died, a bachelor, in Clinton. (4) Mary, born in Ohio, married Henry Harmon, who died, leaving one daughter, now also deceased. Mrs. Harmon later married John Hull, and settled on a farm in Clinton county, Ill., where they both died, leaving one daughter, who did not long survive her parents. Chase Bridges later in life married Miss Nancy Hull, and to this union were born four children, all of whom are deceased but Lucretia, the wife of William A. Abbott, of California.

Dudley C. Bridges received the major part of his education in Ohio, at the winter sessions of the district school. In 1844 he married Miss Martha Crucey, of South Carolina, and settled in Bond county, Ill., where his wife died four years afterward, leaving no children. In 1848

he married his present wife, Miss Nancy Casey, of Georgia, a daughter of William and Angeline Casey, who were born in the South, though of old Puritan stock. When she was a child her father was killed by the Indians, and her mother taken a captive into Arkansas. The young orphan was received as a member of the family of Dr. Wood, who moved into Illinois. When she was sixteen she took upon herself the burden of her own support. After marriage she and Mr. Bridges came by wagon to Grant county, Wis., where they rented what is now known as the Long farm, making their home there for three years, and then Mr. Bridges purchased eighty acres from Mr. Snowdon. There they made their home, and here they still reside. They began housekeeping in a small log house, and soon erected their present dwelling, where they reared a large and prosperous family, and have lived to see their children grow up and take honorable places in life. In 1898 they celebrated their Golden Wedding. Mrs. Bridges united with the Presbyterian Church when a young woman and has led a consistent Christian life.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridges have had twelve children, all of whom were born in Grant county. (1) Flora, born in 1850, married Thomas Nixon, resides in Iowa on a farm, and is the mother of nine children, John, Flora, Irene, George, William, Joseph, Thomas, Theodore and Martha. (2) Alice, born in 1852, married Joseph Nixon, resides on his farm near Rockville, and is the mother of six children, Edwin, Nellie, Mamie, Kippie, Ernest, and Delbert H. (3) Filena, born in 1854, married William Long, who resided in Platteville, both are now deceased; they left two children, James and Elvina. (4) Nora, born in 1856, is Mrs. George Womack, of the town of Platteville, and is the mother of five children, George, Thomas, Dora, Adolph and Dudley. (5) William Judd married Miss Lou McKinney, and resides in Mineral Point. He is the father of four children, Thomas, Walter, Daniel and Chase. (6) Alvin, born in 1862, married Miss Laura Stanover, and is a farmer in the town of Platteville; they have three daughters, Mamie, Jemima, and Sylvia. (7) Thomas, born in 1861, was killed while engaged in seeding grain, by a run-away team, when a boy of seventeen years; he was a bright young man and the pride of his parents. (8) Irena, born in 1863, was educated in the public schools, and in 1880 married Samuel Clifton, who was born and reared in England; they are living on a farm in the town of Platteville, and are the parents of six children—Nancy E., born in 1880; Gertrude, June 24, 1885; Charles C., in 1889; Alice and Ada A. (twins), in 1894; and John Dewey Clinton, in 1898. (9) Harry M., born in 1866, married Miss Emma Quarles, and settled on a farm in the town of Lima. He has two daughters, Ella and Ruby Quarles. (10) Mary Esther married James Appleby, resides in Minneapolis, and has one son, Willis. (11) Dudley C. is married, and when last heard from was in Iowa; he has no children. (12) John is mentioned below. There are thirty-eight grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.

JOHN BRIDGES, born in June, 1872, is now manager of the old home farm. He received a fair education in the home schools, and was well prepared for the duties of an active life. In October, 1896, he married Miss Emma Doelz, a daughter of G. C. and Philopenie Doelz, an old and prominent family in Dubuque, Iowa, and they live on the farm, caring for his parents in their old age. They have two daughters, Freda Viola and Irene May. John Bridges has been long identified with the Republican party, following in his father's footsteps in this respect, and is a leading man of the community. Fraternally he is a member of the United Workmen.

GEORGE H. CRAM, of Beloit, Rock county, is a well-known shoe dealer in the college city, and his store is the center of trade for those who demand good values for their money and are sensitive to fair dealing and courteous treatment.

Mr. Cram was born in Missouri City, Mo., June 4, 1861, and is a son of George H. and Hattie (Brittan) Cram, of Vermont and New York, respectively. They were the parents of two children, Arthur and George H., the former of whom died at the age of two years. The father came West to Chicago in the 'fifties, and later spent a few months in Missouri City, Mo., but kept his home in Chicago, in which city he died in 1861, at the early age of twenty-eight. The mother still survives. She is a Congregationalist, as was also Mr. Cram. He joined the Union army for service in the Civil war, and was a first lieutenant in the 14th Ill. V. I., was wounded in the battle of Fort Donelson, and died a week later. Mrs. Cram subsequently married E. B. McClure.

Geo. H. Cram

and now lives in Visalia, Cal. They have four children. Hattie, Frank, Harry and Fred. The paternal grandfather of our subject came from England, and died in middle life, soon after his arrival in this country. He was the father of four children: Francis Brittan, the father of Hattie, mentioned above, was a native of England, and was the first silk and embroidery merchant in the United States. He was a prominent merchant in Brooklyn, and also had a store in New York. Late in life he came to Wisconsin, settling at Mineral Point, at that time a more important city than Chicago, and he spent some portion of his later years in Beloit, with his son Arthur. He was the father of a large family.

The early childhood days of George H. Cram were spent in Monmouth and Galesburg, Ill., and at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. He attended the public schools and college at Galesburg, and later a public school at Springfield, Ohio. In 1876 he came to Beloit, and has since made that city his home. Mr. Cram began clerking in the shoe store of his uncle, Arthur Brittan, soon after his arrival, and continued in his employ until 1886. That year he entered business on his own account, and opened a shoe store in partnership with George A. Lownsbury, who retired from the enterprise after one year. Mr. Cram has since carried on the business alone, and has won a good patronage, being now among the solid and prosperous men of the city. In 1896 he opened a shoe store in Janesville, and later associated himself with C. C. Bennett, who presently became the owner of the Janesville enterprise. Since that time Mr. Cram has confined his business to Beloit. He has carried through several important deals in real estate, and is agent for the business of Arthur Brittan.

George H. Cram and Miss Cora A. Williams, daughter of George and Harriet Williams, were united in marriage Aug. 3. 1883. To this union two children have been born: Mildred and Arthur. The pleasant home in which they live, at No. 431 Park avenue, was erected by our subject in 1892. Mrs. Cram and children are members of the Episcopal Church, which Mr. Cram also attends. He is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., Beloit Chapter, No. 9. R. A. M., and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, and with his wife belongs to the Order of the Eastern Star. He is a Modern Woodman and United Workman, and has risen to a high standing in the Knights of Pythias, having taken the uniform degree, was elected a major on the staff of Gen. Halsey, and served under him a full term. Politically he is a Republican, and has represented the Second ward one term in the common council. Mr. Cram has been on the county board several terms, and is a gentleman of prominence in local affairs.

WILLIAM LEWIS, of Lancaster, dates his coming to Grant county, Wis., from half a century ago, having arrived here in 1850. He is a native of Delaware county, N. Y., born Dec. 21. 1829, and was reared to agricultural pursuits.

William Lewis, Sr., father of William Lewis, named above, was a native of Scotland, and came to the United States when a young man. About the first employment he found here was in assisting in the construction of the Erie canal in the State of New York—the most important artificial waterway used for passenger and freight traffic in the United States. It was completed in 1825, and has since conveyed, besides merchandise, thousands of pioneers from Albany to Buffalo, N. Y., on their way to the far West. Mr. Lewis married, in the Empire State, Nancy Burns, a native thereof, but whose father was from the north of Ireland. Soon after his marriage Mr. Lewis settled on a tract of heavily-timbered land, cleared up a farm, on which he resided until 1858, and then, eight years after his son had arrived here, came to Grant county, Wis., where he purchased what was known as the Luther Brown farm, where he passed the remainder of his life, his widow surviving him for a number of years. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom one only was a daughter, and she is now Mrs. Catherine Ryan, of North Anderson, Grant county. One son, James, died in early life, but the others all attained mature years. Four of the sons served in the Union army during the Civil war, viz.: Moses, Walter, James and Andrew. The last named died in the service just before the cessation of hostilities, and James died at home soon after the close of the war, of disease contracted in the army. The surviving brothers are John, Thomas, William, Walter and Wilson.

William Lewis, whose name opens this sketch, for a number of years after his arrival in Grant county, in 1850, worked out as a farm hand, but in 1865 he purchased the Preserve Albee farm in Patch Grove township, on which he made his home for thirty years, before retiring from active life. He was united in marriage Nov. 11, 1854, with Miss Catherine Ryan, who was born in Albany, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1835, a daughter of John and Debora (Shedy) Ryan, and this union has been blessed with eleven children, of whom further mention will later be made. In 1836 or 1837 the Ryan family came from New York to Grant county, Wis., and after residing for some time in Cassville, the parents removed across the Mississippi river to Clayton county, Iowa, where the father died, after which occurrence Mrs. Ryan returned with her children to Cassville, and was married to James Carey. By her first marriage she was the mother of five children, and by her second became the mother of two.

Of the eleven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, Dr. James Monroe resides in Bloomington, Grant county; Nancy Debora is the wife of Joseph Donnelly, also of Bloomington; Millie is married to Mr. Foley, proprietor and editor of the Cassville Index; William Elmer lives in Patch Grove; Dr. Walter Haines is in practice at Alden, Iowa; Andrew E. lives in Lancaster, Wis.; Dr. Ulysses Simpson resides in East Dubuque, Ill.; John Forrest is the next in order of birth; Luther L. and Frank Clarence went to Alaska in 1898; and Lela is the wife of Ray D. Walker, of Lancaster, Wis. These eleven children have all been well educated, and all save one have been school teachers. The three sons who are practicing medicine were graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago, and are useful and greatly respected citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have a delightful home, and are possessed of all the comforts of life, the fruit of their well directed industry and intelligent management of their affairs. They mingle with the most worthy and reputable residents of Lancaster, and their friends are countless.

JAMES COCHRAN KIRKPATRICK is one of the oldest surviving pioneers of the Wisconsin lead region, having lived there for nearly three quarters of a century. He has witnessed the remarkable development of that locality from a frontier wilderness, inhabited chiefly by Indians, and has always been ready to assist in promoting the cause of progress and improvement, while he deplors the moral degeneracy and other follies of the present age.

Mr. Kirkpatrick was born in Mina Burton, Washington Co., Mo., Dec. 4, 1823, the second son of Francis Creswell and Frances (Sparks) Kirkpatrick, natives of Georgia and Tennessee, respectively, who were married in Illinois. The grandfather of Francis C. Kirkpatrick sprang of a Scottish Jacobite family, which was exiled from Great Britain after the war of 1745, when the Duke of Cumberland was obliged to abandon the hanging of the so-called "rebels." This gentleman came to America with six of his brothers, all of whom were over six feet in height. They settled in Georgia, where they became distinguished for bravery and patriotism, as well as for physical prowess. All of them did valuable service under Gens. Washington and Marion, and after the Revolution they scattered to different States, some of them settling in Ohio. The grandfather of Francis C. Kirkpatrick was betrayed while at home on a furlough, by a Tory neighbor whom he had befriended, and the Tories gathered and shot him in his own house. His wife, formerly a Miss Gilham, of Scottish descent, bore him four sons. Her brother, Isaac Gilham, also served in the Continental army, and was once left for dead upon the field; he always bore the saber scars upon his head, though he attained a vigorous old age in Illinois. The subject of this sketch well remembers a visit which he paid to Iowa county in 1836, at which time he was over one hundred years of age. During the Revolution some children of the Gilham family were captured by Indians and taken to the "Illinois Country." Afterward members of the family heard of them through some traders, and went from Georgia to bring them home. From Illinois they were traced to Kentucky and rescued. This party was so much pleased with the country that they formed a colony of over two hundred people among their relatives and neighbors, and migrated to what is now Bond county, Ill. James Kirkpatrick, father of Francis C., joined this colony early in the nineteenth century. In 1834 he came to Wisconsin, and his death occurred in the town of Mifflin, Iowa county, when he was aged seventy-seven years. His wife, Sarah Pettijohn Kirkpatrick, died in the same place, at the age of seventy-four years.

In 1827 Francis C. Kirkpatrick father of the subject of this sketch, with his family located at Galena, Ill. The Indian title to southwestern Wisconsin then a part of Michigan Territory, having been extinguished, the following year he came to Iowa county, and engaged in smelting in what is now the town of Lima, Grant county. With a wooden plow he broke up the first ground ever cultivated in the county, though he gave but little attention to agriculture for some years; this plow was made from a crotched tree, combined with a miner's pick. As most of the provisions for the lead region were brought to Galena by steamer, supplies sometimes became very scarce before the opening of spring navigation, and at one time he and his family were without food for three days. He took part in the Winnebago war, and with his brother William served under Capt. Strode through the Black Hawk war during which time he sent his family to Galena for protection. He was one of the commissioners appointed to locate the seat of Grant county, and also one of the first commissioners of Iowa county. He departed this life in Lima, Grant Co., at the age of seventy-six years, most of which had been spent upon the frontier. His wife was born in 1804, near Nashville, Tenn., and died at Lima, Grant Co., Jan. 15, 1881. Her father, Abel Sparks, came in 1838 to Iowa county, where he attained the age of nearly one hundred years. Her mother, whose maiden name was Sarah Cochran, was born in New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were the parents of seven sons and four daughters. The eldest, George A., died in infancy. George W., and Sarah J., are also deceased. The names and locations of the others, besides James C., are as follows: William D., lives in Mifflin township, Iowa Co., Wis.; Elizabeth A. (Mrs. Jesse Jones), of Platteville, Wis.; Vance L., at Livingston, Wis.; Martha E. (Mrs. D. Bull), in California; Elvira (Mrs. H. Pauley), in Grant county, Wis.; Francis M., at Edmund, same State; and Frederick C., in Colorado.

James C. Kirkpatrick spent most of his boyhood in Iowa county. In March, 1850, he started for California, and drove a team across the Plains, reaching his destination on the last day of July, a quicker trip than was made by most of the overlanders. After spending two years there he returned by way of the Isthmus, where he took a boat to Havana, reaching that city a few days after the execution of the notorious filibuster, Lopez. Considerable excitement prevailed there, but he and his companions were allowed to continue their journey without serious interruption. Since his return he has been extensively engaged in mining and farming in Mifflin township. For some years he gave considerable attention to standard bred horses and Galloway cattle. Among his horses were some of the progeny of "Selim," the famous stallion captured from the British by McDonald, an officer under Gen. Marion's command. The stock was brought to Illinois by relatives of Mr. Kirkpatrick. Live stock bred by him have been exhibited at many fairs, and have captured many premiums. In the fall of 1887 he took sixty head of Galloways to the State fair at Denver, Colo., finding a ready sale for the entire number in that State. Since 1894 he has kept a hotel, "The Kirk House," at Rewey.

Though his early educational advantages were quite limited, Mr. Kirkpatrick has been an extensive reader and a close observer. For many years past he has been collecting historical relics, geological specimens, and other curiosities, and now has quite a museum, gathered from all parts of the world, but no objects more curious than some which he has exhibited near his home. These include the gigantic tooth of a mastodon and a piece of the tusk of another, found near Anderson's Mill, Grant county, the skeleton of which is preserved in the Historical Museum at Madison. He also has sharks' teeth taken from a mound near Avoca, and several hundred specimens of ore and minerals. He has become familiar with several Indian dialects, and understands much of the lore and legends of the aborigines. Soon after the Black Hawk war the neighborhood of Mifflin was visited by a party of peaceable Indians. Most of the men were away at work, and, though a small boy, he felt himself called to defend the home, and would have shot at them had he not been restrained by the ladies of the house. His hostility disappeared, however, as he became more acquainted with the race, and he never had any serious trouble with them, though spending much of his time in their midst.

In political sentiment our subject, is a Democrat. He was made a member of the Masonic fraternity Sept. 6, 1858, at Melody Lodge, No. 2, Platteville, and in 1865 became a charter member of Mifflin Lodge, No. 153, which has since removed to Rewey. In 1893 he was initiated in the Oriental Order of the Palm and Shell, at Dodgeville, by H. R. Coleman, of Louisville, Kentucky.

On Feb. 25, 1846, Mr. Kirkpatrick was married to Mary Mundon, who was born in Jackson county, Ill., Oct. 18, 1827, and died at Mifflin, Wis., Jan. 25, 1895. Of their six sons, three are living. Frederick is one of the most extensive farmers of southwestern Wisconsin, operating over 700 acres in Iowa, and Grant counties; James lives in Kossuth county, Iowa; and Frank Leslie is connected with the hotel at Rewey.

WILLIAM JOHNSON is a leading and representative citizen of the town of Spring Grove, Green county, residing on his farm one mile south of Oakley.

Mr. Johnson is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Morey) Johnson, of Northampton county, Penn., who were of German origin. Jacob Johnson was born in 1782, son of Henry Johnson, was among the early settlers of Easton, Penn., and was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in 1867. About 1812 he married Elizabeth Morey, and they became the parents of eight children: Sally, who married Benjamin Barto; John, deceased; Rebecca, who married Amos Gumm, and is now deceased; Jacob, who died in Pennsylvania; Philip, who resides in Northampton county, Penn.; William, born May 7, 1825; Jesse, who died in Pennsylvania; and Wilson, who lives in Rochester, Michigan.

William Johnson, the subject proper of this article, came West to Lee county, Ill., in 1855, and four years later removing to Green county, Wis., settled on the place he now owns, and where he is found to-day, a good type of the prosperous and contented farmer. On Oct. 7, 1854, William Johnson was married to Katherine Long, who was born Aug. 31, 1829, the eldest of the six children of John and Elizabeth (Eyer) Long, good farming people, of English descent, who ranked among the foremost residents of Northampton county at that time. This marriage has been blessed with five children: (1) Elizabeth, born in Illinois in 1857, married John Straley, and died in Houston, Tex., in 1899. (2) Hebron, born Aug. 26, 1860, died Sept. 13, 1895, leaving a widow and two children. (3) John E., born March 22, 1863, died in infancy. (4) Mary, born Feb. 7, 1866, is the wife of Frank Zimmerman, a farmer of Stephenson county, Ill. (5) Ella, the youngest of the family is the wife of Rev. J. W. Zimmerman, of Green county, Wisconsin.

William Johnson was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in the district school. When he came West he was a poor man, but by the exercise of industry, economy and wise judgment he has come into the possession of a good farm, with all modern improvements, and in his old age is released from the necessity of care and worry. He owns 400 acres of good land, in good condition. In politics he is a Democrat. He has been a consistent member of the United Brethren Church for many years, and is a respected citizen of his community. He is a good man, a devoted husband, a kind and faithful father, and an obliging and generous friend and neighbor.

GEORGE WINTER, whose standing among the older and more prominent farmers of Green county is secure, has a fine farm in the town of Brooklyn. He was born in County Suffolk, England, Jan. 12, 1827, a son of John and Sarah (Peck) Winter, both natives of England. Twelve children were born to them, of whom four are now living; George; James, of Evansville; Catherine, the wife of John Webb, of Australia, and Emma, wife of Thomas Moore, of London, Eng. The father was a farmer and died in England at the age of eighty-three years; the mother died when she was seventy-nine years old. He was a member of the Established Church, but she was allied with the Dissenters. The paternal grandfather died at an advanced age in England, having reared a small family. The maternal grandfather of George Winter was James Peck; he was a farmer and died in England when quite advanced in years, leaving a family of several children.

George Winter was reared on a farm, and had his education in the English schools. In 1854 he came to America and made his location on trackless prairie in Rock county, Wis. The next year he came to Green county, and bought 160 acres of land in both the towns of Union and Brooklyn, with his residence in the last town.

Mr. Winter was married Nov. 12, 1855, to Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Wood) Winter. To them were born: the following children: Fred William, who died when he was six months old; Aibert George, who married Sophia Keepins, and is the father of two daughters, Ethel and Ava Fern; Walter William, unmarried, and lives at home; Ellen Mary, who married J. C. Ellis, and lives in Union township, where they are rearing a family of four children, Verne, Eddie, Arthur and Clifford; Ernest Edward, who wedded Mary Pope, and lives in Union township, and has one son, Merlin. Mr. and Mrs. Winter belong to the Methodist Church, where he was elected honorary class leader, having acted in that position many years. He was also trustee and Sunday school superintendent for many years. In his politics Mr. Winters is strictly independent, although he cast his last vote for William J. Bryan.

Mrs. Winter's parents were both natives of England. They came to America in 1856, and located in Brooklyn township, Green county, where he died in 1858, at the age of fifty-four years. His widow lived to be seventy-two years, and died in 1889. They were the parents of seven children, of whom four are now living: George W., of Durand, Ill.; Charles, a resident of Wisconsin; Elizabeth, Mrs. Winter, and Louisa Sarah, widow of Thomas Dorman, lives in Footville. The father and mother were Episcopal communicants of the church in England. After the death of her father, her mother married for her second husband, Jacob Kersher, who died in 1884. Her paternal grandfather was John Winter, a farmer, who died in England when eighty years old, the father of five children. Her maternal grandfather was John Wood, a hotel keeper of England, and a prominent man, and at one time quite wealthy. He had six children.

Frederick Winter, the brother of George, was at one time mayor of Stratford-on-Avon. He was a Sunday School teacher in the Congregational Church, and a prominent man. At his death a monument was erected by the Sunday School and the citizens generally in attestation of his good life.

LEMUEL H. WARREN, one of the founders of the town of Albany. Green county, is a representative of one of the early Colonial families.

Lovewell Warren, his grandfather, was a native of Marlboro, Mass., where his father followed his trade, that of blacksmith, and whence he had gone to participate in the French war near Quebec. Being deprived of his father by death at the opening of the Revolutionary war, Lovewell Warren early left his native home at Marlboro, the home also of the Howe family, to whom he was related on his mother's side, and located near the village of Montpelier, where he cleared up a farm, and passed the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1834, when he was nearly seventy years of age. He was twice married, his first marriage, to Emma Holden, taking place Dec. 23, 1790; her death occurred Jan. 20, 1813. On her mother's side she was related to the Adams family of Leominster, Mass. On Jan. 2, 1814, Mr. Warren married Olive Bohonon. To the first union five sons and two daughters were born, and to the second came one son.

Lemuel Warren, son of Lovewell, was born in Washington county, Vt., and in early manhood engaged in teaching school, later becoming a mechanic. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was present at the battle of Plattsburg. In 1838, ten years before Wisconsin became a State, he left his New York home and located on a 160-acre farm in Rock township, Rock county, two and one-half miles from Janesville. This was his place of residence for three years, when he sold out and moved to Center township, purchasing 320 acres of land, on which he lived until his death, in 1846, at the age of fifty-five years. He was well educated for the times, and held many important positions in the town, being justice of the peace for many years, doing much clerical work for his neighbors, and marrying many of the pioneer couples. He was also supervisor, and numbering among his accomplishments a knowledge of surveying, his services in that line were much in demand. He married Betsey Richardson, who was born in New York State, daughter of William Richardson, a blacksmith, who died at Granville, N. Y., aged eighty-five. Three of the eight children born to Lemuel and Betsey (Richardson) Warren are yet living: John H., of Cincinnati, Ohio; Lemuel H.; and Eugene, of Albany. After the death of the father the mother removed to Albany, and made her home in a comfortable cottage built for her by her sons Lemuel and Eugene. She died in 1870. In early life she was a Presbyterian, but after her marriage united with the Universalist Church, of which her husband was a member.

Lemuel H. Warren was born in Franklin county, N. Y., Sept. 30, 1830, and was but eight years of age when brought by his parents to Wisconsin. He was reared to manhood on the farm in Center township, Rock county, and received such education as the district schools of the day afforded. In 1854 he gave up farming, and joined his brothers John H. and Eugene in the mercantile and milling business in Albany. They were always spoken of as the "Warren boys," and had their sign painted "The Warren Boys." For many years they continued together with great success, but on account of failing health Lemuel was obliged to sell his interest, which his brothers took, and engage in other work. He moved to Juda, Wis., and there engaged in the lumber business for five years, and then, in partnership with his brothers, took mail contracts for several thousand miles of routes, some of which they sub-let. This kept Mr. Warren out a great deal, and the traveling proved very beneficial. His next work was on a farm which he bought, near Madison, but in 1883 he returned to Albany to make his permanent home there, where he has since lived retired, in his charming home. Besides his other property in Wisconsin, he owns 160 acres of good farm land in Jackson county, Minn. In his political affiliations he has always been a staunch Republican, and while in no sense of the word an office seeker, he has served in several official positions, being appointed postmaster under President Harrison, and continuing in office through half of the term of Grover Cleveland. For three terms he proved a most acceptable president of the village board.

On March 26, 1854, Mr. Warren was united in marriage with Miss Martha Stanley, daughter of Archy and Arluta (Cox) Stanley, and to this marriage came four children: Frank S., of Escanaba, Mich., married Clara Trousdale, and has four children, Bessie and Jessie (twins), Lona and Harriet; Carrie married Charles Morgan, of Mt. Pleasant, and has one daughter, Flossie; Fred L., of Albany, married Ella Lemmel, and has two children, Tessie and Catharine; and Eva L. passed away Feb. 18, 1900, aged twenty-nine years. In their religious faith, the family find hope and comfort in the doctrine of the Spiritualists.

Archy Stanley, father of Mrs. Warren, was an early resident of Susquehanna county, Penn., and came to Wisconsin in 1850, locating in Sylvester township, Green county. Two years later he lost his life while at work in the timber, when he was aged fifty-four years, four months. He was twice married, and his first wife, Arluta Cox, died in 1837, the mother of seven children, all now deceased except Mrs. Warren. Two of the sons, Edward and James, were soldiers in the Civil war, the latter dying in a hospital in Memphis, Tenn. In 1839 Mr. Stanley married, for his second wife, Miss Olive Glidden, of Friendsville, Penn., and to their union came eight children, of whom six are living: Benjamin, of Rossville, Iowa; Susan, of the Odd Fellows Home, Green Bay, the widow of J. B. Perry; Jefferson, of Lyon county, Minn.; Archy, of Chamberlain, S. Dak.; Major, of Juda, Wis.; and Ellen, wife of Thomas Summeril, of Monroe.

Matthew Stanley, grandfather of Mrs. Warren, was a native of England, and on emigrating to this country located in Orange county, Vt., thence to Friendsville, Penn., where he died at a good old age. He was a typical gentleman of the old school, always very particular about his dress, and wore his hair braided in a queue.

OSCAR L. BLACKMAN, a typical farmer and stockman of the town of Platteville, Grant county, has by strict attention to business before him, and an unswerving integrity, made a name for himself, and won a place in the world that entitles him to be classed among the representative men of Grant county.

Mr. Blackman was born in Oneida county, New York, in the month of December, 1839, and is a son of Elisha and Lavina (Henderson) Blackman. They were born in Chenango county, New York, and spent their early lives in their native county. There they were married, and there Mr. Blackman followed the shoemaker's trade until 1853. That year they came West to Wisconsin, making the long and tedious journey in a moving wagon. Mr. Blackman brought along a peddler's stock, and sold it on the way. They settled at Platteville, on a tract of land consisting of 160 acres, which he bought, not far from the village. They made this farm their home during their lives, and it is now owned by Oscar L. Mr. Blackman died in 1893, surviving his wife eight years. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and were widely known as good Christian people. He was a Republican, and held a number of local offices during life. Of their children, Almanzo Blackman was the eldest, and was born in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1836. He obtained his education in his native county, and when he was sixteen years old came West with his parents. He married Miss Ursula Henderson, who was born in Ashtabula county, Ohio, and reared in Grant county. They went West but came back in 1893, and he was killed by the kick of a horse, in 1896, leaving a wife, but no children. Zelora Blackman was born in New York in 1838, and remained single all his life; he has had poor health for many years, and makes his home with his brother, Oscar L., on the farm.

Oscar L. Blackman received his early education in the schools of his native State, and attended school during the winter for a time after his arrival in Wisconsin. In 1861 he left his home in Belmont, and started with teams for California, with a man by the name of Basit. They camped along the Missouri River for two or three weeks, and then went on as far as Fort Bridger, where our subject left Mr. Basit, and began to work for the overland stage company, remaining one month. He then continued his journey as far as Salt Lake City, where he hired out to drive team to Denver, Colo., making two trips. That winter he remained in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and in the spring went through to the Powder river, in Oregon, spending one year there mining. The following spring he went to Idaho, and remained till fall, working in the mines. From there he went to Fort Walla Walla, Wash., and staid until the next spring, when, with others, he started with pack trains to the Kootenay mines, British Columbia; thence again with pack trains they came to Helena, Mont., where Mr. Blackman worked until late in the fall, when he went to Baker City, Oregon, and worked for the overland stage company, continuing in their employ for two years at that place, and a like period of time for the same company in Boise City, Idaho. In the spring of 1870 he left there for Wisconsin, taking the train at Ogden, and upon his arrival resumed the occupation of farming, which has since been his life work.

Mr. Blackman was united in marriage with Miss Huldah J. Hackett, who was born in 1845, a daughter of John K. and Orilla Hackett, of Trumbull county, Ohio, the former a native of New Hampshire, born in 1804, and the latter born in Vermont in 1811. They came to Platteville in 1855, and lived in this town until they died in 1865 and 1899, respectively, Mrs. Hackett at the venerable age of nearly eighty-nine. Mrs. Blackman was mainly educated in the Platteville schools. After their marriage they spent three years in Fayette county, Iowa, Mr. Blackman engaging in farming. He sold out and repurchased in Cherokee county, in the same State, spending seven years in that splendid agricultural region. After the expiration of that time they returned to Wisconsin, and took charge of the old homestead. They are the parents of four children. Charles, the eldest, born in Iowa in 1880, was a student at the Platteville schools; Zelora, born in Iowa in 1882, Helen, born in Cherokee county, in 1884, and George, born in Platteville in 1889, are all bright young people, and are students at the Normal. Mr. Blackman is a Republican, and was brought up in the faith of the Methodist Church.

JOB SLACK, one of the leading representatives of the agricultural interests of Grant county, was borne in Devonshire, England, on March 1, 1832, a son of Job and Anna Slack, both natives of Yorkshire, England, the father having been born in 1803 and the mother in 1805. They came to Lafayette county in 1848, where the father worked in the lead mines of New Diggings, for one year, then moved back to Grant county, and settled on wild land, one mile south of Big Patch, there dying in March, 1851, leaving a wife and four children: Job, our subject, is the eldest; Elizabeth, born in England, is now wife of John Green, and has two children, Frederick and Herbert, both teachers in the high schools of Chicago; Ruth, born in England, is the wife of John Harker, and has three children, George, James and Lydia; Annie, born in England, is now the wife of Thomas Wilkinson, and has the following children, Albert, Edward, Nellie, Annie, Thomas, Emma, James, Hall, Milford and Yetta. The mother of our subject remained on the old homestead until her death in 1869. Both she and her husband were stanch members of the Church of England and good Christian people.

When about seventeen years old, Mr. Slack came to America where he worked in the lead mines of southwestern Wisconsin for several years, afterward going to Montana, where he worked in the gold mines for two years. Upon returning from Montana, he purchased more land in Grant county, and engaged in farming. In 1871 Mr. Slack married Miss Annie F. Fox, who was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1848, and who came with her brothers, George, Charles and Thomas, to Grant county, where she met and married our subject. She was a very worthy lady, kind in her home and charitable to the poor, and her death, in 1876, was the cause of great sorrow, not only to her bereaved husband, but to her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Slack were the parents of three children: Elizabeth, born at the old home, on July 8, 1872, a student of the Platteville Normal, was graduated from the Platteville Normal, class of 1896, and became a successful teacher in Smelser, later entering the State University, where she pursued classical studies; George, born in 1874, married Etta Newton, and resides at Big Patch, where he has a family of four children, Luverne, Virgil, Albert and Nellie; and Job, who died in infancy.

Politically Mr. Slack has always identified himself with the Republican party, and given his services to it and to the community as treasurer of the school board for thirteen years, was a member of the town board, and has been overseer of the many excellent roads for seven years. In religion he is a member of the Primitive Methodist Church, as was his wife, and whenever any good deed is proposed, Mr. Slack's contribution and influence are confidently expected, and always given.

FRANCIS BAKER (deceased) was one of the worthy pioneers of the town of Linden, and represented one of the most prosperous and influential families of Iowa county. Though his early opportunities were rather limited, he possessed natural business qualifications, and besides being a successful farmer was distinguished for his public spirit and benevolent contributions to religious and philanthropic enterprises.

Mr. Baker was born in the Parish of Week St. Mary, Cornwall, England, Dec. 24, 1817, and died at Dodgeville, Wis., Dec. 16, 1897, thereby lacking but eight days of completing the age of fourscore years. His father, Digory

Baker, was the son of one of the most prosperous tenant farmers of Cornwall, and himself accumulated a small fortune. He wisely sought to install his posterity in the New World, which afforded better advantages for material and intellectual development than could be had for them in his native land. He became a citizen of Iowa county, Wis., and died in the town of Linden in 1847, at the age of seventy-one years. His wife, whose maiden name was Thomasine Uglow, died in England. The members of the Uglow family were the rightful heirs of a large estate, the settlement of which has been pending in the English chancery courts for more than one hundred years. This venerable couple were the parents of seven sons and two daughters, of whom the following is a brief record: William died in England; Thomas died at Edmund, Wis., Feb. 5, 1888, aged eighty-three years; Edmund died at the same place, after donating ground for a station, which has since been known by his given name; John U. resides in Madison, at the age of eighty-six years; Francis was next in order of birth; Henry, whose biography will be found upon another page of this volume, resides in Lancaster, Wis.; Digory was for some years a resident of Iowa county, but died in England, at the age of seventy years; Elizabeth (Mrs. Henry Sampson) died at Edmund; and Joanna (Mrs. John Pierce) died in Mineral Point.

At the age of twenty years Francis Baker left home and joined his brother Thomas and other members of the family, who had preceded him to this country and located at Honesdale, Penn., in 1833. At that place he followed the trade of stone mason, in connection with farming, until 1844, when he came to Wisconsin and took up government land in the town of Linden, Iowa county. The locality was then a comparative wilderness, and but little attention had been given to its agricultural development. Being a man of varied resources, he spent a portion of his time at the carpenter's trade, and, discovering lead ore upon the premises, he extracted sufficient mineral to pay for his land, and gave most of his time to mining for several winters. From time to time he made additions to his original purchase, and ultimately became the owner of several hundred acres of the best lands in Iowa county. In 1887 he retired from active pursuits, and spent the balance of his life in the city of Dodgeville. He took an active interest in the affairs of the town and county, serving as a member of the board of supervisors and in other official capacities. In early life he was a Whig, and after the formation of the Republican party became one of its staunch and consistent supporters.

Francis Baker

Mary Baker

On Oct. 13, 1842, Mr. Baker was united in marriage to Mary Dony, who still survives him. She was born at Penryn, Cornwall, England, daughter of Henry and Jennifer Dony, who came to the United States about 1832, settling at Honesdale, Penn., where both attained old age; Mr. Dony passed away at Greenfield, in the same State. Mrs. Baker has reached the age of seventy-seven years, and is still in the enjoyment of fair health. She is the mother of six sons and six daughters, as follows: William H. died at Britt, Iowa, at the age of fifty-five years; John Wesley is a well-known farmer near Cobb, Iowa county; Francis Asbury lives at Bruning, Thayer Co., Neb.; Edwin Alonzo is a citizen of Dodgeville; Mary Emmaline (Mrs. P. Sangwin) died at the age of thirty years, near Bruning, Neb.; Julia Ann (Mrs. James Dony) lives in Washington, D. C.; Thomas James, at Oto, Iowa; Eva Jane (Mrs. Jonathan Jones), at Dodgeville; Sophia Ellen (Mrs. Jabez B. Webb), at Spencer, Iowa; Oscar Louis, at Minneapolis, Minn.; Florence Irene (Mrs. Charles R. Fox), at Cobb, Wis.; and Eliza Melissa (Mrs. Joseph W. Parnley), at Ipswich, S. Dak. The living posterity of Mrs. Baker includes twenty-nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Though they live in many different places, she has visited most of them, and has had the pleasure of seeing all but one of her descendants. For nearly thirty years she has been an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with which her husband united while living at Honesdale, Penn. Mr. Baker was a class-leader of different societies in Iowa county for more than a quarter of a century, and always ranked among the most liberal supporters of the church.

J. A. TODD. Among those people who have devoted long and useful lives to the tillage of the soil, who have been honorable and upright in their every transaction, and have now come to a serene old age, holding the respect and confidence of all who know them, and passing their declining years with a richly deserved competence in southwestern Wisconsin, especially in Grant county, the venerable man whose name introduces this article is conspicuous. He is a retired farmer of Harrison township, and with his years reaching beyond the Psalmist's limit of three score and ten, he is strong and active, and affords in his own person a beautiful illustration of the results of clean and wholesome living on the farm.

Mr. Todd was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1825, and is a son of Elam and Betsy (Gilmore) Todd, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. Elam Todd was the son of Jerred Todd, a Revolutionary soldier, and the grandson of Benager Todd, who was born in Maine. He in turn was the son of Jobe Todd, who was born on the river Rhine, in Germany. Jerred Todd came to Michigan at a very early day and settled at Litchfield, where he died at the advanced age of one hundred and three years. He had a large family, all of whom remained in Michigan, except Elam. He married, returned to New York, and was a Methodist Episcopal minister in Chautauqua county for many years. He and his wife both lived to be very old. They had five children: (1) Sidney B., born in New York in 1817, was a stock dealer, and died in that State, leaving a wife and one daughter, who is now a resident of Michigan. (2) Benager W., now deceased, born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., in 1821, married Elizabeth Burchard, of the same county, and settled in Buffalo; he had two children, Frank, an artist in Buffalo, and a daughter, the wife of Dr. Sprague, of Jamestown, N. Y. (3) Morris, born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., in 1835, married, came West, and settled in Georgetown, Grant county, Wis., where he followed the trade of a carpenter some years, and then moved to Des Moines, Iowa, where he was a merchant the rest of his life; five of his children are living: Frank (a Des Moines merchant), Lillian (Mrs. Joseph Deamer, of Des Moines), a daughter residing in Iowa, Nettie (of Des Moines), and Jack (a bookkeeper in a bank at Pittsburg). (4) Clarissa, born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., is Mrs. Martin Delaney, of Erie, Penn., and has one child, Harriet, now Mrs. George Jackson, of Chautauqua county.

J. A. Todd, who completes the family, grew to manhood in his native county, and received a very fair education in the common schools. When he reached the age of eighteen he entered a blacksmith shop to learn the trade, and finished his apprenticeship in Warren, Penn. For some years he led a roving life, working at Pittsburg, and then at Montreal, Canada, and later at Litchfield, Mich. From Litchfield he returned to his old home in Chautauqua county, and engaged in business. There in 1847 he married Miss Huldah A. Francis, who was born April 12, 1828, daughter of Amos and Isabel (Dowd) Francis, an old and prominent pioneer couple in Genesee county, N. Y. The young couple came to Grant county, Wis., the year of their marriage, and lived some six months at Big Patch, then a mining village. He worked at his trade two years in the town of Elk Grove, and three years in Mineral Point. He bought property, and put up the second house and the first blacksmith shop in Georgetown, and was located there nine years, when he bought a farm near Hazel Green, and engaged in farming in connection with blacksmithing. After a time he sold out at Hazel Green, and moved to Jamestown, where he followed shop work seven years. In 1872 he gave up his trade, and bought the farm on which he is now living, and which has been his home for nearly thirty years. He has made many extensive improvements, clearing up the land, erecting suitable and commodious buildings, and bringing the land to a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Todd experienced a heavy blow, Sept. 6, 1895, in the death of his worthy wife, the dear and faithful companion of almost a half century of toil and struggle. She was the mother of three children who attained mature years: (1) Mortimer died in childhood. (2) Melvina, born in Georgetown, Wis., in February, 1850, married Henry Harbican, now a wealthy and retired farmer of East Dubuque, Ill., and has had ten children, Frank, Walter, Anne, John (deceased), Morton, Jerred, Hiram, Burton, Logan and Henry. (3) Walter, born Dec. 15, 1852, married Lillie A. Stephens, of Platteville, daughter of John and Emily Stephens, pioneers in Grant county. Mrs. Lillie (Stephens) Todd was born in Platteville in 1856, and was educated in the old academy at Platteville, and her death occurred at their home in the town of Ellenboro Oct. 28, 1884, leaving three children: Flora M., a very charming young woman, born Nov. 14, 1876, and educated in the Normal, has had charge of her grandfather's home for some five years; Ira, born in October, 1879; and Mabel, born April 8, 1882, are at home. Walter Todd married for his second wife Sophia Cooper, of Grant county, and she died Aug. 20, 1894, leaving one son, Gernal G., born in October, 1886. Walter Todd is manager for the Climax Feed Mill Company for Grant, Iowa, Lafayette and other Wisconsin counties, and also has charge of his father's home farm. He is a member of the Masonic order and the Knights of the Maccabees. (4) Helen, born in Grant county in July, 1857, is now the wife of A. H. Fuller, of the town of Platteville, where they now reside; they have three children, Hulda F., Alma F., and Isabel D.

Mr. Todd has been identified with the Republican party since its organization, and has held a number of local offices in the towns in which he has resided. He and his wife were formerly members of the Christian Church, and were active workers in its behalf.

HON. JAMES SPENSLEY, of the city of Mineral Point, Iowa county, is one of the old settlers of that locality, and a man well known in the early history of Wisconsin.

James Spensley was born April 17, 1833, in Yorkshire, England, a son of Richard and Alice (Bonson) Spensley. Richard Spensley was also born in England, a son of James and Rosamond (Mason) Spensley, natives of Yorkshire, of Scottish descent. James Spensley, Sr., grandfather of our subject, after the death of his wife came to Dubuque, Iowa, where he died. To him and his wife were born five sons and one daughter: John, who lived and died in England; James, who died in England; Richard, father of our subject; Mason (deceased), who came to Dubuque, Iowa, then to Platteville, Wis., opened up a farm in Grant county, and died there in 1870; William, a resident of South Dakota; and Margaret, now Mrs. Richards, of California.

Richard Spensley, the father of our subject, was reared and married in England. In 1839 he left his native land on the sailing vessel "Rocious," and after a voyage of seven weeks landed in New York, whence he went to Chicago via the Erie canal to Buffalo, and thence on the lakes. From Chicago he traveled by team to Dubuque. Later he removed to Galena, where he mined and operated a smelter, dying in Galena in 1892. His wife passed away in 1886, aged eighty-three. In politics he was a Republican, and he was a worthy man, highly esteemed. To himself and wife were born six sons and six daughters: Robert, who died in Yorkshire; Rosamond, now Mrs. Spensley, of Dubuque, Iowa; Mary, Mrs. Mather, who died at Fort Dodge, Iowa; Elizabeth, Mrs. Ferris, who died in Dubuque, Iowa; James, our subject; Bonson, who died at Shullsburg, Wis.; William, a resident of Galena, Ill., probate judge and attorney-at-law; Margaret, Mrs. Allison; Alice Ann, Mrs. Bailey, of Colorado; Richard, a resident of Galena, Ill., and county clerk; Ellen, Mrs. Gray, of Galena, Ill.; and John Robert, who enlisted at Madison in 1861, in the 16th Wis. V. I., was in the battle of Shiloh, serving through the war, was honorably discharged at Washington, and died at Galena in 1868.

Our subject was reared and educated at Galena, Ill., and in 1850 crossed the Plains to California, driving an ox-team, and remaining in that State three years. In 1853 he returned to Galena, and in 1856 migrated to Mineral Point, engaging in mining, smelting and farming. Later he began to raise stock, built a creamery, and in 1893 embarked in the creamery business. At present he owns and operates creameries at Mineral Point, Linden and Bloomfield, Wis., and at Stacyville, Mitchell Co., Iowa—all well equipped with the modern appliances.

In Galena Mr. Spensley married Miss Elizabeth Todd, who died at Mineral Point in 1873, leaving him with a family of eight children: Francis, a merchant in Iowa; Shirley, now Mrs. Phillips of Chicago; Jennie, now Mrs. Skewis, of Inwood, Lyon Co., Iowa; James Eddy, of Montana; Richard Todd, of Montana; Nellie Vesta, at home; John Bismarck, in charge of creamery at Linden, and a partner of his father; and George, in charge of the Stacyville creamery. In 1874 Mr. Spensley went to England, and while there married Miss Elizabeth Ann Spensley, born in Yorkshire, England, returning with his wife to Mineral Point. Here Mrs. Spensley died in 1875, leaving one son, Montford B., who has just returned from the Philippines, having enlisted at Drake College, Des Moines, Iowa, under Col. Loper; he was in the Signal Service. In 1880 Mr. Spensley was married to Miss Annie Osborne, born in Lafayette county, a daughter of Henry and Nan-nie (Skewis) Osborne, natives of Cornwall, England, and early pioneers of Lafayette county. Mr. Osborne was a merchant of Shullsburg, and later of Mineral Point, where he died in 1897, his wife passing away some years previously. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Spensley one child, Alice Aneta, has been born.

In politics Mr. Spensley is a Republican, and has always been very actively identified with the party. In 1866 he was a member of the State Legislature; has been chairman of the county board for ten years; was instrumental in the erection of the county asylum building in 1885; was chairman of the town board of Mineral Point township for twenty years; and in 1899 was elected mayor of the city. In all the positions of trust he has held Mr. Spensley has made an enviable record, has proven himself a man of honor and ability, and enjoys the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends. Our subject is very active in church work, being a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been Sunday-school superintendent for thirty-three years. Fraternally he is a member of Mineral Point Lodge No. 1, F. & A. M.

HENRY MUESSE, of Lancaster, Grant county, Wis., was for many years the leading contractor and builder of this city, but is now living in retirement. He was born in Prussia June 22, 1836, a son of Philip and Eliza (Rick) Muesse, the former of whom was born in 1806, and the latter two years later. In 1848 the Muesse family, then consisting of the parents and four children, embarked in a sailing-vessel at Bremen (steam navigation at that time being little known on the ocean), and after a voyage of eight weeks landed at Baltimore, Md., whence they went to Philadelphia, Penn., where the father, who was a weaver, found employment in a cotton-mill, and where the parents passed the remainder of their lives, the mother dying in 1864, at the age of fifty-five years, and the father in 1878, in his seventy-third year. Of the five children born to them they brought four to America and these all reached mature years, and were named Elizabeth, now Mrs. Kramer, of Lancaster township, Grant county, Wis.; Henry and George, of the same city; and Wilhelmina, who was married to Albert Weber, and died in Philadelphia. A twin of George died in Germany in infancy.

Henry Muesse learned the trade of carpenter in Philadelphia, and upon his arrival in Lancaster, Wis., in 1855, actively engaged as a builder and contractor until 1895, when he retired. He erected by contract many of the better class of buildings in Lancaster, including the Congregational and the Methodist churches; Mr. Baxter's store building; both bank buildings; besides numerous other edifices of more or less pretensions; and in addition to his contracting business conducted an extensive lumber yard.

In politics Mr. Muesse has always been a staunch Republican, but in local politics he looks upon the best man as the person to vote for, and is never so set but that he can see right from wrong. He has been an alderman of the city of Lancaster a great many times since he resided there, and is now an alderman from his ward, having been re-elected three times to succeed himself, the office always seeking him. The citizens of the city have many times requested him to run for mayor, but he has always declined. Mr. Muesse is a model citizen, paying strict attention to his own business, leaving others to attend to their own—a quality that can not be too highly commended, especially in a small city like Lancaster.

Mr. Muesse was joined in marriage, in Lancaster, with Miss Eliza Reynolds, daughter of Thomas Reynolds, a native of England, but who came from Cleveland, Ohio, to Lancaster, Wis., in 1852. To this marriage have been born children as follows: Olive, the wife of Prof. Emery M. Wood, of Baldwin, Kans., where he occupies the chair of mathematics in the University; John H., who is now and for some years past has been a bookkeeper and cashier in the Lumber Exchange building in Minneapolis, Minn.; Harriet, wife of Frank Nathan, a clothing merchant of West Superior, Wis.; Harry, who studied law with Col. Clark, of Lancaster, Wis., afterward graduated from the law department at Baldwin University, Kansas, and is now practicing law in Ottawa, in the same State; Frank P., who is now a traveling lumber salesman, and makes his home with his father; and Susan and Ralph are still at home. Mr. Muesse has been a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1860, and he and his family are members of the Episcopal Church.

Thomas Reynolds, the father of Mrs. Muesse, was a soldier in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, and died in Cleveland soon after its close. His widow remained in Lancaster, Wis., and for thirty years prior to her death lived with Mr. and Mrs. Muesse.

George Muesse, youngest brother of Henry Muesse, whose life sketch is given in the foregoing paragraph, was born in Germany April 5, 1839, and was about nine years old when brought by his parents to America. He was reared to manhood in Philadelphia, and there learned carpentering. In 1859 he came to Lancaster, Wis., and remained one year only, then returning to Philadelphia. In 1870 he came back to Lancaster, Wis., to reside permanently, and, like his brother, engaged in contracting and building, and also entered the lumber trade. He made a thorough success of both lines of business, realizing a competence, and is now enjoying the fruits of his early industry and enterprise in the quiet retirement of private life. He was also city weighmaster for many years, but was never what is known as an office-seeker.

In July, 1863, George Muesse was married in Philadelphia to Miss Elizabeth Humrichouse, a native of Germany, who came to America with friends of the family in 1858, her parents being then deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Muesse eight children have been born in the following order: Anna E., wife of Leo Baumgartner, of South Dakota; George H., a lumberman of Clinton, Iowa; Elizabeth, wife of Adolph Grimm, of Dubuque, Iowa; Carrie M., wife of Walter Klempell, of Cassville, Wis.; Fred, a druggist of Clear Lake, Iowa; Charles L., a lumberman living in Erie, Ill.; Edward (a twin of Charles) and Cornelia, still at home. Mr. and Mrs. Muesse and the members of the family at home belong to the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and socially they mingle with the best circles in Lancaster, by whom they are held in the highest esteem.

WILLIAM G. RODERICK, one of the wealthy farmers and honorable citizens of Clarno township, Green county, where he resides on his fine farm of 320 acres, six miles southwest of Monroe, was born in Fayette county, Penn., Sept. 11, 1845, son of Henry and Mary (Greenlee) Roderick.

Henry Roderick was born in Fayette county, Nov. 1, 1817, son of David Roderick, a native of Maryland, who in early life moved to Pennsylvania, and became one of the early settlers of Fayette county, where he raised the following named children: John, Daniel, Andrew, Jacob, Samuel, Henry, David and Elizabeth, all now deceased, except Henry. Henry Roderick was married June 20, 1842, to Miss Mary Greenlee, who was born March 21, 1822, and died October 17, 1900. Their union was blessed with ten children, a record of whom follows: Thomas J., deceased; William G.; Samuel married Clara Humphrey, and died August 10, 1900; Jacob L., a thrifty farmer of Decatur township, married Allie Fleek; Charles, deceased; David married Susan West, of Sylvester township; Oliver, deceased; Lydia A., unmarried, resides with her father in Juda, Wis.; Albert married Lucy Miles; and Emma married George Hemstreet, a farmer of Jefferson township.

William G. Roderick was brought by his parents from his Pennsylvania home to Green county, Wis., in 1862, and has continued in farming all his life, having been trained from childhood to that occupation. He is very industrious and equally progressive and his broad acres give evidence of his careful attention. The substantial nature of the buildings he has erected has added much to the beauty of the place, and, taken altogether, he has one of the finest and most highly cultivated and improved farms in Clarno township.

On Feb. 23, 1871, Mr. Roderick was united in marriage with Miss Mary Mitchell, daughter of Washington and Pamela (Newman) Mitchell, early settlers of Green county. Six children blessed this union, namely: Charles, a farmer of Sylvester, married Adeline Elmer, and has four children, Mary, Elmer, Pearl and Alvin; Frank married Addie Trumpy, of Clarno, and has one child, Edith; Addie married Charles Stair, a farmer of Clarno, and has two children, Henry and Joseph; George C., Harry and Henry, are at home. Mrs. Roderick was born July 19, 1851, and was the eldest in a family of five children, the others being: Isaac, who wedded Sophia Row, and now lives in Iowa; Harriet, who married Enoch J. Blackford, of Juda, Wis.; Hannah, who married John Merris, of Iowa; and Addaline, wife of George Gracy, of Iowa. The mother of these children Mrs. Mitchell, died Oct. 7, 1864, and the father, Washington Mitchell, son of Abner Mitchell, an early settler of Green county, married for his second wife, Mary McVane, who bore him three children: Cora, wife of Walter Parke, of Milwaukee; Bertha, of Chicago, and Charles, of Brodhead, Wis. Mr. and Mrs.

Mitchell live in Brodhead, the former having retired from active labor on his farm.

In his political faith Mr. William G. Roderick is a staunch Republican, and has held a number of town offices in the gift of the people. His own education was acquired in the district schools of Green county, and the interest then engendered has never been lost, and he still takes an active part in everything pertaining to educational matters, and has served most efficiently as school director. For forty years he has been a consistent member of the Juda Baptist Church. In every walk of life he has been found steadfastly endeavoring to be frank, honest and upright, and is one of the most highly respected citizens of Clarno township.

DAVID FAWCETT, pioneer farmer and miner of New Diggings, Lafayette county, is one of the few living representatives of those early days of Wisconsin Territory when the inhabitants were chiefly red men.

Mr. Fawcett was born in Yorkshire, England, Aug. 22, 1819, son of Ralph and Isabella Fawcett, both of whom died in England. He grew to manhood in his native country, and in 1844 located in New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he engaged in mining until his marriage, and for some time after. In 1870 he purchased the James Harcker farm, one mile west of the village of New Diggings, and has since made that his home. He married Mrs. Elizabeth Hutchinson, daughter of Frank and Elizabeth Raw, the former for many years manager of the Yorkshire mines, where he had the confidence and respect of all who came in contact with him. Mrs. Fawcett was born in Yorkshire, England, Sept. 2, 1825, and was one of eight children, four of whom came to Wisconsin. In England she wedded James Hutchinson, who came to Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., in 1845, and died two weeks after their arrival, leaving two little daughters: Isabella, now the wife of John Eastwood, of Nebraska; and Mary, who married Henry Coulthard, and died at their home in Taylor county, Iowa, in June, 1900, leaving her husband with ten children. To Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett have been born a large family of children, as follows: (1) Ralph, born in November, 1846, married Miss Betsy Eastwood, and is a retired miner, living at South Wayne, Wis. (2) Elizabeth, born in October, 1849, married Ralph Spencely, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has six children, Mary, Minnie, Frank, Annie, Dave and George. (3) Alice, born June 13, 1852, died April 13, 1854. (4) Frank, born in February, 1855, married Miss Lizzie Pedley, of Cobb, and with their family of seven children, Mary, David, Lillie, Pedelty, Harrison, George and Birdie, they make their home in Taylor county, Iowa. (5) Thomas, born in May, 1858, now a farmer of Nebraska, married (first) Jennie Hird, of Dubuque, Iowa, who died in June, 1898, leaving one daughter, Alice, who died June 9, 1900. He married (second) Lizzie Brown, of New Diggings, and has one daughter, Eva. (6) James A., born in October, 1860, resides on the homestead with his parents. (7) Sarah Alice, born Dec. 31, 1862, married John Calvert, of Dubuque, and has three children. Roy, Grace and David. (8) George, born Dec. 11, 1865, married Katie Horsley, of Benton, and has one daughter, Mary E.; he lives on a part of his father's farm, acting as manager of the estate. (9) William, born March 17, 1869, now of Lead Mine, Wis., married Annie Howe, and has one son, David W. In religious belief this entire family has long been connected with the Primitive Methodist Church, Mrs. Fawcett having joined over forty years ago. In political sentiment Mr. Fawcett coincides with the principles of the Republican party, and he keeps well in touch with public events. He has been eminently successful in his work, and has acquired a competence to keep him and his wife in comfort and ease during the evening of their lives, and, while too much could not be said regarding his own good management. Mr. Fawcett attributes this success largely to his good wife's noble example, good counsel, and loving help.

J. C. ULA was, in his life time, one of the leading citizens of York township, Green county, and his memory survives in the hearts of many warm and admiring friends. He was born in Norway Aug. 31, 1840, and was a son of Christen and Olaug (Olson) Ula, both natives of Norway. His parents came to this country in 1852, and for a time were settled in Albany, Wis. They removed to Section 17, of the town of York, where they took up government land, and made their home the remainder of their lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Christen Ula were the parents of five children: John C., born as stated above, and brought to this country when a lad of twelve years; Julia, born Oct. 16, 1841, is the wife of E. L. Soaper, of the town of York; Hans, born July 12, 1843; Ole, born Aug. 15, 1845, is a farmer in Buffalo county, Wis.; and Inger, born in 1847, is now dead. Christen Ula was born in 1808, and died in the town of York, in 1888. His wife was born in 1804, and died in 1891. Both were buried in the Ula Cemetery, on the Ula homestead. They are well remembered among the early settlers of Green county, and were faithful and devoted members of the Lutheran Church.

John C. Ula was married to Miss Thora Anderson, of the town of York, June 27, 1864, and to this union were born the following children: (1) A. C., born May 12, 1865, is a thrifty farmer of the town of York, and his sketch appears in another place; (2) Andrew, born July 17, 1866, was a merchant in Argyle, Wis., where he died Sept. 25, 1889; (3) Lena, born Dec. 7, 1867, is the wife of Edwin Iverson, of Emmet county, Iowa; (4) Gertie, born April 6, 1869, is the wife of Melren Eidsmore, of Moscow, Iowa county; (5) Nettie, born Dec. 17, 1870, died at the age of fifteen years; (6) Olie, born May 2, 1872, married John Ellestad, and was left a widow, with one child, Norman J.; both have returned to the home of her mother on the old farm; (7) Hannah, born March 19, 1874, is the wife of A. O. Brager, of North Dakota; (8) Peter O., born Feb. 5, 1876, remains on the old homestead, and is now engaged in its cultivation for his mother; (9) John, born Feb. 1, 1878, is also at home; (10) Tena, born Dec. 25, 1879, has charge of the post office at Ula; (11) Anna, born Nov. 29, 1879, died at the age of three years; (12) Clara, born Jan. 30, 1884, is at home; (13) Anton, born Feb. 27, 1886; (14) Oscar F., born Dec. 9, 1888; (15) a child, born May 2, 1892, died when three years old; (16) Alma, born Feb. 17, 1893, is the youngest of this interesting family of sixteen children. Mrs. Ula was born Aug. 11, 1847, a daughter of Andrew and Gertrude (Paulson) Anderson, of Adams township. When her parents came to this country in 1857 she accompanied them, and was educated in the local schools.

John C. Ula was reared on the home farm, and had his education in the public school. Choosing farming as his life work, he made himself prominent in the community in which he lived by his character, industry and integrity. For many years he was justice of the peace, and at different times was constable, notary public, and for eleven years continuously was chairman of the town board. In the spring of 1865 Mr. Ula enlisted in the 46th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war. The Ula post office was established by him, and he was its first postmaster. He was a good neighbor, and one of the leading men, filling a marked place in local affairs, and dying Jan. 24, 1898. Mr. Ula began life a poor man, and before his death was the owner of 200 acres of choice farm land, on which he made his home, and where he reared a large family, the surviving members of which are all filling honorable and useful places in the world. Well does he deserve a conspicuous place in these pages, devoted to the men who accomplished much in Green county, the effect of which is to make it one of the banner counties of the State.

SAMUEL THOMAS, Esq., one of the most worthy citizens of Iowa county, was a resident of Mineral Point for nearly a half-century, and well-known to the pioneers of that city and adjacent places. For over thirty years he upheld the dignity of the law, and his conscientious efforts to balance the scales of justice with wisdom and impartiality won the unanimous approbation of his associates, and the courteous and affable manner in which he discharged the minor duties of his position added much to his personal popularity.

Mr. Thomas was born in Cambourn, Cornwall, England, Nov. 24, 1806, and his death occurred at Mineral Point, Aug. 3, 1879. But little is known of his ancestry or early life, but he evidently enjoyed excellent moral and religious training, while his secular education was supplemented by a discerning mind and ample business experience. His father, after whom he was named, spent most of his life mining at Cambourn, but came to this country in old age and died in Mineral Point. About 1833, the subject of this notice arrived in Mineral Point, which he found to be a frontier village comprising a few miners' cabins, and the log fort which had been erected a year or two previous, near the present intersection of Commerce and Fountain streets, to defend the settlement from the notorious Black Hawk and his followers. Peace had been restored, however, and he secured some of the richest diggings in the vicinity, to the operation of which he gave his attention for some years. His first home was near the present location of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway station, but as no such route of transportation had even been thought of at that time, he was obliged to drive to Galena for most of his provisions and supplies, two days being required to make the trip. Wild deer often came to drink at the spring near his cabin, wolves prowled within the present city limits, and the Indians were frequent callers, though their greatest offense consisted in begging for food and clothing.

Having met with success in mining, Mr. Thomas devoted most of his time in later life to the office of justice of the peace, which he filled for more than three decades previous to his death. This position gave him a wide acquaintance, and in his day there was probably no man in southwestern Wisconsin who was more widely known or more deservedly popular than he. There was a great demand for his services at weddings, and he often drove long distances into the surrounding country to perform that ceremony, or other official duties. He was a man of decided views on most public questions, but did not seek to make his convictions offensive to those who might entertain different principles.

Mr. Thomas was identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in political sentiment was a Democrat, exercising no inconsiderable influence in the local councils of the party. He had long been identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and filled numerous positions in that fraternity. His name appears among the applicants for a renewal of the charter of Miner's Lodge, No. 1, in 1873. The last named lodge, which is now in a very flourishing condition, is the oldest in the Northwest, having first been instituted in 1835 by Special Deputy Grand Sire Stephen Taylor, who came from Pottsville, Pennsylvania, expressly for that purpose.

On Aug. 13, 1832, Mr. Thomas was married to Mrs. Elizabeth Bennett, widow of James Bennett, who was killed by accident in a mine in Cornwall. Mrs. Thomas was born in Cambourn, England, Nov. 18, 1800, and died at Mineral Point, Jan. 14, 1888. Her maiden name was Rule, and her parents both lived and died in Cornwall. By her first marriage she had one daughter, Elizabeth Bennett, now the wife of Edward Prideaux, of Mineral Point. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were the parents of two daughters: Mary Ann, now Mrs. M. A. Jenkins, of Fall City, Neb.; and Maria, now Mrs. William Lanyon, of Mineral Point.

NICHOLAS SHERWIN, a retired farmer of the town of Lima, Grant county, was born in County Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 6, 1819, and is a son of Christopher and Jane Sherwin, who were born, reared and died in that county. Four of their children came to the United States. William Sherwin, the oldest son, came to Wisconsin in 1846, and worked in the lead mines of Grant county some years, and then crossed the Plains to California, meeting with good success in the gold mines. In 1853 he returned to Grant county, and bought the farm adjoining that on which Nicholas has lived for years, and died in 1896, leaving a widow, but no children. Ellen and Mary Sherwin came to Philadelphia where they lived some years, and then came on to Benton, Grant county, where they lived until their death. Ellen married Thomas Hines, and left four children, who now live in the West.

Nicholas Sherwin grew to manhood in Ireland, and in 1850 crossed the ocean to New York, worked there a year, and then went to Philadelphia, where for two years he found employment with a Catholic priest. In 1855 he came West to Grant county, Wis., with his brother William, then returning by way of Philadelphia from California. Before leaving Philadelphia for a home on the western frontier Nicholas Sherwin was that year married to Miss Margaret Archibald, who was born in Ireland in 1837, where she had her education in one of the Sisters' schools, and came to this country in 1855. Reaching his destination in Grant county, Mr. Sherwin, in company with his brother William, purchased his present home, and together they cleared it up and put it in order; after this was done they divided the land, each building separate homes. Here Mr. Sherwin and his wife reared their family, and here Mrs. Sherwin died in December, 1894. She was a loyal daughter of the Roman Catholic Church, and lived the life of a devoted Christian woman. She reared a large family, of whom Annie and Elizabeth, who passed away in their young womanhood, were bright and promising girls. Christopher, the oldest living child, was born in 1856, and is still living in the home, unmarried; Nicholas, born in 1859, married Miss Eugenia Freshette, of Potosi, and lives on his farm in the town of Lima, where they are rearing a family of three daughters, Eulalia, Annie M., and Mary T.; Jennie, born at the old homestead in 1862, had a good common-school education, and has been in charge of the home since her mother's death, and takes an active part in the work of the Catholic Church, of which she is a devout member; William, born in 1865, married Miss Maria J. Henry, of Grant county, and settled on his farm in the town of Lima, where she died in 1894, leaving no family; Mary E., born in July, 1871, was educated in the home schools, and lives at home; John T., born in 1874, is living unmarried at the home; James P., born in 1877, Joseph R., are both living at home, and assisting in the care of the farm.

Nicholas Sherwin came to this country without a dollar when a young man, and has made his way in the world to an enviable position against many serious difficulties. He is frugal and industrious and with the help of his children, has made one of the choice homes of the county. His children are a credit to any parentage, and his third son, William, has become a prominent man in his community, having been elected district school clerk at the age of twenty-one years, filling that office for twelve successive years, when he resigned feeling that some one else ought to serve for a time, and he has also filled the office of assessor.

DEDRICK HARMS (deceased) was numbered among the early pioneers of Wisconsin, who, braving the dangers from savages and wild beasts, pushed on into the wilderness, breaking the virgin soil, felling the mighty trees of the forest, and bringing well cultivated farms and populous cities from a seeming chaos. Those who enjoy the advantages now offered by the civilization of the mighty Commonwealth of Wisconsin should never forget to whom all this luxury is due, nor fail to render just tribute to the memory of those who went before to "prepare a way" for following generations.

Dedrick Harms was born in Ottimania, Hanover, Germany, March 5, 1805, a son of Cord and Catharine Harms, who lived and died in their native land, Germany. Our subject received a fair education in Germany, in 1834 crossed the ocean, and landing at New Orleans, was engaged in a sugar factory for two or three years. Later he removed to Dubuque, Iowa, worked there for a short season, and then went to Platteville, Wis., following mining. In 1843 Mr. Harms purchased forty acres of land in Smeiser township, near Platteville, to which he added, from time to time, until he finally owned an entire section, and improved all of it. The first home was a tiny log house, built by himself, in which he and his wife began their married life, but as time progressed, and he prospered, Mr. Harms erected a comfortable, substantial brick residence, in which he lived until his death, Sept. 4, 1882. The loving helpmate of his life survived until March 10, 1898. Both of these worthy people were consistent members of the Lutheran Church, and were instrumental in founding the first church of that denomination in Platteville. In political matters Mr. Harms was a Democrat, but never aspired to office, and in this, as in all things, he was conscientious, always voting as he deemed right. The marriage of Dedrick Harms occurred Aug. 6, 1843, to Miss Maria M. Melvin, daughter of James A. and Sarah S. (Roberts) Melvin, natives of Maryland and Virginia, respectively. Mrs. Harms was born in Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 25, 1823, and was brought to Wisconsin in 1841, by her parents. The mother of Mrs. Harms was very highly educated in Virginia, and taught school for a number of years after locating in Wisconsin. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dedrick Harms: John C., Mary E., Henry H., Dedrick W., James W., Louis L., Martha J., Sarah E., Emily M., George L., and one that died in infancy. (1) John C. Harms, the eldest, was born in Grant county, in June, 1844, and grew to manhood on the farm, receiving his education in the district school and in the Platteville high school. In October, 1866, he was married to Elizabeth Speth, and took up his home on a portion of the old homestead, but died in Platteville, leaving a wife and three children, Emma M., Mary C. and Johanna, all now deceased; the mother is living, and resides in Platteville. (2) Mary E. Harms was born in October, 1845, received her education in the district schools and the Platteville Academy, and in January, 1868, married Christopher F. Schroeder, of Platteville, who died March 17, 1894, leaving three children, George; James, now residing on the old homestead; and Annie, now Mrs. Brugger, of Platteville, for sketches of whom see elsewhere; Mrs. Schroeder now resides in Platteville, and is a very agreeable lady. (3) Henry H. Harms was born Feb. 16, 1848, grew to manhood on the old homestead, and on March 16, 1880, married Miss Dora L. Walferman, of Elmo, Wis., formerly of Germany; they resided on one of the farms of Dedrick Harms, in Lafayette county, where Henry H. died Nov. 11, 1898, leaving a wife and three children, John, Mamie and Emma, all of whom are still living on the farm. (4) Dedrick William Harms, born Jan. 30, 1850, died April 23, 1856. (5) James W. Harms, born Feb. 20, 1852, married in March, 1883, Sophia Logemann, of Germany, and they reside in Platteville; they have no family. James W. Harms was educated at the Platteville Normal, and is one of the prominent men of that city. (6) Louis L. Harms, born in October, 1853, married Annie M. Riege, in September, 1880; they reside in Platteville, on Pine street, and have two children, Benjamin D. (who is the proprietor of one of the leading hotels of Dubuque) and Pearl L. (7) Martha J. Harms, born in April, 1855, died while a young lady, mourned by all, in June, 1886. (8) Sarah E. Harms, born in May, 1859, educated in the Platteville Normal, was married to Dr. A. R. Law, of Belmont, now a resident of Madison, Wis., and one of its leading physicians. Three children have been born to them, Blossom C., Robert A. and John. (9) Emily M. Harms, the youngest daughter, was born in April, 1860, educated at the State Normal and at St. Clair Academy of Wisconsin, and is a lady of refinement and culture; at present she manages the old homestead, and also owns a fine farm in the vicinity, which was bequeathed to her by her father. (10) George L. Harms, born April 25, 1862, received his education at the State Normal, and now resides at the old homestead, managing the large property left by his father, in addition to a well-cultivated farm of his own, adjacent; at the present writing he occupies the office of school treasurer, and is very popular in the community, being well-known for his honesty, integrity and uprightness of principles. (11) The youngest, born Nov. 3, 1864, died in infancy. All the members of this old pioneer family have adhered steadfastly to the principles of the Democratic party, and in religious matters to the Lutheran Church.

Maria W. Hamme Dedrick Hearn

JOHN HARMS, or "Uncle John Harms," as he is affectionately called by his neighbors, as well as family, the brother of Dedrick Harms, is a venerable old gentleman of some eighty-nine years, and is as hale and hearty as many who have scarcely passed the fourscore milestone. The birth of this good old man occurred at Ottomania, Hanover, Germany, Feb. 26, 1812. In 1838, after he had given the compulsory military service, John Harms decided to join his brother Dedrick, in America, and upon arrival in this country proceeded direct to Dubuque, Iowa; his first work was fencing the lot on which the "Kansas City House" now stands. Later he removed to Platteville, and followed mining with his brother on what was then known as "Dutch Range." In time he purchased land, added to it, and became the owner of one of the finest farms in Grant county.

When the gold fever broke out John Harms, with a party of others, crossed the Plains to the gold fields of California, remaining two years. The trip across the Plains consumed three months, and while journeying Mr. Harms learned to read English. After returning from California he resumed farming, continuing this occupation until 1872, when he visited his native land. As a citizen, John Harms is distinguished as a type of the Christian gentleman, honest, upright in his dealings, and considerate of the unfortunate. Having amassed a large property, by his own unaided labors, he is deserving of much respect and esteem. Taking a deep interest in political matters, Mr. Harms soon made himself felt as a factor in the workings of the Democratic party, and was finally chosen, in 1863, to represent his district in the State Assembly, where he made a record of which he may well be proud. In addition to this office Mr. Harms has also acceptably filled many local positions, and has always discharged the trusts reposed in him honorably and satisfactorily. In religious convictions, like the other members of the family, he has always been a steadfast Lutheran, and an active worker in that church. Too much respect cannot be paid this true, loyal, upright old man, who, after a lifetime of hard labor, is still a recognized factor in the life of his family and neighborhood, and a living example of all that is best and noblest in human nature.

When the two brothers, Dedrick and John Harms, came to Platteville, it was a small village, and Wisconsin was but a territory. Year by year they saw civilization advance, the inhabitants increase, until now Wisconsin stands among the largest and most important States of the Union, and Platteville is a flourishing city. The part borne by these brothers in the development of Grant county was an important one, and their names will always be remembered among the sturdy and successful pioneers of the locality.

HOMER P. MIX, M. D., homeopathic physician and surgeon, Highland, Iowa county, is well known, both professionally and socially, in southwestern Wisconsin. Since 1881, a period of twenty years—with the exception of an interval during 1886-87, when he was sojourning at Mineral Point—he has practiced his profession at Highland.

Dr. Mix is a native of Wisconsin, born in 1851, in Orion, Richland county, and comes of good old New England stock, his father, E. N. Mix, having been born in Connecticut, of an early New Haven family. When a young man he came West to Illinois, and there married Lucinda Pease, afterward, about the year 1850, removing to Wisconsin, and settling in Richland county. Later they made their home in Green county, where they both died several years ago, the mother surviving the father about a couple of years. By occupation E. N. Mix was a carpenter and builder. In all things he was a typical New Englander, and was an Abolitionist in slavery days. In early life he was identified with the United Brethren Church, but in later years united with the M. E. Church, of which he and his wife were communicants till their death. They had a family of four children, three of whom are living at this writing: Homer P., our subject; Bessie, wife of J. Pile, of the town of Clyde, Iowa Co., Wis.; and Ethiel N., a Congregational minister in the town of Clyde.

Homer P. Mix received his earlier education at the common schools of his native place, and, having decided on taking up the study of medicine in the homeopathic school, entered Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, graduating therefrom in the class of '80. During his college course he was a member of the private class that received clinical and didactic lectures on the eye and ear. For a short time after graduation he practiced in Chicago, and then returned to Wisconsin, locating in Highland.

John C. Harvey

In 1883 Dr. Mix married Agnes Jenkin, daughter of Samuel Jenkin, an early settler of Mineral Point, Wis., a sketch of whom appears elsewhere. Four children have graced this union: Agnes, Homer, Amy and Bessie. The entire family are members of the M. E. Church, toward which the Doctor contributes liberally in a material way, and in which he is an active and earnest worker. Dr. Mix is possessed of high literary attainments, and has written many short stories and poems which have appeared in the Chicago Inter Ocean and other publications. Among the poems that possess special merit may be mentioned the following: "Only a Sunbeam," "A Sea-Shell's Story," "After the Rain," "The Sunset Sky" and "The Silent City." In the cause of temperance and education he takes earnest interest, in fact, in whatever tends to promote the moral and religious growth of the community in which he lives, and where he is held in the highest esteem.

HUBERT SCHUELTER, a well-known shoemaker, who has efficiently served as marshal in Cassville, Grant county, for the past eight years, and deputy sheriff and constable for twenty-three years, was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1847. He came to the New World in 1854 with his parents, Mathias and Gertrude (Fux) Schuelter, also natives of Prussia. Coming directly West, the family located in Potosi, Grant Co., Wis., in October of that year, and there made their home for some time. In 1867, however, the father moved to Harrison township, same county, where he continued to reside until called from this life, in 1879. The mother died in the same township in 1874. To them were born six children, of whom four are still living, namely: Hubert; Mrs. Kate Brockert, of Waterloo township, Grant county; Mrs. Margaret Grooms, of Cassville; Mrs. Barbara Denney; and Gertrude and Francis, deceased.

Since the age of seven years Hubert Schuelter has been a resident of Grant county, and in Potosi he was educated and learned the shoemaker's trade, which he has followed during his business career. In 1885 he came to Cassville, and has since been identified with its business affairs. At Platteville, Wis., Dec. 31, 1869, Mr. Schuelter was united in marriage with Miss Florence Chapman, a native of Harrison township, Grant county, and a daughter of Ammyson and Mary (Drulard) Chapman, pioneers of this section of the State, who are mentioned more fully in the sketch of A. B. Chapman, elsewhere. Both are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Schuelter have seven children: Lena, Anna, Henry, Minnie, Wesley, Freddie and Burdean.

During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Schuelter enlisted at Potosi, in 1864, in the 1st Wisconsin Cavalry, for one year or during the war, and was mustered into the United States service at Madison, Wis., the regiment being assigned to the Western Department of the Army of the Potomac. He took part in many scouting expeditions in Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, and as a member of Wilson's cavalry was in many skirmishes with Gen. Forrest's command. Mr. Schuelter was personally connected with the capture of Jefferson Davis. He was honorably discharged at Edgeville, Tenn., Aug. 27, 1865, and returned to his home in Potosi. He became one of the charter members of Beetown Post, G. A. R., but is now connected with Joseph Mueller Post, No. 218, of Cassville, which has eighteen members in good standing, and a strong Ladies Relief Corps. Mr. Schuelter is quite prominent in Grand Army circles, and is now serving as commander of his post. A staunch supporter of the Republican party, he takes an active interest in political affairs, and never withholds his aid from any enterprise which he believes will prove of public benefit.

THOMAS SIMMONS, now a retired farmer of Belmont, Lafayette county, has led a long and useful life from the highest motives, and well deserves the universal respect and confidence which come to him from all who know him.

Mr. Simmons was born in Richland county, Ohio, Oct. 16, 1833, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Keifer) Simmons, who came from the East and settled in Richland at a day when it was still frontier territory. After some years they came still further West, and secured a home in Richland county, Ill., where Mr. Simmons bought a farm. In 1846 they came to Wisconsin, and bought and preempted government land in Elk Grove, Lafayette county, after a stay of two years in Big Patch, Grant county. Here they spent their remaining years. Mr. Simmons died in 1868, and his widow survived several years, dying in 1878, at the age of eighty-two. They were old-time Methodists, good religious people, and their simple and unassuming virtues well deserve commemoration. He helped to erect the first church building in this section, and served as one of the trustees for many years. Mrs. Simmons was widely known for her kindly and helpful visits whenever sickness appeared among her neighbors. They had a family of eight children, of whom (1) Julia A., born in Ohio, is now the widow of George Wymen, and lives in Iowa, with her son Charles; her daughter, Virginia, is Mrs. John Hills, of Dubuque, Iowa. (2) Rebecca, born in Ohio, married Alfred Bray, and moved to Iowa, where he died leaving her with two sons—Alonzo, of Missouri; and Thomas, who died at Madison a few years ago. Mrs. Bray is now living on her father's farm in Elk Grove township. (3) Hettie died when a young woman, at her parents' home. (4) Emily, born in Ohio, married Robert Ray, of that State, and lived some years in Lafayette county. They moved to Sparta, Wis., where she died, leaving a family. (5) Jane, born in Ohio, married Samuel Miles, and died, leaving four children, all of whom are residents of Omaha, Neb. (6) Lydia, born in Ohio, married William Andrews, of Lafayette county, Wis., and now lives in Benton, Iowa. (7) John Simmons married Miss Ellen Huntington, of Lafayette county, and his one son, Eli. He lives on a farm in the town of Elk Grove.

Thomas Simmons received but a scanty education in the public schools during his boyhood, the schools of that day being very far from what they have since become. He grew up under the parental roof, and in 1856 married Miss Kate Smith, of Lafayette county, Wis., the estimable and worthy daughter of William and Mary (Howie) Smith, both of whom were born and reared in Scotland where they married. They emigrated to this country early in life, and made their home for a few years in the State of New York, moving thence to Maryland, where Mr. Smith engaged in business as a contractor and builder of masonry and wood work, doing a large amount of work on public enterprises in that State. In the early 'forties they moved to Galena, Ill., Mr. Smith continuing contracting work for some two years, at the expiration of which time he bought a farm in Lafayette county, settled his family thereon, and engaged in its cultivation as long as he lived. He died in 1888, and his widow survived until April, 1897, making her home with her daughter Mary, in Iowa. They had five children: Mary E., who is the wife of Harvey Yaw, of Franklin county, Iowa; Lizzie, Mrs. Joseph Sheirbon, of Iowa; George, a prosperous farmer of Nebraska; Robert, of Iowa; and Kate, Mrs. Thomas Simmons.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Simmons purchased the old home farm of his father, and also that of her father, consolidated them, and now own a magnificent rural estate of 260 acres. Mr. Simmons put up a new house on the farm, and thoroughly remodeled all the old buildings, making his property one of the choicest farms to be found in the southwestern part of the State. They made this their home until 1894, when they moved into a fine house on Main street, Belmont, which Mr. Simmons had purchased, and he is now retired from the labor of active life. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have reared a family of nine children: (1) William J., born in 1857, married Mollie Prichard, and resides in Belmont, where he is a contractor and builder. They have four children, Willie, Myrtle, Matte and Even. (2) Jennie Simmons was born on the farm in 1859, was given a good education at the Platteville Normal, became a teacher, and taught several terms in Illinois. She is now Mrs. W. T. Owens, of Loup City, Neb., where her husband is a successful contractor and builder. They have four children, Pearl, Wilber, Bessie and Roscoe. (3) John E., born in 1864, married Miss Susan Riter, resides in Belmont, and has two children, Charles and Orval. He is one of the large cattle dealers of this section, and owns the "Warr House," and other real estate and building property in the city. (4) Arthur, born in 1866, married Miss Elizabeth Teasdale, of Warren, Ill., and they reside on the old home farm of his father. (5) Etta, born in 1868, is Mrs. Joseph Metcalf, and lives near Shullsburg. (6) Edith, born in 1871, is Mrs. Joseph Riter, of Belmont. (7) Charles L., born in 1873, graduated from the Normal at Platteville, and is now principal of the high school. He married Miss Alberta Chapman, of Colorado, a graduate of the University at Denver, and a lady of culture. (8) Howard R., born in 1875, is unmarried, and is in the employ of his brother John. He is a graduate of Platteville Business College. (9) Durward, born in 1879, has just graduated from a business college at Rockford, Ill.; he is unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have belonged to the local Methodist Episcopal Church for many years, have worked hard to build up its interests, and have generously contributed to its coffers. Politically he has always been a Republican but has never aspired to official honors.

KNUDT THORSON, who at the time of his death ranked among the well-to-do farmers of Jordan township, Green county, had won his substantial position by well-directed industry and a life of persevering energy, and was held in the highest esteem by his numerous friends in that section.

Mr. Thorson was born Sept. 13, 1825, in Norway, of which country his parents, Thorsten and Mary (Knudtson) Thorson, were also natives, the family coming thence to America in 1846, and settling in Green county, Wis. They were among the early settlers of Jordan township. Of the six children in this family, Knudt, the eldest, is our subject. Ole is deceased. Aslag is a farmer in Iowa. Carrie is the wife of Lars Dustrand, of Dane county, Wis. Mary is the wife of Kittil Klabo, of Iowa. Carrie is the wife of Harold Stone, of Iowa. The parents are buried in the Norwegian cemetery in Jordan township.

Knudt Thorson adopted farming as his life vocation, and by good management and thrift acquired a handsome property, owning at the time of his death a fine tract of 340 acres, highly improved, on which his family still reside. It is located in Sections 33 and 34, Jordan township, one mile north of Browntown. A fine barn and handsome two-story dwelling are among the improvements on this place, which takes rank with the best in the locality. Mr. Thorson commenced his business career under adverse circumstances. He was obliged to work hard from boyhood, thus being denied the advantage of a good education, but his honorable and industrious life had its reward in spite of all the discouragements occasioned by a lack of early opportunities. Mr. Thorson died in 1890, deeply mourned throughout the community where his active life had been passed. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, and his political affiliations were with the Republican party.

On June 10, 1860, Mr. Thorson was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Everson, of Jordan township, daughter of Ever and Julia (Christopher) Everson, who came to this country and to Green county, Wis., in 1852, from Norway, where Mrs. Thorson was born in 1830. She was one of six children: Rachel, who died unmarried; Christopher, of Kansas; Gora, wife of Ole Ellingson; Ingebor, wife of Ole Tollefson, of Iowa; Sarah, Mrs. Thorson; and John, who died in Norway. Eight children were born to our subject and wife, five of whom grew to maturity: Mary is the wife of Ever Gordy, of Jordan township; Rachel is the wife of Sever O. Severson, a thrifty farmer of Jordan township; Carrie is at home; Thomas is at home, and now has charge of the farm; Nellie died at the age of nineteen years. All the members of this family command the respect and esteem of their neighbors, and they take a high place among the best citizens of the township.

ORRIN J. BENNETT, a bright and progressive young man, is making a place for himself and accumulating a competence for his old age as a stock dealer and farmer in the town of Platteville, Grant county, and is becoming widely known as a thoroughly honorable and trustworthy business man.

Mr. Bennett was born in the home in which he is now living, in February, 1865, and is a son of Anson and Elvira J. (Jones) Bennett, who were born and reared in the East. His father was born in Vermont in 1812, and his mother in Oswego, N. Y., in August, 1824. The father came to Grant county in 1836, and was in the employ of Major Rountree. On April 25, 1850, he married Miss Elvira J. Jones of Platteville, daughter of Lyman and Abigail Jones, who were among the earliest settlers of the county. Mr. Bennett had purchased from Major Rountree a quarter section of land two and a half miles northeast of Platteville, in 1843. Upon this valuable tract he made many important improvements, and converted the wild land into a choice farm, which was his home during life. Mrs. Bennett died in 1882, and he in 1897. They were both members of the Free Methodist Church, of Platteville, of which he was a founder. Politically he was a Republican, and held town and school offices. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett had eight children: Martha E. is the wife of W. W. Davis, and is the mother of four children, Benjamin A., William A., Jennie M. (Mrs. Warren Vanetta), and Nellie B. Lydia married Samuel Arthur, of Lafayette county, and is now deceased. Susan E. is the wife of W. H. Lory, of the town of Lima; she has no family. Charles L. married Miss Mary E. Aiken, who died leaving no children; he married again, Miss Alice Merry becoming his wife; he is now deceased. Nelson married Miss Rosa Nasmith, and is a resident of Platteville, engaged as a stock buyer; they have one child, Elva. Anson was killed by a falling rock, while engaged in mining sand, at the age of sixteen. Orrin J. is the subject of this article. Annie M. married Joseph Barrett, and lives on a farm in the town of Lima; they have one daughter, Ruby E.

Orrin J. Bennett was educated in the Platteville Normal, and was thoroughly prepared for all the practical duties of life. In 1888 he married Miss Ella M. Adamson, of Le Mars, Iowa, daughter of Thomas and Mary E. Adamson, old and prominent residents of Le Mars, where they are still living. Mrs. Bennett was born in 1865, and was well educated in the high school of her native place. Mr. Bennett and wife settled on the Bennett homestead, where they are now living. He owns a farm in the town of Platteville, and is counted one of the most prosperous farmers of Grant county. He and his wife have three children: Cora M., born in 1888; Anson J., in 1890; and Clarence V., in 1893. Our subject has always been a Democrat, and fraternally is a member of the Masonic order, belonging to the Blue Lodge, Chapter, and Commandery; of the Modern Woodmen; and of the Knights of the Globe. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett are members of the Order of the Eastern Star.

GEORGE A. CALLAWAY, an energetic and hustling farmer of the town of Harrison, Grant county, has won a very commendable position in the world by industry, honesty and a general spirit of fair play. He works hard, and gives good measure, and he expects as much in return. He is well spoken of by those who know him best, and may fairly be said to be far advanced on the highway to success.

Mr. Callaway was born in Platteville, Wis., in January, 1854, son of John and Elizabeth Callaway, both natives of England, being the sixth son of their family. He grew up under the fostering care of his parents in their Wisconsin home. He is a farmer not only by heredity, but more largely by choice, as he feels it is the noblest and freest of all occupations. Mr. Callaway and Miss Lucy Poland, daughter of H. and Lorinda (Philips) Poland, were married March 17, 1875. Her parents were old-time pioneers in Grant county. Mrs. Callaway was born June 19, 1855, and grew to womanhood in the town of Lima, where she had the advantage of good schooling, and became a very scholarly and accomplished young lady. Mr. and Mrs. Callaway moved to the old farm after their marriage, and devoted themselves to its management and the tender care of Mr. Callaway's parents. In 1883 he purchased the Obed Jones farm, in the town of Harrison, and has either erected or remodeled all the farm buildings, so that they conform to modern notions as to what is needed on the farm for comfort and welfare of the farmer and the rapid performance of farm labor. Mr. Callaway owns a well-appointed rural estate of 173 acres. He and his wife have had nine children: Willie, born in Platteville, in 1876, is unmarried, and living at home. Mabel L., born in Platteville in 1879, married Fred Schroder, and lives on a farm in the town of Ellenboro. Georgie Viola was born in the town of Harrison in 1885. Archie C., born in 1889, died when four years old. Clement W. was born in 1890. Edna G. was born in 1892. Della and Stella, twins, died in infancy. Clarence died in infancy. Mr. Callaway is a Republican, has held the office of supervisor two terms, and is a member of the board at this writing. His wife and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he takes an active part with them in church work. He belongs to the Order of Foresters in Platteville, and is a genial and companionable good fellow wherever met.

JAMES W. LAUGHLIN occupies, as editor and proprietor of the Hollandale Review, an influential position in Iowa county, of which he has been a resident for several years.

Mr. Laughlin comes of Huguenot ancestry. His grandfather was a native of South Carolina, but being a strong opponent of slavery he left that State when a comparatively young man, and lived for a time in Kentucky. Later he moved to Illinois, and in 1836 to the then Territory of Wisconsin, locating in Grant county, where the remainder of his active life was passed. After the death of his wife he lived with his children, his death occurring in 1866 in Missouri, when he was well advanced in years.

William J. Laughlin was born in 1819, in Washington county, Ill., moved with his father to Wisconsin in 1836, and in 1865 went to Caldwell county, Mo., where he resided for thirteen years. He then removed to Kansas, in which State he spent the balance of his life, dying Feb. 10, 1883. On Feb. 27, 1856, in Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., he married Sarah Ward, who survived him, passing away April 15, 1899. They became the parents of six children, but only three reached maturity, namely: James W., whose name introduces these lines; William J., now a resident of Waunakee, Wis.; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Skinner, of Hollandale, Iowa Co., Wisconsin.

James W. Laughlin was born March 1, 1859, in the town of Mazomanie, Dane Co., Wis., and accompanied his parents on their various removals, remaining at home until the death of his father, in 1883. He then returned to Wisconsin, residing in Dane county for five years, after which he came to Hollandale. This was not long after the extension of the Illinois Central railroad to Hollandale. Mr. Laughlin was for several years connected with the mill and warehouse here, but after his marriage he removed with his wife to Tennessee, where, in Deer Lodge, Morgan county, he made his first newspaper venture, buying an interest in a paper. After sixteen months' experience at that point he returned to Hollandale, and established the Review, which he has since conducted with constantly increasing success. The subscription list now numbers about six hundred. Though small in size, the paper is well conducted, complete in matters of local interest, and a valuable medium of advertising for local business men, who have given it their hearty support. Mr. Laughlin has, since entering into business on his own account, maintained an enviable reputation for integrity and honor in his dealings, and he has the good-will of his fellow citizens generally.

On May 2, 1892, Mr. Laughlin married Miss Addie L. Skinner, daughter of William Skinner, an early settler of this locality, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion. Mrs. Laughlin renders her husband able assistance in the conduct of the Review.

EDWARD M. WILMOTT, justice of the peace and town clerk of Potosi, Grant county, is one of the leading business men and prominent citizens of that town, where he was born in 1848, a son of Isaac and Mary (Auberla) Wilmott, early settlers of Wisconsin.

Isaac Wilmott was a native of Canada, but came to Potosi in 1833, was a miner by occupation, and followed that calling all his life. His death occurred in Potosi, in 1871. The mother of our subject was a native of Switzerland, whence she came, in 1826, to Galena, Ill., and then to Wisconsin, locating in Lafayette county, then in Grant county, finally locating in Potosi, where she met and married Isaac Wilmott. Prior to her marriage to Mr. Wilmott, the mother had been married to Francis Nichols, and bore him the following family: Sophia; Mary; Theodore; Edward; John; Adelle, wife of Joseph Millet, of Minneapolis; Peter, of Minneapolis, who enlisted in 1862, in Co. H, 25th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war; Frank enlisted in 1861 in the 2d Wis. V. I., and served three years and four months, dying at Potosi, May 14, 1891; and by her second marriage there were: Elizabeth, deceased; Edward M.; Samuel, deceased; and Henry, who died in Colorado in 1878.

Edward M. Wilmott was reared and educated at Potosi, and has always been a resident of the town. He is bookkeeper for the Potosi Brewing Co., and is interested in the insurance business. In 1882 he was elected justice of the peace, and has held that office ever since, and is also a notary public.

Mr. Wilmott was married in Potosi, in 1876, to Miss Kate Lingscheid, who was born in that town, a daughter of Anton and Elizabeth Lingscheid, natives of Germany, who came to Milwaukee in 1848, thence to Potosi in 1850. The father was a shoemaker by trade, and died in August, 1880, his wife surviving him until January, 1885. Five children have been added to the family of our subject and wife: Mary Florence, county teacher; Henry, Samuel, Eva and James Edward. The Wilmotts have their own band, as each one plays some instrument, and the Wilmott Family Band is well known in this section. In sentiment Mr. Wilmott is a Democrat, and takes an active interest in politics. Fraternally he is a member of the order of Modern Woodmen and of the A. O. U. W., of Lancaster, and the Knights of the Globe. Throughout the county, Mr. Wilmott and his family are known and highly esteemed for their many excellent qualities, and their friends are many.

AMO C. STEPHENS, a successful stock farmer of the town of Platteville, Grant county, is now in the prime of life, and holds an enviable position in the agricultural circles of this part of the State.

Mr. Stephens was born in Platteville in January, 1857, and is a son of William C. and Ann (Mitchell) Stephens, who were born in Cornwall, England, he in 1820, and she in 1822, and were married in their native land. Coming to Platteville, they made this their permanent home, Mr. Stephens dying Feb. 27, 1897. Mrs. Stephens died in 1885. Her parents died in England. Mr. Stephens was a great traveler, and conversant with the Western part of the United States, having been one of the gold seekers in California. He was also a boatman on the Mississippi, working with Capt. Langton for a number of years. Mr. Stephens made many improvements after settling on the family home, and put up the stone house which his son Amo now occupies. For the last twenty-eight years of his life he was not engaged in active labor. To him and his wife were born six children, of whom Thomas and Harlan died when young. Mary M. is now Mrs. Smith, of Platteville. Allie A., born in 1850, married Miss Martha Jenkins, and lives in Platteville, where he is engaged in the dray business; to them were born two children, Percival and Edna. George H., born in 1860, was educated in Platteville. He married Miss Carrie Wrape, of Iowa, and they live in Fairfield, that State; they have one daughter, Hilda, living, and have lost one son.

Amo C. Stephens was educated in the Platteville schools, and grew to manhood on the old home farm. In 1875 he married Miss Margaret Nicholas, of Mifflin, Iowa county, daughter of William and Sarah Nicholas, natives of England, who came to Grant county in 1848. Returning to England, they lived there sixteen years. Coming a second time to Wisconsin, they settled in Iowa county, where Mr. Nicholas lived until a short time previous to his death, when he came to live with Mrs. Stephens, in Platteville, dying in 1891. The widow is still living with this daughter. Mrs. Stephens was born May 20, 1856, and her education, begun in England, was completed in the public schools of Wisconsin.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Stephens moved to the old home of his father, which in after years came into his possession. Here he has erected new barns and made many improvements. Three children have been born to them: (1) Walter E., born in 1876, grew up at home. He learned the printing trade with Mr. Rindlaub, and is publishing a paper in Oshkosh, Wis. (2) Leslie M., born in 1880, is living at home. (3) Ada L., born in 1883, obtained her education in the Platteville high school, where she was counted one of the brightest students. She died in 1900, and will be sorely missed from the home from which she has been so early taken away.

Mr. Stephens is a Republican, and has been a member of the town board for some years. In the field of local politics he is a prominent figure. He and his wife are members of the Primitive Methodist Church.

ROBERT WESLEY TRICKLE, who in his lifetime was connected with all the prominent business enterprises of Browntown, Green county, passed to his last rest June 23, 1894, when he was aged fifty years, three months, five days. He was born in Clarno township, Green county, March 18, 1844, and had passed his life in Wisconsin. Successful in his business ventures, his good management had acquired for him a considerable fortune, and at his death he left two large farms and five houses and lots. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company A, 3d Colorado Cavalry, and served until the close of the struggle, his discharge bearing the date 1865. By virtue of his army service he was a member of the G. A. R., and active in its work in emulating the illustrious dead.

On Sept. 26, 1866, Mr. Trickle was united in marriage with Miss Mary St. Clair, who was born July 13, 1850, daughter of Samuel and Eliza (Rulow) St. Clair, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter a native of Canada. Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair had five children: Lucinda, deceased; Virginia Boid, of Browntown; Robert L., deceased; Joseph, deceased; and Mary E. Mr. St. Clair was a machinist by trade, and worked for some time in Detroit, Mich., where Mrs. Trickle was born, but in 1855 located in Green county, Wis., later going to California, where he died. Mrs. St. Clair died in Freeport, Ill., at the age of seventy years. To Mr. and Mrs. Trickle were born two children: Emma E., who married Ellis Stover, and died, leaving two sons, Wesley and Eddie; and Charles W., born Oct. 28, 1870, who married (first) Edith McGill, and (second) Emma Keehl, the latter of whom has borne him two children, Robert and Eva. Mrs. Trickle has proven herself a most competent business woman in her wise management of her husband's estate, and is now living in one of the handsomest dwellings in Browntown, with her sister Virginia as a companion. These ladies are highly cultured, and greatly liked by their numerous friends.

ROBERT WESLEY TRICKLE

Robert Wesley Trickle was a son of Ashford and Eliza J. (Morton) Trickle, of Clarno township, where the latter is yet living, now over eighty-one years of age. They were the parents of children as follows: Mary, Robert, Julia, Lydia, Joshua, John, Jane, George, James, Sarah and Ellen.

JOHN LUCHSINGER, a widely known attorney at law and justice of the peace, at Monroe, Green county, is a scholarly man, with a good knowledge of his profession, its principles, and its rules of procedure, and an extended reputation as a historical and political writer of thorough information and incisive style.

John Luchsinger was born in Schwanden, Canton Glarus, Switzerland, June 29, 1839, a son of John and Barbara (Wild) Luchsinger, both also natives of Switzerland. They had four sons and four daughters, and six of their children are now living: Nicholas, of Vine-land, N. J.; Julia, widow of George Dittman, of Philadelphia; Sybilla, widow of John Ritter, of Philadelphia; John; Barbara, widow of Jacob Burgy, of Monroe; and Frederick, of Belleville, Wis. The father, who was a mason, stone-cutter, and builder, came to the United States in 1845, lived for a few months at Syracuse, N. Y., and then moved to Philadelphia. In 1852 he went to California, and followed mining there for four years, being fairly prosperous. In 1856 he came back to Philadelphia, gathered up his household goods and possessions, and brought his family to New Glarus, Wis., then the center of an extremely interesting Swiss settlement. There he bought a farm, and engaged in its cultivation until 1862, when he died, at the comparatively early age of fifty-one. His widow survived until 1868, and was fifty-eight years old at the time of her death. They were members of the Swiss Reformed Church. His father, Nicholas Luchsinger, also followed the trade of stone-cutter and mason, and lived to the age of eighty-six. He reared a family of eight children. Samuel Wild, father of Barbara Wild, mentioned above, was a dairyman, and died in Switzerland when eighty-five years old.

John Luchsinger received his schooling principally in the city of Philadelphia. He was seventeen years old when he accompanied his parents to their new home in New Glarus, Wis., and, though the city-bred lad found many things strange to him, he took hold readily of the farm work. When his father's death threw the burden of the family support upon himself and his younger brother, he did not hesitate, but bravely "buckled to," and carried on the home farm as long as the mother lived. When she died John sold his interest in the family estate, and bought a farm of 184 acres, in the same town, continuing an agricultural career until 1878. That year he disposed of his farming property and interests, and moved to Monroe, where he has lived to the present time. He bought a thirty-acre farm at that time within the city limits. In 1880 and 1881 he had a lumber yard at Albany, but since his first removal to the city, his home has always been in Monroe.

Mr. Luchsinger has been a resident of Green county forty-six years, and of Monroe twenty-three years. In 1882 he was elected county treasurer, was re-elected in 1884, and proved a popular and capable official. During this time he took up the study of the law, and was admitted to the Bar in 1885, since which time he has been a practicing attorney in Green county. He is eminently fair and judicial in his thought and temper. In 1872 Mr. Luchsinger was elected to the General Assembly. He was elected again in 1875, 1876 and 1877, and a fifth time in 1886. He has been a member of the board of education in Monroe for twelve years, and of the county board a number of times, one term serving as its chairman. He was mayor of the city of Monroe from 1894 to 1896, and it was during his administration that the sewerage system now in use was introduced. While living in New Glarus he was chairman of the town board several years. He is vice-president of the Citizens Bank of Monroe. Mr. Luchsinger is a Republican, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He has been delegate to numerous State and Congressional conventions, and was alternate delegate to the National convention of 1900.

John Luchsinger and Miss Elsbeth Kundert, daughter of Henry and Elsbeth (Kundert) Kundert, were married Aug. 8. 1868. Mr. and Mrs. Luchsinger are the parents of seven sons and three daughters: John, Henry, Samuel, William, Frank, George, Elsbeth, Barbara, Edna, and one who died in infancy. Seven are still living. John married Ellen O'Donnell, and they have four children; they live in Fargo, N. Dak., he being in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railway Co. Henry married Maude Cunningham, and is a farmer near Dix, Ill.; they have two children, Ray and Louisa. Samuel, who was a physician, died June 23, 1900, from an operation for appendicitis; he married Julia Mehrling, and left two sons. William, who was a machinist, died from an accident April 7, 1896, when he was twenty-two. Frank is a plumber. George lives at home. Elsbeth married Edward Stauffacher, lives at St. Paul, and has one child. Barbara and Edna are at home. John Luchsinger belongs to the Swiss Reformed Church, and his wife to the Evangelical Association. He is a member of Monroe Lodge, No. 72, I. O. O. F.

While on the farm Mr. Luchsinger made cheese, and as he has given a great amount of study to the problems the cheese business presents, he may be regarded as authority on the subject. After abandoning the lumber business he bought and sold cheese for several years, and was instrumental with others, in establishing cheese factories in the county; this business has gained great importance in the southern part of the State, and there are now over two hundred cheese factories and thirty-five creameries in Green county. Our subject has been unceasing in his efforts to make known the good qualities of the cheese made, and the vast growth of its production, and is president of the Green County Cheese Makers Association. He has contributed numerous and valuable articles to the public press on the cheese making industry of the county. A valuable historical monogram on the history of the cheese making business in southern Wisconsin, under the head of "The History of a Great Industry," was read by him before the State Historical Society in 1898, and printed by them in 1899. It has been very widely read, and has elicited words of strong commendation from those most familiar with the subject. His address to the Wisconsin State Dairy-men's Association, in 1891, "Cheese as an Army Ration," has been widely copied and published throughout the country.

Mr. Luchsinger is historian of the Swiss Colony of New Glarus, and has translated from the original some of the diaries and papers of the first colonists, bearing upon the settlement of this remarkable colony. In 1895, at the great semi-centennial celebration of its founding, he delivered the English anniversary address. He has been engaged in nearly all of the political campaigns during the last twenty years, speaking and writing in both English and German in the interests of the Republican party.

NICHOLAS CORNELIUS enjoys the reputation of being the oldest living settler of the city of Monroe, Green county, and certainly the changes that have taken place in southern Wisconsin under his personal observation, if fully told would far transcend the limits of a volume like this. He has lived a long and useful life, and is spending the evening of his days surrounded by warm friends and a venerating public.

Mr. Cornelius was born in St. Clair county, Illinois, March 3, 1815, and is a son of Joseph and Mary (Rutter) Cornelius. Eight children were born to them, and their son, whose name appears above, is the only one now alive. The father was a farmer, and moved to St. Clair county, Illinois, in 1804, making the overland journey with a four-horse team and settling near the city of St. Louis, though the nearest postoffice was at Kaskaskia, forty miles distant. He bought Spanish claims to five hundred acres nine miles east of what was then the metropolis of the West, and engaged in farming the rest of his life. When he came from Maryland to Illinois he brought with him a family of six slaves, whom he subsequently freed. They went to St. Louis, where one of them was kidnapped and sold into slavery in New Orleans. Upon learning this fact, Mr. Cornelius made a journey to that city on purpose to secure her release, although the trip cost him over $400. He died in 1825, while still in middle life. His wife died in 1819. They were both Baptists in faith. It is said the Cornelius family descended from three brothers who came from Scotland early in the seventeenth century. The given name of the father of Mary Rutter is not now known, but he was of German descent, and died in Maryland.

Nicholas Cornelius grew to manhood in St. Clair county, Illinois, attended an old-fashioned subscription school, held in a log cabin with no floor but the ground, and was reared on the farm. In 1834 he came to Wisconsin, and took up a claim of 160 acres in what is now Clarno township, in the county of Green. He failed to perfect his title, and two years later secured a quarter-section in Monroe township, the name of President Van Buren appearing on the patent. This farm he presently exchanged for another, consisting of 150 acres, a half mile nearer the present city of Monroe, and now adjoining the western limits of the corporation, which he has owned for over sixty years, and was actively engaged in its cultivation until 1885. That year he moved into Monroe, where he has lived since, his son Erwin now taking charge of the farm, and he is making a fine farmer, although engaged as principal of schools at Wauwatosa, Wis., for several years past.

On June 10, 1849, Mr. Cornelius married Miss Phillippa Trizetter, who was born in 1832 in England, daughter of Andrew and Susanna (Bulin) Trizetter, who came to America the same year, locating, a few years later, near Columbus, Ohio. Three children have been born to their union, Erwin C., Alice, and one who died in infancy. (1) Erwin C. married Miss Winnie Byers, a daughter of Dr. Byers, of Monroe, and they had one daughter, Alice; Mrs. Cornelius died, and he married a second time Mrs. Bertha Perkins, and has one child by that union. (2) Alice Cornelius married Charles Goddard, of Monroe, and they have four children, Harry, Wilbur, Grace and Phillippa. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius have been married fifty-two years. He voted for William Henry Harrison in 1840, and cast his lot with the Republican party when it was formed, and acted with it until 1900. He says he believes in Americanism, but not in plutocracy. Mr. Cornelius has been on the grand jury twenty years.

Nicholas Cornelius came to this locality when the country was wild and full of Indians, and helped to ferry three hundred Indians across the Pecatonica on their way to Chicago in 1834. There was no Milwaukee, Janesville or Monroe then. He is the oldest settler here, not in age, but in point of length of residence, only three families having settled in Green county before his arrival. He remembers visiting St. Louis when it was a town of less importance than the present city of Monroe. When he first came up the Mississippi, there was no settlement on the river north of Narvoo except Ft. Snelling. Steamboats ran to Galena, the lower river then being navigable. After coming to Wisconsin, Mr. Cornelius spent about fifteen years in the lead mines, and while there he made the acquaintance of Gov. Dodge, William S. Hamilton, and other prominent pioneer citizens of the State. His father's farm of 500 acres was sold after his death to satisfy a mortgage of $300 which, owing to the depreciation of the currency was paid with $80 in specie. This circumstance made a deep impression upon the mind of our subject, and he has never mortgaged any property during his life. His strict business principles and unswerving honesty have given him an enviable reputation in the business world.

JOHN HENRY OSTRANDER is one of the leading representatives of the farming interests of Green county, and is living on his fine place four miles south of Juda. He is the son of James and Maria (Loring) Ostrander, who were born and reared near Schenectady, N. Y., the former the son of Samuel Ostrander, who came to New York from Holland about 1774.

James Ostrander was born Aug. 15, 1810, and died in Green county March 30, 1892. He was a paper-hanger by trade, and followed that as a means of livelihood in New York in the winter, and engaged in farming in the summer. In 1851 he moved from that State to Walworth county, Wis., where he bought a farm and cultivated it for four years, and then moved into Green county. After his removal to the West he followed farming exclusively. A stanch Democrat, he was a man of some influence in the world of politics. As a member of the United Brethren Church, he lived an honorable and upright life. Maria Loring became his wife in New York in 1831, and died in 1865, aged fifty-five years. She was the mother of six children: William, born in 1832, was living in Kansas when last heard from; Jeremiah, born Aug. 8, 1834, lives in Wilson county, Kans.; John H.; Thomas L., born in 1838, died while a member of the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, at Berwick, La., Sept. 8, 1864; Mary, born in 1840, married Charles M. Ball, a veteran of the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, now living in Kansas; and Susan, born in 1842, married Baird Stephenson, of Benton county, Iowa, where they still live.

John H. Ostrander was born Aug. 28, 1836, and married Miss Sarah C. Davis, June 15, 1856. Mrs. Ostrander was born Oct. 6, 1837, a daughter of Archibald and Elizabeth (Dever) Davis, pioneer settlers of the county. To this union were born the following children: Viola H., born Sept. 11, 1858, is the wife of John Zimmerman, a farmer near Oakley, Wis.; Cynthia M., born Sept. 3, 1860, married William H. Zimmerman, a farmer in the town of Spring Grove; Clarence D., born Aug. 9, 1862, died Aug. 14, 1862; John W., born June 23, 1863, died May 4, 1864; Archie J., born April 17, 1866, married Lillie Bennage and is a farmer in the town of Jefferson; Annie E., born Jan. 26, 1868, married Jesse Rowe, a farmer of Spirit Lake, Iowa; Walter L., born Dec. 30, 1869, married Carrie Tracy, and is a farmer in the town of Jefferson; Edgar O., born Oct. 18, 1871, resides at home with his parents; Dora M., born Jan. 9, 1874, died April 1, 1876; General O., born Feb. 7, 1876, married Miss Kate Zimmerman; Blanche, born Oct. 25, 1877, married Burt G. Wonchell, of Jefferson.

Mr. Ostrander was reared on the farm, and had his education in the public schools. All his life he has been a farmer, and everything he has or is he has accumulated with the help of his faithful wife. A fine farm of 430 acres is their home, and here they occupy a roomy and commodious house, and have all the equipments such a place demands. Mr. Ostrander was a member of the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery (in which all his brothers served), entering the service in July, 1863, as a member of Company D, and was honorably discharged in July, 1865. The greater part of his time in the army was spent at Fort Jackson, Brazier City, and New Orleans. Mr. Ostrander has been school director for many years, and was on the town board a number of years. For fifteen years he has been justice of the peace, and is a Republican. The first vote which he cast for President was given to John C. Fremont. Mr. Ostrander has never united with any church, but holds to the Golden Rule as the fundamental law of all right living. He is a man of high character and fine repute, and has lived a creditable life.

CONRAD J. WEITTENHILLER, a prosperous and successful stock farmer of the town of Lima, Grant county, was born in Platteville Sept. 27, 1855.

Sebastian and Annie (Scheel) Weittenhiller, his parents, were both natives of Bavaria, the father born April 27, 1824, and the mother in January, 1822. They reached maturity in their native country, where they were married in 1843. Seven years later Mr. Weittenhiller came to this country, leaving his family in their German home. Landing at New York, he made his way to Buffalo, where he followed his trade of glazier. In 1853 he came to Platteville, Wis., where he met his wife and family, just arrived from Germany. Here he worked at the cooper's trade until 1862, when he purchased a farm in the town of Platteville, upon which he erected substantial buildings and made many improvements. On this farm he passed his remaining days, dying in 1898. Mr. Weittenhiller was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and a Republican in politics. To him and his wife came a family of fourteen children, of whom nine are living, viz.: (1) Charles, born in Germany in 1844, married Miss Jennie Marshall, of Platteville, and is the father of five children. They still reside in Platteville, where he is a merchant. (2) Mary, born in Germany in 1848, resides with her mother in Platteville. (3) Annie, born in Germany in 1850, unmarried. (4) Conrad J. is our subject. (5) Emma, born in Platteville in 1858, is the wife of Sampson Callaway. (6) Phillip, born in 1859, married Miss Nellie Jones, daughter of O. K. Jones, of the town of Harrison, and lives in Pocahontas county, Iowa. (7) Lena, born in Grant county in 1860, is the wife of Charles Secord, of Spokane, Wash., where he is employed as a railroad engineer. (8) Jennie, born in Grant county in 1862, is the wife of John Miller, a railroad man at Spokane, Wash. (9) Esther M., born in 1866, married Frederick May, a resident of Helix, Oregon.

Conrad J. Weittenhiller received his education in the public schools and at the State Normal at Platteville, and grew up on the old homestead. In 1874, when a young man, he went to California, where he worked on a fruit farm for one year, and then returned home. Here he learned the cooper's trade, at which he engaged for some years during the winter, working on the farm during the summer. In 1881 he bought what was known as the F. Johns farm, in the town of Platteville.

On March 5, 1882, Mr. Weittenhiller married Miss Mary Jones, of Platteville, daughter of Obed C. and Ursula A. Jones. Her parents were old pioneers of Grant county, coming from Trumbull county, Ohio, at a very early day, and he was well known as a local minister in the Christian Church. Mr. Weittenhiller made many handsome improvements on his farm, and brought it into fine condition. After selling the farm to Mr. Reddy he lived on the old homestead a year, and then bought a half section of August Kamm, in the town of Lima, where he now owns as fine a property as is to be found in Grant county. For the last few months he has been largely engaged in shipping stock to the Chicago markets.

Nine children have been born to our subject and his wife: (1) Byron, born in 1884, in the town of Platteville, who has graduated from the Platteville Business College; (2) Merton F., born July 29, 1886; (3) Blanche, born Feb. 29, 1888, who died aged twelve days; (4) Willie, born May 22, 1889; (5) May, May 6, 1891; (6) Alma, March 16, 1893; (7) Clarence, in July, 1895; (8) Albert, Sept. 11, 1897; and (9) Victor Walter, July 4, 1900.

In politics Mr. Weittenhiller has always been a Republican, and is a prominent worker in the party. For eight years he has been a delegate to the county convention, and one year was a delegate to the State convention, when it was held at Milwaukee. The family belong to the Methodist Church, and Mr. Weittenhiller takes an active interest in church work. He has been associated for some years with the order of K. P., and also with the M. W. of A. Mr. Weittenhiller began with nothing to help him except his own courage and willingness to take hold, and since his advent here has achieved substantial results.

BENJAMIN F. NEELY, a dairyman farmer of the town of Platteville, Grant county, is a young man of energy and enterprise, and has already attained an enviable standing among the younger farmers of this portion of the State. He is known as a man of his word, and his farm reflects his industry.

Mr. Neely was born in the house in which he is now living, in November, 1868, and is a son of Robert and Helen (Chase) Neely. Robert Neely was born in Westmoreland county, Penn., July 15, 1815, and Helen Chase in Royalton, N. Y., in March, 1828. Mr. Neely grew to manhood in Pennsylvania, and was educated for the ministry at Oberlin College. On account of confirmed ill health, he gave up the work of the ministry, and came to Wisconsin as early as 1839. Here he took up a government claim and devoted himself to mining and farming as long as he lived. He died April 15, 1895. When he had been but ten years in this State he went back to Pennsylvania, and married. The young couple returned to Wisconsin and lived a life of close companionship until his death. His widow only survived his loss five months. They were consistent and devoted members of the Congregational Church, in which he was a deacon for twenty-five years. They assisted in the establishment of the Congregational Church at Platteville, and were always identified with good movements and measures at home and abroad. They left a family of seven children: (1) Henry D., born Dec. 23, 1851, was a graduate from the State Normal at Platteville, and studied law, was admitted to the Bar, and practiced law, but he now resides in Omaha, where he is State manager for the Equitable Life Assurance Co. He married Miss Emma Johns, of Winona, Minn., and they have two sons, Henry Fay and Robert Donald. (2) Mary F., born Oct. 9, 1853, was a graduate of the State Normal, and a successful teacher in Grant county for some years. She is now the wife of George C. Thompson, chief clerk of the U. P. freight office at Omaha, and has three children, Ruth, Mayone and Robert.

(3) Katie M., born in January, 1858, is the wife of Lester C. Hine, of Trumbull county, Ohio, where they live on a farm. In their family of children are Frank, Helen, Neely, Mary, Bessie, Ronald and Fay R. (4) Nell e S., born in March, 1860, is the wife of R. P. Perry, one of the leading lawyers and bankers of Reedsburg, Wis., and they have three children, Edna, Mildred and Catherine. (5) Fannie, born in March, 1862, a bright and scholarly young lady, is one of the successful teachers of the Reedsburg high school, in which position she has been for ten consecutive years. (6) Robert S., born in July, 1864, married Miss Josephine Cook, and resides in Omaha, where he is employed in the yards of the Union Pacific railroad.

Benjamin F. Neely, who completes this family, was educated in the Platteville Normal, and he has remained on the old homestead, having had charge of the farm previous to the death of his father. In 1893 he married Miss Fannie Bell, the daughter of Edward and Annie (Rawson) Bell, an old and prominent family of Grant county. Mrs. Neely was born in Platteville, in June, 1872, and was educated in the local high school. She is a lady of culture and refinement. They settled on the old Neely farm, and devoted themselves to farming. They have two sons, Robert C., born in August, 1896, and Edward, in July, 1899. Mr. Neely and his father were prominent Republicans, and were both brought up in the Congregational Church. He is a member of the Foresters at Platteville, the Maccabees, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Equitable Fraternal Union. The senior Neely was a Mason, and was an industrious and highly respected man, and was an affectionate husband, and was greatly loved in the community where he lived. Benjamin F. Neely is one of the leading and prosperous farmers of the town, and is well known.

JOHN ROBINSON, an enterprising farmer of Platteville township, Grant county, and one of its most respected citizens, was born in Fennimore, in the same county, in December, 1845. His parents were John and Catherine (Coy) Robinson, the former of whom was born in Manchester, England, and on coming to the United States found his way to Galena, Ill., in 1836, and later to Fennimore, Wis., near which village he purchased a farm. He served in the 7th Wis. V. I. about a year, having enlisted in 1861, and being discharged on account of disability, some time in 1862. He had lost his wife in 1852, and his own death, in 1872, resulted from the bite of a rattlesnake while he was loading hay in his meadow. There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Robinson four children besides the gentleman whose name opens this biographical review, and of whom a brief notice of each is made as follows: George, the eldest of the family, was born in Iowa county, Wis., in 1839, enlisted in the 20th Wis. V. I., was promoted from private to orderly sergeant, then to first lieutenant, and died on a march near Springfield, Mo.; Mary D., born in Grant county, is now Mrs. Evan Johnson, resides on the old Robinson homestead, and is the mother of five children, all living in the vicinity; Frank is at present in Colorado; Agnes, born in Fennimore, is the wife of Peter Finnegan, a wealthy farmer at Fennimore, and has a family of seven children, Emma, Mary, George, Albert, Robert, Mabel and Clements.

John Robinson, the subject proper of this sketch, was reared to farming on the homestead and educated in the district schools. In 1871 he married Miss Marietta Byerly, of Fennimore, daughter of George and Mary A. (Mason) Byerly, who were born in Westmoreland and Crawford counties, Penn., respectively, but for some years lived on a farm in Mercer county, whence they came in 1867 to Wisconsin, and located at Fennimore, where Mr. Byerly bought a farm, and also established a hotel, prospering in the conduct of both. Mrs. Byerly died the same year in which she arrived in Wisconsin, leaving nine children, viz.: Sylvester, now in Omaha, Neb.; Lavinia (deceased), wife of John Parker, of Missouri; Joseph, of Spencer, Iowa; Mrs. Robinson, who was born in Mercer county, Penn., in 1852, and there educated; George, of Fennimore, Wis.; James and Leonard, deceased; Theresa, wife of Walter Bradley, of Iowa; and Linda, wife of Lewis Patterson, of Dexter, also in the Hawkeye State.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Robinson resided on the Robinson homestead until 1872, when, his father dying, Mr. Robinson purchased a farm in Fennimore, on which they resided until the fall of 1892, when he moved to and bought a home in Platteville, in order to educate his children, Annetta, Bertha L., Pearl M. and Linda C. Annetta, born in Fennimore in 1873, is a graduate of the State Normal School of this State, and a graduate and post-graduate of the Emerson School of Oratory, and was married in June, 1891, to G. W. Moody, a leading business man of Boston, Mass., where she now resides. Bertha L. was born in Fennimore in 1875, was also graduated from the State Normal, as well as the State University at Madison, and is at present a teacher in the high school at Neillsville, Wis. Pearl M., born in 1878, in Fennimore, likewise was graduated from the State Normal, and is now a student in vocal and instrumental music in Platteville. Linda C., born in Fennimore in 1886, is a student in the State Normal, and is being prepared for the profession of teaching. In religion Mr. Robinson is a devout Catholic, while his wife and daughters are members of the Congregational Church. Mr. Robinson and his wife, while not among the very wealthy people of Platteville, are quite well-to-do, owning a large farm and a comfortable city home, and have many warm friends, in whose esteem they stand very high. They have given their children excellent educational training, the result of which is that all four are ornaments to the society in which they respectively live.

WILLIAM BLOUNT PARKISON, an influential farmer of the town of Mineral Point, Iowa county, represents one of the earliest pioneer families of Wisconsin. He was born near Highland, Madison Co., Ill., Oct. 24, 1820, a son of Col. Daniel Morgan Parkison and his wife, Mary Elizabeth (Hyder).

Peter Parkison, father of Col. Daniel Morgan Parkison, came to America from England about 1770, and settled in Virginia. He became a soldier in the Continental army, holding the rank of captain. After the close of that memorable struggle he located in Carter county, Tenn., where he married Miss Mary Mars, a native of that county, but of German extraction. Capt. Peter Parkison died in Tennessee, and his widow with her six sons moved to Madison county, Ill., in 1818, and there her death occurred. Of the six children, Washington died in Madison county, Ill.; George, in La Fayette county, Mo.; Emanuel, in Knox county, Tenn.; John, in Mississippi; William, in Lafayette county, Wis.; and Daniel Morgan, in Wisconsin.

Daniel Morgan Parkison passed a number of years of his life in Sangamon county, Ill., and in 1827 moved to Wisconsin, passing a year or two near Shullsburg. He then went to Mineral Point and erected a row of log cabins near the present corner of High and Commerce streets, in which he kept a hotel, the first in the place. His next location was Willow Springs, Lafayette county, where he entered about one section of land, on which he passed the remainder of his life, dying during the Civil war, at the age of seventy-seven. He attained great prominence in the affairs of his town, county and State. During the Black Hawk war he recruited a company and commanded it throughout that conflict. He became a member of the first Territorial Legislature, which convened at Old Belmont, and was also a member of the second, which was held in Burlington, Iowa, then a part of Wisconsin. This did not end his service in the Legislature, however, as he continued to represent his district for some time after the capital was located at Madison, and was a member of the first Constitutional Convention of the State. As may be inferred, he was a man of great influence in those early days, and, when he passed away full of years and honors, it was to leave behind him the priceless heritage of an untarnished reputation. His wife, Mary Elizabeth Hyder, was born in Carter county, Tenn., and died in Sangamon county, Ill., about 1826. She was the mother of eight children, as follows: Jonathan, who died in Madison county, Ill.; Rosanna, who became Mrs. Thomas Connor, and died in Bond county, Ill.; Peter, who died in Lafayette county, Wis.; Mary, who became Mrs. William McAdams, and died in Bond county, Ill.; Nathaniel, who passed away in Lafayette county, Wis.; William Blount, our subject; Jane, who died in childhood in Lafayette county, Wis.; and Ann, whose death occurred in the same place.

After the death of his mother in Illinois, William Blount Parkison made his home with an uncle until he reached the age of fifteen, when he joined his father in Wisconsin. In 1854 he purchased wild land in the town of Mineral Point, where he has since made his home, now owning 270 acres of arable land, all in a high state of cultivation, well improved with good buildings, etc.

In 1847 Mr. Parkison was united in marriage with Miss Nancy Padon, born in Lebanon, St. Clair Co., Ill., daughter of James and Melinda Padon, and died March 20, 1897, aged seventy-two years. Five children blessed this union: James Daniel, of Washta, Cherokee Co., Iowa; Adaline Melinda, at home; Charles Barton, of Kirkham, Shelby Co., Iowa; Virginia C., now Mrs. O. L. Parkison, of Mineral Point; and William V., of Iowa. Mr. Parkison has seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. In religious belief the family are all Methodists, in which faith the mother died.

In his political affiliations Mr. Parkison is a Democrat, and has led a strictly temperate life, for a time supporting the Prohibitionists in local elections. He has been prominent in the affairs of his locality for many years, and has held a number of local offices, among them being chairman of the town board, an office held for eight years, for three years was one of the superintendents of the County House, justice of the peace, etc. In 1845 he went overland to Oregon, driving an ox-team. His party, which consisted of 120 wagons, started from Independence, Mo., and was the first to cross the plains to that now prosperous State. They were six months on the road, and Mr. Parkison returned on horseback the following season. They suffered the usual hardships incident to such a journey, had two or three encounters with hostile Indians, but suffered no serious damage. In 1850 he went to California with a horse-team, and returned by water to Acapulco, Mexico, thence overland to Vera Cruz, where he took the steamer to New Orleans.

ALVIN BLANCHARD, of Blanchardville, Lafayette county, in honor of whom the village and township were named, is a well-known pioneer citizen, and one of the leading business men and large land owners in the county. He was born in Cortland Co., New York, Jan. 12, 1830, son of Asahel and Elizabeth Blanchard, the former of whom was a native of the State of New York, and the latter of Massachusetts. In 1840 the family emigrated to Wisconsin and located in Dodge-ville, Iowa county, where the father engaged in mining a short distance east of that town. He afterward purchased a farm and passed the rest of life at that place. His death occurred in July, 1852, the result of an accident in a runaway. He left the reputation of a just and upright man, a progressive citizen and a man of much natural ability. He had held prominent places in the county, having at one time served as county commissioner. During his early life he had been employed on the construction of the New York and Erie Canal. His wife survived her husband many years, passing away at Blanchardville Aug. 26, 1872. Besides the subject of this sketch, they had a daughter, Eliza, who became the wife of John Adams, of Dodgeville.

John Adams was a prominent pioneer citizen, and laid out the village of Adamsville, Iowa county. He was for many years a successful merchant in Black Earth, Wis., and now resides in Pasadena, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Adams had a family of children, several of whom have become known in national affairs: Alva is an ex-Governor of the State of Colorado, and was a candidate for United States Senator in 1900 (he makes his home in Pueblo, that State); Frank, William H. and John are all prominent in business and politics in Colorado.

For several years after his father's death, Mr. Alvin Blanchard worked the homestead farm, and during the time he managed the home farm purchased one of his own. But it is in Blanchardville that nearly his entire business life has been passed. While still a very young man he engaged in the milling business, and purchased the mills at what was afterward called Blanchardville, where he was extensively engaged in milling for many years. In 1856 he entered upon a mercantile career, erecting the first store in the town and passed many years in general merchandising. About 1880 he opened a hardware business, which he still continues. He has erected and still owns many of the principal buildings in the village, and besides owns a large amount of land. For years he has been the leading business man in this part of the county, and, now, although passed the allotted three score years and ten, is still actively engaged in conducting his various interests.

In October, 1851, Mr. Blanchard was married to Miss Mary Skinner, and their children, three in number, are: Clarence A., who makes his home in Blanchardville, but who has for many years been a commercial traveler; Kate, wife of Samuel Corbin, of South Dakota; and William, of Blanchardville. For his second wife Mr. Blanchard wedded Miss Arabella Stoneburner, who died in June, 1897. Nine children were born of the second marriage, those living being: Daniel, born in 1858; Charles, in 1863; James, in 1869; and Lulu, in 1877, now the wife of C. R. Chandler, editor and lawyer of Blanchardville. Those deceased were: May, born in 1860, married John Munson; Elizabeth, born in 1859, died in infancy; Samuel, born in 1861, died in 1866; Alvin, born in 1865, died in 1866; and Mazie, born in 1875, died in 1880. Mr. Blanchard has a wide acquaintance, and is held in high esteem. He comes of good Revolutionary stock, his great-grandfather having held the rank of Colonel in the Continental army. In politics he is a Democrat, and has held a number of important positions, being postmaster from 1857 to 1888; school director, chairman of the town board, etc. Although not a member of any church, Mr. Blanchard was the first Sunday school teacher in the town, and has always contributed liberally to the support of the Church, and other worthy causes. He was the prime mover in securing the incorporation of the village of Blanchardville and devoted considerable time and money to that end. The village has one of the finest systems of water works to be found anywhere in a town of its size.

Alain Blanchard

Mr. Blanchard was one of the leading men of the county in securing the Illinois Central Railroad through the east side of Lafayette county, and was one of the first directors of the above named road from Freeport, Ill., to Dodgeville, Wis. About 1872 he gave considerable time and money in an effort to secure a narrow gauge railroad. He has been very energetic in the improvement and development of the town and country. His many business enterprises furnished a great deal of labor, thereby starting many on the road to independent fortunes, and afforded for all a market for produce of the surrounding rural districts. Many of the old settlers relate that they would have suffered in an early day had it not been for Mr. Blanchard. He established the first mail route into Blanchardville, paying for the services himself. He drove cattle to Chicago, Milwaukee and Madison, when those cities were our nearest markets; and it is conceded by all that he has been a great and good man for this locality.

BRYNGEL SEVERSON, who resides in York township, Green county, four and a half miles east of Blanchardville, holds a creditable position in the confidence and respect of his neighbors, among whom he has been settled many years.

Mr. Severson was born in Vas, Bergen Stift, Norway, Feb. 10, 1844, a son of Sever and Martha Severson, both now deceased. They came to America and settled in Walworth county, Wis., in 1844, when young Bryngel was an infant of only five months. Eleven years later they removed to Green county, to make their home on the farm in section 5, town of York, which is now owned by the gentleman whose career is the subject of this writing. In 1856 Sever Severson died, and his widow survived until 1898. They had only one child, Bryngel.

Bryngel Severson has spent almost his entire life in Wisconsin, where he received his education in the public schools, and has led a useful life. In 1868 he married Miss Eliza Sandmark, of the town of Moscow, who died two years later, leaving one son, Sever Severson, now a farmer and engineer. In 1873 Bryngel Severson married for his second wife Miss Ellen Hanson, of Trempealeau county, Wis., and to this union were born the following children: Henry, at home, who is working the farm; Minnie; Mary; Melvin; Albert; Ida; Benjamin; Josephine; William; Dora; and Raymond.

Mr. Severson was reared on the farm in the town of York, and obtained his education in the public schools. At the present time he owns a fine farm of some 200 acres, on which he lives, in a comfortable and attractive home, and where he has built large and convenient modern farm barns. In his political views Mr. Severson is a Republican, and in religion a consistent and devout member of the Lutheran Church. In York he has long since won recognition as one of the leading citizens of the community, and has served the town as member of the board of supervisors, and as school director, as well as in other positions.

In 1861 Mr. Severson hastened to respond to the call of his imperiled country, and enlisted in Company E, 15th Wis. V. I. This command was attached to the Army of the Tennessee, and our subject participated in the bloody battles of Stone River, Island No. 10, Union City, Tenn., and Perryville, after which he was discharged from service on account of disability. Recovering somewhat from his injuries, he re-enlisted, in the 46th Wis. V. I., being a member of Company A. This was in the spring of 1865, and he served until the close of the war. On his return to Wisconsin he resumed the occupation of farming, though he has had poor health for many years on account of the exposures he endured while a soldier in the army. Mr. Severson belongs to the G. A. R., and is commander of John E. Gurley Post, No. 224, at Blanchardville. Personally he is well liked, and has the confidence and respect of the community. One of the earlier settlers of the town of York, there are few remaining who were living here when he came. Popular among his neighbors, he is a man well liked by all who know him, and his upright and manly character well deserves the warm friendship it has won.

KNUDT THOMPSON in his life time took a prominent place among the thoroughly honorable and influential citizens of the town of York. Born at Hallingdal, Norway, Aug. 28, 1839, he was a son of Thor Truo, and came to this country in 1861. It was in Dane county, Wis., that his first home was established on American soil. At the end of a year he sold out at that place and came to the town of York, where he bought a farm on section 6, which is still a part of the extensive Knudt Thompson estate. His death occurred in the town of York Jan. 26, 1899, and he was buried in the old Norwegian cemetery in that town. Thor Truo was the father of the following children: Knudt, whose name appears at the opening of this article; Paul, of Trempealeau county, Wis.; and Guri, who is the wife of Kittle Jeglum.

Knudt Thompson married Miss Birgit Bjornson, of Norway, in 1861, and to this marriage were born the following children: OLE K., born Oct. 6, 1862, is still unmarried, and is engaged in farming the old homestead in York; he is a Republican, and has made himself a name as one of the leading men of the community; (2) Thury, born May 16, 1863, is the wife of O. M. Peterson, of Dane county; (3) Julia, born May 20, 1865, is the wife of G. O. Paulson, of Dane county; (4) Gurine, born May 20, 1867, is the wife of C. E. Paulson, of Dane county; (5) Thor was born Oct. 10, 1869, and is a minister of the Lutheran Church at Estherville, Iowa; (6) Mollie, born Jan. 13, 1872, is the wife of Rev. Edward Hegland, a minister of the Lutheran Church; (7) George and (8) James are twins, and were born Oct. 19, 1875; both were graduated at the University of Wisconsin, from which institution they received the degree of B. L.; James is a graduate from the School of Law, University of Michigan, in the class of 1901, receiving the degree of LL. B., while George graduated from the law department of the University of Wisconsin with the class of 1901, with the degree of LL. B.; they are bright young men, and have a promising future; (9) Gena, born Sept. 29, 1883, is attending the high school at Menominee, Michigan. Mrs. Thompson remains on the home place. She was born Jan. 16, 1837, and is a woman of fine Christian character, very proud of her children, and much respected and beloved in the community.

Knudt Thompson made a name for himself as one of the most successful farmers of Green county. Coming to this country a poor man, by his unremitting industry, wise economy and business acumen, he became the owner of an extensive estate of 305 acres before his death, not mentioning much valuable personal property, as well as financial investments of a high character. Politically he was a Republican, and in religion a faithful and zealous member of the Lutheran Church. In the community he was regarded as a man of strong character, and was known to be a good neighbor, and a devoted husband and father, taking much pride in the higher education of his children. His is a name that is worthy of long remembrance.

JOHN DAVIS, deceased, was a farmer and stock raiser of the town of Lima, Grant county, and was born in North Wales, England, in 1807, where he grew up, and married Miss Sarah A. Kent, born in the same country in 1817. In 1845 they came to this country, by way of New Orleans and the Mississippi river to Galena, settling at Smelser, Grant county, where he was engaged in mining for some time. In 1848 he bought a tract of wild land consisting of 360 acres, in the town of Lima, where his daughter now resides. A good log house was the family abode during his life. In 1849 Mr. Davis crossed the plains to the gold fields of California, where he met with rather good success. Coming back to his wife and family in their Wisconsin home, he remained here the rest of his life, dying in April, 1875, while on a visit to his sisters near Holywell, England. Mrs. Sarah A. Davis survived her husband's loss some twelve years, and died Nov. 22, 1887, at her home in Lima.

(1) Emma Davis, the oldest child of this worthy couple, was born in Wales in July, 1844, and married Thomas Day, of Grant county. Mrs. Day is now a widow, and lives in Lancaster, with a family of eight children: Etta, Nettie, John, Delia, Bertha, Oscar, Fred, and Flossie.

(2) Catherine M. Davis, born in Wisconsin in 1845, married Pleasant Prichett, a farmer in the town of Lima, where she died on Christmas Day, 1875, leaving three children: Hugh is married and living in Lima; John, deceased in young manhood; and Curtis, who died in childhood.

(3) Mrs. Bevan, the youngest of the Davis family, was born in Smelser, Sept. 30, 1846, and had her education in the public schools of Grant county. In September, 1870, she married Johnson Bevan, who was born in Clinton county, Ohio, Feb. 16, 1845. His parents died when he was a mere child, and he grew up in the home of his uncle, Joshua Fawcett, who came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Bevan settled at Little Platte, where he owned a farm which he sold in 1876, and moved to the Davis homestead, the childhood home of his wife, and here they have lived to the present time. Soon after settling on the place he built a new and modern house, and in 1888 put up barns and other farm buildings, and by his assiduous labors he has made it one of the fine farms of the county. It consisted at the time of his purchase of 140 acres.

Mr. and Mrs. Bevan are the parents of five children who are now living: Luella, born May 23, 1872, had her education in the public schools and in the State Normal at Platteville, and for ten years has been a popular and successful school teacher; Sartoris, born June 27, 1875, lives at home, and assists in the farm work; Georgie, born Nov. 2, 1877, died in childhood; Virgil, born Sept. 4, 1879, is at home; Celia, born March 27, 1883, is now attending the State Normal at Platteville, and is preparing herself for teaching; and Hurus, born June 4, 1887, is the youngest of this family.

During the Civil war Mr. Bevan enlisted in Company A, 33d Wis. V. I., and served in the Western Army, under Gen. Banks, and then under Gen. Thomas, participating in a number of fiercely contested battles on the Mississippi, and in front of Nashville. From that city the 33d Wisconsin went to Mobile, and assisted in the capture of that city and its protecting forts. It remained in the service until September, 1865, and had many difficult experiences. After the war Mr. Bevan went back to his old home in Ohio, where he remained for a time. His political views coincide with the principles of the Republican party, and he has held the office of justice of the peace some eight years. As one might expect from his military record, he takes an interest in his old comrades of the tented camp and battle-field, and belongs to Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., at Platteville. In religion Mr. and Mrs. Bevan are associated with the Baptist Church, though his own people are Quakers. Mr. Bevan is a man highly respected for his many good qualities, and is esteemed for his sterling worth and genuine character. Mrs. Bevan is a worthy companion of her honorable and upright husband, and is highly regarded for her womanly character and estimable spirit.

The parents of Mr. Bevan were John and Nancy (Fawcett) Bevan, natives of Virginia, and settlers in Ohio at an early day, where they both died. There are three sisters and one brother living. Lydia is the wife of James Ellis, of Clinton county, Ohio; Lucinda is the wife of Hugh Johnson, of the same county; Sarah J. is the wife of Joseph Arnold, of the same county; and Samuel married and settled at Bloomington, Illinois.

THOMAS STEWART. Among the well-known citizens of Ridgeway, Iowa county, is Thomas Stewart, a worthy representative of an old and prominent pioneer family of the State of Wisconsin, and one who bears a record for faithful service during the Civil war. The family distinguished itself during the early struggles against the Indians, and was identified with much of the advancement, along every line, which has placed Wisconsin in its proud position in the sisterhood of States.

The founder of the Stewart family in America was Thomas Stewart, a native of Tipperary, Ireland, who came to the United States when a young man and settled in the city of Philadelphia, but later in life came to Wisconsin, where he died; he was buried in Prairie du Chien. His family numbered five sons: William, Thomas, Robert, John and James, of whom William, Robert and Thomas served in the Black Hawk war, under the distinguished Gen. Henry Dodge.

Robert Stewart, the third son of Thomas, was born in Philadelphia, Penn., about 1814, came with his father to Wisconsin, and during his long life took an active part in public affairs, being for many years a leading man in his locality. With his brothers he engaged in the Black Hawk war, and in later years, when only peaceful scenes surrounded the comfortable home, would relate many exciting events of those stirring times. In several of the noted battles of that war he took a leading part, and in the celebrated engagement at Broadaxe he was able to take three shots at the old chief, Black Hawk, as he was urging his warriors to action. After the close of the war Mr. Stewart settled on land near Potosi, where he carried on farming, but subsequently removed to Dodgeville and engaged in lead mining, and there his death took place in 1877. His associations were with men whose names are known all over the Union, among these being Gen. Dodge, Jefferson Davis and Zachary Taylor.

The marriage of Robert Stewart took place in 1842, to Charlotte Billings, who belonged to another pioneer family of the Northwest, and to them were born three sons and four daughters, all of whom still survive: Thomas, subject of this biography; Abby Ann, a resident of Chicago; William, of Dodgeville; Esther, wife of Simon Davie, of Dodgeville; Eliza, wife of Louis Steinhagen, of Oelwein, Iowa; Nellie, the wife of Louis Hartstein, of Chicago; the youngest being Henderson, a resident of Dodgeville. The beloved mother of the family died in Dodgeville in February, 1901. Robert Stewart was a typical pioneer, honest, upright and progressive, one of those to whom Wisconsin owes a debt she can never repay. The family has been noted for its patriotism, the fathers having proved their love of country in the early days, and four of the sons displaying the same spirit during the progress of the Civil war—Thomas and his three cousins, Oliver, a son of William, who served in the 31st Wisconsin Regiment; James, a son of John, who was a member of Company C, of the 6th Wisconsin; and John, a son of John, who served in an Illinois regiment, all of them gallantly upholding the family prestige. Owing to the death of their parents, these cousins of Thomas, our subject, were reared in the family of their uncle Robert.

Thomas Stewart was born at Potosi, Grant Co., Wis., May 9, 1844, and his boyhood and youth were spent at that place and at Dodgeville, where he was educated. When the Civil war broke out his patriotic enthusiasm carried him into the army, his enlistment in Company C, 31st Wis. V. I., taking place Aug. 13, 1862, and his discharge dating June 20, 1865. During the whole term of his service he remained with his regiment, which took part in many of the severest engagements of the war. This regiment was organized at Fort Crawford, then went to Madison, and from there to Racine, going south to Columbus, Ky., where it was placed on provost duty for several months. The next move of the regiment was to Murfreesboro, where it was required to guard the Nashville & Chattanooga railroad, and three months later was sent as a part of Sherman's army to Chattanooga, in time to take part in the battle of Peach Tree Creek. From this time on the regiment took up its burden of work in the Atlanta campaign, marching with Sherman to the sea, and was engaged in the battles of the siege of Savannah, of Averysboro, and of Bentonville, following which came the surrender of Johnston, and the final grand review in Washington. The regiment was mustered out in Louisville, and soon afterward came to Madison, where it was disbanded.

After the close of the war, and the final establishment of peace, Mr. Stewart engaged in mining, and in this industry met with great success. For a number of years he has lived retired. He married Miss Ann Jones, a native of South Wales, who came to America with her parents when but sixteen years of age, and to Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have been born a family of nine children, six of whom still survive, namely: Thomas, a resident of Colorado; William, also of Colorado, engaged with his brother in mining; Florence, wife of William Van Wie, of Denver, Colo.; Hiram, Anna and Nellie, at home. The three members of the family who have passed out of life were: Mary, wife of Richard Clark; Jessie, who died at the age of eighteen; and Sarah, who died at the age of thirteen. All of these daughters passed away within the space of three weeks, from diphtheria—a sore affliction indeed to the bereaved family.

Mr. Stewart is a well-known and respected citizen, and has a record for gallantry during his war experience. In politics he is a Republican, and his standing in the community is high. The name is honored among the old pioneers, and our subject is justly regarded as a representative of it worthy the esteem of his locality.

JAMES M. HAYDEN, whose patriotic service in the country's behalf, no less than a blameless life, have won for him the affectionate esteem of his fellow citizens, was born April 16, 1843, in Smithfield, Fayette Co., Penn., a son of Samuel and Nancy Ann Hayden, who were among the early pioneer families that came from Pennsylvania, of whom Grant county has just reason to be proud.

Samuel Hayden was born Nov. 30, 1809, and migrated from Pennsylvania to Wisconsin, settling at Lancaster, Grant county, in 1851, and finally with his family took up his residence in Beetown, with his son, James M. Hayden, where he entered into rest, Aug. 17, 1889. On Sept. 22, 1831, in Pennsylvania, he married Nancy Ann Hall, who was born May 10, 1811, and died Feb. 17, 1892. To their union eleven children were born, nine of whom grew to the age of maturity, and of these six children are living; four brothers were soldiers in the Union army during the Civil war, Isaac, Henry J., James M. and Benjamin F. Of these, James M. was the youngest. The two elder lost their lives in the service, Isaac being a member of the 1st Wis. Vol. Cav., and Henry J. of Company C, 25th Wis. V. I. Benjamin F. served for four years as a private in Company F, of the 7th Wis. V. I., and James M. enlisted in Company C, of the 25th Wis. V. I., Aug. 12, 1862. Service in the trenches before Vicksburg so impaired his health that he was removed, with the sick, to the hospital at Paducah, Ky., and subsequently sent home on sick leave. On recovering his health he re-joined his regiment at Vicksburg. He took part in the campaign against Atlanta, and in the march to the sea, crossing the Carolinas and Virginia on his way to Washington, where he took part in the grand review.

After being mustered out of the service at the close of the war he returned home to resume the life of quiet agricultural pursuits, in which he has been reared, and which had been interrupted by the upheaval of rebellion. His health, however, was badly impaired by his military life, and he finds himself disqualified for severe manual labor. He is a Republican in politics, and an active worker in his party's cause. During the twenty-second session of the State Legislature (in 1895) he served as engrossing clerk of the State Senate, and later held the important position of clerk to the committee on claims. In July, 1897, he was appointed postmaster of Beetown, Wis., which position he now holds.

On Jan. 28, 1872, Mr. Hayden was united in marriage with Miss Cordelia C. Prideau, daughter of James and Mary Prideau. To their union have been born one son and five daughters, Sherman P., Julia, Delia, Mabel, Myrtle and Jessie.

HARVEY CUSHMAN, a worthy veteran of the great Civil war, who is engaged in business at Rewey, Iowa county, is a native of the Keystone State, born at Waterford, Erie county, Oct. 29, 1839. He represents the ninth generation of one of the oldest New England families, many members of which have been distinguished in professional, military and official life. The record begins with Robert Cushman, who was born in England about 1580. He became an ardent supporter of the Puritan faith, and joined Dr. Robinson's famous colony at Leyden, Holland, in which he was an influential member. In company with Carver and Brewster, he made several trips to England to negotiate for a charter from the King, permitting the Puritans to settle in America, their chief anxiety being to secure a guarantee of "Freedom of Religious Conscience." As agent of the company which was promoting their emigration, he engaged the services of the "Mayflower," and started from Southampton with the first party of emigrants, but was one of those elected to return to London, owing to the unseaworthiness of the "Speedwell," in which a portion of them had taken passage. He remained in charge of the flock in London until the following year (1621), when he came with the second party of New England emigrants in "The Fortune." Though not a regular minister, while at Plymouth he delivered in the colony the first sermon which was ever printed. The next day, Dec. 13, 1621, he departed for England to report to the company according to previous arrangement, leaving his son Thomas, then but fourteen years of age, in charge of his friend, William Bradford, the subsequent governor of the Colony. Two years later he and Bradford secured the charter for a colony at Cape Ann, the nucleus of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Robert Cushman never returned to America, but his son became famous as Elder Thomas Cushman. He married Mary, daughter of Isaac Allerton, who came to Plymouth in the "Mayflower." In 1855 the descendants of this couple numbered 3,336 persons, many of whom were noted for their devotion to principle; a number sacrificed their lives in the Revolution and other conflicts of the nation, and the number included twenty-two clergymen, fifteen lawyers, one lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, three members of Congress, and many other public officials. Charlotte Cushman, the famous actress, also belonged to the posterity of Elder Thomas Cushman.

Barnabas Cushman, grandfather of Harvey, served in a Massachusetts regiment at the battle of Bunker Hill. After the war he became one of the pioneers of Wilmington, Vermont, locating at that place when it was a wilderness and the nearest store was at Greenfield, Mass. His son, Barnabas, married Miss Polly, daughter of David Cory, a Revolutionary veteran who took part in two bayonet charges at Bunker Hill. This couple lived successively in New York and Pennsylvania, and in 1856 came to Wisconsin, settling in Lima, Grant county, where Mr. Cushman died at the age of seventy-two years. During the war of 1812 he did several months' service in the garrison at Oswego, N. Y. His wife passed away at the age of seventy years. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom seven sons and three daughters grew up: Alonzo died at Mifflin; Ezra, in California; Lucy (Mrs. James Owens), at Lincoln, Neb.; Mary (Mrs. Jesse Brown), in Pennsylvania; and Sarah, in New York. The survivors with their present homes are as follows: Obed, at Moro, Ore.; Cephas, at Rewey, Wis.; Laura (Mrs. Andrew Oldfield), California; Warren, in Kansas; Silas, at Lincoln, Neb.; and Harvey, whose name heads this notice.

In 1855 Harvey Cushman left home and came to Iowa county, Wis. A few years later he purchased land near the present village of Rewey, which he cultivated until 1883, when he sold out and removed to Spink county, S. Dak. After spending eight years there he returned to Rewey, where he has since dealt in lumber, grain and other produce, also operating a feed mill. On Aug. 13, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, 30th Wis. V. I., and was in continuous service until September, 1865. His company spent the first two years in the Northwest, building a fort at Bayfield, Wis., in which vicinity the Chippewa Indians were threatening the settlers. Thence they went by way of Milwaukee to St. Paul, and marched across Minnesota and erected Fort Wadsworth (now Fort Sisseton), in Dakota. From there the company was sent by way of St. Louis and Paducah to Louisville, where it was joined by the colonel with the balance of the regiment, which had been employed elsewhere in the Northwest. The regiment started to join Gen. Thomas at Nashville, but was intercepted by a telegram, and remained on guard at Bowling Green, where a day or two later they heard of the victory over Gen. Hood. During the balance of the war they were engaged in subduing bushwhackers, marching over a good share of Kentucky. While thus employed, to the credit of the 30th Wisconsin, the excellent discipline which prevailed among its members should be mentioned. Though they had abundant opportunities for plundering and pillaging, they uniformly refrained from disorderly conduct, and won an enviable reputation among the Union officers, as well as with the citizens among whom they were quartered. Mr. Cushman's brother, Warren, served in the same company.

Mr. Cushman was married in 1866 to Miss Caroline, daughter of O. H. P. and Jane McCord, who were early settlers of Iowa county. The latter died there, but Mr. McCord passed away at Baker City, Ore. Mrs. Caroline Cushman was born in Mercer county, Penn., and died in Iowa county, Wis., March 14, 1881, aged nearly thirty-five years. She was a devout member of the Advent Church, and left four children: Virgil C., deceased; Mertie A., who died May 1, 1901, at the age of twenty-one years and one day (her funeral was one of the largest ever held in Rewey, denoting the universal respect of the community for herself and the family); Walter N.; and Idella R., both of Iowa county. He was again married, Oct. 27, 1881, to Maria A. Burton, a native of Mifflin township, and daughter of William and Jane A. Burton. By this union he has one daughter and one son, named respectively Amy J. and Harvey R. His posterity also includes eight grandchildren. He is a deacon of the Advent Society at Rewey, which he helped to organize in 1876. He is also connected with the Grand Army of the Republic and the Masonic fraternity. His life has been one of industry and usefulness, and a great host of friends unite in wishing him continued health and prosperity.

John H. Owen

REV. C. A. WIGHT, for several years pastor of the Congregational Church at Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Massachusetts, born in Ashfield in August, 1856, the eldest of the eight children that graced the marriage of Joseph E. and Sarah R. Wight, and of whom, besides Rev. C. A. Wight, four are still living, viz.: E. H. Wight, a business man in New York City; J. H. Wight, a jeweler in Spencer, Iowa; Sarah J., wife of E. C. Kelton, a merchant at Melrose Highlands, Mass.; and Leland H. Wight, a farmer of Hatfield, Mass., residing on the old homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Wight were born and reared in the old Bay State, and Mr. Wight was a merchant and general business man in Hatfield from early manhood until his death. His widow, who is still residing in the old town, is a descendant of the Leland family, many of whom became noted in the annals of Massachusetts.

Rev. C. A. Wight was prepared for college at the Smith Academy, Hatfield, and was the first male student graduated from that academy fully prepared for collegiate studies. He was graduated from Yale College in 1882, and later studied theology in Yale Divinity School. He was ordained a minister of the Congregational denomination at Detroit, Mich., was first appointed to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Eaton Rapids, next went to Anthony, Kans., then to St. Louis, Mo., and then in 1893 to Platteville, Wis., where he officiated most acceptably. In 1891 he made the tour of Europe.

While in college Rev. Mr. Wight was a member of the University Boat Crew, editor of the "Yale Literary Magazine," and a member of the Scroll & Key Society. He has been a member of the ex-committee of the Wisconsin Home Missionary Society, and has also served as the society's vice-president.

In June, 1887, Rev. Mr. Wight married Miss Charlotte M. Burgiss, the accomplished daughter of J. H. and Charlotte Burgiss, of Detroit, Mich., and to this union have been born three children, Winnifred E., Elliot L., and Charles A., all of Platteville nativity. Politically Mr. Wight is a Republican. He is classed among the best pulpit orators of the State, and with its profound and better-read theologians, while his piety and sincerity make him beloved and respected by his flock, and extremely popular outside of his own congregation.

FREDERICK FUELBERG, one of the successful and progressive merchants of Platteville, Grant county, is the proprietor of a well-stocked general store, and has built up a fine trade among the best people of the city by honest methods, prompt service and the handling of none but the highest grade of goods, which are offered at very reasonable figures.

Frederick Fuelberg was born in Hanover, Germany, in September, 1866, a son of Frederick and Wilhemina (Brunotte) Fuelberg, both also natives of Germany. Here they were married, and resided until 1890, when the father, wishing to try his fortune across the ocean, came to Platteville, living with his son until his death, which occurred in November, 1899. Having always been a miner by occupation in Germany, upon coming to the New World Mr. Fuelberg engaged in the same work, and was killed in an accident at the mines when blasting was being done. Our subject was the only child in the family, and his mother also survives. The father was always a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, in which he took an active part, and in politics he followed the teachings of the Republican party. An earnest, industrious, honest man. Mr. Fuelberg gained many friends, and his untimely demise was deeply mourned by a large number of people to whom his many admirable traits of character were known.

Frederick Fuelberg received a very good education in his native land, where he followed the calling of a merchant. In 1883 he made the passage to America, coming direct to Platteville, where he accepted a position in one of the leading hardware establishments in the city. Later Mr. Fuelberg hired out on a farm for some five years, and in 1892 returned to Platteville to clerk for H. P. Schroder for three years. After that he opened his present establishment, which is conducted upon strict business principles. Owing to his thorough understanding of all the details of his undertaking, possessing in marked degree the faculty to cater to the public taste, and also special advantages in buying at an extremely low figure, enabling him to quote prices particularly pleasing to his customers, Mr. Fuelberg has built up a large and constantly increasing trade, and is numbered among the successful merchants of the city.

In 1892 Mr. Fuelberg was married, by Rev. E. O. Geisel, to Miss Emma Johnson, of Platteville, a daughter of Frederick Johnson, one of the old pioneers of Grant county. Mr. and Mrs. Fuelberg have two interesting little ones, Mabel and Clarence, both of whom were born in Platteville. Like his father before him, Mr. Fuelberg is a Republican in his political views, and also a member of the Lutheran Church, as is his wife. Our subject is a trustee in the church, and also secretary of same, and both he and his wife take a very active part in all its work. Mr. and Mrs. Fuelberg are very pleasant, agreeable people, kind-hearted and sociable, and have made many friends, not only in the church, but throughout the city.

JOHN H. OWEN, junior member of the firm of Chambers & Owen, jobbers of notions and cigars, Milton Junction, holds high rank in Rock county as a business man. Aggressive in the prosecution of his trade, cautious in manner, keen and comprehensive in judgment, he has rapidly won recognition and success. He was born in Oneida, Oneida Co., N. Y., Dec. 31, 1856, son of John and Mary (Jones) Owen, and grandson of Richard Owen, a native of Wales, a miner in early life, and later a farmer of Oneida county, N. Y., where he died well advanced in life, leaving a family of twelve children. His wife survived to the age of ninety-nine years and six months. Richard Owen was of poetic taste and ability, and composed many writings in his native tongue.

John Owen, the father of our subject, was born on the island of Anglesea in 1815. He was a miner in Wales in his early life, but in 1834 came to America, and for several years followed mining in Pennsylvania. He then engaged in farming in Oneida county, N. Y., until 1865, when he migrated to Wisconsin, locating at Randolph, and engaging in farming and dairying; he started the first cheese factory in Wisconsin. He died in September, 1893. His second wife, Mary (Jones) Owen, was born at Welshpool, Wales, in 1824, daughter of a wealthy farmer of that place, who lived to the age of eighty-seven years. She died in 1886, aged sixty-two years, like her husband, a devout and faithful Methodist. To John and Mary Owen were born eight children, two sons and six daughters, as follows: Mary E., wife of Edward Jones, of Waupun, Wis.; Catherine, widow of George H. Button, of Milton Junction; Margaret L., wife of Freeman R. Potter, of Wonewoc, Wis.; John H., of Milton Junction; Fannie E., who married Gilbert Burdick, of Randolph, Wis., and is now deceased; Allie S., who died aged fourteen years; Ida E., wife of W. G. Bickelhaupt, formerly of Aberdeen, S. Dak., now of Everett, Wash.; and George L., of Bucklin, Mo. Mr. Owen had two children by his first marriage: Jane, wife of John J. Loomis, of Oneida, N. Y.; and William R., of Randolph, Wisconsin.

John H. Owen, our subject, when three years old removed with his parents, in 1860, from Oneida to Rome, N. Y., and five years later, in 1865, came with them to Randolph, Wis. There he grew to manhood on the farm, attending the district and graded schools, and later taking up farm life, which he continued to the age of twenty-seven years. In January, 1884, he came to Milton Junction, accepting a position in the wholesale notion and cigar store of his brother-in-law, George H. Button, which he filled until the death of Mr. Button, in 1891. The business was then purchased by Mr. Owen and S. C. Chambers, who have ever since conducted it most successfully under the firm name of Chambers & Owen. Mr. Owen is now vice-president of the State Bank of Milton Junction. He is one of the most enterprising and progressive business men of the village and though yet comparatively young in years has amply attested his eminent capacity for commercial and public affairs.

Mr. Owen married, Oct. 26, 1887, Miss Margaret E. Paul, daughter of Alexander and Mary (Black) Paul, of Milton Junction. To our subject and wife have been born four children, Jessie L., Alexander Paul, George B., and Margaret. Mr. Owen is a prominent member of the Methodist Church, now serving as trustee and steward. Fraternally he is a prominent Mason, and a member of Milton Lodge, No. 161, F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; and Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. Politically Mr. Owen is a Republican. He served four years as postmaster, and for two years was a member and president of the school board.

JOHN W. STEWART came of an old pioneer family in Green county, where he was born in the town of York, Sept. 4, 1844. His death occurred Dec. 21, 1894, and within these somewhat brief limits were compassed the activities of an honorable and upright life.

John and Adaline (Robinson) Stewart the parents of John W., were born in Ohio, and came of English origin. In 1837 they entered the Territory of Wisconsin and settled in Wiota township, Lafayette county, and in 1838 he made the first settlement in the town of York, Green county, on Section 27. The husband and father was born in 1806, and died at the age of sixty-one years; the wife and mother was born in 1804, and died in 1844. They were married in 1830, and became the parents of the following children: Decatur, now living in Parker, Turner Co., S. Dak.; Jerusha, deceased; Ellen, wife of Charles Green, Meadow Grove, Neb.; George, deceased in California; J. W., killed in childhood by falling upon a horn with which he was playing; Adeline, who died when a child; and John W. John Stewart was twice married, his second wife being Hulda Brown, who bore him two children: Banks, who lives in Nebraska, and Grant, in Colorado.

John W. Stewart was married Oct. 30, 1870, to Miss Carrie Lunda, daughter of Nels Erickson Lunda, one of the very early settlers of the town of York. Her birth occurred May 20, 1852, on the Atlantic Ocean, while her parents were on the voyage to the United States, and she was one of the following family: Carrie; Erick, who is now dead; Helge; Edward; Emma; Betsy, deceased, and Anton. Mr. Stewart and his wife became the parents of three children: (1) John W., Jr., born May 11, 1872, resides on the old home farm with his mother and sisters. He is a Republican, and takes a prominent part in local affairs, at the present time being town clerk, and enjoys a good reputation as a capable farmer and reliable man. (2) Adaline I., born Aug. 25, 1874, and (3) Nellie M., born July 7, 1883, both live at home.

John W. Stewart was a thrifty and energetic farmer, ambitious of success, and willing to pay the price of hard work. Never uniting with any church, he held to the principles of the Christian religion, and exemplified in his daily life its high teachings. In politics he held to the Republican party, and was one of the influential men of his day, serving on the town board, and filling other town offices. Mr. Stewart enlisted in the 31st Wis. V. I. in 1862, serving in Company G, of that command, and participating in many of the most hotly contested battles of the war, and being in Gen. Sherman's army when he made his celebrated march to the sea. Before the end of his enlistment he became a corporal, and was regarded as a brave and reliable soldier. Mr. Stewart was popular among his neighbors, and was well liked by all who knew him. His was a genuine and reliable manhood, and on every occasion the real man rang true to the touch of trial and testing. In the business world and at home, he was a good and faithful man and citizen, doing his duty modestly but well, and meeting all the responsibilities placed upon him to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Mrs. Stewart and her children remain on the home place, and hold an enviable place in the good opinion of the community. They have a good home, and cultivate the farm according to modern and up-to-date ideas. The mother is regarded as a person of good character, and the young people have many friends, and rank well in the community.

GEORGE HAWK, one of the solid, substantial citizens of Platteville, Grant county, a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and a man who has few, if any, enemies, was born in Cornwall, England, in October, 1833, a son of George and Johanna Hawk, natives of England. George Hawk, Sr., started with his family to America, in 1846, but the good mother died during the passage, and he landed with his children at Potosi, Wis., where he engaged in lead mining for seven years, later removing to Harrison, Ill., and dying. To himself and wife were born (all in England) the following family: Johanna, wife of William Gilbert, of Missouri; our subject; Elizabeth, wife of Philip Knapp, of Oregon; Alice, widow of William Chester, of Missouri; Mary A., widow of John Forsythe, of Illinois; and William, a resident of Platteville.

George Hawk was reared and educated in Grant county, commencing work in the lead mines while still a boy, which occupation he followed successfully for a number of years, but later engaged in farming in Harrison township, and then removed to Platteville, where, in 1884, he was honored with appointment as road commissioner, having jurisdiction over eight townships, and still holds the office. During this time Mr. Hawk has also served one year as city commissioner of roads.

In 1856 Mr. Hawk married Miss Sarah Ashworth, who was born in England in 1839, a daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Ashworth, whose second husband was Edmund Grindrod, and died in Platteville. Seven living children are in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Hawk: Martha, born in 1857, wife of William R. Wallace, a resident of Platteville, and has one son, George; Carrie, born in 1859, widow of Robert Trenary a resident of Pocahontas, Iowa, has two children, Flossie and Earl L.; George E., born in 1862, married Mary Dean, and resides at Pocahontas, Iowa, and has two children, Arthur and Frank; Mary I., born in 1865, wife of John Morman, of Iowa, has one son, Bertie; Robert E., born in 1869, married, is a farmer in Charles Mix county, S. Dak., and has two children, Rufus and Basel; Lizzie A., born in 1870, educated in the Platteville school, and is now the wife of James Hayden, a farmer of Platteville township, has two children, Robert and Estella; Estella died in childhood; Arthur, born in 1879, was a student of the Platteville school and now is farming in South Dakota.

When the war between the States broke out, one of the first to offer his services was our subject, who entered Company F, 21st Wis. V. I., and served with the Western Army until the close of the struggle, when he was honorably discharged, having made for himself a record for bravery, of which he may well be proud. In memory of those days Mr. Hawk is an active member of Sherman Post,

G. A. R., of Platteville. Politically Mr. Hawk is a consistent member of the Democratic party. Both as a private citizen and as a public official Mr. Hawk has proven himself worthy of the confidence of his fellow townsmen, and enjoys a widespread popularity, which is richly deserved.

AMOS S. SMITH is a live stock dealer of Green county, and makes Juda his headquarters for a very considerable business. John and Ann (Sanders) Smith, his parents, were of English and Welsh descent, and were from the East, the mother a native of Delaware and the father of Pennsylvania, where he died. The mother came to Wisconsin at a very early day, and made her home in this State until her death. They were the parents of the following children: Sarah Ann married Newton Wickersham, of Pennsylvania; Caleb P. left home many years ago, went to sea, and has not been heard from for several years; Ellis H. was a carpenter, and died in this State; Mary J. married N. H. Hanson, deceased; Charlotte W. and Hannah B. reside in Monroe, Wis., unmarried; Elizabeth married James Quick, of Kansas; Amos S.

Amos S. Smith was born Feb. 1, 1845, and came to Wisconsin in 1867, making a home in Green county. On Oct. 28, 1869, Mr. Smith wedded Miss Emma L. Wickersham, of Pennsylvania, a daughter of E. P. and Phebe (Gatchell) Wickersham, who came to Wisconsin in 1868, and were Quakers in their religion. To this marriage have been born two children, Martha Gertrude, who was born in 1871, and died Aug. 24, 1895; and Phebe Maud, who was born in 1876, was a very successful teacher in the schools of Green county for a number of years, and is now attending the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Amos S. Smith enlisted in the war of the Rebellion as a member of the 101st Penn. V. I., and did acceptable service for the government and the nation. An honorable discharge was given him in the summer of 1865. Mr. Smith served in the Army of the Potomac, and participated in some of the hardest-fought battles of the war. Taken prisoner April 20, 1864, he was detained for some time at Andersonville.

Mr. Smith came West after his return from the war, and located in Illinois in 1866. The next year he entered Wisconsin, and setting in Green county, made this his permanent home. For twenty-five years he was a farmer, and in 1883 made his home at Juda, Wis. Here he began buying live stock for John Leglor in 1893, and is still engaged in this business. Mr. Smith has a fine residence in Juda, and is a careful and fore-handed man. From the United States he receives a pension of $8 a month. Mr. Smith has never identified himself with any church, but believes that honesty and fidelity are the fundamental principles. In politics he is a Republican. He began life without a dollar, but by hard work, economy and industry he has been able not only to live in comfort but to get ahead in the world. Mr. Smith is a member of Ben Davis Post, G. A. R.

HON. JOSEPH BENNETT. Among its most highly honored pioneers, Iowa county reckons those stalwart settlers of English stock, whose courage, hardihood and perseverance have done so much toward the development of its mineral resources, as well as toward the upbuilding of its moral and educational forces. To this class belongs Joseph Bennett, the mention of whose name always challenges respect. Born in Cornwall county, England, on July 6, 1822, he has been a resident of Wisconsin for fifty-six years. The story of his life is replete with interest and instruction, and it is from the careers of such men that the youth of the present generation can find enlightenment and encouragement. His life has been an eventful one. His father, Joseph, married Eleanor Berryman. He was a miner and died in 1852, the father of a family of two sons and three daughters. The eldest son, Henry, settled in Wisconsin in 1847. Six years later he emigrated from America to Australia, dying there after meeting with moderate success. A sister, Elizabeth, was married to Thomas Sincock before leaving the old country in 1847, and is now deceased. Another sister, Sarah, is living in Australia, and the youngest member of the family, Jane, died in Cornwall.

It is with the career of Joseph Bennett, the younger, however,—the eminent citizen of Dodgeville,—that this narrative is especially concerned. He grew to manhood in his native shire, and in 1845 married Mary Berryman, who has shared his joys and griefs for more than half a century. Her father was Richard Berryman and her mother, before marriage, was Martha Williams. She was her parents' only daughter, although she had eight brothers. In 1848 the elder Berryman, accompanied by his third son, William, crossed the Atlantic on what may be said to have been a tour of inspection. The outlook appearing satisfactory, the other members of the family followed the succeeding year. Their new home, in which they must have found a reversal of all previous experiences, was at Hazel Green, Grant county, and here Mrs. Bennett's mother died in 1851. After the death of his first wife Mr. Berryman married Christian Williams. His declining years were passed at the home of his son, William, in Dodgeville township, where he died on Aug. 24, 1868, at the age of sixty-nine years. He was a man of deep religious conviction and earnest piety, a class leader in the Methodist Church, and a liberal contributor to the cause of religion. A brief mention of his children will prove of interest. Richard, the eldest, died April 15, 1893, at the age of seventy years, at the home of his son, William. John, the second son of the first marriage of Richard Berryman, died on his farm in Jo Daviess Co., Ill., Feb. 4, 1880, in his fifty-third year. The third son is William Berryman, of Dodgeville. Henry lives at Bridgewater, S. Dak. James is a resident of the State of Washington. George has his home in Jo Daviess Co., Ill., while the residence of Charles is at Blackfoot, Idaho.

Joseph Bennett came from Cornwall to America not long after his marriage, in 1845, leaving his wife in their English home, until he had found another shelter in what was then, to both of them, a strange land. She joined him the following year, settling in Dodgeville, which has been their home for fifty-five years. To a native of Cornwall, the most natural vocation was mining, and this he followed until 1858, when, in company with James Perkins, Joseph George and a Mr. Arthur, he erected a smelting furnace. Arthur withdrew in 1861, and was succeeded by James Roberts, who continued in the firm until 1864; Mr. Perkins retired in 1869, and in that year the business of Mr. Bennett was consolidated with that of the old firm of Hoskins, Cholvin & Co., and the style of the amalgamated concern became Bennett, George & Co. Later Messrs. Cholvin & George withdrew, and the firm of Bennett & Hoskins came into existence. Mr. Hoskins died in 1889, and for seven years Mr. Bennett carried on the business alone, retiring in 1896. The business was for many years an extensive one and proved exceedingly profitable, our subject's keen sense and sound judgment proving prominent factors in its success.

It is not only in the business affairs of Dodgeville and Iowa county that Mr. Bennett has played an important part. His fellow citizens have alike honored him and demonstrated their own political wisdom by electing him to numerous posts of honor and responsibility, among them being the presidency of the village, the chairmanship of the town and county boards, the county superintendence of the poor and (in 1876) a seat in the State Legislature. He was also chosen as one of a board of three commissioners to adjust the railroad debt of Iowa county, his associates being Dr. Vivian and Hon. W. L. Joiner. This committee succeeded one previously appointed for the same purpose composed of Mr. Bennett, Dr. Van Dusen, of Mineral Point, and G. Meigs, of Arena. Mr. Bennett is a Republican in politics, and, in religious views, both he and his estimable wife are active and consistent members of the Methodist Church, Mr. Bennett having been, for many years, the efficient superintendent of its Sunday-school.

The union of Joseph and Mary (Berryman) Bennett has been blessed by the birth of four daughters and a son: Ellen, born July 26, 1847, died May 30, 1877; Martha married Reuben Lanyon, of Mineral Point, and now resides with her husband, at Joplin, Mo.; Edith is the wife of the Rev. W. H. Otjen, pastor of the Methodist Church at Oregon, Ill.; Joseph T., the only son, is a druggist at Lancaster, in Grant county; and Flora M. is Mrs. F. A. Carr, of Dodgeville. Their home is one of the most delightful in Dodgeville, religion, with love its handmaid, presiding over its economy. And here this venerable couple, whose lives have been without reproach and whose life work is well nigh done, await the summons which shall call them to a glorious immortality.

JOHN BLOTZ. Time, in its unfaltering march, leaves little unchanged, and the beginning of a new century finds living comparatively few of the early settlers of southwestern Wisconsin, who came to the State in the forties, and have left their impress upon its material, economic and political development.

Among those who are left, however, few can more justly claim a title to honor and respect than Mr. John Blotz, of Dodgeville, Iowa county. He was born Aug. 29, 1826, in Nassau, then an independent duchy, but now an integral part of the German empire. His grandfather was named Jacob, and his parents, Martin and Mary Blotz, emigrated to America in 1846. Of their seven children two, Martin and Josephine, remained in Germany, where they passed their lives. The five who crossed the ocean in company with their parents were named Andrew, Margaret, John, Barbara and Catherine. The family was obliged to wait six weeks at Antwerp before being able to secure passage, so great was the tide of emigration and so inadequate the provision for caring for it. Finally, in March, 1846, the party embarked on a sailing vessel bound for New York, and after a voyage, lasting sixty-five days landed at their port of destination. Thence they proceeded without delay to Milwaukee Co., Wis., where the father settled upon land which he began to clear. Within a short time he met an untimely death through an accident, which occurred while he was felling trees in the forest. After this sad bereavement the family resolved to leave the new home which had thus become the scene of such painful associations, and accordingly in the summer of 1847 removed to Mineral Point, Iowa county. There the loving care of her children provided a home for the widowed mother, where she continued to reside until in 1884, after she had reached the ripe old age of eighty-three, the angel of death summoned her to join the husband of her youth.

A brief mention of other members of the family cannot fail to be of interest. Andrew and Margaret were both married before leaving Nassau. Andrew lived for many years in Wisconsin but finally removed to Nebraska, where he died several years ago, leaving four children. Margaret was the wife of Philip Branger, who is also deceased. Barbara, after coming to America, married Theodore Engles, and lives at Mineral Point. Catherine is Mrs. Christopher Schlosser, of Chicago.

Mr. John Blotz, who is the only surviving son of his father, was a sturdy youth of twenty years when he accompanied his parents to the New World. For three years he was employed in work upon a farm, but in 1849 became infected with the "gold fever" which drew so many brave, hardy adventurers to a nameless grave upon the western plains. He set forth for the California gold fields in March of that year, being one of a party of five, formed of denizens of Dodgeville and Mineral Point. The tedious journey was made in a wagon drawn by an ox-team, and the time consumed was six months. As far as is known Mr. Blotz is the only member of the little band of gold seekers yet living. He followed placer mining for fifteen months when he turned his face homeward, his return being hastened by a serious accident sustained while at work. He came home by way of the Nicaragua route, and the crossing of Central America was a perilous undertaking, which occupied some two months. Soon after his return in the spring of 1851 he purchased a farm, which he began at once to improve. Having reached the age of twenty-five, and his thirst for adventure being satiated, he determined to settle down in a home of his own, and to take to himself a wife. He chose wisely and, fortunately for himself, his proposal met with favor. It was in the autumn of 1851 that he was married, his wife being Lena Berg, who was born in Nassau in 1834, and was brought to America by her parents when a child of nine years. Not many years afterward Mr. Blotz disposed of his farm, and purchased the flouring mill of Peter Theno. The plant had been in operation for several years, but the new proprietor, with characteristic foresight and energy, remodeled it, putting in new and modern machinery and for a long time conducted it with decided success. He is also the owner of an undivided tract of 470 acres of choice land, lying partly in Dodgeville and partly in Mineral Point township.

To Mr. Blotz and his wife seven children have been born, six of whom are yet living. Theresa, the sixth, in order of birth, died shortly after her marriage to Joseph Phillips. The eldest son, Joseph, is a farmer. John resides on the homestead farm. Elizabeth is the wife of George Phillips. Kate is unmarried and makes her home with her parents. Leonard is a harness maker of Dodgeville. Frederick resides in Nebraska. Nineteen grandchildren also appeal to the love of this elderly couple, who are descending the hill of life together, with their spiritual vision uplifted toward a better land. Their home is one of the happiest in Dodgeville, and no family can claim more universal respect. As practical Catholics they have passed their long and useful lives, and they look forward to death's summons with serene and abiding hope.

JOSEPH HINN, SR., is one of the well known early settlers of Marion township, Grant county, and was born in Baden, Germany, near the famous Black Forest, March 19, 1827, a son of Sebastian Hinn, and a grandson of Michael Hinn. The latter was what would be called a farmer and stock dealer, in this country. He had three sons and one daughter. The name of the eldest son is unknown; the second son was Lindoline, and the third, Sebastian. Michael Hinn was the only male member of his father's family.

Sebastian Hinn was twice married, and by his first union became the father of six children, three sons and three daughters: Andreas; Lindoline; John; Maria; Catherine and Francisca. By his second marriage, Sebastian Hinn had two sons and two daughters; Mathias, Joseph, Barbara and Theresa. Joseph Hinn, Sr., is the only member of his father's family who came to America, and he immigrated on account of participation in the famous revolution of 1848.

Having lost his parents in early boyhood, Joseph Hinn was thrown upon his own resources while yet a child, and was still a young man when he crossed the ocean. In 1849, Joseph Hinn located at Kingston, N. Y., where he remained five years, employed in the stone quarries and on the canal there; then emigrated, with his family to Grant county, Wis., settling on land in Marion township, that he had entered from the government the previous year. This land, which is a part of Sec. 22, became the homestead of the family, and here nine of their ten children were born, and all reared. The farm contained 200 acres, which Joseph Hinn improved, until he became one of the most prosperous farmers of the community. As he advanced in years, Mr. Hinn retired from active life, and now he and his wife reside with their children, some of whom still reside in Grant county, Wis., and others in Iowa.

In 1850, Joseph Hinn married Miss Catherine Brechlar, a native of Baden, Germany, whose father died in his native land, when she was young, and she came to America with her mother. There were born to these good people five sons and five daughters: Charles P. (born in the State of New York, Aug. 15 1853). Christopher (born June 6, 1855, the first born in Grant county), Joseph (born March 6, 1857), all three prominent business men of Fennimore, Wis.; Magdalena (born Feb. 11, 1859), Catherine (born Nov. 4, 1862), Mary (born Sept. 30, 1864), William (born Aug. 19, 1867), George (born Nov. 19, 1869), Theresa (born Dec. 25, 1872), and Emma (born Feb. 7, 1875). Mr. and Mrs. Hinn, by hard work and good management, accumulated a large property, reared their children carefully, and now enjoy well-earned peace and comfort, surrounded by the love of their children.

JOSHUA H. BERKEY, the eloquent and popular pastor of the Christian Church of Monroe, Green county, is in the prime of life, and full of the ardor of great convictions. He is an ardent churchman, a profound believer in the saving and uplifting power of the Christ gospel, and an unhesitating advocate of its application to the problems of the modern world. He is a forcible and popular speaker, and a lecturer and orator of more than State reputation.

Mr. Berkey was born at Post Oak Springs, Roane county, East Tennessee, March 11, 1852, and is a son of Jacob W. and Mary R. (Moore) Berkey, natives of Indiana and Tennessee, respectively. They were the parents of two children: Joshua H.; and John L., of Monticello, Wisconsin, who was in the employment of the United States government some years at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. He is a master painter. The father was a showman, and had traveled over a large part of the United States. He died at Merom, Ind., March 21, 1871, at the age of forty-seven years, seven months and three days. His widow still survives and lives with her son, the Monroe clergyman. Henry Berkey, the paternal grandfather of Joshua H. Berkey, was a native of Somerset county, Penn., and of Dutch descent; he had two sons and several daughters, and died in middle life. Joshua Moore, the father of Mary Moore, was a native of North Carolina, of English and Welsh descent, and began life as a tanner, in later life becoming a farmer; he moved to Wisconsin, and there made his home until somewhat advanced in years, when he moved to Sumner county, Kansas, where he died at the age of eighty-eight. In religious views he was a Quaker. His widow survived him, and reached her ninetieth year.

Joshua H. Berkey has made his home principally in Wisconsin since 1860. In his younger days he passed about nineteen years on the road with his father. On Sept. 30, 1875, he married Miss Sarah M. Sears, a daughter of Thomas and Adaline Sears, and six children were born of this union: Ada Almeda, Iva Idalia, Ena Elvina, Ola Olivia, Ura Uretta and Carol Beatrice. Mr. Berkey had studied pharmacy in Monroe, and after his marriage opened a drug store in Monticello, Wis., continuing in that business several years, during which time his attention was arrested by the pressing character of the temperance reform. He sold out his drug store and went to Denver, Colo., where in 1880 he became the secretary of a mining company, and a little later was chosen as the business manager of Pomeroy's Great West, a weekly newspaper. During this time in company with Col. Will L. Visscher, Mr. Berkey started and ran a humorous, dramatic and literary weekly newspaper, under the title of Hello. In 1883 Mr. Berkey disposed of his interests in Colorado, and went to Kansas, where he bought a farm in Sumner county, devoting eight years to its development. During this time he founded and conducted a paper at Geuda Springs, Kan., to which he gave the name of The Crank. It was a strong temperance paper, and had a wide circulation. While Mr. Berkey lived in Kansas, he was called into the lecture field as a speaker on temperance, and other timely themes. For several years he was a member of the First Day Adventist Church, but was never in pastoral charge of any church until he was called in 1898 to the pulpit of the Christian Church at Monroe, and this charge he still holds. Monroe has been his home for the past six years.

In 1896 Mr. Berkey was nominated on the Prohibition ticket for Governor of Wisconsin, and made a campaign of four months in the proper presentation of his candidacy. He received several hundred more votes than Joshua Levering, the candidate for president of the United States. He carries the flag of his country and his Bible wherever he lectures, and never resorts to personal abuse. His success in making converts has been almost phenomenal. From those who know him best, and have known him longest and most intimately, he has received the warmest encomiums. He is a broad-minded and eloquent advocate of great reforms from the standpoint of the needs of the world, and is full of sympathy and love for those who suffer the ills of the present order.

Of him the Northwestern Mail, of Madison, Wis., in issue of Aug. 23, 1900, says:

"Few men have ever been in the State who commanded better audiences or have given better satisfaction to earnest, thinking men than Mr. Berkey. We believe he has been called of God to this peculiar work, and we know that God has placed his seal of approval upon his labors. He is not partisan or sectarian in spirit, but seems to be thoroughly consecrated to the great work of human redemption."

WILLIAM H. NEHLS, hardware merchant of Benton, Lafayette county, is one of the young business men of German descent who are playing an important part in the commercial circles of the county. He was born in Platteville June 25, 1867, a son of Henning and Bertha (Richter) Nehls, and grandson of Jacob and Anne Nehls, all natives of the Fatherland.

Jacob Nehls was born in Germany, and made that country his home throughout life. He was a sea captain and perished in a storm at sea when his son Henning was yet a child. His widow and her three children came to this country in 1852, and lived in New York City for some three years, and then located in Platteville, Wis., where the children grew to maturity. Her death occurred in 1894, at the home of her son Henning, with whom she had lived for twenty-six years. The three children were: Helen, who married Richard Boldt, and died, leaving a family of five children, Etta (wife of William Thomas, of Platteville), John, George, Louisa and Mattie; Frederick, who is engaged in fruit growing in Platteville, and Henning, mentioned below.

Henning Nehls was born in Hanover, Germany, Oct. 13, 1835. After the family had located in Platteville he engaged in smelting, and for thirteen years was in the employ of Leonard Cates. He also followed lead mining to some extent for a number of years, meeting with much success in whatever he undertook. After his marriage, in 1860, to Miss Bertha Richter, he located in Platteville, where he has since made his home, with the exception of three months passed in Louisville, Ky., whither they had gone for Mr. Nehls' health. To Mr. and Mrs. Nehls were born six children: Mattie, born in March, 1861, married the late Frederick Wirth, and has four children, Bertha, Lydia, Julia, and William; Lydia, born in 1865, married Charles Doran, of Galena, Ill., and has two sons, Edwin and Walter; William, born in 1867, now a hardware merchant of Benton, married Nettie Bonson, of Platteville, and has two daughters, Nettie and Helen; Edward, born in 1873, a highly respected young man, met an untimely death by being caught in an elevator in Dubuque, Iowa; Arthur, born in August, 1880, was educated in the Rock school, and is now engaged in the stationery business; Frank L., born in 1884, died in childhood. Both Mr. and Mrs. Nehls are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Nehls is a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which she joined twenty-four years ago, and for twelve years served as its president. In politics Mr. Nehls is a Republican, and takes an intelligent interest in public affairs, and is well posted on the topics of the day.

Mrs. Bertha (Richter) Nehls was born in Berlin, Prussia, April 18, 1843, daughter of Rev. Herman and Amelia Richter, of that city. She was brought by her parents to this country in 1844, and her first home was in New York City, whence the family removed to Bridgeport, Conn., where her father studied for the ministry. Rev. Richter later came to Michigan City, Ind., where he built the German Methodist Church, and for twenty-two years was a member of the Northwestern German Conference, and the Rock River Conference. He died in the triumph of faith at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John P. Sampson, in 1885, leaving seven children, Helen, a widow, now residing in Chicago, Ill.; Emma, Mrs. William Grover, of La Crosse, Wis.; Mrs. John P. Sampson, of Greeley, Neb.; Mattie, Mrs. C. H. Morse, of Greeley, Neb.; Lydia, Mrs. George Simpson, of Oklahoma; William, of Illinois; and Bertha, Mrs. Nehls, who was highly educated, and for some years a most successful teacher near Dubuque, Iowa.

William H. Nehls, son of Henning Nehls, received his education in the old Rock School at Platteville, and later became a student in the State Normal School of that place. In 1882 he became a journeyman with H. S. Bailey & Co., in the hardware and tinning business, and remained with them until 1886, when, in company with William Raisbeck, he started in the hardware business in the town of Benton, under the firm name of Raisbeck & Nehls. At the end of a year Mr. Nehls purchased his partner's interest, and has successfully continued the business alone up to the present time. He has since purchased the store building, and the dwelling in which he resides, and is rapidly progressing on the road to fortune.

In November, 1888, Mr. Nehls was wedded to Miss Nettie Bonson, daughter of John and Fannie Bonson, and of this union two daughters have been born: Nettie, in Benton, in 1890; and Helen, in May, 1895. The Republicans of the county know Mr. Nehls to be one of their unfaltering adherents, and he takes an active part in the political work in his town. He has held membership in the village board and the county board. Socially he is a member of the K. of P., Sylvan Lodge, No. 134, Modern Woodmen, and is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, being identified with Benton Lodge, No. 268. For five years, in addition to his own affairs, he has been inspector for the Standard Oil Company. In his religious faith he is a Methodist. Mr. Nehls and his charming wife are very popular in the social life of the town, and are highly respected by all who know them.

CHARLES D. STEVENS, proprietor of a leading grocery house of Janesville, Rock county, holds an enviable position in that city, both as a keen and pushing business man and a genial and popular gentleman. He is still a young man, and what he has already accomplished is suggestive of a yet more brilliant future.

Mr. Stevens was born in Evansville, Rock Co., Wis., March 28, 1857. His parents, Samuel and Fannie M. (Burt) Stevens, both native to the soil of Vermont, had fourteen children, several of whom are now living: Jack L., of Greenwood, Wis.; Kate, widow of John McMartin, of Helena, Mont.; Lorinda F., wife of E. S. Williams, of Janesville; Calista A., widow of H. Kelsey, of Janesville; John D., of Janesville; Perry M., of Greenwood; and Charles D. Samuel Stevens was devoted to the cultivation of the soil. He came to Wisconsin in 1848, and made a location near Evansville, where he lived ten years. In 1858 he retired from active labor, and made his home in Janesville until 1869; he died in 1871, in South Wayne, Wis., at the age of sixty-two. His wife died in 1881, aged sixty-five years. Both were members of the Congregational Church, and he was a lifelong Democrat. His father, James Stevens, died in Vermont, well advanced in years.

Charles D. Stevens was reared in Rock county, and until he was sixteen years old lived on the farm, located in what is now the northwestern part of the city; it was devoted to dairy interests. He attended the Janesville schools, receiving a very fair education, which has stood him well in hand throughout his career. When he was sixteen he left his boyhood home, and became a clerk in the drug store of S. Heimstreet & Son, remaining with them seven years, and was counted very efficient in every department of the business. Leaving Janesville he went to Aurora, Ill., where he spent a year as clerk in a drug store. He returned to Janesville to take a similar position with Croft & Whiton, which he held for two years, at the expiration of that time forming a partnership with W. G. Palmer, and buying out the business of A. J. Roberts. This firm existed twelve years, when it was ended by the sale of Mr. Palmer's entire interest to Mr. Stevens, who conducted it alone for three years. The business had assumed such extensive proportions by that time that Mr. Stevens had no trouble in forming a stock company to continue its management. He became president of the new corporation, and retired from active connection with what was known as the People's Drug Co.

Mr. Stevens is not of a disposition to remain idle or take life easily, and he purchased a half interest in the "Hotel Myers" in company with E. C. Johnson, the firm being known as Johnson & Stevens. "Hotel Myers" is the largest in the city, and under their management it has become one of the popular resorts of the traveling public. Commercial men largely make it a Sunday stopping-place. In May, 1899, Mr. Stevens formed a partnership with W. J. Bates, and purchased the grocery business of Ball & Bates, entering into business under the firm name of Stevens & Bates; this partnership was dissolved Sept. 20, 1900, Mr. Stevens now conducting the business alone and he commands the confidence of the public, and has secured a large and profitable patronage. In all these enterprises our subject has displayed the same admirable business qualities which command success anywhere, and throughout has shown himself an upright man and a genial gentleman.

C. D. Stevens

On Nov. 12, 1889, Mr. Stevens married Miss Clara Judd, who was born Oct. 1, 1858, in Janesville, daughter of Dr. S. S. and Juliette Judd; the former was a physician of Janesville, and a son of Samuel and Ann (Barnum) Judd, of Bethel, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have had two children, Edwin and Arthur B. Judd, the former of whom died in infancy. They are members of the Episcopal Church, in which Mr. Stevens is a vestryman. He is a Republican in political sentiment. Fraternal-ly he holds membership in the Knights of Pythias.

JAMES BARRON is an example of what may be accomplished by steady perseverance and honest industry, as he came to America a poor boy, among strangers, and now is the owner of one of the finest farms in Wisconsin, with much other property, and every man is his friend.

Mr. Barron was born in Cornwall, Eng., on Jan. 27, 1844, a son of John and Susannah (Ennor) Barron, who were born, reared and died in England. They reared a family of five children, of whom four left the old home in 1863 and came to America, landing in California, where our subject, with two brothers and one sister, located, and where the brothers worked in the mines for seven years prior to coming to Wisconsin. John and Thomas Barron both died in California, and Catherine, now Mrs. Tremaine, still resides in that State. Of the children of John and Susannah (Ennor) Barron, one daughter, Mrs. Nettle, remained in England.

In 1871 Mr. Barron, our subject, came to Grant county, where he purchased his present farm, which is located three miles west of Georgetown. In 1871 he was married to Miss Mary J. Kemp, of Grant county, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Chambers) Kemp, old pioneers of Grant county, coming here previous to the Black Hawk war. Joseph Kemp, the grandfather of Mrs. Barron, fought the Indians in this war. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kemp were natives of England, and their marriage occurred in Grant county, Wis., in 1847. They lived there until 1849, when Mr. Kemp crossed the Plains to California, and worked there in the mines some fifteen years. Removing his family to the West in 1851, he came back to Smelser township in 1867, and remained until the time of death, which occurred in 1877. His wife died in 1896, leaving three children: John W., born in 1849, died at McPherson, some years ago, his children now living in Iowa; Joseph J., born in 1859, married in Smiesler, and now lives on the old Kemp home in this township. Mrs. Barron was born in California in October, 1853, and was partly educated in that State, although she attended school after the return of the family to Wisconsin.

James Barron received a good education in the schools of his country, and after his marriage and return from the West settled on his present farm, in 1871, where he has made many improvements which have enhanced the value of the property, and made it one of the attractive places of the county. To his first purchase of eighty acres, he, with the noble assistance of his wife, has added, until now he is the owner of 250 acres of well cultivated land, and also a farm near Ipswich, Lafayette county, and still another farm in Smelser. A family of eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Barron, the survivors being: Sarah J., born in March, 1872, educated in the Platteville Normal school, for six years one of the successful and acceptable teachers in the public schools, in 1898 married Everett Louthain, of Grant county, and they reside on his farm; Mary K. born Dec. 1, 1876, educated in the Platteville Normal, a successful teacher for two years in the public schools, married James Shephard, of Smelser, and resides on a farm of our subject in Lafayette county (she has one daughter, Retta, born in August, 1900); Richard, born in September, 1878; Edith, born in October, 1880, is a student at the Normal; Bessie F., born July 23, 1887, and James E., born in June, 1893, are students at school.

This family has been brought up in the M. E. Church, to which Mr. Barron cheerfully contributes. Politically he has always been a Republican, and although he has a natural love for his own land, he is an American now and proud of her government and institutions. For some twelve years he has held the position of clerk of the school board, and at present is a member of the town board. In 1898 Mr. Barron made a visit to his old home to gratify a longing to recall old associations, but came back with no desire to remain. The success which has attended him on this side of the ocean, the home he has earned, and the friends he has made, all tend to make him more American than English.

BENJAMIN J. DAVIS. One of the few remaining pioneers of Iowa county, whose coming dates from the time when Wisconsin was a territory, is Benjamin J. Davis, of the village of Barneveld, who located here in October, 1846.

Benjamin J. Davis was born in Wales, a land which has contributed to America, not only many sweet singers, but also men of brain and brawn, who have become leaders in those lines which require industry, activity and patience, combined with high morality. The birth of Mr. Davis was in July, 1814, and in 1842 he landed in the city of New York. After a trip through Ohio, Mr. Davis made his way to Milwaukee and there engaged in his trade, that of blacksmith, but as a few Welsh families had already settled in Iowa county, Wis., he determined to join them and become the owner of some of the Government land which, about this time, was opened up for settlement. Leaving his family in Milwaukee, he started on foot for Iowa county, in order to make his selection and entry of land, and upon reaching there, located a quarter section on Section 4, Town 6, Range 5, East, and then continued his journey to the land office which was situated at Mineral Point, where he made his entry and then returned to his family in Milwaukee, as he had come, on foot. To Mineral Point and return by the route he pursued involved a travel of at least 250 miles, through almost a wilderness, as in the whole distance he found only an occasional settler's lonely cabin keeping guard in the great woods. That he was expeditious may be imagined, when it is recorded that the trip consumed but a week. When the food which he had taken with him gave out he would, as far as possible, appease his hunger with the small fruit he found on the way, although much of it was not very sustaining.

In October, 1846, Mr. Davis arrived with his family from Milwaukee, and settled on the land that he had entered. He set to work immediately to erect a small cabin as a shelter for the family, and also to build one in which to carry on his trade. As the first, and, for a long period, the only blacksmith in this locality, he found plenty of work, and very soon was recognized as a thorough workman, trade coming to "Blacksmith Davis" from long distances.

As time went on, Mr. Davis added to his land and became the owner of 500 acres, and cleared it as he could, still following his trade, while the country progressed and built up about him. At length advancing years admonished him that he had earned an easier life, but it was not until in March, 1883, when he was bereft of his faithful wife, that he consented to retire, and then removed to the village of Barneveld, a hamlet which had grown into being since his settlement in Wisconsin.

To Mr. and Mrs. Davis were born twelve children: ten noble sons and two beautiful daughters, all but one of whom survive to do honor to their venerable father and the name they bear. The father's namesake, Benjamin J., died at the age of twenty-seven years. The daughters are: Mary, born on Jan. 12, 1854, married O. C. Evans, and resides in the town of Brigham; and Nellie J., born March 15, 1875, married Leyellan Jones, of Chatsworth, Iowa. The family of sons which Mr. Davis has reared into honorable citizenship deserves more than passing notice. The nine survivors are stalwart men of fine presence, averaging 200 pounds in weight and standing six feet in height. A most effective photograph taken of this justly proud father, and equally proud family of sons, recalls the tales of Welsh folk-lore, when giants held the fastnesses of the mountain heights, and the world knew naught of their struggles in the clouds. It is an inspiring picture, telling of physical perfection, and mental endowment. In order of their birth, these sons are: John J., born Nov. 15, 1845; Daniel J., born Feb. 1, 1848; Thomas J., born Jan. 1, 1852; George W., born Dec. 24, 1856; William J., born May 25, 1858; Stephen J., born Dec. 11, 1860; Joseph J., born April 1, 1863; Albert J., born March 7, 1866; and Alfred J., born March 10, 1871. The city of Chicago is fortunately the home of all of these sons of Mr. Davis, with the exception of one, where they increase the city's prosperity by their business ability and progressive methods. Mr. George W. Davis formerly lived in Chicago, but now resides on a fine farm which he owns in Arena township, in Iowa county, Wis. Joseph J. Davis is a well-known physician of Chicago, a graduate of Rush Medical College, a man of skill and medical prominence; and Alfred J., is a lawyer who has been prominently identified with public affairs in Chicago, and in 1896, was the candidate of his party for Congress. These brothers, in union, comprise the Davis Cream Separator Company, with offices located at 88-90-92, West Jackson street, Chicago, Ill., the product of this company receiving medals at the World's Fair, in 1893. The father of this remarkable family, stills owns the homestead farm, in the town of Brigham. Few men are better known throughout Iowa and adjoining counties than Mr. Davis. By nature he possesses a social and genial disposition, and has always won friends in every community. Nature, also, gave him a fine constitution and an exemplary life has preserved it to a wonderful degree. His memory of the early days makes of him a delightful companion, as he can relate so many thrilling experiences of his own pioneer life. When Mr. Davis came to Iowa county, the Indians still roamed the country which they still claimed as their hunting grounds. With these natives he often came into contact, and this gave him an admirable chance to learn the Indian character. Mr. Davis places a high estimate on the honor of the Red man as he knew him more than a half century ago. The Indian was almost sure to return any kindness, and as an instance, he relates that upon one occasion, having divided his scanty supply of bread with an Indian who had asked for food, he found, on rising the next morning, a quarter of venison hanging at his door. Many times Mr. Davis has been heard to remark that he would much rather meet an Indian when alone than a white man whom he did not know. All his life Mr. Davis has enjoyed most robust health, and his children inherit his excellent constitution. The skill of a physician has seldom been needed in his household. His prominence as an intelligent man and old settler as well as his substantial condition, long gave him somewhat of a leadership in township affairs, and he was called upon to serve in many local offices and for many years was a justice of the peace.

REV. ARTHUR C. KEMPTON, who died Dec. 4, 1900, was the capable and eloquent pastor of the First Baptist Church of Janesville, and achieved a reputation that reaches far beyond the limits of Wisconsin for piety and devotion to his sacred calling. He was born in Nova Scotia, May 6, 1870, a son of the Rev. Joseph F. Kempton, a well known Baptist minister. He was graduated from Acadia College with honors in 1890, and from Rochester Theological Seminary four years later. Because of special work he also won the degree of M. A. in 1893.

Mr. Kempton's first pastorate was with the First Baptist Church of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, where in three years he made the remarkable record of nearly three hundred additions to the membership of the church, building a new house of worship, and making this the largest Baptist Church in Wisconsin. During this period he also served two years as president of the Baptist Young People's Union, of Wisconsin.

In 1897 Mr. Kempton made an extended tour of Egypt, Palestine, Turkey and Europe, after which he was called to the First Baptist Church of Janesville. The success attending his work here equaled that which crowned his labors at Eau Claire. In October, 1899, he was unanimously elected president of the twenty-five thousand Christian Endeavorers of Wisconsin, and with the hearts of the young people of the State beating responsively to his appeals he hoped great things for the church in the immediate future. His death cut short a most useful career, and caused universal sorrow wherever he was known, but while

"He died young, there are silvered heads, Whose race of duty is less nobly won."

JONATHAN SMITH, one of the older and more prominent representatives of the farming interests of the town of Brooklyn, Green county, is a man whose high character and conceded integrity add to the reverence his eighty years command. He owns a farm situated in Section 11, of the town of Brooklyn, where he has long identified himself with the best interests of the community. He was born at Dover, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, March 7, 1820, and is a son of Stephen and Filura (Love) Smith, the former born in Massachusetts, and the latter in New York. They were the parents of four sons and five daughters, four of whom are now living: Jonathan; Emorilla, the wife of C. S. Gray, of Brooklyn; Euphrasia, wife of Hans Christianson, of the town of Brooklyn; and Emory, of Brooklyn. Stephen Smith was a farmer, and came West to Wisconsin in 1843, and in July of that year bought a farm of eighty acres in Walworth county, five miles north of Lake Geneva, which he very soon sold, and the following year came to Green county, and in May located on the farm in the town of Brooklyn, on which his son Jonathan may now be found. There he lived with this son until his death, in 1852, at the age of fifty-eight. His widow died in 1877, when seventy-five years old. They were both members of the Congregational Church.

Jonathan Smith, the father of Stephen Smith, and the grandfather of Jonathan Smith, whose name appears above, was a native of Massachusetts and one of the early settlers of Ohio. For six years he was in the Revolutionary war. He was a farmer, and was seventy years old at the time of his death, in Cuyahoga county, Ohio. He was the father of three sons and four daughters. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Smith was a native of one of the eastern States and he was married in New York. There was only one child born to his marriage, she who afterward became the mother of Jonathan Smith.

Jonathan Smith lived in Ohio until he reached the age of twenty-three years, where he was bred a farmer, which has been his occupation through life. He learned the plastering trade, and followed it for thirty years, although at the same time he was engaged in farming. When his father came to Wisconsin he accompanied him, making the journey from Ohio by team, and he remained with his parents as long as they lived. Since their death he has continued on the home they made.

Jonathan Smith was married Jan. 28, 1877, to Mary A. Thompson, who was a daughter of Otis and Polly (Hunt) Thompson. They have one son, Forest A., who is now twenty-one years of age, to whom the active management of the farm is committed. It contains eighty acres, and is cultivated according to the latest and most progressive agricultural methods. Mr. Smith was formerly a Whig, but he became a Republican at the organization of that party. He has never held an office, and has never had the least desire for one, as his own business was all he felt he could adequately manage.

Otis Thompson was a native of Vermont, and his wife Polly (Hunt) of New Hampshire. They were the parents of six sons and two daughters, and three of their children are now living: Rufus, of Belgrade, Mont.; Mary A. is the wife of Mr. Smith; David S. Thompson, of the town of Brooklyn. Mr. Thompson was a farmer, and brought his family West to Wisconsin in 1848, locating them on an eighty-acre farm in the town of Brooklyn, Green county. Mr. Thompson was a soldier in the Civil war, and belonged to the 8th Wis. V. I., in which he enlisted in 1861. He participated in the battles of Frederickstown, New Madrid, Island No. 10, Farmington, Iuka and Corinth, Jackson and Vicksburg, and it is recorded of him that he was always a brave soldier, and would be found in the very forefront of danger. He was a member of T. L. Sutphen Post, G. A. R., at Evansville. Mr. Thompson was born July 28, 1807, at Richmond, Vt., and was married June 17, 1829. In 1836 he removed with his family to Portage, N. Y., where he lived twelve years. He died in September, 1899, at the age of ninety-two years and two months. His wife died in 1888, at the age of seventy-five years. Timothy Thompson, his father, was a native of Vermont, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a carpenter in his younger days, and reared a family of eight children. In the early forties he came from Pennsylvania into Wisconsin, where he lived a number of years, and died at his home in Oregon, Dane county, aged about seventy-eight years. Mrs. Smith's maternal grandfather was James Hunt, who was born in New Hampshire. He was a farmer and had a large family. He reached the age of eighty-eight years, and died in his native State.

Mrs. Jonathan Smith, born in Erie county, Penn., Dec. 14, 1834, married for her first husband Amos C. Anderson, an early settler in the town of Brooklyn. They had one daughter, Sarah E., who married Judson E. James, and is the mother of four children: Floyd C., Layle A., Paul, and Jessie M. Mr. Anderson died in 1866, while engaged in prospecting in California. He and his wife crossed the Plains in 1860, requiring about four and a half months to make the journey.

JESSE RAYMER, a retired farmer of Browntown, Green county, whose death on July 1, 1897, removed one of the most public spirited and respected citizens, was born in Greene county, Penn., Dec. 5, 1843.

His parents, Jesse Sr., and Mariah (Kelly) Raymer, were of German descent, and brought their family from Pennsylvania to Wisconsin about 1843. They made their home in Cadiz township, and there reared their family of seven children: William, deceased; John, a retired farmer of Monroe; Jesse; Freeman, of Monroe; Jane, wife of Luke Bradley, of Adams Co., Wis.; Harriet and Mary, deceased. The mother is yet living and makes her home in Cadiz township.

Jesse Raymer received such education as the common schools of the neighborhood afforded, and continued to work at farm work, to which he had been trained from childhood, until 1893, when he removed to Browntown, and there erected for himself a modern eight-room dwelling, in which he passed his last days. He began life as a very poor boy, but his untiring industry and natural business ability won for him a place among the substantial men of the county. At his death he possessed a comfortable home, and about one thousand dollars in personal property. During the Civil war he enlisted in Co. B, 31st Wis. V. I., under Capt. Nat Treat, of Monroe, and took part in some of the hard fought battles of that terrible struggle. He received an honorable discharge in 1865, and while never wounded, his health was so shattered by his hard service that he was granted a pension, which his widow continues to receive. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religious connection a Methodist. The building of the new Methodist Church at Browntown aroused in him the deepest interest, and it was while working there that he was taken ill. He was a splendid citizen and a good, kind neighbor, and his genial smile will be missed for many years by those who, by knowing him best, learned to love him.

In Cadiz township, Green county, on March 18, 1866, Mr. Raymer was married to Miss Amelia Loomis, who was born Nov. 16, 1851, daughter of Cornelius and Jane (Van Harne) Loomis, the former of whom came to Wisconsin from Ohio about 1843, and took up government land in Cadiz. To Mr. and Mrs. Loomis were born nine children, of whom five lived to reach maturity: Mary, now deceased; Fidelia, wife of Isaac Michaels, a farmer of Cadiz; Amelia, Mrs. Raymer; Hattie, wife of Charles Phillips, of Browntown; and Cyrus, who married Eliza Michaels, of Cadiz. William Loomis, father of Cornelius, and grandfather of Mrs. Raymer, was an early settler of Ohio. To Jesse Raymer and wife were born nine children, as follows: Alfred, of Picket Station, Wis., married Mary Denny, of Cadiz township; Ephraim married Ida Divan of Browntown; Hattie is the wife of James Land, of Browntown; George, of Winslow, Ill., married Lois Beldon, of Minnesota; Ansel married a Miss Forsythe, of Lafayette county, Wis.; Oney resides at home with his mother, as do Belle and Roy. The ninth child, Cyrus H. died in infancy.

Mrs. Raymer is a noble Christian woman, and takes great interest in the work of the Methodist Church and its Sunday school, serving as teacher and class leader.

MARSHALL PEASE RICHARDSON is one of the young and successful professional men of Janesville, and is himself one of the products of that beautiful and growing city of the Northwest.

Mr. Richardson was born in Janesville. After passing through the common schools, he entered Beloit College, later becoming a student in the State University at Madison, from which he was graduated in 1889. His mind was of that perceptive and analytic cast which naturally inclined him to the study of law, and in 1893 he was admitted to the Bar. He has risen steadily in his profession, and has identified himself with the best interests of his native city; has served three terms as justice of the peace; and in the spring of 1900 was the Republican nominee for the office of city attorney. Socially he is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a member of the Christian Science Church known as "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts."

ROLLA M. STRONG is a product of Grant county, and was born in the town of Platteville, Jan. 14, 1848. Thomas and Martha M. (Bond) Strong, his parents, were both born in North Carolina, and in that State were reared and married. Thomas Strong was the son of Thomas Strong, Sr., who died in Platteville, in the home of his son. Thomas Strong, Sr., was a soldier in the war of 1812, and the ancestry of the family antedates the American Revolution in New England.

After their marriage our subject's parents spent some three years in Tennessee, and in 1838 came to Platteville, Wis., where Mr. Strong followed mining very successfully throughout life. He purchased a farm of 160 acres near Platteville, and lived thereon until 1850, when he disposed of it and moved into Platteville, making his home there during the brief remainder of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Strong both died previous to the breaking out of the Civil war.

The Strong's were Whigs in political sentiment. Our subject's father was a supporter of the Methodist Church, of which the mother was a member. They reared a family of eight children: (1) Henry was born in Tennessee, and came with his parents to Wisconsin. During the gold excitement he and his brother John, each with a wagon and four yoke of oxen, crossed the Plains to that distant land of gold, and were quite successful in their mining ventures, Henry spending some years in the mines in Colorado and Nevada before returning to Platteville, where he died in June, 1898. (2) John made his homeward journey from the far West successfully, and is now living in Platteville, where he is married and has a family. (3) Martha, born in Platteville, is the widow of Christopher Williams, and lives in Vernon county, Wis., where she has reared a large family. (4) Mary, born in Grant county, is the widow of George Fry, of Highland, Wis., where she is living with her family. (5) Jane, born in Platteville, is the widow of Wesley Williams, and lives in Indiana. (6) Thomas, born in Platteville, married Miss Lucy Shafer, of Grant county, and they are now residents of Iowa. They have one daughter, Nellie. (7) Samuel, born in Platteville, is now a resident of the State of Washington, and is engaged in mining in British Columbia. (8) Rolla M., the youngest member of the family, is the subject of this article.

Rolla M. Strong was born in Grant county, and educated in the common schools of the State, attending for the most part what was known as the old Rock school of Platteville, where he was very well fitted for an active life. When a young man he followed mining in the lead regions of Grant county, and when the Civil war broke out was ready to go to the front. He enlisted in Company B, 43d Wis. V. I., and faithfully did his duty as a soldier until the close of the war. The regiment was a part of the Army of the Tennessee, and Mr. Strong witnessed some of the most tremendous struggles of the great war. At Nashville, Tenn., he was honorably discharged from the service, and, making his way back to his old home in Wisconsin, he resumed work as a lead miner, which has been his occupation more or less to the present time.

Mr. Strong and Miss Martha Himan were married in 1875. Mrs. Strong is a daughter of Perry and Jane Himan, old pioneers in Grant county, and was born in the town of Harrison, May 11, 1851. Mr. Strong and his wife lived some years on a rented farm in the town of Harrison, when he purchased his present farm in the town of Paris. That was some fifteen years ago, and under his energetic management the farm has been greatly improved, and is to-day one of the most attractive places in this portion of the county. They have four children: (1) Alta, born in 1876, was educated at the State Normal School at Platteville, and for several years was a teacher in Grant and Vernon counties. She married James Conley, a printer of Oconomowoc, Wis. (2) Harry, born in 1878, is unmarried and at home; he is a worker in the lead mines. (3) Lennice, born in 1881, is now a student at the Normal in Platteville. (4) Roy, born in 1884, is at home, and under his father's supervision is managing the home farm.

Rolla M. Strong is a steadfast Republican, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Before he was eighteen years of age he donned the Union blue, and all through his life has given evidence of patriotism adequate to any demand that might be made upon it. Mr. and Mrs. Strong both belong to the Congregational Church of Mt. Zion, where he has always taken an active part in church work, and is a liberal supporter of his denomination. Mr. Strong is a member of Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., at Platteville.

Mr. Strong comes from one of the good old Southern families whose ancestry dates back to a period long antedating the Revolution, and he is worthy of the name he bears.

W. R. SNOWDEN. Prominent among the business men of Platteville, Grant county, is numbered the subject of this review. No one in the vicinity is better known, for here almost his entire life has been passed, and all his interests from boyhood have been closely associated with those of the locality. In his special line of business he has met with excellent success, and by the energy and zeal which he has manifested has won the confidence and esteem of the public.

Mr. Snowden was born in New York City in 1845, and is of English descent. His father, Randolph Snowden, was born in England

Jan. 5, 1820, and in 1828 came to the United States with his parents, Randolph and Emaline Snowden, locating in New York City, where the grandfather followed the machinist's trade, though in England he had engaged in weaving. Both he and his wife died in New York. In their family were five children, namely: Randolph, Jr.; Edward, who died in New York; George, a resident of Jersey City; John W., who died in that city; and Emaline, who died in New York.

Randolph Snowden, Jr., was reared in New York City from the age of eight years, and in Paterson, N. J., he learned the machinist's trade. On coming to Platteville, Wis., in 1849, he built a foundry, the first west of Chicago, which he and his brother George owned and operated together for some time, but later the latter sold his interest to Randolph and went to California, remaining there two years. He then returned to Platteville, where he followed farming for some time, but is now a resident of Jersey City, N. J. Randolph Snowden continued in active business in Platteville for many years, and was one of the leading men of the place. In New York he married Miss Elizabeth J. Price, a native of that city, and to them were born three sons and one daughter, namely: W. R.; Edward H., who went West; Robert L., a resident of Milwaukee; and Mary E., Mrs. Pollock, of San Francisco, Cal. The father died in Platteville Jan. 13, 1883, the mother Feb. 5, 1877.

At the age of four years W. R. Snowden was brought by his parents to Platteville, and in its public schools he obtained his education. After reaching manhood he engaged in general farming and stock raising for ten years, and since that time has devoted his attention to fruit farming and dairying, in which business he has met with marked success, being energetic, progressive and enterprising. He owns a fine fruit farm adjoining Platteville. Mr. Snowden was interested in the building of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago & Northwestern railroads into Platteville, and has been actively identified with all enterprises which have for their object the upbuilding and development of his adopted town and county. He is superintendent of the Platteville Canning Co., whose plant was built in 1893.

At Platteville, in 1870, Mr. Snowden wedded Miss Mary E. Bondurant, a native of Hazel Green, Grant county, and a daughter of Edward and Henrietta Bondurant, natives of Kentucky. On coming to Grant county, in 1833, her father was unmarried, and here he was married in 1842. His wife died in 1895, but he is still living, and now makes his home in Platteville. By occupation he was a miner and farmer. His children were Mary E., Mrs. Snowden; Julia, Mrs. Shrigley, of Platteville; Jefferson, also of that place; and Sarah, Mrs. Berry, who died Oct. 1, 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Snowden have six children: George B., proprietor of the Platteville Laundry; Anna L., at home; Frederick, who is a partner of his brother in the laundry business; and Nellie E., William J. and Bessie, all at home.

During the Civil war Mr. Snowden enlisted at Platteville in Company K, 47th Wis. V. I., for one year, and was mustered into the United States service at Madison, the regiment being attached to the Army of the Tennessee. He did garrison duty at Tullahoma and Nashville, and received an honorable discharge at Madison in September, 1865. He is now a prominent member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R., in which he is now filling the office of senior vice-commander, and also belongs to Melody Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M.; Washington Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M.; and Miriam Chapter, No. 15, O. E. S. Religiously both he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and politically he is identified with the Republican party. His genial, pleasant manner has made him quite popular in business and social circles, and as a public-spirited, enterprising man he is recognized as a valuable citizen of the community.

WILLIAM SMILEY. Perhaps in these days of rapid progress, we find too little time to remember those who bravely endured hardship and privation, in the great States of the Northwest, in order to extend the domain of civilization, and to secure for their descendants the comforts and resources which it brings. A true history of pioneer days would be as full of adventure as the most thrilling romance produced by one who draws from an unbridled imagination.

A worthy son of one of the early pioneers of Green county, Wis., who has passed his life here, and with wonder has seen its mighty development, is William Smiley, the subject of this sketch, who is one of the most substantial and influential citizens of Albany township. He was born on his present farm, on Sept. 6, 1854, a son of Daniel and Eleanor (Bemus) Smiley, both of whom were natives of New York. A family of six children were born to them: Lorinda, who married John Hulburt; Sarah, who is the widow of William Gould, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Charles B.; Julia, who married Dr. Broughton, of Dwight, Ill.; Florence E., who married Lorraine Hulburt, of Albany; and William, our subject.

The paternal grandfather was Joseph Smiley, a native of New York, of Scotch-Irish descent, who was a farmer by occupation; was a minute man in the war of 1812; was present at the burning of Buffalo; and died at an advanced age. The maternal grandfather of our subject was Charles Bemus, who was a farmer and drover in New York; was a lieutenant of minute men, in the war of 1812; reared a large family and died when full of years.

Daniel Smiley, the father of our subject, engaged in milling before he removed to Wisconsin, in the early days of the State, settling near what is now the city of Janesville for a few years, then moving into Exeter township, where he engaged in mining and boarding for about three years, then came to Albany, Green county, where he bought 280 acres of land, living upon that property until his death, when about seventy-four years old. His wife survived for some years, dying at the age of eighty-four. Both of them had been consistent members of the Baptist Church, and Mr. Smiley had been a member of the Wisconsin legislature.

William Smiley has had the advantage of residing in his boyhood home all his life, his youthful associations clustering around this place. His landed possessions are large, consisting of the home farm, containing 340 acres (this being generally conceded to be one of the very finest in this part of the State), also an interest in eighty acres on Section 28, a one-third interest in a section in Lamoure county, N. Dak., near the town of Edgely, and a half section in Lyon county, Minnesota.

Mr. Smiley was married on Oct. 8, 1876, to Miss Ida May Flint, a daughter of Capt. Thomas and Mary (Simmons) Flint, and eight children have resulted from this union: Arnold B., who married Miss Daisy Cartelyou, and resides in Lyon county, Minn.; Sarah Edna; James Bemus; Lorraine; Robert F.; Harry L.; Florence Ida; and Mary. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smiley are valued members of the Baptist Church in Albany, in which Mr. Smiley is a deacon, and to which he gladly and cheerfully gives a generous support. In politics he belongs to the Prohibition party, and is socially connected with the Modern Woodmen of America. In public affairs in county and township, our subject has taken an active interest, acting as supervisor for several terms, also as town assessor, and has given his services as school director for many years. Mr. Smiley has taken the intelligent position that life on a farm may be just as pleasant and comfortable as in any other place, if properly provided for, and has made improvements which render his home a model. Possessing the esteem of neighbors and associates in a business way, looking back upon a well-spent life, he can estimate the value of a quiet, temperate existence as an agriculturist of Green county.

DR. GEORGE H. WEBSTER has attained a wide reputation as a clairvoyant physician and healer in the city of Janesville, Rock county. He has his office at the corner of North Jackson and West Milwaukee streets, and is now, at the very prime of his manly powers, commanding a good practice, and accomplishing many strange and remarkable cures.

Dr. Webster was born at Spring Lake, Mich., Feb. 28, 1860. His parents, John and Mary (Pedley) Webster, were born in Haddenham, Cambridgeshire, England, and had a family of six sons and one daughter, three now living. Alice is the wife of C. H. Pierce, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Tom and George H. have their home in Janesville. John Webster, who was a farmer in England, emigrated to this country in 1849, finding a home in Spring Lake, Mich., where he engaged in the lumber business. He was expert with machinery, fond of the railroad, and after he had been selling lumber for some fifteen years secured a place as engineer on the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroad, which he held for many years. He was a man of good character, and a devout Christian, was always in his place at church, and loved the sanctuary. He was a deacon in the Baptist

G. H. Webster M.D.

Church, of which he and his wife were members. He died at Spring Lake Jan. 17, 1895, at the age of sixty-nine years, eight months and fourteen days. His wife died August 2, 1890, aged sixty-four years, three months and twenty-six days. His father lived and died in England, reaching a ripe old age, and had a large family. His wife's father was also English born and bred, reached a great age, and was the father of some sixteen or seventeen children.

Dr. Webster spent the first ten years of his life at Spring Lake, Mich., where he made a fair start in the local school. Then he left home and came to Oregon, Wis., to live. He made the most of the advantages afforded by the Oregon schools, and then attended the Northwestern Business College, at Madison. When he had completed his schooling he made his way to Chetek, Barron Co., Wis., where he took up a homestead claim of sixty-two acres of exceptionally valuable land, making his home there for ten years, and finally disposing of his real estate. He returned to Oregon to become a clairvoyant physician, having developed strange powers in that direction, and a multitude of people have implicit faith in his abilities. He had an office in Madison for a year, and then moved to Albany, this State, where he spent six years. There he was married, Nov. 23, 1892, to Miss Mary Alverson, who was born June 21, 1876, and is a daughter of Thomas and Susan (Carle) Alverson. Dr. Webster is a Mason, and belongs to Albany Lodge, No. 36, A. F. & A. M. He is also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, with which his wife is associated. He has united with the fraternal insurance orders of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights of the Maccabees. The Webster family has a record of unusual vitality, and many of its representatives have attained great age. A great-uncle of the Doctor, Tom Webster, lived to be one hundred and six years old, and was able to read without glasses at that age.

DANIEL STANTON is a well-known stock and dairy farmer of the town of Harrison, Grant county, and is far along the highway of success. He is an earnest and ambitious man, and is willing to be industrious and prudent, that he may win an honorable position in the world, and gain a competence that will make life easy in the years when work shall be forbidden him.

Mr. Stanton was born in the town of Harrison, Grant county, May 24, 1857, a son of S. W. and Catherine (McKemmy) Stanton, the former born in New York in 1820, and the latter in Scotland. The parents came to Wisconsin, when they were young people, and here they were married and settled on the farm where their son Daniel now resides, and made it their home until 1892, when Mrs. Catherine Stanton died. After her death the bereaved husband moved into Platteville where he is still living. Five children were born to them. Janette, the eldest, was born in 1855, in Grant county, was educated in the Platteville schools, and became a successful teacher, but is now married and lives in Wood county, Wis., the mother of six children; Daniel; Martha, born in 1861, is now the wife of Peter Hatfield, of Platteville; Phineas, born in 1863, now a farmer of Harrison, married Miss Adda Willis, and has one daughter, Dora; Grace, born in 1872, attended the Platteville Normal, and was a teacher for several years, and married Frank Yerke, a dentist in Iowa.

Daniel Stanton spent his boyhood and youth on the parental farm, and received his education from the district school. He has always followed farming, and regards it as the noblest occupation a man can follow. In May, 1879, Mr. Stanton wedded Miss Edith Withrow, the estimable daughter of William and Martha Withrow, an old pioneer family of Grant county. Her father was a native of Pennsylvania and her mother, Martha (Cooper), of Delaware. They came West at a very early day, and were married in 1840 at Potosi, Grant county, where they lived some years. Later in life they settled in the town of Paris, where he died in 1879, and she in 1885. They had eight children, of whom Mrs. Edith Stanton, the youngest, was born in December, 1859, and attained womanhood on the farm in the town of Paris. Mr. Stanton bought 120 acres adjoining his father's farm after his marriage, put up a comfortable home, and lived there until 1892, when he purchased the old homestead of 230 acres. He has recently erected a fine house, ample and commodious, with all the modern improvements, finished throughout with hard wood, and every convenience a modern farm house can demand. It is one of the most valuable and handsome residences in the entire town. Mr. and Mrs. Stanton are the parents of six children: Ernest, born in February, 1880; Eldridge, in February, 1882; Warner, in December, 1884; Norman, in August, 1886; and Virgil, in February, 1895. Nellie, their only daughter, was born in May, 1888; when she was eight years old she was accidentally shot through the spine by a neighbor boy, and for over three years she has been a great sufferer, having no use of her lower limbs, but is a bright and lovely young girl, and her misfortune is a constant grief to her friends and loving parents. The family are associated with the Congregational Church, and Mrs. Stanton and her children are members of that fold. The Stantons, both father and son, are Republicans. They are prominent people and all their representatives are highly respected by all who know them.

William and Martha Withrow had eight children: (1) John was born in Potosi, Wis., in 1841. He was a soldier in the Union army, enlisting in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I., and served throughout the Civil war. He married Miss Margaret Wilson, and settled on the old homestead in the town of Paris, where he died Jan. 6, 1890, leaving a wife and seven children. (2) Jane, deceased. (3) Rebecca, deceased wife of Payton Vaughn, of Lemars, Iowa. (4) George, now a miner of the Klondike, while his wife and four children live in Chicago. (5) James, a conductor on the street cars in Omaha. (6) Wesley, married and is a farmer at Waukon, Iowa. (7) Lavinia, now the wife of Silas Vanetta, of Harrison. (8) Edith, the wife of Daniel Stanton. Mr. Withrow and his wife were among the old pioneers, and were religious people, both being members of the Congregational Church.

JOHN S. BELL, the popular and efficient postmaster at Brooklyn, Green county, was born near Stanhope, N. J., Feb. 9, 1842, son of Almon and Mary (Shampnor) Bell, both natives of New Jersey, and the parents of eight sons and four daughters. Ten of these are now living: John S.; Winfield Scott, of Hand county, S. Dak.; Anson, deceased; Theodore F., of Buffalo, Mo.; Aaron, of Madison, Wis.; William H., of Elgin, Ill.; Mary Adeline, the deceased wife of Alonzo Devine, who is also dead; Laura E., wife of John Parish, of Stoughton, Wis.; Almon H., of Verona, Wis.; Orson H., of Chetk, Wis.; Eva L., wife of Charles Devine, of Oregon township; and Hattie, wife of William Hautby, now residing on the homestead.

Almon Bell was a farmer, and settled in Dane county, Wis., as early as 1848. In 1852 he made the journey overland to the California gold mines, driving through with oxen and cows. On the way the hoofs of the oxen were burned off in the sands of the desert—so they yoked up the cows and completed the journey. Mr. Bell worked in the mines for three years, six months of the time in the Frazier river up to his arm pits in water. In 1855 he returned to his Wisconsin home, to remain until his death, which occurred April 28, 1900, at the age of eighty-two. His widow is still living, and is over seventy-nine years of age. Both were Baptists in religion, and in politics he was a Republican until the organization of the Greenback party. He ran for the State Legislature on that ticket, having previously filled various town offices such as supervisor, treasurer, and assessor.

Joseph Bell, the father of Almon and the grandfather of John S., was a native of New Jersey, of Scotch-Irish descent, and proved himself of the most devoted patriotism in the Continental army. He crossed the Delaware river on the ice bare-footed, leaving the blood of his feet on the ice as he walked. He was a farmer by occupation, and lived to be ninety-eight years old, but was blind for some years before his death. He was the father of a numerous family.

The maternal grandfather of Mr. Bell was Thomas Shampnor, who was born in New Jersey, of Dutch descent, and followed shoemaking all his life. In 1850 he came to Dane county, Wis., and here died in 1868, the father of eight children.

John S. Bell was six years old when his parents removed from their eastern home and settled in Wisconsin, and he was reared to manhood on the Dane county farm. He was attending the district school at the time the Civil war broke out, and at once enlisted in the Randall Guards, Company H, 2nd Wis. V. I., but was rejected on account of his size. At Janesville he enlisted again in Company D, of the same regiment, and was accepted. His long and honorable career in the army was abundant justification for his acceptance the second time. He enlisted a private, and was mustered out as a captain by brevet. He had charge of his company from May 5, 1864, until it was disbanded. Captain Bell was in the army exactly four years, two months and nine days. Enlisting May 19, he was sworn June 16, 1861, and was mustered out at Jeffersonville, Ind., July 25, 1865. The first battle in which he participated was at Bull Run, where he was shot in the head, and left on the field, as it was supposed, all but dead. He rallied, and was taken prisoner by the rebels, being kept at Manassas Junction twelve days without so much as having his wound washed with cold water. Taken to Libby prison he was transferred to the hospital, where his skull was trepanned with silver, and on his recovering he was sent to Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he was kept four months. Salisbury, N. C., was his next place of detention, and there he was paroled, and came home by way of New York City. After being home a few days he was sent with fractions of companies to Benton Barracks, St. Louis. When the Indian troubles broke out in Minnesota he was sent to Byfield, near Ashland, to protect the settlers. In the spring these soldiers were exchanged, and ordered to report to their respective regiments. They had made their way as far as Philadelphia, when they were held there to protect the city against the advancing rebels under Lee. While there the battle of Gettysburg was fought, and then the troops who had been halted at Philadelphia found their regiments. The Second Wisconsin was actively engaged in the service, and Mr. Bell participated in every battle in which it was engaged during its organization, except those that occurred while he was in the southern prison pens and on the northwestern frontier. Finally the regiment, greatly reduced, was united with the 6th Wisconsin. Mr. Bell was all through the battles of the Wilderness, and at the second battle of Hatcher's Run he was again wounded in the head, and was in the field hospital for a short time. During the final movements of the war that forced the surrender of Gen. Lee, Mr. Bell's regiment was continually on the march, not stopping more than two hours at a time. After the surrender, April 9, he with others, divided their rations with the hungry rebels.

When peace smiled over the land again Mr. Bell worked on his farm for a year, and then sold it, and rented another for a year. For a few months he was in a flouring mill at Stebbinsville, and for about a half year he was at Dunkirk Mills. After this he began farming in the town of Rutland, which was his occupation until 1881, when he opened a depot of agricultural implements at Brooklyn, and for twelve years met with marked success; during three of these years he also managed a hotel. In 1882 Mr. Bell bought and platted land, and sold it in lots, since which time the village has grown continuously. There have been several very destructive fires in the village, in which Mr. Bell has suffered a considerable loss. Since June 15, 1897, Mr. Bell has officiated as postmaster at Brooklyn, and at the same time has been engaged in farming.

On Nov. 4, 1873, Mr. Bell was married to Miss Elenora Colburn, daughter of Hobart and Catherine (Prouty) Colburn. They became parents of five children: Bertha N., Hugh R., Harvey H., Leslie H., and Legrand L. Bertha married Frank Winkler, and has one child, and is living near Sac City, Iowa. Mr. Bell belongs to Brooklyn Lodge, No. 251, F. & A. M., of which he is a charter member, and he also sustains the same relation in the local lodge of the I. O. O. F., and the Modern Woodmen of America, and the T. L. Sutphen Post, No. 41, G. A. R., of Evansville. In politics he is a Republican, and was treasurer of the town of Rutland several years. Mr. Bell was the first Master of the Masonic Lodge at Brooklyn, being master for five years continuously. Mr. Bell was made a Mason in 1871, at Cookville, Wis., in Waucoma Lodge, No. 90.

JOHN A. JOHNSON, hardware merchant of Hollandale, Iowa county, and the present clerk of Moscow township, which office he has held continuously since 1893, has, in his long service in that incumbency, come prominently and favorably before his fellow townsmen, among whom he has grown in regard as the years have passed, both on account of his ability and of his integrity.

Mr. Johnson was born Dec. 5, 1856, in Moscow township, son of John and Johanna Anderson, natives of Norway, who were reared and married in their native country. Coming to America, they settled on a farm of 160 acres in Moscow township, Iowa Co., Wis., in which locality they were among the early settlers. Mr. Anderson had come to America in the hope of bettering his financial condition and making a comfortable home for his family, and he began bravely, but he did not survive many years after his emigration, his death occurring May 15, 1856, several months before our subject was born. The family consisted of four children, two sons and two daughters. The mother still survives, and resides on the old homestead.

John A. Johnson, whose name introduces these lines, has passed his entire life in the town of Moscow. He attended the district schools in the locality of the home place during his boyhood, acquiring a practical foundation for the commercial training which he received later. It was his ambition to enter mercantile life, and in order to prepare himself for the proper conduct of such affairs as should confront him in that line, he studied at the Mt. Morris (Ill.) Business College for a time, and later at the Northwestern Business College, at Madison, Wis. His studious habits and quick comprehension attracted the favorable notice of his instructors, and when he left the last-named institution he received a very high testimonial, in the form of a recommendation, from Prof. R. G. Deming, of that college. Not long afterward, desiring to see something of the world, he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he was engaged as clerk in a store for a time, and thence went to Minneapolis, Minn., where he was similarly engaged by another business house. In 1888, after about one year's stay in Minneapolis, he returned to Wisconsin, and for two and a half years carried on a hardware business in Blanchardville, Lafayette county, on his own account. He has since been engaged in that line in Hollandale, Iowa county, with constantly increasing success, and he has won a high standing among the substantial merchants of that place. Fair dealing and good values have been the special characteristics of his establishment, which now does a thriving trade.

Mr. Johnson's fellow citizens, believing that his business ability would be as valuable in the public service as in the management of his private interests, and knowing well his upright character, elected him in 1893 to the office of clerk of the town, and he has served in that office ever since, a record probably unparalleled in the records of Iowa county. His last nomination—the ninth—was by acclamation, the highest recommendation of his faithful discharge of the duties of his office which a public official of any kind could ask. Mr. Johnson's enterprise and spirit of progress are in keeping with his energetic disposition, and he has done his full share in advancing every project looking toward improvement in his locality. He is a Republican in political sentiment.

On Aug. 30, 1889, Mr. Johnson married Miss Gusta Winden, and three children have blessed their union, Blanche J., Ulysses A. and Herlaug G. Mrs. Johnson is well educated, having graduated from the high school at Monroe, Wis. Her father, Andrew G. Winden, a native of Norway, is now a resident of Monroe, Green Co., Wis. His family consisted of four children, two sons and two daughters, of whom Julius Winden, a graduate from three different institutions, Monroe high school in 1893, Milwaukee Normal School in 1898, and the University of Wisconsin in 1900, is at present principal of the high school at Montello, Wisconsin.

ALBURTUS C. BEAN, one of the representative citizens of Wyalusing township, Grant county, enlisted on Sept. 9, 1864, in Company I, 3d Wis. V. I., being credited to Watterstown township. He joined his regiment at Atlanta, Ga., and went with Gen. Sherman's army on the famous March to the Sea, and thence to Washington, D. C. He took part in the severe engagements at Bentonville and Averysboro, which were the last battles of importance between the armies of Sherman and Johnston. With his regiment, Mr. Bean was honorably discharged at Madison, Wis., but his service in the war for the Union does not constitute all of his military career, as he re-enlisted Sept. 11, 1868, as a member of the 5th United States Cavalry. In the regular army he served chiefly in Kansas and Nebraska, and with his regiment had several encounters of more or less importance with the Indians, perhaps the severest of which was what is known as the Tall Bull fight. In this battle Mr. Bean received a severe gunshot wound in his left knee, which resulted in his discharge Nov. 10, 1869, and from the effects of which he has never fully recovered.

Mr. Bean is a native of New York, having been born at Saratoga Springs, on June 1, 1847. His father is John C. E. Bean, who now, at an advanced age, resides with, and is cared for by, his son. The wife and mother died many years ago. The family came West in 1859. Alburtus C. is the only one of his father's children who entered the army. He was married in 1872 to Miss Cynthia Parker, and they have become the parents of three children, namely: Jane, Nina and Charlotte. Mr. Bean did his duty well as a soldier, and as a citizen is highly esteemed. Fraternally he is an honored member of the Grand Army Post at Bloomington, and politically is a staunch supporter of the Republican party.

REV. ALBERT B. BECHTOLT, who owns and conducts a fine farm one mile north of Browntown, in Cadiz township, Green county, is well known in that locality both as an earnest preacher of the United Brethren persuasion and as a thrifty farmer, active in all good works for the moral and material growth of the community in which he has taken up his residence.

Mr. Bechtolt is a native of Green county, born March 24, 1861, in Jordan township, where his father, Daniel B. Bechtolt, has resided for half a century. The family is of German origin, our subject's great-grandfather, Mathias Bechtolt, Sr., having been born in Germany, whence he emigrated to America before the Revolutionary war, settling in Berks county, Penn. His family consisted of eleven children, namely: Isaac, George, Frederick, Daniel, Mathias, Jr., William, Elizabeth, Catherine, and three who died young. Of these Mathias, Jr., grandfather of Rev. Albert B. Bechtolt, was born in 1788 in Berks county, Penn., and in 1813 married Miss Christina Epler, of Berks county, who bore him eight children: Christina, Catherine, Mathias, Lydia, Peter, Permelia, Elizabeth and Daniel B., all deceased except Permelia and Daniel B. The family came to Wisconsin in about 1851, settling in Jordan township, Green county, where the father homesteaded forty acres of government land. There the parents passed the remainder of their days, and they lie buried in the old Kelly graveyard in Cadiz township.

Daniel B. Bechtolt was born Feb. 22, 1837, in Licking county, Ohio, received his education in his native State, and was trained to agricultural pursuits on his present farm, which he has continued to carry on most profitably, having a well-improved place, now comprising 160 acres, equipped with good barns, etc. When he commenced life on his own account he had not a dollar to his name, but he has succeeded by dint of perseverance in acquiring a comfortable competence, and at the same time has made for himself an honorable name among the best citizens of his community. As one of the leading farmers of the township his influence in local affairs is strong, and always exercised in the cause of right. His political support is given to principle and not to party, and he may always be depended upon to aid by his ballot the best men and the best measures, regardless of their political sponsors. In religion he is inclined to the faith of the United Brethren.

On March 12, 1857, Mr. Bechtolt was united in marriage with Miss Matilda Wagner, who was born Feb. 19, 1839, in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Charles and Lydia (Shultz) Wagner, and eight children blessed this union, namely: Maria, now deceased; Albert B., our subject; Lydia, wife of Charles Blain, of Jordan; Samuel, of Iowa, who married Ettie Lafever; George, of Monroe township, Green county, who married Ina Wells; Ervin, who remains on the old home place, and is married to Isa Wells; Ida Elmedia, wife of Walter Kessler, of Jordan; and Orpha, who died when an infant. Mrs. Bechtolt passed away June 19, 1880. She was a true Christian woman, sharing in the high esteem in which her husband has always been held, and was deeply mourned by her neighbors and friends throughout the township.

Albert B. Bechtolt was reared on the old home place in Jordan, and received his early education in the public schools of that neighborhood, later taking a special three-years course for the ministry, while in Nebraska and Iowa. Having been reared to farm work, he came to Cadiz township at the age of twenty-one years, and hired out on the farm to Thomas Watson for a time. His next move was to Hampton, Iowa, where he remained five years, thence removing to Litchfield, Neb., of which place he was a resident eleven years, until his return, in 1900, to Green county. Here he purchased, from Joseph Woodle, of Monroe, a large farm of 230 acres, in Cadiz township, in the cultivation of which he is now engaged. Mr. Bechtolt was in Nebraska during the terrible drought of 1894, when the farmers were obliged to depend upon the charity of the East for support and grain for the next year's crops.

While at Hampton, Iowa, Mr. Bechtolt was converted, uniting with the United Brethren Church, and he has been a preacher of that denomination since 1888, during which time—with the exception of three years—he has also engaged continuously in agricultural pursuits, his work as a minister of the Gospel being conducted solely with the aim of doing all in his power for the betterment of his fellow men, by the advancement of the cause of Christ. While in Nebraska he was the leader in the building of two churches. Mr. Bechtolt is a man whose high moral worth and strength of character are no small factors in his success as a religious worker, and his intelligence, thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, and fluency as a speaker are naturally valuable aids to him in this respect also. However, it is his earnestness, kindliness and real desire to do good, traits which are shown forth strongly in his consistent Christian life, which win most readily, and his efforts have met with rich reward. That he has executive ability of a high order is apparent from the fact of his active continuance of agricultural pursuits, in which he has succeeded so well, even though they have not received his entire attention. Rev. Mr. Bechtolt is a prominent citizen of his township in more ways than one, and his influence is directed into those channels where, in his opinion, it will do the greatest good to the greatest number. His political support is given to the man, not to the party. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the M. W. A.

On Sept. 23, 1886, in Hampton, Iowa, Mr. Bechtolt was united in marriage with Miss Mary Trindle, of that place, who was born Dec. 25, 1865, daughter of James and Margaret (Baird) Trindle, of Hampton, and is of Scotch-Irish origin. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bechtolt, as follows: James D., June 12, 1887; Ervin, May 10, 1889; George, July 7, 1892; J. Earl, July 7, 1894; Blanch, Dec. 20, 1897; Viola, Dec. 15, 1899. All are living except Earl, who died Nov. 15, 1895.

Mrs. Bechtolt's parents had children as follows: William, who is deceased; George W., of Kearney, Neb.; Jane, wife of D. J. Sweeley, of Kearney, Neb.; Martha, deceased, who married William Hall; John, a resident of Kearney, Neb.; Julia S., wife of J. S. Silvius, of Browntown, Wis.; Orphia, deceased wife of B. E. Claypoole; and Mary, Mrs. Bechtolt.

Mrs. Bechtolt's grandfather Baird was a prominent resident of Bairdstown, Penn., which place was named in honor of the Bairds.

A. W. WELLERS, engineer and miller of Platteville, Grant county, and a representative of one of the old pioneer families of this part of Wisconsin, is a prosperous clerk of the city in which he resides, and highly esteemed.

A. W. Wellers was born in Germany, in April, 1845, a son of A. W. and Wilhelmina (Myer) Wellers, natives of Germany, who came from that country to America, in 1846, when our subject was but one year old. A. W. Wellers, Sr., was a cabinetmaker by trade, and was the first of that trade to locate in this portion of the State, settling as he did in Platteville, where he resided until 1865, when he removed to Hurricane Grove, and died one year later. The mother survived until 1888, when she, too, passed away in Grant county. Four children are still living, of the family born to these worthy people: (1) Elizabeth, born in Germany, in 1838, grew to womanhood in Platteville, married John Tobler, who died in the Civil war, leaving one son, John, now of Chicago; Elizabeth then wedded Andrew Govier, of Fennimore, and they have four children, Edward, Burton, Grant and Ida. (2) Meta, second child of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wellers, Sr., was born in Germany, in 1842, was educated in the public schools of this city and Lancaster, and is now a successful teacher and palmist in Chicago, being a great linguist, and speaking fluently, German, Latin, Greek, and French. (3) A. W., our subject. (4) Mary, born in Platteville, in 1849, married, is now a resident of Oakland, Cal., with one daughter, Laura, who is also married, and a resident of Buffalo, New York.

A. W. Wellers, Jr., grew to manhood in Grant county, where he received a common-school education, later removing, with his parents, to Hurricane Grove, and at the time of his father's death, the entire support of the family fell upon his shoulders. For twelve or fourteen years thereafter the family continued to reside upon the farm, but at the expiration of that time Mr. A. W. Wellers removed with his mother to Platteville, where he engaged with his uncle, John Kemler, as a clerk, and where he learned the trade of miller. This trade Mr. Wellers has followed continuously ever since, in various parts of the county, and for eighteen years was employed by Noah Virgin, one of Platteville's pioneer business men, but is now a clerk in Platteville.

In 1877 Mr. Wellers married Miss Maria Seitz, of Grant county, a native of Germany, daughter of Henry Seitz, now deceased. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Wellers purchased property on Furnace street, where they resided until 1895, when they sold this residence, and purchased another in the Homestead Addition to Platteville. Here they erected a substantial home, and are surrounded by all modern comforts. To them were born six children: Margaret, born in Platteville, a graduate of the State Normal, and a young lady of culture and refinement; Georgia C., a student in the Normal School of Platteville; Emma A., student in Platteville Normal School; Albert W., a student in the high school; Charles H., a student in the Normal School; and Marie, in the Platteville schools. Politically Mr. Wellers has always been identified with the Republican party; is a member of the Modern Woodmen, and of the Knights of the Globe, as well as of the Platteville fire company. The entire family are members of the Lutheran Church, in which they are deservedly prominent. The Wellers family is well known throughout Grant county, and Mr. and Mrs. Wellers are good representatives of the solid people of Platteville.

CHARLES WEITTENHILLER. For a third of a century this gentleman has been prominently identified with the industrial and business interests of Platteville, Grant county, and is to-day one of the leading merchants of that place. His early home was on the other side of the Atlantic, as he was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1844. His father, Sebastian Weittenhiller, was a native of the same province, born in Eichstadt, Bavaria, April 27, 1824, and there married Annie Schiell, whose birth occurred in that village in 1822. In 1849 he crossed the ocean to America, and after spending eighteen months in New York, came West to Galena, Ill., and in May, 1853, took up his residence in Platteville, Wis., where he was joined by his wife and children. The following November, they having remained in the Fatherland until that time. In Rochester, N. Y., he learned the cooper's trade, which he followed in Platteville for eleven years, and then, in 1864, purchased a farm of 164 acres.

and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He died in Platteville in 1898, but his wife is still living, and continues to reside at that place. Of their children Charles is the eldest; Conrad, the second son, is a farmer of Platteville township; Mrs. Emma Callaway is the next of the family; Philip is a farmer of Laurens, Iowa; Mrs. Lena Secord resides in Washington, as does also Jennie; Mary makes her home in Platteville, and Mrs. Etta May is a resident of Washington. In religious belief the family are Presbyterians.

Since the age of nine years Charles Weittenhiller has made his home in Platteville, and in early life he learned the cooper's trade with his father. He began business for himself in 1867 as a manufacturer of cooperage, and continued to carry on operations along that line until 1890, when he embarked in merchandising. He carries a large and well-selected stock, and by fair and honorable dealing has built up an excellent trade.

During the war for the Union, Mr. Weittenhiller enlisted at Platteville, Jan. 24, 1864, in Company E, 25th Wis. V. I., under Capt. J. M. Scott, for three years or during the war. His command was assigned to the 1st Brigade, 2nd Division, 16th, and later the 17th, Corps, Army of the Tennessee, and participated in the engagements at Snake Creek Gap, Ga., Resaca, Dallas, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Nickajack and Atlanta. With four comrades Mr. Weittenhiller was captured at Decatur, July 22, 1864, and sent to Andersonville prison, where he was incarcerated two months, being exchanged Sept. 23, 1864. After rejoining his regiment at East Point, Ga., he was sent to the convalescent camp, and after four weeks spent at Marietta, Ga., again joined his regiment in time to take part in the March to the Sea. He was all through Georgia, and the Carolina campaign, in the battle of Salkahatchie River, in January, 1865, and later took part in the engagements at River Bridge, South Edisto, Bentonville and Goldsboro. He was transferred to Company K, 12th Wis. V. I., and with that command was honorably discharged at Louisville, Ky., July 16, 1865.

In 1867, at Platteville, Mr. Weittenhiller married Miss Jennie Marshall, a daughter of E. H. Marshall and his wife, Johanna. Her father, who was a native of New Hampshire and a farmer by occupation, came to Grant county, Wis., as early as 1836, but spent his last days in Iowa, where his death occurred in 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Weittenhiller have a family of five children, namely: Cora, Addie, Marenus, Charles and Jennie. Mr. Weittenhiller uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party, and has taken quite an active interest in local politics, being elected a member of the city council and justice of the peace, both of which offices he most capably and satisfactorily filled. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America; Melody Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M.; and Washington Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M. He is one of the most prominent and influential business men of his adopted city.

BERNT WILLIAM QUALLEY. Among the many monuments which throughout Wisconsin have been erected to unflagging industry and sound business judgment, there are few superior to the highly improved farm of 160 acres in Exeter township, Green county, owned and, until lately, operated by the subject of this sketch. Migrating when a lad of seventeen years from Norway, his native land, to Wisconsin, Mr. Qualley worked for a time as farm laborer, then at a trade until he could save the purchase payment for a little home of forty-eight acres. To this he has added from time to time until the valuable and well tilled farm he now owns became the merited fruit of his persevering efforts.

He was born near Bergen, Norway, Feb. 13, 1848, son of Ryer and Helga Qualley, and grandson of Bartle Qualley, a life-long resident of Norway, who had a family of six or seven children. Helga Qualley was a daughter of Tron Qualley, a Norwegian farmer who had two sons and three daughters. Ryer Qualley, the father, was a tailor by occupation. He came to America about 1867 and located in Dane county, Wis., where he farmed for several years, then moved to Brooklyn township, Green county. He died in Exeter township in 1877, aged fifty-six, and his wife in 1885, aged seventy-four years. They were devout members of the Lutheran Church. To Ryer and Helga Qualley were born six children, four sons and two daughters, of whom four are now living, namely: Thomas, of Brookings, S. Dak.; Bernt William, our subject; Bertha, wife of Stark Himle, of Kasson, Minn.; and James, of Brookings, South Dakota.

In his native land Bernt William Qualley received a good common-school education, and, as a boy, found occupation in a match factory. In 1865, when about seventeen years of age he came to America, landing at Stoughton, Wis., where he began work by the month on a farm. Later, at Whitewater, he acquired the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for about ten years. Possessing a fondness for the independence and activity of farm life, Mr. Qualley then purchased forty-eight acres, a portion of his present farm of 160 acres in Exeter township. Here he made a homestead that ranks high among those of the township. In February, 1901, Mr. Qualley bought a stock of dry goods and groceries from J. E. Litel, and renting his farm to his son-in-law, Stanley Dietz, he, on March 1, 1901, moved to Attica, Wis., to enter upon a mercantile career.

Mr. Qualley was married, July 3, 1875, to Miss Elizabeth Melvina Bartlett, daughter of Joseph and Eliza (Price) Bartlett. Six children, two sons and four daughters, have been born to them, namely: Derwin, who died aged two months and twenty-five days; Harriet, a teacher in Exeter; Sarah, who married Stanley Dietz, of Monroe, Wis., and has one child, Wesley; and Verna, William and Grace, at home. Mr. Qualley, in religious faith, is a Lutheran, and his wife is a member of the Methodist Church. Politically he is a Republican, and is now serving as one of the supervisors of Exeter township. Among the social orders he is a member of Dayton Lodge, F. & A. M., and of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is one of the most industrious, progressive and successful men of Exeter township.

MRS. CHRISTOPHER F. SCHROEDER, a well-known resident of Platteville, and a representative of a prominent pioneer family of Grant county, was born in Smelser township Oct. 23, 1845, and is a daughter of Dedrick and Maria M. (Melvin) Harms.

The father was born March 30, 1805, in Hanover, Germany, where he was reared and educated, and in 1834 sailed from Bremen, and arrived in New Orleans after a long and tedious voyage. By flat-boat he came up the Mississippi river to Dubuque, Iowa, where he worked at day labor, and later found employment in the mines. The same year, however, he came to Grant county, Wis., and commenced working in the mines here. At that time he was unmarried, and in very limited circumstances. In 1839 he was joined by his brother John, and together they invested their money in land, always doing business under the firm name of D. & J. Harms. Their first purchase was the claim of a Mr. Hazard, who had commenced to break the land, and to it they added from time to time, as their financial resources increased, until they owned a large amount of property. The partnership between the two brothers continued until the death of Dedrick, Sept. 3, 1882. He was married in Galena, Ill., Aug. 6, 1843, to Miss Maria M. Melvin, a native of Bloomington, Ind., and a daughter of James A. and Sarah S. (Roberts) Melvin. Her mother was born in Virginia, of Holland ancestry, while her father was born near the city of Baltimore, Md. He brought his family to Grant county, Wis., about 1831, becoming a farmer of Belmont township. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk war, and during those troublesome times his family twice went to the fort at Mineral Point for protection. Both Mr. and Mrs. Melvin died in Nebraska. After his marriage Dedrick Harms located on the old homestead in Smelser township, where he engaged in farming and stock raising throughout the remainder of his life. Although he came to the New World empty-handed, by industry and good management he became one of the most successful and substantial citizens of his community. Politically he was a Democrat, and he and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. She departed this life March 10, 1898. Their children were as follows: John C., born June 6, 1844, died March 13, 1871; Mary I., born Oct. 23, 1845, is the next in order of birth; Henry H., born Feb. 16, 1848, died Nov. 9, 1898; Dedrick W., born Jan. 30, 1850, died April 23, 1856; James W., born Feb. 20, 1852, and Louis L., born Oct. 7, 1853, are both represented elsewhere in this volume; Martha J., born April 15, 1855, died June 25, 1886; Sarah E., born May 8, 1857, is the wife of Dr. A. R. Law, of Madison, Wis.; Emily M., born April 9, 1860, and George L., born April 25, 1862, live on the old home farm; and the youngest, born Nov. 3, 1864, died in infancy.

MRS. CHRISTOPHER F. SCHROEDER

CHRISTOPHER F. SCHROEDER

Mary I. Harms grew to womanhood on her father's farm in Smelser township, and there she was married, Jan. 16, 1868, to Christopher F. Schroeder, a native of Holstein, Germany, and a son of Peter and Anna (Scheel) Schroeder, who were also born in Germany, and on coming to this country first settled in Galena, Ill. In 1847 they became residents of Grant county, Wis., and later made their home in Lafayette county, this State, where the father improved a farm. He died in California, but the mother's death occurred in Wisconsin. Their children were Henry; Catharine, Mrs. Niehaus, of St. Paul, Minn.; Christopher F.; Frederick, of Lafayette county, Wis.; and Mary, of Platteville.

After his marriage Mr. Schroeder purchased a farm in Iowa county, Wis., where he made his home for fifteen years, at the end of which time he sold that place and bought a farm in Platteville township, Grant county, known as the "Block House farm." It is the oldest farm in the county, and was first owned by Mr. Krusen, then by John Stiles, later by Mr. Huntington, and then by Mr. Schroeder. This well improved and valuable tract of 360 acres is still owned by Mrs. Schroeder. Her husband died March 17, 1894. He was a Democrat in politics, and had served on the jury. With his wife he held membership in the Lutheran Church at Platteville. He was a man of exemplary habits, commendable purpose, and unbending integrity, and in all life's relations merited the confidence which was so freely accorded him. Mrs. Schroeder is a most estimable lady, and like her husband makes many friends. In their family were four children: (1) Anna Maria is now the wife of Jacob Brugger, Jr., of Platteville township, and they have four children, Clarence Elmer, Fernie Isabelle, Hazel May, and Herbert D. (2) George William, a resident of Plymouth county, Iowa, married Anna Scheel, and they have three children, Mabel Gert-rude, Ethel Isabelle and Bessie Helen. (3) James F. married Etta Johnson, and resides at home. (4) Ellen Jane died at the age of ten months..

JOHN ANTHONY, a leading stock and grain farmer of the town of Lima, Grant county, widely known as a capable and progressive man, was born in Pennsylvania, in January, 1857, and is a son of John and Louisa (Case) Anthony, both natives of Cornwall, Eng., where they were married. In 1856 they came to Wisconsin, and settled in Lafayette county, where Mr. Anthony followed the tailoring trade for a time, and then engaged in mining. The celebrated Raisbeck mines at Meeker's Grove in Lafayette county, were discovered by him, and these mines he worked by lease for fifteen years, and met with large success in his mining operations, clearing up a considerable sum of money. In 1888 he purchased the farm where his son John now resides, and there died in 1889, leaving his wife with one son, John. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion he and his wife were members of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Anthony still resides at her home in Meeker's Grove.

John Anthony had his early education in the district schools of Lafayette county, and when a young man he learned the blacksmith trade, which has been his occupation for twelve years. In 1884 he married Miss Eva McReynolds, the daughter of Wilson and Jane McReynolds, an old and respected pioneer couple of Grant county. After marriage he settled on his present home property, which has been his home since that time, with the exception of two years which he spent in the Raisbeck mines. Mr. Anthony has given up the trade of blacksmithing, and confines himself to the operation of his farm. To him and his wife were born three children, all in the town of Lima: Frank W., born in 1885; Louisa J., born in 1887; and John, born in 1889, all of whom are students in the home school.

In politics Mr. Anthony has always been a Republican, and has been constable for eight years, and has been a delegate to the county convention several terms. Mr. Anthony is a member of the Washburn Lodge of the I. O. O. F., and in religion he has been reared in the Methodist Church. He is a young man of excellent business qualifications, and for a number of years has bought horses largely for the Chicago and eastern markets. Known throughout the community for his integrity and fair dealing, he has many friends and is highly esteemed.

J. E. KENNEY is numbered among the prominent business men of Cuba City, Grant county, where he conducts a large furniture and undertaking establishment.

Mr. Kenney was born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., Sept. 26, 1851, a son of Edward and Catherine (Fitzpatrick) Kenney. Edward Kenney was born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1800, and his wife in Tipperary, Ireland, in 1811. They were married in Ireland in 1833, and four years later the father came to America, settling in Illinois, where he was joined by his wife and one daughter in 1844. The family located at the lead mines in Jo Daviess county, Ill. Here the father followed mining until 1855, when he purchased a farm in the southwestern part of Lafayette county, Wis., and remained thereon until his death, in November, 1884. His wife passed away in 1873. Both of these good people were earnest members of the Catholic Church, and the father was a Jacksonian Democrat, although he never took an active part in politics. Their family consisted of six children: (1) Mary, born in Ireland in October, 1834, came to America when ten years of age. She married William Nagle, of Jo Daviess county, a soldier of the Mexican war and one of the "49" Californians, who purchased land in Wisconsin. Mr. Nagle died in 1860 in the West, where he had gone to look after some of his interests. He left his wife and one daughter, Mary C., the wife of Allen Vandiver, of Missouri, later of Illinois, where she died, leaving three children, John E., Anice and William J. (2) Bridget T., born Oct. 17, 1845, died in 1867. (3) Ellen A., born Feb. 1, 1847, married William O'Rourke, of Lafayette county, who served three years in the Civil war, after which he moved to Lawler, Iowa. There Mrs. Ellen O'Rourke died, leaving ten children, John E., Mary C., Theresa, Lewis, Rose, William, Cyrillus, Thomas, Alice, and Maggie. (4) Michael J., born Sept. 14, 1848, who was educated in common schools of Wisconsin, married Bridget Brannon, of Missouri, and settled near St. Jo, that State, where the family still reside. In 1883 he went to Mexico for his health, later to Idaho, where he died in January, 1898, leaving a wife and four children, Mary C., Theresa, John and Thomas. (5) Catherine, born in February, 1850, died in April, 1869. (6) J. E. is our subject.

J. E. Kenney was educated in the public schools of Lafayette county. In 1879 he went to Salt Lake City, Utah, and successfully followed silver and lead mining for two years; then moved to the Wood river country, Idaho, and following mining for six years, part of which time he was manager for a Salt Lake City company. In 1886 he came back to Jo Daviess county, married, and returned with his young wife to Idaho. In 1888, coming to Grant county, Wis., he settled in Cuba City, where he formed a partnership with John Walsh in a furniture and undertaking business, buying the latter out in 1894, since which time he has continued the establishment alone. In addition to their furniture and undertaking business Mr. Kenney and his partner were contractors and builders, and among their best contracts is the fine graded school building in Cuba City, as well as a number of business blocks and private residences. Mr. Kenney is a graduate of the embalming school of Illinois, and thoroughly understands every detail of his business. His undertaking establishment is furnished with all appliances; a full line of caskets is carried, and all the appointments are in excellent taste. In the furniture department purchasers find a full stock of the finest, as well as most substantially constructed, furniture, while prices are uniformly the lowest, taking into consideration the excellence of the articles.

In 1886 Mr. Kenney was married to Miss Mary M. Walsh, of Jo Daviess county, Ill., daughter of John and Johanna (Day) Walsh, pioneers of that county. Mrs. Kenney was born and reared in Jo Daviess county, growing to womanhood upon a farm. To Mr. and Mrs. Kenney have come three children: Mary Calista, born in Cuba City in August, 1889, who is now attending school; and Oscar and Oswald, twins, who died when seven months old.

Politically Mr. Kenney has always been identified with the Democratic party, has served most acceptably as alderman for four terms, treasurer two years, assessor two years, and was one of those who had the village incorporated. He has always taken a deep interest in local affairs, and is ready and willing to promote anything tending toward the advancement of the material prosperity of Cuba City. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kenney are consistent members of the Catholic Church, and he is a charter member of Branch No. 96, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

ALVIN F. ROTE, the capable and efficient superintendent of public schools in Monroe, Green county, is universally conceded to be one of Wisconsin's best equipped, most conscientious and most thorough educators.

Lewis Rote, our subject's father, was one of Green county's most prominent and influential citizens, and a brief outline of his life is given in a succeeding paragraph. His mother's maiden name was Vashty C. Hitchcock, and her birthplace was Trumbull county, Ohio. She was a lady of rare refinement, innate grace and superior education, being a student of Hiram College, Ohio, of which President James A. Garfield was an alumnus. Prof. Rote lost her maternal love and care when he was but fifteen years old, but her memory yet remains to him fresh and sacred. She left two children, of whom Alvin F. was the elder. A daughter, Mary, was educated at the Monroe high school, and married F. F. White; she died years ago, leaving two daughters, and her husband has since followed her to the grave.

In order to get a correct comprehension of the career and services of Prof. Rote, it is necessary to recount the salient events in the life of his father, Lewis Rote, a man whose moral worth, blameless life and high intellectual attainments at once challenged admiration and enforced respect. Lewis Rote was born in Center county, Penn., Aug. 3, 1827. His parents removed to Venango county, in that State, and settled near Oil City, when he was a mere child of three years. At the age of sixteen he began the battle of life for himself, alternately working and teaching school until he found himself qualified to enter the college at Meadville, Penn. After three years' attendance at that school he began the study of law, and in 1853 came to Wisconsin. After halting at several points in the lead mining district he finally settled in Monroe. Here he taught school for several years before engaging in the practice of his profession. After the death of his first wife Lewis Rote married Edna Bancroft, of Portage county, Ohio, who survived him. In 1884 he moved to Pierce, Neb., and engaged in farming, which vocation he followed until his death, on Nov. 23, 1899. During his residence in Monroe he was a prominent and influential citizen, being several times elected village clerk, a member of the school board, and justice of the peace. He was a man of uncompromising integrity, and absolutely fearless in maintaining what he believed to be the truth. Quiet and unobtrusive in demeanor and habits, he was none the less genial of temperament and generous at heart. After settling in Nebraska he was elected county judge, but resigned the office before the expiration of his term. He was an uncompromising Republican, and an earnest worker for his party, being an effective speaker and an admirable organizer. Many of the older residents bear testimony to his ability as an educator, and he was for many years one of the leaders of the Green county Bar.

Alvin F. Rote was born July 6, 1858, in Monroe. Immediately upon graduation from the Monroe high school he matriculated at the State University at Madison. At the close of his Sophomore year he taught in the high school in the city of his birth, discharging the duties of that position with a fidelity and ability which won universal commendation. Returning to the university, he completed his course, and graduated in 1882. He was at once appointed principal of the high school at Neenah, Wis., where he remained four years. The nine years following were passed, four at Berlin and five at Beloit, and in 1895 he entered upon the duties of his present office.

While teaching at Neenah Mr. Rote was married to Miss Mary W. Krueger, of that place, whose father, William Krueger, was one of the early pioneers of Winnebago county. They have one son, Robert, who was born in Berlin in 1888.

Prof. Rote is an enthusiast in his work, and under his skillful management and watchful oversight the schools of Monroe compare favorably with those of any other city of like size in the State, the diploma of the high school being accepted at Madison as sufficient evidence of fitness to enter the university. Fraternally our subject is a Royal Arch Mason, being affiliated with the Beloit Chapter. In religious faith he is a Universalist.

JOHN LONGBOTHAM, merchant, banker and real-estate dealer in Dickeysville, Grant county, was born in the town of Paris, that county, in 1852, a son of Thomas and Hannah (Wreakes) Longbotham.

Our subject's parents were natives of Yorkshire, England, the father born May 13, 1807, and the mother in June, 1821. They came to Grant county in 1841, and here Mr. Longbotham was engaged in selling ore for a time, after which he went into farming, in Paris. He bought a good farm, where he made his permanent residence. Here his wife died in 1880, and he on Sept. 22, 1892. Mr. Longbotham in his earlier days voted the Democratic ticket, and later was a Republican. A prominent and popular man in his section, he was called upon to fill many local offices, and was widely known for his ability and unswerving integrity. He was the father of six children: (1) William, who was born in Potosi, Grant county, obtained his education in the Platteville public schools, and is engaged in business at Lawrence, Neb., where he is living. He is unmarried. (2) Elijah, born at Potosi, married Miss Celia Taylor, and settled at Rockford, Iowa, where he died recently, leaving two children, Ella and Overton. (3) Thomas, born at Dickeysville, married Miss Alvira Gillmore, of Dubuque, Iowa, and they have one son, Thomas. He is now in business at Platteville, being one of the leading liverymen of Grant county. (4) Rebecca A., born in the town of Paris, was educated in the home schools and in the Platteville Normal, and became a partner with her brother John in the store, which partnership has continued for some eighteen years. Miss Longbotham was appointed postmaster at Dickeysville under the first administration of President Cleveland, and is still holding that position. (5) John is the fifth child of his parents. (6) Joseph, born in Paris, grew to manhood on the old homestead, and is now cashier of the Farmers Bank of Cuba City, where he is doing a fine business. For some years he lived at Platteville, moving to his present location and business in 1898. He married Miss Kittie Matthews, of Dickeysville. The Longbothams are all Republicans, and have all been more or less prominently identified with the Methodist Church.

John Longbotham was reared on the family estate, and acquired his education in the common schools. While still quite young he had charge of his father's business to a considerable extent, and in 1880, in company with his sister, engaged in a general mercantile business in Dickeysville. During the intervening years he has continuously dealt in real estate, making a specialty of desirable farm lands, and has handled some of the choicest farm property in this part of the State. He belongs to a syndicate extensively interested in lands in the northern part of the State. By close attention to business and wise management Mr. Longbotham has become one of the wealthy men of his part of the county. In 1890, and again in 1892, he was elected to the General Assembly, and has served his constituents most acceptably. In financial affairs Mr. Longbotham has taken a conspicuous part, in 1890 organizing the Farmers Bank of Cuba City, of which he is president. He also founded a bank at Stevens Point, of which he is vice-president. He is one of the prominent figures in the business world in this part of the State, and sustains a high reputation for honesty and integrity in all his business dealings. Mr. Longbotham has never married.

HARLAN J. JOHNSON, Lancaster, Wis. This gentleman is the owner and publisher of the Grant County Herald, the oldest established weekly paper in Southwestern Wisconsin. It was founded in 1843 by J. C. Cover, and has occupied an important place in journalistic circles ever since. Mr. Johnson took charge of the Herald in April, 1900, purchasing the same from C. R. Showalter. It is not his first experience in newspaper work, he having founded the Dial-Enterprise, at Boscobel, in company with Fred A. Myers, which was conducted most successfully under his management until March 1, 1900, at which time he disposed of his interests to Mr. Myers and removed to Lancaster, the county seat, where a broader field of work was open.

Harlan J. Johnson was born in Boscobel Dec. 23, 1872, and is a son of Jens O. Johnson, a native of Norway, and an emigrant to this country at the age of sixteen years. The paternal Johnson located at Boscobel after he had attended the academy at Albion, Wis., where he was graduated. In this city he engaged in insurance and became quite successful. In 1874 he removed to Northfield, Minn., and soon after received the appointment of adjutant for the German Insurance Co., of Freeport. He was holding this position at the time of his death, March 15, 1885. He was a soldier of the Civil war. Fraternally he was a Mason, and also belonged to the Grand Army of the Republic, taking a lively interest in everything that tended to preserve the feeling of comradeship and fraternity among the old veterans. He began life for himself as a poor boy, and though he died early was able to leave a very considerable competence for those who came after him. Mrs. Jens O. Johnson, born Betsy J. Rice, was a daughter of Moors and Clarissa (Phillips) Rice. She was born in New Hampshire Aug. 4, 1840, and married

Mr. Johnson Dec. 23, 1866. She is still living in Boscobel. Mr. and Mrs. Jens O. Johnson were the parents of four children, of whom only two are living: Cora died at the age of nineteen years; Harlan J. is our subject; Gertrude is living at home; and Louise died when she reached the age of nineteen years.

Harlan J. Johnson had his early education in the public schools of Northfield, Minn., and at Boscobel, Wis. In the month of February, 1892, he entered the office of the Boscobel Dial, and in the month of May, three years later, he purchased the Boscobel Leader, in company with Fred A. Myers. They changed the name to the Enterprise, and in October, 1895, consolidated it with their newly-purchased property, the Dial, and gave the new paper the name of The Dial-Enterprise.

Harlan J. Johnson was married to Miss Mildred Muffley, June 23, 1896. She is a daughter of L. Muffley, and was born in Boscobel Oct. 7, 1878. They are the fond parents of three children, Carl M., Mildred L. and Frances R.

DAVID BURRINGTON, who owns a fine farm of forty acres in the village of Brown-town, Green county, is a descendant of a family who came to America shortly after the arrival of the "Mayflower," and whose progeny are scattered all over the United States. Ami Burrington, the great-grandfather of David, a native of Connecticut, was the father of four children that grew to maturity, namely: Edward, Hulda, Rensselaer and Lucinda.

Edward Burrington, son of Ami, married Lydia Merritt, of Vermont, and reared a family of five children: Reuben; Wilber, of Minnesota; Amanda, who wedded Lucius Griswold; Lewis, deceased; and Perry, of Wisconsin.

Reuben Burrington, son of Edward, was born May 5, 1829, in Orleans county, Vt., and at the age of seven years was taken by his parents to Pennsylvania, where they remained some years, and then moved to Ohio. On Jan. 1, 1857, he married Miss Cordelia Meacham, daughter of Hosea and Mary (Nichols) Meacham, who originally came from New York State, and were of Scottish origin. Mr. and Mrs. Meacham had a family of six children: L. R., of Clark county, Wis.; Cordelia, Mrs. Burrington, born in 1834; William R., killed at Fort Jackson, La., in the Civil war;

Fannie B., wife of Jacob Dietz, of Monroe, Wis.; John, a farmer of Cadiz township; and Horace, a farmer in Clark county, Wis. Walter W., an adopted son, resides in Brodhead, Wis. Hosea Meacham was a son of Lyman Meacham, who was born in New York, and was the father of the following children: Hosea, Bettie, Lydia, Nancy, Lucina, Sallie, Ann, Milo, Daniel, Jeremiah, Jeannette, Lucy, Noah, Lucinda. To Reuben Burrington and his wife were born nine children, of whom seven survive, those beside our subject being: Eva, wife of Boyd Niles, of Green county; Hosea, who married Ellen Bouffman; Daniel, who married Minnie Mohov, of Chicago; William, who wedded Hattie Murr, of Naperville, Ill.; Fannie, wife of James Flannery, of Jordan township; and Mabel, wife of Charles McCoy, of Argyle, Wis. Reuben Burrington served in the Civil war as a member of Battery D, 1st Wisconsin Volunteer Heavy Artillery.

David Burrington, son of Reuben, was born July 4, 1862, and was reared to manhood on the farm in Green county, receiving such literary training as could be obtained in the neighborhood schools. At the age of twenty he went to Colorado, remained one year, and then, returning to Wisconsin, found employment on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road as section foreman, with headquarters at Gratiot, Wis. He efficiently discharged the duties of this position until 1899, when he resigned, removing to Browntown, where he had purchased land. He is now engaged in the dairy business in connection with farming, and is meeting with no little success.

On April 5, 1888, Mr. Burrington was married to Miss Minnie Huebner, daughter of C. F. and Mary Huebner, and by her had four children, three of whom are now living: Charles, Ervin and Florence. Mrs. Burrington died Dec. 19, 1894, and on May 23, 1896, Mr. Burrington married Miss Marguerite Long, daughter of Casper and Elmira (Long) Long, residents of Browntown, Wis., of German descent. Two children have been born of this second union, one that died in infancy, and Hazel. Mr. Burrington has taken an active interest in public affairs, and during his residence at Gratiot was a member of the village board. Politically he always votes the Republican ticket. As a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church he takes a part in all church work. Socially he belongs to Gratiot Lodge, No. 118, of the Masonic fraternity, of which he has served as secretary for a number of years, and at Browntown is a member of the M. W. A., Pearl Camp, No. 1141.

R. B. LUCKEY, one of the leading merchants of Cuba City, Grant county, and a man who plays an important part in the commercial life of that locality, was born in Iowa in September, 1867, a son of Stephen and Sophia (Day) Luckey.

Stephen Luckey was born in Pennsylvania, in 1829, while his wife was born in Ohio, in 1844, and, her parents dying when she was but a child, she was reared by a sister. Stephen Luckey was reared to manhood in Pennsylvania and New York, later coming West to Rock county, Wis., where he remained until 1865. Then he moved to Iowa, was a traveling salesman until his death, which sad event occurred at Mt. Hope, Wis., in 1891, his wife having passed away in 1883. Mr. Luckey had been twice married. His first wife, Mariah Ward, an eastern lady, became the mother of two sons: John, born in Wisconsin in 1850, moved to Colorado in 1879, married, and is now a prosperous real-estate agent; and George, born in Wisconsin in 1852, married Ella Hayse, resides at Richland Centre, where he is engaged in the livery business (they have two children, Bessy and Blanch). By his marriage with Sophia Day Mr. Luckey became the father of three sons: Jay, born and educated in Iowa, married a Miss Dax, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has been traveling salesman for the Miller Broom works for some sixteen years; Guy is single, and in business at Richland Centre as a liveryman; and our subject.

R. B. Luckey grew to manhood in Iowa, attending the graded schools, and later engaged as clerk in the general store of W. H. Proctor, at Monticello, for some eight years. In the fall of 1886 he embarked as a merchant at Fillmore, Iowa, continuing there until 1893, when he removed to Cuba City, opened a general store, and now has the largest establishment of its kind in the city. Mr. Luckey making a specialty of boots and shoes. The stock carried is a fine one, averaging about $10,000, and every facility is afforded for the accommodation of the patrons, while the goods are of the latest design. By his upright methods he has firmly established himself in the business life of Cuba City.

In 1893 Mr. Luckey married Miss Rachel Longendyke, of Fillmore, Iowa, daughter of Peter and Eliza Longendyke, of Kingston, N. Y. Mrs. Luckey was born at Kingston, N. Y., and well educated in her native State. Her parents moved to Monticello, Iowa, where they both died. Mr. and Mrs. Luckey have one son, Cort, born in Iowa, who is a student in the Cuba City schools. Politically Mr. Luckey has always adhered to the principles of the Republican party, and for five years has served as a member of the board of councilmen, giving entire satisfaction. Mr. Luckey is an active member of Modern Woodmen Camp, No. 2753, of Cuba City. Both Mr. and Mrs. Luckey are prominently identified with the M. E. Church, although not members, and very generous in the support of all church work. They are pleasant people, whose circle of friends is daily widening, while Mr. Luckey is highly esteemed for his reliable way of doing business, and his ability to keep in touch with public demands, so as to provide exactly what is most desired.

ARTHUR DOYLE is one of those sturdy natives of old Ireland who have made their adopted country proud to call them her own.

Born in County Wicklow, Ireland, March 17, 1840, Mr. Doyle is a son of Andrew and Mary A. (Byrne) Doyle, both of whom were natives of Ireland, born about 1808, and married in that country. In 1853 the family reached Hazel Green, Grant county, where Mr. Doyle settled down to farming, and there spent the remainder of his life, owning at the time of his demise a fine farm of many acres. He lived to be seventy-four years old, his wife surviving until 1894. Both were consistent members of the Catholic Church. They left the following named children: Catherine, who married John O'Sullivan, of Smelser, died leaving six children. Sarah is Mrs. Joseph Baufield of Cuba City, Wis., and has a family of five children, one of whom, Thomas F., is now a priest, in charge of St. Joseph's Church, Houston, Texas. Margaret married Patrick Merrigan, of Jo Daviess county, Ill., and is now a widow residing in Union county, S. Dak.; she has a large family. Patrick married Mary Quinlan, and moved to Nebraska, where he died in 1897. Julia A. is the widow of Thomas Badsfuid, of Smelser, and has a large family, one son, William, being a Catholic priest in Bankston, Iowa. Andrew married Mary Morgan, of his own country, and resides in Yankton, S. Dak. Bridget married George Schroer, and resides in Cuba City, with two children, Lulu and Mary. Charles, the first born in Grant county, married Maggie Byrne, and settled on the old homestead in Hazel Green township, where he died in 1893, leaving six children, who reside in Platteville.

Our subject was a student before coming to America, and continued his education in Hazel Green. In 1862 he enlisted in Company B, 90th Ill. V. I., termed the "Irish Legion" because of the large number of gallant sons of Erin in its ranks, and served under Grant and Sherman, participating in the battle of Vicksburg, and both battles of Missionary Ridge. He suffered from three wounds, one of these being in the breast, and saw much hard service, being in many engagements and making long marches. On account of his wounds he was honorably discharged, and came home a sergeant, having risen from the ranks.

Returning to his old home in Hazel Green township, our subject again took up peaceful pursuits, but the hand that has wielded a gun needs time before it can accustom itself to the plow, and it was not until 1866 that Mr. Doyle settled down to hard work on a farm. Owning eighty acres of prairie land near Cuba City, given him by his father, he began its improvement, adding to it until at present he owns a fine estate of 280 acres, so improved and cultivated that it ranks with any in Grant county. His comfortable, modern dwelling, excellent buildings and flourishing orchards, make his place an ideal country home.

Mr. Doyle was married in 1865 to Miss Catherine Walsh, a daughter of Nicholas and Mary Walsh, old pioneers. Her father was born in Ireland, her mother in Kentucky, and they resided in Illinois at the time of the birth of Mrs. Doyle, in October, 1842. She received her education at the Sisters' school in Benton, and is an estimable lady. Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Doyle: Mary A., Charles and Sarah are deceased. Andrew died when a young man, in 1887. Mary, born in 1872, died in 1890; she was a student at St. Clair Academy. Rev. Nicholas, born Nov. 3, 1869, received his early education in the Georgetown school, entered St. Francis Seminary, at Milwaukee, where he was educated for the priesthood, spending ten years in that school, and was ordained in July, 1892. He had charge first of Ridgeway parish, and died April 29, 1895, in Shullsburg, his death being a terrible affliction to his family. Patrick M., born in 1873, was a student at Cuba City, and finished his education at St. Joseph's College, Dubuque, but on account of failing health spent five years in Texas, and is now a member of the mercantile firm of Donohoo, Splinter & Co., in Cuba City. Charles P., born in 1877, received a finished education at St. Joseph's College, and is one of the partners in the above mentioned firm. Thomas F., born in 1881, is a graduate of the Cuba City high school, and now a student at St. Joseph's College. Malda, born in 1883, is a graduate in the class of 1900, of the Cuba City high school, and now attending school at St. Clara's Academy, Sinsinawa, Wis. Maggie E., born in 1885, is a student in the high school at Cuba City.

After his return from the army our subject was made town treasurer, continuing in office during 1864-65. Politically he has always been identified with the Democratic party, and he has efficiently filled the position of chairman of his township and also that of assessor. As a leading and prominent politician Mr. Doyle has been before the public many years, and has always been found one upon whom the lime-light of public criticism discloses no flaw. Devoted to his church, he is one of its cheerful and generous supporters, and of every Catholic charity that comes to his notice. Generous to his family, he has spent large sums of money on their education, and they reflect credit upon him, being among the most intelligent and cultured members of the community. Grant county has no finer specimen of politician, farmer, or veteran of the Civil war than she finds in Arthur Doyle.

WALTER WILLIAM PECK, M. D., one of the leading physicians and surgeons of southwestern Wisconsin, is a native of the State, born Jan. 19, 1860, in Lafayette county, at Darlington, a son of L. S. and Lovisa (Robinson) Peck, both of whom were natives of New York, and became residents of Lafayette county in 1858. They now reside in the city of Kilbourn, Wisconsin.

Our subject is one of a family of three members; George is a pharmacist, residing in Chicago; and Clara resides with her parents.

Dr. Peck received a high-school education in Darlington, and began the study of medicine with Dr. Smith, finally graduating at Rush Medical College, Chicago, in the class of 1883. The whole of his medical career has been passed in Lafayette county. He was located in Fayette six and one-half years, having moved thither immediately after graduation, and for twelve years has been kept busy with his growing practice in Darlington. In 1895 he was graduated from the New York Post-Graduate Medical School, making a specialty of surgery and diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. Dr. Peck is recognized as a man of marked ability in his profession, and has become one of the most trusted members of the medical fraternity in the State. In surgery, especially, is he considered very skillful. He has been prominently identified with the city's interests, and has gained the esteem of the community. He is chairman of the town and county boards. Socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to the Blue Lodge and Commandery, and also of the K. of P.

On May 3, 1888, Dr. Peck married Miss Nannie Moore Parkinson, a daughter of Peter Parkinson, and a granddaughter of Daniel Morgan Parkinson. One daughter has come to Dr. and Mrs. Peck, Helene, born Feb. 9, 1891.

COL. DANIEL MORGAN PARKINSON. No name in the pioneer history of Lafayette county is entitled to greater honor, or more worthy a place in the Commemorative Record of Southwestern Wisconsin, than that of Parkinson. The head of the family was Daniel Morgan Parkinson, who was born in Carter county, East Tennessee, Oct. 20, 1790. His father, Peter Parkinson, was a sturdy Scotchman, and on the maternal side he was descended from famous Revolutionary ancestry, his mother being Mary Morgan, a sister of Gen. Daniel Morgan, the commander of Morgan's famous riflemen in the war for independence.

Col. Parkinson's father died when he was a child of two years, the mother being left with seven small children to support, and in a wilderness of the new Southwest, which was overrun by savages, and whose forests had but just begun to echo to the blows of the axe of the white man. But the faithful and energetic mother proved equal to the conditions in which she was placed, and reared her children, though without the advantages of education, to be esteemed and honorable citizens. On attaining to manhood our subject left his native place and located in White county, in his native State, later removing to Madison county, Ill., thence to Sangamon county, in the same State.

W. W. Peck, m. d.

At about this time the tide of migration set in toward the lead regions of southwestern Wisconsin, and in 1827 Mr. Parkinson located at New Diggings, then in Iowa county. In 1829 he removed to Mineral Point, and there erected the third cabin at that place, this cabin becoming known as "Mineral Point Hotel," and here many a tired miner and weary traveler found refreshment and rest. In 1833 he entered a quarter section of land in what is now the town of Willow Springs, and later erected a house thereon, and this became the homestead of the family. Here Daniel Parkinson died, on Oct. 1, 1868, at the age of seventy-eight. This place was known among the early settlers as "Prairie Spring Hotel." No man was better known or more highly esteemed among the pioneers than he, and among his intimate friends were such men as Gov. Henry Dodge, Ebenezer Bingham, William D. Hamilton, Charles Bracken, Abner Nichols, J. P. Cox, Levi Sterling, Judge J. W. Blackstone, and many other men of prominence.

Mr. Parkinson served as captain, major and colonel, successively, of Territorial militia, and saw service in the Winnebago war as lieutenant, later, in the Black Hawk war, commanding the 5th Company, Mich. Mounted Volunteers, where he earned great praise as an Indian tactician. Three times he was elected to the Territorial Legislature, and often held a seat on the county board of supervisors of Iowa county. In 1846 he was elected to represent the county of Iowa in the Constitutional Convention of that year. Despite the dissolute associations of the early days Col. Parkinson was a sturdy exponent of temperance tenets, and never indulged, nor allowed liquor to appear in his household. So thoroughly did he instill temperance principles into the minds of his three sons that they all arrived at maturity without knowing the taste of liquor.

In physical form Col. Parkinson was of herculean build, having been six feet, six inches in height, and well proportioned. In politics he was a staunch adherent of Andrew Jackson, and on all occasions, and in all places, maintained his Democratic sentiments. Previous to coming to Iowa county he had contracted his first marriage, with Elizabeth Hyder, who was a first cousin of Gen. Wade Hampton's father. To this union three sons were born, Peter, William and Nathaniel. Col. Parkinson married twice subsequently, and his last wife, like the others, preceded her husband to the better land. The only surviving member of his immediate family is his son William, who, at a very advanced age, resides at Mineral Point.

Peter Parkinson, the eldest son, was born in Carter county, Tenn., Jan. 22, 1813, and became no less distinguished in Lafayette county than was his honored father. In 1819 the family removed to southern Illinois, and settled in Silver Creek, twenty-five miles east of St. Louis, which was then on the Western frontier, and St. Louis but a small village. In August, 1828, he came to Wisconsin, his father and the rest of the family having come the previous year. In 1832, with his brother, Nathaniel T. Parkinson, he settled in the town of Fayette, which was ever after his home. In that year he and his brother broke sixty acres of land, which was the first farm of any considerable size made in the town. On this farm he and his brother, both then unmarried, lived together for five years, and increased its extent to 400 acres.

In 1832, when but nineteen years of age, young Parkinson took an active part in the Black Hawk war, participating in the famous battle of Pecatonica, in which every Indian engaged was slain, and when he died the last survivor of the bloodiest battle of the Black Hawk war passed away. In the battle of Wisconsin he also took part, and assisted in the burying of many of the men who were slain. In 1854 he was a member of the State Legislature from Lafayette county, and one of the four members who had the courage to vote against the Kansas-Nebraska resolutions of that body. As a legislator he was active and influential in the passage of several laws in the interests of the people at large, and was the author of that part of the Mechanics' Lien Law which extended its provisions, which have now been embodied into the laws of every State in the Union. In 1855, during the Kansas-Nebraska troubles, he was appointed by President Pierce to the office of lieutenant in Company A, Dragoons, 3d Cavalry, U. S. A. While at St. Louis, on his way to report at Jefferson Barracks, the sudden and dangerous illness of his wife compelled him to resign at once; had not the unfortunate event occurred, there is no doubt but his military career, begun so auspiciously, would have increased the lustre of that gallant regiment. Col. Parkinson served as county commissioner, chairman of the town board, and justice of the peace, although he had never sought office nor position. A number of times he was president of the Agricultural Society of his county; of the Old Settlers Society; and of the Pioneer Association, which he organized.

While never engaged in the practice of law, Col. Parkinson was familiar with its principles, possessed an excellent knowledge of the provisions of the statutes, and argued a case before a justice of the peace as well as a practicing attorney. As a writer he was strong and vigorous, and on some topics was considered the best writer in Lafayette county. The prominent traits of his character were firmness and decision; he was sincere and ardent in his friendships, had no sympathy or patience with littleness or meanness, and was ever severe in condemnation of the evil doer. An old neighbor said of him that he was ever ready to do right himself, and to make others do right. Prominently identified with town, county and State, to the close of his life, he was able to relate many interesting incidents of the early days.

In December, 1837, Mr. Parkinson was married to Lucy McCollum, and theirs was the first marriage ceremony performed in Lafayette county. Two sons and a daughter were born to this marriage: The elder of the sons is Judge John D. Parkinson, who has for many years been circuit judge of the 25th district of the State of Missouri, with residence at Kansas City; the younger son, Thomas Benton, was killed at Little Rock, in the war of the Rebellion; the daughter died in infancy. Mrs. Lucy Parkinson died April 5, 1842. In 1847 he married Cleantha S. Welch, of Madison, Wis., and by this marriage four daughters were born: Lucy Helena became Mrs. Derrick, of Oil City, Penn., and died many years ago; Iantha Corinne is now Mrs. Abby, of Beebe, Ark.; Tessie Alberta is now Mrs.

Jenkins, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; and Mary. Mrs. Parkinson died in 1862, and in November, 1864, Mr. Parkinson married Sarah A. Moore, of Old Belmont, youngest daughter of the late Col. John Moore, an old pioneer of this county. Three children were born of this union: Nannie Moore, the wife of Dr. Walter William Peck, of Darlington; Philip, who resides on the old homestead; and Elizabeth, who is now a student in the University of Wisconsin. The honored father died in his old home in Fayette, May 30, 1894, in his eighty-second year.

In many respects Mr. Parkinson was a remarkable man, having inherited from his ancestors a strong constitution, and he possessed a large and powerful frame, with a dignified and commanding presence. Thoroughly understanding the politics of the country, and possessing a remarkable memory, he was enabled to make valuable contributions to the State Historical Society. It was the universal sentiment, of the county and of the State, when Peter Parkinson passed away, that his example and influence had been such as to leave lasting marks upon the generations to come in the state he loved and served so well. The last Mrs. Parkinson survived her distinguished husband a few years, passing away on April 7, 1898.

CHARLES E. BONSON, proprietor of the Platteville bus line, one of the solid and substantial men of that place, is a representative of one of the old pioneer families of Grant county. His birth occurred in Platteville Dec. 12, 1850, and he is the son of John and Fannie S. (Stephens) Bonson.

The paternal grandfather of Charles E. Bonson, Dr. Richard Bonson, with his wife, Isabella, came to Platteville in 1836, being an old pioneer of Grant county. He engaged in smelting ore, and followed that occupation the remainder of his life. At his death he left two sons, Edward and John, the former of whom was killed by lightning when yet a young man.

John Bonson, the father of our subject, was born in England in 1827, and his wife in Cornwall, England, in 1833. Their marriage occurred in 1850. At that time John Bonson was a butcher, but later he purchased a farm, which he conducted until his death, in 1872; his wife is still living, residing in Platteville.

Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Bonson, four of whom died in infancy. Charles E. is our subject. Isabel is now the wife of Robert Chapman, of Kansas City, and has a family of seven children, Frank, Thomas, Emma, Cora, Faye, Ella and Fannie. Frank, born in Grant county, married Mary Churchill, and resides in Platteville, being assessor of the town; they have seven children, Harry E., Jessie, Nellie, Leta, Charles, Frank and Bessie. Annie L., born in Platteville, is now the wife of Cyrus Huntingdon, and has three sons, Alden, Jesse and Eddie. Nettie L. was born and educated in Platteville, receiving a fine musical training; she is now the wife of William Nehls, formerly a hardware dealer of Platteville, but now residing at Benton, Wis., and there are two daughters in this family, Nellie W. and Helen. Ella, a very charming young lady, was taken away by death when still a young girl.

The mother of our subject was a daughter of Michael and Mary (Cowlin) Stephens, who were both born in Cornwall, England, and came to this country in 1842, the father's twin brother, John, having made the trip one year previously. Ten years later, in 1852, they crossed the plains to California, working in the mines for some two years, after which they returned to Platteville, locating on a farm, where they remained the rest of their lives. Mrs. Stephens died in 1881, and Mr. Stephens in 1886. Of the ten children born to this worthy couple, William C., Jane J., John, Fannie S., Elizabeth A., Samuel C., Mary A., J. C., Emily and Ellen, five are still living. William C. married, and settled in Platteville, where he died in 1897. Jane J. is the wife of J. Stevens, and now resides in Platteville. John, now a resident of California, has a family of three daughters. Fannie S. was the mother of our subject. Elizabeth A. married John Trenary, and now resides at Belmont, Wis. Samuel C., born in England, is now a resident of Sioux City, Iowa, is married, and has two sons, Arthur and Frank, both residents of Laura, Neb. Mary A. married James Nicholas, and died leaving two daughters. Mrs. John McCabe and Mrs. Louella Graham, wife of Joel Graham, both of Platteville. Emily married Edwin Johnson, and died leaving two children, Edwin A. and Eva J., of Platteville. Ellen was born in Platteville in 1842, the only one of this family born in America; in September, 1876, she became the wife of Ambrose Tregenown, of Platteville; they have no family. Mr. Stephens, the father of this large family, was counted among the prominent pioneer citizens of the State, and was actively identified with the interests of Platteville, being very popular on account of his pleasant, genial manner, and many excellent qualities. In religious matters he was an earnest member of the M. E. Church, and in politics was first a Whig, when that party was merged into the Republican party becoming an ardent adherent of its principles.

Charles E. Bonson, our subject, was educated in the excellent schools of Platteville, after which he engaged in farming until 1882, when he embarked in his present enterprise. His stables are well equipped, and his vehicles thoroughly modern in every respect. By prompt service and an accommodating spirit Mr. Bonson has built up a very flourishing business, which is constantly on the increase.

In 1874 Charles E. Bonson married Miss Mary Hough, of Platteville, who was born in 1854, daughter of Ephraim Hough, one of the old pioneers of Grant county, and was a lady of culture and education. In 1898 Mrs. Bonson died, at her home in Platteville, leaving her husband and four children: Fannie I., born and educated in Platteville, married, in 1896, Scott Loveland, of Platteville, and has one daughter, Mary; John, born and educated in Platteville, a graduate of business college, is not married, and resides at home; Miss Ella, born and educated in Platteville, is attending the State Normal; Ora, born in Platteville, is still a student at the State Normal.

In December, 1898, Mr. Bonson married Mrs. Sarah R. Thomas, a most estimable lady, who is highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. Politically Mr. Bonson has always been identified with the Republican party, and socially he is connected with the lodge of Modern Woodmen of America.

WILDER B. JACOBS, of Avoca, Iowa county, is one of the most highly esteemed citizens, and an honored survivor of years of dangerous service in the war of the Rebellion. Worthily has he been placed in the position of commander of the Henry Lawton Post, No. 279, G. A. R., at Muscoda, Wisconsin.

Mr. Jacobs was born in the town of Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y., in November, 1843, a son of Gustavus and Harriet (Perkins) Jacobs, both of whom were born in the town of Rutland, Rutland Co., Vt. Gustavus Jacobs was a sergeant in the war of 1812, and his father, the grandfather of Wilder B., was a captain in the war of the Revolution, and perhaps the patriotic blood of his forefathers flowed with vigor in the veins of our subject, and produced the results which won for him such a record for gallantry. By trade Gustavus Jacobs was a ship carpenter, and his assistance was required in the building of the fleet by which Commodore Perry gained the victory of Lake Erie. For many years he followed his trade, and at the time of the birth of our subject he was engaged in boat building on the Genesee Valley canal at Mt. Morris, N. Y., but later removed to Angelica, Allegany county, but in 1855 the family, comprising the parents and three sons, came to Wisconsin and settled in Sauk county, the children being: Palmedus P., Burley A., and Wilder B. In the fall of 1855 another son, Henry, with his family, also came to Wisconsin, these being all who located in this State. The present survivors of the family are: Gustavus, Jr., Palmedus, Wilder B. and Hannah. The parents removed from Sauk county to Platteville, Wis., about 1869, where they died in 1875, the father surviving the mother by a few months. They were far advanced in life, the father aged ninety-four, and the mother but a few years younger. Both were highly esteemed and consistent members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Jacobs was a powerful man physically and intellectually, and was a profound student of the Bible, his knowledge of that Book being remarkable.

Wilder B. Jacobs passed his young manhood on the farm in Sauk county until his enlistment at Prairie du Sac, on Sept. 23, 1861, in the 6th Battery, Wis. Light Artillery, as a private, and remained in the service until July 3, 1865. This battery served in Mississippi, Missouri, Alabama and Georgia, and Mr. Jacobs participated, with his command, in these battles, which are enrolled upon the pages of American history as examples of bravery for which a nation must ever be proud: Island No. 10; siege of Corinth, in the spring of 1862; battle of Corinth, on Oct. 3-4, 1862; Port Gibson; Willow Springs; battle of Raymond; battle of Jackson; Champion Hills; siege of Vicksburg; Missionary Ridge; and battle of Nashville, and other minor engagements. This battery lost a large number of men; at the battle of Corinth alone it lost eighteen brave men, while twenty-three were wounded. As worthy of mention, Mr. Jacobs took part in all these battles, and was never absent from the battery when even a skirmish took place.

After the close of the war Mr. Jacobs was engaged by the Prairie du Chien division of the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad as a conductor, and in this position he remained for seventeen years. In 1879 he went to Minnesota and South Dakota, running in the same capacity from St. James, Minn., to Sioux Falls, S. Dak., for the following three years, and was then employed on the St. Paul system, running from Sanborn, Iowa, to Mitchell, S. Dak. In the fall of 1896 he came to Avoca, where he has since resided. His long and exhausting army service told upon his health, and it has never been satisfactory since, although he did not allow it to prevent a busy life. His brother, Henry Jacobs, was a member of Company K, 23d Reg. Wis. Vols., and died on the steamer "John H. Dickey," from a wound received at Arkansas Post, while his brother-in-law, Philander S. May, served in the same company, and also gave up his life.

Wilder B. Jacobs was married Sept. 1, 1865, to Miss Mary V. Parish, a native of the town of Muscoda, who has the distinction of being the oldest white native living in that place. Her father was a lieutenant in Company F, 44th Wis. V. I., and was honorably discharged in August, 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs have an adopted daughter, Lila C., who is the wife of Norman J. Luther, train dispatcher for the Great Northern railroad at Larimore, N. Dak., and they have two children, Mary E. and Norman W.

Mr. Jacobs assisted in the organization of Henry W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., in 1899, since which year he has held the post of commander, and is regarded with the highest esteem by his comrades, and is serving on the Department staff. He also assisted in organizing Henry W. Lawton, W. R. C., No. 34, in January, 1900. In his pleasant home in Avoca this brave soldier enjoys the rest "his valor won." Both he and wife are consistent members of the M. E. Church and most respected citizens.

ALBERT F. LICHTENWALNER, a hustling and energetic business man of Monroe, Green county, has been a tradesman of this city for something over twenty years, and in that time has achieved a decided success in the acquisition of a host of friends. He has been industrious and accommodating, with a commendable spirit of enterprise and a laudable ambition to lead in the lines in which he is engaged.

Mr. Lichtenwalner was born in Lehigh county, Penn., March 28, 1854, and is a son of Joseph S. and Mary Ann (Fenner) Lichtenwalner, both natives of that State. They were the parents of six sons and three daughters, and seven of these children are now living: Albert F.; Valentine, of Jefferson township; Mantana, of Monroe; Mary C., wife of Milton Keller, of Jefferson township; Simon, of Monroe; Nietta, wife of George Whitehead, of Jefferson township; and Harvey, of Westfield, Wis. The father was a farmer, and came to Wisconsin in 1868, locating in Clarno township, Green county, where he bought a farm of seventy-six acres, and added more land to it until he had 125 acres. This farm continued to be his home until his death in 1885. His widow still survives, and has her home in Monroe. She is a member of the German Reformed Church, while her husband was a Lutheran. His father, Joseph Lichtenwalner, father of Joseph S., and grandfather of Albert F., was born in Pennsylvania, and came of German ancestry, the family history beginning on the river Rhine, and dating back, in America, to about the year 1735. Barnet Fenner, the father of Mary Ann Fenner, mentioned above, was a native of Pennsylvania, where he was a farmer and reared twelve children, all of whom lived to be married.

Albert F. Lichtenwalner spent the first fourteen years of his life in his native State, and then came to Wisconsin. He had his education in the common schools, and was reared on the farm. When a young man of eighteen he began to teach school, and taught two terms with fair success. Very early in life, however, he had determined to be a druggist, and accordingly began the study of pharmacy in Monroe, almost before he had attained his majority. He mastered the details of the business in a most thorough and competent manner, and in 1878, in company with F. K. Studley, bought out his former employer, C.

E. Adams, under the firm name of Studley & Lichtenwalner. In 1887 Mr. Studley disposed of his interest to Mr. Lichtenwalner, who has since conducted the establishment without a partner. He has done well, and keeps a full and complete line of drug goods and drug appliances, such as would be found in a well-kept and prosperous pharmacy, and has also for many years carried a well-selected stock of groceries.

On Feb. 4, 1877, Mr. Lichtenwalner married Miss Mary C. McCamant, daughter of John and Adaline (Wells) McCamant. No children have brightened their home. Mrs. Lichtenwalner is a very popular woman, and a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Lichtenwalner has various fraternal associations, belonging to the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W., and the Modern Woodmen, and politically is a staunch Republican. He was city clerk four years, and served as alderman from the 4th ward three years. He lives on Liberty street, and has had his home in Monroe since 1874.

CHRIST F. HARTWIG, residing on a fine farm of 400 acres four miles north of Juda, Green county, is a son of William Ludwig and Sophia (Hebberman) Hartwig, who were born in Delitzsch, Germany, and were married in 1849. They came to Wisconsin in 1855. They were the parents of four children, of whom the eldest, (1) Christ F., is our subject. (2) William, born in 1853, married Mary Ansmeir, and died in 1887. (3) Ferdinand, born in 1855, married Mary Ausmus, and is now dead. (4) Mary, born in 1865, is now the wife of Ferdinand Ausmus, a farmer in Sylvester. William Ludwig Hartwig was born in 1825, and died in 1890. Mrs. Sophia Hartwig, his widow, was born in 1824, and is still living in Juda, much respected by all who know her.

Christ F. Hartwig was born Feb. 4, 1850, in Delitzsch, Germany, and was about five years old when he came to this country with his parents. He has followed farming all his life, and has been an active and industrious man. Part of the home place, which was taken by his father in 1858, is included in his own extensive landed possessions. On Jan. 15, 1874, Mr. Hartwig was married to Miss Libbie, daughter of Phillip Henn, of the town of Jefferson, a German by birth. This union has been blessed with six children: Lydia, who is living with her grandmother, Mrs. Sophia Hartwig, in Juda; and Minnie, Clara, Edward, George and Lillie, all at home.

Mr. Hartwig was reared on the paternal estate, and acquired his education in the common schools. Beginning life a poor boy, he has worked hard, taken advantage of every opportunity, and prospered, now owning 400 acres of fine land in the town of Sylvester, which is worth at the very lowest calculation eighty dollars an acre. There are fine buildings and ample equipments on the place, and high grade and profitable farming is the order. Politically Mr. Hartwig is a Republican, and has served his town as school director and in other local offices. He has been a consistent member of the Evangelical Church at Juda, Wis., for many years. He has an unquestioned standing as a progressive farmer, and an honest and upright man. Our subject was named after his grandfather, Christian Hartwig, who came to this country about thirty-five years ago, and died in the town of Sylvester soon after his arrival, at the age of seventy-five years.

FREDERICK BEILHARZ, who, as a blacksmith and wagonmaker, was for many years prominently identified with the industrial and business interests of Cassville, Grant county, has made his home in that place since 1855, locating there when it was a village of about a dozen houses. As a public-spirited citizen he was actively connected with its early development and progress, and after a useful and well-spent life he is now living retired, enjoying a well-earned rest.

Mr. Beilharz was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, Oct. 17, 1831, a son of Christian and Barbara (Kubbler) Beilharz, who spent their entire lives in that country. In their family were eight children, namely: Mrs. Christina Christ, a resident of Buffalo, N. Y.; Frederick; Mrs. Barbara Hunter, of Germany; Mrs. Christ, who died in Clayton county, Iowa; Fredericka, a resident of Germany; Dora, who resides at the old home in the Fatherland; Mrs. Caroline Hoover, of Cassville, Wis.; and John, who came to Cassville in 1859, and three years later enlisted in the 27th Iowa V. I., with which he served three years, and is now living at the Soldiers Home in Iowa.

Frederick Beilharz was the first of the family to come to America. He sailed from Rotterdam in April, 1852, and after a long and tedious voyage of fifty-eight days landed in New York, June 17, whence he proceeded at once to Buffalo, N. Y. In that city he worked at his trade for two years before coming to Wisconsin. In 1854, at the land office in Mineral Point, Wis., he entered a tract of land in Cassville township, Grant county, and immediately located thereon, devoting his time and energies to its improvement and cultivation until his removal to Cassville in 1855. Since then he has made his home on the block where he now resides. Erecting a shop, he successfully engaged in blacksmithing and wagon-making for many years, but has now laid aside the cares and responsibilities of business life, and is living retired, enjoying the fruits of former toil. Besides the property he owns in Cassville, he still has a good farm in Cassville township, which he rents.

In 1855, at Cassville, Mr. Beilharz was united in marriage with Miss Mary Munch, a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, and a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Rietz) Munch, who, on coming to this country, first located in Hoboken, N. J., and in 1855 became residents of Cassville, Wis. Later Mr. Munch, who was a farmer by occupation, moved to Emmetsburg, Iowa, where both he and his wife died at an advanced age, she being nearly ninety-two at the time of her death. Their children were Mrs. Mary Beilharz; Mrs. Elizabeth Engler and Mrs. Catharine Adrain, both residents of Emmetsburg, Iowa; Lizzie, who died in that State; and Henry, who died in Whittemore, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Beilharz have four children: (1) Mrs. Lusetta Eiseneggerich, of Dubuque, Iowa, has three children, Freddie, Lucy and Arthur. (2) Fritz, a blacksmith of Cassville, married Lucy Bishop, and they have two children, Fred and Emma. (3) Mrs. Mary Shatkin, whose husband is a merchant of Minneapolis, Minn., has four children, Henry, Arnold, Edwin and Fred. (4) Henry, also a blacksmith of Cassville, married Lizzie Gallebrant, and they have three children, Ray, Mabel and Blanche.

In his political affiliations Mr. Beilharz is a Republican, having always voted with that party since its organization, and he is now efficiently serving as a member of the city council. He is one of the prominent pioneers of Cassville, and is still one of its leading and influential citizens. Socially he is connected with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and religiously is a member of the Lutheran Church.

DAVID E. JACOBS. The life of this influential and honored citizen of Iowa county, who at present fills the office of county treasurer, has been filled with more than the customary measure of adventure and change. His father migrated from New York to Ohio early in life, and later removed to Canton, Fulton Co., Ill. There he married Matilda Emery, a native of Ohio, descended from one of the German-American families of Pennsylvania, a sturdy stock, whose branches have spread all over the central West, leaving everywhere the impress of keen acumen and sterling honesty.

The "Colonel," as he is commonly addressed, has a deep hold upon the hearts and respect of the community. He was born in Fulton county, Ill., Feb. 9, 1845, grew to early manhood on his father's farm, and his natural bent was toward an agricultural life. The outbreak of the Rebellion, however, stirred every patriotic impulse of his nature, and on June 2, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, 65th Ill. V. I. On Sept. 15, following, he was captured at Harper's Ferry, and remained a prisoner of war until the following spring, when he was exchanged. He was at once attached to the command of Gen. Sherman on the Georgia campaign, and took part in the memorable battles at Franklin and Nashville, Tenn., as well as in the preliminary campaign against Atlanta. His department commander was Gen. Thomas, the "Rock of Chickamauga." He participated in the annihilation of Hood's army, and followed its shattered remnants as far as Clifton, Tenn. From that point the command to which he was attached was ordered to join the forces of Gen. Sherman, but to proceed by way of Washington, and was present at President Lincoln's second inauguration, afterward proceeding South as far as Raleigh, North Carolina.

After being mustered out Mr. Jacobs, in common with other volunteers, returned home, to be greeted with laudation and glad acclaim. A spirit of restless activity, however, still possessed him. For some years he made his home at Galva, Ill., going thence to Chicago, and later to Shelbyville, Mo. From the latter point he returned to Galva, where for several years he successfully conducted a stock farm near Bishop's Hill. For twenty years he was in the employ of McNeil & Higgins, of Chicago, as a traveling salesman. For some sixteen years preceding his first election to the county treasurership, in 1898, his home was at Mineral Point. In 1900 he was re-elected by a majority of 1,627 votes, the largest ever received by a county officer in Iowa county.

As has been pointed out, the life of Mr. Jacobs has been eventful; it has been no less successful. His courage has been tested, and found not wanting; his energy is of the sort which never tires; his shrewd native ability is rarely deceived; and his fidelity to every trust reposed in him has ever been beyond question. Of a genial and generous nature, he readily wins friends, whom he keeps by virtue of his strong character and uncompromising fidelity. In Grand Army circles he is well known and prominent, being past commander of George H. Legate Post, No. 125, Mineral Point; has served as aid-de-camp to the National Commander; and has been repeatedly chosen a delegate to National Encampments.

Mr. Jacobs was married, Dec. 2, 1867, to Miss Mary L. Welton, of Galva, Ill., and to their union have been born four sons and two daughters: Clyde W., Jessie, Myron R., Nellie M., Ernest R. and Arthur V. Mrs. Jacobs' father, Seymour Welton, died while in the United States service during the Civil war, as a member of the 6th Missouri Battery, in which two of his sons, Virgil and Nelson, both attained the rank of sergeant.

M. M. RICE, one of the prominent farmers of Marion township, Grant county, is one of the pioneers of that locality, having located there in 1854.

Mr. Rice was born in Allegany county, N. Y., in 1850, a son of Moors and Clarissa (Phillips) Rice, natives of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, respectively. They were reared in New Hampshire, in 1854 came to Grant county, where the father opened up government land and speculated largely in real estate, paying $1.25 an acre for the fine farm adjoining the farm now occupied by our subject. Later in life he removed to Boscobel, where his death occurred in 1879, his wife surviving him until 1883. In politics he was a Republican, and he was honored by being chosen to the office of commissioner in Marion. To himself and wife were born eight children: Myra, Mrs. Rieks, died in Boscobel in 1887; Oliver A. is a resident of Boscobel; Lucy, Mrs. A. D. Reed, died in 1891; Betsy, Mrs. Rieks, is a resident of Boscobel; Benjamin died in Boscobel in August, 1892, from the effects of wounds received in the war, he having served in a Wisconsin regiment; Anson enlisted, and died at Nashville, Tenn., in 1864; Clarissa is now Mrs. Deyoe, of Wisconsin; M. M. is our subject.

M. M. Rice was but four years old when the family came to Wisconsin, and so has grown up with the State. His farm now consists of 196 acres, in a fine state of cultivation, a part of which was comprised in the old homestead. Mr. Rice devotes a part of his attention to the growing of honey, having ninety-five hives, and his product commands a high price on account of its excellence.

In 1872 Mr. Rice married, in Marion township, Emma Rieks, daughter of Reuben and Emrancy (Ortrander) Rieks, natives of New York, and early pioneers of Wisconsin. The father is still living, residing at Boscobel; the mother died April 29, 1895. To our subject and wife six children have been born: Leta, now Mrs. Tuffley, of Marion township; Albert, attending college at Beloit, Wis.; George, who is married and resides in Marion, operating a cheese factory; and Harry, Ora and Warren, still at home.

Politically Mr. Rice is a Republican, has been a member of the town board, and chairman of the Marion township board. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Congregational Church of Boscobel, in which Mr. Rice is a deacon, and they are well known and highly esteemed throughout the county where they have resided, practically, all their lives.

F. M. CRONIN, M. D., one of the very prominent physicians of Lancaster, Grant county, was born in Platteville, same county, June 16, 1846, the only child born to Dr. Edward and Emily (Moore) Cronin.

Dr. Edward Cronin was born in Philadelphia, Penn., Feb. 22, 1822, and died in Platteville, Grant Co., Wis., in 1894. His elementary education was acquired in his native city, but he afterward attended, and in 1842 was graduated from, the Literary Department of the University of Pennsylvania. He then entered upon the study of medicine, under Prof. John K. Mitchell, of Jefferson Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in 1844, and the same year came to Wisconsin and settled down to practice in Platteville, Grant county. Here he secured a large list of patients, and was quite successful in his treatment of them, continuing in practice until 1850, when, like thousands of others throughout the country, he was attracted to the newly discovered gold fields of the Pacific slope. He reached Sacramento during the prevalence of the cholera scourge of that year, and his professional services were at once eagerly demanded. He remained in the city until the epidemic was conquered, and then sought the Fraser river region, tarrying there until 1853, when he returned to the States and located at Galena, Ill. There he resided until 1860, when, with a desire to better qualify himself in the more modern system of practice in his profession, he returned to Philadelphia and attended an additional course of lectures at Jefferson College. After practicing in Platteville, Wis., until 1864, he went to Philadelphia and practiced until 1867, when he again came West, and followed his profession at Mineral Point, Iowa Co., Wis., until 1872, when he settled in Platteville, there passing the remainder of his life. Dr. Edward Cronin was a man of great energy and force of character, was an able and successful physician, and a truly public-spirited citizen, and his amiable wife, who survives him, still has her residence in Platteville. She is a daughter of Col. Moore.

Dr. F. M. Cronin, when young, owing to the frequent removals of his parents, received his literary education at various places, attending at Sinsinawa Mound, Platteville (at the academy under Prof. Guernsey), and the Northwest grammar school in Philadelphia, from which latter he was graduated. He began the study of medicine under his father, and was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1876. He commenced active practice at Platteville in conjunction with his father, and later went to Texas as surgeon for the Texas & Pacific Railway Co., with headquarters at Dallas, continuing as such three years. He returned to Wisconsin, locating at Mineral Point, whence he removed to Cassville, and in 1891 settled in Lancaster, where his professional ability and skill were at once recognized, and where he has since been favored with an extensive patronage.

The Doctor married Miss Abby Johnson, of Platteville, a daughter of Edwin Johnson, and this union has been blessed with two children, one of whom, Frank M., is deceased; the survivor is a daughter named Emily. The Doctor is a Knight Templar Mason, and is also a Knight of Pythias. Politically his sympathies are with the Democratic party, but he has never taken any very active part in political affairs. He is very highly esteemed as a physician, and as a citizen, and he and his wife move in the best social circles of Lancaster.

F. M. Cronin M.D.

JOHN H. STEINHOFF, a very successful stock and dairy farmer of Harrison township, Grant county, has achieved very satisfactory results by industry, thrift and integrity, and holds an enviable position in the business world because he is an upright and honorable man, not afraid of hard work, and willing to meet every engagement.

Mr. Steinhoff was born in Platteville, Grant Co., Wis., Feb. 3, 1867, son of William F. and Amelia (Sue) Steinhoff, both natives of Hanover, Germany, where the father was born in 1832, and the mother in 1831. They married in Germany, and remained in their native land until 1857, in which year they came, by way of New Orleans and the Mississippi river, to Platteville. They crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel, and the voyage was tedious and protracted to a degree. They bought a small home in Platteville and occupied it for some time, leaving it to go on a rented farm in the town of Belmont, Lafayette county, on which they lived for several years. Mr. Steinhoff rented another farm in Elk Grove, that county, where they made their home for several years, finally buying the home farm on which their son, John H., may now be found. It contained 150 acres, which Mr. Steinhoff increased to 191 acres, and there he lived until 1894, when he moved into Platteville, where he purchased the house and lot where he now resides. He made many important improvements on the farm, remodeling the old home in many ways, and putting up a large barn in 1892. In 1883 his estimable wife passed away. She was the mother of thirteen children, twelve of whom survive, one son, Henry, dying when two days old. Lena, born in Germany, is living with her father. William was born in Harrison township, and is now a farmer there; he married Annie Wachter, of Illinois, and has one daughter, Clara. August, born in Platteville in 1860, married Miss Minnie Miller, and is a farmer in the town of Harrison. Minnie was born in Platteville in 1862, married Henry J. Opperman, of Clayton county, Iowa, and lives on a farm in Iowa; they have two children, Albert and Irvin. Mary, born in 1864, married Albert Nehls, and lives in Platteville; they have one son, Freddie. Emma resides with her father. Annie, born in 1871, is now the wife of Peter Karman, and has three children, Bernard, Walter and Mabel. Frederick, born in Elk Grove in 1873, married Flora Golmar, and lives on his farm in the town of Platteville, with his wife and two children, Guerdon and Margaret. Lizzie lives with her father. Miss Amelia lives with her father. Frank, born in 1878, was educated in the Platteville Business College; he is unmarried.

John H. Steinhoff acquired a very fair education in the schools of Platteville and Elk Grove, and his life has been spent to a very large degree on the farm where he grew up. He is a thorough farmer, and brings to the cultivation of the soil good judgment of business opportunities and unflagging industry. In September, 1896, Mr. Steinhoff and Miss Laura Kliebenstein, daughter of August and Margaret Kliebenstein, were united in marriage. Her parents were born in Grant county, of German parentage, and Lewis Kliebenstein, her grandfather, was an old pioneer settler in Grant county. Mrs. Steinhoff was born there in July, 1873, finished her education in the Platteville Normal, and is a cultured and scholarly woman; she was one of the successful teachers of Grant county for some five years, until her marriage. After their marriage the young couple purchased the old Steinhoff homestead, which now contains, by recent addition of thirty-nine acres, 230 acres. They have one son, Edward Loraine, who was born May 10, 1899. Mrs. Steinhoff lost her father when she was a small child, but her mother and a brother are still living. The latter, Edward Kliebenstein, of St. Cloud, Minn., is engaged as clerk in the shoe business.

Mr. and Mrs. Steinhoff are members of the German Lutheran Church, as were their parents before them. He is a Republican, following the footsteps of his father also in this respect. His father was a member of the school board and a supervisor for a number of terms, and John H. has been township treasurer for the last five years, and also clerk of the school board. Socially he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Our subject is one of those enterprising and active young men who are bound to come to the front in local affairs through native honesty and manifest ability. He and his excellent wife command the respect and confidence of all who know them.

G. E. REAR, one of the old settlers of the towns of Adams and York, Green county, resides in his handsome and well appointed country home, six miles southeast of Blanchardville, and eighteen miles northwest of Monroe. The farm contains 174 acres, and is counted one of the finest places in this part of the State.

Mr. Rear was born in Waldrus, Norway, June 23, 1845, and is a son of Holver E. and Julia Rear, who came to Dane county, Wis., in 1852. Two years later they removed to the town of Adams, Green county, making a location on Sections 10 and 11. They were the parents of a family of eight children: Easton and Clayton, both living in Iowa; Ole, of the town of Adams; Oliver, of Minnesota; Bettie, who is now deceased; Mary, deceased; Carrie, wife of Andrew Hauge, of Minnesota; and G. E., whose name introduces this article.

G. E. Rear was married May 16, 1866, to Miss Annie Avok, who was born in Norway, daughter of Nels Avok. This union was blessed with the following children: Julia, born July 21, 1870, married Ever Coldron, and died Sept. 10, 1897; Henry, born April 28, 1874, is at home, and is unmarried; Albert was born April 27, 1877; Caroline, June 4, 1880; Annie, Jan. 24, 1883. Mrs. Rear died Jan. 20, 1890, and was buried in the cemetery connected with the Lutheran Church in Adams township, of which she was a devout member. She was a hard-working woman, a good wife and a kind mother, and her memory survives in many loving and grateful hearts.

Mr. Rear was married Sept. 1, 1890, to Miss Carrie Rood, of the town of York, a daughter of Ole and Julia Rood, who were born in Norway. To this union have come the following children: Oscar, born in 1891; Gena, Sept. 6, 1892; Alma, Aug. 10, 1894; Gilmon, Jan. 20, 1896; Bennett, Oct. 4, 1897; Clifford, May 20, 1899; and Eornes Selmer, May 2, 1901.

Mr. Rear is a Republican, and has proved himself a good citizen. In the town of York he has served as clerk, school director and assessor, filling these positions for many years. His home place consists of 174 acres, and he owns a half section of choice land in South Dakota. Mr. Rear is an energetic and progressive farmer, engaged in general farming, stock raising and cheese making, for which latter branch he furnishes the milk of some twenty-five cows daily. Well supplied with this world's goods, and commanding the confidence of the community in which he lives to a marked degree, his present circumstances present a great contrast to the conditions of poverty under which he began life. Industry, integrity and a readiness to embrace the opportunity that agriculture in southwestern Wisconsin presented in his early life have lifted him to his present enviable position as a prosperous and wealthy farmer.

CHARLES ALLEN ARMSTRONG, M. D., Boscobel, Grant county, is a rising young physician, and one who is well fitted for his work, not only by a careful and extended training at school, but by a natural aptitude, and the teachings and example of his father, who was one of the most noted members of his profession in the State.

Dr. Armstrong was born in Lima, Rock Co., Wis., Nov. 30, 1862, and obtained his early education at Boscobel, being the only graduate from the high school in 1880. He spent the fall of that year at Madison in attendance at the State University, and in the winter taught school in Blue River. The fall of the following year he entered Milton College, where he spent two years, again entering the University of Wisconsin in 1883, as a member of the class of 1886, Ancient Classical Course. He left the University owing to the destruction of Science Hall by fire, in December, 1884, as his pre-medical work was all laboratory at that time, and at once entered Rush Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in 1887. He came back to Boscobel after his graduation, and entered into the practice of medicine. In 1888 he spent some time at Black Earth, attending to the practice of Dr. Kester during his extended absence. In 1889 he came back to Boscobel, and entered into partnership with Dr. L. G. Armstrong, with whom he was associated until 1895. Since that year he has been alone in practice.

Dr. Armstrong and Miss Matie E. Sprague were married March 5, 1890. At the time of her marriage Mrs. Armstrong was living in Cortland, Neb. She was born at Eagle, Wis., a daughter of Bingham and Elizabeth (Hurst) Sprague, and in 1880 accompanied her family to Nebraska, where her father and brothers George and William are settled. The Doctor and his wife are the parents of two sons: Roy Allen, born April 1, 1891; and Robert W., born Aug. 19, 1896. Mrs. Armstrong is a lady of many charms and graces. The Doctor is a Republican, and was mayor of the city in 1892. He is a charter member of Alpha Lambda Chapter of the Sigma Chi Fraternity of the University of Wisconsin. His Masonic education has been acquired in Grant Lodge, No. 169, A. F. & A. M., of which he is a past master, and Boscobel Chapter, No. 52. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias of Fennimore, Wis., is a member of the I. O. F., the K. O. T. M., the M. W. of A., and in 1901 was elected head physician of the Modern Woodmen, having been a member of the various head camps for eleven years. He is the surgeon of the St. Paul railroad in this division. For several years he was surgeon of the Wisconsin Division, Sons of Veterans. Dr. Armstrong is a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society and of the Central Medical Society, and is highly respected in his calling.

HERMAN P. DAILEY, a skillful and highly successful photographer of Beloit, Rock county, has caught the loftier ideals of his calling, and his work is warm with artistic glow. His pictures are not only true to nature, but they are refined with the touch of culture, and while they are a lasting delight in that they preserve cherished form and feature, they also keep the light of the smile and the sparkle of the eye, so that every photograph has a voice of affection for friend and acquaintance.

Mr. Dailey was born in Washington county, N. Y., Sept. 7, 1866, and is a son of Perry and Polly (Dake) Dailey, both natives of New York. His parents had a family of ten children, all but one now living: Henry, of Woodstock, Ill.; Elvin, of Detroit, Mich.; Charles, of Janesville, Wis.; Ida, widow of William Wilson, who has her home in Huron, S. Dak.; Fred, of Chicago; Arthur, of Madison, Wis.; Delia, wife of Henry Simdraker, of Woodstock, Ill.; Herman P., of Beloit; and William, of Greenwood, Ill. Perry Dailey owned the famous Sandy Hill Stone Quarry at Sandy Hill, N. Y., which he operated until he came to Illinois, in 1868. He located on a farm near Greenwood, in McHenry county, and engaged in its cultivation for a number of years. In 1888 he gave up active farming, and made his home in the village of Greenwood, where he is still living. He has become quite an extensive dealer in real estate, and owns most of the business houses in Greenwood. Mrs. Dailey died in 1895, at the age of sixty-seven. She was a Baptist in her religious convictions. Mr. Dailey enlisted in the Union army, and served three years as a soldier. Politically he is a Republican, and has held various town offices. His father, Henry Dailey, was a native of New York, of Scottish descent, and lived to see ninety-three years. He reared nine children. He was engaged in the livery business. Henry P. Dake, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was of Scottish descent, and lived to be ninety-four years old. He had six children.

Herman P. Dailey lived on his father's farm near Greenwood until he reached the age of fifteen. He was a bright student in the local school, and was sent to Valparaiso, Ind., to take a year's instruction at the Normal, after which he had a year at the Chicago University, and another year at Beloit College. He began photographic work at Chicago, where he spent three years in a studio, and with the experience thus gained he in 1893 came to Beloit and opened a studio for himself. His excellent work attracted attention, and he has gone steadily onward since coming to this city, with an ever-increasing patronage and a widening circle of friends. Mr. Dailey is an artist of fine ability, who thoroughly understands his calling, and his business is growing on his hands every day. Personally he is an affable and agreeable gentleman, who enjoys the confidence and esteem of all his acquaintances.

Mr. Dailey and Miss Abigail Burprey were united in marriage Nov. 9, 1890, and they have one daughter, Marian, born Aug. 6, 1900. Mrs. Dailey is a daughter of Charles and Helen (Day) Burprey, and is a lady of many gifts and graces. He is a Republican, and takes a deep interest in the welfare of the country.

JAMES JONES well deserves honorable mention among those industrious and useful citizens of Jordan township, Green county, whose busy lives have contributed so much to the moral and material welfare of the community where he is now living. He was born in Dutchess county, N. Y., Dec. 2, 1856, and is a son of Peter and Margaret (Sweany) Jones, both born and reared in Ireland. His parents came to this country about 1848, and were married in the State of New York in 1855. To them were born two sons, James and John, the latter of whom, born Jan. 17, 1865, is now a traveling salesman for the Heinz Pickle Company, a well-known Chicago house. Peter Jones, who was born about 1827, died in Monroe, where he had been living some time in retirement, in 1890. Mrs. Margaret Jones, who was born about 1827, died in 1896.

James Jones married early in life, becoming the husband of Miss Mary Knight, of the town of Adams, April 13, 1877. Mrs. Jones is the daughter of John and Margaret (Conway) Knight, of Irish birth and rearing, and among the very earliest settlers of the town of Adams. Mr. and Mrs. Knight had the following family: Thomas, Mary (who is Mrs. Jones), Ann, John, William, Michael, James, Katie, Margaret and Dennis. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of the following children: Margaret, born Jan. 20, 1880, is a teacher in the Green county public schools; John, born June 14, 1881; Katie, born March 16, 1884, is a bookkeeper and stenographer in Monroe; Peter, born Nov. 20, 1885; Mary, born May 24, 1890; Edna, born Dec. 28, 1896; James C., born Sept. 26, 1898.

Mr. Jones was born on the farm, where he was reared, and had his education in the district school. Starting out a poor boy, he selected farming as his life work, and by dint of industry and the help of a good character he has accumulated a very handsome competence. He owns a choice farm of 240 acres, well improved and provided with a very creditable home and fine barns, and has established more than a local reputation as an upright and honorable man. Mr. Jones is engaged in both general and dairy farming, being a partner in a cheese factory which is located on his land. His various enterprises, which have been conducted with a business management of a high order, have met with success, and his standing in the community in which he lives is very high. As a farmer he is enlightened and progressive, and as a stock raiser he seeks the more valuable strains, and his stock go to market in the first grade. In local and town affairs Mr. Jones takes a leading part, and is a staunch Democrat. He has served as school director and judge of elections many years, and is at present on the town board. His children are bright and pleasant young people and show careful home training. Mr. Jones and his wife are both members of the Catholic Church, and their good lives, kind hearts and unassuming nature do no discredit to their religious profession.

GEORGE W. McPHERSON was born in the town of Ellenboro, Grant county, in April, 1847, the second son of John and Sarah (Star) McPherson.

Our subject's father was born in Maine, and his mother in Ireland. They were married in the State of Maine, and coming to Grant county in 1845, with five children, made their home on a tract of wild land in the town of Ellenboro, entering 160 acres by pre-emption, which in time were thoroughly improved. A log house furnished the first home for the family. In 1850 Mr. McPherson crossed the Plains with an ox-team to seek his fortune in the gold fields of California. After a two years' stay in that distant land he came back to Grant county, and he died in 1856. Mrs. McPherson was left a widow with five living children out of ten who had come to them, the others dying in childhood. (1) Thomas, their eldest son, was born in Maine in 1845, and married Miss Jane Downing, a lady of Ellenboro. Previous to his marriage he was a Union soldier, in the 45th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war, after which he went to Arizona, living there sixteen years. Coming back to Grant county, he married, and was a merchant in Ellenboro for two years before going to Oklahoma, where he owned a farm at the time of his death, in 1895. His widow and three children survive him, Jessie, Lloyd and Lela. (2) George W. is our subject. (3) Sarah Jane, born in 1849, died in 1865. (4) John A., born in Grant county in 1850, acquired his early education in the district school, later attended the State Normal at Platteville, and for several years taught school. He married Miss Libbie Elliot, of Hawkeye, Iowa, where he settled, engaging in business up to the time of his death, in July, 1890. (5) James A., born in Grant county in 1854, the youngest of the family, grew up at the old homestead, which he now owns, and married Miss Austa Clark, daughter of Henry and Hannah Clark, a long established family in Grant county. One daughter, Alpha C., has been born to them.

George W. McPherson grew to manhood on the old homestead, and took charge of his mother's farm when old enough to assume such a responsibility, remaining with her until her death, in June, 1877. Mrs. McPherson was well known in this community for her generous Christian acts. With her husband she belonged to the Episcopal Church. In 1879 George McPherson homesteaded land in Kansas, and the next year he crossed the Plains to the silver and copper mines of Arizona, going by way of San Francisco. Some three years later he came back to the old home in Wisconsin, and resumed agricultural life. In 1887 he married Miss Carrie Clark, a daughter of Henry and Hannah Clark, noted above, who came from Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1845, and settled in the town of Ellenboro. Her father was born in 1812 in Trumbull county, Ohio, and her mother in 1820 in Mercer county, Penn., where they were married, and thence presently came to their Wisconsin home. Both died in the month of August, 1879, leaving a family of seven children, of whom Mrs. McPherson is the fourth in order of birth. She was born in February, 1856. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McPherson settled in the village of Ellenboro, on a part of the old Clark homestead, where he erected a fine modern house in 1894. To this union has been born one daughter, who died in infancy.

In politics Mr. McPherson has always been a Republican, has held the office of chairman of the town board for nine years, and has been school treasurer for fifteen years. Fraternally he is a Modern Woodman, belonging to the Camp at Ellenboro. Mr. and Mrs. McPherson are prominent and highly respected people, and are much esteemed by all who know them.

GEORGE HENRY PENGRA, residing on his fine farm about four miles north of Juda, Green county, is a son of the late George S. and Maria (Waltz) Pengra. The history of the family in America antedates the Revolution, the Pengra brothers coming to the Colonies at an early date.

The father of our subject was born in the town of Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., April 12, 1821, and died July 1, 1890. He was of Welsh and English descent, being a son of Moses and Sarah (Johns) Pengra, the latter, a native of Wales, coming to this country when two years old. Moses Pengra was a native of Vermont. His father, Marshall Pengra, came to the colonies in the early part of the eighteenth century, and settled in Massachusetts. Moses Pengra, grandfather of George H., was born Jan. 11, 1799, and married Sarah Johns March 25, 1818. To them were born the following children: Marshall; George S.; Bynon J., of Crook county, Oregon; Honor E., the widow of Benjamin Herring, of Iowa; William, who died in Oregon; and Elisiph, who died in childhood.

George S. Pengra, whose name occurs above, was married in 1848 to Maria Waltz. She was born Nov. 10, 1827, and came of Dutch, Scottish and Irish ancestry through her parents, Alpheus and Jane (Ferguson) Waltz, of New York. Peter Waltz, her grandfather, who was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, came to the Colonies from Holland when a boy. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Pengra came directly to Wisconsin, to settle in Green county. To them came the following children: (1) Wallace A., born Oct. 17, 1851, is a farmer in the town of Sylvester; (2) George H. is our subject proper; (3) William S., born May 26, 1856, died unmarried in 1881 in Cheyenne, Wyoming.

George H. Pengra was born Dec. 23, 1853, and married Oct. 5, 1876, Miss Anna M., a daughter of William F. and Catherine (Gillon) Johnson, a prominent family in the town of Sylvester. To this union one child has come, Stella May, born Aug. 22, 1883.

Mr. Pengra was reared on his father's farm, and obtained his education in the district school. When twenty years old he began teaching in the public schools, and followed that profession for eight years, teaching in the winter and farming in the summer. Mr. Pengra is a thorough farmer, and has a farm of 360 acres, in which his brother W. A. holds a half interest, with fine buildings and ample improvements. He is regarded as one of the substantial citizens of Green county, a man of character and standing, straightforward, and has a multitude of friends.

Mr. Pengra was reared a Republican, but holds to Prohibition principles. He served as town clerk for three years, is the present chairman of the town, and has also been school director for sixteen years. In religion Mr. Pengra holds that he who lives up to the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you," has all the religion that any one can have or need have. And on this belief he is willing to rest the future with Him who knew neither denomination nor creed.

GEORGE M. CRULL, a young and hustling stock farmer of the town of Harrison, Grant county, has already won a prominent place among the well-known agriculturists of the southwestern part of the State, and has attained an enviable standing as a fair-dealing and upright man.

Mr. Crull was born on his present homestead Nov. 4, 1854, a son of George W. and Mary (Kyle) Crull, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. His father was born Jan. 1, 1814, and his mother Dec. 22, 1823. When a young man George W. Crull journeyed from Ohio to Illinois on horseback, and very shortly entered Wisconsin, settling in the town of Harrison, where he was a miner for some time. In 1845, under James K. Polk, then President of the United States, he secured a farm of eighty acres of government land in Harrison, and added eighty acres to this by subsequent purchases from the government, making a farm of 160 acres, which was his home during his remaining years. There he cleared over one hundred acres of land. He raised a log cabin, which he occupied until he was able to build a better house, in 1869. He died in 1893, and his wife in February, 1898, in Iowa; they were both buried in the cemetery in the town of Harrison, known as the Travis cemetery. He was a member of the town board, and held other town offices, and they were honest Christian people, highly respected. He was a strong Democrat. Mr. and Mrs. Crull had ten children, eight of whom are living: Flora died when thirteen years old, and Washington died when a child. Lizzie, born Oct. 17, 1849, is now the wife of Silas V. Hoff, of Fair Haven, Wash.; they have five children, Will, Ida, George, Frank, and Irvin. Sarah, born Dec. 15, 1852, is Mrs. Frank Moore, of Short Reed, British Columbia, and is the mother of four children, Jennie, George, Mary and Lydia.

George M. is the subject of this article. Amanda, born Oct. 31, 1856, is Mrs. R. Hubbard, of Lancaster, Wis., and has six children, Myrtle, Jessie, Mary, Artie, Hazle and Glen. William J., born in November, 1858, went to British Columbia, and married Lucy Shepherd, who died in May, 1900, leaving him with three children, Gladys, Stanley and Albert; he has a ranch at Alberta, Canada. Charles T., born in February, 1861, went to Colorado in 1883, and there married Miss Phoebe Longwell, and is a miner in the gold fields; they have a family of three children, James, Ruth and ———. Levi, born Feb. 21, 1864, married Sarah Heslup, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has one daughter, Mary. Clara S., born in December, 1866, married Christopher Heslup, of Dubuque, and resides on a farm in Iowa; they have five children, Gertrude, Dora, Mabel, Thomas and Ethel.

George W. Crull was the son of Charles and Elizabeth Crull, who died in Ohio. Most of his brothers and sisters settled in Illinois. His wife, Mary (Kyle), was the daughter of Joab and Elizabeth Kyle, who drove a team from Mercer county, Penn., to Platteville, Wis., where they settled. He was a blacksmith. Mr. Kyle moved his family to Platteville, and left them there during the gold excitement in California, to make the journey across the Plains with his son Charles. Both died in that distant El Dorado, Mr. Kyle leaving a widow and seven children in Wisconsin. Of these Thompson died a few years ago. Mary, the mother of George M. Crull, died in Iowa. John died in the Civil war. Louisa is the wife of a Mr. Crandal, of La Clair. Martha married John Forsythe, and settled in Cedar Rapids, where she died. Jemima is the wife of Deloss Crandal, and resides at Aurora, Illinois.

George M. Crull remained under the parental roof until he reached his majority, working on the farm, and attending school during the winter. In 1876 he secured a farm in Smith county, Kans., by taking advantage of the homestead law, made thorough improvements, and occupied that farm until 1893. While in the State of Kansas, in 1879, he married Miss Sarah Thompson, who was born in 1861 in Iowa, a daughter of Thomas Thompson, formerly of that State. She had poor health, and with her husband spent two years in Colorado, where she died Feb. 14, 1881, and was interred in that State. Mr. Crull returned to Kansas, and carried on his farm there until February, 1893, when he came back to Wisconsin, and bought the old home farm from the other heirs of the estate. It has been his home to the present time, and he has added to the old homestead ninety-three acres, making a compact and desirable farm. Mr. Crull and Miss Jennie Clark were married in December, 1894. She was born November 23, 1866, daughter of Norman and Jane Clark, long and favorably known throughout Grant county, and was educated in the schools of the town of Harrison, where she grew to womanhood. She is the mother of two children: Margaret E., born May 11, 1896; and George W., born March 17, 1898. Mr. Crull is a Republican, but has never sought office. He is a religious man, though not a member of any denomination. He stands well among the leading men of Grant county, and is one of its solid and substantial citizens.

SAMUEL WEST, a prosperous farmer and stock dealer of Sylvester township, Green county, lives on the old West homestead, about two miles north of Juda.

Mr. West is a son of George and Susan (Winchell) West, of Erie county, N. Y., where the father was born Jan. 7, 1818. George West was a son of John and Avis (Bowen) West, the former a native of Cayuga county, N. Y., of Irish lineage, and the latter of Scottish descent, born in the State of Vermont. John West was the father of ten children: George is a retired farmer of Brodhead, Wis.; Arimida, born Nov. 6, 1820, married Stephen Estay, of New York, and both are deceased; Susan, born Feb. 6, 1822, married Richard Sherman, of Erie county, N. Y.; Matthew, born May 31, 1824, married Sarah Decker; Thomas S. B., born April 24, 1827, is living in Erie county; Sarah, born July 19, 1831, married Peter Willoughby, of New York; Elizabeth, born in June, 1833, married Nelson Park, of Illinois; Jonathan and John (twins) were born Sept. 10, 1837; and Annis was born March 6, 1839.

George West, father of Samuel West, was married to Susan Winchell Sept. 1, 1840. Her parents, Ira and Betsy Winchell, were then living in New York. To this union came Samuel, our subject; Louisa, born Sept. 29, 1844; George, Feb. 14, 1846; Avis E., Nov.

29, 1847 (died in 1896 at Hampton, Iowa); Clara, Sept. 7, 1849; Mary, April 24, 1854; Alice E., Nov. 27, 1855; Ida N., July 10, 1857; Nelson P., Nov. 10, 1859 (died aged nineteen years); Minnie, Nov. 2, 1865 (died in infancy).

Samuel West, whose name introduces this article, was born in the town of Sylvester, Green Co., Wis., March 11, 1843, five years before the admission of Wisconsin as a State into the Federal Union. On March 23, 1867, he married Miss Kate Read, of Juda, Wis., who was born June 2, 1849, in Cortland county, N. Y., daughter of Charles W. Read. Mr. Read came from New York to Genoa Junction, Wis., about 1852. He died June 14, 1899, in Gates, Oregon. To this union of our subject and wife have come five children: George, born April 8, 1869, married Miss Lettie Hall, of Sylvester; Mattie, born June 11, 1871, married Charles Hall, a merchant in Juda, where he is postmaster; Susan I., born Oct. 8, 1873, died March 18, 1896; Nettie M., born Feb. 16, 1876, married Eldridge Anderneck, son of Rev. J. Anderneck, of Juda; Bertha C., born Aug. 22, 1878, married Oscar Moldenhauer, of Juda.

Samuel West was reared on the farm of Sylvester, and has memories of Wisconsin as a wilderness which few possess at the present time. On Aug. 9, 1862, he enlisted in Company K, 22d Wis. V. I., and served with honor and credit to the close of the war. He was with Gen. Sherman when he broke the backbone of the Rebellion, and was taken prisoner at Brentwood Station March 25, 1864, being incarcerated in Libby prison, but was soon paroled, and afterward exchanged. Honorably discharged June 12, 1865, he returned home with a record of which any man might be justly proud. For six months he was private orderly for Major Gen. Mower, and for six months previous was detailed as an orderly and employed on special duty, carrying despatches a portion of the time.

Mr. West has been engaged in farming, and has dealt in stock and fine horses for the last thirty years, having reared a number of the best horses ever bred in Green county. No citizen of the county has done more to improve the grade of its live stock. Our subject has served as school clerk, and chairman of the town, and is an honorable and esteemed member of the community. He has never united with any church, but is a splendid neighbor, a trustworthy friend, and a man of the most irreproachable domestic habits and character.

EDWARD E. BERRY, M. D., a prominent and popular physician and surgeon of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Chautauqua county, N. Y., a son of Isaac M. and Hannah E. Berry, the latter of whom died when the Doctor was a child.

Dr. Berry was primarily educated in Galena, Ill., acquired his academic education in the same State, and then entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, from which he was graduated with the class of 1858. In 1862 he enlisted, in the 33d Wis. V. I., under Col. J. B. Moore, was appointed hospital steward, and held the position until the close of the war, in 1865, when he resumed private practice in Lafayette county, Wis. He took a post-graduate course at Rush Medical College, securing a second diploma in 1866.

In July, 1866, the Doctor married Miss Helen M. Lee, a native of New York State, and a daughter of George W. and Cordelia M. (Bishop) Lee, the former of whom was a grand-nephew of Robert E. Lee, of Virginia. In August, 1867, the Doctor brought his wife to Platteville, where he has since been constantly engaged in the active practice of his profession, and has been favored with a large and remunerative patronage. In July, 1879, Mrs. Helen M. Berry passed away, leaving him with three children, viz.: Mary, who was educated in the Platteville high school, is the wife of Charles McAtee, and has two children, Oleta and Lavana; Cordelia, wife of Benjamin Dorscher, is the mother of one child; and Ernest E., born in 1876, is now engaged in Wright's drug store in Platteville. In February, 1895, Dr. Berry married, for his second wife, Miss Sarah E. Bondraunt, who was born in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1855; she died two years after marriage, without issue.

In politics Dr. Berry is a Democrat, but has never cherished any desire for public office. his professional engagements demanding all his attention. He is a member of W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66. G. A. R., of Platteville, in which he has held the office of surgeon of post. Dr. Berry has risen to his present elevated station in life through his individual exertions, having started out a poor young man, and having earned even the means to pay for his education, literary and professional. He is of a kindly disposition, and has never been known to refuse his services to the needy, regardless of compensation, nor to slight a case of this kind any more than he would one for which he was sure of receiving the highest fee. He has deservedly prospered, and he and his family are among the most highly respected residents of Platteville.

DAVID BARRETT was born in Ohio, in the Mohawk Valley, May 1, 1845, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Little) Barrett, who came to Wisconsin the same year, locating in Monroe.

Abraham Barrett was born in Ohio in April, 1820, and his wife in 1819; they were married in 1843. In 1847 they moved to the town of Lima, Grant county, and settled on a farm in the vicinity of the little village of Arthur, where they made a permanent home. While living there Mrs. Barrett died, Feb. 16, 1866, leaving six children, David, our subject, being the eldest. Of the others, Joseph, William and Sarah (Mrs. Gunther) live in Nebraska, and John lives on his farm in Iowa. All have families. In 1866 the father married, for his second wife, Miss Jane Lowell, of Grant county, and four children were born of that union. Mr. Barrett moved from Wisconsin to Stockham, Hamilton Co., Neb., where he was engaged as a merchant up to the time of his death, in 1889. An active business man during his entire life, he had many friends wherever he lived. Mr. Barrett was a soldier in the Rebellion, serving in Company E, 11th Wis. V. I., and participated in many fierce battles, having much severe experience during the three years in which he followed the flag.

David Barrett attained his manhood on the home farm, and received his education in the public schools. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company C, 37th Wis. V. I., and was promoted to the rank of fourth orderly sergeant. The 37th Wisconsin served in the Army of the Potomac under Gen. Grant. Mr. Barrett was in the fighting before Petersburg and in other hard-fought battles. Taken prisoner in 1864, he made his escape in company with his companions, and remained with his regiment until the close of the war, participating with his command in the grand review at Washington, where he was discharged.

E. C. Barry Esq

Mr. Barrett was injured while engaged in building breast works during the war, which left a lasting injury of his spine. Two years ago he lost the use of his limbs, and is now an invalid, confined to his home. The mind is bright and active, but the body is helpless, and Mr. Barrett has been a patient sufferer for many years. His business and the farm have had his close supervision until within a very few years. He is a man of sterling qualities, and loved and honored by his neighbors. Mrs. Barrett has proved herself a capable wife, and her devotion has been a great comfort to him.

Mr. Barrett and Miss Minerva J. Hooks were married in March, 1866. Elijah and Harriet (Kiggins) Hooks, her parents, were old pioneers of Grant county. Born in Ohio, they came to Grant county in 1842, and settled in the town of Lima, on wild land, beginning their life in Wisconsin in a log cabin; Mr. Hooks became one of the successful farmers in this section of the country. He died May 3, 1893. Mrs. Hooks lives with her daughter, at the venerable age of seventy-three years. Mr. Hooks was a soldier in the Civil war, serving in the 3d Cavalry, from Wisconsin, under Gen. Phil. Sheridan.

Mrs. Barrett was born in the town of Lima, Grant county, in March, 1849. After their marriage our subject and wife settled on the old Barrett home for one year, and in 1869 bought a farm in Cass county, Neb., where they lived until 1875. That year he sold out, and the family returned to Grant county. In 1878 he purchased a tract of wild land, which he cleared up, and erected a good dwelling-house in 1881. There are substantial barns and ample outbuildings on the place, and it is one of the desirable rural estates in this part of the State. To Mr. and Mrs. Barrett have been born four children: (1) Carrie died when a young lady of seventeen years. (2) Joseph, born in January, 1867, married Miss Annie E. Bennett, of Platteville, and lives on his farm (which joins his father's) in the town of Lima. They are rearing an adopted daughter, Ruby. (3) Calvin, born in Fennimore, Wis., in August, 1868, married Miss Jennie Hull, and lives on his farm in the town of Lima. Four children were born to this union, Pearl David, Abraham, Ethel and Elva. (4) Orvil W., born in 1875, married Miss May Selleck, of the town of Harrison, and resides on his farm in the town of Lima; they have one son, Walter E.

Mr. Barrett was formerly a Republican, but within the last few years he has been voting the Prohibition ticket. For five years he has been roadmaster in the town of Lima. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett are members of the Free Methodist Church.

JACOB S. BRUGGER, a fruit farmer of the town of Platteville, Grant county, has done the people of southern Wisconsin valuable service by showing in his own career the possibilities of this region for the cultivation of many kinds of fruit the profitable raising of which was long supposed to be confined to more favorable conditions.

Mr. Brugger is a native of the county, born in August, 1870, a son of J. J. and Mary (Carl) Brugger. His mother is a daughter of Jacob Carl, an old pioneer of Grant county. J. J. Brugger was born in Grant county in 1846, and his wife in 1848. The Bruggers came from Switzerland, and the Carls from Germany. It is not too much to say that the best characteristics of both nationalities have passed down the line of heredity, and appear in the young man who is the subject of this article. J. J. Brugger, who was a harness maker and farmer, is now leading a retired life in Platteville. He and his wife have ten children: William, born in 1868, lives in this State. Jacob S. is the second son. John, born in 1872, married a Miss Snee, and they live on the old homestead; they have one child, Catherine. Frank, born in 1874, is in Dubuque, Iowa. Mary, born in 1876, is living at home. Daniel, born in 1878, Charles in 1880, Annie, in 1882, Ella in 1883, and Maggie, in 1886, are attending the Platteville schools.

Jacob S. Brugger obtained his education very largely in school No. 8, and remained with his parents until he was twenty-one. He has mastered the science of farming thoroughly, and carries on his place according to the most modern methods. He was a well driller for some two years, and bought and sold horses for a year, shipping to the Minnesota markets. In 1893 Mr. Brugger married Miss Anna M. Schroder, the only daughter of C. F. and Mary I. Schroder, old and prominent residents of Grant county. Mrs. Brugger was born in 1868, was a student of the Platteville Normal and is one of the valuable women of her community, most highly esteemed by all who know her.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Brugger spent three years on his father's farm, and during the season he was engaged in running a threshing machine for his neighbors. In November, 1896, he purchased the John Gilman property, in Platteville, where he is now raising grapes, apples, and all kinds of small fruits. Since taking possession of this place Mr. Brugger has erected all new buildings with the latest modern improvements, and this is one of the handsomest and best maintained tracts of real estate in the section, showing the master touch in every department. Mr. Brugger is a shareholder in the Toadville mine, Grant county. He is a stockholder in the Belgian horse "Baron de Hautes," known as the finest bred draught horse in this State.

Mr. and Mrs. Brugger are the parents of a family of four children: Clarence E., born Feb. 18, 1895; Ferney I., July 25, 1896; Hazel N., May 13, 1898; and Hurbert D., 1900. They attend the Primitive Methodist Church, and he has always been a Democrat, as was his father. Fraternally Mr. Brugger belongs to the Order of Foresters.

THOMAS D. NAGLE, a leading and representative citizen of Patch Grove township, Grant county, now owns and operates the farm on which he was born, in 1844, his parents, Thomas and Elizabeth (Brown) Nagle, being pioneers of Grant county.

The father of our subject was a native of County Cork, Ireland, born Jan. 13, 1806, and, being left an orphan at an early age, he came to America during his youth. For some time he resided in Canada, and there married Elizabeth Brown, who was born in Scotland Jan. 30, 1812. In 1836 they came to Cassville, Grant Co., Wis., which town was then "on the boom," and gave promise of being an important place, in fact it was even mentioned as being a future State capital. Mr. Nagle entered considerable land, including that on which his son Thomas D. resides, but at the end of two years he returned to Ohio, where he had lived for a time after his marriage. In 1842 he again came to Grant county, and settled on the land which became his homestead. He was an industrious, intelligent and upright citizen, and in early days took an active part in the development and upbuilding of his township. At one time he served as Territorial commissioner, and was town clerk when what is now Patch Grove contained several other townships. In his political relations he was a Republican, supporting Fremont, the first candidate of that party for the Presidency, and voting for each succeeding candidate as long as he lived. Both he and his wife were faithful and consistent members of the Methodist Church, and were highly respected by all who knew them. His death occurred on the old homestead April 14, 1884, and she departed this life on Dec. 16, following. Their family numbered five children, two sons and three daughters: Tamer, Jane, John, Thomas D. and Eliza, all living at the present writing (1901). John was a soldier in the war for the Union, and is represented elsewhere.

Thomas D. Nagle has spent his entire life on the old homestead, which he inherited from his father, and which has never passed from the family since the land was entered from the government. As a tiller of the soil he has met with excellent success, and now has his fine farm under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Nagle married Miss Laura Brown, a daughter of Luther Brown, an honored pioneer of Patch Grove township, and of this union have been born four children, two sons and two daughters, namely: Nellie (now the wife of Ivan Russell), Edward, Laura and Lee.

Mr. Nagle is one of the most prominent and progressive citizens of his township. In his political affiliations he was originally a Republican, but as issues changed he believed he saw his duty along other political lines. The liquor traffic he regards as the chief source of suffering, crime and poverty, and he is now a staunch supporter of the Prohibition party. He and his wife and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he is an active and efficient worker, and his life has ever been such as to commend him to the confidence and high regard of those with whom he has come in contact.

JAMES ANDREW HOARE, one of the prominent and well known citizens of Mineral Point, Iowa county, and a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, is a native of the township, born in 1845, a son of John and Sally (Murrish) Hoare, both natives of Cornwall, England.

The father, who was a miner by occupation, in 1843 came with his wife to Mineral Point, Wis., where he prospected for some years, in 1847 settling on the farm where our subject now resides. Here he died in 1886, aged seventy-four years, but his wife survives, residing with our subject; she was born Aug. 5, 1815. To them were born: William, who resides with our subject; Mary Jane; John, who enlisted in Missouri, and died in St. Louis, of cholera, in 1865; James Andrew; Richard, residing in Mineral Point; Joseph, of Kansas City, Mo.; Martin, of Duluth, Minn.; and Frank E., of Mineral Point. In politics the father was a Republican, and he served as county clerk and as town clerk for sixteen years. Both he and his wife were members of the Primitive Methodist Church.

James A. Hoare was reared and educated at Mineral Point, where he learned the trade of stone mason, following same for twenty-five years, after which he became a farmer and stock raiser, and also a miner. His farm, which he owns jointly with his brother William, is one of the finest in the county, well stocked and provided with a comfortable house, large barn and ample outbuildings. They are also interested in the Mineral Point Creamery.

In July, 1866, our subject was married to Mary A. Goldsworthy, who was born in Mineral Point, a daughter of Richard and Elizabeth (Carbis) Goldsworthy, natives of Cornwall, England, who came to Mineral Point in 1849. Mr. Goldsworthy was a stone mason by trade. He went to California during the gold excitement, and afterward returned to Mineral Point, where he died in 1892, his wife preceding him to the grave by a few weeks. To our subject and wife were born six children: Tassie L., Mrs. Frank Ivey; Cora B., Mrs. Elbert Spooner, of Mineral Point; John H.; William R.; Fannie and Charles J.

On March 27, 1864, our subject enlisted, at Mineral Point, in Company C, 37th Wis. V. I., which was being mustered in at Madison, Wis., and assigned to the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 9th Army Corps. Among the engagements in which he participated were the siege of Petersburg, the raid on Weldon railroad, Poplar Spring, Hatcher's Run, etc. At the close of the war only 150 men returned of the first 800 enrolled in the regiment, all the others being either killed or discharged on account of disability. After many hard-fought battles and many hardships, our subject was honorably discharged, on July 27, 1865, at Washington, D. C. In memory of those stirring days Mr.

Hoare takes a deep interest in the G. A. R., and is an active member of George H. Legate Post, No. 125, which has a membership of seventy. He is also a member of Iowa Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F.

On Sept. 14, 1897, Mr. Hoare met with a sad loss in the death of his faithful wife, who passed away at the age of fifty years. On October 24, 1900, our subject wedded Mrs. Eliza M. Stephens, of Mineral Point, who was born in Cornwall, England, and came to Wisconsin in 1869. She was first married to Joseph Thomas, and after his death, at Hazel Green, in 1872, married James W. Stephens, who died at Mineral Point, in June, 1897.

In political matters Mr. Hoare follows in the footsteps of his honored father, and adheres to the principles of the Republican party. He is now serving as treasurer of the school board in District No. 1.

REV. SAMUEL GAYLEY HUEY, the faithful and well-beloved pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Rock Prairie, Rock county, was born May 7, 1854, at McAlevys Fort, Huntingdon Co., Penn., a son of Robert and Elizabeth (Barr) Huey, both of whom were of Scotch-Irish extraction.

Our subject obtained the rudiments of his education in the common schools, and then passed four years in the Stone Valley Academy, in his native town, whence he passed to Westminster College, at New Wilmington, Penn., graduating in 1888. The following fall he entered the Allegheny Theological Seminary, and was graduated in March, 1891. On April 15, 1890, he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Mercer, and the summer following he passed doing missionary work at Benkelman, Neb. Early in life he had united with the Stone Valley United Presbyterian Church, in his native town, and had consecrated his future years to the service of his Maker. No faltering, no wavering, but onward, diligently striving to do the Master's will, Rev. Huey has labored in the interests of humanity. In the autumn of 1890, he was called to the pastorate of the Rock Prairie (Wis.) congregation, and on May 7, 1891, entered upon his duties there. On Aug. 19, 1891, he was ordained to the Gospel ministry by the Presbytery of Wisconsin, and finally installed as pastor at Rock Prairie. Under the earnest ministration the congregation has increased from 111 to 192 members, over 150 persons having been received into the church. In this time Rev. Mr. Huey's good works are known far beyond the confines of his own parish, and he holds high rank among other ministers of the same denomination. For the past eight years he has been Stated Clerk of the Wisconsin Presbytery, and has ably discharged the duties appertaining to that office. In 1895-96 he was Moderator of the Synod of Illinois, and served a three-years term as a member of the board of managers of the Xenia Theological Seminary at Xenia, Ohio.

On Sept. 10, 1891, Rev. Mr. Huey was united in marriage with Miss Eva Donaldson, of New Wilmington, Penn., a daughter of Zechariah and Mary Donaldson, the former a nephew of Rev. Dr. Donaldson, of Elders Ridge, Penn. Mrs. Huey, a highly cultured woman, was graduated from Westminster College June 20, 1888, and passed the next two years as a teacher. Rev. Mr. Huey and wife are the parents of three children: Grace Donaldson, born Dec. 29, 1894; Helen Barr, Oct. 27, 1896; and Ruth Crawford, April 29, 1900.

SAMUEL C. ROSS is one of the successful miners and farmers who have made Wisconsin what it is to-day, one of the foremost States among the great commonwealths of the country. Through the efforts of such men the fields bring forth their produce, and the depths of the earth are called upon for their treasures.

Mr. Ross was born in Mineral Point, Iowa county, in 1859, a son of John James and Sarah (Sproule) Ross. The father was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, Nov. 29, 1819, and there reared, remaining in Ireland until July, 1839, when he came to Mineral Point, a poor boy. He engaged in mining, later in farming and stock raising. In 1849 he went to California, but returned to Mineral Point and again engaged in farming, becoming very successful, taking his place among the prominent citizens of the county. At the time of his death he owned 3,000 acres of land. He was one of the men instrumental in having the Mineral Point railroad run through the place, and at his death, which occurred March 3, 1899, Mineral Point lost its leading business man, as well as one of the kindest hearted and noblest of its citizens. Not only was he a successful farmer and miner, but he was extensively engaged in stock-raising, and handled large quantities of grain. His good wife, who was also a native of Ireland, died at Mineral Point in 1892. To these most worthy people were born four sons: William S., a farmer and stock raiser of Mineral Point; Samuel C., our subject; Charley, a physician and surgeon of Mineral Point; and David, who died in childhood.

Our subject was reared to manhood in Mineral Point, has always been engaged in mining and farming, and makes a specialty of raising fine blooded horses, cattle and hogs. In 1892 Mr. Ross built a fine home in Mineral Point, where he and his family reside, surrounded by the comforts and luxuries of life. The marriage of our subject to Miss Anna J. Sproule, a native of Missouri, occurred in 1891, and to this union three children have been born, Andrew, Emily and Samuel.

The Ross family is among the early settlers of the county, and none is more highly respected. The father was a Democrat politically, and a Presbyterian in religious matters, and his son follows in his footsteps. Neither have ever sought office, although John Ross did consent to serve on the board of supervisors. Socially our subject is a member of Raven Lodge, No. 18, K. of P., Mineral Point. He is well known throughout the entire State, and always takes a deep interest in anything destined to advance the material prosperity of the city of Mineral Point, Iowa county, or the State of Wisconsin.

DR. CLAY W. BENNETT, a rising young member of the dental profession at Monroe, Wis., belongs to one of the more notable families of Green county, and is himself no unworthy representative of its better characteristics. He is well versed both in the theory and practice of the calling which he has made his life work, and is determined to keep to the front. He is a genial and social gentleman with many friends, and enjoys an enviable reputation for probity and fair dealing.

Dr. Bennett is a native of Green county, born July 9, 1865, a son of Felix and Catharine (Bell) Bennett, whose personal and family history has been written up under the name of Felix C. Bennett. They are classed among the leading people of Monroe, and are active workers in all social, humanitarian and reform movements that address the better impulses and convictions of the world. Dr. Bennett has one living sister, Estella, who married George King, of Janesville, and is a charming and talented lady. As noted elsewhere, the father of Dr. Bennett was in the early days a settler upon a Wisconsin farm, and upon this farm the first years of the Monroe dentist were passed. When ten years old he was taken into Monroe by his parents, and there he completed his boyhood and youth, passing through the Monroe schools in order, and in 1888 he was graduated from the Chicago college of dental surgery. He set up in the practice of his profession the same year in Monroe, and here he has lived and labored to the present time.

Dr. Bennett and Miss Ida Roderick were married Feb. 5, 1890. Mrs. Bennett is a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Newman) Roderick, and is the mother of three children, Byron R., Catherine E. and one who died in infancy. Dr. and Mrs. Bennett belong to the Christian Church, and he is a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is an active worker in the Wisconsin Dental Society, and also in the Southern Wisconsin Dental Society. The Doctor has been a Democrat, and knows the reason of the faith that is in him. He has been the recipient of complimentary notice on the part of his professional associates, and in 1899 was elected president of the State Dental Society. Dr. and Mrs. Bennett occupy a pleasant home on East Russell street, which has become the center of many social and friendly interests.

WALLACE ALPHEUS PENGRA, a worthy representative of the agricultural interests of Green county, resides on his farm about four miles northwest of Juda, and is well known as a thrifty and successful farmer.

Our subject is a son of George S. and Maria (Waltz) Pengra, and a grandson of Moses and Sarah (Johns) Pengra. His parents came from Genesee county, N. Y., and located in the town of Sylvester, Green Co., Wis., in 1849. Moses Pengra was a son of Marshall Pengra, of Bennington county, Vt., whose father came to the New England Colonies in company with two brothers long before the Revolution. One brother, Orin, lost his life during that struggle; the other brothers were separated, and in their separation the name was changed in its spelling. Gov. Pingree, of Michigan, is thought to be a member of the same family.

Moses Pengra was born in 1799, and married, March 25, 1818, Sarah Johns, who was born in Wales, and came to this country when a small girl. They had the following children: Marshall; George S., the father of W. A.; B. J., now residing in Oregon; Honor E., a widow, in Iowa; William, deceased; and Elisiph, who died in childhood. George S., father of Wallace A., was born in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., in 1821, and died in Sylvester July 1, 1890. In 1849 he married Maria Waltz, who was born Nov. 10, 1827, in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., and is still living, making her home with her son Wallace A., on the old homestead. She is a daughter of Alpheus and Jane (Ferguson) Waltz, who were of Dutch and Scotch-Irish descent. Peter Waltz, grandfather of Mrs. Pengra, enlisted in the Revolution, and bore arms for seven years in the cause of independence. His father came from Holland. Thomas Davey, the maternal great-grandfather of W. A. Pengra, was killed at the battle of Fort Stanwix. He came of English blood.

The marriage of George S. Pengra to Maria Waltz was blessed with three children: (1) Wallace Alpheus; (2) George H., born Dec. 23, 1853, a thrifty farmer of Sylvester, whose sketch appears elsewhere; and (3) William S., born May 26, 1855, who died in Cheyenne, Wyoming, in 1881.

Wallace Alpheus Pengra was born Oct. 17, 1851, and was married to Miss Nancy J. Baldwin, of the town of Sylvester, Nov. 11, 1875. Mrs. Pengra was the daughter of Harvey and Margaret (Johnson) Baldwin, of Green county, who came here in 1854. They were of English and Irish ancestry, the maternal grandmother coming from Ireland. Mr. Baldwin was born in 1814, and died in 1899; his wife was born Oct. 8, 1824, and died March 14, 1900. They were good people, and much respected in their day. Mrs. Nancy J. Pengra was born July 30, 1854, in Ashtabula county, Ohio, and was brought to Wisconsin when a babe in arms. Our subject and his wife have the following children: Hugh S., born July 22, 1878; Frank E., born March 27, 1884; and Maria Antoinette, born Nov. 5, 1887, all at home.

Mr. Pengra was reared to manhood on the paternal acres, and acquired his education in the district school. In his agricultural labors he has met with marked success, and is one of the most successful in the county in his chosen work. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, and he has served his town as road supervisor, member of the town board, and treasurer of the school board for a number of years, and commands the respect of all. He began life a poor man, but now owns a farm of 140 acres in his own name, and a half interest in 360 acres with his brother George H. He is a man of fine character and high standing.

REV. ARTHUR LONGFIELD, the zealous and devoted minister of the Free Baptist Church at North Johnstown, Rock county, was born in Magnolia, in that county, and educated in the public schools and in the seminary at Evansville. He graduated from this school in 1886, and immediately began ministerial work in the Free Methodist Church. For a number of years he served that organization in Wisconsin and in South Dakota. In this State he was pastor of the church at Marshall, Dane county, and has had several other charges, in which he distinguished himself by his zeal for his Master's cause, and his earnest presentation of a simple Gospel.

Mr. Longfield withdrew from the Free Methodist fellowship in 1897, and became pastor of the Free Baptist Church at Rutland, Wis., preferring to be associated with this church, as more thoroughly in harmony with his mature convictions. In 1899 Mr. Longfield was called to his present charge. It is one of the oldest Free Baptist Churches organized in Wisconsin, and was for many years regarded as one of the most prominent in the denomination in the State. It was organized at an early day by Elder Cary, who served as its pastor for many years. It has suffered during the later years of its history from the changing and shifting that have been going on in the population of the adjacent territory, but it is still in a fairly vigorous condition, and during the last year ten additions have been made to its membership, the new comers being mostly young people.

Mr. Longfield and Miss Anna R. Patch were married March 12, 1889. Mrs. Longfield is a daughter of Uriah and Christie A. (Barns) Patch, and was living in Platteville at the time of her marriage. Her father was a farmer of Richland county, Wis., during his active years. He died at Calamine, Wis., Feb. 6, 1884, when seventy-seven years old. Her mother died at Platteville, Wis., June 9, 1888, at the age of seventy-one. They came to Wisconsin from Ohio in 1853. Mrs. Longfield is the youngest of a family of eleven children. To Mr. and Mrs. Longfield have come five children to bless their union: Arthur Bromley, Edna Grace, Henry Spencer, Miriam Vashti and Elsie Lucile. They are a band of bright and promising children, and will make their way in the world.

Henry Longfield, the father of Rev. Arthur, was born Dec. 11, 1820, in Northumberland county, Penn., and was taken by his parents to Hartford, Trumbull Co., Ohio, when quite young. He came to Wisconsin when a young man, and in 1851 bought a farm in the town of Magnolia, Rock county, which became his home during his active life. When advancing age compelled him to abandon the life of a farmer he moved into Evansville, where he lived thirteen years, and where he died Aug. 23, 1897. Henry Longfield and Miss Orrilla Spencer were married Nov. 25, 1852, and the union proved a happy one. She was born Jan. 12, 1824, in Clayton, Jefferson Co., N. Y., the youngest of a family of twelve children, and is the sole survivor of her father's family. She is making her home with her only son, Rev. Arthur Longfield.

RICHARD SCADDEN, a young and thrifty farmer in the town of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born at his present home May 17, 1867, son of Richard and Fannie (Jennings) Scadden, both natives of Cornwall, England, where the father was born in 1815, the mother in 1825.

Richard Scadden brought his family to Wisconsin in 1850, and worked in the lead mines of Grant county for a number of years, then purchasing a farm, three miles northwest of the village of Hazel Green, held same for a short time. Selling it, he bought a farm near Morgan's Mills, and in 1866 moved to the farm where his son Richard now lives, one mile south of the village of Hazel Green, on the Galena Pike. There he settled, and made substantial improvements, intending to make this his home for life, which indeed it proved to be. Mr. Scadden there died in 1897, outliving his wife ten years. Belonging to the Methodist Church, they "lived the doctrines they professed," and were widely known as good Christian people. Mr. Scadden was a Republican, and in his prime had filled several local positions of honor and trust. Nine children were born to him and his wife: (1) John, born in 1850, married Miss Hester Williams, and has three children, Albert, Edna and Ernest; he is now a grain dealer in South Dakota. (2) Thomas, born in 1856, married Miss Martha Pierce, of Hazel Green, and has a farm in Illinois. There are four children in his family, Andrew, Saul, Roy, and Morris. (3) Lizzie, born in Hazel Green, married Harvey Smith, and is living in her native village, with one daughter, Pearl. (4) Hannah, born in Hazel Green, married Richard Shellivan, and lives in the town of Hazel Green. There are three children in their family, Orvil, Edward, and Fannie. (5) William, born in Grant county in 1861, married Miss Lizzie Pearce, and is a farmer in the town of Hazel Green. They have three daughters, Fannie, Lulu, and Ollie. (6) Tillie, born in Hazel Green in 1863, is the wife of Rev. Etla Ralph, who resides near Chicago. There are four children in their family, Lloyd, Roy, Walter, and Harry. (7) Ella, born in Hazel Green, is now the wife of John Pierce, of Illinois. (8) Richard is our subject. (9) Edward, born in 1872, married Sarah Scott, and is a farmer in Wisconsin.

Richard Scadden was educated, like his brothers and sisters, in the high school of the town of Hazel Green, where he grew to manhood, on his father's farm. In 1889 he married Miss Abbie Scott, daughter of Thomas Scott, of Hazel Green, one of the old pioneer settlers of Grant county. Mr. and Mrs. Scadden are the parents of four children: Lancelot, born in 1891; Hildred, born in 1892; Loraine, born in 1893; and Lloyd, born in 1898. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Scadden settled on the Joseph Harris farm, in the town of Hazel Green, where they remained one year, and were one year on the White farm. Mr. Scadden rented the old homestead of his father, and engaged in its cultivation until the death of that gentleman made it possible for him to purchase the farm of the other heirs. Here he now owns a choice place of 160 acres, under high cultivation, thoroughly improved, and equipped with all necessary farming appliances.

In politics Mr. Scadden is a Republican. He attends, with his wife, the Methodist Church, to which she belongs. Socially he is a member of the M. W. A. and the Knights of the Globe. Mr. Scadden is an enterprising young man, well known in this part of the county. He is largely engaged in stock farming, and is forging his way to success rapidly.

JAMES M. HARCLEROAD, one of the enterprising and successful business men of Platteville, Grant county, owns and operates one of the largest livery stables in that city, and is a man universally respected. Our subject was born in Grant county in November, 1856, son of Solomon and Mary J. (Castley) Harclerod.

Solomon Harclerod was born in Bradford county, Penn., where he grew to manhood. His wife was born in Missouri, her father being Pierce Castley, a farmer, who died while yet a young man, and the mother migrated to Grant county, where Solomon Harclerod met her daughter, and they were married. After marriage the parents of our subject located in Grant county, and the father followed mining until the Civil war broke out, when he enlisted in Company F, 10th Wis. V. I., and served three years, participating in a number of hard-fought battles. Returning home after the war, he settled on a farm near Platteville, where he died in 1876. The mother still survives, and makes her home with our subject, in Platteville. There were seven children in this family, and all are now living except one daughter, Effie, who married A. E. Weller, of Des Moines, Iowa, and left one son, William, who still resides in Iowa.

Our subject was the eldest of the family, and was reared and educated in Grant county. When a young man he was a foreman of construction on the Chicago & Northwestern and other railroads, but in 1887 he settled at Lancaster, where he embarked in the livery business, and drove a stage between that city and Potosi for five years. About 1889 he removed to Platteville, where he established his present stables, and conducts business upon the latest methods. His horses are fine animals, the drivers careful, while his carriages, buggies, carts, and other equipages are of the latest design and best workmanship. The service is very efficient, and patrons are certain of receiving honorable treatment.

In 1887 Mr. Harclerod married Miss Alma Burriss, daughter of Jonathan and Sarah Burriss, old pioneers and well-to-do farming people of Belmont, Lafayette county. Mrs. Harclerod was born in Grant county in 1862. Three children have been born to our subject and wife, James, Edward and Ruth, the first named being a student at the State Normal, and a very bright boy.

Politically Mr. Harclerod has been identified with the Republican party, and fraternally he is a member of Platteville Lodge, K. of P.; and Lodge No. 7, of the Modern Woodmen. Mr. Harclerod is special treasury agent of his city, and in the spring of 1900 was elected a member of the city board from the First ward. Although deeply engrossed in the business of his establishment, Mr. Harclerod always finds time to give his support to anything tending toward the advancement of the material interests of the city, and he enjoys the respect of his acquaintances as an honorable man and a public-spirited citizen. Mrs. Harclerod is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and takes an active interest in the work of that denomination.

JOHN W. GARDNER, the efficient sheriff of Green county, has made his home in Monroe for a number of years. He enjoys an enviable reputation as an upright and honorable man, and as a police officer has repeatedly displayed both nerve and judgment in a high degree. Mr. Gardner was born Oct. 6, 1855, in Stephentown, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., and was brought to Wisconsin early the following year, so that practically his entire life has been spent in this State.

The parents of our subject, George and Aucelia (Rose) Gardner, were both natives of New York. They had three sons and one daughter, the latter dying in infancy. The sons are all living: Burton J., at Brodhead, Wis.; Charles Francis, near Brodhead; and John W. The father was a butcher in New York. He came to Rock county, Wis., in March, 1856, and very soon afterward located at old Decatur, in Green county, where he set up a meat market, and carried on a butcher business for several years. He then went to Texas, but after an absence of a year all news as to his whereabouts ceased, and he has never been heard of since. The mother died in March, 1877, at the age of fifty-two. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and a good woman, always kind and generous. The paternal grandfather of John W. Gardner bore the name of George W. Gardner. He was a native of New York, of English descent, was a fifer in the war of 1812, and was a man of influence wherever he lived. He followed farming, and was an early settler of Wisconsin, coming to Rock county when the Territory was largely a wilderness, buying land in Rock, and dying there about 1864, when about eighty years of age. The father of Mrs. Aucelia (Rose) Gardner bore the name of Rufus Rose. He was born in the State of New York, a descendant of an old English family, followed farming, and died in New York at the age of fifty-five. He reared a numerous family.

John W. Gardner grew to manhood under the home roof, on the farm near Brodhead, Wis. He obtained his education in the local school and early took upon himself the burden of his own support, beginning his business career by renting a farm. He was engaged in farming until 1892. In 1895 he was appointed deputy sheriff, under N. S. Durst, and acquitted himself so creditably that he received a similar appointment under Stearns. In 1898 he was himself elected to this high office, entering upon its duties Jan. 1, 1899.

Mr. Gardner and Miss Dollie E. Springsted were married Jan. 14, 1875, and they have three children, Harry, John and Sadie. Mrs. Gardner is a daughter of David and Cordelia (Ward) Springsted, and was born near Hamilton, Canada, July 11, 1853. She is a woman of fine feelings and neighborly spirit, and has many friends. Sheriff Gardner belongs to several of the leading fraternities of the city, holding membership in the Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World, and the Knights of the Globe, and he is highly esteemed wherever known. He is a Republican politically, and is one of the strong men of the organization in the county, taking a keen interest in its workings, and is alive to whatever concerns the public welfare.

HENRY SOLOMON WEIL is one of the most thoroughly up-to-date citizens of Mineral Point, Iowa county, and has taken an active interest in the development of his home city.

Mr. Weil was born at St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19, 1855, a son of David and Theresa (Loewenthal) Weil, and received his early education in the schools of Dubuque, Iowa, later passing some time in a machine shop there. At the age of twenty-one he was clerk in a store in New York City, and about the year 1877 moved to Milwaukee, Wis., where he passed two years as traveling salesman for a tobacco and cigar house, and for the Singer Sewing Machine Co. The next year he came to Mineral Point, as general agent of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. for several counties. In 1884 he became connected with the McCormick Harvester Co., as special agent, which position he successfully filled until 1891, when he assumed charge of the Mineral Point Electric Light Plant, and has since efficiently discharged the duties of that office; he also has charge of the pumping of the city water. Mr. Weil is ambitious to see his town have all the improvements possible in a city of its size, and has helped to organize the Volunteer Fire Department, of which he is treasurer. He was one of the organizers of the Southwestern Wisconsin Fair Association, for several years served as its secretary, and is yet one of the stockholders. In politics he has been a Democrat, but advocates the gold standard. For three years he held the office of alderman, for four years that of city clerk, and for six years was member of the board of education.

In 1881 Mr. Weil married Miss Clara M. Jones, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Sanguin) Jones, and two children, Helen and Grace, have brightened their home. The family reside in a beautiful residence erected by Mr. Weil in 1890, and are very popular in the social life of Mineral Point. Mr. Weil is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the I. O. O. F., the K. of P., the I. O. F., the Knights of the Globe, and the M. W. A.

David Weil, father of Henry S. Weil, was born in Prussia, but passed most of his boyhood and youth in London, England, where he learned the trade of brushmaker. About 1848 he came to America, locating in St. Louis, where he engaged in mercantile business, later, about 1859, moving to Dubuque, Iowa, and remaining there until 1878, when he moved to Milwaukee, Wis. There he engaged in the real-estate and insurance business, and he died in that city in September, 1895, aged sixty-seven. He married Theresa Loewenthal, who was born in Prussia, daughter of L. Loewenthal, a hotel-keeper in that country, and came to America with her parents in 1849. Her father died in Chicago, at the age of ninety years.

Joseph Jones, father of Mrs. Weil, was born in Bedford county, Penn., March 6, 1818, and died in Mineral Point in 1889. He came West in 1834 with his step-father, Abner Nichols, who kept the "Mansion House," the leading hotel of the mining district, for some years. This hotel was composed of several log cabins joined together, and was famous for the hospitality of the landlord, and the many social gatherings held there. Mr. Jones engaged in mining, and later kept a meat market. He soon attained a prominent position in local affairs, held several offices, and at one time was messenger of the Territorial Legislature, appointed by Gov. James Doty. He passed a year in California in 1850, but returned to Mineral Point, where he was one of the most popular of the pioneers.

GEORGE CULLEN. When we meet early settlers of the great northwestern country we are pretty sure to find them most worthy specimens of a worthy type—plain, sensible, honest men, who have never begged favor, or asked odds in the game of life, and whose strongest wish has seemed to be to stand square with their fellows. A representative of one of these honest tillers of the soil who assisted in making Grant county, Wis., the prosperous locality it now is, is George Cullen, the subject of this sketch. He was born in Chester county, Penn., Nov. 25, 1841, son of Joseph and Hannah (Waters) Cullen, of the Keystone State, the father born in Dublin, Ireland in 1806.

After marriage Joseph Cullen carried on farming in Chester county, Penn., until 1843, when he came to Wisconsin, and engaged in work in the lead mines at Hazel Green, until, in 1849, he purchased a tract of wild land from the government, in Smelser township, Grant county, and settled upon it. Our subject now resides upon this place, which was literally reclaimed from the wilderness, and in this work Mr. Cullen was ably assisted by his son. The clearing up of a tract of wild land requires strength, and persistent and steady labor for a long time. Upon this farm Mr. Cullen passed the remainder of his life, dying in 1891, his wife passing away in 1866. Both were devout members of the Catholic Church, he being one of the founders of the church in Benton. In his early life he was a Jacksonian Democrat, but at the outbreak of the Civil war, opposing slavery, he became a staunch Republican.

In all his beliefs and prejudices he was a strong man; fully convinced of right, he was never afraid to follow his convictions. Three children were born to this worthy couple: George, our subject; Anna, born in Chester county, Penn., who married Fred Hiel, and now lives in Smelser, with a family of six children; and Hannah May, born in Chester county, Penn., in 1843, who became the wife of Henry Wiley, of Hamilton county, Iowa, where she died Aug. 1, 1897, leaving six children.

Our subject was reared on the farm, and educated in Grant county, remaining at home, and taking charge of the farm at his parents' death. He knew all the deprivations of pioneer life when a lad. In 1870 he was married to Miss Mary E. Quick, of Grant county, a daughter of Joseph and Isabel (Clark) Quick. Joseph Quick was born in Virginia in 1821, his wife in Tennessee in 1825, and after their marriage, which took place in Kentucky, they located in Big Patch, Wis., remaining there until 1851, when they removed to the farm adjoining that of our subject. There Mr. Quick died in August, 1877, and his wife in 1875. Mrs. Cullen was educated in Grant county, where she grew to be an estimable young woman.

Mr. Cullen lived on the old homestead, in the old house, until 1893, when he erected the fine modern dwelling which reflects great credit to his taste, and makes a delightful home for his family. Much of his attention has been given to fine stock, and in every way he has been successful, and deems this part of the great State of Wisconsin the garden spot. To him and his wife a large family has been born: Lavinda, born in Smelser in 1871, married Wesley John, and has two children, Retta and Mary. Joseph H., born in 1872, married Miss Mildred Johns, resides on a farm in Wisconsin, and has two children, Ethel and Delvin. John E., born in December, 1873, married Miss Sarah Clayton, and resides on a farm. George E., born in 1876, resides on the farm. Nettie E., born in 1879, married William Johns, who is a hotel-keeper in Georgetown. Hubert O. was born in March, 1884. Leland, born in 1885, died in infancy. Howard A. was born July 3, 1887; Melvin H., in 1889; and Roscoe E., in 1892. The younger sons all attend the home school.

Politically Mr. Cullen has always been identified with the Republican party, and he has served as a member of the town board of Smelser for many years. Mrs. Cullen is a consistent member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Cullen is associated with the I. O. O. F. and George and Joseph Cullen are members of the Order of Woodmen. The family possesses the esteem of all the residents of Smelser township. In it are connected a number of prominent old pioneer families, and it is a representative one, without a record of which no history of Grant county would be complete.

L. H. TREGLOWN, M. D., a popular and highly respected physician, whose home is in the village of Arthur, in the town of Lima, Grant county, was born at Linden, Iowa Co., Wis., Oct. 11, 1878, and is a son of Henry and Mary (Crane) Treglown, who were natives of England.

The father of our subject was born in 1824, and the mother in 1835. In their native country they reached maturity, and came when young people to Iowa county, Wis., where they married and settled over forty years ago. Two years after their marriage the young husband left his wife in Wisconsin and crossed the Plains to California, making the journey with an ox-team. Mr. Treglown came back in a few years, and subsequently made the same journey twice, with horses. Returning to his home in Linden, Wis., he followed mining, and also worked in Montana, where he met with fair success. They have a fine home, where he lives retired. Mr. Treglown is a staunch Republican, and with his wife belongs to the Methodist Church. To them were born a family of ten children: (1) Alfred, born in Iowa county, married Miss Julia Vial, of Linden, and moved to the copper mines of Michigan, where he was a miner until 1899. That year he went to California for his health, but too late for any benefit, and he died in February, 1900, leaving a wife and four children, three of whom are married. His widow and Phillip, Edith and Alvie, live in Butte, Mont. Annie married Robert Hancock, and lives in California. Alfred Treglown was a member of the Masonic fraternity for twenty-five years. (2) Jennie is the wife of Thomas Jeffrey, of Linden. Their children are Ray, Ella, Ocea and Glenn. (3) William married Miss Emma J. Hosking, of Colorado, and purchased a home in Linden, where he lived for some years.

He then moved to Montana, where his wife died, in Butte, in 1895, leaving three children, Mamie, Willie and Maud. Mr. Treglown later married Mrs. Richards, of Dodgeville, Wis., and they now reside in Butte, Mont., where he is engaged in mining. (4) Olivia, born in 1858, married Thomas Faull, and is living in Linden, where they are rearing a family of eight children, Willie, Pearl, Maud, Clyde, Laura, Ernest, Roscoe, and Glenn. (5) Frederick A., born 1860, married Miss Maggie Duggan, of Calumet, Mich., to which union were born five children, and is now living in Iron Mountain, Mich. Mr. Treglown is extensively interested in business at Butte, Mont. (6) Etta, born in 1862, obtained her education at the home schools, and is now living in Milwaukee; she is unmarried. (7) Allie, born in 1867, is the wife of Morris Moriarty, of Fond du Lac, Wis., and they reside in Champion, Mich., where he is engaged in business. The children of this union are Walter, Ella and Jack. (8) Walter was born in Iowa county, Wis., is unmarried, and has a livery stable at Calumet, Mich. (9) Alden, born in 1873, married Miss Millie Smith, and is now a resident of Butte, Mont., where he is working in a printing office. There is one daughter in his family.

Dr. Treglown received his elementary education in the home schools, and read medicine with Dr. Stull, of Linden, for half a year. In Keokuk, Iowa, he took a medical course, and a course of dentistry in the Iowa State University, graduating from the Keokuk Medical College in 1896. His first practice was at Linden, and for eight months he was at Champion, Mich. After that he established himself at Arthur, and is building up a fine clientele. He is regarded as a bright and capable young physician, with a good knowledge of his profession, and well up in all modern and progressive ideas.

Dr. Treglown and Miss Lillian Heathcock were married in December, 1898. Mrs. Treglown is the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Heathcock, old pioneers of English descent, who are still living in Linden. She was born in December, 1875, and was educated in the schools of Iowa county.

Dr. Treglown is a Republican, and is health officer of the town of Lima. The Doctor belongs to Washburn Lodge, No. 228, I. O. O. F., is a charter member of Camp No. 5638,

M. W. of A., at Rewey, Wis., and is also affiliated with the Masonic fraternity at Rewey. Though a young man he is a capable physician, and has met with a surprising success since coming to his present location.

JAMES D. ROGERS, farmer, town of Smelser, Grant county, Wisconsin.

A. M. EIDSMORE holds an enviable position as a capable and progressive young farmer in the town of York, Green county, where he resides on his handsome and well appointed farm. The place comprises 162 acres in Sections 10 and 15, six miles east of Blanchardville.

M. O. and Anna (Helland) Eidsmoe, his parents, were born in Norway, and came to Dane county, Wis., in 1855. Two years later they removed to the farm in the town of York where their son A. M. is now found. They had the following children: O. M., a public-school teacher of Dane county, married Mary Helland; G. O. is deceased; Julia is the wife of a Mr. Peterson, formerly of the town of Moscow, Iowa county, now of Wausau, Wis.; M. M. is in the town of Moscow, Iowa county; A. M., whose name appears above, is our subject proper. M. O. Eidsmoe is now living in the town of Moscow, at the age of seventy-eight years; his wife is six years younger. They came to this country very poor, but they prospered, and at one time owned over 200 acres of land. Mr. Eidsmoe was a soldier in his home country, and in 1861, when the first call for troops was made, he was the first man in his town to enlist, becoming a member of Company I, 15th Wis. V. I., serving throughout the war, and being mustered out in 1865. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religion a member of the Lutheran Church.

A. M. Eidsmore, whose career is the theme of this writing, was born Dec. 15, 1863, and was reared on the farm in York township, receiving his education in the local schools. Mr. Eidsmore was married Oct. 12, 1889, to Miss Caroline Ryer, whose parents, Andrew and Mary Ryer, were natives of Norway, and were numbered among the earliest settlers of Green county. To this union were born: Paul G., July 14, 1890; Merton W., Aug. 21, 1892; Hector L., April 14, 1895; Constance A., July 19, 1897; Florence L., June 20, 1899. Mrs. Eidsmore was born March 25, 1869, one of a family of six children: (1) Mary, the wife of William Ivey, of the town of Moscow; (2) Sarah, the wife of Andrew Rye, of Minnesota; (3) Isabella, (4) Amelia, and (5) Ella, all three unmarried; and (6) Caroline, Mrs. Eidsmore.

Mr. Eidsmore is one of the leading men in his town, where he takes a prominent part in the councils of the Democratic party, having been member of the Democratic county committee, and national precinct representative. He has served on the town board, has been judge of elections, school director, and justice of the peace, and in the campaign of 1898 was a candidate on the Democratic ticket for the position of register of deeds in Green county. Mr. Eidsmore owes his present comfortable condition to his own exertions, as he had to depend on himself when he began life. He now owns a fine place, supplied with all the modern requisites for profitable farming. Devoting his farm to general purposes, he yet gives special attention to dairying, and is the president of a cooperative cheese company, whose factory is on his farm.

In his religious affiliations Mr. Eidsmore is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in his career exemplifies the influence of a high moral character and strong convictions. In every walk of his active and useful life he has proved himself genuine and upright. In his domestic relations he is a good husband and a kind father, and in the community he is a broad and progressive man, standing for the best ideals of American citizenship, and giving his influence to measures and enterprises that look to the public good.

F. W. MARCUSSEN, the popular and rising young hardware merchant of Platteville, Grant county, was born in the northern part of Germany, in May, 1861, and is a son of M. H. M. and Marguerite Marcussen, who still have their home in the Fatherland.

F. W. Marcussen was educated in the common schools of his native country, and was reared on a farm. In 1878 he came to America, first locating near Davenport, Iowa, where he worked three years as a farm hand for an uncle, C. D. Marcussen, and in 1882 went to Victor, same State, and was again employed on a farm for three years. He then returned to Davenport, and worked for W. P. Bissell, in the hardware trade, until 1888, receiving thorough instruction in the business. From Davenport he went to Sioux City, still in the employ of Mr. Bissell, who had an extensive wholesale hardware store in that city. In June, 1890, Mr. Marcussen came from Sioux City to Platteville, Wis., purchased the stock of John F. Seubert, and engaged in the hardware business on his own account, in which he has met with the most flattering success up to the present time.

In 1889 Mr. Marcussen was united in marriage with Miss Hannah Bevers, the accomplished daughter of J. N. and Hannah Bevers, an old pioneer family of Platteville, of German origin, although Mrs. Marcussen was born, educated and reared to womanhood in Platteville. To this union one daughter and one son, Ida and Edward (twins), were born in Sioux City in 1890; they are now attending school in Platteville. Mr. and Mrs. Marcussen are members of the Lutheran Church, to the support of which they are liberal contributors; fraternally Mr. Marcussen is a member of the F. & A. M., Melody Lodge, No. 2, of Platteville, and politically he is a Democrat.

Mr. Marcussen began life in his adopted country a poor boy, but by his industry, economy and strictly business habits has brought himself to the front as a leading merchant. His extensive store is stocked with everything in domestic and imported shelf and heavy hardware, and similar articles usually found in such establishments, for Mr. Marcussen thoroughly understands the business, and is always affable, obliging and anxious to please his customers. As a citizen he is highly respected, and in society he and wife mingle with the best people in Platteville.

SEVER O. SEVERSON, who is known as one of the most progressive and successful young farmers of Jordan township, Green county, was born in Manitowoc county, Wis., Jan. 1, 1868, and he is a typical representative of the up-to-date agricultural element of southwestern Wisconsin.

Ole Severson, father of our subject, was born in 1818, in Hallingdal, Norway, and remained in his native land until 1850. Having concluded that if he would better his fortunes he must make a start somewhere else, he determined to come to the United States, and, after working industriously and saving for some time to accumulate enough to pay his passage, he embarked for America on a sailing vessel used as a cotton freighter. The ocean voyage took seventeen weeks, during which time they were nearly shipwrecked several times, and their provisions gave out, so that they almost starved before reaching port. After land Mr. Severson came West immediately, reaching Milwaukee, Wis., in about a week, and he made his first location in Manitowoc county, and in 1880 located in Green county, buying land in Jordan township on his settlement here, which he cultivated until the close of his life. In 1862 Mr. Severson married Mrs. Bertha (Quala) Agern, and two children were born to their union, Rachel and Sever O. The daughter, born June 24, 1864, married Marcus Iverson, of Marathon county, Wis., and they have five children, Iver, Oscar, Alfred, Earl and Earnest. Ole Severson passed away March 12, 1889, his wife preceding him to the better land June 7, 1878. Mrs. Severson was buried in Valders cemetery, Manitowoc Co., Wis., while Mr. Severson was buried in the Norwegian cemetery in Jordan township, Green county. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, and a Republican in political sentiment. Sever Severson, father of Ole, passed his entire life in Norway.

Mrs. Bertha (Quala) Severson was born in Norway, and there married Knudt Agern, by whom she had six children, viz.: Ole, who is a farmer in Pierce county, Wis.; Thomas, who is in business in Fergus Falls, Minn.; John, of Lake Geneva, Wis., who is in the employ of C. C. Boyle, of Chicago; Caroline, deceased wife of Erick Johnson, of Chicago; Bertha, wife of Ole Rollendson, of Battle Lake, Minn.; and Emma, who died unmarried. Mr. and Mrs. Agern came to America in an early day and settled in Wisconsin. He was drowned in the Manitowoc river, while crossing on the ice.

Sever O. Severson was reared on the home farm, received his education in the public schools of the locality, and when old enough to choose his life work decided on farming, for which, and its various branches, he possesses decided ability. In addition to general agricultural pursuits he has engaged in dairy farming and the creamery business, and has met with unvarying success in all his undertakings, proving himself a man of sound judgment and a capable manager. Recently he sold the old place, a highly improved farm, to Adolph Mier, receiving $9,800 for the tract, though his father paid but $1,600 for it, and the difference in value is sufficient testimony of the attention the land received from our subject and his father. Mr. Severson now resides on a farm of fifty-three acres in Jordan which he purchased, and he has also bought the Ned. Trickel farm, in Cadiz township, Green county, located three-quarters of a mile north of Browntown, paying $7,700 for that property. He ranks high among the thrifty, well-to-do farmers of his section, and bids fair to keep unsullied the honorable name which his father made in the community.

On Nov. 5, 1891, Mr. Severson was united in marriage with Miss Rachel Thorson, who was born Aug. 25, 1863, in Jordan township, daughter of Knudt and Sarah (Everson) Thorson, early settlers of Jordan township, where Mr. Thorson became a well-to-do farmer. Two children have been born to our subject and his wife: Raymond, on Oct. 28, 1892; and Selma, on Jan. 23, 1895. Mr. Severson is a member of the Lutheran Church. In political opinion he is a Republican, but he uses his ballot in support of principle, not of party. He has served as school director and member of the township board, and in the discharge of the duties connected with those incumbencies showed a high order of citizenship. He is a good neighbor and a firm friend, and is liked as well as respected by all who know him.

REV. SYLVESTER J. DOWLING. In material things the degree of success attained is measured by the concentration required to attain it, but who can estimate the success that comes from a life consecrated to the uplifting of mankind? All personal aims and ambitions laid aside, every energy of body and mind directed in one all-absorbing passion—the development and consequent elevation of the spiritual life in his fellow men! That is the life of a priest, a man called by the Master Himself, and of such is Rev. Father Dowling, of Argyle, whose patience, devotion, and sincerity have endeared him not alone to the members of his own parish, but to all who know him.

Rev. Sylvester J. Dowling is a native of the State of Wisconsin, and was born at Racine Sept. 6, 1872, a son of Sylvester Dowling, long since deceased, and his wife, Maria Hughes, the daughter of a pioneer of Racine, who built the second house in that city. Our subject was one of a family of eight children, seven of whom are yet living: John C., a resident of Chicago; Edward F., an architect of Chicago; Anna, who makes her home with our subject; Agnes, an artist of exceptional ability, with a studio in Milwaukee; and Clara and Alice, at home. Father Dowling obtained his early education in the public schools at home, and in September, 1887, entered St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, where he remained nine years. His ordination took place June 21, 1896, the service being conducted by Archbishop Katzer. During the time he was at the Seminary his mother moved to Milwaukee, and there he celebrated his first mass a few days after the impressive ceremony that had made him a priest in the Roman Catholic Church. His first appointment was at Whitewater, Wis., where he acted as assistant to Rev. Father Fitzgibbon, and on the death of that esteemed pastor, in January, 1897, was appointed his successor. In August, 1897, he was transferred to St. Patrick's Church, Milwaukee, as assistant to Rev. Father Fairbanks, and in August, 1898, received the appointment at Argyle.

At the time Father Dowling received the appointment to Argyle there was no church there; the large number of Catholic families in the vicinity had been attending St. Francis Church, in Adams, Green Co., Wis., a little town about five miles east. Upon Father Dowling's arrival, in 1898, he immediately began making preparations for the erection of a church building, and so promptly did the people respond to his solicitations, and so energetically did he work, that in October, 1899, the present beautiful and commodious edifice was dedicated, the services being conducted by Rev. Dean Eugene McGinnity, of Janesville, Wis. The original cost of the building was $4,000, and it is tastefully decorated and furnished. Since then a modern equipped home for the priest has been purchased, and the grounds of all finely improved, the whole amount expended being about $10,000. When St. Joseph's church was erected, at Argyle, the church at Adams, in Green county, formerly attended by the Argyle parishioners, was attached to Argyle as a mission. Father Dowling is now engaged in the erection of a new church at Adams, which, when completed, will cost $5,000, but the money is on hand, and the people will not be burdened with debt of any description. The financial condition of his Argyle parish is good, the parish being entirely free from debt.

Among the societies of the church are the "Altar Society," the "Children of St. Mary," and the "Choir Society." In the last named there are twenty-one voices, all trained by the Father himself, who has made a specialty of music, and who possesses a remarkably sweet-toned voice. Father Dowling is a devoted and earnest temperance worker, and has organized societies in this line in both Argyle and Adams, the Society of Total Abstiners at Argyle numbering fifty-one members, and at Adams, eighty-three members. His work in temperance is strictly non-sectarian, and many of the members are Protestants.

Father Dowling is broad-minded, charitable and public-spirited, and, while ardently attached to the Church of Rome, his nobility of character has won him the esteem of all sects, and the respect of all men.

CHRISTIAN VINGER stands well among the prosperous and wealthy young citizens of the town of York, Green county, where he was born Nov. 3, 1864, a son of Gulbrand G. Vinger, who now resides in Argyle, Wisconsin.

Gulbrand G. Vinger was born Jan. 2, 1830, in Norway, and came to this country in 1850, being the first member of his family to emigrate to the United States. He has since made his home in Green and Lafayette counties, Wis., occupied in farming. During his first five years here he worked out, in 1855 homesteading and buying from the government the 400 acres now included in the original Vinger homestead, which he yet operates. In 1855 Mr. Vinger married Martha Carlson, and to them were born twelve children: Gust and Lewis, both of Argyle; Christ, deceased; Edward, of the town of Adams, where he is engaged in farming; Martin, who is deceased; Christian, whose name introduces this article; Oliver, a merchant of Argyle; Brown, of the town of York; Henry, of Lafayette county; Theodore, a farmer of Argyle township; Matilda, wife of Nim Nelson, a merchant in the village of Argyle; and Caroline, the wife of Nels Nelson. Gulbrand G. Vinger served as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, making a record as a gallant and loyal son of his adopted country. He is now retired, enjoying the fruits of a useful and well-spent life.

Christian Vinger has his home on Section 34, York township, six miles east of Blanchardville, and sixteen miles northwest of Monroe, his being a large and attractive farm of 334 acres, with a new dwelling, and farm buildings ample to the demand, and provided with all the requisites for modern and progressive farming.

Mr. Vinger and Miss Carrie Mann were married March 15, 1888, and to this union came two children: Melvin, born March 14, 1889, and Clarence, born Aug. 19, 1891. Mrs. Vinger was born Oct. 28, 1869, and died March 15, 1901, regretted by all who knew her. She was one of the following family, all four of whom lived to maturity: Andrew, who is deceased; Olena, who married Edward Vinger, and died in 1900; Carrie, noted above as the wife of Christian Vinger; and Mattie, living at home with her parents in the town of Adams, who is the only one of this family now surviving. Mrs. Vinger was a noble and high-minded young woman, of charming Christian character, and was kind and good to all. Her loss was a great affliction to Mr. Vinger and his children, and her memory will long survive in their hearts and in the remembrance of her many friends.

Mr. Vinger is a staunch Republican, has served on the town board, and filled other town offices as well, being at the present time one of the leading farmer citizens of the town, where his reputation is very high by reason of his good character and moral habits. In religion he is a Lutheran, and is devoted to his church, of which he is a valuable factor.

SHANNON W. WARWICK is one of the leading farmers of Wyalusing township, and a worthy representative of an honored pioneer family of Grant county.

William C. Warwick, his father, was born near Hamilton, Butler Co., Ohio, June 17, 1816, and on reaching manhood was there married, in 1843, to Miss Nancy Longfellow, who was also born near Hamilton, Nov. 15, 1822, a daughter of Jacob G. and Mary S. Longfellow, and a cousin of the illustrious poet, Henry W. Longfellow. In 1846 William C. Warwick, with his wife and two small children, Walter D. and Shannon W., left Ohio with the intention of making his home farther West. Traveling in those early days was slow and tedious. Their course after reaching the Mississippi river was up that stream by steamboat to Galena, and, with the team brought with them, they then drove across the country to Lancaster, Grant Co., Wis., which place at that time was a small village, with but few inhabitants. Mr. Warwick located on Blake's Prairie, where he opened up a farm, being one of the first to settle there. Later he sold that place to a Mr. Weed, and bought another farm, near Bloomington, finally removing to that village, where he died in August, 1885. He had learned the miller's trade in Ohio, and when the mill was erected at Bloomington he was induced to take charge of the same, being the first to operate it. He possessed a thorough knowledge of the milling business, and it was a fortunate thing for the community in those early days that so able a miller was to be found among the pioneers. Mr. Warwick was an industrious and capable citizen, and left an enviable record for honesty and uprightness of character as an inheritance to his children. He was especially well known for his kindness of heart and liberality, and seldom or never said an unkind word of any one. His worthy wife survived him, and passed away March 19, 1888. She was of a kind and affectionate nature, ever ready to help those in need, and was a devoted wife and mother, and a worthy partner of her honored husband. They were the parents of ten children, seven of whom are living at the present writing (1900), but only two are residents of Grant county: Shannon W., our subject; and Mrs. Minnie R. Fox, of Bloomington, Wisconsin.

Shannon W. Warwick was born in Ohio Sept. 11, 1846, and was only a few weeks old when brought by his parents to Wisconsin. He was reared in Bloomington, and educated in the public schools of that place, and early became familiar with the work of the farm, also gaining some knowledge of the milling business by assisting his father in the mill. His brother Walter D. thoroughly learned the miller's trade with the father; he died a number of years ago.

On Nov. 1, 1877, Shannon W. Warwick married Maggie L. Mahood, who was born in Lancaster, Wis., May 3, 1858, a daughter of Charles and Margaret (Parker) Mahood, pioneers of Grant county. The Parkers located here about 1845. Mr. Mahood died in 1866, but his widow still survives, and continues to make her home in Lancaster. Mr. and Mrs. Warwick have four children, namely: Charlotte E., wife of George S. Glenn; Mary A.; Kittie F.; and Lou L. They have spent their entire married life on the farm in Wyalusing township, where they now reside, and are numbered among the highly esteemed and valued citizens of that locality. They have a comfortable home and a well-improved and valuable farm.

MATTHEW MURPHY, lawyer and surveyor of Benton, Lafayette county, was born in St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1826. He is a son of Dennis and Eliza (Broughelton) Murphy, the father born in Ireland in 1800, and the mother in Allegheny county, Penn., in 1808.

Dennis Murphy came to this country in 1820, and was married in Pennsylvania several years later. After his marriage he moved with his wife to Louisville, Ky., and very soon came to Wisconsin, as early as 1827 making his appearance in the town of Benton, where he purchased a tract of land on which he built the first sawmill in this section of the State. A few years later he added a flouring-mill, using the same power for both. He was one of the early pioneers, and a prominent man in his day. He owned wide tracts of land, gradually became very prosperous, and here spent his life, dying in 1870. In religion he was a Catholic, and he was one of the builders of the first church erected in this part of the country. His first wife died at their home in 1842, leaving him four children, and he subsequently married a lady of Lafayette county, by which union there were two children, one of whom, Mrs. John Morgan, is living in Iowa. The other died some years ago. (1) Matthew is the eldest of the children born to the first marriage. (2) Mary, Mrs. Pardee, lives in Iowa. (3) Rebecca is the widow of John Malorie, and lives in Dubuque, Iowa. (4) Daniel, born in Lafayette county, died when a young man of twenty-two years, under the parental roof. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are well remembered for their kindly spirit and open-hearted hospitality; their home was always open to the stranger. During the Black Hawk war he was a soldier in Gen. Armstrong's regiment, and his early life was full of hardship and adventure.

Matthew Murphy obtained his early education in the Galena schools, and when a young man took up the study of law, which was his calling for many years, and in which he did remarkably well. He also learned surveying, and for more than forty years he has ever been ready to assist in the more accurate computation of areas. During these years he has dealt largely in mining stock and real estate, and has gradually become one of the wealthiest men of his section. Mr. Murphy was always a hard-working and active business man, determined to keep everything in which he had an interest going at full speed. For ten years or more he was interested in a store in Benton, under the firm name of Murphy & Horr. Since 1888 Mr. Murphy has been retired from active life, and makes his home in Benton, where he owns a large amount of real estate. From early manhood Mr. Murphy has taken an active interest in the political affairs of the county. He was chairman of the county board, and was a delegate to the State convention on several occasions. All the local offices of the town have, at one time or another, been filled by him.

Mr. Murphy has never married, but his life has been open and helpful to his community, where his acts of charity are well known. Fraternally he is a Mason, and was instrumental in the establishment of the order in this part of the State as early as 1842. In 1894, when the State Bank of Benton was established, Mr. Murphy became one of its officers and stockholders, with Judge Orton as president, and J. Buchan as cashier. It does an extensive business. Mr. Murphy is one of the wealthy and influential citizens of Lafayette county, where his residence dates from 1828, making him one of the oldest business men in this part of the State. His manly qualities and kindly spirit have given him a place in the hearts of the people which will long remain to him.

HERMAN VOGEL, of Cassville, Grant county, was born in Cassville Dec. 22, 1862, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Hanbach) Vogel, both natives of Germany, the former born in Bavaria, the latter in Wurtemberg. On coming to the New World the father first located in Pittsburg, Penn., whence he removed to Indianapolis, Ind., later to Montrose, and in 1854 settled in Dubuque, Iowa. A year later he became a resident of Cassville, Wis., and, being a butcher by trade, he opened a meat market at that place, which he conducted with good success for many years. He died in Cassville in 1889, respected by all who knew him; in fact, no more honorable man ever lived. His estimable wife, who still survives him, continues to make her home at that place. Of the four children born to them, three are living, namely: Elizabeth, at home; Herman; and John, a resident of Iowa.

Matt. Murphy

Herman Vogel passed the days of his boyhood and youth in his native town, and is indebted to its public schools for his educational advantages. On starting out in life for himself he was engaged in the meat market business with his father until 1889, when he embarked in business as a dealer in groceries and dry goods.

G. W. GEHRAND, principal of the Boscobel High School, Boscobel, Grant county, Wisconsin.

HENRY SYLVANUS ANDERSON, merchant and postmaster at Bergen, Rock county, was appointed by President McKinley, his appointment bearing date of March 29, 1898, and the name of Postmaster-General James H. Gray.

Mr. Anderson was born in Racine county, Wis., in 1864, and is still a young man, with his life before him. He received his education in the old stone school house still standing in Le Roy, Ill., leaving school, however, at an early age, and he worked on his father's farm from his fourteenth to his twenty-fourth year. His first business venture was made at Ashland, Wis., where he set up a grocery business, catering especially to the needs of the lumber camps. He was engaged there for two years, selling out in order to take a place as fireman on the Great Northern railroad, and had a run out of St. Paul, which he held for five years. In 1897 Mr. Anderson came to Bergen, and bought a property consisting of a general store and three acres of land in the corner of the State Line and Clinton streets. He has carried on this business with marked success, and built up a trade that promises still larger results in the near future.

48

On Oct. 7, 1892, Mr. Anderson married Miss Ann Emilia Skofstad, a daughter of Ole and Annie Melinda (Anderson) Skofstad, farming people in Boone county, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are the parents of two children, Peter Sylvanus and Ann Melinda. He belongs to Lodge No. 92, I. O. O. F., at St. Cloud, Minn., where he joined the order in 1894; and to the camp of the Modern Woodmen of America at Clinton, Wis. He is a Republican, and in religious connection is a consistent member of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, having been christened and confirmed by Rev. Ole Andrewson, whose biography appears elsewhere.

Peter Anderson, the father of Henry Sylvanus, was born in Norway Dec. 4, 1817, and died at his home in Boone county, Ill., April 20, 1898. He was a farmer, and a man of more than usual force of character. His wife, Sonva, born in 1822, in Norway, died in Englewood, Chicago, in 1900, and her remains are interred in Bergen, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson came to this country in 1849, after a voyage of sixteen weeks on the ocean in a sailing-vessel. They landed at New York, and went from there to Albany, making the journey from that point to Buffalo by the canal, and from Buffalo to Milwaukee by the Great Lakes. They settled in Yorkville, Racine Co.; Wis., living there until 1868, when they moved to the Boone county homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were the parents of nine children. Their eldest son, Peter, enlisted in the Union army as a member of Company C, 15th Wis. V. I., and re-enlisted as a veteran in 1864. He served throughout the war, was discharged, and died in 1879. Ole, their second son, died the same year. Mary Ann married C. E. Powers. Martin, the third son, lives on the family homestead. Henry S., the gentleman whose name begins this article, is the youngest child of the family. Four of the children died at an early age, three being carried off by a cholera visitation that swept through this country.

FRANK WOODWARD METCALF. Rarely do the electors of a county, by popular ballot, secure for an office of grave public trust an incumbent so thoroughly qualified—through ability, experience and devotion to his work—as did the voters of Iowa county when they chose Mr. Metcalf superintendent of county schools. As yet a young man of twenty-five years, he has already won a wide reputation as an educator, and has made his impress felt upon the school system of the county. His parents, George and Sarah (Woodward) Metcalf, were of English birth, having been born in the County of York. Both are numbered among those who have passed away, Mrs. Metcalf dying Sept. 8, 1890, and her husband in February, 1899. She was taken by her parents, while a young girl, to County Wicklow, Ireland, and thence the family emigrated to America, settling in Highland township, Iowa Co., Wis. They were among the early settlers there, and both were held in high esteem for their many admirable qualities of mind and soul.

Frank W. Metcalf is one of a family of seven children, and was born in Wyoming township, Iowa county, Oct. 8, 1875. After graduating from the public schools he matriculated at the State University, at Madison, and after a year's attendance at that institution entered the State Normal School, at White-water, graduating therefrom in 1898, after one year's attendance. He began his work as a teacher as early as 1893, and was for two years principal of public schools at Mifflin. There his success was so pronounced that in 1898 he received the Republican nomination for the county superintendency, and was triumphantly elected to that position, than which in view of its perplexing problems and its far-reaching influence no county office is of greater importance. To the discharge of his arduous duties Mr. Metcalf brought a clear mind and a ripe training, earnest purpose and successful experience. In their fulfillment he has neither faltered nor failed. Within the limits of Iowa county are 127 school districts, and about 175 applicants for positions as teachers are examined every year. A general institute, whose sessions usually consume a fortnight, is held at the county seat every summer, and in neighboring villages several Saturdays during the year are devoted to purposes of a kindred character.

During his comparatively brief term of office Mr. Metcalf has succeeded in introducing some important and valuable improvements on former educational methods. It is through his efforts, chiefly, that educational exhibits have become an important feature of county fairs, the first having been made at the Iowa County Fair, in 1899. Upon his advice, moreover, and largely through his influence, the county board has made an appropriation for the examination of applicants for elementary public-school diplomas.

Before a man of his keen intelligence, quick perception, and personal force there lies a future of bright promise.

U. L. HOLFORD, M. D., is a skilled physician and surgeon of Cassville, Grant county, one whose knowledge of the science of medicine is broad and comprehensive, and whose ability in applying its principles to the needs of suffering humanity has gained him an enviable prestige in professional circles.

The Doctor is one of Wisconsin's native sons, his birth having occurred in Bloomington, Grant county, in 1870. His father, William H. Holford, was born in Pennsylvania, and in early life came to this State with his parents, William and Flora (Benson) Holford, who made the journey West by the Great Lakes to Chicago, and from that city by ox-team to Beetown, Grant county, in 1834. The Doctor's grandfather was a farmer by occupation, and was also one of the early teachers of the county. For some time he filled the office of justice of the peace. He died at his home in Beetown in the early sixties. William H. Holford, the Doctor's father, grew to manhood at that place, and is now a prominent merchant of Bloomington, Grant county. His wife is a native of the county, born in Potosi, and a daughter of Levi and Elizabeth (Loveland) Benson, who about 1839-40 came to Wisconsin from Connecticut, and took up their residence in Potosi, where Mr. Benson engaged in the hardware business, hauling his goods from Milwaukee. Later he carried on the same trade in Bloomington where he died in 1874. His wife, who long survived him, passed away at the same place in 1897. Dr. Holford is the second in a family of three children, the others being Elva, a teacher in Graf-ton Hall, Fond du Lac, Wis.; and Laverne, who was graduated at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., in 1900, and published the college paper, at the same time doing job printing.

The early life of Dr. Holford was passed in his native town, and in its public schools he acquired his literary education. Later he entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, where he was graduated in 1892, and the same year began practice in Beetown, Grant county, remaining there about two years. On Feb. 14, 1894, he opened an office in Cassville, and has since engaged in practice at that place. He has met with marked success in his chosen calling, and to-day ranks high among the prominent professional men of Grant county.

Dr. Holford was married, in Cassville, in 1894, to Miss May Okey, also a native of Grant county, and a daughter of Samuel W. and Frances (Joiner) Okey, who reside on a farm in Cassville township. The Doctor and his wife have three children, namely: Frances E., Eunice and Reginald.

DAVID KNOBEL, who has long held an enviable position among the honorable and successful farmers of Jordan township, Green county, is living on his handsome and well-tilled farm, which is located in Section 12, just across the Monroe line. Mr. Knobel comes from Canton Glarus, Switzerland, where he was born Oct. 15, 1842, and is a son of Andrew and Rachel (Hafty) Knobel, both of whom lived and died in Switzerland.

David Knobel came to this country in 1864, and for ten years remained in New York, where he was steadily engaged in work. There on Sept. 12, 1874, he was married to Miss Louisa Stanfield, a native of old England, but for a number of years a resident of this country. Immediately following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Knobel came to Green county, Wis., and here their home has been maintained to the present time. To them were born the following children: Annie, born Feb. 6, 1876, married Jacob Stauffacher, a prosperous young farmer of the town of Jordan; Emma, born Nov. 4, 1879, is at home; and Alfred George, born Aug. 31, 1883, is at home.

Mr. Knobel was reared under conditions of not uncommon privation in the old country, and was inured to hard work from a very early age. Landing in this country a poor man, his subsequent prosperity has come entirely from his own thrift, energy and honorable character. In his boyhood and youth he worked in the mills of the old country, and for some time after coming to the United States he worked for wages. In 1882 he bought the farm where he is found to-day, and to its care and improvement he has devoted his strength and enthusiasm. The family find shelter in a splendid two-story farm house, there are ample barns and outbuildings, and the land is under a high state of cultivation. The owner is a hard-working and thoroughly practical farmer, and his broad acres show the character and industry of the man. Beside his general farming, Mr. Knobel is deeply interested in dairy work and stock raising. At the present time he is milking some thirty cows, and is a partner in a co-operative creamery on his farm.

Mr. Knobel is a Democrat, and both himself and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church of Monroe. They are good people, and are much respected by all who know them. Mr. Knobel is noted for his honest disposition and unswerving integrity, and his wife is a lady of unusual attainments and fine character. She is a devoted Christian wife and mother.

NATHANIEL MARTIN, whose name in Cadiz township, Green county, is "familiar as household words," is a native of Virginia, born Dec. 14, 1816.

James and Rebecca (Pearcy) Martin, his parents, were also Virginians, and came of Irish and English ancestry, respectively, Grandfather Martin having been born in Ireland, and Grandfather Percy in England. James and Rebecca Martin had ten children: Sidney, Redmond, Isaiah, Elias, Nathaniel, Rebecca, Nancy, Charles, Polly (who died in childhood), and one whose name is not given, all now deceased except Nathaniel and Rebecca (Mrs. Burrell), the latter of whom is residing in Nora, Illinois.

Nathaniel Martin was reared and educated in Virginia, whence, at the age of twenty, he went to St. Louis, Mo., and chopped wood for one winter. In the spring of 1837 he removed to Stephenson county, Ill., where for several years he worked at day wages. In 1848 he came to Green county, Wis., and built a dam on the Pecatonica river, at a point where the present village of Martintown now stands, and the same year he erected a saw-mill and later a gristmill. Here for over fifty-two years he has conducted a general milling business with remarkable success. Mr. Martin commenced life a poor boy, but by hard work, persistent and judicious economy he has become one of the wealthiest men of Green county, at one time owning 1,200 acres of fine land, over 200 of which were under cultivation. However, he has given away most of his land, and is now devoting his time exclusively to operating the mills. For more than half a century he has been one of the leading business men of Cadiz township, and the village of Martintown (known as "Martin" before the railroad was built to that point), where he has his home, was platted by and named for him.

On Feb. 25, 1847, Nathaniel Martin married Miss Hannah Strader, daughter of Jacob and Rachel (Starr) Strader, who were among the early settlers of Green county, and fourteen children were born of this union, viz.: Elias, who lives at Cripple Creek, Colo., married Lavina, daughter of Thomas Watson; Alice is deceased; her twin sister, Eleanor A., married John Warner, of Winslow, Ill.; Jennie Edith, now deceased, was the wife of Jacob Hodge, late of Minnesota; Horatio makes his home in Martintown, Wis., being in partnership with his father in the milling business (he married Laura Hart, and has four children); William and Charles are both deceased; Emma is the wife of Cullen P. Brown, of Saint Marys, Mo.; Christa B. and Abraham L. are deceased; Mary L. is the wife of Elwood Bucher, of Illinois; James F. is deceased; Juliet B. is the wife of Edwin E. Savage, a machinist of Seattle, Wash.; and Hannah is deceased. There are twenty-eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. In politics Mr. Martin leans toward Prohibition, but was originally a Whig, later a Republican, and during his long career in Green county has always declined to fill any offices of honor and trust. In religious faith he accepts the strict interpretation of the Scriptures, and is opposed to all dogmas and creed doctrines. He and his estimable wife, who has been his faithful helpmeet for fifty-four years of joys and sorrows, live in the enjoyment of the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

MRS. ANN LEADBETTER. Rarely does the biographical writer find a task more congenial than to tell the life story of one whose maternal love has reared two families of children, and who, at the advanced age of eighty-six years, enjoys the marked esteem of her community, the genuine affection of her friends and the devoted love of her children and grandchildren. Such a one is Mrs. Ann Leadbetter, of Montfort, who has witnessed and participated in the growth of Grant county for more than fifty years.

This venerable lady was born in Butler county, Ohio, on Jan. 20, 1814. Her father, Alexander George, was a Virginian, and her mother, whose name before marriage was Sarah Love, was a Kentuckian. Mrs. Leadbetter was a young girl of thirteen when her parents removed from Ohio to Jo Daviess county, Ill., settling near Galena. Lead mining was then one of the chief industries of that section, and she well remembers all the hardships and pleasures of life among the mines in those early days. She is the eldest of a family of nine children, of whom only herself and her youngest sister, Mrs. Mary Wansey, are yet living. The latter has her home in Marysville, Kans. Mr. George engaged in farming as well as mining, and both he and his wife died at Hanover, Jo Daviess county, the mother of the family passing away first and the father a few years later, his demise occurring about 1849.

Mrs. Leadbetter has been twice left a widow. She was first led to the altar by Samuel Moore, of Galena, when she was a girl of fourteen years, the marriage being solemnized in 1828. Her second marriage took place twenty years later, the bridegroom being Asaph Leadbetter. Four children were born to the first union, and to the latter three. Mr. Moore's children were Nancy J., Eugene J., Alexander and Susan. All these make their home with Mrs. Leadbetter, with the exception of the youngest, Susan, who is now Mrs. Parish. The issue of the second marriage was three daughters: Martha, the wife of Samuel Greden; Asaphina, Mrs. George Weaver; and Lucretia Ann, deceased.

Shortly after her second marriage Mrs. Leadbetter and her husband removed from Illinois to Montfort, Grant county. In 1850 he went on a prospecting tour to California, returning after an absence of two years. In 1854 he started on a second expedition to the Pacific coast, but he and his party were murdered en route. Mrs. Leadbetter recalls, with vivid distinctness, the stirring scenes of the Black Hawk war, and the tribulations, perils and pleasures of early settlers in the great central West as as fresh in her recollection as they were thirty years ago. Such women, venerable in years and clear in intellect, ripe in experience and unflinching in hope, constitute the glory of a community, while their lives are in themselves a benediction.

ARTHUR HERN. Both as a business man and as a farmer the subject of this sketch has been successfully engaged in Rock county, though farming has been and still is his chief occupation. He possesses an active, energetic temperament, which, combined with his cool judgment and good principles, has smoothed the pathway of life and won for him the esteem of the people among whom he has lived for so many years.

Timothy Hern, his paternal grandfather, was a native of Ireland, and emigrated to America when about eighteen years old, settling in Maine. He was educated for the Catholic priesthood, but gave up that faith, and for many years engaged in teaching school in Maine, being a fine scholar. He married Miss Sally Malcom, who was born in Maine, of Scotch descent, and was one of a family of seven children, four sons and three daughters, of whom the Loys were all sailors, and captains of vessels, having learned navigation from Mr. Hern. The father of Mrs. Timothy Hern was a soldier in the Revolutionary war.

William Hern, the father of our subject, was born in Maine about 1807, and in his youth acquired the trade of a ship caulker. He married Miss Rachel Hunter, daughter of David Hunter, a wealthy shipbuilder and lumberman of Scottish and English ancestry, and a man of unusual energy and ability. David Hunter erected a sawmill and a gristmill at a point known as Hunter's Mills, and was thus the founder of the town afterward called Clinton. He held many offices of honor and trust, and lived to the good old age of eighty-seven years, leaving a family of ten children, six sons and four daughters. William Hern served as captain of an artillery company of the Maine State militia for a number of years. In 1844 he moved with his family to Lowell, Mass., and there worked at the carpenter's trade for four years. In 1848 he resolved to try his fortunes in the West. He lived for a year in Chicago, then in 1849 came to Rock county, Wis., locating in Bradford, where he followed carpentering for several years. In 1851 or 1852 he bought a farm of eighty acres, to which he afterward added 100 acres. It was unbroken prairie land, but he reduced it to cultivation, and here he remained until his death, in 1865, at the age of fifty-eight years. His wife survived until Jan. 5, 1887, passing away at the age of seventy-five years. They were Universalists in religious faith. To William and Rachel Hern were born five children, three sons and two daughters. Two of the sons, Hartwell C. and David W., served in the Civil war. Hartwell C. had served as ship carpenter on a United States vessel before the war, and was in the South when Fort Sumter was fired upon. He at once came North, and in 1861 enlisted in Company E, 5th Wis. V. I., for three years. He was orderly sergeant, and for gallant conduct a commission as second lieutenant was issued to him, but before it reached him the young soldier fell in battle at Williamsburg, May 5, 1862. David W. Hern enlisted in the 2d Minn. V. I., and served during the Civil war, also in the Indian war in Minnesota. He is now a resident of St. Paul, Minn. Of the two sisters of our subject one survives, Martha, wife of William Getty, of Minneapolis.

Arthur Hern was born in Clinton, Kennebec Co., Maine, Dec. 14, 1836. At the age of seven years he moved with his parents to Lowell, and four years later, when the father came West to try his fortune, the mother and our subject returned to Clinton, Maine, for a few years. Arthur Hern settled in Bradford township with his parents in 1851, and has remained in Rock county ever since. He had attended the common schools in Maine and the grammar school at Lowell, Mass. After coming to Wisconsin he entered Milton (Wis.) College as a student. At the death of his parents he came into possession of the home farm, containing about 200 acres, in Bradford township. His present home of 272 acres in La Prairie township he has occupied since 1879. For a number of years he successfully operated a cigar factory.

On Dec. 10, 1868, Mr. Hern married Miss Harriet E. Lawrence, daughter of Clark W. and Hannah M. (Lewis) Lawrence. They had a son, Herbert A. Politically Mr. Hern is a Democrat, and served as justice of the peace for one term. Fraternally he is a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M. He is one of the most prominent citizens of La Prairie township, and is most highly respected by all who know him.

On April 13, 1893, the entire community was shocked to hear of the sad death of Mrs.

Arthur Hern. Matthew Bitson and his wife had for some months occupied a house on Mr. Hern's estate, and it was well known in the community that their relations were not pleasant, Mr. Bitson having frequent quarrels with his wife. On these occasions Mrs. Hern had frequently acted as a peacemaker, her kindly disposition often causing her to be called upon to smooth the rough paths of her friends. This was the case on that ill-fated April morning, when, in response to Mrs. Bitson's appeal for aid against the violence of her husband's temper, Mrs. Hern entered the Bitson house. Mr. Bitson, enraged at her appearance, shot both his wife and Mrs. Hern, and then fired the house to conceal his crime. The charred remains of both women were found in the cellar, and a night-and-day search for the murderer was successful. He plead guilty and received a life sentence. Mrs. Hern had been deeply beloved, and her tragic death, while on a mission of benevolence, was the cause of great indignation, as well as of the most universal sorrow.

JOHN EINERSON (deceased), long an honored and industrious resident of the town of York, Green county, was born in Bergen, Norway, Aug. 6, 1820, and died in York Jan. 19, 1900. It was not until he reached middle life that he came to this country, arriving here in 1854, and making his home on section 18, York township, two years later. In 1873 he bought the farm which now belongs to his estate and brought it up to a high state of fertility before his death.

John Einerson was married to Miss Christe in Norway, and to them were born six children, two of whom are now living, Gertrude and Ole. Mr. Einerson was left a widower, and was a second time married, in 1865, to Miss Bertha Dahle. To this union were born the following children: Carrie lives in the town of Moscow; Susie is in South Dakota; Edward is in Browntown, Green county, in charge of the store of George W. Larse & Co.; Benjamin is in Perry township; Martin and Sever are on the old farm which is now in their charge; Clara is the wife of Clarence Blunt, of Argyle, Wis.; Annie is at home. Two others died in early youth. Mr. Einerson was a Republican, and a devoted member of the Lutheran Church. For many years he was a school director in his adopted home, and stood high in the confidence of his fellow townsmen.

Mr. Einerson came to this country a very poor man, and like thousands of his compatriots, presently came to comfort if not affluence, doing this not by chance or favor, but by hard work, prudence and integrity. When he died he owned a fine farm, well provided with a dwelling house, both comfortable and commodious, and ample farm buildings. For about eight years before his death Mr. Einerson was in very poor health, and for seven years was confined to his bed. His was a wasting and painful sickness, but it was endured with Christian grace and fortitude. He is deservedly remembered as a man of high character, an unblemished good name, and of unswerving integrity, always honest and true to his convictions of the right. His name is a source of just pride to his posterity. His remains are resting in the old Norwegian cemetery in the town where his long and useful years came to an end.

Mrs. John Einerson still survives, and has her home on the old farm, and is known as a good Christian woman. She was born in Norway in 1839, and she still keeps good command of her faculties.

Martin J. and Sever Einerson, who have charge of the home farm, are among the bright and capable young farmers of this section of country, where they are pushing rapidly to the front. Martin J. obtained his education in the public schools and Dixon College, and during the winter season he engages in teaching, devoting himself to the farm during the summer. In political relations both Martin and Sever are Republicans, and in their religious associations Lutherans, following the ancestral faith, and taking much interest in the welfare of the church in which they were confirmed in early youth. The Einerson family is much esteemed in the community, where its various representatives have taken high rank as upright and reliable people.

JOHN D. DAVIES, a much respected resident of Ridgeway township, Iowa county, was a soldier in the war of the Union, serving as a member of Company C, 49th Wis. V. I., under Capt. Richard A. Wareham. Mr. Davies enlisted Feb. 20, 1865, and was in at the exciting finish, his term of enlistment running one year, or during the war.

John D. Davies was born in Wales, Jan. 23, 1828, and was reared in his native community, where, in 1851, he married Miss Hannah Williams. The young married couple immediately made their way to the United States, and on June 10, 1851, arrived in Dodgeville, Wis. Here Mr. Davies soon after bought a farm, which he still owns in the town of Ridgeway. Mrs. Davies passed away Jan. 10, 1865, leaving her husband with a family of seven children, the oldest being fourteen years of age. But a week after the death of his wife he enlisted, leaving his children at home under the watchful supervision of the neighbors. While he was at the front one of his children was taken seriously ill, and Mr. Davies was notified. Applying for a furlough that he might come and care for his children, he received it, and returned on a thirty days' furlough to watch over the sick bed. The child rapidly recovered, and Mr. Davies went back to the army to finish his service, and in due time received an honorable discharge.

When Mr. Davies again became a civilian he found his health badly broken by the hardships of the life through which he had passed, and for a time the outlook was discouraging. The boys came on quickly, however, and assisted him so effectively that presently the farm became very profitable, and was known as one of the choice places of the town.

The present Mrs. Davies was a Miss Jane Jones, who was born in Ohio in 1843 a daughter of James and Mary Jones, both natives of Wales. In 1850 they removed from Ohio to this State, and both of them have long since passed away. Mrs. Davies was one of a family of seven children, four of whom are still living. Three of her brothers were soldiers in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion. David Jones was a member of the 31st Wis. V. I., and died many years ago. Evan Jones served in the same regiment, and is living in Missouri. William Jones was wounded and died in a hospital at Vicksburg, leaving a widow and one daughter. Three of the children born to Mr. Davies by his first wife are still living: James, Isaac and Elizabeth (who married Fred Oldenburg, of Richland Center, Wis.). To Mr. Davies, by his present wife, were born three sons and a daughter: Thomas, Benjamin, Albert, and Margaret, wife of Reuben Hemstock. Mr. and Mrs. Davies retired from the farm March 28, 1898, leaving it in the care of their sons. He was a good soldier, and is a Republican and a good citizen, as are all his sons. Mr. and Mrs. Davies are both worthy members of the Baptist Church, and are highly esteemed in the community in which their useful lives are passing.

ELISHA ULLOM. Prominent among the surviving old settlers of Cadiz township, Green county, stands the venerable gentleman whose name here appears, and who is now living retired. Born Dec. 4, 1819, in Greene county, Penn., Mr. Ullom is a son of Peter and Mary (Cather) Ullom, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of German origin. Peter and Mary Ullom had a family of four children: Elizabeth (who married Samuel Raymer), Nancy (Mrs. John Robson), Elisha and Harrison, all now deceased except Elisha. He commenced life a poor boy, and with but little education, most of his boyhood days being passed in assisting on the home farm. In 1842 he came to Wisconsin and settled on an uncleared farm in Cadiz township, at one time owning over 400 acres of land. This, by assiduous labor and persevering industry, he soon made to "blossom as the rose," and become one of the finest farms in the county. Mr. Ullom is now living retired, esteemed and respected as only one who has led so long and useful a life could be. Sober and temperate in all his habits, neighborly and kind in his treatment of all, devoted to his home and family, his career has been one of honor in all the relations of life. He possesses a retentive memory, a special blessing to one who has such ripe stores of experience to draw on.

Mr. Ullom was married, in Ohio, to Miss Julia Kerr, of Knox county, that State, who was a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (McCullough) Kerr, her parents being among the early settlers of Ohio. Ten children blessed this union, viz.: Ellen, who is deceased; Minerva, Mrs. William Deniston, of Stafford, Kans.; Frank; Elmira, wife of Henry Shank, a farmer of Cadiz township; Joseph, of Missouri; William, of Jo Daviess county, Ill.; Charles, of Missouri; Homer, of Kansas; Adeline, deceased wife of H. H. Puterbaugh; and Laura B., who died unmarried. Mr. Ullom's posterity includes thirty-two living grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. Mrs.

Ullom, who was born in Knox county, Ohio, in 1822, passed away April 10, 1891, at the home in Cadiz township. She was a thorough Christian woman, a loving wife and mother, and was sincerely mourned throughout the community.

Our subject is a staunch Democrat, of the Jeffersonian stripe, and has supported that party for the past sixty years. He has served his fellow citizens faithfully in various local offices, having been a member of the township board, school director, treasurer and assessor. For many years he has been a consistent member of the German Baptist Church.

JACOB PAULSON, a well-known citizen of the town of Moscow, Iowa county, where he has been engaged in farming for over forty years, is, like many of the most substantial and respected citizens of that part of Wisconsin, a native of Norway.

Mr. Paulson was born July 2, 1827, and grew to manhood in his native land, where he also married his wife, Rachel. Having determined to seek better opportunities in the New World, he came to America in 1852, his destination being the State of Wisconsin. For the first two years he resided in Dane county, thence coming to Iowa county and settling in Moscow township, where he has ever since made his home. Mr. and Mrs. Paulson have had seven children, two sons and five daughters.

On March 11, 1865, Mr. Paulson was enrolled as a member of Company H, 50th Wis. V. I., and though the Civil war was fast drawing to a close, there was ample need for their services on the frontier, as the Indians had taken advantage of the absence of so many men in the Union service to commit numerous depredations in the Northwest. Our subject went with his regiment from Madison, Wis., to St. Louis, and soon afterward to Jefferson City, Mo., thence to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and finally to Fort Rice, Dak., where the command completed its term of enlistment by keeping the red men in check. Mr. Paulson was discharged June 18, 1866, at Madison, with the regiment, after about fifteen months of active service. The severity of his military experiences was exceedingly trying to a constitution none too robust to begin with, and his health has been very poor ever since. When he entered the service he was afflicted with hernia, although he was unaware of the cause of his trouble, and the examining surgeon either overlooked or did not discover the fact, with the result that he grew constantly worse during the strain of western army life. He has had to endure continuous suffering ever since, and, though he receives a small pension for other disability, he has been allowed nothing on this account. Mr. Paulson was thirty-seven years of age when he entered the service, and he is now well advanced in life. His honorable private life, as well as the service he rendered his adopted country in her hour of need, has won him the highest esteem of all who know him, and he is justly ranked among the valued citizens of his community.

HON. MARSHALL H. PENGRA, now a retired farmer, is spending the last years of an honorable and useful life on his farm about four and a half miles northwest of Juda, Green county. He is the eldest son of Moses and Sarah (Johns) Pengra, natives of Bennington county, Vt., and Wales, respectively. Sarah Johns came to this country with her parents when a young child. Moses Pengra was born Jan. 11, 1799, son of Marshall Pengra, of Vermont, whose father was one of three brothers who came to this country from England before the Revolution. The Pingree family, of Michigan, is supposed to have descended from the same source, the spelling of the name changing in the intervening years.

Marshall H. Pengra was born Jan. 18, 1819, in the town of Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., and came to Green county, Wis., in 1845. Since that year he has made his home on one farm, and presents an encouraging example of the rich rewards that wait on industry and honesty in agricultural life. In all these years he has been very active and industrious, and only the increasing weight of age prevents his continued application to the practical work of the farm. His close attention to his own business has not hindered an enlightened public service, and he has filled creditably several local offices of honor and trust. He has been chairman of the town, school director, and justice of the peace for thirty-five years. At the time the office of county commissioner was abolished he was holding that position. From 1870 to 1872 Mr. Pengra was a member of the State Legislature, and took an active part in the deliberations of that body. Mr. Pengra has studied law, and practiced in the justice courts of the county for many years. Twelve different estates have been settled by him, and in every case his administration proved satisfactory to all parties concerned.

MRS. ELVIRA TENREIRO

MARCELINA IL. TENREIRO

Mr. Pengra and Miss Elvira Lyon were married April 16, 1840. She was born in 1819 in Franklin county, Mass., a daughter of Marshall and Chloe (Sherman) Lyon. The Lyons were one of the old families of New England, and their history runs back to English origin. When a young woman Elvira Lyon moved with her parents from Franklin county, Mass., to Erie county, Penn., where she taught school for several years before her marriage. Her parents died in Erie county. Marshall H. Pengra and his wife had seven children, of whom the eldest, (1) Marshall Pembroke, born May 15, 1841, is now a resident of Brodhead. He was a soldier in the 22d Wis. V. I. during the Civil war, and acquitted himself with much credit in that great struggle. (2) George M. died in childhood. (3) Delia Elvira, born April 27, 1844, married Charles Madison, and died at home. (4) Winfield Sherman, born Nov. 2, 1847, married a Miss Preston, and resides in Madison. (5) Mary E., born Feb. 6, 1850, married Edward Fessenden, and is now deceased. (6) Moses B., born April 29, 1851, is living in Minnesota. (7) Charles Fremont, born March 27, 1857, married Miss Etta Feathers, of Albany, and they are living on the home place of his father. Mrs. Elvira Pengra departed this life Jan. 26, 1901. She was a member of the M. E. Church from the age of eighteen years.

Mr. Pengra and his devoted companion always commanded the highest respect of all who knew them. Mr. Pengra is among the oldest pioneers of the county now living, and his career has been honorable and useful in the extreme. Politically he is a Republican, and, as this sketch shows, a capable and efficient man in every walk of life.

FREDERICK M. BRADFORD, of Cadiz township, Green county, was born in Plympton, Mass., Oct. 27, 1834, and springs from ancestry distinguished in the history of the New England Colonies for many generations. He was one of the very early settlers in Green county.

Mr. Bradford is a direct descendant of William Bradford, who came over in the "Mayflower," and who was the second governor of Plymouth Colony, the line of descent being through (II) William, (III) John, (IV) Capt. John, (V) Capt. John, (VI) Lieut. John and (VII) John, our subject's father. Mr. Bradford's son John has in his possession the identical baptismal blanket that was brought over the ocean by his historic ancestors, and which was left by the will of the Governor to the eldest child of each succeeding generation, whom he desired should always bear the name of John.

(V) Capt. John Bradford commanded a company of minute men during the Revolutionary war.

(VI) Lieut. John Bradford, grandfather of our subject, married Patience Perkins, and they had the following named children: Eunice, John (father of our subject), Daniel P., Maria, Patience, Thomas, William and Hannah. Daniel P., ex-county judge of Bon Homme county, S. Dak., is the only survivor.

John Bradford, the father of Frederick M., was born July 10, 1809, and was married April 25, 1832, in Plympton, Mass., to Sarah Fuller Bradford. They became the parents of the following children: (1) John, a sergeant major in Company A, 11th Ill. V. I., at one time under the command of Gen. Lew Wallace, died while in the service, June 4, 1862. (2) Frederick M. is our subject proper. (3) Arabella, born Sept. 19, 1837, married Frederick Knickerbocker, and makes her home in Los Angeles, Cal. (4) Mary Winslow, born in Winslow, Ill., Jan. 31, 1841, died Aug. 20, 1898. She married Gerard Kneeland, now of Monroe, Wis. (5) Sarah M. died in childhood. (6) Luella B., born Dec. 24, 1847, is the wife of Dr. J. W. Saucerman, of Winslow, Ill. (7) Thomas G., born Aug. 21, 1852, is a carpenter at Winslow, Ill. The parents became residents of the town of Winslow, Ill., in 1838. John Bradford, the father, was a man of marked ability, possessed inventive genius of a high order, was well informed and was highly regarded in his day. The shot tower at Helena, Wis., was put up by him for C. W. Washburn and Cyrus Woodman, and he also invented a machine for finishing shot, which was put in operation in the Chicago shot tower, where he held the position of superintendent for E. W. Blatchford; there he also invented a machine for cutting, folding and printing shot sacks ready for sewing. Both of these machines are still in operation.

Frederick M. Bradford, whose name introduces this article, was married to Miss Cynthia Vashti Peters Feb. 20, 1859, who was born Sept. 22, 1835, a daughter of Comfort Peters, of Ohio, and a direct descendant of Rev. Hugh Peters, a compatriot of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, and her ancestors were among the very earliest settlers of New England. Thomas Peters, founder of Yale College, was a brother of Hugh Peters. To Mr. and Mrs. Bradford have been born two children: Corah Blanche, born April 25, 1862, married Dr. William Burton Bunker, who died in 1892. She is the mother of two children, Beryl Bradford (deceased) and Kathleen Alden. Mrs. Bunker is now residing with her father on the old home place in Cadiz. She is a very accomplished lady, and is a fine musician. John, the second child of Frederick M. and Cynthia Bradford, was born Dec. 24, 1868, and remains at home, carrying on the old farm. Kathleen A. Bunker is in the tenth generation from Gov. Bradford, of Colonial fame. The ancestors have always been identified with the best element of the communities in which they have lived, for many hundred years back of the present time.

Frederick M. Bradford began life for himself with little to depend on save his own strong right arm and stout heart. He purchased the farm on which he is living while it was still in its natural state, and the country surrounding was wild and unimproved. By close attention to his work, careful management and unflagging industry he has converted the wild land which he bought into one of the most desirable farms in Green county. He has good dwellings and farm buildings, and is proud of owning one of the finest cherry orchards to be found in the entire county. The sum of $11,000 was recently refused by him when offered for this place of 120 acres.

Mr. Bradford is a stanch Republican politically, and is a man with liberal religious convictions. He and his family are widely known for hospitality and charitable actions. For nearly thirty-eight years he has been a member of the Masonic fraternity, and in town affairs has taken a prominent place, holding the positions of justice of the peace, school director and town clerk, as well as serving on the town board.

WILLIAM B. BUNKER, M. D., was born Aug. 1, 1857, in Pennsylvaniaburg, Ripley Co., Ind., the second son of Dr. Ledyard Cuyler and Adaline E. (Alden) Bunker, the latter a direct descendant of John Alden, of the Plymouth Colony. William B. Bunker graduated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, in 1884, and was engaged in practice at Winslow and Warren, Ill., until his death, June 4, 1892. He was married Oct. 27, 1885, to Corah Blanche Bradford. Dr. Bunker was prominent in the Masonic order, and among the relics cherished by his daughter is a Masonic apron, of lambskin, made in 1742, for Alexander Pennock, a maternal ancestor of Dr. Bunker, and worn by his son, Alexander Pennock, at the funeral of George Washington.

WILLIAM HOLMES, one of the few remaining of the early pioneers of southwestern Wisconsin, has been a resident of this part of the State since 1842, and has occupied his present farm in Mifflin township, Iowa county, since 1856. He has, during his long and active life, been prominently identified with the development of both mining and agricultural interests in his section, and has taken his part in the conduct of public affairs in his locality.

Mr. Holmes is a native of Virginia, born April 21, 1820, in what is now Pulaski (then Montgomery) county, and is of Irish descent, his first American ancestor, John Holmes, having emigrated from the Emerald Isle in 1757. An interesting paper in the possession of our subject, is a copy of the recommendation given to this John Holmes when he departed for the New World nearly 150 years ago, which reads thus: "The bearer, John Holmes, has lived in this place from his infancy, and has always behaved in a sober, honest and inoffensive manner, and has no blemish or stain on his character as a citizen." The paper is certified to by Robert Higinbotham, and dated Coleraine, June 8, 1757. So we have evidence that the founder of the family on American soil was an honorable man, and was doubtless held in equally high esteem in the new land to which he emigrated.

William Holmes, father of our subject, was born in Virginia. He had one bother, Joshua. He married Mary Caffee, who was of Scottish ancestry, being a daughter of James and Jane Caffee. His father settled in Wythe county, Va., in 1780, and died there Oct. 1, 1820, aged fifty-eight years. Her mother died Sept. 22, 1828. Mr. and Mrs. William Holmes made their home in Montgomery county, Mrs. Holmes dying there Aug. 14, 1825, Mr. Holmes on Oct. 30, 1830. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. By occupation he was a carpenter, and he left the record of an honorable and useful man. In religion he and his wife affiliated with the Baptist Church. Of the children born to them seven grew to maturity, five sons and two daughters, but William, our subject, is now the only survivor. The deceased were James, John, Jane, Catherine, Atchley, and David.

William Holmes, whose name introduces this sketch, grew to manhood in his native State. His boyhood was uneventful, and he received but limited advantages for education. He came West in 1836, in which year he located in Orange county, Ind., where, on Aug. 26, 1839, he was united in marriage with Miss Rebecca Scott. In 1842 the young couple came to southwestern Wisconsin, their first home in this region being at Glen Haven, in Grant county, where Mr. Holmes erected a log cabin on the place of his brother-in-law, Washington Scott, who had preceded them. He took up farming, which he followed exclusively until the death of his wife, on June 12, 1844, after which he engaged in mining, following that occupation alone and in connection with agricultural pursuits for twenty-two years. In 1848, as above stated, he became a resident of Mifflin township, Iowa county, in 1856 settling on the farm which he has ever since occupied, and to the cultivation and improvement of which he has given his exclusive attention for many years; it now comprises 320 acres. Though now past eighty, Mr. Holmes is still hale and hearty, and able to do a good day's work. He commenced life poor, and during his boyhood, in Virginia, received but $6 per month wages. In the summer of 1842 he was employed as a teamster in Springfield, Ill., at $15 per month, but as he received his pay in depreciated currency, it was hardly half that amount. Industry has always been one of his marked characteristics, and he can feel that he has done his full share in the development of his State from the wild condition in which he found it, to its present beautiful fertility. Few remain of the old pioneers who lived and suffered in those hard days, and Mr. Holmes is justly honored for the part he has borne in the advancement of this section, as well as for his upright and helpful life—a career which would be a credit to any community.

In 1850 our subject married, for his second wife, Miss Amanda Hamlet, a native of Kentucky, who died June 15, 1872. On Sept. 30, 1877, he was married to Miss Laura Hannawell, a native of Norway, who is still spared to him. Mr. Holmes is the father of twenty-one children, a record perhaps not equalled in this part of the State, most of whom grew to maturity, and seventeen are still living. There were two children born to his first union: John C., a resident of Mineral Point, Wis.; and Martha Jane, who died in 1885. By the second marriage there were eleven: William, James, Elizabeth, Annette, David, Atchley, Catherine, Emma, Andrew, Amanda and Wallace. Eight children have blessed the third union: Marv, Montgomery, Bolivar, Harvey, Oliver, Martin and Laura, living, and a twin sister of Mary that died in early infancy. At the present writing Mr. Holmes has living seventeen children, fifty-two grandchildren, and forty-four great-grandchildren. There are deceased four children, five grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. The family was represented in the Civil war by John C. Holmes, who served in the 43d Wis. V. I.; and James Holmes, another son, served in the Spanish-American war, as a member of the 4th Wisconsin Volunteers.

In his early life Mr. Holmes was a Whig in political sentiment, his first vote having been cast for William Henry Harrison. He has been a Republican since the organization of that party. Our subject has been called upon to fill various local offices, which he has done with credit to himself and universal satisfaction to his constituents. For six years he was a member of the town board, serving as chairman of same during three years of that period, and he was justice of the peace for twelve years. Mr. Holmes voted for delegate to both the first and second Constitutional Conventions of Wisconsin, and voted for the adoption of the present constitution. He has been a Royal Arch Mason for thirty-five years.

JOHN C. SPENCER, of Janesville, Rock county, was born in the village of Little Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y., May 17, 1838, the third son of A. C. and Lucina (Dye) Spencer. The father was a native of Vermont, and of English descent; the mother was born in Cattaugus county, N. Y., and came of Irish ancestry. In the autumn of 1845 our subject came with his parents to Danville, Ill., where his father followed the profession of school teacher. Later the family moved to Covington, Ind., and from there to Bloomington, Ill., in December, 1852, coming to Janesville.

John C. Spencer obtained the greater part of his education, which was somewhat limited, in the private schools of that early day. In the winter of 1849 he attended the school at Covington, the first term of the free public schools in Indiana. In his earlier boyhood he was employed during the summer in herding sheep and cattle on the Illinois prairies. In the summer of 1852 the young man drove team, hauling earth in the construction of the Illinois Central railroad, between Bloomington and Randolph Grove, and also north of Bloomington to the present site of Normal. He also drove one of the ox-teams (four yoke) employed in breaking the ground for the Phoenix nursery at Bloomington. The same year he secured employment with the Janesville Gazette, to carry papers one day each week; the newspaper was owned at that time by Levi Alden and Charles Holt. In March, 1853, he entered the office to learn the printing trade, and with the exception of January and February, 1854, was constantly employed there for many years, filling in turn every mechanical position in the establishment. In 1877 he took charge of the local department of the Gazette as city editor, continuing in this position until 1896.

At the formation of the Janesville fire department, in 1855, Mr. Spencer was appointed torch boy of Water Witch No. 2, and had George Peck, afterward governor of the State, as his associate. He is still a member of that organization, having filled every official position in his company, and was secretary of the department for twelve years; assistant chief engineer for two years, and in 1885-86 chief of the department. He was assistant chief until 1892, when he was appointed chief engineer by Mayor Rowe, and holds that office to the present time. Many changes and much reorganization have taken place in the department during Mr. Spencer's connection with it, each move advancing its efficiency, and many of these innovations have been brought about by Chief Spencer, until at the present time the city of Janesville can take great pride in the possession of one of the very best fire departments in the West. No city of the same size can present a superior equipment or a better fire record. Mr. Spencer is frequently appealed to for information regarding the history of Janesville and Rock county, so well versed is he in its every detail. Socially our subject belongs to the A. F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F., and politically he is an outspoken Republican, though he never allows his politics to cause estrangements from his friends.

Mr. Spencer and Miss Helen M. Brown, a native of Portage, Wis., and a daughter of the late Daniel G. Brown, of Janesville, were united in marriage Oct. 30, 1870. This union has been blessed with six children: Marion E., born Aug. 28, 1871; Clara, Feb. 6, 1874; Llewellyn R., Jan. 30, 1882; Jessie, Nov. 13, 1884; Harrison M., Nov. 11, 1887; and Percy R., May 24, 1890. Marion was married to Joseph L. Hay, of Janesville, Aug. 1, 1897, and makes her home in the city, her husband being employed in the office of the Janesville Machine Co. Clara was married July 20, 1898, to Arthur H. Boedeker, of Blue Earth, Minn., where he is engaged in the mercantile business. The other children are still in the home of their parents, at No. 217 North Bluff street.

GEORGE W. ROBERTS, M. D., is a prominent physician and surgeon, as well as one of the more influential citizens of Albany, Green county, and for many years has taken a leading part in the public affairs of his community.

Dr. Roberts was born in the town of Bennington, Licking Co., Ohio, April 10, 1841, a son of Jonathan and Maria (Davis) Roberts, both born in Maine. Of their three children, two are now living, Dr. George W. and Freeman L., and both make their home in Albany. The father, who was a farmer, moved from Ohio to Wisconsin late in 1844, and located on a farm of 160 acres five miles north of Janesville, Rock county. There his wife died in 1871, at the age of sixty-nine. He survived her many years, and spent the last twenty years of his life in the home of his son, Dr. George W., dying in 1894, at the venerable age of eighty-nine years and seven months. Early in life he and his wife united with the Free-Will Baptist Church, but for many years before his death he had been an ordained minister of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. Thomas Roberts, his father, a farmer, was born of Welsh ancestors, in Maine, where he spent his entire active life, and lacked only a few months of being one hundred years old at the time of his death. He served in the war of 1812. In his later years he came to Wisconsin, and lived with his children near Sheboygan. He reared a large family. Samuel Davis, the father of Mrs. Maria (Davis) Roberts, was a physician, of Irish descent. He died in the East, when about sixty years old, and left a large family.

George W. Roberts was only three years old when he was brought into Rock county by his parents, on their removal to Wisconsin. He was reared on the farm, and attended the district school. For some time he was a student at Milton College, and in 1866 took up the study of medicine, and was graduated from Rush Medical College in Chicago in 1869. The first year of his professional life was spent in Cooksville, Wis., and then he came to Albany, where he had practiced to some extent since 1867.

Dr. Roberts and Miss Betsy Olson were married May 3, 1857, when he had just passed his sixteenth birthday. She was a daughter of Ole Olson, and became the mother of five sons, Walter C., William D., Frederick W., Leonard G., and Eugene W. Walter C. became a physician, and opened an office in Maywood, where he died in June, 1897; he married Miss Minnie Jennison. William D. married Miss Carrie Burns, who is now dead, and they had one daughter, Sherlie N.; he is a graduate from the department of pharmacy of the University of Wisconsin, and since 1893 has been a druggist in Albany, in partnership with his father, the firm being G. W. Roberts & Son. Frederick W. is a dentist at Burlington, Wis.; he married Miss Anna Hedgan. Leonard G. died when a little under two years old. Eugene W. is still in school. Mrs. Roberts is a member of the Methodist Church, and her husband belongs to Albany Lodge, No. 36, A. F. & A. M., and Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M. He is a member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society, and the Central Wisconsin Medical Society. He is a Republican politically, and is highly considered by those who know him best.

ELEAZER HOVEY, now living in Darlington, is the only representative of the family of Alfred Hovey, now to be found in Lafayette county. Alfred Hovey was a well-known pioneer of this region, whose history in this community begins as early as 1848. Born in New Hampshire April 20, 1791, he was a son of Amos Hovey, and the ancestors of this family were among settlers of New England in remote colonial times. A genealogy of the family prepared and published a number of years ago gives the name of Daniel Hovey, born in 1618, who is supposed to have come to America from England not many years after the landing of the Pilgrims.

Amos Hovey lived in Vermont until his death. He had two sons, Alfred and Eleazer, from whom the subject of this biography derives his name. Alfred Hovey and his immediate family were the only members of the Vermont Hoveys to come to Wisconsin. He attained manhood in his native State, where he married Abigail Howard, who was also born in Vermont. Eleazer Hovey was the tenth in a family of eleven children, a sister being the youngest. When he was a lad of about seven years his mother died, and after a time his father married Sarah Hendricks. In 1848 Alfred Hovey left Vermont, and came into Lafayette county, making his home in what is now the town of Darlington. With him came his wife, his son Eleazer and three daughters, who were the younger members of the family. Other children, who were older, had already come into the West, and had established themselves in Lafayette county. Mr. Hovey secured from the Government a section of land, and both father and sons engaged in its improvement. The process was slow and laborious, however, as, in common with other pioneers, money was the one thing lacking in their catalogue of resources. Finally, however, they accomplished their laudable ambitions, and became well settled in the county, where they were long known and highly esteemed, not only for their industrious habits, but also their upright character, general intelligence and neighborly spirit. All have now passed over the river, except the gentleman whose name introduces this article. The father died April 10, 1872, and his widow April 14, ten years later. Alfred Hovey was a leading figure in the affairs of the town, and took an active part in the organization of the First Baptist Church of Darlington, where he was a deacon and leader. He was a man of strong convictions and endeavored to conform his daily life to his faith. Highly regarded by all who knew him, he was well worthy of a place in a commemorative record of Lafayette county. The family around his hearth consisted of seven sons and four daughters, those besides Eleazer being: General Charles E. Hovey served in the Civil war, where he was distinguished alike for his gallantry and faithful discharge of every soldierly duty that came to him in the rapid promotion, which was a grateful acknowledgment of his manifest ability; he died in Washington, Nov. 17, 1897. Amos W. Hovey is living in Bristol Springs, N. Y. Dr. Alvah Hovey is in Newton, Mass., where he was president of the Newton Theological Seminary for many years, finally retiring on account of advanced age. William Hovey, lives in California, and Leland A. at Bloomington, Ill. Oramel F. is at Sheffield, Iowa. Mrs. Leantha Paddock is a resident of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Frances Chapman at Forest, Miss. Mary Ann Hovey died in Vermont at an early age, and Mrs. Clara Chaffee died at Richland Center, Wisconsin.

Eleazer Hovey was born June 8, 1829, and was nearly nineteen years of age when he came into Wisconsin with his parents. He well remembers the wilderness, as this country appeared more than half a century ago. He actively assisted his father and older brothers in reclaiming the land and converting it into a fertile farm, and here has been his home to the present time.

Mr. Hovey was married Aug. 3, 1855, to his excellent wife, then Clara A. Scofield, a daughter of James and Rachel D. (Rand) Scofield, both natives of Vermont and descendants of old New England families. Three Scofield brothers came over from England in Colonial times, one of whom was Mrs. Hovey's great-grandfather. Frederick Scofield was her grandfather. James Scofield, his wife, and four children, came from Vermont, where they were reared, and in 1854 located in Wisconsin. There were eight children in the family, and the oldest daughter preceded her parents to Lafayette county, as the wife of a brother of Eleazer Hovey, and other children came on to Wisconsin later. James Scofield died here in 1875, and his widow in 1880. Mrs. Hovey's ancestry on both sides participated in the Revolution. Her grandfather, known as Capt. Zach Rand, served under Gen. Stark, while one of her great-grandfathers, Capt. Mott, served under Washington in the French and Indian war, and for a time was commander at Fort Defiance, built by Washington at the outbreak of hostilities. James Scofield and his wife were warmly cherished in the old pioneer associations as worthy and estimable people. Like the Hoveys, they were also allied with the Baptist Church. James Scofield was a Whig in his early life, but as he held strong anti-slavery views, when the slavery question became the vital issue he united with the Republican party and voted its ticket in his later years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hovey have a son, Harry, born June 27, 1862. He was reared on the homestead in the town of Darlington, and married Leda Blackburn, by whom he has two daughters, Helen and Mildred. Mrs. Leda Hovey was born in Canada, only child of John and Priscilla (Richards) Blackburn, natives of England, who came into Lafayette county from Kansas, when their daughter was a child, and both are now deceased. Mr. Blackburn was a man of liberal culture, and had his education in London. He was a printer, but did not follow that trade after locating in this county. Mr. and Mrs. Eleazer Hovey have now retired from the farm, which is occupied by their son and his family, and are living in their pleasant and attractive home in the city of Darlington, where they are passing a serene and beautiful old age.

ABRAHAM STAUFFACHER, of Jordan Center, Jordan township, Green county, one of the leading and most progressive citizens of the locality, is a native of Switzerland, born April 21, 1843, in the village of Matt, Canton Glarus.

Jacob Stauffacher, his father, was born July 10, 1788, and died Feb. 11, 1858, having passed all his days in Switzerland, where, in Canton Glarus, he was for many years a mail carrier and postmaster. He was a son of Jacob Stauffacher, a farmer in the land of William Tell. Jacob Jr., married Catherine Wild, who was born June 6, 1798, and died in Switzerland Aug. 11, 1865. They had a family of ten children, four of whom died in infancy, the others being: Henry, Barbara, Rosina, Jacob, Catherine and Abraham, all now deceased except the last named.

Abraham Stauffacher was reared on a farm in, and received his education in the district schools of, his native land. When old enough he learned the trade of locksmith, which he followed for several years. In 1867 he came to this country, reaching his destination, Green county, Wis., on June 21, 1867, and for some months worked at his trade in New Glarus, in the employ of Constantine Hegely, after which, in the same town, he entered into a partnership with G. Schindler, which continued about two years. He then built a shop, and pursued his trade, alone, some three years, when he sold out to Michael Smith, and removed to the city of Monroe, where for a year he was in the employ of a manufacturing company. In 1874 Mr. Stauffacher came to Jordan township and purchased a blacksmith shop, carrying on that trade about two years, at the end of that time buying thirteen acres of farm land, on which he built his present shop, and where he has met with excellent success. From time to time he added to this property until he has now 320 acres of good farm land, equipped with a comfortable dwelling, and two of the most commodious bank barns in the township.

On Feb. 13, 1866, Abraham Stauffacher was married in Switzerland to Miss Elsbeth Baebler, of Canton Glarus, a daughter of Albright and Elsbeth Baebler. Children as follows have come to this union, all natives of Wisconsin except the eldest: Jacob, born in Switzerland Nov. 7, 1866, married Anna Knobel, of Jordan, Green county; Albert H., born July 4, 1868, in New Glarus, Wis., resides in South Dakota; John, born Oct. 21, 1869, is a widower with five children, and resides on the home place; Ernst Abraham, born Feb. 6, 1871, resides in South Dakota; Catherine, born Aug. 4, 1872, married Miles O. Newman, of Peterson, Iowa; Edward, born April 12, 1874, lives in Monroe, Green county; Rosa, born April 15, 1876, is the wife of Franklin Ellis, a farmer of Jordan township, Green county; Henry, born Dec. 2, 1877; William D., April 12, 1879. Miss Elsbeth, June 19, 1881, and Otto, Oct. 28, 1885, are all at home. Mr. Stauffacher has been remarkably fortunate in his family: his eleven children all enjoying excellent health. The most serious accident in the family occurred July 31, 1889, when his daughter Catherine, received a slight shock of lightning, at the time she was milking a cow, which was instantly killed.

In politics our subject is a staunch Democrat, and has served in various public offices, including those of school director, treasurer, clerk, and chairman of the township board six years in all, also township treasurer for five years. For seven years he was postmaster at Jordan. In addition to farming pursuits, he is interested in the Cooperative Cheese Factory, and carries on blacksmithing in his shop on the home place. He is a representative self-made man, having come to America without a dollar, and, by his own persistent effort and the aid of his industrious wife and children, has accumulated a nice competence.

DARIUS DANIELS WINKLEY. The family name of Winkley (or, as it is sometimes spelled, Winckley) is one of the oldest and most respected in New England. Its American founder, Samuel Winckley, Esq., emigrated from Lancashire, England, and it appears that his first place of residence was Kittery, Maine. There he first settled in 1680, and there in 1684 he married Sarah Trickey, whose father, Thomas, dwelt upon land granted him by the town council as early as 1656. After his marriage Samuel Winckley removed, about 1684, to Portsmouth, N. H., where he became engaged in trade and commerce, and where he died in 1736, aged about seventy years. From this ancestor the gentleman whose name is mentioned above traces an unbroken line of descent. The family arms: An eagle displayed counter charged, argent and gules; motto, Spes.

Of the seven children born to the sturdy English emigrant, the second, Francis Winkley (1), was the great-great-grandfather of Darius D. He was born in 1689, and died in 1776. He made his home in Kittery, Maine, and was a boat builder. He married Mary, a daughter of Rev. John Emerson, of Portsmouth, N. H., and by her became the father of seven children. The fourth of these, Francis Winkley (2), was born in 1733, and died Oct. 9, 1818. He married Martha, daughter of Mark Hunking, of Barrington, N. H. She was born in 1734, and died Jan. 16, 1807. They were the parents of six children, the fifth of whom, also named Francis (and known as Francis (3) in the genealogical tree), was the grandfather of Darius D. Winkley. Francis Winkley (3) was born in 1774, and died in April, 1855. He married Sarah Drew, who was born in 1778, and died March 26, 1846. She bore her husband nine children. Of these the fourth, Darius, was the father of the subject of this memoir. He was three times married, first to Ursula Hall, second to Maria Daniels, and lastly to Sarah Cate. Darius Daniels was the child of the second marriage, and his mother died at his birth.

Our subject was born at Barrington, N. H., Aug. 15, 1847. His early educational advantages were those afforded by the district schools of that period, but, limited as they were, he improved them as far as his limited opportunities would permit. When a young man of seventeen years he determined to seek his fortune in a broader field. His uncle, Cyrus Winkley, had acquired a patent to land in what is now the township of Clinton, Rock Co., Wis., and thither young Darius turned his steps. He had little in his pocket, but he was endowed with that pluck, energy, fortitude and integrity which have stood him in good stead all his life. For several years he worked as a farm laborer, but through the combination of the traits above indicated he is to-day one of Rock county's most prosperous farmers, owning 236 acres of fertile, well-improved land, which he manages after the best methods, and in the cultivation of which he employs the most approved machinery.

In 1876 Mr. Winkley was married to Miss Nellie Griswold, daughter of Cyrus and Fannie Adelia (Eggleson) Griswold. Her father, Cyrus Griswold, was not only one of Clinton's prosperous farmers, but a man of affairs as well, having been a member of the board of supervisors for many years before his death, which occurred in March, 1900, after he had spent a useful and honored life extending over fourscore and five years. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Winkley has been blessed with three children, Elsie M., Cyrus A., and George R.

Mr. Winkley is a Republican politically, yet his sterling character commands the respect of men of all political creeds, while his unflinching, unwavering integrity, his enlightened public spirit, his generous disposition, and his kindly ways, endear him to all classes of the community.

A. N. RANDALL is a distinguished representative of the legal profession at Brodhead, Green county, and his years of experience and practical knowledge of men and business, backed by an upright character, give weight to his legal lore in the minds of both judge and jury. He was admitted to the Bar in 1869, and for over thirty years has devoted himself to his profession.

Mr. Randall was born in Erie county, N. Y., Aug. 22, 1830, a son of Archibald R. and Eunice (Cheney) Randall, natives of New York and Connecticut, respectively. They were the parents of eight children, two of whom are now living: Irene, the wife of William Hudson, of Spring Valley, Rock Co., Wis.; and A. N. The father was a farmer in Erie county, N. Y., and died there Feb. 28, 1830, at the early age of thirty-eight years. His widow came west and settled in Rock county, Wis., in 1850, and lived there a number of years. She spent her last years, however, in Brodhead, where she died in 1889, at the age of eighty-nine. They were Methodists, and he served in the war of 1812. His father, Elisha Randall, was a native of Massachusetts, and moved into New York, where he died in 1846, at the age of ninety-one. He was of English descent, and served in the Revolution. He was the father of five children. Daniel Cheney, the father of Eunice referred to above, was born in Connecticut, near the Massachusetts line, and came of English ancestry. He was a farmer, was the father of three daughters and two sons, and died at the age of sixty-seven.

A. N. Randall was reared on the family farm, and attended the district school, finishing his schooling at the Brockport Collegiate Institute. He lived in the State of New York until 1847, when he came to Wisconsin, and located in the town of Avon, Rock county, where the next year he bought eighty acres of land, and at a subsequent period added to it 105 acres. He engaged in the cultivation of his land during the summers, and taught school winters until the breaking out of the Civil war. He enlisted in Company G, 13th Wis. V. I., and served until Feb. 1, 1865. He was captain of that company, and in 1862 commanded a battalion, consisting of his own company, a company of regulars, and two Indiana companies, protecting the lines of communication from Smithland, Ky., to Forts Henry and Donelson. He cleared that part of the country of guerrillas, and rejoined his regiment at Fort Henry late in the fall of the year. During the following year his regiment was brigaded with the 71st Ohio, the 83d Illinois and the 5th Iowa Cavalry, under the command of Col. W. W. Low. During that winter this brigade pursued and drove Gen. Forrest over three hundred miles in eleven days. It then turned to pursue Gen. Woodward, and recaptured Clarksville. The following summer Capt. Randall was detailed to command a battalion of mounted infantry, and had numerous skirmishes and light battles with the guerrillas, notably with those under Henderson, Lytle and Dick McCann. He cleared the country of guerrillas from the Ohio south to Duck river, in West Tennessee. The following year Capt. Randall was detailed on a court-martial, and served as its president for fourteen weeks at Nashville. During the sessions of this court the noted guerrilla chief, Gurley, was tried and sentenced to death for the murder of Col. McCook. Capt. Randall rejoined his regiment in camp near Nashville, and was soon after detailed on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Lovell H. Rousseau, as Inspector General of the District of Tennessee. He was still serving in this capacity when mustered out in 1865. While on staff duty with Gen. Rousseau he participated in the following battles: Five battles against Gen. Joe Wheeler; two against Gen. Forrest; the battle of Franklin; and the battle of Nashville.

While on duty at Nashville, Capt. Randall became acquainted with Miss Emma C. Loofbourow, daughter of Judge Wade and Nancy (Swinney) Loofbourow, of Washington. Fayette Co., Ohio, and on March 27, 1865, she became his bride. They have had two children: Margaret M., who died in 1881, at the age of fifteen years; and Louis A., who lives in Brodhead. Mr. Randall belongs to the Bicknell Lodge, No. 94, A. F. & A. M., and also Wesley W. Patton Post, No. 90, G. A. R. He and his wife are members of the Brodhead chapter of the Eastern Star. Politically he is a Republican, and for five years was a member of the county board. In 1882 and 1883 he served a term in the State Senate. He owns a quarter section of very desirable Dakota property, and has a fine home in Brodhead.

Mrs. Randall's father was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died at the age of sixty-seven years. He was twice married, and each wife bore him four children, and two children of each wife are now living: Narcissa is the widow of Bennett P. La Wright, of Litchfield, Ill.; Helen, widow of Peter Harris, of Brodhead; those of the second marriage are David T., of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Emma C., the wife of Capt. Randall. Her father was born in New Jersey, and her mother in Ohio. Mr. Loofbourow was circuit judge for many years, and for about forty years practiced law in Ohio, whither he went about 1815. He was a delegate to the convention that nominated Martin Van Buren for President of the United States. During the Civil war he was an ardent partisan of the Union cause. His second wife, Mrs. Randall's mother, died the day she was forty-seven.

ROLLIN OLSON (deceased), who in his lifetime was one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Jordan township, Green county, is worthy of more than mere passing notice in the pages of this work.

A native of Norway, Mr. Olson was born Nov. 10, 1831, near the city of Christiania, a son of Ole and Carrie (Iverson) Olson, who passed their entire lives in Norway. In 1846, then a lad of fifteen summers, Rollin Olson came to the United States; and first located in Dane county, Wis., later living in Iowa and Lafayette counties, and afterward removing to Jordan township, Green county, where he purchased 120 acres of land, and followed farming pursuits during the rest of his life.

On Aug. 5, 1854, Mr. Olson married Mary Peterson, of Lafayette county, Wis., born near Christiania, Norway, Oct. 16, 1837, a daughter of Peter and Mary (Hanson) Peterson, also natives of Norway. Mr. Peterson died in that country, and his widow came to Wisconsin, settling in Lafayette county, when their daughter, Mary, was fifteen years old. To this union were born six children, a brief record of whom is here given: (1) Caroline, born April 5, 1855, is the widow of Lars O. Grove, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere. (2) Morgan P., born June 17, 1859, married Miss Hanson, of Jordan township, Green county, and died Nov. 14, 1892, in Clark county, S. Dak., leaving a widow and five children. (3) Clara A., born Dec. 26, 1866, is the wife of E. B. Tollefson, of Clark county, S. Dak. (4) Oscar R., born March 24, 1869, married Carrie J. Johnson, of York township, Green county; he was register of deeds for Green county some six years; in the Spanish-American war he served in the 1st Wis. V. I. as adjutant, with the rank of captain. (5) William I., born Oct. 11, 1873, married Miss Emma Boynton, of Jordan township, Green county; he is a farmer by occupation. (6) Henry E., the youngest in the family, born March 29, 1879, received his education in part at the common schools of Green county, in part at Stoughton Academy and Albion (Wis.) Academy. As a farmer, he is operating part of the old Olson homestead, also 120 acres adjoining, and has already made his mark as a scientific agriculturist, dairyman and cheese manufacturer. On Feb. 7, 1901, he married Miss Emma Olson, of Jordan township, Green county. In politics he is a Republican.

Rollin Olson, the subject proper of these lines, during the war of the Rebellion enlisted in Company E, 15th Wis. V. I., and served from Feb. 14, 1862, until Dec. 20, 1864, being both mustered in and mustered out at Madison, Wis. His regiment was attached to the Army of the Cumberland, and participated in the following battles: Island No. 10; Union City, Tenn.; Perryville; Missionary Ridge; Chaplin Hills; Stone River, where Mr. Olson received a severe wound; and Chickamauga. In these last two battles the 15th Wisconsin took prominent part, and at the last named engagement Mr. Olson was taken prisoner. For many months he was confined in Libby prison, where he was nearly starved to death, but he returned home alive in 1864. He proved a brave and true soldier, and wore his laurels well, going to the front as a private, and returning with the rank of first lieutenant.

Mr. Olson then resumed the vocations of peace, buying 120 acres of land in Jordan township, Green county, which he continued to cultivate up to his death. A leading citizen of his township, he served in various positions of honor and trust: as member of the board; school director; chairman of the township board; assessor, three terms; and as census enumerator for both 1880 and 1890. In politics he was always a stanch Republican, and in religious faith a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Olson was called from earth March 31, 1898, and his remains were interred in the Norwegian cemetery in Jordan township, Green county. A man possessed of high moral character, a brave soldier, an honorable citizen, a noble father and model husband, he died deeply lamented by all who knew him.

JOHN ELLSWORTH, a well-known early settler of the town of Mifflin, Iowa county, is a native of New York State, born Jan. 9, 1823, in Penn Yan, Yates county, and is one of a family of eight children.

Jonathan Ellsworth, his father, belonged to a well-known Connecticut family, which was identified with that State when it was a colony of Great Britain. In the genealogy of the family it is recorded that four brothers emigrated from Wales to this country, during the infancy of the American Colonies, becoming prominently identified with the early history of the country, and their descendants are numerous throughout the Union. William W. Ellsworth, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was at one time governor of Connecticut. Jonathan Ellsworth, father of John, of whom we write, died in Yates county, N. Y., after which the widowed mother, with her eight children, removed to Ontario county, same State, but, eventually, she and five children (three having died in the East) came West. The three children surviving at this writing are John, our subject; Amanda, Mrs. Chapin, of Dane county, Wis.; and Capt. S. K., of Madison. Those who died in the West were Mrs. Elista Palmer, who passed away in Baraboo, Wis., in 1897; and Reuben, who went to California in the early days of that State, dying there some time in the 'fifties.

John Ellsworth, whose name opens this sketch, was the first member of the family to come West, his first location being, in 1846, on a farm in Oregon, Dane Co., Wis. In 1857, he settled on a farm in Mifflin township, Iowa county, where he has ever since made his home. But little improvement had been made thereon when Mr. Ellsworth settled on it, much of the land being in a wild state. He eventually became the owner of 640 acres, 600 of which, in one body, are now in excellent condition for agricultural purposes. For many years after his removal to Iowa county Mr. Ellsworth continued to own his Dane county farm.

On Oct. 20, 1842, John Ellsworth was married in Canandaigua, N. Y., to Eliza Ann Green, a native of Yates county, N. Y., born June 14, 1825. Ten children were the result of this union, eight of whom—four sons and four daughters—are yet living: Amanda E., Mrs. David, of Montana; Henry G., of Barron, Wis.; John M., sketch of whom follows; Eliza, Mrs. Baker, of Edmund, Wis.; Mary F., Mrs. Packard, of Paoli, Wis.; Reuben, sketch of whom follows; Elmer E., of Livingston, Wis.; and Rachel, wife of Morland Preston, of Rewey, Wis. Two children died in early life, Lydia and Kellogg. Mr. and Mrs. John Ellsworth are numbered among the well-known early settlers of southwestern Wisconsin, and together they have traveled the path of life nearly sixty years, rearing their children to honorable and useful citizenship. Two of their sons, John M. and Reuben, manage the large farm which their father, owing to the physical infirmities incidental to advancing years, is no longer able to conduct.

JOHN M. ELLSWORTH, the elder of these brothers, was born May 5, 1852, in Oregon, Dane Co., Wis., and was reared on the old homestead. In the way of education he was given liberal advantages, he having for three years been a student at the State Normal School, at Platteville, Grant county, and for two years pursued the modern classical course at the Wisconsin State University. Afterwards he returned to the home farm, chiefly on account of his father's failing health. For several years John M. dealt in fine-bred horses, and for some time was superintendent of Capt. Pabst's stock farm, at Wauwatosa, Wis., where were to be found some of the finest-bred horses in the country. He is prominent in the Masonic order, and a member of Mineral Point Commandery, Knights Templar.

In 1877 John M. Ellsworth was married to Miss Elvira B. Hutchens, daughter of Noah Hutchens, and two children have blessed this union: Eastman D. and Earnest H. The parents are highly esteemed in the community where they live. In politics Mr. Ellsworth is a stanch Republican. Mrs. Ellsworth is also a native of Wisconsin, born in Platteville. She received an excellent education, mainly at the State Normal School of that place, and for some years prior to her marriage she was a successful teacher.

REUBEN ELLSWORTH, a younger brother of John M., was born Feb. 26, 1861, on the homestead whereon he now lives. When old enough he assisted on the farm, at the same time attending the public schools of the district; for two years he also attended the State Normal School, Platteville. When he reached his majority he engaged in operating a farm near the village of Cobb, Iowa county, and conducted same for three years, after which he carried on a livery in that village four years. During the succeeding ten years he was engaged in business in Keith and Lincoln, Neb., at the end of that time returning to Mifflin township, Iowa Co., Wis., where he operates 300 acres of the homestead farm.

On Nov. 9, 1881, Reuben Ellsworth was married to Charlotte, daughter of John and Adelaide Cocker, the former a native of Cornwall, England, and now a well-known and highly respected resident of Sutherland, Lincoln Co., Neb. Many years ago a sad event happened in the Cocker family, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Charlotte Ellsworth having been accidentally drowned at sea, while returning to England after a pleasant visit among relatives in America. Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth have a family of ten children—five sons and five daughters—as follows: Eliza, Ida May, Edith, Joyce, Elmer, Reuben, Ralph, Frank, John and Doris. In politics Mr. Ellsworth was originally a Democrat, but since 1896 he has affiliated with the Republican party. Socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and of the Modern Woodmen.

JAMES A. FATHERS has for six years filled the office of city treasurer of Janesville, Rock county, alike with fidelity to his important trust and satisfaction to the people.

Mr. Fathers' parents, John and Ann (Hart) Fathers, were both natives of England, where they were married, and where they resided until 1857. John Fathers was one of three sons of a government official. By trade he was a malster, and he was for many years in the employ of Bass & Co., the famous English brewers. So capable was he in his calling, and so well established was his reputation, that in the year named the Lill & Diversey Brewing Co., of Chicago, sent for him to come to America and enter their service. He remained in that city for two years, and in 1859 was sent by the concern to Janesville. The firm's losses in the fire of October, 1871, necessitated a suspension of business, and from that time until his death—in 1882, at the age of fifty-seven—Mr. Fathers led a life of retirement and ease. Both he and his wife were members of the Church of England. She still survives him, at an advanced age. Their family consisted of five children, three of whom are yet living: William, whose home is in Harmony township, Rock county; James A.; and Nellie, wife of William Green, of Janesville.

James A. Fathers was born in Chicago May 5, 1859, and was but an infant when his parents removed to Janesville. He attended the public schools until he was fourteen years old, when he entered the woolen mills of Wheeler & Sons, intending to learn the trade of a carder. Not liking the pursuit he abandoned it, and subsequently acquired the harness making trade in the establishment of C. H. Payne. After working four years as a journeyman he bought out Mr. Payne, and successfully conducted the business until 1889, when ill health compelled his retirement from active labor. For about three years he conducted a meat market, but abandoned this enterprise upon his election to the city treasurer'ship, in 1894. This office he has held continuously up to the present time, by successive re-elections. To the discharge of his official duties he brought a large fund of common sense, a considerable knowledge of public affairs, and unswerving integrity, which qualities, joined to gentleness of disposition and urbanity of manner, admirably qualify him for a post of grave responsibility, whose occupant is daily called upon to do business with "all sorts and conditions of men." The year 1894, however, did not mark Mr. Fathers' debut in the arena of public life. At the age of twenty-two he was chosen, on the Republican ticket, to represent the Third ward upon the board of aldermen. He occupied a seat in that body for four years, and for three years served as president of the council. He is universally popular, and is regarded as one of Janesville's most influential citizens. He is a stockholder in the Bower City Bank. Mr. Fathers belongs to both the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities, being a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M., and high priest of Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M. He belongs to Janesville City Lodge, No. 90, I. O. O. F., has filled all the chairs in the encampment, and was chosen grand representative for 1893-94. Some fifteen years ago he bought his present pleasant home, at No. 259 South Main street.

SYVER H. BOHN. One of the most desirable farms of Green county is located on Section 10, in Adams township, eighteen miles northwest of Monroe, and is the valuable property of one of the wealthy and highly esteemed farmers, Syver H. Bohn.

Mr. Bohn was born July 17, 1846, near Walders, Norway, a country which has contributed some of the best types of citizenship which Wisconsin is proud to acknowledge. His father was Hermon Hermonson, who died in his native country, and when Mr. Bohn came to America, he adopted his present name. Mr. Bohn came to Green county in 1870, and three years later married Miss Julia Nelson, of Adams township, a daughter of Andrew Nelson, who was also a native of Norway. Seven children have been born to this union: Annie, who died at the age of twenty; Inga, married to B. G. Vinger, and lives four miles from her old home; Hannah, who passed away when young; Andrew, who died when twenty-one; Hannah, at home; Julia and Ida, also at home. Mr. Bohn has been sorely bereft, as in 1898 his beloved wife was removed by death, at the early age of forty-one. She was a most estimable, Christian lady, a devoted wife and an affectionate and self-sacrificing mother. Her mother, Mrs. Nelson, makes her home with our subject, and in spite of her eighty-four years, is enjoying good health.

Before coming to America, Mr. Bohn received a fair education, and his natural intelligence has given him a prominent position in township affairs, where he has been called upon to serve as school director and road supervisor, and he is particularly active in the Lutheran Church, in which he is an official, and a liberal and cheerful contributor.

The fine farm owned by Mr. Bohn consists of 200 acres, and upon it is a commodious and comfortable dwelling, with excellent barns and other improvements, and he is entirely out of debt, and is so situated that he has no reason to fear that "rainy day," which it is wise to prepare for. Mr. Bohn has earned all these comforts by his own efforts, being an industrious and careful as well as energetic and progressive farmer. He is engaged in general farming, and in connection conducts a dairying business and manufactures cheese, milking as many as 25 cows per day. While accumulating his property he has also built up a reputation for honesty and upright dealing, which has gained for him the confidence and respect of all with whom he comes in contact. In politics, Mr. Bohn is an ardent Republican and exerts considerable influence in favor of his chosen party. His standing is high, and it is a matter of congratulation with him, that no business dealing of his has ever made it necessary for him to call in the law.

JOHN B. ORTSCHIED, a prominent real estate dealer, notary public and conveyancer, of Cassville, Grant county, was born in Alsace, France, Dec. 2, 1842, a son of Joseph and Mary Ann (Blint) Ortscheid, also natives of Alsace; there the father died in 1851. Six years later the widowed mother, accompanied by her son, John B., and daughter, Magdalena, came to America. They took passage on board a sailing vessel at Havre, and after fifty-six days spent upon the Atlantic, reached New York in safety. They crossed the country by rail to East Dubuque, Ill., and from there came up the river on a steamer to Cassville, Wis., landing here Aug. 27, 1857. The mother died at this place in 1869. She had nine children, five of whom became residents of Cassville, and of these we have record of Frank Joseph, who located here in 1856, but is now living in East Galena, Ill., and owns a valuable farm of 640 acres of land; Andrew also came to Cassville in 1856, and now makes his home at North Andover, Grant county; Magdalena died in Cassville; and John B., still a resident of this place.

John B. Ortscheid was a lad of fourteen years when he arrived in Cassville, which town at that time contained but twelve or fourteen families. Here he at first worked as a day laborer, but later learned the baker's trade at Dubuque and Galena, and in 1864 embarked in the bakery and saloon business at Cassville, continuing until April, 1865. Four years later he erected a good frame building, where he successfully conducted a bakery and restaurant for thirty-one years, or until 1899, when he sold out. For a number of years he has handled real estate, and now devotes his entire time to that business, being the only exclusive real estate dealer in Cassville. He handles both village and farm property in Cassville and Patch Grove townships, has property for sale in the Red River valley, Minn., and is doing quite a large and profitable business.

At Dubuque, Feb. 4, 1864, Mr. Ortscheid was united in marriage with Miss Catharine Zeug, a native of Potosi, Grant county, and a daughter of Peter and Barbara (Caternine) Zeug. Her father was born in Germany, and on coming to this country in 1830, located in Dubuque, but the following year took up his residence in Potosi, where he now lives at the advanced age of ninety-eight years. During his active business life he followed mining and farming. His wife died in 1886. In their family were the following children: Peter, who died in San Francisco, Cal.; Frank and Burnhard, both residents of Iowa; William, now in the Klondike; John, who was drowned in Grant river; John (2), who died young; Mrs. Barbara Bluemer, of Potosi; Mrs. Barbara Caspars, of Cassville; and Mrs. Catharine Ortscheid. Fourteen children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ortscheid, namely: Edward P., who died at Seattle, Wash., in 1897, aged thirty-two years; Amelia, who died in Cassville, in 1867; Josephine Clara, a Sister of Notre Dame, Grand Rapids; Mary Barbara, a Sister of Notre Dame, Prairie du Chien; Lena, who married Charles Starr, of La Crosse, Wis., and died in 1896; Anna, who married Jacob Schuh, and has three children, Clarence, Paul, and Irma, of Milwaukee, Wis.; William P., a jeweler, of Cassville; Maggie, who married Frank B. Burdick, and has three children, Edward McKinley, Florence and Agnes; Bernhart William, who was born in Cassville, Jan. 17, 1873, and died on the 21st of the following February; Louisa Mary, wife of Albert Kleinpell, of Colesburg, Iowa; Matthew Bernard, now a barber, and real estate and collection agent of Chicago, who enlisted in the State Guards of Wisconsin, and was a member of Company G, 4th Wis. V. I., in the Spanish-American war; George Washington; Florence Mary, a resident of Milwaukee; and Agnes Otilia, at home.

Mr. Ortscheid and his family hold membership in the Catholic Church, and he is also a charter member of Branch No. 34, Catholic Knights. In connection with his other business he is also interested in mining and in quarrying stone for building purposes. His home property consists of about twenty-six acres in the village corporation, upon which he has erected a pleasant residence. In 1862, during the Civil war, he tried to enlist in the 12th Iowa V. I., but being under age he was rejected. Politically Mr. Ortscheid was first a Republican, but is now a supporter of the Democratic party. Being one of the leading and influential citizens of his town, he has been called upon to fill several local positions of honor and trust. He has served as road overseer and township treasurer; was village treasurer from 1893 to 1898; constable from 1876 to 1880; justice of the peace from 1880 to 1894, during which time he married sixty-three couples; and was member of the village trustees in 1900. He is a man of excellent business and executive ability, whose sound judgment, unflagging enterprise and capable management have brought to him a well-merited success.

CHARLES A. LYTLE, a reputable citizen and formerly a druggist of Monroe, Green county, had, during his business career, a patronage that extended far out into the adjacent country, and he has ever borne a good name that is the result of years of industry and integrity.

Mr. Lytle was born in Mount Joy, Lancaster county, Penn., March 24, 1845, a son of Samuel S. P. and Anna Belle (Hendrickson) Lytle, both natives of that county. Three sons and four daughters were born to them, four of their children are now living: Charles A.; Samuel S. P., Jr., of Mount Joy; Jennie R., the wife of Michael Detweiler, of Mt. Joy; and Anna Belle, of the same place. The father was a farmer, and died at his home in Mt. Joy, in January, 1898, at the age of seventy-nine, and his wife died in 1886, when sixty-two. They were Presbyterians. Joseph Lytle, his father, was a native of Scotland, and a farmer. He had seven children, and lived to be over eighty years of age. Okey Hendrickson, the father of Anna Belle whose name appears above, was a native of Pennsylvania, and of Scotch descent. He built the first hotel in Mt. Joy and reached an advanced age. He was the father of two daughters and five sons.

Charles A. Lytle spent his earlier life in Mt. Joy, Penn., where he attended the public schools and the academy, and obtained a very fair education for the times. He entered a drug store in Harrisburg, Penn., Jan. 1, 1862, and two years later stood the medical examination, and received the appointment as surgeon steward on board the United States steamer "Stettin," where he served until the close of the war. Mr. Lytle left the naval service at the conclusion of the war, and returned to the drug store in Harrisburg, where he remained until the spring of 1866. That year he made his first appearance in Wisconsin, and began clerking for J. K. Eilert, who was the first druggist in Green county, and who had been a resident of Monroe for many years. Warm bonds of personal attachment soon came to exist between the two, and Mr. Lytle continued with Mr. Eilert as long as that gentleman lived, and when he died in 1892, succeeded to the business, which he conducted until December, 1900.

Mr. Lytle and Miss Alice S. Banks were married Dec. 20, 1871. Mrs. Lytle is a daughter of James A. and Grace M. (Walker) Banks, of Leeds, England, and is a lady of most charming character. She is the mother of two children, Grace M. and Samuel J., both single. Mr. and Mrs. Lytle are members of the Catholic Church, and he is affiliated with the Royal Arcanum, and O. F. Pinney Post, No. 102, G. A. R. He is a Republican, and is a highly esteemed business man and citizen. His home is at the corner of Main and Farmer streets, in Monroe, which town has been his abiding place for thirty-four years.

FRANCIS METCALFE, a retired business man of Benton, Wis., was born in Yorkshire, England, Jan. 10, 1837, and is a son of James and Margaret (Netterson) Metcalfe, both born in England. The father was born in 1806, and the mother in 1814. They had a family of seven children, when they came to America in 1849. They landed in this country at New Orleans, and journeyed up the Mississippi river to Galena, Ill., where the father worked in the mines, and then purchased a farm in Benton, on which he made very liberal improvements. In 1868 he purchased a farm in Dubuque county, Iowa, where he made his home until his death in 1884. His widow died in 1892. Mr. Metcalfe was one of the founders of the Methodist Church in Benton, with which both were connected in England. They were active in the work of the Church. Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe were the parents of seventeen children, thirteen of whom grew to maturity : (1) Leonard was married to Jane Kendall, and for some years lived in Benton. He was a member of the 96th Ill. V. I. during the Civil war. (2) Matthew is in O'Brien, O'Brien Co., Iowa, and has a family of six children. (3) Francis. (4) Thomas enlisted in the 96th Ill. V. I., and served until his death near Nashville, Tenn. (5) James was a member of the 96th Ill. V. I., and served until the close of the war. He was married after his return from the war to Margaret Alton, of Hazel Green. For many years he was one of the prominent business men of Benton. He is living in Minneapolis, where one of his four sons is being educated at the State University. (6) Christopher, a soldier of the 96th Illinois, is now living near Dubuque, Iowa. (Four brothers were in the one regiment.) After the war he was married to Miss Mary A. Robson, of Benton, and is now living on his farm near Dubuque, Iowa. (7) Mary A. married John Harker, who still lives in Cuba City, where Mrs. Harker died in 1894, leaving a family of five children. These seven members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe were all born in England. (8) Margaret, born in Benton, married John Alexander, of Dubuque, and is the mother of two children, William and Irene. (9) John W., now a resident of Idaho Springs, Colo., is unmarried. (10) Isabella, the wife of Joseph Lewis, who resides on a farm near Dubuque, is the mother of three children. (11) Reuben is married, and resides in Dubuque; he has three children. (12) David married Phoebe Dawson, of Dubuque; where they reside. He is engaged in the butcher business in that city. They have one son, Earl Metcalfe. (13) Emanuel, who married Miss Sweeney, of Dubuque, resides in Des Moines. All the children of Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe who were not natives of England were born in Lafayette county.

Francis Metcalfe acquired his education in the old country, and came with his parents to this country when he was eleven years of age. In England he worked with his father four years in the mines. After coming to this State he pursued the same labor until he became a young man. In 1862, with a company of young men, he walked to British Columbia, where they worked in the gold mines some four years. As an experienced miner he commanded a daily wage of nine dollars, and was quite successful in his work in that distant country.

Francis Metcalfe was married in 1868 to Miss Sarah Alexander, of Benton, daughter of William and Mary Alexander, pioneers in the settlement of the State. Mrs. Metcalfe was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1842, and when eight years old came to Wisconsin with her parents. Her education was obtained in the public schools of the town of Benton.

Mr. Metcalfe purchased a residence in Benton, and was engaged in active business life until 1894, when he retired. His wife died the preceding year, leaving seven children: (1) Ida, born in 1869, is the wife of Arthur Emerson, clerk of Lafayette county, and has her home in Darlington. (2) Thomas J., born in December, 1870, was graduated in the class of 1892, from the Platteville Normal, and for six years taught school. He is now a graduate of a dental school in Chicago, and is a practicing dentist in Merrill, Wis. He was married to Miss Alice Harris, of Cuba City, a daughter of Joseph Harris, one of the leading business men of that place. They have one son, Harold H. (3) Clyde C., a graduate of the Benton school, was married to Miss Susan Sandefur, of Darlington, where they reside, and where he is engaged in business as a liveryman. They have one daughter. (4) James W., born in March, 1876, is a graduate of the Benton high school. He learned the trade of tinner with W. H. Niles, and is now holding the office of chief of police in Benton. In July, 1897, he was married to Miss Annie Buchan, of Benton, daughter of Joseph Buchan, the cashier of the Benton Bank. They reside in Benton, and have one son, James Lloyd. (5) Jessie I., born in 1878, was a graduate of the Platteville Normal in the class of 1896, and for two years taught in the high school at Benton. She died in December, 1898, a young lady of much culture and many charms, with a host of friends in the community. (6) Francis, born in 1883, is now a student in the State Normal at Platteville, after having graduated from the Benton high school. (7) May O., born in 1885, is a student in the Benton public school.

Francis Metcalfe is a Republican, and is identified with the Methodist Church, of which he has always been an active member, as was also his wife. One of the solid men in the community, Mr. Metcalfe has for many years been known by his honesty and manifest integrity.

FRANK D. KIMBALL. This gentleman is well and favorably known throughout southern Wisconsin as a business man of character and standing in the city of Janesville, Rock county. He began life with little to help him beyond a sound constitution, a fairly good education and an unusual endowment of force and character, but by industry and thrift has won for himself a position of affluence while still in middle life.

Mr. Kimball was born in East Greenwich, R. I., Dec. 12, 1848, only child of Fermer and Adeline (Allen) Kimball. His father was a native of the same State, while his mother was born in Massachusetts. Fermer Kimball was a carpenter and cabinet maker, and later in life learned the trade of painting, and at different times worked at all these trades. He removed to Wisconsin in 1855, locating on a 200-acre farm in La Prairie township; he devoted himself to the improvement of this handsome tract, and soon converted it into a valuable estate. In 1865 he became a resident of Janesville, and for two years followed the trade of painting. He did well, and went into the furniture and manufacturing business, and presently acquired an interest in the Thoroughgood box factory. He also owned a hardware store, and besides maintaining his interest in the factory, conducted the store for a number of years. During the last few years of his life he gave his entire attention to the box factory, and developed a large trade in cigar boxes and cigar-box lumber. He was one of the organizers of the Bower City Bank, and was once its president. He died March 6, 1899, at the age of seventy-six years and six months. His widow still survives, and occupies the old home at the corner of Bluff and South Second streets. She and her husband were regular attendants of All Souls' Church. Mr. Kimball was a Republican, and served as supervisor from the Third ward in Janesville for eighteen years. He was chairman of the building committee, under whose direction the Insane Asylum was erected, and for two terms served as chairman of the board. He was a member of the Wisconsin Legislature in 1878, and again in 1894 and 1895.

Dean Kimball, father of Fermer Kimball, was a native of Rhode Island, and was of English descent. The family in America begins its history with the story of three brothers, who came to New England about 1638, finding locations in Rhode Island, Vermont and Pennsylvania. Dean Kimball was a farmer, and died in Rhode Island when over eighty-one, the father of eight children. The maternal grandfather of Frank D. Kimball was Abram Allen, a native of Massachusetts, and of English descent, who followed the business of a butcher, and died in Fall River, Mass., when sixty-seven years old. He was a man of good character and business integrity, and was the father of a numerous family.

Frank D. Kimball lived on his father's farm until he reached the age of sixteen, attending the district school, and later the public schools of Janesville. For four years he worked at the trade of painting, and then became a brakeman on the railroad. A year later he was made a fireman on a locomotive, and served the company in that capacity for seventeen months. He was then given an engine, and was an engineer for twelve years; during the last six years of that time he had charge of a passenger engine. Leaving the road, he went into business as a dealer in furniture, and, qualifying as an undertaker, soon commanded a large and profitable trade. He had as a partner in the inception of his business career W. B. Brittan, the name of the firm being Brittan & Kimball. Mr. Brittan retired in 1888, and was succeeded by James J. Hall, the new firm being Kimball & Hall. A year and a half later Mr. Kimball purchased the entire business, and under his exclusive management it has assumed very large proportions. It occupies three floors, each having a dimension of 44x100 feet, while at the rear is a store house 24x36 feet, two stories in height and of brick construction. He also owns a store house on Wall street; it has two floors, is 44x100 feet, and is built of stone. He carries all kinds of furniture, and has built up a very extensive trade throughout the county.

Mr. Kimball was married July 9, 1867, to Miss Euretta Burdick, who was a daughter of Rollin S. and Anabel (Greenman) Burdick, and who died April 30, 1876, at the untimely age of twenty-five years. She was a woman of high character, and a devout member of the Baptist Church. Of the two children born of this union, George married Miss Elizabeth Pritchard, and is a partner in the box factory, and Belle died in early childhood. Mr. Kimball entered into the matrimonial relations a second time, Miss Sarah Hatch becoming his bride on Nov. 29, 1877. She is a daughter of William and Julia Hatch, and is the mother of two children, Frank W. and Eureka May. The family occupy a beautiful and attractive home at 151 South Main street, which is known throughout the city as the center of a generous and gracious hospitality. Mr. Kimball is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being associated with Western Star Lodge, No. 14, F. & A. M. He is a Republican, and though not a working politician exerts considerable influence on his party. He has lived in Rock county forty-five years, and in that time has witnessed the conversion of southern Wisconsin from wild prairie and unbroken forest into the garden spot and pride of the Northwest.

Frank D. Kimball

REV. JOHN ANDERECK, pastor of the Baptist Church in Juda, and one of the leading ministers of Green county, is eminent not only for his pulpit abilities, but for his personal character, and for his profound devotion to the great cause committed to him.

Hon. Alexander and Margaret (Stanford) Andereck, his parents, have lived in Marion county, Ill., many years. Alexander Andereck was born April 9, 1822, son of Isaac Andereck, who came to Pennsylvania from Germany about one hundred years ago. To him were born Alexander; Jacob, deceased; John, deceased; William; Andrew, deceased; and Catherine, deceased. In 1845 Alexander Andereck married Miss Margaret Stanford, daughter of Essek Stanford, a brother of the late Leland Stanford of California. This marriage has been blessed with the following children: Rev. John; Isaac, of Centralia, Ill.; William R., a minister of the Baptist Church at Kankakee, Ill.; Sarah, who died in childhood; Martha E., the wife of William Southerland, of Illinois; Jacob, a resident of Centralia, Ill.; and Andrew, a farmer in Marion county, Illinois. The father is now living retired from the activities of farm life; the mother passed to the better land in November, 1899.

Rev. John Andereck was united in marriage to Miss Catherine E. McClellan, of Marion county, Ill., who was born May 19, 1850, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Orr) McClellan, and a distant relative of the late Gen. George B. McClellan. The marriage was celebrated Oct. 31, 1869, and has been blessed with four children: (1) W. E., who is in charge of the First Baptist Church, at Plymouth, Ill.; (2) Eldredge, living in Juda, Wis.; (3) Jesse O., at home with his parents, and (4) Daisy, who died in infancy.

Rev. John Andereck was reared on the farm, attended the local schools, and then went to the high school at Sandoval, Ill., and as he became a young man followed public school teaching for a time. Entering the Baptist College at Alton, Ill., he prepared for the ministry of that church. Beginning his ministerial work in 1884, he came in 1888 to Juda, Wis., and has filled the pulpit of the Baptist Church in that village ever since, to the general satisfaction of the community. The parsonage is a fine residence. Mr. Andereck is a staunch Prohibitionist, and is a member of the Good Templars. He has largely made his own way in the world, and his work has been crowned with fair success. He is well read, well posted on general topics, and is a man of character and influence in the community. He has many friends, by whom he is beloved as a man of kind heart and generous spirit, ready to help the needy to a better life, and is a devoted worker in the Gospel field.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH of Juda, Wis., is one of the land marks in the religious history of the State. For more than sixty years its name has lived in Green county, and it has inspired noble living to a multitude of men and women, whose lives have attested the reality of their Christian faith.

This church was organized early in the summer of 1840, by the Rev. Mr. Stillwell, a devoted clergyman of the Baptist faith, who came from Illinois, and had a membership of fourteen people, including Mr. Stillwell and his wife. That gentleman was in charge of the movement for some years, and was succeeded by the Rev. G. R. Patton, who was the beloved and venerated pastor of the church for forty years. During his ministry he baptized and married a vast number of people, and lifted the church to a lofty and influential position. The retirement of Mr. Patton was followed by a season of supplies, and then Elder Prescott served for three years as pastor. For thirteen years the Rev. John Andereck has ministered to this people, and in that time has won a hold upon their hearts second to no man who ever broke for them the Bread of Life.

The organization of this Church was effected in a school house, and for some years it met for worship in halls and in private houses. In 1847 a union meeting house was dedicated in Juda, and there for twenty years this church met for religious services. In 1867 it built for itself its present large and convenient edifice, which is thought to be one of the best and most substantial in the county. The church organization at the present time has a membership of 250 people, who are among the most prominent and influential people of this community.

The officers of the church and its various societies are earnest and efficient workers, as will be seen from the list here appended. Deacons: Hon. Franklin Mitchell, Henry Roderick, Marion Gaspin, Jacob L. Roderick, William Baird, George Hemstreet, and John Clemmer. Trustees: Hon. Franklin Mitchell, Samuel Hutzell, J. J. Newman, Thomas Davis, William Baird, and Gilbert Newman. Treasurer: E. P. Mitchell. Clerk: Jacob L. Roderick. Sunday School: Superintendent, Miss Anna Roderick; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. C. E. Andereck; Secretary, Miss Emma Wohlwend; Librarian, Miss Hattie Calvin; Organist, Miss Clara Roderick. Baptist Young People's Union: President, Mrs. Edith Allen; Secretary, Mrs. Catharine Dininger; Treasurer, Ross Roderick; Organist, Miss Dora Dinwiddie. Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies: President, Mrs. Hannah Roderick; Secretary, Edith Allen; Treasurer, Hattie Blackford. Ladies Aid Society: President, Mrs. C. E. Andereck; Vice-president, Mrs. Martha Patton; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Emma Wohlwend.

THOMAS CONVEY. Prominent among the people of Rideway township, Iowa county, whose period of residence here covers more than forty years, is Thomas Convey, a well-known citizen. Mr. Convey was born in Canada, in 1849, but his ancestry came from the Emerald Isle, a land which has probably contributed more of her citizens to this section, than any other, of equal population, and in an especial manner is southwest Wisconsin indebted to the sons and daughters of Ireland, for its agricultural, mineral and religious development. In fact, her sturdy sons were most numerous among those early pioneers who first brought to light the rich mining interests and agricultural possibilities of the State, and while the first generation has nearly all passed away, their children and the results of their labor remain.

In the true sense of the word, Thomas Convey was not a pioneer, but for many years he has been actively engaged in ascertaining and promoting the best interests of Iowa county, especially in an agricultural sense. His parents were born in Ireland; his father, Thomas Convey, removing from Ireland, to Scotland, with his parents, in early life. With them he came to America, locating in New York, but about 1834 removal was made to Canada and there his son, Thomas Convey of this sketch, was born. In 1860, Thomas Convey, Sr., with his family, comprising wife and two children, Thomas and his sister (who now is Mrs. Michael Barry, of Dodgeville township), came to Iowa county and settled on Speculators land, in the township of Ridgeway, Section 27. The farm originally contained eighty acres, which was later increased to 220, and here the devoted mother died, in 1877, and the father passed away in 1895, about eighty years of age.

Thomas Convey was about eleven years old when he came to Wisconsin with his parents. As a boy he attended school, and assisted in the clearing of the land, and after finishing the common school course, in his district, he became a student at the High school, in Freeport, Ill. After completing a very thorough course there, he began the profession of teaching, and for twelve terms was one of the most efficient educators in Ridgeway and Mifflin townships. However, it is along the lines of farming and stockraising that Mr. Convey has been so eminently successful, and has earned the reputation of being an authority as to the best methods in these industries. Ever since 1888, Mr. Convey has been in great demand as a lecturer at Farmers' Institutes on the subjects of dairying, stock-breeding, general farming and kindred subjects.

Mrs. Convey was formerly Miss Martha Miess, a daughter of Henry Miess, a pioneer of Ridgeway township, and a large and interesting family has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Convey, consisting of nine daughters and three sons. Mr. Convey is too well known to the public to require more than a brief sketch. In politics he is independent, a prohibitionist in principle and is an advocate of whatever he believes will best tend to promote the best interests of the people. His mind is liberal, and his culture broad. His fine library and his patronage of the best papers and periodicals attest his desire to keep in touch with the latest thought of the day, while his excellent farm displays thoroughness of cultivation and the success of his theories, when put into active practice. Although Mr. Convey has occupied a prominent position in his neighborhood, he has never sought political favor, has served as chairman of his township and has often filled local offices, but his life has been too busy in other lines to permit him to accept higher, or more engrossing positions.

FRANCIS M. CONFER, M. D. (deceased), was one of the leading physicians of the city of Monroe, Green county. He was a deep student of his profession, thoroughly posted as to its primary principles, and fully abreast of the times. He had a large practice, and brought to his patients the best that medical art and science offered.

Dr. Confer was born in Green county, Wis., Dec. 18, 1854, and was a son of James and Mary E. (Ziebach) Confer, both natives of Pennsylvania. They had four sons: John W., of North Ontario, Cal.; Dr. Francis M.; Jacob S., of Mason City, Iowa; and J. Ellis, of Monroe. The father, who was a tanner by trade, came West to Illinois in 1848, and lived in Winnebago county, not far from Rockford, from that year until October, 1854, when he moved into Green county, Wis., and bought a farm of 160 acres in Washington township. This farm became the family home for many years, and here his sons were reared, taking lessons of courage and endurance from the hard work that necessarily came to them. Mr. Confer sold his land in 1884, and moved into the city of Monroe, to live retired the balance of his days. He died Oct. 19, 1891, when he was in his seventy-first year. His widow still survives. They were originally Baptists, but joined the Methodist Church late in life. He was a man of considerable prominence, and at different times had filled various township offices. His father was a farmer, and died in Center county, Penn., about 1835.

when quite a young man. Jacob Ziebach, the father of Mrs. Mary E. Confer, was a native of Pennsylvania, of German extraction, and lived to be about eighty-five, dying in his native State. He reared a large family.

Francis M. Confer spent the first twenty years of his life on the paternal acres, and was reared under the fostering care of his father and mother. He attended the local school, was graduated from the Monroe high school in 1878, and when he was seventeen began teaching, continuing several years with marked success. He had fixed his mind on the profession of medicine, and for several years was reading up for it. In 1879 he matriculated at Rush Medical College, Chicago, and was graduated from that institution with honor in 1882. He began his professional career at Dayton, Wis., where he spent one year, then moved to Monroe, and almost immediately entered into a large and growing practice, which steadily increased up to the time of his death, Nov. 7, 1900. Monroe has lost an exemplary citizen, the medical profession a worthy member, and his family a kind husband and father. The Doctor took a special course in the Polyclinic at New York in 1890, and five years later went to Europe and studied in Vienna, also visiting the various medical centers, particularly Munich and London. He was a specialist in surgery, and in the treatment of the eye and ear, was always progressive, and did special work each year, thus keeping fully abreast of the times.

Dr. Confer and Miss Carrie Isely, a daughter of John and Louisa (Germann) Isely, were married Feb. 19, 1882, and they had three children, Francis M., Jr., Edna L. and Robert R. The home is on the corner of East and Merchant streets, where the Doctor bought the ground and built a fine residence. Dr. Confer was a member of Smith Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and was highly respected in his Masonic affiliations. He belonged to the American Medical Association, and to both the Wisconsin State Medical Society and the Central Wisconsin Medical Society, anxious always to come into contact with the best and brightest members of his profession. Politically he was an independent Republican.

ERNEST W. GORHAM. Among the prominent and successful young farmers of Sylvester township, Green county, is Ernest W.

Gorham, who is esteemed and respected as a representative man of the community.

William C. Gorham, the father of our subject, was one of the early settlers of Wisconsin, coming to the State about fifty-six years ago, and has seen its wonderful growth and development. He is now one of the esteemed residents of Monroe, where he lives in retirement. While a native of Ohio, born Aug. 31, 1825, his long residence in the Badger State has made its progress and interests very dear to him. The mother of our subject, Elvira (Chaffee) Gorham, was born in Vermont March 22, 1833, and married Mr. Gorham in Ohio Jan. 3, 1853. Their two children were born in Wisconsin, the elder De Witt R. Gorham, born in 1854, being now a resident of Monroe. With but limited means, his cash capital being only $15, William C. Gorham had a difficult future before him when he first located in the wilderness of Wisconsin, but his undaunted energy and industry enabled him to push forward successfully, and at one time he was the owner of 600 acres of land, among the best adapted to farming in the county. During 1864-65 Mr. Gorham was a volunteer member of Company I, 46th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war, receiving an honorable discharge.

Ernest W. Gorham was born Dec. 8, 1860. Through his grandfather, Elisha Gorham, a native of New Haven, Conn., he is descended from English and Scottish ancestry. Mr. Gorham became early accustomed to the duties of the farm, and when his district schooling was completed began agricultural labor as his choice of occupation, his father having deeded him one of his farms. He has since successfully continued in general farming and stock raising.

The marriage of Mr. Gorham took place on June 27, 1895, to Miss Flora L., the estimable daughter of Charles and Rosina (Voss) Brackenwagen, of Washington township, who came to Green county from Germany, in 1862.

The birth of Mrs. Gorham was on Sept. 2, 1866, and she is one of a family of ten children: Emma, Clara, Minnie, Charles, Matie, Otto, Frank, Jennie, Flora L. and Zena. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gorham: Elvira, on May 3, 1896, and Ralph, on Oct. 23, 1898.

Since attaining his majority Mr. Gorham has been a staunch supporter of the Republican party, and is a willing worker in the same. Although he does not belong to any religious denomination, they all have his hearty support, particularly the M. E. Church. His influence is always cast in support of the cardinal virtues, and he is widely known as a liberal and conscientious man. His property in Sylvester township is located three miles northeast of Monroe, where the pleasures of both country and city life may be enjoyed, and he is also the owner of a fine farm of 180 acres in Adams county. Mr. Gorham is a worthy representative of one of the old and respected families of this locality. The death of his mother, on June 10, 1894, removed from life one of the best and most estimable women of this locality, and she is well remembered for her many kind and neighborly deeds.

HON. THEODORE W. GOLDIN, though yet scarcely more than forty-five years of age, has passed through more peril and enjoyed more honor than usually fall to the lot of men of twice his years. He is of English descent although for many generations his forbears have been born on American soil. His grandfather, George G. Goldin, resided many years in the city of New York, where he carried on business as an architect, as well as a contractor and builder. He was the father of four children, one of whom, Reuben W., became the father of Hon. Theodore W. Goldin, of Janesville.

Reuben W. Goldin came with his parents to Wisconsin about 1848, a youth of sixteen years. The family settled in the town of Newark, a few miles west of the present city of Beloit, and there he attended school, and learned the trade of a harness maker. After a few years he found his way to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained for several years, and where he married, his wife being Elizabeth Bradfield, of Columbiana county, Ohio, who was one of a family of five children. Her father was a soldier in the war of 1812. Returning to Wisconsin, Mr. Goldin located first in Janesville, but soon took up his residence at Albany, Green county, where he engaged in business as a dealer in saddlery, harness, trunks, and other leather goods. Later he removed to Brodhead, where he passed the remainder of his life, some twenty-five years, dying in 1893, at the age of sixty-one. His venerable widow yet survives him, her home being at Brodhead. Mr. Goldin was a man keenly alive to the public interests, and enjoyed the full confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, who elected him to various town and city offices. Although brought up under Quaker influences, it was his custom to accompany his wife to the Methodist Church, of which she was a member.

Hon. Theodore W. Goldin was his parents' only child. He was born in the town of Avon, Rock county, July 25, 1856, attended the public schools, and at an early age began to learn the harness making trade. The employment, however, was not to his liking. He desired a life more stirring and full of adventure, and after three years he entered the employ of the Chicago & North Western Railway Co., first as an office assistant, and later as a brakeman. He was also for a time in the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road. In 1873 he enlisted in the 7th U. S. Cavalry, serving for four years and eight months, first as a private, and later as a sergeant. This was the regiment formerly commanded by the gallant and unfortunate Gen. Custer, whose sad fate at the hand of the copper-colored savages of the Plains plunged an entire nation into mourning. Mr. Goldin was with the General until within an hour and a half of the time when the gallant leader, with 257 of his men, was so foully and cruelly massacred. At the time of the carnage Sergt. Goldin was with Major Reno, and he enjoys the distinction of being the only one of that heroic band who escaped slaughter. In commemoration of his participation in the affair Congress voted him a Congressional medal of honor, which is one of his most highly prized possessions.

After leaving the army our subject entered the service of the Northwestern Stage & Express Co., with which he remained eighteen months. Returning home, he entered into business with his father, but when the latter disposed of his store he once more began the life of a railroad man, working first for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Co., later for the Wisconsin Central. In 1881 he again went home to Brodhead, and in the autumn of 1882 was elected clerk of the Circuit Court of Green county, which office he continued to hold until Nov. 1, 1885, resigning to form a law partnership with Hon. B. F. Dunwiddie, of Janesville, who at present occupies a seat on the Bench of the Circuit Court. Later William G. Wheeler (afterward district attorney for Rock county) was admitted to the firm, which was, however, dissolved in 1895, upon the election of Mr. Goldin to the Circuit Court clerkship for Rock county. This office he still holds, his native ability, painstaking accuracy and long experience peculiarly qualifying him for the discharge of its responsible duties. He is known throughout the length and breadth of the State, and is everywhere held in high esteem. Of strong personality and resolute will, he leaves his impress on everything which falls under his control, while his gentle disposition and generous nature endear him to his friends.

Mr. Goldin is a thirty-second degree Mason, and is at present Grand Commander of the State of Wisconsin. He was initiated into the fraternity in Smith Lodge, Monroe, and his immediate affiliations at present are with Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., of Janesville; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and the Milwaukee Consistory. Both he and his wife are members of the Order of the Eastern Star. He also belongs to Oriental Lodge, No. 2, K. of P., and to the B. P. O. E. His political creed is that of the Republican party.

On Feb. 23, 1881, Mr. Goldin was united in marriage with Miss Laura Dunwiddie, a daughter of David and Cynthia (Mitchell) Dunwiddie, of Janesville. To their union has been born one son, Herbert D.

FRANK G. VILLEMONTÉ. Among the prominent business citizens of Arena is Frank G. Villemonté, a successful merchant and progressive man who has been identified with the advancement of Iowa county for many years. He was born in Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24, 1842, a son of Exever and Mary Villemonté, natives of France, where they were reared and married, coming to America when they had but one child, an infant, who died on the passage and was buried at sea. Mr. and Mrs. Villemonté resided in Buffalo, N. Y., for eight years, and then removed to Detroit, Mich., where they made their home for sixteen years. Their location in the latter city was in 1834, when it was but a hamlet, and when they left it, the growth and development had already begun. In 1850 Mr. Villemonté, with his family, started by way of the Lakes to Milwaukee, and thence by team to Arena township, where one of the fertile farms was.

purchased, and there the father of the family died, in the spring of 1867, the mother surviving but one year.

Exever Villemonte was an industrious and esteemed citizen. Although possessed of but limited means when he reached Iowa county, by his energy and diligence he made of his land one of the best farms in this locality. The life the family led was that of the pioneer and demanded rude strength and patience, as well as calm courage, for often the husbandman was required to struggle not only with unknown conditions of climate, but also had to be prepared for battle with fire, flood and the savages who still lurked not far away. The subject of this sketch well remembers seeing 500 Indians at one time, soon after the arrival of the family in its new home. Deer was abundant in this wilderness—in fact was the chief article of diet. There was little chance for any intellectual life, as the nearest school house was three miles distant, and the farm houses far between. At death the parents left six children, three sons and three daughters, all of whom still survive, with the exception of the eldest, Charles Villemonte, who died on May 10, 1893, a resident of Helena, in this county. The others are: Emily, who is the wife of Charles Poutie, of Buffalo; Mary Ann, who is the wife of Charles Warner, of Burlingame, Kans.; Mary, who is the wife of John R. Maffott, of Mount Vernon, S. Dak.; Paul, a resident of Winona, Minn., who was a member of Company K, 33d Wis. V. I., and served through the war of the Rebellion; and Frank G., of this sketch.

Frank G. Villemonte was a lad of eight years when he accompanied his parents to Iowa county, and remembers the appearance of the country as it was a half century ago. Here he learned to swing an ax and drive a plow, and with interest watched the development of the country about their cabin, the advent of every neighbor being hailed with delight, for with settlement came good roads, better school facilities and a social life which inevitably broadened the mind and opened up avenues for usefulness.

On Aug. 15, 1862, Mr. Villemonte enlisted in the Federal army, becoming a member of Co. C, 31st Wis. V. I. This regiment belonged to the gallant army which engaged in the siege of Atlanta and made the famous March to the Sea, also participating in the battles of Goldsboro and Bentonville, and in the marching and skirmishing that preceded these famous engagements. Mr. Villemonte was at Raleigh when Gen. Johnston surrendered to Gen. Sherman, when the war was practically over. Then came the last important events of Sherman's march to Washington and the Grand Review in that city. From there our subject went to Louisville, Ky., where he was mustered out of a service he had willingly entered, thence to Madison, where, on the 6th of July, the regiment was discharged, the soldiers bade each other farewell, and scattered over the country to their various homes.

Mr. Villemonte engaged in work on a farm for a year after his return, and then went to Necedah, where he was employed in the lumber business for about five months, rafting lumber down the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers to Hannibal, Mo., but gave up that laborious life to return to his parents who needed his care and filial attention. They were then living at Helena, in Iowa county, and he settled down with them and learned the trade of shoemaker, with his brother, Charles, entering into a partnership, which was later dissolved, and he came to Arena and opened up a boot and shoe store, conducting this business successfully for the succeeding seventeen years. As his health seemed to be giving away, Mr. Villemonte then purchased a farm, and for the next ten years met with prosperity as an agriculturist. Desiring again the comforts and recreations of a more social kind, Mr. Villemonte sold his farm and returned to Arena, and here, among old friends, he has successfully conducted a mercantile business ever since.

On July 6, 1869, Mr. Villemonte was married to Miss Joanna Youlton, a native of this county, who died on Jan. 31, 1895. Miss Josie Murphy became his second wife. He has become the father of ten children: John, a farmer in New York; LeRoy is the assistant cashier of the State Bank at Fennimore, Wis.; Phebe, a successful teacher, who was educated at Fort Atkinson, Wis., high school; Frank, a resident of Owens, Wis.; Veronica, a resident of Farmer, N. Y.; Edith; Grace; William and Genivieve. One daughter, Josie, died suddenly of appendicitis, while staying temporarily at Mazomanie, Wis., on March 5, 1900, at the age of nineteen, an amiable and highly esteemed young lady. Mr. Villemonte is a well-known and highly esteemed citizen and an honored member of G. A. R. Post No. 107, of which he has been commander for the past two years, having filled all of the other offices. Although he was with his regiment during all of its activity he fortunately escaped unhurt. During 1863 he spent a short time in the hospital and was given a short furlough home during convalescence, but before long was back at duty.

CHRISTEN EVENSEN (deceased) was during his brief but active career one of the leading farmers of Jordan township, Green county, where he passed his entire life, having been born April 7, 1856, on the farm now occupied by his widow and family.

Ole and Rachel Evensen, our subject's parents, were born in Krodsherret, Norway, and came to this country in 1848, settling in Green county, Wis. They had owned one of the prettiest farms in Krodsherret, which they sold before emigrating. They first settled in Kendall county, Ill., where resided a brother of Mr. Evensen, he having been one of the first to leave his native home in Norway. They remained there two years, and in 1850 located in Wisconsin. Mr. Evensen was a thrifty, industrious farmer, and a good manager, and at the time of his death owned a fine farm of 200 acres—the old homestead now owned by our subject's widow, in Section 32, Jordan township. Mr. Evensen passed away in 1897, his wife in 1899, and their remains lie in the Norwegian cemetery in Jordan township. They were among the most respected residents of the township in their day, highly esteemed for their genuine worth and their honorable, upright lives. Ten children were born to them, five of whom grew to maturity: Even, who resides in Norway Lake, Kandiyohi Co., Minn.; Jane, wife of Peter Helgeson, of Clayton county, Iowa; Christen, our subject; Mary, wife of Antone Fryslie, of Clark county, S. Dak.; and Nels, unmarried, who also lives in Clayton county, Iowa. The others died in childhood.

On March 22, 1883, Christen Evensen married Miss Carrie Petterson, of Iowa, who was born April 3, 1861, daughter of Torkel and Gunnil (Knudtson) Peterson. The parents, who were born in Norway, came to America when young, settling in Clayton county, Iowa, where all their children were born, and where they died, the mother in 1866, the father in 1899. Their family consisted of seven children: Anna, wife of Ole Severson, Jewell county, Kans.; Bell, wife of Knute Tolefson, of South Dakota; Nellie, wife of Annult Stenson, of Traill Co., N. Dak.; Petter, of Clayton county, Iowa; Carrie, Mrs. Evensen; Betsey, wife of Even Glesne, of Clayton county, Iowa; and Knute, of North Dakota. To Mr. and Mrs. Evensen were born five sons: Oscar, born Jan. 8, 1884; Elmer, Oct. 25, 1885 (died May 16, 1892); Theodore R., July 8, 1888; Clarence, May 18, 1890; Christen, Jan. 30, 1892.

Christen Evensen passed away Dec. 24, 1891, sincerely mourned by his family and his many friends and neighbors, to all of whom he had endeared himself by a life of integrity and honest endeavor. Though he had hardly reached his prime he had made for himself a substantial place among the prosperous farmers of his locality, and he was liked and respected by all who came in contact with him, whether in business or friendly relations. His political sympathies were with the Republican party, and he was deeply interested in local affairs, having served efficiently as member of the township board and as school director. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Evensen left his family well provided for, and the property, under the energetic management of his widow, who has proved herself a woman of no mean business ability, has continued to improve in appearance and value. A fine barn and stable have been built, the residence has been improved, and various other changes have been made on the place, to which Mrs. Evensen has added a tract of fifty-one acres, the farm now comprising 251 acres.

LORRAIN D. HULBURT. From the earliest records it can be proved that the life of the farmer is the most certain of pursuits as regards financial success, as well as the groundwork for most of the prosperous endeavors in other lines. Scarcely a public man of note can be found who, at one time or another, has not had the mark of the soil on his hands.

Among those who have successfully made agricultural pursuits the business of life, and now reap the reward of honest toil, is Lorrain D. Hulburt, the subject of this sketch, who resides in a beautiful residence in Albany, Green county, living the comfortable life of a retired farmer. His birth took place in this State, in Decatur township, Green county, Dec. 18, 1844, a son of Erastus and Laura (Webster) Hulburt, both natives of Connecticut, who had a family of six children, four surviving: John A., of Mt. Pleasant township, Green county; Lydia, wife of T. Kellogg, of Seattle, Wash.; Hiram, of Peterson, Iowa; and our subject. The paternal grandfather of our subject was Philip Hulburt, who died in Connecticut, on Feb. 22, 1824, aged sixty-three years. The maternal grandfather, who had been a Revolutionary soldier, was a native of New York. Erastus, the father, was born in Connecticut, and brought up a farmer, removing to Green county, Wis., in 1839, where he located and bought land in Sylvester township. The tract consisted of 227 acres of government land in Decatur township, upon which his last days were spent, his death occurring on Dec. 11, 1865, when he was sixty-two years old; Mrs. Hulburt had died in 1863, aged fifty-seven, and both had been worthy members of the Baptist Church.

Lorrain D. Hulburt was reared from childhood upon the large farm in Decatur township, and attended the district schools. His education was as complete as the opportunities afforded, and in his home he was taught those principles of right living he has followed through life. With his brother John he bought the old homestead of his father, and later he bought his brother John's interest. He made his home there until 1881, when he rented the place, in the meantime removing to Clay county, Iowa, where he engaged for four years in farming and stockraising, but in 1888 he returned to Green county and has since resided in Albany, in 1892 erecting an elegant residence in this village. Mr. Hulburt owns 285 acres in the home farm, also owning Minnesota land, and but lately sold 160 acres in Iowa.

On Dec. 15, 1870, Mr. Hulburt was married to Miss Florence E. Smiley, a daughter of Daniel and Ellen (Bemis) Smiley, natives of Chautauqua county, N. Y., who had a family of six children: Lorinda, wife of John Hulburt, of Mt. Pleasant township, Green county; Sarah, widow of William Gould, of Minneapolis; Charles, of Albany township; Julia, wife of Dr. Broughton, of Dwight, Ill., now of Rockford, Ill.; Florence E., wife of Lorrain

D. Hulburt; and William, on the old home. The parents were married in 1836, and in 1837 came to Rock county, Wis., and settled on the Culver farm, near Janesville, removing in 1841 to Exeter township, where they lived until 1844, when they moved to what is now Albany township, where Mr. Smiley took up 160 acres of government land, adding to it until he owned 280 acres. His death occurred in 1886, when he was seventy-four years old. In 1866 he had been a member of the Wisconsin Legislature, was supervisor many terms, and commissioner of poor for years. His father, Joseph Smiley, a native of Mt. Holly, Vt., was an early settler of Chautauqua county, N. Y.; was a soldier in the battle of Black Rock, in 1814; had a family of eleven children, and died at Ellery, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1862. Mrs. Ellen (Bemis) Smiley, mother of Mrs. Hulburt, died in 1896, aged eighty-three, both she and her husband having been consistent members of the Baptist Church. Her father was Charles Bemis, a native of Pittstown, N. Y., born in August, 1791; moved to Chautauqua county, where he spent the most of his life engaged in farming, and died at Jamestown, N. Y. He reared a family of ten children, and was a man of note; a soldier in the war of 1812, in which he held an official position. His son, Col. George, was the last survivor of his children, he being the great-grandson of Jotham Bemis, of Bemis Heights, Saratoga Co., New York.

In politics Mr. Hulburt is a Republican, and takes an active interest in the deliberations of his party. Both he and his estimable wife are members of the Baptist Church.

HON. JAMES WILSON SEATON is a native of Oneida county, N. Y., born May 28, 1824, in the town of New Hartford, four miles south of Utica, at a place then known as Kellogg's Mills. The family resided in Utica while Gov. DeWitt Clinton was digging the Erie canal. In 1829 they removed to a place called Sauquoit, seven miles south of the city of Utica, one of those bright, sunlit villages which everywhere dot and adorn the Empire State.

Sauquoit is located on both sides of a lovely creek of the same name, which flows into the Mohawk river in the town of Whitesboro. The valley is the seat of many large enterprises and diversified manufacturing industries. The inhabitants are for the most part wealthy, refined and enterprising, many occupying elegant homes, gained by their prudence and foresight. The valley was first settled, near the end of the eighteenth century, by men of iron nerve and strong wills, who came with their families from New England, most of them being soldiers of the Revolutionary war, and still retaining their old flintlock muskets and cartouch boxes as mementos of the "times that tried men's souls." Nearly all selected farms, either in the fertile valley, or on the sides and summits of the tree-covered hills which bordered the valley on either side. As a consequence, to meet the exigencies and social wants of the farming community, a village sprang up on the banks of the stream, meandering between the hills on an old Indian trail, and was naturally given the Indian name, Sadahquoda (by which the creek was known to the natives), which the settlers modified to the more euphonious sound of Sauquoit (pronounced Saquoit). The village was divided into two parts, known as the Methodist and Presbyterian Corners, respectively, each denomination having large and commodious churches built in the primitive style of architecture. The Methodist church boasted of a steeple and bell, which its Exangelical neighbor had not. In addition to church privileges each side had a school house, tavern, store, blacksmith shop, and places for other trades; a flour and saw mill was patronized in common by both sides, as was also a large factory called the Franklin cotton mill; there were two cemeteries for the dead, but only one post office, which, by the grace of John Quincy Adams and other Whig Presidents, was persistently and continuously held on the Presbyterian side.

J. W. Scatone

The subject of this sketch learned his alphabet in the school house on the Methodist side, in the year 1830. Ten years later, at the age of seventeen, he was a "schoolmaster" in charge of the same school. In 1841-42-43 he taught school in West Exeter, Otsego county, and Ta-berg, Oneida Co. He afterwards attended the Oneida Conference Seminary, at Cazenovia, Madison Co., N. Y., and had for classmates such distinguished men as Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, now United States Senator from Connecticut; Bishop Edward G. Andrews, of the M. E. Church, and his brother, Charles Andrews, now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York; Leland Stanford, the late millionaire Senator from California; Gen. Slocum, who won distinction in the Civil war; and many noted ministers of the M. E. Church. In 1845-46 he taught select school at Lee Center, in Oneida county, and afterwards studied law with E. G. Parkhurst, in the city of Rome, N. Y. The office adjoined that of Comstock & Striker, a noted law firm at that time, Mr. Striker being one of the early projectors of the Michigan Central railroad, and Comstock, district attorney of Oneida county.

In 1847 Mr. Seaton took Greeley's advice, and came West to grow up with the country. After voyaging around the lakes to Milwaukee, and making a trip across the State by hack, in company with Hon. Orsamus Cole, he arrived at the "Wisconsin House," in Potosi. It was a hot, sultry day in July, and the dusty, yellow ochre of the mines, covering everything, gave a jaundiced appearance to the general aspect of the country. The people wore ochre-colored hat and breeches, the towels at the hotel were ochre-stained, the hotel girls seemed to have a saffron hue, and every room and floor in the house was sanded with ochre. There were bacon and roast beef with a yellow cast for dinner; beefsteak, coffee and hot bread covered with Babbitt's saleratus for supper; he slept in an ochre colored bed, and for breakfast had ham and eggs of the same hospitable hue. After this he went into the law office of Cole & Biddlecom, wrote briefs, read novels, newspapers, Blackstone, Kent's "Commentaries" and "Martin Chuzzlewit" for the next two months, and was admitted to the Bar of Grant county, in October of the same year. Judge Charles Dunn was upon the Bench, and Samuel Crawford (late Judge of the Supreme Court of the State). Chief Justice Cole and George W. Lakin (of Milwaukee) were the examining committee. After getting his diploma Mr. Seaton opened a select school in the brick school house at Potosi, then just completed. The next year he bought out Lucien B. Leach, in the Potosi Republican, which he edited and published until 1855, when the paper was sold to E. R. Paul, who removed it to Dunleith (now East Dubuque). Mr. Seaton did not abandon his literary work, however, but has ever since been a contributor to various publications. For forty-five years or more, he has been a correspondent of the county newspapers, and his articles are read by more people than those of any other local writer, especially those which have appeared in recent years, in the Lancaster Teller. His contributions to the History of Grant County (1881) formed one of the most interesting chapters of that publication; his descriptions of the duel on the ice, DeTantabaratz, the Senator, and other early settlers of the mines are samples of his best literary efforts. His "History of the Bench and Bar of Grant County" is also an able article, which has been often quoted and referred to by the best writers and public speakers of the State. Mr. Seaton was elected the first town clerk of the town of Potosi, when the State was admitted into the Union, in 1848, and served ten years in that capacity. During the same time he held the office of justice of the peace and town superintendent of schools, being the only man in the State, as he thinks, who was so highly honored as to hold three offices at one and the same time. At a special election in May, 1853, he was elected to the State Senate, in place of J. C. Squires, resigned and served during the impeachment trial of Judge Hubbell; was elected to and served in the Assembly during the years 1859 and 1860; was a number of years member of the town and county board, and served one year as chairman of the latter body, being on the building committee with Hon. George W. Ryland, when the present courthouse, jail and county poor house were constructed. He served two or three terms on the financial committee of the county board with such men as W. P. Dewey, John Schreiner, of Lancaster, and E. Bailey, of Platteville (the last named was killed by a mad bull). While the committee were examining claims against the county, Sheriff Clice gave them a sumptuous dinner in the jail, but the committee audited his claims against the county, regardless of the fact that they had been regaled upon his roast turkey and oysters. In 1855 Mr. Seaton engaged in mercantile business at Potosi, with his brother, T. R. Seaton, and continued same until 1879, at which time he sold out and resumed the practice of law, which he still continues, in connection with the fire insurance business.

The most important event in our subject's life was his marriage. This occurred at Cassville, Wis., June 15, 1850, when he was united by Charles L. La Grave, Esq., to Miss Amanda F. Bushee, daughter of Brayton and Mary Bushee, early settlers at the mines. Mr. Bushee built one of the first stores in that part of Potosi known as LaFayette, and conducted business there for some time. He afterward removed to Cassville, and continued the mercantile business, as well as smelting at that place, where he died in 1846. Mrs. Seaton was educated at St. Mathias Academy, at Potosi, and was an estimable lady of many virtues. She died June 6, 1900, and the following "Tribute to a Noble Woman," by one who well and personally knew the deceased, appeared in the Grant County Herald of June 21, 1900. It was much appreciated by the friends and family of Mrs. Seaton, who still deeply feel the great and irreparable loss of one who was the light and life of their once pleasant, but now desolate home.

Among the vast multitudes of people that inhabit our sphere, there are some who, like the sweet violet, modest, unassuming, hidden in verdant shades, diffusing their fragrance to those only who are so fortunate as to discover these sylvan retreats, never seek public applause, but in their innocence and purity shun the searching eye of the public. It was thus that Amanda F. Seaton, wife of the Hon. J. W. Seaton, who lately departed this life, lived, and was respected for more than forty years among the rugged hills in Potosi. Possessed of a gentle disposition, she was imbued with that innate tact to never lose a friend. All those who ever were so fortunate to be drawn in the circle of her home were life-long friends. A model mother, she reared her five children with a gentle hand and a God-fearing mind. All but one survived her. She, lovely Mary, generally known as "Pet", passed to the "unknown beyond" many years before her mother. It was the loss of this dear daughter that first broke down this good woman; from that shock she never fully recovered. Loyal to the core of her heart to the Union, she proudly braved the displeasure of her surroundings when dark treason, not only beyond Mason and Dixon's line, but in many towns and hamlets of the North, sought to destroy our National Union. Like Barbara Fritchie, she unfurled our flag out of her window and flung it to the breeze when disloyal processions passed beneath. She was a lady in the fullest sense of the term—a mother and wife faithful to her family; a patriot faithful to her country; a Christian true to her religion. All who came in contact with her were fully impressed with her excellent qualities; her family, neighbors and friends will miss her; she left a vacant space not easily to be filled.

"Of reason firm, of temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength and skill;
A perfect woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort and command."

JOSEPH BURTON, one of the brave veterans of the war of the Rebellion, and a resident of Annaton, Clifton township, Grant county, may well be proud of his record for gallantry while serving under the "stars and stripes."

Joseph Burton was born in Ohio, in 1843, a son of Daniel and Sarah Ann Burton, who brought our subject to Grant county when he was about four years of age. The father died on April 14, 1862, but the mother died many years before, when Joseph was but ten years old. Three children were born to these parents, and the only brother of our subject was unfortunately killed at the battle of South Mound, on Aug. 14, 1862, while serving as a member of the famous 17th Wis. V. I., which was part of the Iron Brigade. The sister is now Mrs. Emily Jane Shaw.

Joseph Burton enlisted on Aug. 14, 1862, in Co. A, 33d Reg. Wis. V. I., upon the same day that his only brother gave up his life in defense of the Union. From the time of his enlistment, Mr. Burton was with his regiment until the Siege of Spanish Fort, in the rear of Mobile. Here, March 30, 1865, Mr. Burton received wounds, from which no one, except a man possessed of an iron constitution, and as firm a will, would ever have recovered, he having been struck by a shell, which not only shattered his right arm, but also his side so that a piece of viscera had to be removed and the arm amputated. In spite of his terrible injury, the following month Mr. Burton had recovered sufficiently to return home on furlough, and received his honorable discharge, on Sept. 20, 1865. The record of the 33d Wisconsin is as follows: The 33d Wisconsin left camp Nov. 12, 1862, and in two weeks was in the field under Gen. Grant in his expedition in Mississippi, and took a prominent part in the battle of Cold Water, Miss., April 19, 1863, and in the siege of Vicksburg from May 20, to its surrender; battle of Jackson, Miss., July 12, 1863; with Sherman in his Meridian expedition through Mississippi in February, 1864; the Red river expedition in March, April and May, 1864, under that brave old warrior, Gen. A. J. Smith. They met the enemy in the following hotly contested battles: Ft. De Russy, Pleasant Hill Landing, Chancellorsville, Marksville, and Yellow Bayou, besides several skirmishes. They participated in the expedition of Gen. Smith at Tupelo, Miss., July 13, 14 and 15, 1864, and in the following October, led by the gallant General Mommers, they marched through the swamps and across the bluffs in Arkansas in pursuit of the rebel general Price. On Dec. 15 and 16, 1864, they were at Nashville, Tenn., confronting the enemy under Gen. Hood, and captured 600 prisoners. They pursued the southern army to the eastern part of Mississippi, and were present in the assault on Corinth, Miss., in January, 1865. On the 6th of the following month they started for Mobile, via Cairo, New Orleans, Lake Pontchartrain and Dauphin Island, and took an active part in the siege of Spanish Fort, and in the reduction of Mobile. From Spanish Fort the regiment marched to Montgomery and Tuskegee, Ala., thence started for home via Selma, Ala., Meridian and Vicksburg, Miss., arriving in Madison Aug. 14, 1865, having traveled 9,000 miles, 2,400 of which were marched.

On March 16, 1867, Mr. Burton was married to Miss Lavina May Bartles, and four children have been born to them; Alburtus, Sylvanus H. and Sarah Jane; also a daughter, Mary C., who died Feb. 28, 1882, aged ten years. In spite of his fearful injuries, Mr. Burton has been a hard working, industrious man, and individually, as well as for his bravery as a soldier, he is highly respected.

WILLIAM C. BRATLEY (deceased) was among the leading men of the town of Cadiz, Green county, during his lifetime, and is remembered as a thoroughly honorable and reliable character. Born in Lincolnshire, England, Feb. 27, 1824, he went when a lad of sixteen years to sea from his English home, with a worldly capital of one suit and two shirts. Soon after entering upon the life of a sailor, he joined an American sailing crew in New York, with whom he remained until he reached the age of twenty-six years. Mr. Bratley was married to Miss Mary C. Kain Aug. 29, 1847, and to this marriage were born the following children: (1) Melissa, who married Isaac Denney, a farmer of the town of Cadiz, and has the following children: May, Charlie, Oscar, Elmer, Clara, Ivan, Lula, Edwin and Frank. (2) Silas H., who was born in Savannah, Ga., Feb. 10, 1857, and married to Miss Emma Robb, of Cadiz township, by whom he had two sons, Ray and Lee. Mrs. Emma Bratley died and Silas married his second wife, Caroline. They have six children, four of whom are now living, Minnie, Lena, Grace and Atley. He remains on the old Bratley homestead and has charge of the farm. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and is an honorable citizen. (3) Mary, who married Thomas Lynch, a farmer in the town of Cadiz, a sketch of whom appears on another page. (4) Joseph, who married Eva Wright, of Monroe, and has four children: Millie, Telsie, Blanche and Nettie. (5) Elizabeth, who is the wife of William Ullom, a farmer of the town of Cadiz, and is the mother of five children; Joseph, Bertha, Minerva, Stanley and Julia. (6) Belle, who married Archibald Bechtold, of Cadiz township, and is the mother of two children, Orrall and William. (7) Edward, who married Mary Fessenden, and is the father of five children: Glen, Loise, Maude, Alice and Mary. (8) Lena, wife of Harry Morris. (9) Ruth, the youngest of the family.

William C. Bratley crossed the Atlantic on the sailing vessel, "Stretlam Castle." He reached New York in 1840, and leaving his ship, took a position as seaman on board an American vessel. Continuing to follow the sea until he had saved a fair sum of money, he bought a restaurant in Savannah, Ga., and devoted himself to its development until 1854, after which he became engaged in farming in the State of New York, but after three years went back to Savannah, where he again entered the restaurant business. In the spring of 1859 he came with his family and bought 120 acres of land in Section 14, in the town of Cadiz.

Mr. Bratley was a Republican in politics, and long a devoted member of the Methodist Church, for twenty years serving as class-leader. In the I. O. O. F. his name is not forgotten, for there also he was a hardworking and faithful member. A successful farmer, he owed his accumulations to unwearied industry and the utmost integrity. A man of wide information, he had not only traveled much with observant vision, but he was a reader of many books and the best literature. Twice he sailed around the Horn in the 'forties in a sailing vessel. He came to Green county a poor man, but he left at his death a well improved and exceedingly valuable farm property.

SILAS W. MENZIE, of Beloit, Rock county, is a leading member of the legal profession in that city, and his legal abilities command the respect which his personal character and well-known integrity greatly intensify.

Mr. Menzie was born in Schoharie county, N. Y., June 2, 1841, a son of Robert R. and Rebecca (Thorpe) Menzie, both natives of Scotland. They were the parents of three children: Charles H., a railroad engineer; John E., of La Grange, Wis.; and Silas W. Robert R. Menzie began life for himself as a physician, but soon turned to the practice of the law as a more congenial vocation. He was born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, April 1, 1809, and came to this country when only eight years old, under the care of his brother Adam. He spent his youth and much of his early manhood in the counties of Schoharie and Chenango, New York, and received a general education in the public school, and in the military academy at Lancaster, Pa. When he was eighteen he began the study of medicine, attending lectures in New Haven, Conn., and was graduated just before he attained his majority. He practiced about two years in the county of Otsego, N. Y., and then gave it up, turning to the law as a more thoroughly inviting and desirable occupation. He studied law under the instruction of Messrs. Ely and Bennett, at New Berlin, N. Y., for a year and a half, and then at Hobart, N. Y., with Lavinus Munson. Mr. Menzie was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State of New York at the age of twenty-eight. He became a solicitor in chancery, and two years later a counselor in Delaware county, where he practiced for several years. Later he was district attorney in Schoharie county, and was in office at the time of the anti-rent troubles in that State. At the commencement of the Mexican war he raised the 46th Infantry, and was commissioned its colonel. In the spring of 1846 Col. Menzie proceeded to Mexico with his command, and served throughout the war under General Taylor and General Scott. He was a brave and distinguished officer. On his return from the war he removed to Delavan, Wis., and made his home in that place in June, 1849. He was admitted to practice the same month, and formed a partnership with the late Thomas McHugh. He was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin in 1850, and to the United States Supreme Court in 1857, and to the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1865. From 1849 Mr. Menzie had been in the practice of law at Delavan with the exception of a short time which he spent in Milwaukee, and two years (1872-1874) which he spent in Chicago. In his earlier life he took up the trade of a shoemaker, though he never followed it. He was an excellent mechanic, and made at least one pair of boots for himself after locating in Wisconsin. He had his peculiarities and was a man of strong physique. His mental powers were of a wide range, and he had an active, retentive memory rarely equalled. His varied learning and vast fund of information made him a formidable rival before either the court or jury. No man ever conducted a case against him, and left the court room unconscious of his superior power. Criminal law was his special study, and the defense of those charged with crime was where he displayed a forensic power seldom excelled. He was a kind-hearted man, and often defended the poor without pay, and his work in their behalf gave no indication of the want of a generous fee. Mr. Menzie buried the wife of his youth in Delavan in 1860. She was then fifty-one years old. He married soon after a Mrs. Hagaman, who survives him. Mr. Menzie died May 3, 1882. His vigor of mind was retained to an unusual extent to the very last. He was a generous and sympathetic friend and a well read lawyer.

Silas W. Menzie was eight years old when his parents removed to Delavan, Wis., where he attended the public school and attained his majority. In 1861 he made a journey to California, where he was in the employment of the California Stage Company, and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. In 1867 the young adventurer was homeward bound, and on his return to Delavan, took up the study of law with his father, and spent a year in his office. He took a course of lectures at the Albany Law School, and being admitted to the Bar in 1868, practiced law with his father as long as that distinguished lawyer lived. He continued at Delavan until 1890, and achieved some marked successes in the field of legal controversy. He was district attorney from 1882 to 1886 in Walworth county. Mr. Menzie came to Beloit in November, 1890, and has been engaged in the practice of his profession in this city since that time. He filled the office of city attorney two years, and was alderman of the Third ward for three years.

Mr. Menzie and Miss Laura McCormack were married June 15, 1883. Mrs. Menzie is a daughter of Smith and Martha (Ross) McCormack. By this union there is one daughter, Anna Thorpe. They live at No. 2 Cottage Lawn. Mr. and Mrs. Menzie are members of the Episcopal Church. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and had his membership for many years with Delavan Lodge, No. 21, F. & A. M., and Delavan Chapter, No. 38, R. A. M. He is now a member of Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T. He is a Republican, and is one of the recognized leaders of the party in Rock county. Mr. Menzie was a passenger on the ill-fated steamer, "The Golden Gate," running between San Francisco and Panama, which was burned in August, 1862. He was in the water eight hours with a little girl on his back. He clung to a hen-coop, and eventually was rescued.

THOMAS CROW, a well-known farmer of the town of Cadiz, Green county, resides on his handsome and well-appointed place in Section 13, some four miles southeast of Browntown.

Born in Parke county, Ind., June 3, 1842, Mr. Crow is a son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Lewis) Crow, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively. The father was born Jan. 10, 1813, spent a number of years in Parke county, Ind., and thence came to Green county, Wis., in 1864, dying Oct. 15, 1895. The mother was born Oct. 20, 1816, and died Nov. 13, 1900. They were married Jan. 29, 1839, and to their union were born the following children; Mary died unmarried; Thomas is our subject; Nancy married Jacob Jones, and both are now dead; John died unmarried; Matilda married Joseph Woodle, and is now dead; Lucy is in Monroe; Robert lives on a farm two miles west of Monroe; three others died in infancy.

Thomas Crow, the grandfather of Thomas, whose name introduces this article, was born in Pennsylvania, and died in Ohio. His family consisted of five children: Abraham (our subject's father), John, Robert, Maria, and Matilda. All are dead. The Crows come of mingled Scottish, English and Irish blood.

Thomas Crow, whose honorable and successful career in the town of Cadiz deserves commemoration, was married to Miss Margaret Hartwig, of the town of Jordan, Feb. 18, 1873. Mrs. Crow was born Aug. 10, 1852, daughter of John and Catherine (Rabbe) Hartwig, who were among the early settlers of the town of Jordan, and were born in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Crow are the parents of the following children: Frederick, born Dec. 22, 1873, married Miss Alice Cox, of Clarno township; Frank L., born Jan. 19, 1876, lives at home, and has charge of the homestead farm; and Edna, born April 12, 1879, married Jay W. Howe, a blacksmith in Cadiz township, and is the mother of one daughter, Dorothy.

Thomas Crow came to Green county with his parents in 1864, the family making their first settlement in the town of Monroe. In 1873 our subject located on the eighty-acre farm where he is now found, and he also owns an eighty-acre tract one mile west of his home. Beginning life as a poor boy, he has achieved a very creditable success, and is widely known as an honorable and trustworthy man. In politics he is an ardent Democrat, and in religion seeks to conform his life to the great principles of honesty, charity and neighborly kindness. For more than twenty years he has been school clerk, and for a number of years has served on the town board. His place is well improved, and he has recently built one of the finest farm homes in the town of Cadiz. Mr. Crow is a man popular with his neighbors, a good citizen, and his life has been characterized by honest industry, manly principles and high moral character.

JAMES W. RODERICK holds a conspicuous place among the successful and highly respected farmers of the town of Jefferson, Green county. Andrew and Lydia (Haden) Roderick, his parents, were natives of Fayette county, Penn., where the father was born July 14, 1803, and the mother on July 13, 1803; he died April 17, 1871; and she passed away April 27, 1892. They were married in 1824, and had the following children: Elizabeth (Mrs. J. N. Davis), born in 1825, is deceased; Sarah (Mrs. Joseph Gans), born in 1827, is deceased; Jacob, born in 1829, married Elizabeth Newman, and died Dec. 8, 1895; Jane, born May 9, 1831, married James W. Clemmer, of Green county, and is now deceased; Mary, born Oct. 30, 1833, is the widow of Samuel Newman and lives in Monroe, Wis., Lucinda, born June 2, 1836, married the Rev. G. R. Patton, and both are now dead. Lydia, born Nov. 30, 1838, was the second wife of the Rev. G. R. Patton, and now lives at Juda. James W., born April 5, 1843; Miranda, born Nov. 11, 1847, married J. W. Blackford, and is now living near Albany, Wisconsin.

David Roderick, the grandfather of James W., was a thrifty farmer in Fayette county, Penn., and a member of the Baptist Church. To him were born many children. Andrew Roderick and his family, on their arrival at Monroe, Wis., in the spring of 1846, were in such straitened circumstances that all the family old enough were under the necessity of working out for their board. This continued for nearly two years, when the family was collected on the farm which the father then purchased, and which is now owned by James W. Roderick.

On Dec. 22, 1870, James W. Roderick wedded Miss Hannah E. La Borde, a daughter of Peter and Phœbe (Nofsker) La Borde, of Juda Wis., and she has become the mother of six children: Lydia, born July 18, 1872, died March 31, 1874; Ross R., born Nov. 10, 1874, married Miss Edith Hintzmann Feb. 13, 1901, and is living on the homestead farm; Letha, born Oct. 7, 1879, died January 30, 1881; one that died in infancy in 1881; Clara E., born April 8, 1884, is living at home, and cultivating a special gift for music; James Park, the youngest of the family, was born May 2, 1887.

Mr. Roderick was reared on the farm, and sought his education at "the poor man's college," the public school. Beginning as a poor man, he now owns a magnificent farm of 280 acres, with fine dwellings, stock barns, and other modern improvements. He is a Democrat in politics, and a man of fine character. Both he and his wife have been working and efficient members in the Juda Baptist Church, with which all the older members of the family are connected. Mr. Roderick has served as chairman of the town, treasurer, and school clerk for more than twenty years. He has always been a sincere advocate of temperance, and the fact that for many years no saloons have been licensed in the village of Juda is due as much to his influence as to that of any other individual.

JOHN JAMES MARTIN, Beloit, Rock county, is a successful grocer in that city, and his establishment at No. 216 State street is the center of a profitable and growing patronage. The proprietor is a man who knows the value of a good name in the business world, and by every possible means strives to please and retain his custom. He handles honest goods, makes reasonable profit, and is widely known as an honorable and reliable grocer.

Mr. Martin was born in the town of Beloit, Rock county, five miles northwest of the city, June 3, 1849, and is a son of James and Lucy (Pollard) Martin, natives of County Derry and County Longford, Ireland, respectively. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are now living, John James, of Beloit; Robert, Joseph and Sarah J. are also residents of this city. The father was a farmer and came to this country many years ago. He made his first appearance in Wisconsin in 1847. He took up government land, and bought other land in the town of Rock, until he owned about 160 acres. On this farm he reared his family, and here he died in 1858, when forty-eight years old. His wife was the same age at her death in July, 1862. He was a Presbyterian, and she an Episcopalian. His father died in Ireland, and was the father of one son and one daughter. Her father was Robert Pollard, who came to this country in 1861, and lived on his own farm in Afton, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was the father of seven children, and died when he was seventy-eight.

John James Martin was reared on his father's farm, and attended the district school. He was married in November, 1881, to Mrs. Eliza McCrea, widow of William McCrea, and daughter of John and Ann (Henry) Clinchy. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are the parents of one child, Lilly May, a graduate of the high school, and now attending Beloit College. Mrs. Martin was the mother of two children by Mr. McCrea, Anna Bell and Robert H. McCrea. Anna Bell is now Mrs. Jackson. Mr. Martin belongs to the Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen, and the Fraternal Alliance, No. 15. He is a Republican. He has lived in Beloit since the month of December, 1878, and for about twelve years he has been engaged in the grocery business with very satisfactory results. Mr. Martin has been honored by the people of his ward with election as their representative in the common council for the last five years. He has a pleasant and attractive home at No. 522 Pleasant street.

RUFUS HANNUM, of Lancaster, represents one of the oldest pioneer families in Grant county, Wis., having arrived here Feb. 18, 1837.

Warren Hannum, father of Rufus, was born in Belcher, Mass., in July, 1797, and when a young man went to Genesee county, N. Y., where he married Miss Laura Hamilton, a native of Northampton, Mass., but whose father died in the Bay State, and the mother and daughter subsequently located in Genesee county, N. Y. Soon after his marriage. Warren Hannum and wife removed to Cattaraugus county, N. Y., but shortly afterward returned to Genesee county, remained there a few years, and then went to Chautauqua county, where he located in the woods and partly cleared up a farm, which he afterward sold and then came to Grant county, Wis., at the date mentioned above. He purchased a 400-acre tract of land in Jamestown township, of which tract 160 acres had been fenced, and 125 had been broken up the previous year, and one crop taken off. The tract cost about $4,500, and Mr. Hannum was allowed four years in which to pay for it, which he succeeded in doing; it may be stated that the money he had realized from the sale of his property in New York was about exhausted, but he succeeded in paying for the land from the crops. The proximity of the lead-mining district rendered agricultural products a good price, and Mr. Hannum, being a good manager, prospered rapidly. In 1856 Mr. Hannum sold his farm to eastern parties, who were not practical farmers, and after receiving $3,000 partial payment on the place, the land came again into his possession.

When Warren Hannum brought his family to Wisconsin it consisted of himself, his wife, three sons and four daughters. (Another son, Marshall, was born in Grant county, but died in Cassville several years ago.) The family came in two wagons, the distance being about 800 miles, and many weeks' time was consumed in making the journey. In the fall of 1857 Mr. Hannum was bereft of his wife, and he later went to Le Roy, N. Y., and there married Mrs. Martha Cook. After several years' residence in the East he returned to Grant county, Wis., and died in Lancaster March 14, 1880; his second wife died May 1, 1884. Warren Hannum possessed all the traits of the true New England Yankee, was industrious and economical and shrewd in managing his affairs. He was originally a Whig in politics and afterward a Republican, was liberal in his religious views, and so lived as to win the unfeigned respect of all his neighbors. To Warren Hannum and his first wife were born nine children, eight of whom attained mature years, and of these, two sons and four daughters are still living. Of the survivors Rufus is the eldest and Warren is the next; Laura is the widow of Robert Kilbourn; Sophia is the widow of James Kilbourn; Mercy and Mary are twins—the former being the widow of Orrin Dodd, and the latter the wife of John Howard, and both reside in Arkansas. Two, Manley and Marshall, who reached maturity, are deceased.

Rufus Hannum, whose name opens this biographical review, was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., March 2, 1820, and was brought to Wisconsin by his parents. His schooling opportunities here were somewhat circumscribed, and in the fall of 1839 he returned to New York and made his home with an uncle in Genesee county for a year, and in the winter attended school, adding considerably to his fund of school knowledge. In March, 1840, he started on foot, on his return to Wisconsin, and walked 100 miles from Genesee county to the home of an uncle near Mayville, in Chautauqua county, N. Y. Two days later he resumed his journey on foot, and walked to Erie, Penn., where he took a stage for Pittsburg; and thence, by steamer, via St. Louis, Mo., he reached Galena, Ill., late in March, and thence came home. For several years Rufus Hannum worked as a carpenter, and in 1847 and 1848 worked in a machine shop in Milwaukee. In 1848 he married Miss Amelia Wells, and in 1850 went overland to California, and for about three months worked in the mines. He had been preceded to the Golden State by his brother Manley, who crossed the Plains with the first train from the States in 1849. The two brothers started on the homeward trip together, leaving San Francisco in the fall of 1850, and arriving in St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 1, 1851.

In the meantime, Mrs. Rufus Hannum had passed away, leaving one child, Amelia, who died after reaching maturity. On June 8, 1852, Mr. Hannum married Miss Louisa M. Powers, daughter of John and Eunice Powers, the former of whom was born in Vermont and the latter near Syracuse, N. Y., and after marriage settled in Wyoming county, N. Y., where Mrs. Hannum was born April 6, 1826. When a young woman the present Mrs. Hannum came west to visit a brother and sister in Michigan, and while there was offered a position as school teacher, which she accepted. Her father and mother soon afterward came to visit their children in 1852, and on this visit were taken ill and died, leaving four daughters and four sons. At the death of her parents, the daughter returned to the New York home. She was there married to Mr. Hannum, with whom she had been acquainted in early life. To this union have been born seven children, of whom George and Frank are now residents of South Dakota; Mary is still at home; and Flora is the wife of Charles Bonham; the three deceased children were Charles, Ella and an infant that died unnamed.

Rufus Hannum purchased the old homestead from his father and occupied it many years. He was for a long time the leading farmer of Grant county, and a successful raiser of short-horn cattle. He brought to the county the first imported draft horse ever seen here, and was in fact the prime factor in promoting the raising of blooded stock in Grant county. In the spring of 1882 Mr. Hannum retired from active farming and made his home in Lancaster, where he has a handsome residence and is surrounded with all the comforts of life, and where he and family enjoy the respect, pure and unalloyed, of all who know them.

DAVID W. CULVER is the eldest child of Alvah Culver, a pioneer of Iowa county, who was born in Cambridge, Chenango Co., N. Y., March 23, 1811, a son of John Culver. The family is of Scotch origin, and, according to the genealogy of the Culvers, two brothers emigrated from Scotland several generations ago, and they have now numerous descendants throughout the Union. Alvah Culver was reared in his native State, and married Catherine Foster. They migrated to Green Bay in 1837, and came in 1839, to what is now known as Old Helena, in Iowa Co. This was soon after Wisconsin was organized as a Territory, and nine years before it became a State. Mr. Culver, Sr., kept the first hotel at Helena. He was a representative man of the county for many years, and held various town offices. He built two steamboats for navigating the Wisconsin river, and operated the ferry at Helena for a series of years. His death occurred Feb. 28, 1885, his wife passing away on May 1st, of the same year. They had a numerous family, of whom, as already stated, Daniel W. was the first born. The other surviving children are: DeWitt C.; Abigail A.; George W.; John and an adopted daughter, Lizzie. Three are deceased, Fanny. Sophrona, and Joshua, the last named being a twin of John.

ALVAH CULVER

MRS. ALVAH CULVER

David W. Culver was born in the town of Tompkins, Delaware Co., N. Y., in 1834, being about five years old when his parents came to Iowa county. Old Helena and the town of Wyoming have always been his home. He remembers well the early days and interesting incidents that cluster about Old Helena, recalling when the family's nearest neighbors were at Dodgeville, and when the Indians roamed the country in quest of game. The woman who became his wife was Miss Jane M. Malleu, daughter of George Malleu, who was from New York State. She died Dec. 13, 1897, aged fifty-nine years, a faithful member of the Methodist Church. Mr. Culver is the father of three sons and three daughters: George A.; Joshua D.; Frances; Cora A.; Frederick G.; and Martha A. A son named William J. died in childhood. Mr. Culver has seen the country grow from a wilderness to its present advanced condition and is, perhaps, the oldest living settler of this part of the country, having been a constant resident for sixty-two years. He is a well-known and highly respected citizen in the community in which he has lived so long.

EDWARD UNDERWOOD. Three days after his marriage in England, his native land, Edward Underwood migrated with his young bride to America, and became a resident of Wisconsin, in which State he has ever since resided, now ranking as one of the old settlers of Green county. He was born in Leicestershire, England, Aug. 13, 1831, son of Josiah and Elizabeth (Morris) Underwood, and grandson of John Underwood and Thomas Morris, farmer and mason respectively, both living to good old age and rearing large families.

Josiah Underwood, the father, was a butcher by occupation, and died in England in 1870, aged seventy years and six months. His wife died in 1855. They were close communion Baptists. Seven children were born to them, four sons and three daughters, of whom four are now living, namely: Edward; Mary, of Leicestershire; Emma and Elizabeth.

Edward Underwood was reared on a farm in England, and in his native land received a fair education in the free schools. As a young man he was for six years a member of the Leicestershire Yeoman Cavalry, a thousand strong, and known as "Prince Albert's Own," the insignia stamped on every uniform button. He married, Feb. 25, 1857, Miss Mary Underwood, who, though possessing the same surname, was no known relative. She was the daughter of Adam and Maria (Demscher) Underwood, and granddaughter of Thomas Underwood, who died in England in middle life, leaving a large family. Adam and Maria Underwood, her parents, had a family of nine children, six sons and three daughters, of whom five are living, viz.: Mary (Mrs. Underwood); William, of Leicestershire, England; Sarah, widow of Thomas Hobel, of Leicestershire; John, of Asfordby, England; and Charles, of Monroe township, Green county, Wis. Adam Underwood was a farm laborer, and died April 11, 1893, aged seventy years, surviving about a year his wife, who died aged sixty-nine years.

The marriage of Edward and Mary Underwood was solemnized on Wednesday, and the following Saturday they set sail for America, reaching Monroe, Wis., in the latter part of April, 1857. For about eighteen months they lived in the north part of that town, then in the west portion. In 1862 they moved to the Pinney farm, and after making one or two other residential changes, came, in 1870, to the farm of sixty acres in Monroe township which in that year Mr. Underwood purchased, and where he has ever since resided, engaged in general farming and stock raising. Politically Mr. Underwood is a Republican. Himself and wife are adherents to the close communion Baptist faith, but are not identified with any society, as there is none of that denomination in the vicinity of their home. Mr. Underwood is an industrious and capable farmer, who has witnessed the rapid growth of Wisconsin during the past forty-five years, contributing to the same by his faithful and well-directed efforts. He is highly respected by his many friends and acquaintances.

JOSEPH ALTMAN, a prominent farmer and cheese manufacturer in the town of Jordan, Green county, where he has a desirable farm on section 13, was born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, March 8, 1846, a son of Joseph and Colombina (Abley) Altman, both of whom lived and died in Switzerland. They were farming people, and were the parents of the following family: Baltz now resides in Canton Glarus, Switzerland; Casper remains in the old country; Henry is in Monroe; Joseph; Jacob is in the Black Hills, South Dakota.

Joseph Altman was married Oct. 20, 1875, to Miss Sibilla Hefty, of New Glarus, Wis., and they have become the parents of seven children, four of whom are now living: Joseph, Jr., born March 19, 1877, is at home, unmarried, and assists his father in the cultivation of his extensive farm; Mary, born Sept. 15, 1886, is at home; Henry, born May 19, 1894; and Magdalena, born Sept. 10, 1896. Mrs. Sibilla Altman was born in New Glarus, Wis., Aug. 25, 1855, an estimable daughter of Henry and Regula (Leglor) Hefty, both coming from their native Canton Glarus, and making a home in Green county in the early history of that portion of Wisconsin. Their family of children was as follows: (1) Matthias, now of Monroe, Wis.; (2) Sibilla; (3) David; (4) Magdalena, the wife of Joshua Kassy, of Monroe; (5) Regula, the wife of John Becker, of New Glarus; (6) Henry, of New Glarus; (7) Mary, the wife of David Kundert.

Joseph Altman came to New Glarus in 1866, and for some time was employed in Dane county, Wis., and at Stevens Point, working for wages. Coming back to New Glarus, he bought a quarter-section in Exeter township, and in 1884 removed to Jordan township, where he now owns a choice farm of 285 acres. 144 acres in Jordan township and 151 acres in section 18, Monroe township, the whole forming one continuous farm, now in a high state of cultivation, and making one of the most valuable farming plants in the southern part of the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Altman are connected with the Lutheran Church, where they are much esteemed for their good character and genuine worth. They are honest, hard-working people, and have come to their present comfortable circumstances only by the exercise of industry, economy and wise management. Mr. Altman is a Republican, and is regarded as one of the leading farmers and stockmen of the town. At the present time he is milking some fifty cows, and is in a company of farmers engaged in a co-operative cheese work. His reputation is that of an honest man, a good citizen and a splendid neighbor. The farm on which he lives is under a high state of improvement, and has a fine two-story dwelling house and ample stock barns. He himself is a leading and substantial citizen, while his wife is a lady of high character, a devoted wife and mother, and the family of children in the home would do credit to any parentage.

HUGH MCGAVOCK, now retired from active business life, and residing at No. 805 Ninth street, Beloit, Rock county, has been a potent factor in the development of that city. He has always been an active and progressive man, bound to push things, full of enterprise and laudable ambition. His career is an instructive one, showing as it does what a brave spirit can accomplish without adventitious aid, if the man will only persevere and be strong in himself.

Mr. McGavock was born in County Antrim, Ireland, Jan. 26, 1828, a son of Alexander and Sarah (Devlin) McGavock, both natives of Ireland. They were the parents of four sons and two daughters, and emigrated to the United States in 1847, settling at Fox Lake, Ill., where the senior McGavock bought an eighty-acre farm, partially improved, and 120 acres of government land wholly unimproved. There he spent the remainder of his life, but died in Beloit, while on a visit to that city in 1861, having reached the age of seventy years. His wife died about 1854. Both were loyal Catholics. His father, Patrick McGavock, was a farmer, and died in Ireland when eighty-five. He had a family of four sons and two daughters. The father of Mrs. Alexander McGavock, Patrick Devlin, died in Ireland when about eighty years old. He was a farmer, and reared a family of four daughters and three sons.

Hugh McGavock received his schooling in Ireland, and was a young man of nineteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to this country. He soon went into business for himself, and began contracting on the construction of the old Galena railroad, now a part of the Northwestern system. This work proved profitable, and he followed it for twenty years or more on a large scale. In 1852 Mr. McGavock came to Beloit and bought a farm of 444 acres in the township of Beloit, which is still in his possession. He has taken much interest in the development of farm property in southern Wisconsin, investing his money freely in it, and at one time owned as many as 800 acres. He has sold much of it, but still has extensive real-estate interests in and around Beloit, particularly a forty-acre tract that is laid off in town lots. In the city he owns two houses which he rents, and for the past nine years he has occupied his present home on Ninth street, built by him, and designed to be his home as long as he shall live.

Hugh McGavock and Miss Catharine Buckley were married in Janesville, Wis., Feb. 1, 1857. Mrs. McGavock is a daughter of John and Margaret (Fitzgerald) Buckley, of Janesville, and has become the mother of nine sons and two daughters: (1) Alexander, the first born, is a grocer and market man at 3108 State street, Chicago; he married (first) Velmy Smith, who bore him six children, but one of whom, John Francis, is yet living. She died in 1886, and Alexander then wedded Kate Eagan, by whom he has one son, Stephen. (2) John is a grocer in Beloit, and is unmarried. (3) Hugh, Jr., is a coal, wood and lumber dealer in Beloit; he married Catharine Findley, and is the father of five children, Thomas, Genevieve, Lilah, Marion and Hugh. (4) William (1), born May 5, 1862, died Nov. 1, 1863. (5) William (2), a farmer and stone quarryman at Beloit, married Mame Cantwell, and has three children, Kittie, Mildred and the baby. (6) Patrick runs a grocery and meat market at 917 West 63d street, Chicago; he married Maude Lynch, and has one child, Josephine. (7) Thomas, a merchant in Chicago, is unmarried. (8) James is a contractor at Chicago Heights; he married Alice McMiniment. (9) Charlotte is bookkeeper and cashier for her brother Patrick in Chicago. (10) Edward is in the meat business in Chicago. (11) Mary is at home.

Mr. and Mrs. McGavock are members of the Catholic Church. He is a Democrat, and is a staunch advocate of the time-honored principles of his party. Mr. McGavock has been a very successful man in all his business undertakings. Starting in life a poor boy, he has achieved results of which any man might be proud. He has given all his children a good start in life, and like him they are progressive and enterprising. He has been a resident of Beloit for forty-nine years, and has seen this beautiful city develop from a small village. He has friends in the South, where Gen. John McGavock, a relative of his, was an officer in the Confederate army. Mr. McGavock had a great-uncle who was a soldier under Gen.

Washington in the Revolutionary army, and in after years became an eminent civil engineer. On his mother's side he had relatives who came to America in 1798, during the rebellion in Ireland. Mrs. McGavock's parents were early settlers in Janesville, coming from Ireland and settling there in 1849.

JAMES S. HIRD, a retired farmer and miner of the town of Benton, Lafayette county, is well and favorably known throughout that region, where his long and useful life has given abundant opportunity to attest his genuine worth and rugged manliness.

Mr. Hird was born in Yorkshire, England, Jan. 7, 1825, a son of Edward and Elizabeth Hird, both Yorkshire born and bred. The father followed mining until he came to this country with his family, in 1849, and located on a farm in the town of Benton, which is still in the possession of the Hird family. The father died three years after coming to Wisconsin, and his widow in 1861. They were both members of the Methodist Church, and in their lives were true to their faith. Their children were: (1) Jane, born in June, 1819, died in January, 1892, unmarried. (2) Thomas, born in December, 1820, was married in 1845 to Miss Margaret Thistlethwaite, of England, and settled on a farm near Hazel Green. He has recently moved to Galena, Ill. They have four daughters, Elizabeth (wife of James Virtue), Margaret (wife of Albert Cornish, of Omaha), Barbara (wife of Frank Striker, of Omaha), and Alice (of Galena). (3) Edward, born May 14, 1823, was married to Miss Mary Pedalty, and settled on a farm in New Diggings, where he died in April, 1873; his widow died nine years later. They left nine children, Elizabeth, Mary A., Edward, Barbara, William, John, Thomas, Maggie and James. (4) James S. is our subject. (5) Elizabeth, born in March, 1827, married Christopher Franklin in England. They came to Wisconsin, made their home in Hazel Green, and at a later period moved to Montfort, where they both died, leaving the following children, Elizabeth (who married James Bunt, of Janesville), Edward, James, Samuel, Christopher and William. (6) William, born in England, Nov. 20, 1830, was educated in the public schools of his native country, and after coming to this country was married to Miss Elizabeth Reed, in June, 1855. She was the daughter of James and Elizabeth (Stephens) Reed, long resident in Lafayette county. They came from England, in 1849, locating first in Virginia, then in Pottsville, Penn., and later in Ohio, whence they came to Wisconsin. They settled on a farm near Cuba City, where she died in 1870, and he two years later. Five children were born to them: Mary, who is the wife of John Bray, of Chicago; Richard, of Stockton, Ill.; Martha J., the wife of John Jones, of Evansville, Wis.; James, of Nevada; Elizabeth, the wife of Mr. Hird, who was born in Pottsville, Penn., and received her early education in Wisconsin. After her marriage with Mr. Hird they settled on a farm in Smelser, Grant county, where they lived some years, and then moved to Benton, where Mr. Hird was an active farmer until a few years before his death, in February, 1899. He left a widow and five children: Barbara J., born in 1856, is the wife of John Cameron, of Webster City, Iowa, and the mother of three children, John, William and Alvin; Edward, born in November, 1860, lives on the old homestead, and by his wife, Alice Addison, has one daughter, Bertie M.; Samuel A., born in May, 1863, was married to Myrtie Cameron, and lives in Montfort with four children, Mary, Isabelle, Ellen and William; James W., born Nov. 21, 1865, a blacksmith of Benton, was married to Miss Mary C. Cottingham, of Dubuque, Iowa, and has two children, Beulah M. and William; Elizabeth, born Oct. 24, 1869, is the wife of William Bell, a farmer of Benton, and the mother of four children, Oliver H., Elsie E., Edna R. and Joseph S. Mr. Hird was a member of the Methodist Church. (7) Barbara Hird, born in England, Jan. 3, 1834, is the wife of John Stephens, a retired business man of Montfort. (8) Mary A., born in England, in February, 1836, married James Robson, and resides in the town of Seymour, Lafayette county; she is the mother of two children.

James S. Hird was educated in the public schools of England before coming to the United States. When a boy he worked on a farm, and also washed minerals under his father's instruction. After his arrival in Wisconsin for some years he was employed in the mines of Lafayette and Grant counties. The first investment which he made in land was after the death of his father: he remained with his widowed mother, and for twenty years he has been actively engaged in the cultivation of his broad acres. Mr. Hird owns some mining property, and is a large stockholder in the State Bank at Benton, the organization of which was effected in 1896.

Mr. Hird has never married. He is one of the active and leading business men of Benton, and in politics is a Republican. In religion he was reared in the Methodist Church, and while never uniting with it, gives that church a liberal support. To-day no name stands higher in Lafayette county than does that of Mr. Hird. His large wealth has come through his honest toil and wise investments, and he has always labored not only for his own benefit, but for the improvement of the community.

LEWIS BAKER, who holds an enviable position among the thrifty and industrious farmers and upright citizens of Green county, resides on his farm, a beautiful place of 160 acres, in section 23, Jordan township, seven miles west of Monroe.

Mr. Baker was born in the town of Monroe, Jan. 27, 1856, a son of Henry and Catherine (Rhinegroover) Baker, who were among the early settlers of Green county, making settlement here as early as 1840. The second and third houses in Monroe were built by Thomas Rhinegroover, uncle to Mr. Baker. Henry Baker, father of Lewis, was born in Saxony, Germany, and came to this country when a young man, following shoemaking. He died when Lewis was about four years old, leaving a widow and four children: John, now deceased; Henry, who lives in Kansas; Lewis, whose name appears above; and Lawrence, now living at Fairmount, Minnesota.

Lewis Baker was married Jan. 28, 1883, to Miss Emma L. Ableman, of Jordan township, a daughter of William and Martha (Thompson) Ableman, old settlers of the township. Her father was born in Albany, N. Y., May 6, 1800, a son of Christian Ableman, who was of German parentage. Christian Ableman was a soldier in the English army, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Bunker Hill. When he was paroled he remained in this country, and made his home near Albany, N. Y. William Ableman, the father of Mrs. Baker, came from New York to Rock county, Wis., in 1835, soon afterward making his permanent home in Green county, where he died March 30, 1895. In 1820 he was married to Miss Ellen Vanderberg, by whom he had the following named children: Gilbert, John, Stephen, Reuben, James, Christian, Regina, Rachel, Joseph and Elizabeth. The mother of these died in 1850, and Mr. Ableman married, Oct. 25, 1860, Miss Martha Thompson, a daughter of Jonathan Thompson, of New York, by whom he had three children: Emma L. (Mrs. Lewis Baker, who was born Oct. 31, 1861), Ephraim A. and Samuel. Mrs. Ableman is still living on the old homestead farm.

Lewis Baker was reared on the farm, where his mother cared for her little family, and obtained his education in the public schools, starting out in life a poor boy. At the present time he owns the old Ableman farm, a well-titled quarter section, with fine improvements, including a good dwelling house, and ample barns and other facilities. In politics he is a Republican. He is not connected with any church, but squares his life by the Golden Rule, and commands the hearty and unstinted respect and confidence of the community. Mr. Baker is engaged in general farming, and gives special attention to creamery and dairy interests. Both he and his wife are regarded as fine people, reliable and generous-hearted, honorable and upright, by all who know them. They have had one daughter, Jennie L., who is at home.

THOMAS PURVES, a retired cigar manufacturer of Beloit, Rock county, has been identified with the business and commercial interests of this city for thirty years, and he has proved himself in that long period of years a thoroughly reliable and honorable man, of sound judgment, good business instincts and of unswerving integrity.

Mr. Purves was born in Galt, Canada, March 27, 1835, and is a son of Joseph and Catherine (Fraser) Purves, both natives of Scotland. They were the parents of seven children, of whom only two are now living, Isabella, the wife of William Lafferty, of St. Charles, Mich.; and Thomas, of Beloit. The father was a merchant in Roxburghshire, Scotland, and emigrated to Canada when a young man. He married in that country, and there he bought an extensive tract of land, which constitutes one side of the present city of Galt. He sold it before the development of the city made it valuable. He was a blacksmith, and followed his trade for many years. He died about fifty years ago in Harrisburg, Canada, at the age of fifty-five. His wife died in 1843. Both were Scotch Presbyterians. The paternal grandfather of Thomas Purves died in Scotland well advanced in years. He belonged to a wealthy family, and he had five or six children. Alexander Fraser, the father of Catherine Fraser mentioned above, died when past middle life in Canada, the father of five children.

Thomas Purves was a child when his parents moved to Harrisburg. He attended school both at Harrisburg and at Linden, and began blacksmithing when a young man and followed it ten years. He came to Beloit in 1871, and engaged in the tobacco and confectionery business, and also manufactured cigars. At first he was a partner of L. W. Kendall, and was associated with him for nine years under the firm name of Kendall & Purves. That gentleman retiring at the expiration of that period, Mr. Purves continued alone in business until September, 1899, when he retired, and is now living without active business cares.

Mr. Purves and Miss Sarah Kendall, daughter of William and Dorothea Kendall, were married in 1866. Three children were born to this union, Mary Dorothea, Luther E. and Thomas W. Mary Dorothea is the wife of John Fraser, of Burford, Canada, and is the mother of two children, Walter and Florence. Luther E. married Miss Nellie Smith, and is engaged in the laundry business in Beloit; his biographical sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Thomas W. Purves married Miss Myrtle Sage. Thomas Purves is a member of Myrtle Lodge, No. 10, I. O. O. F., and of the Knights of Pythias. He is a Republican, and was alderman of the Fourth ward in 1900.

William Kendall was a native of New York, of English descent, and followed farming until quite advanced in years, when he retired. He was the father of a large family, and passed away at the age of ninety.

LUTHER E. PURVES, proprietor of the well-known laundry at Beloit, Rock county, is one of the hustling young business men of that city, whose earnest spirit and modern methods are a potent force in its advancement. He is a pleasant and agreeable man, fully awake to the value and necessity of good work and reliable dealing, and makes personal friends of his patrons.

Mr. Purves was born in Ceresco, Mich., Jan. 10, 1870, and is a son of Thomas and Sarah (Kendall) Purves, the father a native of Canada, and the mother of New York. They were the parents of three children: Mary Dorothea, wife of John Fraser, of Burford, Ontario; and Luther E. and Thomas W., both residing in Beloit. The father came to Beloit in 1871, and engaged in the wholesale leaf tobacco business; he was also a manufacturer and dealer in cigars. He was continuously in business until September, 1899, when he disposed of his various enterprises, and is now leading a retired life. Mr. Purves has always been a Republican, and was alderman of the Fourth ward one term. Mrs. Purves was a Baptist. [A sketch of Mr. and Mrs. Purves appears elsewhere.]

Luther E. Purves was about a year and a half old when he came to Beloit, and here he has spent all his life. He was a student in the city schools, and made his preparation for business in the Spencerian Business College, Milwaukee. He was a bookkeeper until 1895, and acquired a reputation for accurate and reliable work which has stood him in hand to good purpose many times. In 1895 he engaged in the laundry business, and has built up a wide and profitable patronage.

Luther E. Purves and Miss Nellie Smith, daughter of William and Margaret (Kane) Smith, were united in marriage Dec. 12, 1894, and they are the parents of two children, Luther and Russell K. They live at No. 353 Highland avenue. Mr. Purves is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He is a Republican in political sentiment. Mrs. Purves is a native of Beloit, born in 1874, and spent her early life in Iowa, returning when about fourteen to Beloit, where she has since resided.

JOHN E. WESCOTT, a representative of one of the older families of Green county, was born there Oct. 8, 1846, a son of Ezra and Nancy (Brown) Wescott. His father was born in Wethersfield, N. Y., in 1818, and was a son of John Wescott, noted among the early settlers of central and western New York.

Ezra Wescott, who came from his native State to Green county, Wis., in 1840, taught school for several years after his arrival in this State. He was married Nov. 10, 1845, to Miss Nancy Brown, a teacher in Lafayette county for several years previous to her marriage, and to them were born six children: John E., whose name introduces this article; Alta; Myra, married to D. K. Anderson, of Woodford, Lafayette Co., Wis.; Dora, who married James H. Walker, of Freeport, Ill.; and two others, now deceased. Ezra Wescott died June 16, 1865, and is remembered as one of the leading and enterprising men of Green county in his day. In 1863 he served as a member of the State Assembly, and he was register of deeds and county treasurer before the Civil war. His services were in demand for many years as commissioner, chairman of the town board, and justice of the peace at various times.

John E. Wescott was married to Miss Abbie H. Collins May 4, 1869. Her parents, George and Climenta C. (Cleveland) Collins, born and reared in the State of Maine, came to Green county in 1867, but returned next year to North Anson, Maine, where Mr. Collins died in 1871. He was a miller all his life. His widow, now aged eighty-two years, resides with Mr. and Mrs. Wescott. Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wescott are the parents of the following children: Arthur B., born April 3, 1870, died young; Ezra C., born Aug. 21, 1872, married Lottie Bangs, of Nebraska, Jan. 2, 1901, and is living at home; George F. is also at home.

John E. Wescott was reared on the farm, and obtained his education in the neighboring district school. Since reaching manhood he has taken an important part in the local affairs of the day, and has served at different times as tax collector, road supervisor and school director for many years. In 1864 he enlisted in the Union army, becoming a member of Company I, 46th Wis. V. I., under command of Col. Lovell, and serving through the stirring scenes of the closing days of the great war. He was honorably discharged in October, 1865. He served for the most part in the Army of the Tennessee, and in the Army of the Cumberland.

Mr. Wescott is now residing on the old Wescott place, a magnificent country home of 300 acres, located in section 6, Cadiz township, all highly improved and furnished with every convenience that modern agriculture demands for the successful handling of the farm in the most profitable and productive fashion, the place forming a striking contrast to its condition when purchased by Mr. Wescott's father in 1851. With our subject is now residing his mother, a venerable lady of nearly eighty years, who is passing her last days in an atmosphere of loving care and tender devotion. John E. Wescott is a man of quiet and unobtrusive nature, a thorough gentleman, a good neighbor; and is known as one of the leading citizens of the community. Many are his friends, who know and rightly esteem his many good qualities.

John Wescott, the grandfather of John E., was born in New York. He had four sons and one daughter: Franklin died unmarried; Ezra was the father of John E.; Jefferson F. and Walter S. are mentioned below; Eliza A. married Peter Chandler, and died in December, 1892. Peter Chandler died in 1875.

Jefferson F. Wescott came to Green county in 1840 and made a creditable history as a farmer, a merchant, a civil magistrate, and a member of the Wisconsin Assembly, and died Feb. 16, 1879. Born in Wyoming county, N. Y., March 26, 1826, he was still a boy at his advent in Green county. He was married March 26, 1856, to Miss Sarah Rogers, of Lafayette county, and to their union were born eight children: Mary E., the wife of Charles E. Brooks; Frank; Charles, a resident of Nebraska; Clara, who was a school teacher before her marriage; May married Albert Loveland; Nellie, married to Thurlow Patton; Walter and Daisy are unmarried.

Walter S. Wescott was born in New York, and came to Green county in 1843, making his first settlement in the town of York, but moving shortly to the town of Adams, where he lived until 1864. That year he bought a farm in section 26, town of Monroe. Thankful B. Cleveland, his wife, was the daughter of James G. and Edith Cleveland, well-known Green county people, and to them were born three children: Ida M. is the wife of Edward C. Gibbons, of Nebraska; Eva M. is the wife of C. D. Bragg, of Nebraska; and John J. resides in Texas. Walter S. Wescott is now largely engaged in Nebraska, where he has extensive ranch interests, and while his residence was unbroken in Green county he was one of the most public-spirited men of the times, holding many public positions, and being honored with election to the State Senate in 1863. Always a stanch Republican, he has been identified with the history of his party wherever he has lived.

JOHN W. CARPENTER has been a resident of the city of Janesville, Rock county, for many years, and in that time he has won a standing in business circles, and as an intelligent and progressive citizen, of which any man might be proud. He has met all his business engagements promptly, and his word has ever been beyond question. He has built up a good trade in the coal and wood line, and those who have dealt with him longest are the best friends he has in the city.

Mr. Carpenter was born at Northville, Fulton Co., N. Y., Feb. 9, 1839, a son of Allen D. and Mary Ann (Wadsworth) Carpenter, both also natives of Fulton county. Children as follows were born to them: John W.; Laura, wife of Nathaniel Ballard, of Evansville, Wis.; William H., of Evansville; Mary Ann, Mrs. McKinney, of Evansville; Josiah, of Union township, Rock county; and Emma, wife of Edwin Winters, of Evansville. The father was originally a cabinet maker, but became a carpenter and joiner. In 1855 he came to Wisconsin and settled on an eighty-acre farm in Union township, Rock county. After a time he acquired as much more land, and gave his attention to the improvement and cultivation of what speedily became a choice and valuable farm. He died on that place Jan. 21, 1861, aged about forty-six years. His wife survived him until 1894, and was past seventy-six years of age at her death. Joseph Carpenter, the grandfather of John W., was a native of Vermont, and was a carpenter and joiner by occupation. He was the father of a numerous family. He died in New York when over sixty years of age. Josiah Wadsworth, the father of Mrs. Mary A. Carpenter, was born on Long Island and was one of the earliest settlers of Fulton county, N. Y., where he reared his family of fifteen children. When he died he was well on toward eighty years of age.

John W. Carpenter was reared on a farm, and received his elementary schooling in the district school at Hope Center, N. Y. He was sixteen years old when he came West with his parents, and his home has been in Rock county ever since. For the past twenty-five years he has lived in Janesville. On reaching manhood he started out for himself as a farmer, renting land the first two years. He bought a farm of 183 acres in the town of Union, which he brought to a high state of cultivation, and then sold. He bought another farm, consisting of 280 acres, and made very substantial improvements on this tract, which he converted into a desirable home, dwelling there some time. Some twenty-five years ago, renting the farm, Mr. Carpenter moved into Janesville to engage in the wood and coal business. He retained the ownership of the farm until a few years ago, when he thought it wise to enlarge his business in the city. Our subject is a Republican, and was supervisor of Center township some two or three terms.

Mr. Carpenter and Miss Sarah Jane Parker, daughter of Isaac and Maria (Soper) Parker, were married March 20, 1861, and they have had three children, Jessie, Charles and Lulu. Jessie married David Creighton, and has her home in Whitewater; they have one child, Catherine. Charles married Huldah Balke, and resides in Janesville; he is a brakeman on the railroad. Lulu, formerly a teacher in the Janesville public schools, married James Waddle.

WILLIAM ANDREW TRICKEL, the genial proprietor of the "Eagle Hotel," of Browntown, Green county, is one of the enterprising and progressive business men in the village. He is one of the fourteen children of Andrew J. Trickel and his wife, Charlotte Morton, and was born Sept. 14, 1863.

Andrew J. Trickel was born in Illinois Sept. 10, 1824, son of Robert Trickel, who was a native of Virginia, and one of the pioneers of Illinois. Mr. Trickel is now one of the wealthy farmers of Clarno township, Green county. He is the father of sixteen children. He has been twice married, and his first wife, Susan Crothers, bore him two children, Sarah and John, the latter now deceased. His second wife, Charlotte Morton, was the mother of fourteen, namely: Sarah Ellen, born Oct. 3, 1858; Jesse, Dec. 14, 1859; Charley, Feb. 28, 1861; William A., our subject; Laura E., April 11, 1865; Martha, Dec. 4, 1867; Matilda, Oct. 10, 1868; Charlotte, Nov. 12, 1869; Louis, July 7, 1871; Clara, Nov. 26, 1872; Olive, November, 1874; Joseph, Nov. 19, 1876; Albert, Aug. 26, 1878; and Everet, Aug. 25, 1885, all of whom are now living except Sarah, Charlotte and Everet.

William A. Trickel received his literary training in the common schools of Clarno township, and engaged at work on his father's farm until he was twenty-one. He then went to California, but after two years returned to the East and purchased a sawmill at Rock Grove, Ill., later going to Belleville, Dane Co., Wis., and thence to Blanchardville, Lafayette Co., Wis., conducting mills in both places. In 1890 he came to Browntown, and for a year conducted a bar room, in 1891 taking charge of the "Eagle Hotel," which he has since conducted with great success. The pleasant smile of the proprietor has won for him many friends among the patrons of the hotel, as well as from the townspeople, and he is one of the most popular citizens of the village. In politics he is a strong Democrat, and has served on the village board and as school director since making his home in Browntown.

Mr. Trickel was married March 4, 1886, to Miss Mary Keehl, who was born Dec. 31, 1866, a daughter of August and Minnie (Brightskee) Keehl, natives of Germany who located in Green county in 1845. Three children have been born to this union, Florence Elizabeth, March 6, 1887; Clarence Evert, Nov. 15, 1888; and Andrew Jackson, July 25, 1890.

CHARLES HENRY VAIL (deceased) was known in Beloit, Rock county, as early as 1856, and though he shortly left the city he retained such pleasant memories of it that it became his home in after years, and here a considerable portion of his business career was spent. He was a man of lofty character and strong moral convictions. He led his life sincerely, and lived from the purest motives, and his career fittingly forms a part of a work like this, intended to tell of the men whose worth and courage have made southwestern Wisconsin.

Mr. Vail was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 15, 1837, and was the son of Benjamin Albert and Martha (Conklin) Vail, natives of Long Island. They had eight children, and were people of more than usual character and standing. Benjamin Albert Vail was a carpenter and contractor. He lived after his marriage for a time in Brooklyn, and then at Farmersville, in western New York, for several years. About 1856 he brought his family to Beloit, and lived there several years. Chicago became his final home, and there he lived for a number of years, dying in 1882, when sixty-eight years old. His wife died prior to that time, when sixty-one years old. Both were Methodists, and he was a steward and class-leader in the church. He was a fine singer, and while in the East often led the church choir. He was a prominent man in Beloit, and served as alderman. In Masonry he was deeply versed, having risen to the thirty-second degree. He is remembered as a genial and cordial gentleman, with a host of friends. His father, Charles G. Vail, was born on Long Island Dec. 25, 1786, and died Oct. 8, 1864. He was of English stock and served in the war of 1812. He married Miss Polly Richmond Sept. 4, 1811, and his eldest son was Benjamin A. Vail. The Vail family came to America early in the eighteenth century. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Vail was a Mr. Conklin, a native of Long Island, of English stock. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary army, and died when past middle life, the father of three sons and three daughters.

Charles Henry Vail was six weeks old when his parents moved from Brooklyn to Greenport, L. I., and twelve years old when they located in Farmersville, where he grew to manhood. He attended the public schools, but, having remarkable ability as a mechanic, he gave up schooling while quite a boy, and took up the carpenter's trade. This was his life work. He was an architect, and became an extensive builder and contractor. He came to Beloit in 1856, but went South before the war, and spent seven years in that section of the country, engaged in business as a general merchant. At the expiration of that time he came back to Beloit, where he was married. He and his wife spent three months in Chicago, and some years in Beloit. They lived six months at Lawrence, Kans., and a year and a half at Leavenworth, and then again returned to Beloit. By this time the construction business of Mr. Vail had increased to large proportions, and in 1885 he went to Kansas City, Mo., where he put up a number of large buildings, for which he drew the plans and did all the architectural work. While there he employed as many as one hundred men at one time. He returned to Chicago in 1891, upon the death of his daughter, Mattie May. He did business in Chicago, but Beloit was his home. He died Dec. 28, 1895.

51

Mr. Vail and Miss Celia Y. Laramy were married Feb. 20, 1866. She is a daughter of Philip and Lydia (Yandell) Laramy, and is the mother of two children, Celia Evalena and Mattie May. Celia Evalena married Edward Stanley Watson Nov. 19, 1888. He is a hardware and cold storage merchant of Beloit. They have one child, Charles Munger, born Nov. 10, 1890. Mattie May died June 3, 1891, at the age of eighteen; she was a bright and beautiful girl, of a sweet and sunny disposition, and gave every promise of a noble womanhood.

Mr. Vail was not identified with any church, but believed profoundly in the Christian religion, and tried to put its best ideals into his daily life. He was a Democrat, but never would consent to hold a public office. He was a man with a host of friends, and everywhere showed himself a social, generous and kind-hearted gentleman. He was kind and liberal with the poor and suffering, and those who were privileged to know him in his home and family pronounced him a model man in every respect. Among the great number of buildings Mr. Vail put up in Beloit may be mentioned the Carpenter block, the Second National Bank, the Strong public school, the First Baptist Church, the Opera House, and many others, among them thirty stores.

Mrs. Vail, who survives her husband, is a member of the Episcopal Church. She comes of a wealthy and cultured family. Her parents were natives of England, and lived at North and South Molton. They had two sons and seven daughters: Sarah, who married Richard Reese, is now deceased; Esther Lydia, the second wife of Mr. Reese, is also deceased; Thomas William is a resident of Beloit; Harriet Rebecca married Edward A. Loomis, and is deceased; Maria Ann is the wife of Horace A. Brown, of Beloit; Celia Y. is the widow of our subject; three died in infancy. Mrs. Vail's father was a very devout member of the Methodist Church, and her mother as strongly attached to the Episcopal Church. Mr. Laramy was first married to Miss Ann Warren, and three children were the issue of that union: Ann, deceased wife of William Warren, of Chicago; Mary, the wife of S. J. Admire, of Salt Lake City, Utah; and Betsy, the widow of William Laramy, a lawyer in Batavia, N. Y. Philip Laramy had a planing-mill and a tannery in Leroy, N. Y., at one time and was very highly regarded, both for his personal integrity and his business ability. He was a steward and class-leader in the church. His wife was a worthy companion, a sincere Christian and a noble woman. His father died in England at an advanced age, and was very wealthy. He owned 3,000 acres of land, and kept large herds of blooded cattle and sheep. He reared a numerous family. The father of Mrs. Philip Laramy, Joseph Yandell, was also an extensive farmer and land owner. He had 250 men in his service. He died in Nadrid, near Molton, Devonshire, England, when quite old. He had a large family, and his immediate descendants are still living on the Devonshire estates.

OLIVER P. UNDERWOOD, of the town of Pulaski, is a well-known representative of one of the pioneer families of Iowa county. He was born in the State of New York, on Aug. 23, 1826, a son of Parker C. and Anna (Baker) Underwood, and was about nineteen years of age when he came to Wisconsin.

Parker C. Underwood was born in Delaware county, N. Y., on Feb. 4, 1803, and was a son of Dr. Oliver Underwood, quite an eminent physician of his day, whose father, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a noted Presbyterian divine of New England. Parker C. Underwood was reared in his native county, and married Anna Baker, who was also born in Delaware county, a daughter of Joseph and Eunice (Follett) Baker, the former of whom was a soldier in the war of 1812. Robert and Samuel Follett, brothers of Mrs. Baker, were soldiers in the war of the Revolution.

Parker C. Underwood removed to Buffalo Grove, Ill., in the fall of 1834, but in the following spring he went to Dubuque, and thence to Mineral Point, Wis., where he engaged in lead mining. In 1845 his two eldest sons joined him at Highland, Iowa county, and in the spring of 1847, his wife and two remaining sons joined the other members of the family at Highland, and the reunited family settled down to an agricultural life. The death of the mother, in 1851, was a great grief, but the father survived many years, passing away in 1892, at the unusual age of ninety years.

Parker Underwood was a man of high character, possessed good judgment, and gained the respect of every community in which he made his home. He was a typical pioneer in every respect. Of his four sons, two survive, our subject and his brother Joseph, who is a resident of Avoca. Madison served in the war for the Union, but passed away many years ago, and the youngest, Irving, was a member of Company K, 14th Wis. V. I., and was one of the martyrs of the war, at Corinth.

Oliver P. Underwood received an excellent education in his early life, and began teaching in his native State, when only seventeen years old, becoming one of the leading educators in Iowa county. For thirty years he instructed the youthful intelligence through Pulaski and Highland townships, and has ever been one of the leaders in educational matters in the county. In 1856 he removed to his present farm, and is now numbered among the large farmers and stock growers of Iowa county, his finely cultivated farm comprising 500 acres.

Previous to her marriage with Mr. Underwood, his estimable wife was Miss Helen Brewster, a daughter of Justus Brewster, and a granddaughter of Justus Brewster, a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and thus Mrs. Underwood and her daughters are eligible to the exclusive society of the D. A. R. Mr. and Mrs. Underwood have four daughters: Anna, who is the wife of B. A. Telfair; Emma, the widely-known educator, who so efficiently filled the position of county superintendent for two terms; Ione, the wife of Dr. W. W. Kerklin, of Storm Lake, Iowa; and Clive Pauline.

Oliver P. Underwood has ever been held in the highest esteem in the county, is a patriotic citizen and believes in America and American institutions. In religious matters he adheres to no set creed, but believes that character and right living comprise the standard by which each man will be judged. In his political views he has always been a Republican.

GEORGE W. FENNEL, one of the early settlers of Bloomington, was born in Poultney, Vt., June 7, 1823, and died at his home in Grant county, Wis., March 9, 1887.

Mr. Fennel became a resident of Grant county in 1855. His father, Almond Fennel, died when his son was about eighteen years of age, and his only brother was drowned when but nine years old. The first and as it proved, the permanent settlement of Mr. Fennel, in Grant county, was on the place where his family still live, which is now a fine farm and improved in every way, a most delightful home.

On Sept. 16, 1856, Mr. Fennel was married to Miss Linda M. Cilley, a daughter of William W. and Roxana (Castle) Cilley. William W. Cilley was a native of Williams-town, Vt., where he was born on Sept. 1, 1801, was reared in his native State, and in 1829 was married to Miss Roxana Castle, who was born and reared in Essex, Vt. Her death took place in 1850.

George W. Fennel soon displayed an industry and energy that changed his unimproved land into a fine farm, and is remembered among the esteemed citizens of his township. The family left to mourn his decease consisted of his widow and three children: Rollin C., who was born at the homestead on Feb. 26, 1858, and married Miss Lizzie Powers, their one daughter being Bessie E.; Bert G., who was born on June 12, 1871, and married Miss Lela Sawyer; and Nellie M., who died on March 3, 1888, at the age of twenty-one. The eldest daughter, Laura E., died at the age of sixteen.

Mrs. Fennel, with her two sons and their families, resides on the comfortable old homestead provided by the industry and perseverance of the husband and father, and are among the most highly esteemed citizens of Grant county.

LEVI WHITEHEAD (deceased) was one of the pioneer settlers of Cadiz township, Green county, and is remembered as a man of sterling worth and genuine character. Born in Jackson county, Ohio, April 2, 1832, he came to Green county with his parents in 1847, and settled on section 13, in the town of Cadiz. His parents, Edward and Delilah (Hawk) Whitehead, were of English origin, and early settled in Ohio. They were the parents of four sons, John, William, Levi and Henry, the last named being now the only survivor.

Levi Whitehead was married to Miss Susan Hackworth, a native of Vermilion county, Ill., in 1854, and to this union were born the following children: (1) Charles E., born Dec. 11, 1855, married Rhoda Frame, and is engaged in farming in Clarno township; (2)

Delilah, born Jan. 25, 1857, married Millard F. Campbell; (3) John A., born May 3, 1860, married Melinda Bast, and is a farmer of Cadiz township; (4) Mary Ellen, born Dec. 4, 1866, is the wife of Otto Priewe, a farmer of Clarno township; (5) Frank J., born Oct. 8, 1869, married Dora Campbell, and now resides in Monroe; (6) Bessie E., born March 4, 1872, is the wife of George Campbell, and they now live on the old Whitehead homestead, with Mrs. Whitehead; (7) Nellie Belle, born May 29, 1876, is the wife of Herman Kohn, of Cadiz township.

Levi Whitehead died May 3, 1895. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a believer in Christianity, but never connected with any church. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead began their married life poor in this world's goods, but rich in mutual love and trust, and their working and waiting was rewarded in due time with the possession of an ample competence. When Mr. Whitehead died he left a farm comprising 428 acres, under a high state of cultivation, with ample improvements of every kind. He was a man with many friends, who admired his genuine worth, and loved him for his many fine qualities. To his wife and children his departure was a grievous sorrow.

Mrs. Whitehead is a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Morton) Hackworth, and the third of a family of ten children, the others being as follows: Matthew, now residing in Louisiana; Mary A., the wife of Walter Divan, of Seward county, Neb.; James, deceased; William P., deceased; Thomas, of Lafayette county, Wis.; Alexander, in Seward county, Neb.; Clarissa, deceased; Melissa, who is unmarried; and John, in Seward county, Neb. Mrs. Whitehead still makes her home on the old homestead, where she is passing her years in an atmosphere of tender care and love from the rising generation. She is a good woman, has been a member of the United Brethren Church for fifty years, and her life has been full of deeds and genuine kindness. She has many estimable qualities, and is liked and respected by all who come in contact with her.

GOODWIN LOWREY (deceased) was long a well-known and esteemed citizen of southwestern Wisconsin. Mr. Lowrey was a native of Litchfield county, Conn., where he was born in April, 1826, a son of Daniel and Abigail (Goodwin) Lowrey, and a descendant from genuine American ancestry, both the Lowreys and Goodwins belonging to early New England families. When Goodwin Lowrey was a boy he removed with his parents to the State of New York, the family settling on a farm near Utica, where they lived until the death of the husband and father. Soon after this sad event the mother and her two sons, which comprised her family, removed to the city of New York, and there the brothers engaged in the wool business, and there, too, the mother died. The brother of Goodwin, Daniel Lowrey, never came West, but passed the rest of his life in New York.

In 1862 Mr. Goodwin Lowrey came to Wisconsin, and was for some time engaged in buying and shipping wool, with headquarters in Milwaukee. In 1864 he settled on the farm which he purchased in the town of Wyoming, Iowa county, and from that time until his death was clearly identified with the interests of his town and county. In the autumn of the year he moved to Wyoming, he was married to his most estimable widow, who was then Mrs. Heloise Oakford. She is a native of New Orleans, and daughter of Francis Gai, a native of Italy but of French parentage; the latter married, in Philadelphia, Jane Tree, who was an aunt of Judge Lambert Tree, of Chicago, and died at St. Francisville, La., when Mrs. Lowrey was a child. Her mother remarried and died at Towanda, Pa., several years ago. Mrs. Lowrey settled on the fine farm, where she now lives, in 1863, and as this farm and that of her husband's adjoined they together had about one thousand acres. The immediate home of Mr. and Mrs. Lowrey after their marriage was on the farm that she had purchased, and where she now resides.

Mr. Lowrey continued farming and stock raising until his health declined. He was a man of great native ability and highly cultivated, and was often urged to accept political positions, but invariably declined, having no inclination for office. Once the nomination for member of the Legislature was so strongly pressed upon him that he consented, and was elected by a large majority, proving an excellent legislator. He was a broad-minded, public-spirited man and always had in mind the interests of his home community. He was a very companionable man, and strongly attached to his wife and home. He was a member of no church, but gave liberally to the support of religious training, was a regular attendant at church, and was wont to apply the principles of religion to his daily life. About 1884 his health began to break, and for the benefit of his health and that of his wife several winters were passed by them in the South. His death occurred at Pass Christian, Miss., Feb. 20, 1889, where he and his wife had arrived but two days previously. Although long in poor health, the end was entirely unexpected, as he had been apparently much better for some time, heart trouble being the immediate cause of his death. Mrs. Lowrey was, at the time, very ill of pneumonia, but at the earnest solicitation of friends Mr. Lowrey's remains were brought home for burial, although she was too ill to accompany them.

Mrs. Lowrey resides at her beautiful home in the Wyoming Valley, Iowa county, where she and her husband passed so many years of happy married life.

NATHANIEL AUSTIN. Prominent among the early settlers in Bloomington is Nathaniel Austin, who well represents that hardy class of honest, sensible and progressive men who have made Grant county the desirable locality it is. When first he located here, in 1854, a few houses represented what is now a flourishing town. For more than forty years Mr. Austin has taken his part in the development of this section of the State of Wisconsin. Nathaniel Austin is of Canadian birth, although of New England parentage. He was born Aug. 26, 1830, a son of Nicholas and Harriet (Orvis) Austin, natives of Vermont, who were of English ancestry, and the family was founded in America in Colonial times. For generations their religious belief was that of the Hicksite Quakers. The father of Harriet Orvis served in the Continental army.

Nicholas Austin was a man of good education, and was long a teacher by occupation. Both he and his wife were reared in Vermont, but after the birth of their first child removed to Canada, and there passed the rest of their lives. After locating in Canada, Mr. Austin engaged in farming, clearing a heavily timbered tract, and he was one of the first to succeed in raising apples in that part of Canada. When he left his Vermont home, he took with him seeds of various kinds, including the apple, and from these raised trees which became productive and are still in fine condition. Our subject was one of a family of eight children, seven sons and one daughter. The old homestead farm in Canada descended to the youngest son and his next older brother. Later the youngest disposed of his interest and removed to Ohio, but the other brother still owns a part of the land. Five of the family still survive: William, a resident of Oklahoma; Nathaniel; Sylvanus, on the old homestead; George, a resident of Ohio; and Elizabeth, a resident of Milwaukee. Hiram died at Wichita, Kansas, in 1899, at the age of seventy-five years; and Alfred died at seventeen.

Nathaniel Austin grew to manhood in his Canadian home and, with his brothers, assisted in the clearing up of the farm. The country was unimproved, and his educational advantages were consequently limited. In the fall of 1852 he left home and started out for himself, coming to Fond du Lac, Wis., and engaging in any honorable employment that came his way. His wages for his first winter's work were nine dollars a month. In March of the next year he went to Lancaster, and there and at Waterloo, Grant county, was constantly employed until he was able to save the sum of $500, which he applied as a first payment on a farm which he purchased in the township of Bloomington. Settling on the place, he industriously labored there for two years, making many improvements, and then, as opportunity offered, he sold it and returned to Canada. His health had failed, and, with the hope of regaining it, he did not settle down again for about a year, when he came back to Bloomington, bought another farm, upon which he lived for forty years. In February, 1899, he removed to the village of Bloomington, where he owns a pleasant home and enjoys every comfort of life.

On Nov. 12, 1857, Nathaniel Austin was married to Samantha C. Lyman, a daughter of William and Abigail (Chandler) Lyman, natives of Vermont, but their ancestors came from Connecticut. Mrs. Lyman's grandfather, Rev. Amariah Chandler, was a noted Congregational minister for over half a century, preaching for thirty years in one pulpit and for twenty years in another. William Lyman and wife removed soon after their marriage to Cattaraugus county, N. Y., and in 1853 came to Grant county, Wis. By trade he was a carpenter, but after locating on the rich lands of this county he engaged in farming and later removed to Fredericksburg, Iowa, where the wife and mother died, in 1876. Mr. Lyman remarried and moved to Kansas, where his second wife died, after which he returned to Wisconsin and made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Austin until his own decease, on Feb. 27, 1901, at the age of eighty-six years. Mrs. Austin was one of a family of ten children, five sons and five daughters, and two sons and two daughters survive at the present time, these being: Mrs. Austin; Mrs. Eleanor Augusta Benedict; William Azro; and Ordello. Two of the children died in infancy, and those who attained maturity and have passed away were: Susan C., Amariah, Charles and Frank. Mr. and Mrs. Austin have three children surviving, Eleanor C., Charles F., and Wilbur A., while those who have passed away were: Alfred Llewellyn, at the age of seventeen, and Edgar at the age of thirty-three.

Mr. Austin had but limited advantages for education in his youth, but has given his surviving children liberal opportunities, all being graduates of the Wisconsin State University, at Madison. His daughter is teacher of Latin and German in the Hudson, Wis., high school, and is a lady of high attainments. For some time Charles has had charge of a military school at San Antonio, Texas; and Wilbur is a mechanical engineer, and resides in Chicago. Mr. Austin adheres to the teachings of his Quaker ancestry, while Mrs. Austin is a devoted and valued member of the Congregational Church. The family is one which possesses the confidence and high esteem of all the people of Bloomington.

HENRY WIEDERKEHR holds a position among the old settlers of Jordan township, Green county, that bespeaks at once long and unwearied industry and high moral character. He was born in Canton Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 2, 1835, and his parents, Jacob and Anna (Klein) Wiederkehr, died in their Swiss home. Our subject is, as far as known, their only living child.

Henry Wiederkehr left Switzerland in 1855, and spent some ten years in Brazil, where he followed various vocations, and gained much knowledge of strange lands and customs. In 1866 he went back to Switzerland, where he remained only about three months, and then emigrated to the United States, making his home for some two years in New Glarus, Wis. In 1870 he bought a farm located on Section 29, Jordan township, acquiring a place of 176 acres, which he has recently sold to his son.

On Feb. 18, 1861, Henry Wiederkehr was married in Brazil to Miss Mary Martin, a daughter of Rudolph Martin, of Canton Glarus, Switzerland. To this marriage have been born the following children: (1) Jacob, born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 15, 1861, is at home, and is unmarried. (2) Felix, born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, April 9, 1866, married Miss Lizzie Youngblood, of Jordan township, and is now the owner of the old Wiederkehr home place. (3) Miss Rosa, born in New Glarus, Green county, Aug. 14, 1868, lives in Iowa. (4) Anna, born Sept. 4, 1870, in Jordan township, married Charles Jones, a farmer in Iowa. (5) Mary, born Feb. 10, 1873, is the wife of Joseph Ginner, of Monroe.

Mr. Wiederkehr came to this country a very poor man, but by unceasing industry and the most careful economy, has accumulated a very handsome property, enabling him to enjoy well earned rest and comfort in his old age. In his politics he is a Democrat, and in religion is a member of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Wiederkehr, while deprived of schooling in his boyhood, has traveled much, and gained that practical schooling of experience that helps a man to know himself and to understand the world around him—the best of all education. Three times he has crossed the ocean. In his dealings with the world he has displayed a substantial integrity that has won warm recognition wherever he has gone. An honest man, and one true to his convictions of the right, he has never lacked friends. To-day he is highly regarded in the community in which he lives, where he is known as an upright man, a kind father, and a devoted husband.

ARTHUR W. GRAHAM, of the town of Wyoming, Iowa county, represents an early and well known family of the county. His father, John Graham, was a native of Prince Edward Island, and came to Wisconsin with his family in 1854, and died March 12, 1886, at seventy-six years and six months. He grew to manhood on his native island, and followed, in early life, the business of ship-building and sailing. He married Ann Bernard, who died in 1897. Upon coming to Wisconsin John Graham first bought forty acres, on which the only improvement was a log house, and but very little of the land had been cultivated. As his means allowed, he gradually increased his land possessions until he owned 440 acres. He was an industrious and respected citizen, and for thirty-two years he was a resident of Wyoming, doing his part to improve the country and develop its resources. He and his estimable wife are well remembered by old settlers for their many excellent traits of character. They were the parents of three sons and four daughters, all of whom are living: Jennie, wife of William H. Clark, of Ottawa, Kans.; Edward, of Creston, Neb.; Charles, of the town of Wyoming; Sarah, wife of D. C. Franklin, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; Miss Lettie, at the homestead; Minnie, wife of Peter Phillips, of Vancouver Island; and Arthur W.

Arthur W. Graham owns and lives on the old homestead of his father. He was born there Jan. 1, 1860, and has grown to manhood on the place. He married Miss Addie VanBlaricom, a native of Ontario, Canada. They have five children, two sons and three daughters: Pearl G., Edward E., Florence, Lee Burton, and Joyce Gertrude. Mr. Graham has ever been held in high esteem and regarded by all as a worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of Wyoming.

Mrs. Graham is a daughter of Peter and Jennette (Davis) Van Blaricom. The family came to Iowa county in 1879, and in 1885 Mr. VanBlaricom was accidentally killed, in the town of Wyoming, by a falling ladder. He was born in New Jersey, and had reached the age of sixty-five years. His widow, who survives, was born in Prince Edward Co., Ontario, Jan. 3, 1822.

EDWARD HANCOCK. Character tells in the upbuilding of home, social position and financial success. It is one of the gratifying and significant developments of American life that immigrants from other lands, if imbued with earnestness, faith and integrity, quickly rise from positions of obscurity to leading social forces in the communities in which they live.

About the year 1840 an English miner, religious, honest, hopeful of a future for his children brought his wife and their family of children from Cornwall, Eng., and settled at Scales Mound, Ill. He was William Hancock, the son of Stephen Hancock, a lifelong stone cutter of Cornwall. In his native land he married Susanna H. Thomas, the daughter of Edward Thomas, who died in England. The family were devout members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. Joseph Hancock, a brother of William, was for many years a Methodist minister in Australia. William followed mining through most of his life, and died at Scales Mound in April, 1884, aged seventy-three years. His wife died in August, 1868, aged sixty-three years. By a first marriage William Hancock had a daughter, Eliza, now Mrs. William T. Perry, of Scales Mound, Ill. By his second marriage to Miss Susanna Thomas he had five sons, namely: Richard, who died in Prescott, Ariz.; Edward; Joseph, who died at Scales Mound; William; and Stephen. The survivors all live in the town of White Oak Springs, Lafayette Co., where they are highly respected.

Edward Hancock was born at Scales Mound, Ill., a few miles from his present home at White Oak Springs, Lafayette Co., March 6, 1845. He was reared on the farm and received a good education, attending the Shullsburg high school. He then engaged in teaching for ten terms in connection with farming, having through life followed the latter vocation. For the past twenty years he has lived in Lafayette county, and in 1891 he bought his present farm of 240 acres, where, in addition to general farming, he is engaged in breeding Shorthorn cattle, Oxford Down sheep and Poland China swine. He is largely and actively interested in the White Oak Dairy and Feed Company, which operates a creamery and grist mill, and of which he is president.

He married June 14, 1866, Miss Grace Jewell, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Rogers) Jewell, natives of Cambourn, England. The father was a man of strong character but limited opportunities. He was a miner and farmer during active life, and after reaching the age of forty-five he learned to write by attending a night school. Later in life he engaged in the real estate business to some extent, and is now living a retired life at Scales Mound, at the age of eighty-six years. His wife, Elizabeth, died in 1853, aged forty-five years. Of their nine children two died in infancy; six were born in Cambourn, Eng., and three in Illinois. The surviving children are as follows: Elizabeth Jane, widow of William Toy, of Eau Claire, Wis.; Thomas Henry, of Palisade, Neb.; Mary, wife of Simon Wren, Denver, Col.; John, of Strawberry Point, Iowa; Grace, wife of our subject; Priscilla, wife of John Tregona, Lamont, Ia.; and William R., of State Line, Iron Co., Utah, where he is interested in a silver mine, of which he was for some time foreman.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hancock are the parents of eleven children, and their grandchildren are ten in number. The children are as follows: Minnie, wife of E. Arnold, of Strawberry Point, Iowa; Ada, wife of Eloy Swenson, Monticello township, Lafayette Co.; Nettie, wife of John Smart, of Scales Mound, Ill.; Edward L., of Madison, Wis.; Della Jane, who died, aged fourteen years; Elizabeth S. May and William T., at home; Fred, who died aged five years; Howard and Ethel, at home. It has been the aim of the parents to fit their children for responsible positions in life. Edward L. is a graduate of Wisconsin University, and is now a teacher of mathematics in that institution. May is a graduate of the Shullsburg high school. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Monticello, of which Mr. Hancock is a trustee.

In politics Mr. Hancock has been a lifelong Republican. He served four years as chairman of the town and has filled all the principal township offices. Among the fraternal orders, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. His career is an example of pluck and merit. Beginning life for himself in comparative obscurity, he has made his way to a place among the foremost citizens of the township.

ALBURTIS A. GILLETT, one of the representative citizens of Juda, Green county, is of English descent. David B. Gillett, his father, was born in 1801, and died Dec. 28, 1859. He was twice married. To him and his first wife were born the following named children: Marcus, William, Edwin, John, Mary and Amelia; to Mr. Gillett and his second wife, Parthenia Milks, whom he married in 1853, came only one child, Alburtis A., born in the township of Mt. Pleasant, Green county, Nov. 10, 1854.

When he was but five years of age Alburtis A. Gillett suffered the loss of his father. In November, 1867, he removed with his widowed mother to Juda, where he has since resided.

His mother was stricken with an incurable disease and died Jan. 10, 1894, at the age of eighty-two years. Our subject cared for her tenderly and faithfully through her long and painful illness, cheerfully granting her wish to have him ever near her. Mr. Gillett began life as a poor boy, but is now the owner of considerable property in the village of Juda, and a small farm with good buildings adjoining the village. He is devoted to mechanical pursuits, and is a manufacturer of woven wire fencing, gates, etc. He is a public spirited citizen, and ever ready to lend a helping hand to any measure that will be beneficial to the community. Politically he is an accredited Prohibitionist, but those who know him best say he is entirely independent, both in his politics and in his religion.

Mr. Gillett has remained single up to this writing. As a strictly self-made man he deserves honorable mention in this volume, as he has made his way against great obstacles. He has a genial disposition, and has a host of friends, who have been quick to detect and properly appreciate his modest but genuine manhood, and sincere moral purpose.

HENRY LONG. This gentleman is a well-known stock farmer of the town of Harrison, Grant county, and is an industrious and honorable representative man in his noble calling. He has had a long life in the West, and it is with pleasure that the pen of the historian records such a modest and unassuming, but sound and substantial life.

Mr. Long was born near Dubuque, Iowa, Aug. 12, 1837. His father, Casper Long, was born in Pennsylvania, and his mother, Martha (Hitch) Long, was born in Delaware. They came West when young, and settled near Dubuque, where they lived some time. They moved to Potosi, Wis., where the husband and father died in 1840, when only twenty-five years of age, leaving a wife and two children, Henry and Mary. The daughter married Samuel Vannatta, and lived in Platteville, where she died in 1897, leaving three children, Effie, Edith and Charles. After the death of her husband Mrs. Martha Long married William Withrow, of Potosi, and after some years they removed to the town of Paris, where she died in 1885, leaving a family to Mr. Withrow.

Henry Long grew to manhood in the home of his step-father, and received his early education in the schools of Potosi and Paris. When the Civil war broke out he made haste to don the Union blue, and enlisted in August, 1862, in Company H, 25th Wis. V. I. They were sent to Minnesota to suppress the hostile Indians before their departure to the South. They were afterward sent to the seat of war, via Columbus, Ky. (where they stayed three months). For two months they were a part of the besieging force at Vicksburg, and were then sent by boat to Helena, Ark. In February, 1863, they returned to Vicksburg, whence they went to Cairo. From there they went to Alabama and the disputed territory along the Tennessee river. With Gen. Sherman they went to Atlanta, and the young soldier bore a stout hand in many bloody battles and skirmishes from Vicksburg to Atlanta, and from Atlanta to the sea, returning through the Carolinas. Mr. Long was taken sick at Helena, Ark., but bore up and refused to go to the hospital. For four months he was seriously out of health, but he recovered, and feels that perhaps he owes his life to his indomitable will. The history of the regiment covers many of the most stirring scenes of the war in Tennessee, Alabama and in the Mississippi valley. It was a part of the army that broke the back of the rebellion, had a share in the glory of the grand review at Washington, and was mustered out at Madison, Wis., in June, 1865.

When the war had closed Mr. Long came back to Grant county. He had extensive lumber interests at Dubuque, and in October, 1867, he married Miss Mary McMann, a daughter of Thomas McMann, of one of the old-time families of Grant county. Mr. Long purchased his present home very soon after his marriage. He has cleared it up by unflagging labor, and has added to it from time to time until he now owns a fine estate of four hundred acres of farm and timber land. For a number of years he has been one of the large cattle dealers of the southwestern part of the State, buying largely, fattening and shipping to the Chicago and other markets. Mrs. Mary Long died in 1873, leaving her bereaved husband with two children, Gertrude and Dora. Gertrude died when an infant, and Dora, born in 1870, was educated at the State Normal at Platteville, and for several years was a successful teacher, but is now the wife of Samuel Vannatta, Jr., of the town of Harrison, and the mother of one daughter, Lela.

HENRY LONG

MRS. MARY LONG

In April, 1874, Mr. Long married his present wife, Miss Mary Himan, in the town of Paris, who is the daughter of O. P. and Irene J. (Louthain) Himan, an old pioneer family of the town of Harrison. Mrs. Long was born in Paris in August, 1853. She was reared to womanhood in Grant county, and received her education from the public schools. After her marriage she settled with her husband on his farm, and became the mother of two children, of whom only one is living, Ida and Bertha. Ida, born Aug. 26, 1878, died in August, 1892; she was a bright, thoughtful and loving girl, and her affectionate disposition endeared her to her parents and her young companions, and her loss left a vacancy in this home that can never be filled. The mother is a member of the Congregational Church of Mt. Zion in the town of Harrison. Mr. Long is a supporter of the Republican party, and takes much interest in the cause of education, religion, and every forward movement. Henry Long began life on his own footing. He formed habits of industry and prudence which have attended him through life. What he earned he carefully invested, and from a small beginning he now owns one of the largest stock farms in the town of Harrison. He keeps large herds of fine cattle which go forward to market at the most favorable season, and he is a wealthy and prosperous farmer, standing high in the esteem of the people of Grant county.

JOHN WESLEY BAKER, a prosperous and influential farmer of Linden township, Iowa county, residing near Cobb, is a native of that section, having been born April 28, 1846, in Linden township, son of Francis and Mary Baker. Mention of their lives will be found elsewhere.

In his boyhood Mr. Baker attended the district schools in the locality of his home, growing to manhood on the homestead. When twenty years of age, in company with his brother William H., he bought seventy acres of land adjacent to the home place, to which they added from time to time until they owned 325 acres, and our subject is still the possessor of 225 acres thereof. The land is diversified—timber, prairie and living streams making a combination not to be boasted of in every farm—and the natural advantages have been increased and augmented by the care and improvements Mr. Baker has gone to the trouble and expense of bestowing upon it. His buildings are convenient, and include a substantial barn 30 by 66 feet in dimensions. In addition to general farming he pays considerable attention to the breeding of Shorthorn cattle, of which he has a fine herd, and Poland China swine. The success which has attended his labors is the result of well-directed industry, and he is looked up to by his neighbors as a man deserving of the good fortune which has come to him.

In 1877 Mr. Baker was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Fox, who was born in North Carolina, where her parents, James and Mary (Crebo) Fox, lived for a short time after coming to America, in 1846. They were natives of Cornwall, England. Soon after the birth of their daughter Catherine they came to Wisconsin, settling in Iowa county, and Mr. Fox died at Cobb, Oct. 13, 1897, aged seventy-five years; his wife died on May 4, 1890, aged sixty-five years. Mr. and Mrs. Baker have two daughters, Ida Pearl and Lucy Myrtle, both of whom have received good educational advantages, the younger at present attending high school at Cobb. In religious connection the family are identified with the M. E. Church. Mr. Baker has been a lifelong Republican in political sentiment but never particularly active in party affairs.

WILLIAM J. DYER, of Lancaster, Grant county, represents one of the earliest of the pioneer families of this county. His father, Abner Dyer, was born on Jan. 28, 1817, near Danville, Ky., and moved to Fayetteville, Tenn., at the age of three years, and remained there until he was fourteen years old and then removed to Huntsville, Ala. In this Southern city he remained until he was seventeen, later making a three-year visit in Illinois, and in 1837 locating in Platteville, Wisconsin.

The first work that Mr. Abner Dyer was engaged in after coming to this State, was to assist in clearing out brush and in building the highway that now runs from Platteville to Ellenboro, and at the latter place he remained, assisting in getting out timber for the building of the Ellenboro gristmill, this mill still standing and doing business. On Nov. 24, 1840, he married Rebecca Walker, who was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, May 12, 1818. After marriage he settled two and one-half miles southwest of Ellenboro and remained there until the fall of 1846, when he removed to within five miles north of Lancaster, where he lived until 1881. To his marriage were born six daughters and two sons, all natives of Grant county, and all of whom survive, these being: Rebecca J., who was born in Potosi township, on Jan. 17, 1842; Elizabeth Ellen, born in Ellenboro township, on Sept. 19, 1843; William J., born in the above township, on Aug. 10, 1846; Sarah A., born in Lancaster township, on Oct. 28, 1848; Eliza C., born on Jan. 16, 1851; Emma L., born on Jan. 23, 1853; Bertha H., born on Oct. 10, 1855; and George A., born on March 30, 1859. The death of Abner Dyer was on Jan. 26, 1881, the mother of the family surviving until Jan. 17, 1888.

Abner Dyer was a typical pioneer, honest and industrious, and a man of strict integrity. His industry and energy made him a large landowner, at one time possessing 500 acres of land, and much of this is still in the family. A remarkable thing about this large family is that all survive, having inherited robust constitutions from their sturdy parents.

William J. Dyer, the third of the family in order of age, was born in Ellenboro township, on Aug. 10, 1846, and was reared to the occupation of farming, which he has ever since followed as a resident of Grant county. Mr. Dyer enjoys the distinction of being the pioneer horseman of southwestern Wisconsin, having brought to this section Mambrino Swigart, 2:30, the first standard-bred stallion owned in Grant county; he also brought here: Victory, 2:25¾; Royalty, 2:25; Brown Frank, 2:35; Ivica, 2:23¾; Cedarwood, 2:24½; Lumpwood, 2:14½; and Tossie "D." 2:13. These stallions have produced untold wealth to farmers of Grant and adjoining counties. Too young to enter the army, at the opening of the Civil war, Mr. Dyer enlisted toward its close in Company K, 47th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of hostilities.

In 1869 Mr. Dyer was married to Miss Sarah E. Borah, a daughter of James N. Borah, who migrated from Kentucky to Grant county in 1836 and settled in Lancaster township, where Mrs. Dyer was born, on Dec. 23, 1847. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dyer: William, a leading livery man in Lancaster, Grant county; Ruby, a successful teacher and a graduate of the Lancaster high school and the State Normal school at Oshkosh, in the class of 1900; and Laura, who died in infancy. For many years Mr. Dyer followed farming exclusively, but in 1895 he was elected sheriff of Grant county and in all its history it has never had a more efficient official. Four years of service as deputy sheriff, previously, had prepared him for the duties of the position, and for eight years his name in Grant county was a terror to evil doers, while it was a source of confidence to the upright. Mr. Dyer is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of Lancaster, and has been prominent in much of its rapid growth and development.

WILLIAM SHEDWICK NEWMAN, one of the well-to-do and prosperous farmers of Green county, is the son of William and Elizabeth (Kendall) Newman, natives of Pennsylvania, who came of German and English origin.

William Newman, the father of our subject, was a farmer in Fayette county, Penn. He married Elizabeth Kendall, who was born in 1800, and died in 1846, the mother of seven children, as follows: (1) Hannah, the wife of John Batty, died in 1873. (2) Samuel, born in 1825, died in Green county in 1876. He married Mary Roderick. (3) J. J., born Nov. 2, 1829, is a thrifty farmer, whose home is in Juda, Wis. (4) Ephraim K. died while serving in the Civil war. He was second lieutenant of Company K, 22d Wis. V. I., and died at Nicholasville, Ky., in 1862, leaving two children, William J. and Ida May. The son is living in Illinois, and the daughter in Cheyenne, Wyoming. (5) Elizabeth, widow of Jacob Roderick, a prosperous farmer of Green county, is now living in Monroe, Wis. (6) Nancy, born in 1835, now lives in the town of Albany, Green county. (7) William S. was born Oct. 12, 1837. After the death of the mother of these children Mr. Newman married Mrs. Vashti De Bolt, and to this union were born four children: (1) Jasper died in childhood; (2) Louisa, Mrs. Scott Dora, died in Nebraska; (3) Josephine married Clinton Condon, of Nebraska; and (4) Alice married Daniel Dunwiddie, of the town of Jefferson. William Newman, the father of these children, was born in 1799, and died in April, 1864. His parents, John and Elizabeth Newman, were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania.

William S. Newman came to Green county, Wis., at the age of eleven years. Following farming for his occupation, he has attained high standing. On Dec. 27, 1860, he married Miss Esther Gifford, who was born May 27, 1843, in Fulton county, N. Y., a daughter of Robert and Susan M. (Foot) Gifford, with whom she came to Wisconsin in 1856. Robert Gifford was a farmer and a school teacher, and died in the town of Spring Grove, April 18, 1898, aged nearly eighty-two years. His wife died in Brodhead Aug. 30, 1895, aged seventy-five years. Our subject and wife are the parents of eight children: (1) Jay E., born Feb. 18, 1862, died in infancy. (2) Irving G., born May 24, 1866, resides in the town of Spring Grove, where he is a well-to-do farmer. (3) Susan, born Jan. 22, 1869, married Arthur T. Preston, of the town of Jefferson. (4) William F., born Nov. 22, 1870, and (5) Chester A., born May 7, 1874, are at home. (6) Lois E., born March 13, 1877, has been a teacher in the public schools for a number of years, and lives at home. (7) Samuel, born Sept. 22, 1880, and (8) Ross B., born Oct. 20, 1883, are also at home.

Mr. Newman was a volunteer in the Union army, and served with distinction in Company K, 22d Wis. V. I., enlisting in 1862, and serving until the closing of the war. He was with Gen. Sherman in his March to the Sea, and was mustered out as a sergeant, June 12, 1865. Mr. Newman began life as a poor boy, and has had to make his own way in the world. While in the army he received injuries which have disabled him for life. But against all the hindrances of fate and fortune he has persisted, and now owns over 530 acres of well improved farm land, and its suitable equipments. He is a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and is pronounced by those who know him a splendid citizen, a fairminded man, upright and honorable, straight in all his dealings, and devoted to his wife and family.

LEONIDAS RICHARDSON (deceased), one of the early settlers of southwestern Wisconsin, was born in Nashville, Tenn., July 21, 1826, a son of William Steele Richardson.

William Steele Richardson was a man of ability, and was a worthy, esteemed citizen. He made his home in Nashville, Tenn., until his son Leonidas was about fifteen years old, when he moved to a farm about thirty miles from St. Louis, Mo., and engaged in mercantile business in that State. In 1845 he emigrated with his family to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Wyoming, Iowa county, where he lived for many years on the farm now owned by his grandson, J. T. Richardson. He removed to Avoca about three years before his death, which occurred Dec. 22, 1878, when he was aged eighty-four years. His wife survived him a number of years, and passed away at the age of eighty-two years, her remains now resting beside those of her husband in the Avoca cemetery. William Steele Richardson was an active patriot, and fought under General Jackson in the war of 1812, taking part in the battle of New Orleans; he again fought under Jackson in the Seminole war, and it was after its close that he removed to Nashville. He was benevolent and generous, and ever ready, as was also his wife, to minister to those in need. In religious belief, a Methodist, he was a leading supporter of the Gospel in the early days. Five children, two sons and three daughters, blessed his home, and these all came to Wisconsin with their parents, but have all since passed away, the only survivors of the sons-in-law and daughters-in-law being George Parr, of Barron county, Wis., and Mrs. Leonidas Richardson, of Wyoming.

Leonidas Richardson was twenty years old when he came with his parents to Iowa county. While never physically a strong man, he made farming his life work. That it might continue in the possession of the family, he purchased, about 1870, the homestead where his father first settled. This farm, which adjoined his own, had previously been sold outside the family.

On Sept. 23, 1849, Leonidas Richardson married Miss Elizabeth Woodbury, who was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., March 15, 1826, a daughter of Jerome and Lydia (Coolidge) Woodbury, the former a native of Genesee county, N. Y., and the latter of Madison county, same State. Mrs. Richardson was reared in her native State, and educated at Gouverneur Wesleyan Seminary, St. Lawrence county. She came to Wisconsin Territory with her parents in 1846, and for five years was engaged in teaching, three years of this time in the town of Wyoming, thus becoming one of the earliest teachers of this town, and she now is one of the oldest surviving teachers of southwestern Wisconsin. Leonidas Richardson died July 21, 1875. He was a most estimable and public spirited citizen, and highly respected. Notwithstanding his bodily ailments he was always cheerful, and possessed a most genial nature. He was a great reader, and was active in the promotion of the educational interests of the community in which he lived. His last work was to help locate the new school house, and to make a contract with the builders. He was especially fond of music, playing the violin well, and he encouraged and promoted the musical talents of his children. He and his wife joined the M. E. Church in 1849, being members of the first class of that church in the vicinity. This couple were blessed with ten children, eight of whom grew to mature years, and six are living at this time (1901). The children were as follows: Ella Hortense, wife of John J. Hughes, of Dodgeville, Wis.; Lydia Louise, wife of H. M. Levatie, of Wyoming; Jesse T., residing on the old homestead of his grandfather: Albert D., of Wyoming; George Irving, on his father's homestead in the town of Wyoming; Rosa May, wife of Solon E. Knickerbocker, of the town of Wyoming. Two reached maturity before their decease: Carrie Malinda, who died in 1880, at the age of twenty-three years; Eddie Leonidas, who died in 1878, at the age of nineteen years. The others deceased were Elmore Eugene, the oldest son, who died at the age of six, and Willie Jerome, who died in babyhood.

Of the family born to Jerome and Lydia (Coolidge) Woodbury, five were living when this was written (1901): Mrs. Elizabeth W. Richardson, of Wyoming; Mrs. Sylvia H. Anderson, of Iowa Falls, Iowa; Alfred Coolidge, of Darlington, Wis.; Mrs. Mary Cline, in the town of Fayette, Lafayette county; and Albert Morris, formerly of Lone Rock, Wis., now of Dakota, who served throughout the war of the Rebellion; Nathan, who died in the hospital at St. Louis at the close of the war; and John, who also served through the war, and died soon after its close near Faribault, Minn. While living in New York Jerome Woodbury joined the volunteers for the "Patriot War" in Canada, but returned to his home upon learning that the United States government had not authorized any hostile movements. Upon coming to Wisconsin he settled at Fayette, Lafayette Co., where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. He was one of the first temperance advocates in the county, and always active in that cause. His wife was a daughter of Daniel Coolidge, who served three months in the war of 1812, enlisting from Madison county, New York.

Mrs. Leonidas Richardson, from whom was obtained much information contained in this sketch, is one of the oldest citizens of Wyoming. She has led a very industrious life. Several of her children were quite young when her husband passed away and a great responsibility was placed upon her, but she has been faithful to her trust, and her children are all well settled, happy and useful members of society. She has ever been held in high esteem by her acquaintances. The family are all members of the M. E. Church.

WILLIAM WEBB. From tillers of the soil have arisen some of the most influential and celebrated men of this and other lands, and even cursory reading will demonstrate the truth of the assertion that agriculture is the surest path to affluence. Among the substantial farmer-citizens of Albany, Green county, is William Webb, who was born in Oneida county, N. Y., May 16, 1819, a son of James and Anna (Scott) Webb, both of whom were natives of New York. They had born to them a family of eight sons and five daughters, but time has made sad inroads, and but three of that large number still survive: William, who is our subject; Lois, who married Harrison Chase, resides near Utica, N. Y.; and Anna, who married a gentleman of Vernon, New York.

The paternal grandfather of our subject was James Webb, a native of New York, of English descent, who followed a sea-faring life and at death left one son and one daughter. The maternal grandfather was Enos Scott, a native of New York, born in the neighborhood of Black river, where he engaged in farming, lived to an advanced age, and was the father of three sons and two daughters.

William Webb, the subject of this sketch, was reared on a farm in Oneida county, N. Y., and was early taught lessons of industry and honesty, which have been of advantage to him in later life. The educational advantages were those of a settled locality, and in his youth our subject was well grounded in the primary principles. At the age of fifteen he accompanied his father to Ohio, where the latter settled on a good farm in Geauga county, where he died in 1841, aged sixty-one years. The mother of our subject survived him some ten years, being seventy-two years old at the time of her death. She had all her life been a devoted member of the Methodist Church, while Mr. Webb had accepted the Universalist faith. During the war of 1812 he had been a teamster, and during his residence in Oneida county served a long time as supervisor of his town, and was a well-known and respected citizen.

About 1860 William Webb removed to Wisconsin, taking up 160 acres of government land, which he improved and lived upon for some years, but advantageously sold and then located in Green county, where he bought 312 acres, which he improved, this farm being in Section 25, Albany township. In 1882 his two sons, Charles and William, bought this farm, and our subject retired to the village of Albany, where he built a substantial and comfortable residence, with twelve acres of land, and now resides there, enjoying the fruits of a well-spent life.

Mr. Webb was married April 26, 1842, to Miss Fannie Rice, a daughter of Roswell and Sarah Rice, six children being born of this union: Albert, who married Mary Kibbie, lives in Evansville, with four children, Arthur, Frank, Nellie and May; Jane, who married Hiram Brown, who died a number of years ago, leaving six children, Clara, Myrtie, William, Helen, and a pair of twins (who died in Nebraska), and Mrs. Brown then married O. C. Healy, and resides at Mapleton, Minn.; Mary E., who married Samuel Harn, is deceased, leaving one daughter, Emma, who is now the wife of F. L. Holiday, of Janesville; William R., who married Dell Bump, and resides in Albany, with five children, William, Rufus, Homer, Fern, and Hazel; Charles E., who married Eva Harte, and resides in Evansville, with one son, Mark; and Emma, who married Benjamin Sutherland, but is now deceased, leaving one daughter, Jessie. The mother of these children died on May 26, 1889, aged sixty-nine years, having been a devoted member of the United Brethren Church. On June 5, 1890, Mr. Webb wedded Mrs. Sarah A. Hubbard, the widow of Henry Hubbard, and her death occurred in March, 1897.

An active and prominent member of the Democratic party, Mr. Webb has been called upon to serve in many of the local offices for some years, being supervisor and a justice of the peace for many terms, displaying judgment and discretion in managing the township affairs that made him a valuable officer. Ever since locating in Green county he has engaged in farming and stockraising, but has found time to be interested in all progressive movements in his neighborhood, and willingly assisting when he was convinced they were for the best interests of all concerned. Much respected, he is one of the representative citizens of Albany.

HORACE J. LORD. Among the remaining pioneers of Grant county, Wis., who has been one of the leading citizens of Bloomington for more than fifty years is Horace J. Lord, who came to this locality on May 16, 1846. Mr. Lord was born near Burlington, Chittenden Co., Vt., Dec. 15, 1822. His father, Austin Lord, and his mother, Mary Ann (Chapin) Lord, were natives of Connecticut, the maternal grandmother having been born in Hartford and the original ancestry in Colonial times came from Great Britain. As an interesting bit of family history, the following incident may be related: At the battle of Lake Champlain, the mother of Mr. Lord, with another young lady, became frightened watchers of the great struggle and sought safety in the belfry of the church, where they saw the final victory.

Austin Lord and wife were married in Vermont and there their three children were born. When Horace was nine years old the family removed to Chautauqua county, N. Y., and there the father purchased 150 acres of land on what was known as the Holland purchase, which he cleared up and made there a very pleasant home, which would probably have been a permanent one if he had not felt that his boys would need a larger patrimony. The great Northwest offered farms for all, and thither the family, consisting then of the parents, three sons and an adopted daughter, turned their faces. The eldest son, Homer Lord, came first to Wisconsin, in 1845, and in the fall of the same year, the youngest, Henry, came also, in order that some preparation might be made for a family settlement.

In the spring of 1846 Horace J. Lord and his wife (whom he had but recently married), his parents, and his adopted sister started with teams, with the intention of driving all the way through to Wisconsin, but by the time they had reached Cleveland, Ohio, they had changed their minds, and shipped aboard the new steamer "Niagara," for Chicago. This great city was then but a hamlet, and seemed to be located in a quagmire, the travelers regarding it as a very uninteresting place indeed. The season was a very rainy one, and the country for miles back from Lake Michigan was under water, the roads being impassable, with any load. The family accordingly left their household goods and started out with their two teams and wagons, containing nothing but the travelers and their wearing apparel, and safely reached the sons and brothers, who welcomed them warmly, and the first season was spent in Beetown.

In the summer of 1846, the father and his sons, Homer and Horace, located land in what is now the township of Bloomington, and, that becoming their permanent home, the family has been identified with this township for fifty-five years. The parents lived where they first settled until their death, the father passing away first, Oct. 15, 1849, and the devoted wife and mother on May 13, 1858. Austin Lord was a well known and highly esteemed citizen, and was a typical pioneer, honest and industrious. In his early days he was a Whig and later a Republican. In his religious views, he was very liberal and inclined to the Universalist belief, although he was a man who needed no creed to bind him, his upright life and Christian spirit being a constant example to the world of the exemplary life of a good man. Homer Lord, the eldest son of the family, is now a resident of the State of Missouri, and the youngest son, Henry, owns and occupies the old homestead of his parents.

Horace J. Lord, our subject, was married on April 15, 1846, to Betsey D. Tyler, a daughter of Ebenezer Tyler, who was born in eastern New York May 26, 1786, and migrated to Chautauqua county, N. Y., in 1812, passing through Buffalo just after that city had been burned by the British. Mr. Tyler located on the Holland purchase, where he died in 1827, leaving five children, three sons and two daughters, the eldest of the latter, Sarah B., marrying William Cilley (she came to Grant county, and died Aug. 17, 1866), and the youngest being Mrs. Lord. Mrs. Polly (Edmund) Tyler was born in eastern New Hampshire, June 29, 1797, married Ebenezer Tyler Oct.

30, 1812, and passed away on May 23, 1872, in Chautauqua county. Two daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lord: Mary Ann, wife of John E. Connell, of the town of Bloomington; and Nora, wife of C. W. Stone, also of Bloomington. The second child, a son, Milton, died at the age of two years.

Mr. Lord's first farm consisted of forty acres, and he gradually increased it as he became able, and eventually succeeded in the ownership of a fine home and farm of 120 acres. In the summer of 1847 he cut and hauled the logs for his first house, in which he and his estimable wife lived for twenty-one busy, happy years, at the end of which period he built a more modern one. With his wife, he remained on the farm until October, 1900, when, on account of advancing years, they removed to the beautiful home in the village of Bloomington where they reside in comfort, surrounded by friends. As has been stated, but few of the pioneers now remain who came so early as did Mr. and Mrs. Lord. They can remember nearly all of Grant county's pioneers, and recall the times when it was almost an entire wilderness, and most entertaining are their recollections of the various stages of growth and development, so wonderful and extending over so great a space of time. In his early political life, Mr. Lord voted with the Whigs, casting his first presidential ballot for Henry Clay in 1844. Since the formation of the Republican party, he has been an ardent supporter of it, and has had considerable influence. In their religious belief both Mr. and Mrs. Lord are Universalists. Mrs. Lord is the only survivor of her father's family. She is highly esteemed in Bloomington, and there she has taken a prominent part in temperance work, and is now the president of the Bloomington branch of the W. C. T. U.

MATHIAS P. RHOADES, the successful fruit grower and apiarist of Browntown, Green county, comes of a family whose names for three generations have been engraved high on their country's roll of honor, and who have consistently been on the side of progress and patriotism.

Nicholas Rhoades, his grandfather, was a native of England, but having cast his fortunes with the American Colonies, he assisted in the struggle for liberty, and became one of the trusted soldiers of the Revolutionary war, serving under Gen. Washington, and enduring the hardships of that terrible winter at Valley Forge. He was the father of five children, three daughters and two sons, the sons being John W. and Walter.

Walter Rhoades was born in 1793, in Maryland, and early moved to the West, for a time living in Ohio, and in 1826 moved to Champaign county, Ill. When the struggling Republic was called upon in 1812 to engage in a second war with the mother country, Mr. Rhoades enlisted in the army, and served as long as he was needed, and then returned to agricultural pursuits. After his removal to the West, there came Indian troubles that for Illinois, Wisconsin and vicinity culminated in the Black Hawk war, and Mr. Rhoades again gave his country his services. In 1824, just two years prior to his location in Illinois, he married Miss Mary Rhinehart, and by her became the father of ten children, as follows: Frances married James W. Boyd, of Illinois, and both are now deceased; Isaac R., married a Miss Heater, of Iowa; Elizabeth married William H. Adams, of Illinois, who now lives retired in Iowa; Eliza J. married Benjamin Aydlotte, of Iowa; Mathias P. is the next in order of birth; Nancy Ann married Jacob Winkleman, of Iowa; John W. was a soldier in the 39th Iowa V. I., and died in the Civil war; Mary E. is the wife of J. W. Adams, of Iowa; Phebe married Herman Dresser, of Duluth, Minn.; and Alfred N., of Greene county, Iowa. With the exception of Frances, all the children were born in Champaign county, Illinois.

Mathias P. Rhoades was born Sept. 22, 1838, and was early trained in all the details of farm work. His schooling was necessarily neglected to a large extent, as the schools were few and far between, and the time for attendance in such as did exist was limited, the work of clearing up a farm engrossing the entire time. In 1855 he removed with his parents to Iowa, and remained there until 1870, when they removed to Sacramento county, Cal. In 1873 he came to Green county, Wis., locating in Cadiz township. During the Civil war Mr. Rhoades enlisted in 1862 in his country's service, becoming a member of Co. H, 71st Ill. V. I., and was mustered out at the expiration of his term of enlistment. When he returned from the war he took up his former work, that of farming, and then engaged to some extent in milling. He now devotes himself largely to fruit growing and to his apiary; in the latter he runs from sixty to eighty hives a season, which net him about $300 per year. He has been very successful in his undertakings, and at this time owns a fine two-story dwelling and seven acres of ground, as well as having considerable personal property.

On March 4, 1863, Mr. Rhoades was wedded to Miss Julia Trickle, who was born Nov. 24, 1845, one of the eleven children of Ashford and Jane (Morton) Trickle, pioneer settlers of Green county. Ten children have been born of this marriage, all of whom are yet living: Phebe, born April 5, 1865, married Louis Brown, of Greene county, Iowa; Orpha, born April 10, 1869, married Peter Frysley, of Green county, Wis.; Oren A., born March 20, 1871, at home, married Merta Sisson; Byron, born Jan. 29, 1873, married Gusta Budkey, of Merrilan, Wis.; Alice, born March 5, 1875, is the wife of James Faubel, of Green county; Oliver P., born Aug. 24, 1877, at home; Elmer, born Jan. 9, 1880, Effie, born Nov. 17, 1882, Mertie, born Feb. 17, 1884, and Walter, born June 3, 1887, are all at home.

Politically Mr. Rhoades is a Populist, and in religious belief has greater faith in charity, honesty and upright living than in any denomination or creed. He has striven to do his duty to his country and his fellowmen, and merits the high place he holds in the estimation of men.

CRAWFORD BROTHERS, publishers of the Iowa County Democrat, at Mineral Point, have been identified with that journal for over thirty years, and have made it one of the most popular and influential newspapers in southwestern Wisconsin. Its publication was begun in 1866, by John Herron and William H. Peck, and it has been under the present management since 1877. Both gentlemen are familiar with the printer's art in all its branches, and their plant, which is operated by steam power, includes a first-class job department. They are also journalists and business men of ability, and under their conduct the Democrat has been conspicuous for its consistent attitude in support of a low tariff, and its liberal and patriotic policy on all public questions has caused it to keep in touch with the most progressive and popular sentiments.

In recent years it has been distinguished for its decided stand in support of the gold standard.

GEORGE CRAWFORD, the senior member of the firm, was born near Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, Ireland, April 29, 1849, and the next year was brought to this country by his parents, Michael and Catherine (Tubman) Crawford. The family settled in Lafayette county, Wis., but in 1866 located in Mineral Point, where Michael Crawford filled various public positions, including that of city assessor. He died in 1891, at the age of seventy-five years. His wife died about two years earlier, at the age of seventy years. When he was eighteen years old George Crawford began to learn the printer's trade in the office with which he has ever since been connected. The paper was then known as the National Democrat, published by Herron & Peck. In 1874 he became a partner in the concern, and three years later the present firm was formed, and the name by which it has since been known adopted. In addition to his private affairs Mr. Crawford has found time to discharge various public trusts, including those of superintendent of the city schools, and member of the city council. During President Cleveland's first administration he was appointed postmaster and filled that office for four years.

On Sept. 9, 1873, George Crawford was married to Miss Mary White, daughter of James and Margaret White, of Darlington, Wis. Their union has been blessed with four children: Blair, George W., Harry T. and James J. The family are communicants of the Episcopal Church, and fraternally Mr. Crawford is identified with the Masons and the Knights of Pythias.

HON. ROBERT M. CRAWFORD, junior member of the firm, was born in Lafayette county, Wis., June 7, 1854. He entered the office of the Democrat at the age of fourteen years, and became one of the proprietors in 1877. His activity and independent public spirit won popular approval, and in 1890 he was elected a member of the Assembly, for the eastern district of Iowa county. He was appointed chairman of the committee on Claims, and gave close attention to the interests of his constituents during the legislative session. Under the second Cleveland administration he served as postmaster at Mineral Point.

In 1880 Robert M. Crawford was married to Miss Martha Goldsworthy, daughter of Abram and Mary (Jenkin) Goldsworthy, early settlers of Mineral Point. Mr. and Mrs. Crawford are the parents of two sons, Robert S. and Willard G., the former of whom is a student at the University of Wisconsin, at Madison. The family are members of the Episcopal Church, and Mr. Crawford is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JAMES LINDSAY, a respected and honored resident of Cuba City, Grant county, was born in Scotland, Aug. 28, 1828, son of Andrew and Elizabeth Lindsay, who were residents of Scotland until 1853, when they came to Wisconsin and made their home with their son, our subject, the mother dying in 1861, the father surviving until 1876. The parents were both members of the Free Church of Scotland, and were pious, worthy people. Their children have passed away with the exception of our subject and one sister, Elizabeth, now Mrs. Elizabeth M. Naughton, of Lafayette county. Of the others, Alexander came with our subject to America, married, and died in Lafayette county, Wis., in January, 1900, leaving five living children—Alexander (of Lafayette county), Agnes J. (on the old Lafayette farm), Andrew (of Iowa), James (of Iowa) and Margaret (wife of James Mace, of Iowa); Andrew died in Canada, leaving four children, all residents of the Dominion; Margaret married James Meiklejohn and settled in Canada, where she died, leaving a family; Janet died in Oregon, widow of Peter Liddle, of that State; John, born in Scotland, came to America after marriage, and settled at New Diggings, Lafayette county, both he and his wife dying there, leaving two children, Andrew and Agnes, who live on the old home; the rest of the family passed away in infancy.

James Lindsay came from a country where a good education is valued above riches, and he was given every advantage in the free schools of a land that has sent into the world some of the most scholarly men it has ever known. While still a young man he learned the trade of mason, under his father, working at the same some few years after coming to America. In the spring of 1852 he crossed the ocean in a sailing-vessel, making his objective point the State of Wisconsin. In 1856 he married Miss Isabel Miller, a daughter of James and Elizabeth Miller, who were settlers in Lafayette county in 1853. Mrs. Lindsay was a native of Scotland, born there in December, 1835, and was well educated. Two of her brothers live in Iowa and two in Wisconsin.

James Lindsay

After marriage our subject settled on a farm of 200 acres in Benton township, and there during the course of his residence erected a comfortable dwelling, barns and outbuildings, making it one of the best farms in Lafayette county, although Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay began very modestly. Industry and economy unceasing were at first required, but both possessed strict integrity and Scotch perseverance, and they can now enjoy the results of a competency honestly earned. The family remained on the farm until 1895, when Mr. Lindsay purchased a commodious residence in Cuba City, where he and his wife live retired, enjoying every comfort in their advancing age.

To Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay were born children as follows: Elizabeth, born in 1856, married Charles Eustice, and died in Lafayette county, leaving two children, Albert and Russell, who now live with our subject and wife, and are attending the Cuba schools; Isabella married Charles McFarland, of Cuba City, where they reside, with one daughter, Lila; William G. married Mary A. Harker, and lives on the old homestead in Lafayette county, with one son, Everett; Jane married Albert Harker, and resides in Lafayette county, with two sons, Lindsay and Wilbur; Mamie, born in Lafayette county, married Martin Row, lives in Cuba City, and has one son, Elmer; Campbell and Mary died in infancy.

Religiously Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay are consistent and valued members of the M. E. Church, which it has been his pleasure to support, and in that faith they have endeavored to bring up their children. Although never aspiring to any office, our subject has been an active and ardent member of the Republican party.

JESSE BROOKS, or "Squire" Brooks, as he is familiarly known, in Bloomington, has been a resident of Grant county since 1849. Mr. Brooks was born in Norwich, N. Y., in 1830, a son of Socrates and Lucena Brooks, the former of whom was a native of Massachusetts, and the latter of Connecticut.

When Mr. Brooks first came to Grant county he located in Beetown, and there engaged in teaching, and for seven years was one of the leading instructors of the county. In 1864 he became a resident of Bloomington, and immediately entered into the business of collecting agent and conveyancer, and since that time has followed the same, his business now requiring the assistance of his son, Ernest. For thirty years he has been a justice of the peace. Real estate has been extensively handled, and the firm of Brooks & Son is well and favorably known throughout the county.

In 1855 Mr. Brooks was married, at Beetown, to Miss Josephine Hayden, a native of Maine, and their children are: Herbert, proprietor of a hotel at Niellsville, Wis.; Mina B., a graduate of Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, and now the widow of Dr. Glasier, of Bloomington; Daisy, the widow of Dr. M. D. Brown, and now a resident of Bloomington; Ernest, a member of the firm of Jesse Brooks & Son; Dr. Everett H., a graduate of Hahnemann College, now in practice in Bloomington; and Lavern, a student in Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisconsin.

Mr. Brooks has always taken a commendable interest in the progress and growth of his town and county. Especially is he prominent in the order of Odd Fellows, being a charter member of the lodge in Bloomington, in which he has passed all the chairs and has also taken the Encampment degrees. In his political affiliations he is an active Republican; for twenty-one years he was town clerk of Bloomington township, and is now serving a third term as assessor. His business has made him well acquainted with all classes of citizens, and the esteem in which he is held places him in the front rank of representative men of this locality.

ISRAEL PHILLIPS. That the traveler through the great and productive State of Wisconsin, in 1900, should be willing to declare that here, indeed, must be located the garden spot of the United States, is not wonderful, but that the men who came to the wilderness in 1846 should have possessed foresight to see the possibilities of the country may be considered remarkable.

Among those who proved their faith was Israel Phillips, the subject of this sketch. Mr. Phillips was born in Grafton, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., on Sept. 15, 1820, a son of Benjamin and Phœbe (Smith) Phillips, both of whom were natives of the State of New York, where they were parents of eleven children, six sons and five daughters, our honored subject being now the only survivor. The paternal grandfather, John Phillips, was a native farmer of New York, of English stock, lived to an advanced age, and left a large family of children. The maternal grandfather was Elkaney Smith, also of New York, of English ancestors, and engaged in farming until old age retired him. Benjamin Phillips was a native of New York, where the family was well known, and died there when about forty-seven, his wife surviving until a number of years later, when she passed away in western New York.

Israel Phillips, of whom we write, was born and reared amidst the old farming lands of his native State, attended the excellent schools provided, and grew to manhood surrounded by the comforts of civilization. After leaving school he spent three years in Vermont, and in the fall of 1845 married Miss Lydia S. Hill, of that State, and two children were born of this union: Charles, who married Miss Elizabeth Gehr, and had two sons.—William Israel and Charles Elmer, dying on March 17, 1878, his widow living until 1892; and Marcella, who married Henry Kelley, and died in 1889, at the age of thirty-two.

After marriage Mr. Phillips settled in Wisconsin, in the spring of 1846, taking up 240 acres of government land in Albany township, Green county, buying the land from the government for $1.25 per acre. He has improved it until it is desirable in every way, and by additional purchases now owns 360 productive and cultivated acres of land, where he found only a wilderness. Mr. Phillips is a stanch Republican and has been active in the ranks of his party. For twenty years he was chairman of the county board of supervisors, and for twenty-nine was chairman of the town board of Albany. For twenty years he has been connected with the Masonic fraternity, where he is highly esteemed. During the long years of his residence in Green county he has lived an honest, upright life, and he is appropriately styled a representative old settler and prominent citizen of Albany township.

EDWARD DALE BAKER, a prominent farmer of Edmund, Iowa county, was born March 22, 1847, on the farm where he now resides, a farm that has been the birthplace of seventeen members of the Baker family. He is a son of John U. and Elizabeth (Dale) Baker, the former of whom was born near the line between Cornwall and Devonshire, England.

About 1836 John U. Baker came to the United States, and lived in Pennsylvania and New York until 1838, when he drove a team from Canandaigua, N. Y., to Iowa county, Wis. He learned the smelting business in a furnace near Centerville, and later became foreman of a furnace at Platteville. In 1842 he bought wild land in the present town of Linden, which he began to improve, making his home on section 21, the location of the present home of our subject. He added to his possessions until he became the owner of about five hundred acres of fine farm land, highly improved. He engaged in mining for some years, but since 1876 has made his home in Madison. Although reared in the Episcopal faith, he has been a member of the Methodist Church for many years and active in its work. His wife, Elizabeth Dale, was born near Helston, England, a daughter of Edward Dale, who came to Wisconsin and engaged in farming, his death occurring in Racine county. Mrs. Elizabeth (Dale) Baker died Dec. 25, 1899, at the age of seventy-five years. She was the mother of twelve children, of whom ten are living: Edward D.; John T., of Duluth, Minn.; Elizabeth, wife of John Osborn, of Scranton, Iowa; Anna, wife of Albert Watkins, of Lincoln, Neb.; Joseph U., of Carleton, Neb.; Nicholas D., of Madison; Osmon C., of Scranton, Iowa; Alma, who married S. W. Truesdale, and died at La Crosse, Wis.; Thomas Clarkson, deceased in infancy; Clara, who married W. H. Flett, of Merrill, Wis.; Carrie B., wife of George Oakes, of New Richmond, Wis.; and Lilly, who married Noble Warner, of Madison.

Edward D. Baker attended the public schools and spent some time in the Platteville Normal. In the fall of 1878 he went to Dane county, Wis., where he lived on a farm until 1895, when he returned to Iowa county, and bought 297 acres of the old homestead, most of it being under cultivation. He pays especial attention to the raising of Poland China swine and other live stock. The village of Edmund, which lies adjacent to his farm, was named for his uncle, Edmund Baker.

On Oct. 5, 1876, Mr. Baker was married to Miss Lida Ellsworth, who was born in Oregon, Dane Co., Wis., daughter of John and Eliza Ann (Green) Ellsworth, of Mifflin township. To this union have come the following children: John Ellsworth, a student in the Northwestern Dental College, Chicago; Lillian Dale, a teacher in Iowa county; Rachel Della, a student in the Platteville Normal School; Osmon Dale, a student in the Cobb High School; Genevieve, at home; and Lida Ione and Margaret Iris, both deceased. The family are connected with the Methodist Church of Edmund, which John Baker helped to build, and in which he often served as a local minister; he donated a site for the first church and cemetery. Our subject is at present serving as a trustee and as Sunday-school superintendent. Socially Mr. Baker is a member of Oregon Lodge, F. & A. M., and his daughter Lillian is affiliated with the O. E. S. at Platteville. Mr. Baker also belongs to the A. O. U. W. In politics he is a Democrat, and sometimes votes for the Prohibition candidates, and has filled a number of township offices.

John Ellsworth, father of Mrs. Baker, was born in Penn Yan, N. Y., and came to Wisconsin in 1846 settling in Dane county, and now lives in Mifflin township. His mother, Amanda (Babcock) Ellsworth, was born in Vermont, near Lake Champlain, a daughter of Sherman Babcock, a soldier in the Continental army, who witnessed the inauguration of President Washington; he was of Scotch-Irish lineage. Kellogg Babcock, a brother of Mrs. Ellsworth, attained the advanced age of ninety-three years, and passed away at the home of his nephew in Iowa county, Wis.; his wife, Letitia Van Buren, was a cousin of President Martin Van Buren. The home of Mrs. Eliza Ann (Green) Ellsworth had been in Naples, N. Y. To John Ellsworth and wife were born the following children: Amanda, who became Mrs. David, of Utica, Montana; Henry G., of Barron, Wis.; John M., of Livingston, Wis.; Lida, Mrs. Baker; Mary, wife of W. S. Packard, of Paoli, Dane Co., Wis.; Reuben, of Livingston, Wis.; Elmer E., of Livingston, Wis.; and Rachel, wife of M. Preston, of Rewey, Wisconsin.

LARS O. GROVE (deceased) was a resident of Jordan township, Green county, for almost forty years, and, at the time of his death, one of the thrifty and successful farmer citizens of his locality, where in his useful and industrious life he won the good-will and esteem of all, and they were many who knew him.

Mr. Grove was a native of Norway, born Jan. 15, 1853, in Vossevangen, where his parents, Ole and Sarah (Fenne) Grove, were also born. The family came to America in 1858, and settled on a farm in section 33, Jordan township, Green Co., Wis. Our subject was the only child. He was reared and educated in his Wisconsin home, and followed farming all his life, by good management and persevering labor securing the fine farm which his widow still occupies, a tract of 180 acres, well improved, under a fine state of cultivation. He passed away May 18, 1898. Mr. Grove was a member of the Lutheran Church near his home, of which he was a trustee for some years. In political sentiment he was a Republican.

On Feb. 16, 1875, Mr. Grove married Miss Caroline Olson, of Jordan township, who was born in Lafayette county, Wis., April 5, 1855, daughter of Rollin Olson, who is mentioned elsewhere. Mrs. Grove was reared in this locality, received a good education, and taught school prior to her marriage. She is a woman of marked ability, which has been exercised to good effect in the management of her fine property, and she contributed an article to one of the farmers' institutes, held a few years ago at Monroe, which was published in the Reports of 1897. She is no less noted for her kindness of disposition than for her strong mental qualities, and is a woman of charitable impulses. Mr. and Mrs. Grove had no children of their own, but they adopted one son, John W. L., who was born Sept. 17, 1880, in Oklahoma Territory, and was four months old when adopted by our subject and his wife. They also reared two other children: Otto Sandum, who was born Sept. 11, 1882, in Dane county, Wis.; and Magda C. Hexum, born Sept. 24, 1889, in Norway.

THOMAS DAVIES, of British Hollow, Grant county, is not only a well-known pioneer but also one of the most highly esteemed citizens of the county. His birth took place March 1, 1821, at Aberffraw, Island of Anglesea, North Wales, where he passed his boyhood. When he reached his majority, in 1842, he decided to embrace the opportunities offered to young and ambitious men on the other side of the Atlantic ocean. Reaching America, he found his older brother, William, in Marion county, Mo., and there he remained for two years, in 1844 coming to Wisconsin.

Mr. Davies was educated in his native land, in the language of his own country, and one of the first necessities that he realized in his new home was that he must familiarize himself with the English language. This he determined to do, and accordingly went to Dubuque, Iowa, entered school, and soon after resolved that he would acquire other knowledge and embrace other advantages for culture. With this end in view he entered the Western Reserve College, in Ohio, eager, ardent and ambitious. Five busy years of mental training followed, and in 1855 he graduated with honor, and still cherishes his membership in the Phi Beta Society of his Alma Mater.

The marriage of Mr. Davies was celebrated on Sept. 12, 1859, to Miss Elizabeth Lyons, who was born in England Sept. 26, 1829, a daughter of John and Mary (Johnson) Lyons. In 1836, with her mother and sisters, she had joined her father in Potosi, and at that time was but a child of tender years, of sensitive disposition and great intellectual capacity, which, remarkable as it may appear, developed rapidly, although its environment was that of a rough mining town. As Mrs. Davies, under her pen name of "Aunt Lizzie," is so well known and admired through Grant county, a few words from the pen of one who knew well her early surroundings, will prove interesting:

"In June, 1836, the father sent for them (mother and daughters) to come to 'Snake Hollow,' as Potosi was then called. The place was then a mining point, and the father had obtained work there and had built, in anticipation of the coming of his family, a log cabin. At that time there were no churches or schools in the village, and the principal book that Aunt Lizzie had for perusal was the Bible that her mother had brought with her from the old home in England,—the Book for the mind, the conscience, the will and the life. It suits the palace and the cottage, the afflicted and the prosperous, the living and the dying. It is simple, yet grand; mysterious, yet plain; and though from God, it is nevertheless within the comprehension of a child. Her mother was the teacher, who taught her that there is a God, and to love the Bible; and thus was laid the foundation of a Christian character that increased from childhood to womanhood, and into more advanced years. In school she was unusually bright in her studies. She was finally offered a home with Rev. A. Kent, of blessed memory, at Galena, Ill. She was at this time sixteen years of age. She graduated from the Female Seminary, at Galena, in 1848, and then engaged in teaching the Girls' department of a public school in St. Paul, Minn., where she remained one year. Returning to Potosi she taught a school at this place for two years." Here ends the interesting record, without mention of one of the greatest possessions of this most estimable and lovable lady—that of a voice of wonderful sweetness, volume and capacity. In her youthful days she taught singing for a period, and at all times through life this delightful gift has been at the service of her friends, or ready to be used to further any Christian or benevolent enterprise. Mrs. Davies has long been affectionately known as "Aunt Lizzie," this being the signature to her newspaper articles since 1889. Her literary work has been all of an elevating character and she can truly say, with another author, that she has never written a word that dying she would "wish to blot."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Davies have always devoted themselves to religious work. Mr. Davies joined the Congregational Church in Dubuque in 1848, and has been superintendent of the Sunday-school at Potosi since 1855. They have a very pleasant home in British Hollow, and are honored and esteemed by all who know them.

WILLIAM BINGER (deceased), one of the noble army of pioneer settlers of Green county, was a native of Ohio, born Dec. 25, 1815, a son of John and Sarah Binger, of German and English lineage, respectively, and who were among the early settlers of the State of Ohio.

Our subject received his education in his native State, and was reared to farming pursuits. In 1846 he came with his wife and four children to Wisconsin, and purchased forty acres of wild land in Cadiz township, on which he, that same year, built a log house for himself and family, where they resided some twenty-six years. It is still standing on the old farm, and occupied by a tenant. Mr. Binger built a new house, which is still occupied by his widow. He was a life-long industrious and successful farmer, and died on the old homestead in Cadiz township in 1895, leaving a fine property of 120 acres of well-improved land.

On Sept. 30, 1837, nine years before coming to Wisconsin, William Binger married Miss Susan Divan, of Coshocton county, Ohio, and to this union were born ten children—the eldest four in Ohio—viz.: Jerry, Sarah, Mary, Solomon, Lucinda, Alpheus, Hiram, Miranda, Elmyra and Melissa. Of these, Jerry resides in Wisconsin; Sarah is the deceased wife of Aaron Allen; Mary is the widow of Joseph Dale, of Cadiz township, Green county; Solomon is mentioned more fully later on; Lucinda died in childhood; Alpheus is also deceased; Hiram resides in Browntown, Wis.; Miranda is the wife of John Taylor, a farmer of Cadiz township, Green county; Elmyra is the wife of Albert Pattison, of Geneva Lake, Wis.; and Melissa is deceased. Solomon, the second son, was born in Ohio in 1845. During the war of the Rebellion he enlisted, Dec. 25, 1863, in Company K, 16th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war, having participated in over thirty battles, among them being the engagements at Nashville and Atlanta, and was with Sherman on his memorable march to the sea. He now has his home in Geneva Lake, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Susan Binger, widow of our subject, was born July 6, 1818, in Coshocton county, Ohio, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Shrake) Divan, natives of Pennsylvania, and of German extraction. They had a family of ten children, eight of whom grew to maturity, viz.: Emanuel (deceased), who was a prominent farmer of Cadiz township, Green county; Alpheus, who died in Ohio; Susan, widow of William Binger; Samuel, who died in Andersonville prison during the war of the Rebellion; Margaret, widow of Simon P. Lynch, late of Cadiz township, Green county (she is now now living in Monroe, Wis.); Ruth, wife of George Baker, of Licking county, Ohio; Walter, residing in Seward county, Neb.; and Lucinda, wife of Thomas Ryan, of Coshocton county, Ohio.

In politics the late Mr. Binger was originally a Whig, afterward a Republican. In matters of religion he was not a member of any church, though a sincere believer in Christianity in its broadest and purest sense. An excellent, loyal citizen, he always took an active interest in the welfare of the community, and when he died he left behind an honored name and an enviable record of good deeds. His widow, a grand old lady of eighty-three years, still makes her home on the farm of 120 acres, in the arduous labor of clearing and improving which she so well aided her husband, and now passes the declining years of her honored life in well-earned, peaceful rest.

JOHN BYRNE, a retired miner and farmer of Cuba City, Grant county, was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, in 1824, a son of Christopher and Catherine Byrne, both also natives of Ireland, where Mrs. Byrne died. After her demise Mr. Byrne emigrated to this country, in 1849, settling at St. Rose, Smelser township, in Grant county, Wis., where he died in 1868. The following children came with the father to America: Thomas, Edward, Henry, Mary, Katie and Richard.

John Byrne, our subject, grew to manhood in Ireland, where he received a fair education. He crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel in 1846, and after landing at New York crossed the mountains, going to Pittsburg; came down the Ohio; up the Mississippi to Galena; and thence to Wisconsin, where he immediately began work in the lead mines at Hazel Green. Believing there was a better prospect in the gold fields of California, however, he worked there for two years, and then returned to Wisconsin. In 1852 he married Maggie Burn, a daughter of William and Nancy Burn, natives of Ireland, who resided in Hazel Green. Mrs. Byrne was born in Ireland, and came with her parents to Grant county. After their marriage the young people settled down to life in Hazel Green, and the young husband found employment in the lead mines. He soon after purchased 120 acres of land in Smelser township, where he engaged in farming and mining. From time to time he added to this home until he had over 300 acres, and as he had continually made improvements, this estate became one of the finest in that section. As his children grew to maturity Mr. Byrne divided his property among them, after having erected a beautiful home in Cuba City to which he retired with his wife, and they now are enjoying the comforts of life. Of the children born to these good people four died in childhood. Mary, the pride of the home, a highly cultivated young lady, died some years ago. William, born in Smelser, married Miss Mary Farharty, and resides in Cuba City, retired; he has seven children, John, Delia, Maggie, Nellie, Bernice, S., and Cornelius. Christopher, born in Grant county, married Miss Mary Hillard, and has one daughter, Mary; he now lives in Smelser. Katie, born in Smelser, married Samuel Whaley, and resides at Benton, Lafayette county; she has one son, Eugene. Annie, born in Smelser, married Arthur Dickinson, and has one son, Joseph; they reside at White Oak, Lafayette county.

Mr. and Mrs. Byrne are devout members of the Catholic Church, to whose support they have given generously, of both money and time. Mr. Byrne was one of the founders of the church at Hazel Green, and also of that at St. Rose, where there is a fine edifice. All of his family have been reared in the faith of the church. Politically Mr. Byrne is a staunch Democrat, and has always cast his vote for the candidates of that party. He is a typical self-made man, having attained his present ease and high estate in the community through hard unremitting labor and has made his name highly honored in Grant county.

JAMES JACKSON, one of the time-honored pioneers of Green county, resides on his well-kept farm of ninety acres, located two miles northwest of the village of Browntown.

Mr. Jackson was born March 12, 1831, in Rukken, near Drammen, Norway, a son of Christopher and Camelia Jackson, who were natives of Norway, and respectable farming people. They had a family of five children: James, John, Kate, Andrew and Surn, of whom John, Kate and Surn reside in California, and Andrew is deceased. The parents emigrated to this country in 1843, first locating near Milwaukee, thence removing to Illinois, and in 1860 to Green county, settling in Jordan township on the tract of land now owned and occupied by their son James. Here they passed the rest of their days, the father dying Feb. 3, 1886, the mother March 11, 1888.

James Jackson, of whom we more particularly write, was reared on the home farm in Norway until, when he was about twelve years of age, the family came to the United States. His parents being poor, he had but little opportunity to attend school, hard work in the fields being his chief boyhood experience; but, by assiduous energy, industry, sound judgment and strict economy, he has made a success of life, and is now one of the most prominent, well-to-do farmers of his township.

On July 24, 1861, James Jackson was married to Miss Emily Evenson, of Rock county, Wis., and seven children have been born to them, three of whom are yet living. One son, Charles Edward, reached the age of twenty-nine years and eight months, dying Jan. 21, 1896. (1) Miss Eliza J. resides in Stockton, Cal. (2) Amelia was married, Dec. 2, 1897, to Andrew Anderson, of Jordan township, Green county, who is now operating his father-in-law's farm, with a bright future before him; he is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Lutheran Church. He and his wife have two children, Charles N. and James E. (3) Franklin is a dealer in farm implements and all kinds of machinery, at Browntown, Green county. He married Sophia Iverson, daughter of Iver Iverson, who was the second Norwegian to come to Green county.

Mrs. Emily (Evenson) Jackson was born in Seljur, Norway, March 17, 1842, and when one year old came to this country with her parents, Even and Margaret (Ostock) Oleson. The family located at Muskego, Wis., where the parents soon afterward died, of a fever. They had three children, of whom Anna died at Muskego prior to her parents' death; Ole died at Lake Station, Ind., in 1862; Emily was adopted by Peter Helguson and family, and spent most of her childhood near Orford, Rock Co., Wisconsin.

Mr. Jackson, our subject, in his political preferences has always been a Whig and Republican, and in religious faith is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. He is one of the very few now living who came into Green county in 1860, when that section of the State was wild and unsettled. Honorable and fair in all his dealings, he is widely known for his honesty and integrity, at the same time justly recognized as a good citizen, an excellent neighbor, a devoted husband, and a kind father.

GEORGE ELLEFSON, who resides on his farm two miles northeast of Browntown, Green county, was born in the province of Christiania, in Norway, Sept. 30, 1847, one of the twelve children of Ellef and Bertha (Peterson) Nelson, both also natives of Norway.

In 1873 they came to Green county, Wis., where the husband and father died. The widowed mother has now reached the age of eighty years, and makes her home in Iowa.

George Ellefson, whose name appears at the opening of this article, was married to Dorothy James, a native of Norway, April 15, 1876. To this union were born three sons: (1) James Edward, born in the town of Jordan, May 17, 1877, married Grace Woodle, and has one son, George R.; they live in Monroe, Wis. (2) Anton B., born Jan. 19, 1881, resides in Chicago, where he follows the carpenter trade. (3) Peter Morgan, born May 19, 1884, remains at home on the farm with his father. Mrs. Dorothy Ellefson died in 1889, and on Oct. 13, 1891, Mr. Ellefson was married to Miss Leve Knudtson, of Burnett, Wis., a native of the province of Christiania, Norway.

George Ellefson was born in a humble home, and had to make his way against the hindrances of unfriendly poverty. When he landed in America, in 1869, he had only fifty cents, and was in debt to his uncle, Ole Peterson, for his passage money to this country. After he had eaten his first meal here he had only twenty cents left in his pocket. He had a brave heart, however, and a stout arm. After paying his own passage money he earned enough to assist his parents and the other members of the family to come to America. Gradually he made his way to a competence, and now owns a fine Wisconsin farm of 115 acres, with a good dwelling house and ample outbuildings. The house in which he lives is just across the township line in Cadiz, part of his land being located in Section 35, Jordan township, and part in Section 2, Cadiz township.

Mr. Ellefson is a Republican in politics, and with his wife is associated with the Lutheran Church. One of the thoroughly honorable and upright farmers of the town, all that he has acquired has come by hard work and the most careful management. He is noted for his honesty and truthfulness, and much credit is due him for the honorable position he has acquired in his adopted land.

EDMUND W. RICHARDSON, a well-known agriculturist of Waterloo township, is one of Grant county's native sons, and a worthy representative of one of her honored old families, whose identification with her history dates from an early period in the development of the county.

Mr. Richardson was born in Lancaster township Dec. 17, 1847, a son of Harris and Louie Richardson, natives of New York State, who were among the pioneer settlers of Grant county, where they passed their last years. The father was twice married, and by the first union had two sons, William and Walter, the former of whom was in the Union service during the Civil war, and died soon after its close. There were five children by the second marriage, three sons and two daughters. All of the sons were among the defenders of the stars and stripes during the Rebellion, Charles being a member of the 10th Regiment and later the 50th Wis. V. I., and James, of the 2d Wisconsin Cavalry. Both served through the entire period of the war. They are both residents of Boyce Prairie.

Edmund W. Richardson was too young to enter the service at the beginning of the war, being only fourteen years of age, but in 1864, when seventeen, he enlisted in Company A, 41st Wis. V. I., and went to Memphis, Tenn., his term of service being spent there and in the vicinity. He received his discharge at Milwaukee, and then returned to his home in Grant county.

On Aug. 8, 1870, Mr. Richardson was united in marriage with Miss Josephine Chase, also a native of Grant county, and to them have been born five children: Laura, the eldest, married Charles Burnoise, and died in January, 1899, leaving five children, three of whom are now living with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson. Adelbert and Ordeska (twins), Stella and William are still living. The family is one of considerable prominence in the community, and Mr. Richardson is widely and favorably known throughout the county.

JOHN W. NICE, an honored veteran of the Civil war, is a type of the true American. Mr. Nice traces his descent from German forefathers, his grandfather having come from Germany to this country and settled in North Carolina, later removing to Ohio, in its early days; there he died. He had a family of five children, but none of that generation are now living. Two of the sons, David and William, served in the Black Hawk war. Records show that another son, John, died in Terre Haute, Indiana.

The subject of our sketch was born in Stephenson county, Ill., Dec. 10, 1844, son of Cornelius and Olive (Satterlee) Nice. Cornelius Nice was born in 1806, near Raleigh, N. C., accompanied his parents upon their removal to Ohio, where he spent his young manhood, and there married, March 1, 1827. He removed then to Indiana, later to Illinois, and in the fall of 1856 located in Grant county, Wis., in the town of Millville. Here the mother of our subject died in 1865, living just long enough to see the safe return of her four sons from fighting their country's battles. The father continued to reside with his children until his death, in 1892. This esteemed couple were the parents of eleven children, six sons and five daughters, all of whom grew to mature years, five of the sons and two of the daughters living at the present writing.

The Nice family has an unusual record of service during the Civil war. The eldest son, Silas F., enlisted in the 25th Wis. V. I., and was discharged for disability. Later he assisted in raising a company, which became a part of the 47th Regiment, and in which he was commissioned first lieutenant of Company G. At present he is a resident of La Crosse. Another son, Daniel W. Nice, a musician, served in the 25th Regiment; he died Jan. 30, 1876. Robert Nice, now of Boscobel, served in the same regiment as his brother Silas. James and David, the remaining sons are residents of La Crosse and Wauzeka, Wis., respectively, and the surviving daughters are Mrs. Mary Potter and Mrs. Martha J. Delap, of Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin.

John W. Nice spent his boyhood days in the town of Millville, as he was not yet twelve years of age when he accompanied his parents to Wisconsin. His business was that of an engineer, but he left everything to enlist, on Aug. 9, 1862, becoming a member of Company C, of what became the famous 25th Wisconsin Regiment, under the popular commander Jeremiah Rusk. They participated in the important battles and operations which made those years to be remembered, the Indian troubles under Gen. Sibley, Vicksburg, Resaca, the siege of Atlanta, and the march with Sherman to the sea, and were a part of the famous old regiment when at the close of the war it went to Washington for the grand review.

After the war Mr. Nice found his health so broken that it has been impossible for him to engage in his old calling steadily. He was married Dec. 24, 1870, to Miss Frances M. Dexter, of Boscobel, and is now surrounded by a pleasant family of four sons and two daughters: Herbert H. was born Nov. 19, 1871; Wilbur H., Sept. 24, 1873; Ned E., May 7, 1876; Lulu M., Feb. 19, 1883; Daniel, March 5, 1889; and Rena May, March 18, 1893. Ned E. served in Cuba during the late war, under Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, against whom his father fought from 1862 to 1865.

Mr. and Mrs. Nice have resided for the principal part of their married life in Boscobel, where they have a pleasant home, and where he is a worthy and esteemed citizen.

WILLIAM H. CAMPBELL. An agricultural life seems favorable to longevity, and poets have always celebrated the peace of mind it brings and the serene and noble age to which it leads. Rock township has a number of venerable farmers whose peaceful and useful lives carry out all that has ever been said about the beauty of a career that has kept close to the soil. Among them the gentleman who is the subject of this article may be prominently mentioned. In early life he was familiar with the workshops and streets of the city, but nearly thirty years ago he wisely decided to spend his last years on the farm, and it has been a hospitable haven to him. He owns a valuable and highly cultivated farm in Section 4, Rock township, Rock county, and is generally recognized as one of the leading citizens of that part of the county.

Mr. Campbell was born in Boston, Mass., May 22, 1830, and is a son of Jeremiah and Nancy (Hawes) Campbell, natives of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, respectively. They had six sons and three daughters, six of whom are now living: Lovina, widow of Charles Gibbs, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Jeremiah R., of Jacksonville, Fla.; William H., our subject; Charles, of Boston; Sarah, wife of Eugene Millikin, of Providence, R. I.; and George, of Chelsea, Mass. Jeremiah Campbell was a sea-faring man in early life, and later kept a restaurant in Quincy Market, Boston. His last business occupation was that of a wood and coal merchant. He died in Chelsea, Mass., in 1872, at the advanced age of eighty-two years, while his wife passed away in 1875.

at the age of seventy-five. They were members of the Congregational Church, in which he was a deacon. His father, Jeremiah Campbell, was of Scottish descent, though a native of Massachusetts, and reared a large family. He was a blacksmith, and lived to be over ninety years of age. The father of Nancy Hawes, who was a native of New Hampshire, died in middle life. He also reared a large family.

William H. Campbell was reared in Boston, and received a good education in the common schools. When he reached manhood he was a painter for a time, and in 1861 he enlisted in Company D, 17th Mass. V. I., and served three years, participating in some of the bloodiest scenes of the war, among them the first battle of Bull Run and the Atlanta campaign; he was also on the coast with Butler, in the battle of Kingston, Goldsboro and others. After the war he came West to Chicago, and lived in that city about four years, working in the railroad shops of the Illinois Central and the Rock Island railroads. In 1872 he came to Rock county, Wis., and located in Rock township, buying forty acres in Section 9, where he lived until 1897. That year he removed to his present home in Section 4, and is now the owner of a farm of 280 acres, as desirable a tract of land as may be found anywhere in the Northwest.

On Jan. 31, 1866, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Murray, who was born Aug. 15, 1836. They have had two children: George, born Oct. 3, 1867; and William H., born Jan. 22, 1869. On June 22, 1897, George married Theresa McClune, who was born Feb. 15, 1866, and they have had two children—Etta May (deceased) and Alice Elizabeth (born May 27, 1900). William is unmarried, and with his brother is engaged in the cultivation of the home farm. Mr. Campbell belongs to W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, G. A. R. He is a Republican in politics. All his life he has been an active and pushing business man, and since he came to the farm he has devoted much time to stock raising, directing his attention largely to Durham cattle.

Mrs. Campbell came to this country from her native land, Ireland, when quite a young girl, and found a home in Boston, where she lived a number of years, and where she married. She is a member of the Catholic Church. Her parents, Michael and Elizabeth (Murfhey)

Murray, had three children: Martin (deceased), Elizabeth (Mrs. Campbell), and John (of Ireland).

SAMUEL BINGER, the owner of a highly improved eighty-acre farm one and one-half miles southwest of Browntown, Green county, was born May 5, 1850, a son of John and Mary (Markley) Binger, who were both natives of Harrison county, Ohio, of English and German origin, the former being a son of John Binger, a native of Pennsylvania, who became one of the early settlers of the State of Ohio. John Binger, the father, died when our subject was but seven years of age, leaving his widow with eight children: Elizabeth married Isaac Russell, of Carroll Co., Ohio; William, Oliver, and Mathias are deceased; Samuel; Eva and Sarah are both deceased; and John, Jr., is a farmer in Harrison Co., Ohio.

Samuel Binger remained in Ohio until he had attained to man's estate and in 1874 came to Green county, Wis., settling in the township of Cadiz, where he now owns his own land and is entirely out of debt. He began life in poverty, borrowing the money needed to purchase an ax and an iron wedge that he might earn his living as a rail splitter. He contributed his small earnings to the support of his widowed mother and when possible attended the common schools to secure between times the needed education.

Mr. Binger was married on March 28, 1875, to Miss Gryscilda Ann Michael, daughter of Benjamin and Cynthia (Billings) Michael, who were among the earliest settlers in Green county. Two children blessed this union: Gertrude, born July 18, 1878, was married on September 21, 1897, to Grant Dale, and has one daughter, Alma May, born October 15, 1899; and Ervin, born May 1, 1886. Mr. Binger was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife July 1, 1891, at the early age of thirty-five years. She was a faithful wife and mother, and her death caused a break in the little home circle that can only be repaired on that Last Day.

In politics Mr. Binger is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, and for a number of years has held the office of school clerk. He is not identified with any religious body, but is a supporter of all good works, regardless of the fostering denomination.

Socially he is a member of the I. O. O. F., of Browntown, and as a citizen is most highly respected.

Grant Dale, son-in-law of Mr. Binger, was born Aug. 25, 1868, a son of Joseph and Mary (Binger) Dale, of Green county, and is one of the highly respected young farmers of Cadiz township.

WILLIAM ROSENTHAL. To the German empire this country is indebted for many of her most thrifty, industrious, successful and loyal citizens, among whom we are pleased to place the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Rosenthal was born in Prussia, Germany, Jan. 19, 1845, a son of Charles and Louisa (Linderman) Rosenthal, both of whom died in their native Fatherland. They had a family of seven children: Augusta, Caroline, Amelia, Elizabeth, Charles, William and one that died young.

William Rosenthal was reared and educated in Prussia, being brought up to agricultural pursuits. In 1878 he came to the United States, making his first New World home in Cadiz township, Green Co., Wis., where, although a comparatively poor man at that time, he was able to buy a small farm. In course of time, having by industry and thrift accumulated a little more capital, he exchanged this farm for his present place of 267 acres in Jordan township, previously owned by Thomas Bedford, of Cadiz township, our subject paying the difference of price in cash. This property is under good cultivation, and is provided with a commodious dwelling and barn. In the Fatherland Mr. Rosenthal served as a soldier in the army, and participated in three wars—the one with Austria, 1866; war with Denmark on account of Schleswig-Holstein, 1869; and the Franco-Prussian war, 1871.

On Jan. 1, 1868, William Rosenthal married Miss Austina Ackerman, daughter of Charles Ackerman, a native of Germany, as was also his daughter, and five children were born to them, three of whom are living: Augusta and Edward, at home; and Elizabeth, wife of James Bedford, of Cadiz township, Green county, by whom she has one son, named William, after his grandfather.

Our subject is at present engaged in general farming, including stock raising and dairying, having a herd of thirty-five milch cows. He is a self-made man in the purest sense of the term, and is entitled to no small degree of credit for his progressiveness, perseverance and industry. In his political preferences he is a Republican, and in religious faith he is a member of the Lutheran Church.

JAMES T. TAYLOR. For more than fifty-one years Mr. Taylor has been a resident of Grant county, having first settled within its boundaries at Hazel Green, on April 27, 1849. He is a native of Cornwall, England, having been born in that shire on Aug. 27, 1826. His family has played an important part in the ecclesiastical and political history of his native land. Jeremy Taylor, the saintly author of "Holy Living and Holy Dying," was among its early members, and not a few of his ancestors distinguished themselves in the revolt of the common people against the encroachments of the "Crown" in the days of Charles I. For many generations the family had been devout adherents and staunch supporters of the Established Church, but tyranny subverts loyalty, and persecution promotes free thought.

The first of the family to settle in Cornwall was Richard Taylor, the grandfather of our subject. His son, Stephen H. Taylor was born in that county, and died when James was but four years old, leaving two other children, Stephen, and a daughter, who was married in England, to Joseph Mathews, and accompanied her husband to Australia. The son, Stephen, emigrated from Cornwall to Connecticut in 1848, and settled at New London. He lost his life through injuries sustained by the caving in of a bank from which a party of men whose work he was overseeing was excavating stone to be used in the erection of a church; he was buried under the falling gravel, and although extricated alive, died from the effects of the accident, and was buried at Bristol, Conn., in 1856.

Eight years after his father's death Mr. Taylor's mother married a second time, her husband being a mine overseer. Our subject learned the trade of cabinet maker, but at the solicitation of his stepfather began work in the Cornwall mines. At the age of twenty he determined to win fortune in a new field, and in December, 1846, he first placed his foot on American soil. His first employment was as copper miner at Bristol, Conn. For a time he followed the same pursuit in New Jersey, and during 1848-49 he had charge of mining operations at Hatfield, Mass. From that point he departed, 1849, for Wisconsin, settling first at Hazel Green, Grant county. There he spent ten years; five years being devoted to mining and five to work at carpentry. Two years he passed in Lafayette county, and two more in Hazel Green, thus swelling the number of years of his residence in that township to fourteen. Mr. Taylor has a fine, musical voice, and in his younger days was a successful teacher of vocal music. In the spring of 1865 he organized a singing school at Dodgeville, and another at Mineral Point. The same year he removed his family to Linden, Iowa county, where he carried on a business as a cabinet maker until the winter of 1868. On December 1. of that year, he went, alone, to Montfort, to embark, tentatively, in business. The venture proved successful and in the autumn of 1869 he brought his family there, and in that town he has since made his home, a successful furniture dealer and funeral director. In politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican. In 1877 he was elected justice of the peace, and has so continued nearly all the time since. He is a member of the Methodist Church.

On Sept. 13, 1849, he was married, at Hazel Green, to an English maiden whom he had known in the country and county of his birth, among the hills and dales of Cornwall. Her name was Ann Wills. For more than two decades they shared each other's sorrows and joys, but on Nov. 8, 1872, she fell asleep in the glorious Christian hope of immortality. Her husband still remains a widower. Their seven children are all yet living as follows: John Wills resides at Linden, where he is editor and proprietor of the South-Western Wisconsin, being also a lawyer by profession; S. H. also studied law, and is a partner of Hon. John G. Clark, of Lancaster; Samuel J., one of God's afflicted ones, was born a deaf mute, but has received ten years' instruction in the institution at Delavan, is now living at home, with his father; Abby A. married Isaac G. DeWitt; Margaret J. is the wife of Thomas Kelley; Mary lives at home; and Lily J. is a teacher in the Montfort public schools.

As the reader may readily perceive, while Mr. Taylor's life has been seemingly uneventful, its story is full of interest. It is full of both instruction and encouragement for youth who, like him, must plan and complete the architecture of their own lives and fortunes.

Integrity of purpose, industry that never tired, and a fidelity that never faltered—these have been the corner stones of his success. Each day's duties faithfully performed is sometimes proof of a higher courage than is shown by the volunteer for the "forlorn hope."

JACOB GRUNENWALD, a thrifty farmer and cheese manufacturer of Jordan township, Green county, was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, May 12, 1853, and is a son of Jacob and Susan (Stoalker) Grunenwald, both also natives of Switzerland. In 1871 they came to Oshkosh, Wis., from their Swiss home, where William Grunenwald, the grandfather of Jacob, had died many years before.

Jacob Grunenwald, father of our subject, had a family of nine children, three of whom are now living: Jacob, whose name introduces this article; Katie, the wife of Chris. Perren, of Winnebago county, Wis.; and William, of Oshkosh. Jacob and Susan Grunenwald are still living in Oshkosh, where he has retired from active business life, having now reached the venerable age of seventy-nine years; she is seventy-six. In politics he is a Democrat, and both are members of the Lutheran Church.

Jacob Grunenwald, our subject proper, came to Wisconsin in 1869, when sixteen years old, and began at once to make his own way, working on a farm and in a cheese factory. On Jan. 22, 1884, he married Miss Kate Gimpler, a native of Canton Berne, and a daughter of John Gimpler, who died in the old country. To this marriage have come the following children: Jacob, born Oct. 25, 1885; William, Jan. 24, 1888; Frederick, Sept. 22, 1890; Mary, July 6, 1892; and Kate, Aug. 10, 1896. When Jacob Grunenwald landed in this country he had not a dollar in his pocket, but by the exercise of manly qualities of a rare degree he has acquired a very substantial competence. The farm on which his home is made contains 306 acres, in Sections 13 and 14, with a fine home and commodious farm buildings. On his home farm he is operating an extensive cheese factory, milking some forty cows, and making some 4,000 pounds of cheese a year. In all this he has been very successful, and his reputation as a business man, a farmer and a cheese maker is second to none in the county.

Mr. Grunenwald is a Democrat, and both he and his wife are connected with the Lutheran Church. In the town of Jordan he has served as school director and treasurer. Socially he belongs to the I. O. O. F., the A. O. U. W., and the Germania Lodge of Masons. All that he possesses he has made by hard work, and Mr. Grunenwald is widely known as a man who gets along with his fellowmen, has no trouble with his customers, and is a good neighbor, and one of the best men of the day in all relations of home and society.

EVERETT PECK holds an undisputed place among the wealthy retired farmers of the town of Jefferson who have led honest and industrious lives, and had added materially to the wealth of Green county.

Nelson and Polly (Cole) Peck, his parents, were born and reared in Rehoboth, Bristol Co., Mass., and in 1838 migrated to Geauga county, Ohio, remaining there about fifteen years. Then coming into Wisconsin, they settled on the old home farm where Everett Peck is now living. Nelson Peck was born in 1807, and died Sept. 17, 1882. His wife died Feb. 21, 1899, aged nearly ninety-two. They were married in 1825, and their union was blessed with the following children: (1) Andros, born in 1833, married Lucinda Humphrey, and is living in Monroe, Wis. They have a family of five children, Otis C., Eugene, Willard, Hattie, and George. (2) Everett was born March 3, 1838. (3) Arthur C. is a minister of the Baptist Church. Nelson Peck was the son of Cromwell Peck, who had two brothers killed in the war of the Revolution. The Peck family is one of the oldest in New England, and its first representatives landed on the shores of America nearly three hundred years ago, effecting settlements in Massachusetts and Vermont. Several thousand Pecks can trace their origin to the original three brothers.

Everett Peck married Miss Mary Camron Feb. 24, 1862. Mrs. Peck is the daughter of Hugh and Margaret (Hughes) Camron, of Green county, whose biography may be found in another place. Mr. and Mrs. Peck are the parents of three children: (1) Sarah Ellen, born Feb. 14, 1863, died in 1865. (2) Esther, born Dec. 20, 1865, married Levi Raymer, and is now living on the old home farm of her parents. (3) William, born July 18, 1871, married Miss Nettie Winters, of Orangeville, Ill., and is living on his father's home place.

Mr. Peck was reared on the farm, and received a common-school education. A lifelong farmer, he followed the cultivation of the soil continuously until about four years ago, when he retired from active labor, and is now living at his ease. Starting out in very moderate circumstances, he has come to own a handsome and well-appointed farm of 317 acres, with four good dwellings and all other needed buildings. Mr. Peck cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, and has acted with the Republican party continuously since that time. He has been chairman of the town board for many years, serving also on the county board. has served many years as a school director, and has held other important local offices, making a good reputation as a man of strong convictions and business capacity. A member of the Christian Church, he believes that the Bible is the only creed; for many years he has been superintendent and teacher in the Sunday-school at Polk. Mr. Peck is a well-read man, and thoroughly posted on all the topics of the times. He is generous and whole-hearted in disposition, and is known as a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father.

REUBEN C. YEOMANS, an old and prosperous tradesman of Janesville, Rock county, has long been identified with the gas, steam-fitting and plumbing interests of that city and has, by strict attention to business, industry, thrift and an accommodating disposition, acquired a comfortable fortune, and with it the respect of the public.

Mr. Yeomans was born in Otsego county, N. Y., April 10, 1849, a son of Cyrus and Harriet (Tanner) Yeomans, both native to the soil of that State. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are now living: Howard R., of Milwaukee; De Witt Ford, of Chicago; Reuben C.; and Cyrus E., of LaFarge, Vernon Co., Wis. Cyrus Yeomans, who was a farmer, came to Wisconsin in 1852, and, locating at Whitewater, bought eighty acres, following farming until the breaking out of the Civil war. He enlisted in Company D, 28th Wis. V. I., and served throughout the war, from 1861 to 1865, making an enviable record, both as a soldier and a man true to his convictions. He was strictly temperate, and would neither drink nor play cards. Mr. Yeomans was with his regiment in all the battles in which it participated, notably those at Little Rock, and on the Yazoo river and Mobile Bay. He lost his health from overdoing. When the war was over he returned to Whitewater, after several years moving to Clinton, where he lived some years. He died Feb. 14, 1896, at Elkhorn, Wis., when seventy-six years old. His wife still survives, making her home with her son DeWitt, of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Yeomans were Baptists in their early life. He was a Republican politically. His father was a native of New York, of Welsh and Scottish ancestry, and was a millwright in his early life, later becoming a farmer. He died when almost eighty years old. He was in the war of 1812, and his father was in the Revolution. Schuyler Tanner, the maternal grandfather of R. C. Yeomans, was a native of New York, of German stock, was a physician, and died at the age of seventy-seven. He was a man of character and standing, and held various public positions of honor and trust. His family was a large one.

Reuben C. Yeomans was three years old when his parents brought him to Wisconsin, where his home has been continuously to the present time. He received his education at Whitewater, began his apprenticeship to the plumber's trade in 1868, and has followed that business ever since. For twenty-five years he has lived in Janesville, and has been intimately associated with its history during that important period. He lived in Milwaukee five years, and was a resident of Whitewater and Milton for a time, but his business career has been almost entirely in Janesville.

Mr. Yeomans and Miss Kittie Johnson, a daughter of William Johnson, were married April 10, 1877. They have one son, Floyd Henry, who is in the employment of Hibbard & Spencer, wholesale dealers in hardware, Chicago. Mr. Yeomans belongs to Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; to Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; and to Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is a Republican politically, and a man of the very best standing in his home city. His comfortable and attractive home is at No. 55 South High street.

FRANKLIN CAMRON. a thrifty and prosperous farmer of the town of Jefferson, Green county, lives on his fertile and highly cultivated place one mile north of the village of Polk, and is known as one of the foremost farmers and stockmen of his section. Personally his standing is high, and he is widely known as an upright man, progressive and well versed in agricultural lore, and reliable in all his business transactions.

Mr. Camron is a son of Hugh and Margaret (Hughes) Camron, both of whom were born in Virginia, of Scottish antecedents. Their parents were among the earlier settlers of the Shenandoah Valley. Hugh Camron was born in 1809, and his first wife, Leah, in 1814. To this marriage were born two sons: Alvin, now in Dakota; and George W., in Montana. While still a young man Hugh Camron moved into Ohio, and from there into Indiana. In 1838 he married Miss Margaret Hughes, and in 1848 Mr. and Mrs. Camron came to Wisconsin, where he bought the tract that is now the farm on which his son Franklin is living. Hugh and Margaret Camron were the parents of four children: Sarah, Mrs. Alonzo Griffin, lives in Illinois; Mary is the wife of Everett Peck, a retired farmer of Green county, Wis., whose biography may be found elsewhere; William died April 25, 1865, of disabilities incurred while in the United States service as a member of Company G, 31st Wis. V. I.; Franklin is our subject. Hugh Camron died in 1888, and Mrs. Camron on Feb. 7, 1890.

Franklin Camron was born Feb. 28, 1846, and was brought into Green county by his parents when he was only two years old. On Jan. 1, 1867, he married Miss Sarah E. Noll, of the town of Jefferson, daughter of William and Mary (Diffenderfer) Noll, both natives of Pennsylvania, of German origin. Mrs. Camron was born Nov. 7, 1849, in Union county, Penn., one of a family of six: Mary (deceased), William (deceased), Nathaniel, Jacob, Sarah E., and Martha. To Mr. and Mrs. Camron have been born four children: (1) Candace, born Jan. 3, 1868, married Franklin Smith, of Green county. (2) Nellie D., born in 1876, is the wife of Arthur Davis, a farmer of the town of Jefferson. (3) William, born in February, 1880, is living at home with his parents. (4) Clayton, born in 1885, is the youngest of the family, and is at school.

Mr. Camron was reared on the farm on which he is now living, and acquired his education in the public schools. In 1864 he enlisted in Company G, 31st Wis. V. I., and served in the Army of the Tennessee until he was honorably discharged, in July, 1865. He participated in the heavy fighting around Atlanta, and marched to the sea with Gen. Sherman. Mr. Camron owns a fine farm of 220 acres, which is worth at a low valuation seventy-five dollars an acre. They live in a modern and up-to-date country home, and the entire family is respected and esteemed for sterling worth and genuine character. Mr. Camron is a strong Republican, and a liberal and enlightened citizen, of good standing with those who know him best.

DENNIS W. WEST, who owns and operates a fine farm about two miles north of Juda, Green county, is the son of the late Matthew and Sarah J. (Decker) West, natives of the town of Brant, Erie Co., New York.

Matthew West was the son of John and Avis (Bowen) West, of New York, who were the parents of ten children, all of whom lived to see their grandchildren. They were: (1) George is a retired farmer of Brodhead; his sketch may be found elsewhere. (2) Susan married Richard Sherman, supposed to have been a relative of the celebrated Sherman family. (3) Armida married Capt. Stephen Esther, and is dead. (4) Matthew, father of Dennis W., died in 1896. (5) Thomas resides in Erie county, N. Y. (6) Sarah, who married Peter Willoughby, is now dead. (7) Elizabeth married Nelson Park, of Cortland, Ill. (8) John and (9) Jonathan, twins, live in Erie county, N. Y. (10) Annis, who married James Hill, lives in Erie county, N. Y. The name West is of English origin and they are one of the old families of New England.

In 1847 Matthew West married Sarah J. Decker, a daughter of George and Laura (Churchill) Decker, of Dutchess county, N. Y., and they became the parents of four children: (1) Alfonso, born Sept. 25, 1848, resides in Cerro Gordo county, Iowa, and is a farmer. (2) Dennis W. is our subject. (3) Susan, born June 12, 1859, is the wife of D. Roderick, of the town of Decatur, Green Co., Wis. (4) One child died in infancy.

Dennis W. West was born Aug. 15, 1854, in the town of Sylvester, was reared on his father's farm, and obtained his education in the public schools. On April 7, 1875, he was married to Miss Libbie C. Hall, of Juda, a daughter of James Hall, of Green county, Wis. To this union came the following children: (1) Oceola, born Feb. 12, 1881, is a stenographer in Chicago; (2) Matthew D., born June 7, 1882, is a clerk in the store of Mr. Hall, in Juda. (3) Hazel, born Aug. 8, 1887, is living in Monroe with her grandmother. (4) Myron was born March 7, 1892. Mrs. Libbie C. West died Oct. 22, 1892, at the age of thirty-nine years, three months. On November 3, 1895, Mr. West was married to Miss Louise Weber, of Monroe, Wis., a daughter of William and Wilhelmina Weber, who were born in Prussia, and came to this country about forty-five years ago. To this marriage have been born two children: (1) Lotus, Sept. 25, 1897, and (2) Weber, March 29, 1900.

Mr. West is a Republican politically. For twenty years he has bought and sold live stock, and has a reputation for honesty and fair dealing enjoyed by few. For three years he was located in Monroe, engaged in the live stock and butchering business. In 1884 he went to Nebraska, secured a homestead farm of 160 acres, and also bought 160 acres, now owning 320 acres in Boxbutte county, Neb. The old West homestead of 132 acres has come into his possession, and there he makes his home. Mr. West owns a creamery building in Juda, where at one time he operated a creamery. He is a big-hearted, whole-souled man, and has a host of friends who respect him for his manly qualities.

FRANCIS O. BINGER. Among the thrifty young farmers of Cadiz township, Green county, may be mentioned Francis O. Binger, who resides upon a highly cultivated farm of 246 acres, one mile west of Brown town.

Solomon Binger, his father, was born March 22, 1822, a son of John Binger, of German origin, and died Sept. 29, 1881. He married Harriet Lynch Oct. 17, 1847. She was born in Ohio May 30, 1829, and died April 15, 1896, the mother of eight children, six of whom yet survive: Nathaniel married Charlotte Austin, and now resides in Wood Co., Wis.; Emily married Edmond Weldon of Elburn, Ill.; Sarah is the wife of Thomas Tomlinson, a farmer of Cadiz township; Brant W. married Annie Stover and resides in Browntown; Ulysses S. G. of Nebraska, wedded Alvira Austin; and Francis O. Solomon Binger came to Wisconsin soon after his marriage and settled in Cadiz township, Green county, in 1850, and became one of the leading citizens of those early days.

Francis O. Binger was born Oct. 28, 1857, and was reared and educated in Cadiz township, which has ever since been his home. He started out in life a poor boy, and chose farming for his occupation. By his energy and economy, good judgment and natural business ability, he has won for himself a firm financial standing, and is the owner of one of the best farms in the vicinity.

On July 2, 1885, Mr. Binger was married to Miss Jennette Reinhart, who was born March 10, 1864, one of the five children in the family of William and Mary (Trickle) Reinhart, the others being: Ira, who married Rachel Dawson; Annie, wife of Edward Divan; Myron, who wedded Grace Lynch; and Lee, at home. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Binger: Achsa May, born June 6, 1888; Benjamin E., Feb. 24, 1891; Joseph, Dec. 14, 1892; Allie, April 30, 1897; and Reese, Sept. 17, 1899. While not identified with any religious denomination, Mr. Binger has always led a Christian life, and has the respect of the entire community. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and among the offices he has held may be mentioned those of school director, tax collector, judge of election, and member of the township board for several terms. He has been an officer on the school board for the last twenty-two years, which speaks volumes in itself for his interest in the progress of education.

EDWARD H. EMBERSON would be readily named by anyone familiar with the personnel of the farming community of the town of York, Green county, as a representative young farmer of that district.

Mr. Emberson was born on Section 30, town of York, three miles east of Blanchardville, Jan. 4, 1862, and is a son of Hans and Carrie Emberson, both born in Norway. They came to York in 1853, and made their home on Section 29. The husband and father was born March 13, 1832, and married for his second wife Miss Carrie Loken, of the town of Moscow, May 4, 1861. She was born in Norway, Dec. 25, 1838, and came to make her home in this country when a young girl. They have had the following family: (1) Edward H. was born in York, on the farm where he is now living; (2) Anton, born Sept. 23, 1867, lives in Blanchardville; (3) Helena, born Sept. 19, 1868, married Henry Hanson, and has her home in the town of Argyle; (4) Joseph, born April 24, 1871, resides in the West; (5) Matilda, born Nov. 19, 1872, is the wife of Henry Gilbertson, of Webster, S. D.; (6) Emma, born June 29, 1874, is the wife of Henry Olson, of Minnesota; (7) Carrie, born March 4, 1877, married Peter Severson, of the town of York; (8) John, born Nov. 12, 1879, resides on the home farm with his father. Mrs. Emberson died at the old homestead, Nov. 12, 1897, her remains being laid to rest in the Ula Cemetery in the town of York. She belonged to the Lutheran Church, and derived much comfort from her faith. Hans Emberson served in the Union army during the Civil war, being a member of the 46th Wis. Vol. Infantry. In farming he has made a large success, and is now one of the large land owners of York.

Edward H. Emberson and Ellen S. Hanson were married March 23, 1896. She was living in the town of Moscow, and is a daughter of Alexander Hanson. To this union have come three children: (1) Harry Elmer, born March 12, 1897; (2) Olive, born April 26, 1898; (3) Casper, born March 3, 1900. Mrs. Emberson was born Sept. 4, 1875, and was reared in a family of eight children, six of whom are now living: (1) Hannah, the wife of J. O. Johnson, of the town of Argyle; (2) Henry, a farmer of Argyle; (3) Julia, the wife of Halver Anderson, of Dane county; (4) Emma is dead; (5) Carrie is dead; (6) Nora is the wife of John G. Johnson, of Iowa county; (7) Olaf, of Iowa county, unmarried; (8) Ellen S., who is already mentioned as the wife of Mr. Emberson.

Mr. Emberson is a Republican in politics, and was reared in the Lutheran Church. Quite extensively engaged in farming and stock raising, he takes much interest in dairy matters, and furnishes the milk of thirty cows to the neighboring cheese factory. In the community he is a good citizen, and is honest and square in all his dealings, and in his home is a devoted husband and kind father.

CHARLES E. PHILLIPS, a prominent and respected citizen of Browntown, Wis., was born in the town of Cadiz, Green county, Jan. 4, 1862, a son of Isaac and Eliza (Layton) Phillips, a family noted in the early history of Green county.

Isaac Phillips was born in Ohio, and Eliza

Layton, his wife, in Kentucky, and their parents were among the early settlers of the two States. Isaac Phillips came to Green county at a very early day, and bought government land very extensively. He was married in Ohio and became the father of a numerous family: (1) John married Elizabeth Weldon, and is living in Wilson county, Kansas; (2) Mary J. married John Whitehead, and is now dead; (3) William D. married Miss Mattie E. Francis, and is a teacher in a college at Northwood, Iowa; (4) Isaac and (5) Lewis are dead; (6) Albert H. married Christina Helen, and lives in Monroe; (7) Charles E.; (8) Edwin and (9) Edgar were twins. Edwin married Emma Clarno and died Jan. 30, 1901; Edgar married Agnes Mayhew and lives in Wilson county, Kansas. Isaac Phillips removed to Wilson county, Kansas, in 1872, taking with him his wife and family. Two years after his arrival in that State he died, leaving the burden of the support of the widowed wife and mother very largely on the shoulders of Charles E., who also had to care for two younger brothers.

On Feb. 8, 1886, Charles E. Phillips was married to Miss Hattie Loomis, who was born May 29, 1859, a daughter of Cornelius and Jane (Van Horn) Loomis. Her parents came to Cadiz township, Green county, about fifty years ago, and to them were born the following children: (1) Mary, the wife of Charles Brown, of the town of Cadiz; (2) Cordelia, the wife of Isaac Michaels, of Cadiz; (3) Ephraim, deceased; (4) Amelia, widow of Jesse Raymer, mention of whose life may be found on another page; (5) William, of Cadiz; (6) Henrietta; (7) Cyrus, of Cadiz (he married Eliza Michaels); (8) Hattie, wife of Charles E. Phillips, as already noted. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have two children, Earl, who was born March 9, 1887, and Ora, who was born July 22, 1891, both being bright and promising children.

Mr. Phillips followed farming in the town of Cadiz until 1900, when he sold out and removed to Browntown, where he has just completed a fine two-story residence, which cost him about $1,500, and makes a very desirable and home-like residence. A painter and a weaver by trade, he has not worked at either of these lines for a number of years. In politics Mr. Phillips aims to vote for principle, and cares very little for party ties and obligations.

In religion he is a devoted member of the Methodist Church at Browntown. During the Spanish-American war Mr. Phillips served as a member of Co. H, First Wisconsin Infantry, and was stationed at Tampa, Fla., forming a part of the 7th Army Corps, under command of Gen. Lee. He is a man of fine character and splendid business qualities, and all his life has been energetic and hustling.

JOSEPH TRENARY, farmer, Belmont, Lafayette Co., Wisconsin.

GEORGE E. HEMSTREET, a successful young farmer of Jefferson township, is the son of R. B. and Clarinda Hemstreet, of Green county. The father was born about 1819, and died in 1890. The mother was born in 1822, and died in 1866. They were married in 1854. The Hemstreets were of Dutch extraction, and Mrs. Hemstreet's people came from France. To our subject's parents came six children: (1) Mary, born in 1856, died at the age of eleven. (2) Mattie, born in 1858, is now the wife of Byron Pierce. (3) William, born in 1859, died in childhood. (4) Ella, born in 1861, is the wife of Owen Mitchell, of Iowa. (5) George E. is our subject. (6) Florence, born in April, 1865, is the wife of Charles Lord, of Iowa. John Hemstreet, the grandfather of George E., was a native of New York, a farmer by occupation, and came to Wisconsin in 1855. From this State he went into Iowa, returning to Wisconsin, however, as the Indians were at that time quite hostile. He had a large family.

George E. Hemstreet was born March 30, 1863, and on Nov. 24, 1884, married Miss Emma Roderick, of Juda, the daughter of Henry and Mary Roderick. To this marriage have been born two children: Bessie, Oct. 5, 1889, and Mary H., June 24, 1893. Politically Mr. Hemstreet is a Republican, and he is a consistent member of the Baptist Church in Juda. The common schools have afforded him his education. He is a farmer, was reared on a farm, and now owns 250 acres of farm land, which ranks among the most desirable tracts in this section. For several years Mr. Hemstreet has been a member of the town and county boards; he has been school treasurer for seven years, and has proved himself a good citizen. He is a kind and obliging neighbor, and enjoys the esteem of many friends.

LEWIS BOYNTON, a prosperous young farmer of Jordan township, Green county, has passed his entire life there, having been born Sept. 15, 1868, on the old Boynton homestead, part of which he now owns and resides upon.

Lars L. Boynton, our subject's father, was the first Norwegian to settle in Green county, coming there in 1844, with his first wife, Cynthia (Skaug). Lars L. Boynton was born in Norway, son of Lars L. Boynton, Sr., who lived and died in that country. On first coming to this county he located in Lafayette county, where he lived for a year, and on his removal to Green county he took up government land in Jordan township, the homestead of which our subject now owns a part. Mr. Boynton became one of the leading citizens of the township, and prospered in his agricultural work, at the time of his death owning 220 acres of valuable land, well improved and provided with substantial barns and comfortable dwellings. His house was one of the first in what is known as the Jordan Valley, and was a large one-story log structure, which stood for many years. Mr. Boynton had to work some time to accumulate enough to bring him to America, and as he commenced pioneer life in this region without means, he saw many hardships in the early days, but long before his death he was in comfortable circumstances, and lived many years in the enjoyment of the competence acquired by his own industry. He passed away Sept. 30, 1899, aged eighty-five years, eleven months and eighteen days.

Mr. Boynton's first wife died about 1858. There were no children by that union. On Sept. 16, 1867, he married Miss Martha Gordee, of Jordan, and they became the parents of children as follows: Lewis is the subject of this article. Clara Amelia, born March 11, 1870, is the wife of Iver Ellingson, who is a carpenter by trade, teaches in the local public schools, and is also engaged in farming in Jordan township; they have three children, Mamie G., Lester and Florence. Emma S., born Dec. 4, 1873, is the wife of William Olson, of Jordan township, a farmer and teacher; they have two children, Raymond L. and Mabel. Mrs. Martha Boynton passed away Jan. 18, 1892. Mr. Boynton's religious connection was with the Lutheran Church, and he was a Republican in political faith.

Lewis Boynton, whose name opens this sketch, was reared in the township of his birth, receiving his education in the public schools of the home neighborhood. He was early trained to agricultural work, and chose farming as his occupation—a choice which he has so far had no cause to regret. His farm, which consists of 110 acres of the old homestead, finely improved and cultivated, has rewarded him well for the attention which he has bestowed upon it, and he has become known as a thrifty manager and systematic worker. Mr. Boynton takes a public-spirited interest in local affairs, and has served as a member of the township board. He is much respected wherever known.

On Nov. 20, 1894, Mr. Boynton married Miss Lena Tollefson, a daughter of Botolf and Anna (Erickson) Tollefson, natives of Norway, and early settlers of Jordan township. No children have been born to them. Mrs. Boynton has two half-sisters, Julia, who lives in Sioux City, Iowa; and Gunnill, in South Dakota. Mrs. Boynton is one of a family of four, viz.: Thomas, unmarried, who resides in Jordan township; Annie, wife of Golick Golickson, of Jordan; Lena, Mrs. Boynton; and Erick, of South Dakota, who married Clara A. Olson. Mr. and Mrs. Boynton unite with the Lutheran Church of Jordan.

EDGAR S. CASLER, a retired wagon-maker and farmer, is now living in Evansville, Rock county, and enjoys the freedom from care and labor that comes alone from a wise and useful life. He is widely known throughout the northern part of this county, and has made many friends by his honest dealing and genial spirit.

Mr. Casler was born in Watertown, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1824, and is a son of Henry and Mary (Dingman) Casler, natives of New York. They were the parents of seven children, and four of this family are now living: Edgar S. is the oldest member of the family; Daniel D. is living at Seymour, Mo.; Angeline is the widow of Jacob Proper, and is living at Pierpoint, Mich.; and Sarah J. is the wife of J. Ramsey, of Lowville, N. Y. The father was a blacksmith by trade, and died in the town of Turin, Lewis Co., N. Y., about 1842, at the age of sixty-four. His widow survived his loss fifteen years, and reached the age of eighty-two. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. His father, Jared Casler, was a soldier in the Revolution. He was a native of New York, and of German descent. He was the father of five children, and lived to be ninety years old. Jared Dingman, the father of Mary mentioned above, was also a soldier in the Revolution. He was badly wounded and became totally blind, living for forty years without the light. He reached the great age of ninety years, and was the father of four sons and four daughters.

Edgar S. Casler spent his childhood and youth in Jefferson county, N. Y., where he attended the district school. He worked on the farm until he was nineteen years old, and was then apprenticed to the trade of wagonmaking, which was his occupation for thirty years. He came West in the fall of 1854, and made a location seven miles west of the young city of Janesville, Rock Co., Wis. He had a farm, and cultivated it two years, selling at the expiration of that time, and moving farther west, into the town of Porter, where he made his home some ten years. The war had raged for a year or two when Mr. Casler was carried to the front, by the flood of patriotic devotion that swept the North, as a soldier of the Union army. He enlisted in Company B, 37th Wis. V. I., and served two years, making a creditable record as a soldier. When he was mustered out he went to wagonmaking in the village of Rutland, Dane county. There he lived and worked some fifteen years, and in 1879 transferred himself, family and business to Evansville. This pleasant and beautiful island Wisconsin city has been his home to the present time. For about a year after his settlement in Evansville Mr. Casler carried the mail between that city and Edgerton, and then resumed his trade of wagonmaker. For a number of years advancing age has kept him from active business.

In 1847 Mr. Casler married Miss Zenana Damon, daughter of Noah and Betsy Damon, and they had two children, Ellen and Matilda. The mother dying in 1850, the following year Mr. Casler married Miss Theodosia Bennett, a daughter of Larry and Mary Bennett. She died March 3, 1897, at the age of sixty-five. Eight children were born to this union: Clara, Lucy, Alma, Jennie, Nellie, Ida, Henry and Ernest. The family circle is yet unbroken. Ellen married George Koehn, and lives in Chicago; they have a family of six daughters. Matilda married Richard Brigham, who died about 1880, leaving her with two sons. Clara married F. D. Child, and lives in Bertrand, Neb.; they have a family of two girls and one boy. Lucy is Mrs. Charles E. Shannon, and lives in Edgerton. Alma and Jennie live at home, and keep house for their father. Nellie married Harley Saunders, and lives in Albion, Dane Co., Wis.; they have a family of four children. Ida married Carl Atwood, and lives in Albion. Henry is single, and lives at Bertrand, Neb. Ernest is single, and lives at home.

Mr. Casler belongs to T. L. Sutphen Post, No. 41, G. A. R., and is a man highly esteemed in his community.

SAMUEL E. HASSELL, M. D., of Lancaster, Grant county, is numbered among the older physicians of the county in years of practice, as he settled in Lancaster in 1872, and since then has been in continuous and active employment in his profession. Dr. Hassell was born in Platteville, Grant county, July 9, 1846, and is a son of the well-known and venerated pioneer clergyman, Rev. Richard Hassell, a native of Leeds, Yorkshire, England, born in 1818.

Rev. Richard Hassell was married in England to Ann Newson, and with his wife came to the United States and located in Grant county, Wis., about 1840. Here he officiated as a Congregational pastor for a number of years, and then removed to Dane county. He was one of the earliest ministers of his denomination in the State, and was a co-worker with the Rev. Samuel W. Eaton, who became pastor of the Congregational Church at Lancaster in 1847, and afterward became famous as the chaplain of the 7th Wis. V. I. in the Civil war. Rev. Mr. Hassell was active in the ministry for the long period of fifty years, but is now with his wife, who is but three months his junior, living in retirement in Seattle, Wash. They have had born to them six children—five sons and one daughter, of whom the latter died in early life. The eldest son, Stoner, was a member of the 32d Wis. V. I., in the war of the Rebellion, and died soon after its close, from the effects of a wound received while in the service; Dr. Samuel E. is the second born of the sons; Kenrich, the third son, resides at Redfield, S. Dak.; Rev. Richard Burton, the fourth son, is a Congregational clergyman, and resides at Everett, on Puget Sound; Angel James, the youngest of the family, is a resident of Seattle.

Dr. Samuel E. Hassell was primarily educated in the public schools of Dane county, Wis., after quitting which he was, for three years, a student at Beloit College, and then pursued a course of study at Grinnell College, in Iowa. He began the study of medicine at Beloit, under Drs. Johnson and Taggart, in 1868, and was graduated from the Hahnemann Medical College, in Chicago, in 1872. He first practiced his profession at Jasper, Iowa, but soon decided to settle down to practice in his native county of Grant, Wis., where he has ever since been favored with a large and first-class patronage, and where he stands in the front rank of the practicing physicians of the county and State.

Dr. Hassell married Miss Ora Norwood Cox, a daughter of George H. Cox, a pioneer of Lancaster and its first postmaster, the duties of which office he assumed in January, 1838. Mr. Cox also erected some of the first buildings on the present site of Lancaster, and his family were among the most prominent of the early settlers of Grant county. To the Doctor and wife has been born one child, Edith, now the wife of Dr. W. T. Brown, of Platteville, Wis. In politics Dr. Hassell is a Republican.

OSCAR F. NOWLAN. The Nowlan family originated in Ireland, whence John Nowlan, the grandfather of Oscar F., emigrated to America, settling in Vermont, and dying in his new home while yet in middle life. Four daughters and three sons were born to him, but this narrative is concerned with only one, Thomas, the father of the distinguished and influential citizen of Janesville, Rock county, whose name is identified with so much of that city's growth and development.

Thomas Nowlan was born in Vermont, became a farmer of Broome county, N. Y., and died there in 1868, aged about fifty-eight years. His widow, whose maiden name was Sophia Enders, survived several years, dying at the age of sixty-four. Both were earnest and consistent members of the Methodist Church, and he was in politics an outspoken Abolitionist. To Thomas Nowlan and his wife five sons and two daughters were born, four of whom are yet living: Oscar F., who is the eldest; Edward, of Newark Valley, N. Y.; Sidney, whose home is at Windsor, in that State; and Mary, who is now Mrs. Guyon, of Binghamton. Mrs. Thomas Nowlan was a daughter of John Enders, a farmer in New York, who died in early life.

Oscar F. Nowlan was born in Broome county, N. Y., Jan. 24, 1841. His boyhood was uneventful, his life alternating between work upon his father's farm and attendance at the district schools, and in 1863 he came to Wisconsin. His first year's residence in the State was spent at Milton College, and thereafter he embarked in business as a building contractor. Among the first structures which he erected were the "Central Hotel," the Methodist church, and several private residences at Waterloo, Iowa. Returning to Wisconsin in 1865, he carried on the same line of enterprise until 1897, when he received the appointment of postmaster at Janesville, which office he yet holds, and the duties of which he has discharged to the entire satisfaction of the community by reason of his ready tact, his scrupulous fidelity, and his keen, experiential insight into the needs of a growing business community. Among the many buildings in the city which he has erected under contract, and which stand as abiding monuments of his skill, may be mentioned the Rock County Insane Asylum, the Davis and Fredendall blocks, the Central and Second Ward school houses, and the Hanson Furniture Co.'s buildings. He was also a contractor for the erection of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Delavan, the poor house of Walworth county, the court house and jail at Black River Falls, the Fond du Lac court house, an addition to the State Capitol at Madison, the insane asylum at Traverse City, Mich., and the county buildings at Monroe, Wis. He also did much work in the city of Milwaukee. Since 1894, however, he has done little in the way of undertaking new business of this description.

Mr. Nowlan is a man of broad, enlightened public spirit, and his fellow citizens have repeatedly honored him and themselves by elevating him to public posts of trust. For seventeen years he was a member of the board of supervisors, and for four years he represented the Second ward of Janesville in the city council. In 1891 he was the Republican nominee for the Legislature, receiving the unanimous vote of his party in convention, but was buried in the political landslide which followed. In private life he is genial and generous, charitable in his estimate of his fellows, and quick to respond to deserving calls upon his purse. His naturally social temperament has led him to connect himself with several fraternal orders, and he is a member of Janesville Lodge, No. 55, F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; and Oriental Lodge, No. 5, K. of P.

On March 22, 1866, Mr. Nowlan married Jennie Marlett, daughter of Garrett Marlett and Eliza (Blood). She is a devout member of the Congregational Church. Seven children have blessed their union—Minnie, Burton F., Maud, Harry and Eloise, living; and Jennie and Nellie, deceased. Minnie is a widow, and makes her home with her parents. Burton F. married Jessie E. Merrill, and has two children, Louise M. and Hiram M. The three younger children are unmarried, and live at home. The family residence is at No. 53 Cornelia street, where Mr. Nowlan built a fine residence in 1868.

JOSEPH BUCHAN, the present popular and efficient cashier of the Benton Bank, was born in Ontario, Canada, Aug. 10, 1845, and is a son of James and Mary (Bird) Buchan. The father was born in Scotland in 1819, and the mother in England in 1824.

Robert Buchan, the grandfather of our subject, came with his family to Quebec at a very early day, and there died an old man. His six children are all dead except James, the father of Joseph, and a daughter Mary, who is unmarried and is living in Quebec.

James Buchan grew to manhood in Quebec, and was at one time an extensive land owner in Quebec and in Ontario. His wife died in 1870, leaving a family of ten children, who reached mature life. (1) Joseph; (2) William, who was married and settled in Glasgow, Missouri, is engaged in a hotel at that point. (3) James is in business in Michigan. (4) Robert resides at Steven's Point, Wis. (5) Andrew is a butcher in Minneapolis. (6) George is married and in business at Steven's Point. (7) Charity and (8) Elizabeth died in early womanhood. (9) Esther is the wife of Donald Forbes, of Ontario. (10) Fannie is the wife of Thomas Fansley, of Ontario.

Joseph Buchan was educated in the schools of Canada, where in early manhood he was engaged in lumbering with his father, also working with him in the contracting and building business. In 1865 Joseph Buchan came to New Diggings, where for some years he was interested in the lead and zinc mines, and then went into a mercantile business. This he continued in the town of Benton until 1894. That year the bank of Benton was organized, with Mr. Buchan as cashier and Judge P. A. Orton as president.

Mr. Buchan was married in 1868 to Miss Margaret Robson who was born in 1848, a daughter of Thomas and Mary A. Robson, an old and highly respected family in the town of Benton, residing here since the pioneer days.

To Mr. and Mrs. Buchan were born four children: (1) William, born in Lafayette county, was married to Miss Lillie Stephens, of Benton, and is now a successful merchant in Benton. They have one son, Luverne. (2) Laura, a bright and scholarly young lady, born in Benton, is a graduate of the State Normal at Platteville, and is a teacher in Benton. (3) Annie, born in Benton, is the wife of James W. Metcalf, city marshal of Benton, and has one son, James Lloyd. (4) Chester, born in Benton, is a student in the local schools.

Mr. Buchan purchased a piece of real estate in Benton, on which he erected a modern home, and which to-day is regarded as one of the most attractive homes in this part of the county. He has dealt largely in real estate with the most satisfactory results. He owns large tracts of land in Wisconsin, South Dakota and other States, and as his selections have been the result of long and careful study, they are proving highly remunerative.

Politically Mr. Buchan has always been identified with the Republican party, and has served as a delegate to several state conventions. He has been on the town board and has filled several local offices. Both Mr. and Mrs. Buchan are members of the Primitive Methodist Church. He belongs to the K. P. Lodge, No. 134, at Benton, and is also an Odd Fellow. Mr. Buchan came to this county with little resources, and by energy and push has accumulated a very considerable fortune. He has won a standing ground in the world, and his methods have always been open and above board. He has many friends in the town, and throughout this part of the State.

ANDREW JACKSON PALMER was one of the thousands who answered the call of the country when she was in peril, and gave his cheerful and willing service to her through the best years of his life, and still bears marks of that struggle which the years of peace since have not effaced. He was born in Cabot, Vt., June 10, 1826, a son of Galen and Mary Palmer, the former of Scotch and the latter of German descent. The family consisted of eight children, Irving being the first of the family to leave the old home for the west. In the early settlement of Illinois Irving Palmer came, a young man, to spy out the land, returning for his parents and the two youngest children, one of whom was our subject. The home of the family in Illinois was at Grand Detour, where the parents spent the remainder of their lives. Of this family but three members survive: Irving, at the age of ninety-two; Mrs. Mary Ann Peck, of Burlington, Vt., and our subject. George served with our subject in the same company and regiment during the Civil war, but died in the fall of 1898 at Beatrice, Nebraska.

On Aug. 14, 1862, Andrew Jackson Palmer enlisted in the town of Willow Springs, entering Co. B, 23d Wis. V. I. This regiment rendezvoused at Madison, where they were detained for three weeks, and then went to Covington, Ky., by way of Cincinnati. An attack by the noted Kirby Smith was expected at Covington, and a large force of the Union army was concentrated there, but no attack was made. The regiment then made a march to the Mississippi, a long and severe one of 250 miles, where it took boat for Memphis and joined the troops in the operations around Vicksburg. There a large force was organized and descended the river to the vicinity of Vicksburg, but this expedition was a total failure, and the regiment again ascended the river to the mouth of the Arkansas, and a portion of the army, including the 23d Wisconsin, ascended that river, and there followed the severe battle of Arkansas Post. Here Mr. Palmer was severely wounded in the right forearm, an ounce ball passing twice through the bones of the arm, and, remarkable as it may seem, broke neither of the bones. With about 1,200 other poor wounded soldiers, he was taken back to Memphis, where he remained for six weeks and received his discharge through the influence of Mrs. Harvey, to whom so many Wisconsin boys in blue owe their lives. Mr. Palmer had been reared on a farm, and after his return and the complete healing of his arm he resumed agricultural labor, continuing until 1896, when he removed to the city of Darlington, Lafayette Co., where he has since resided.

On March 14, 1854, Mr. Palmer was married to Miss Catherine McCoy, who was born in Nova Scotia May 3, 1835. Her father, Duncan McCoy, was a native of Scotland, where he grew to manhood and married Barford McClellan, and emigrated to Nova Scotia, thence to Canada, and later to Lafayette county, Wis., about 1841, settling on a farm in the town of Willow Springs, where they passed their lives. Philip McCoy, brother of Mrs. Palmer, served in the 23d Wis. V. I., in the Civil war, and although his term of service lasted three years, and included participation in twenty-five battles, he was not injured, and now lives in Missouri. To Mr. and Mrs. Palmer six children have been born, four of whom are living: Dr. Charles, a dentist; Joseph; Mrs. Frank McConnell; Mrs. Mary Smith, of this county; Philip, deceased in infancy; and Allie, who married and died at the age of twenty-six. Mr. Palmer was a faithful soldier in the Civil war, and his wounded arm entitles him to the grateful esteem of the generation which enjoys the prosperity and peace won. In his pleasant home, where comfort surrounds him, he can pass the remainder of his days, satisfied that upon the roll of honor will ever appear his name as one who has suffered for the good of his beloved country.

CHARLES KEMP, a prosperous and highly respected farmer of the town of Bradford, Rock county, has made his way to his present comfortable position in life through hindrances that would have proved insurmountable, save to the most daring and persevering natures.

William Kemp, grandfather of Charles, was a citizen of West Kent, England, and followed the occupation of lime burner. He was the father of ten children, and died in 1830, when about seventy-five years old. William Kemp, his eldest son, was born in Bethersden, England, Nov. 30, 1785. About 1814 he married and moved to Biddenden, in the same county. He served in the militia five years, and in 1830 entered the employ of Capt. Cook Tilden Patterson, a wealthy land owner, continuing in his service until 1872. He died in July, 1874, held in the very deepest respect and esteem by all who knew him. Rev. W. T. Patterson, the eldest son of the family to whom his services had been so long rendered, asked and obtained permission to mingle with the family and follow to the grave the remains of the family's faithful friend. Mr. Kemp became a member of the Church of England in 1831, and for many years was an active worker in the cause of Christianity. He married Mrs. Lydia Miles, widow of John Miles, a British soldier. Her family name was Walker. She bore William Kemp four sons and five daughters, only three of whom are now living: Stephen, at Fort Atkinson, Wis., who was born Aug. 29, 1821; Charles, our subject; and Jesse, who was born April 11, 1831, and is now living at Cranbrook, County Kent, England.

Charles Kemp was born at Biddenden, England, Aug. 20, 1826. He left school when he was only nine years of age, to work on the farm at six cents per day. He continued as a farm laborer in England until 1851, and started for the United States on the day of the opening of the World's Fair at London. He landed in the city of New York, June third, and made his way to Utica in that State, reaching there with less than two dollars in his pocket. He spent some five years in that part of New York, and was married there Feb. 26, 1856. Shortly after this the young couple moved to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Oakland, Jefferson county, where they lived four years. Mr. Kemp worked as a farm hand, and his wife also went out to do housework for the neighboring farmers' wives. In 1860 they moved into Harmony township, where Mr. Kemp rented a farm and was engaged in its cultivation two years. He was on a rented farm three years in Jefferson county, and again located in Harmony township, Rock county, and then spent four years each in La Prairie and Janesville. Harmony became his home once more, thence he moved to Johnstown, after which he bought land and settled down on his present handsome place in Bradford township. Here he has secured himself a fine farm of 220 acres, furnished with ample improvements, and thoroughly up to date in every respect. As the story of early privation is recalled, and the difficulties through which this man and his noble wife have passed, the reflection cannot be avoided that they have shown the mark of nature's nobility in the struggle they have made, and the victory they have won.

Mrs. Charles Kemp, born Mary Goodson, is a daughter of William and Esther (Cook) Goodson, who came from England in 1828. They landed in New York where her father narrowly escaped drowning in the harbor. The husband, wife and three children—the oldest four years and the youngest six months of age—went to Utica, N. Y. Here the father left his family with one English shilling to support them for four days while he sought and found work as a farm hand, walking to Marshall, twelve miles away. He continued this work until he had sufficient means to remove his family and set up housekeeping in that town, where for seven years he was employed by a Mr. Barton. He then began work for himself by cultivating land on shares. He did well, and his employer loaned him the money with which to purchase fifty acres of land in Oneida county, N. Y. In 1856 he came west to Wisconsin, and settled in the town of Harmony, Rock county, where he had his home many years. He lived subsequently in the town of Footville, in the same county, making his home for twenty years with his two daughters, and died in Janesville at the age of eighty-eight. His wife died Sept. 22, 1873, when seventy-two years old. They were honest and industrious people, and are highly spoken of by those who knew them in pioneer times.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kemp are the parents of eight children. Josephine, Henry Thomas, Henrietta, Esther, Emory William, Philo H., Zada and Charles I. Henrietta died when a young child. Emory is married and is engaged in farming in the town of Harmony; he has two children. Josephine married William Lamb, a farmer in the town of Johnstown, and has one daughter, Marietta. Philo H. married Miss Susan Jones, and lives in the town of Bradford, where he follows blacksmithing. Zada married C. H. Hackwell, a farmer in the town of Bradford. Charles Kemp belongs to the Methodist Church, of which he and his family are old-time supporters.

CHARLES LEE, a successful and much respected miner of the town of Benton, Lafayette county, was born in County Cavan, Ireland, in 1835, and is a son of John and Margaret (Carty) Lee, both natives of this same County Cavan, where they were married. In 1849 they emigrated to America, crossing the ocean in a sailing-vessel, landing in New Orleans. There John Lee was stricken with cholera, and died, leaving a widow and their seven children alone in a strange country. After burying the husband and father, the mother brought her family up the river to Galena, Ill., and then located at Benton, Wis., commencing life in a new country with a houseful of small children; she passed away about twenty years ago. Her children were: (1) Mary, the wife of Patrick Karl, lives in Minnesota. (2) Margaret, unmarried, lives in Denver, Colo. (3) Catherine died in New Orleans at the time of her father's death. (4) Annie, the wife of James Corcoran (deceased), of Aurora, Ill., and the mother of one daughter, Margaret. (5) John, born in Ireland, was reared in Benton, and enlisted in the regular army, serving three years, and when last heard from was connected with a railroad in Illinois. (6) Bernard died in Benton when a young man. (7) Charles.

Charles Lee had just begun attending the local school when his parents decided to come to America. After the family reached Benton, Wis., he worked in the old American hotel at Galena, Ill., and his wages were added to the family funds. When a little older he became a miner, and was working in that capacity when the war broke out. In August, 1862, Mr. Lee enlisted as a member of Company C, 33d Wis. V. I., under the command of Col. J. B. Moore, and Captain Gurley. The regiment was sent to Memphis, and engaged the rebel forces of General Price on many different fields of battle. In the spring of 1863 it was a part of the invading army thrown around Vicksburg. At Haines Bluff it was in battle with the army of General Hood, and after him with General Forest. The regiment was part of the command of General Banks, on the Red River, and was then sent to Mobile, where it was marched through the State of Alabama. Mr. Lee was steadily with his regiment until the close of the war, with the exception of necessary but short absence caused by a wound received from a minie ball at Vicksburg. He was mustered out at Vicksburg in August, 1865, and formally discharged at Madison, where the entire regiment was highly complimented by the Governor of the State for faithful service during their long term of duty. Mr. Lee at once resumed his mining work at Benton, and closely followed it until 1879, when he took up a farm in Lincoln county, Kansas, where he remained eight years, securing title to a quarter-section of valuable land. This he sold at a very satisfactory figure, and came back to Wisconsin again to take up a miner's life in Benton. This he has continued to the present time, with much success.

In July, 1893, Mr. Lee was married to Miss Mary McGuire, of Lafayette county, the daughter of James and Fannie McGuire, pioneer people of the county. They were born in Ireland, and came to the town of Benton as early as 1849, where they spent their lives. Mrs. Lee was born in Lafayette county, and is the only member of her family now living. They have one daughter, Margaret E., who was born Sept. 7, 1896. In 1896 Mr. Lee put up his present home, which is one of the modern and attractive residences of the town. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lee are members of the Catholic Church. In politics Mr. Lee has always been identified with the Republican party, and has served on the village board. Mr. Lee began life as a poor boy, giving his small wages to his mother for the common good of the family. As a soldier he made an enviable reputation; and as a citizen he is respected for his honest worth and manly character. His home is a model of beauty, and is the result of his work and management.

CHARLES OLIVER, a well-established real-estate dealer and tradesman of Beloit, Rock county, conducts a wholesale cigar business in that city, manufactures his own goods, and has a continually increasing patronage, not only because of the excellent grade of his goods, but also because of his genial manner and courteous treatment of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Oliver was born in Beloit Feb. 23, 1859, a son of Washington and Louisa (Mayo) Oliver, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and reared in Ohio. The mother was born in Maine, and died in Beloit May 16, 1900. They were the parents of thirteen children, of whom are now living: Nora;

Addie; Charles; Stephen, of South Dakota; Benjamin A., local manager of the Beloit Telephone Co.; George, of Beloit; Laura, wife of Truman S. Morgan, of Pittsburg, Penn.; Minnie, wife of E. R. Newton, of Beloit; and Gertrude. Washington Oliver, who was a carpenter and contractor, came West to Beloit in 1847, and here he has followed his trade many years, and is well known as an honest and reliable man. For the past ten years he has not been actively engaged in business, the infirmities of advancing age compelling him to relinquish many pursuits to which he has been enthusiastically devoted all his life. He has lived an active out-of-door life, and it is not easy for him to give it up. In religion he is a Methodist, as was also his wife. His father, Stephen Oliver, was born in Pennsylvania, of Irish parents, and was a sea captain. In middle life he left the ocean, and went into trade as a merchant. He turned to contracting, and when quite advanced in years became a gold miner, crossing the plains twice to California, in 1849 and in 1852. On the second trip he was killed by the Indians. He was a man of prominence in the East, having held several important offices in Madison and Cleveland, Ohio. His family consisted of eight children. The maternal grandfather of Charles Oliver, Jacob Mayo, was a native of Maine, and a fisherman on the coast. He came to Beloit when the country was very new, and lived there some years, making numerous trips to the North, where he worked in the lumber woods. He became a trader with the Indians, and was prospering when he met an untimely death in middle life, freezing to death while on a trading expedition into the northern part of the State. He had a large family. One of his sons, Alfred H. Mayo, went to Alaska in 1872, with a partner, Jack McQuestion, and they have been in business there until the present time. Mr. Mayo is now in Beloit, on a visit, and will return to Alaska in the spring, 1901. He was one of the three men who opened up the gold field of that country.

Charles Oliver was born and reared in Beloit, and that city has always been his home. He attended the public schools until he was fourteen, when he began to learn the trade of a cigar maker. For about eight years Mr. Oliver was a journeyman cigar maker, until he started in business for himself, in which he has been so successful that he now employs usually about eleven hands, and, in case of a "rush," has called for considerable additional help. Our subject is also engaged in the real-estate and renting business, buying and selling city property, renting business blocks and dwellings, and is himself the owner of a business block in Beloit.

The marriage of Charles Oliver and Miss Kate Flint was celebrated Sept. 2, 1885, and two daughters were born of this union, Grace L. and Flossie May. Mrs. Oliver, who was a daughter of Perry and Abbie Flint, died March 12, 1890, and is remembered as a loving wife and a kind and faithful mother. The family live at 783 Brook street. Mr. Oliver is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Fraternal Alliance. Politically he is a Democrat.

JOSEPH M. BURTON, although but newly located in Cassville township, Grant county, is well known in this locality, and is now cultivating a fine farm of 160 acres. During the war of the Rebellion he served his country bravely, and he is now an honored member of the G. A. R. post at Lancaster, Wisconsin.

Joseph M. Burton was born Feb. 14, 1843, in Vermont, a son of Ben and Nancy (Peck) Burton, also natives of Vermont, who came when our subject was but a year old to Bloomington township, took up government land, which they improved, and always followed farming as an occupation. The father died during the war, but the mother survived him and resided until her death, in 1876, on the old homestead. They were the parents of the following children: James R., enlisted at Bloomington, in 1862, in the 33d Wis. V. I., now resides in Glen Haven; William, who resides at Battle Creek, Iowa; Margaret, now Mrs. Handy, of Mt. Hope; Jane E. died in Bloomington township; Jacob lives in California; Frank also resides in California; and Joseph M.

Joseph M. Burton was reared and educated in Bloomington township, and always followed farming as a calling. In 1863, at the call of duty, he enlisted in Grant county, town of Bloomington, in Company D, 33d Wis. V. I., for three years, being mustered into service at Madison, and assigned to the 16th Army Corps, participating in the battles of Nashville, Montgomery, Kenesaw Mountain and Spanish Fort. During his term of service Mr. Burton received an injury from a piece of shell, from which he has never fully recovered, and he was honorably discharged in 1866, and returned to Bloomington township.

Mr. Burton was married to Miss Jane Weeks, who was born in Bloomington township, daughter of James and Martha Weeks, pioneers of Glen Haven, both now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Burton five children have been born: George L., born Oct. 4, 1865, died Aug. 15, 1891; Luella, born Jan. 5, 1868, married Mr. F. Read, of Beetown; Elmira, born Nov. 19, 1872, married Mr. Mayne, of Beetown; Cora, born May 1, 1874, married David Peacore, and resides in Dallas, Barron Co., Wis.; and Leslie, born Jan. 1, 1879, is at home, caring for his father and mother. In politics Mr. Burton, the father of these children, is a staunch Republican.

CHESTER L. TUTTLE, a popular liveryman at Clinton, Rock county, is a native of that county, the son and the grandson of its early pioneers. The grandfather, Chauncey Tuttle, was a native of New York State, of Holland Dutch descent. He was a farmer by occupation, and in 1837 migrated to Rock county. He was for many years a deacon in the Baptist Church, reared a large family, and died at Beloit, at the age of seventy-five years.

George M. Tuttle, the father of our subject, was a boy when, in 1837, he was brought to Wisconsin by his parents, and introduced to the wild life of a pioneer home in Turtle township, Rock county. There he grew to manhood and adopted farming as his vocation. He married Miss Lydia Hallock, a native of Canada, daughter of Richard Hallock, a farmer, who died in middle life while crossing the Isthmus of Panama on his way to California, leaving two children by each of his two marriages.

Soon after his marriage George M. Tuttle removed to Minnesota, where he lived two years. Moving to Durand, Wis., he then lived for nine years in Buffalo county, from which he removed to the southern part of the State and lived on his farm of 220 acres in Winnebago county, Ill., near the Wisconsin State line, until, in 1887, he settled at Beloit, his present residence. He was a soldier during the Civil war, serving one year, from 1864 to 1865. Mrs. Tuttle, the wife and mother, died, aged fifty-two years. She was a devout Methodist, of which church her surviving husband is a member. To George M. and Lydia (Hallock) Tuttle were born five children, namely: Chester L., our subject; William F., of Roscoe, Ill.; Eugene, also of Roscoe; Rev. Charles A., a Methodist minister, now located near Fond du Lac, Wis.; and Lillian, who died aged three years.

Chester L. Tuttle was born in Turtle township, Rock county, July 10, 1851, and except for thirteen years has lived in that county. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the district schools and in the public schools of Beloit. Beginning life for himself on a rented farm, he continued farming until 1898, when he purchased his present livery business at Clinton.

He married Dec. 4, 1873, Miss Sarah Reser, daughter of Joseph and Rachel (Adams) Reser, and to them have been born three children, namely: Mary L., George L. and Joseph L. Mary L. is the wife of H. A. Rogers; they live in Clinton township, and have one child, Burdette. George L. and Joseph L. are at home. Mr. Tuttle is a member of Good Samaritan Lodge, No. 135, F. & A. M., and of the Modern Woodmen, and, with his wife, also belongs to the Royal Neighbors. Politically he is a Republican. He has served one year as supervisor, and is one of the active, progressive and successful business men of Clinton.

RANSOM W. EDDEN, M. D., has for nearly a decade been one of the successful medical practitioners of Janesville, Rock county. His family is of English origin. His grandfather, Richard Edden, was the father of five children, and died in New York in middle life, his wife surviving him and passing away in Minnesota. Both were born in England, as was also their son Thomas H., father of our subject, who after his father's death was reared in the family of Peter Antes. The latter is still living in New York State, honored and beloved in his declining years.

Thomas H. Edden was brought to this country by his parents when he was but nine years old, and passed his early years as a farmer's boy. He served a year in Company K, 185th N. Y. V. I., and was wounded in an engagement. On Oct. 2, 1866, he married Mary M. Ransom, of Onondaga county, N. Y., a daughter of Edward Ransom, who in about 1866 settled on a farm some three miles from Janesville, dying there at the age of sixty-four; he left two children. Thomas H. Edden after his removal to Wisconsin engaged in farming near Janesville, and yet owns a farm in the immediate neighborhood of that city, at present making his home in Janesville. He is a Methodist, and his wife a Congregationalist, but difference in creed has never parted them. They have been the parents of seven children, two sons and five daughters, four of whom are yet living, Ransom W., Ida (Mrs. Clifford Akin), Nellie and Frederick.

Dr. Edden was born Feb. 15, 1869, in Rock county. His early educational advantages were on a par with those of most farmers' sons, but a strong impulse led him to believe that his vocation was the practice of medicine, and to attain this he bent every power and faculty of his strong young manhood. Matriculating at Bennett College, Chicago, in 1888, he graduated therefrom in 1891, returning at once to Janesville to begin a career the success of which has attested at once his professional skill and his manly fidelity. Beloved and trusted by his patients, he is also esteemed and honored by his professional brethren. He is a member of the Wisconsin State Eclectic Medical Society, holds the office of treasurer in the Rock County Medical Society, and is connected with the medical staff of the Palmer Memorial Hospital, of which institution he is also treasurer. He also belongs to the Medical Library Association of Chicago. Fraternally he is a Master Mason, in political sentiment a Republican.

In February, 1898, the Doctor married Miss Lottie Ratheram, a daughter of Edward and Sarah (Blay) Ratheram, of Janesville, and in the year of his marriage bought his present home, which is situated at No. 259 South Bluff street. Mrs. Edden is a member of the Baptist Church.

EUGENE W. VAN NORMAN. The commercial interests of the flourishing town of Monticello, Wis., are in the hands of progressive men who vie with each other to render that place a center for Green county. Among those young men who have displayed ability and energy is Eugene W. Van Norman, the subject of this sketch, who is owner and manager of the finely appointed drug store of the town.

Mr. Van Norman was born near Moscow, in Lafayette county, Wis., Oct. 20, 1874, a son of Michael F. and Katherine (Deam) Van Norman, who came to Wisconsin in the early pioneer days. Michael F. Van Norman was born in Luzerne county, Penn., Sept. 19, 1835, a son of Jacob and Mary (Parks) Van Norman, the former born on the Mohawk river, near Philadelphia, Penn., in 1802, a son of Samuel and Phebe Van Norman, natives of Holland, who came to the United States with their parents when very young, settling in Pennsylvania, and died near Scranton, Penn., the father aged ninety-five years, and the mother ninety years.

Jacob Van Norman, the grandfather of our subject, was engaged in the lumber business until forty-five years of age, when he purchased 220 acres of land in Chemung county, N. Y., where he remained until 1854. In that year he sold his land in New York and bought 320 acres in Iowa county, Wis., remaining there until his death, at the age of seventy-eight years. In his political relations he was a Democrat until the war, when he voted for Abraham Lincoln. He was a prominent man and held many local offices. Mrs. Mary (Parks) Van Norman, the grandmother of our subject, died near Sioux City, at the home of her son Jacob, when she was aged eighty-four years. She was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Parks, who came from Newfoundland to the United States and located first in Luzerne county, Penn., where the father died at the age of one hundred, and the mother at seventy-three. Samuel Van Norman, our subject's great-grandfather, was a soldier in the war of 1812, for which service he afterward drew a pension. The family were noted for their longevity. Jacob and Mary (Parks) Van Norman were members of the Methodist Church for many years, he being very active in church and Sunday-school work. They were the parents of nine children, seven of whom are living, two engaged in farming, one in the ministry, and the rest, including our subject's father, in the stock business. Three of the sons were soldiers in the war of the Rebellion.

Michael F. Van Norman remained at home until twenty-one years of age, attending the district school in winter, working his father's farm in summer, and, to gratify his ambition for learning, studying at home. He was afterward employed in teaching during winters, and attended the Evansville College, Evansville, Wis., one term. Being then in his twenty-third year, and in poor health, he went overland to Kansas, and engaged in teaming for the Pike's Peak Express Co. While there he drove four mules to a coach that hauled the famous Horace Greeley from Manhattan to Fort Riley, when on his overland trip to California. In 1860 Mr. Van Norman returned to Iowa county, Wis., rented a farm, and, as the State banks nearly all failed, and what money he had saved for this occasion was State bank currency, worth from ten to forty cents on the dollar, he was obliged to go in debt for everything he bought. He remained there until the outbreak of the war, when, in July, 1862, he joined Company E, 31st Wis. V. I., under Capt. Mason. He served until the close of hostilities, was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., and was discharged at Madison, Wis. At Atlanta, Ga., July 24, 1864, he was wounded, and remained in the hospital four days, when he obtained transportation home, and returned to his regiment about thirty days later. He was in the Division Commissary Department, and on detached service at Smoky Swamp, S. C., and marched through to Washington, by way of Richmond, with the 20th Army Corps. After the close of the war he returned home, rented a farm of 330 acres for six years, then bought 100 acres in Primrose township, Dane Co., Wis. Five years later he rented his farm, moved to Middleton, same county, and remained there about seventeen years. While there he was engaged in the stock business, owning some of the finest bred animals in the country. He was also the owner of a 215-acre farm in Middleton. He moved from this town to Milwaukee, to engage in the live stock commission business with his brother, George B. On account of his health he was obliged to leave Milwaukee, and then went on the road soliciting for the firm, making many trips to the far West every year. His family removed to Madison in 1897, where they now reside. In his political relations he has been a Republican since President Lincoln's first term, but generally votes for the best man. He is a member of the G. A. R. and the I. O. O. F. To Michael F. and Katherine (Deam)

Van Norman were born five children: Ida, who was drowned at Mt. Vernon, Wis., at the age of sixteen; Etta M., wife of H. J. Whalen, a commission merchant of Milwaukee; Eugene W., our subject; George W., who is with his uncle, George B. Van Norman, in Chicago, engaged in the live stock commission business; and Paul, who attends the Madison high school. Mrs. Katherine (Deam) Van Norman was born in Bradford county, Penn., July 31, 1837, a daughter of Henry H. and Elizabeth (Ettleman) Deam, also natives of that State, and of German descent. Mr. Deam died at the old home in Iowa county, Wis., at the age of forty-four, and his wife passed away at Plano, Ill., at the age of sixty years.

Eugene W. Van Norman was reared at Middleton, Dane county. His educational advantages were excellent, as his primary education in the common schools was supplemented by a course in high school, from which he was graduated in 1890, then entering the Wisconsin Academy, at Madison, in which institution he took a two-years course. This was followed by two years in the pharmaceutical department of the State University. In August, 1897, he came to Monticello, Green county, and bought out the drug business of E. J. Fischer, since which time he has been successfully engaged in that line. Mr. Van Norman has a neatly appointed store, carries a large stock of drugs, medicines, toilet articles, paints, and supplies usually found in the establishments of first-class druggists.

Mr. Van Norman is a member of the Green County Retail Druggists Association, also of the Wisconsin Pharmaceutical Association. He is personally popular, and during his sojourn at the university was president of his class, and also captain of the base-ball team. In politics he is a Republican, but does not force his views on any one, being peculiarly fitted for a business life by the possession of that tact which attracts all classes. His energy and ability are recognized, and the citizens of Monticello have complete confidence in him as a pharmacist.

HIRAM L. DAVY. The rule that adversity in youth brings success in manhood, finds a fitting example in the career of Hiram L. Davy, road contractor and farmer of Milton, Rock county. The father died when Hiram was a child, shortly after the family had moved to Rock county from Canada. The widow and her young children then settled in Milton, and there, through sturdy effort, the boys grew to lives of usefulness and influence.

Our subject was born in Canada Feb. 7, 1858, son of Thaddeus Lewis and Charlotte (Adams) Davy, both natives of Canada. The paternal grandfather, Michael Davy, was a Methodist minister, a Canadian by birth and of English ancestry. He reared a large family and died at Beloit, Wis., in 1881, aged eighty years. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Hiram Adams, was also a native of Canada, of English lineage. He was a lumber merchant, engaged especially in getting out masts for ships under the Queen's orders. He was born in 1800, reared a large family, and died at Chicago in 1880.

Thaddeus L. Davy, the father of our subject, acquired the trade of a carpenter and joiner, which he followed for a number of years in Canada. In the fall of 1864 he came to Rock county, locating south of Janesville, and in 1865 he removed to Rock Prairie, in Harmony township, where he died Aug. 26, 1865, aged thirty-seven years. His widow still survives, making her home with her children. Both were Methodists. Of their eight children, five are now living: Samuel, Orrin, Hiram L., and John and Ezra (twins).

Hiram L. Davy was six years old when brought by his parents to Rock county. Shortly after his father's death the mother moved with her family to Milton, where he has ever since remained. Hiram attended the district and village schools, and when about eighteen he acquired the carpenter's trade, which he followed for eight or ten years, engaging also in contract work. He then followed the livery business for a time, after which he engaged in farming on a tract of forty acres which he purchased in Milton township. This he afterward sold and bought eighty acres in wood, which he still owns. His present residence in Milton he purchased in 1897.

Mr. Davy married Sept. 22, 1886, Miss Mary L. Winch, daughter of Jeremiah and Fannie M. (Montgomery) Winch. Her mother was born in New York State, daughter of John Montgomery, who settled in Rock county in 1849, rearing a large family and living to an advanced age. Jeremiah Winch was born in New Hampshire in 1809, and when a young man came west as a soldier in the Black Hawk war. He was an early settler in Rock county, where he followed farming until his death, May 30, 1868, aged fifty-eight years and nine months. His wife died on Aug. 17, 1895, having almost attained her seventy-ninth birthday. Both were members of the Methodist Church. They had four children, Wesley, of Milton Junction; George, of Lima township, Rock county; Charles, of Fort Atkinson, Wis.; and Mary L., wife of our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Davy have one daughter, Alice May. They are active members of the Methodist Church. In politics Mr. Davy is a Republican. He is one of the enterprising and successful citizens of Milton, and is held in high esteem by all who know him.

SAM. P. BROWN, present deputy sheriff of Rock county, has been a resident of Janesville since 1895. He is a man of ready resources, alert in action, and resolute in the performance of his duty. He has won high standing as an officer of justice in southern Wisconsin, and evil doers have learned to dread his name.

Mr. Brown was born in Grant county, Mo., June 28, 1874. His parents, John and Lovina (Cadle) Brown, were natives of Kentucky and Missouri, respectively. They had six children, all but one now living: Sarah, the wife of E. G. Gibson, of Marshalltown, Iowa; Sam. P., whose name introduces this article; Alice, the wife of E. D. Vandewalke, of Creston, Iowa; Albert, of Janesville; and Grace, of Creston, Iowa. John Brown was a farmer nearly all his life. He moved from Kentucky to Grant City, and lived there fourteen years, thence removing to Creston, Iowa, where he has lived for the past eighteen years. For a number of years he kept a hotel in Creston. He is a man of genial manners and upright character. In religion he and his wife are Methodists. His father, Preston Brown, was a native of Kentucky, and died in that State about 1875, at an advanced age. He had seven sons. He was a soldier in the Confederate army, serving throughout the war. The father of Mrs. Lovina (Cadle) Brown was a native of Missouri, a farmer, and died in middle life. He had a family of three daughters and two sons.

Sam. P. Brown had reached the age of nine years before his parents left Grant City. He attended school in that place and in Creston, where he grew to manhood. When he struck out in life for himself his first move was to go West, and he secured work on a cattle ranch at Hermosa, S. Dak. He had a bold and adventurous spirit, and the active outdoor life pleased him well. Four years later, however, he returned to Creston, taking a position as clerk in a wholesale grocery store, and was in the employ of the firm two years; he was doing well, but the close confinement proved irksome. In February, 1895, he had charge of trotting horses in Janesville, and worked with them for the season. His personal characteristics made him many friends, and Sheriff Appleby made him his deputy that fall. He held the same position with Sheriff Acheson, and is now serving his third term with Sheriff Appleby (who has been re-elected), proving a capable officer.

On April 1, 1899, Mr. Brown married Miss Grace Acheson, a daughter of Theodore L. and Jane (Martin) Acheson, of Janesville. Mr. Brown is a Republican in political sentiment.

OSCAR R. OLSON holds a conspicuous place among the thrifty and prosperous young farmers of Green county, where his good sense, kindly disposition and industrious habits have won him many friends and made him a useful and honored citizen of his county. He was born March 24, 1869, a son of Rollin and Mary (Peterson) Olson, both of whom were born in Norway. They came to this country in 1845, and were married in Lafayette county, Wis., nine years later. By this marriage they became the parents of the following family: Caroline, the widow of Lars O. Grove, of Jordan township, whose sketch is found elsewhere; Morgan is dead; Clara is the wife of E. B. Tollefson, of South Dakota; Oscar R. will be referred to farther on in this sketch; and William and Henry are both farmers in the town of Jordan.

Rollin Olson was born Nov. 10, 1831, and died in the town of Jordan March 31, 1898, and within these limits of almost seventy years lived an exceedingly active and useful life. In 1861 he enlisted in Company E, 15th Wis. V. I., and served throughout the war with honor and distinction, being first lieutenant at the time of his discharge. He took part in some of the severest battles of the war, and everywhere bore himself gallantly and well. For many years he was one of the leading citizens of the town of Jordan, and at different times was called upon to fill many of the town offices. In 1880 and in 1890 he served as census enumerator, and was always a staunch Republican. In religion he was a member of the Lutheran Church, and his honorable and upright career brought no stain upon his faith. A man of correct and unquestionable character, he was highly esteemed in every relation in which an active and honorable manhood may manifest itself, as citizen, business man, husband and father.

Oscar R. Olson, whose name appears at the introduction of this article, was married to Carrie J. Johnson, Jan. 12, 1897. Mrs. Olson is the daughter of John Johnson, one of the old settlers of the town of York, and has become the mother of two children, Irene (who died in infancy) and Eva (born Jan. 8, 1901). Mrs. Olson was born April 18, 1869, and was one of a family of six children: John, of Green county; Rachel, the wife of John Ordegard, of Buffalo county; Lewis, of Dane county; Carrie; Martin; and Sever, of the town of York.

Mr. Olson was reared on the paternal estate in the town of Jordan, and had his education in the Green county public schools, completing his schooling at the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Ind. For some years he was a successful school teacher in Green county, and in 1892 was elected register of deeds in Green county, serving for six years. Mr. Olson enlisted in Company H, 1st Regiment, Wisconsin National Guard, in 1893, and served through all the grades, and was made regimental adjutant, with the rank of captain, in 1895. This regiment was mustered into the United States service as the 1st Wis. V. I., on the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, and he retained his position as captain and adjutant of that command. This regiment was stationed at Jacksonville, Fla., during the summer of 1898, and there he was promoted to the position of acting adjutant general of the brigade to which his regiment was attached, and served in that office until he was mustered out of service.

Mr. Olson purchased a part of the old J. C. Ula farm in the spring of 1899. This is one of the desirable farms of this section, and consists of 241 acres in section 17, of the town of York, twenty-five miles northwest of Monroe, and three miles northeast of Blanchardville. Mr. Olson is one of the prominent men of the community in which his active and useful life is passing. At the present time he is chairman of the town board. Starting in life without a dollar, he went to Dakota, where he earned his first fifty dollars, which he spent in going to school. In politics Mr. Olson is a staunch Republican, and in religion a member of the Lutheran Church. Personally he is a man of high character, and is devoted to the general welfare of his country and to his family. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being a past grand of Monroe Lodge, No. 72, and is also a member of the Jerry Rusk Garrison, Knights of the Globe, also of Monroe.

FRANK VAN WART, a leading druggist and pharmacist of Beloit, Rock county, was born in the town of Porter, near Evansville, Rock Co., Wis., May 12, 1865, and is a son of David and Anna (Jones) Van Wart, natives of New York and Ohio, respectively. They were the parents of five sons, Frank, Louis, Charles, Don and David.

David Van Wart was only a small boy when he came with his parents to Wisconsin. He grew to manhood near Evansville, and when a young man twice made the journey overland to California. There he had charge of transporting gold from Marysville to San Francisco for the companies in whose employment he was at that time. He remained in the land of gold some four or five years, then returning to Wisconsin, he settled down for several years as keeper of the old Ball tavern, a well-remembered, old-time road house, three miles east of Evansville. Retiring from the tavern, he engaged in farming in the same neighborhood, buying a farm of 200 acres, and after a time eighty acres more. Here he reared his family, and here he and his wife still abide. It is a beautiful place, and a grand location for five growing lads. His wife is a Methodist, and while he has strong religious convictions he has never united himself with any church. He is a Democrat, and has been supervisor and president of the town board several times. Bishop Van Wart, the father of David, was of Holland-Dutch descent, and came from Chautauqua county, N. Y. He was among the very earliest settlers of Rock county, and located on a farm near Evansville, and at one time had charge of the county poor-farm. He lived to be eighty-six years old, and was the father of four sons and two daughters. The maternal grandfather of Frank Van Wart was John Jones. He was born in Wales, and emigrated to this country when a young man. He was for a time located in a Welsh settlement in Ohio, but came to Wisconsin in the early days, and went on a farm in Union township, Rock county. There he spent the balance of his life, and died at the age of eighty-two. He was the father of two sons and three daughters.

Frank Van Wart was reared on the paternal homestead near Evansville. He had a thorough schooling in the public school and in the seminary at Evansville. He was a student of the College of Pharmacy at Chicago, graduating in 1886, with a thorough knowledge of his calling. The next year he came to Beloit and entered the drug store of Ed. Smith. He was also a clerk for Mr. Emerson and Mr. Pollock, and in July, 1895, began business for himself. That month he bought out the drug store of Frank Foster, and has since then been incessant in his efforts to please the public, and to secure as large a share of its trade as honest dealing and genuine goods will command.

Mr. Van Wart and Miss Laura Bangs were married Feb. 18, 1887. Mrs. Van Wart is a daughter of Homer and Anna (Mills) Bangs, and is a most estimable lady. She is the mother of two children, Leona and Theron. The family have a fine home at No. 333 West Bridge street. Mr. Van Wart is a Mason of high degree, holding membership in Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., Chapter No. 9, R. A. M., and Beloit Commandery, No. 6, K. T. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a Democrat, and, while not a politician, takes an intelligent interest in the welfare of his party. Mr. Van Wart represents two families who were among the very earliest settlers of the county.

WILLIAM H. CARPENTER. This gentleman belongs to the firm of Carpenter & Ballard, dealers in grain and coal at Evansville, Rock county, and has long been favorably identified with the business interests of this city.

Mr. Carpenter was born in Hamilton county, near Northville, N. Y., March 22, 1843, and is a son of Allen D. and Mary Ann (Wadsworth) Carpenter, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. Four sons and three daughters were born to them, of whom all but one are now living: John W., of Janesville; Laura E., wife of Nathaniel Ballard, of Evansville; William H.; Mary Ann, the wife of Alexander McKinney, of Evansville; Josiah, of the town of Union, Rock county; Emma J., the wife of Edwin Winter, of Evansville. The father was a millwright, and came to Wisconsin in the 'fifties, locating in the town of Union, two miles east of Evansville, where he lived until he died in 1860, at the age of forty-seven. His widow survived until 1893, and was seventy-seven at the time of her death. They were both Methodists. The paternal grandfather of William H., Allen D. Carpenter, was a native of England, and came to this country, settling in New York, where he died at the age of eighty; he was the father of four children. Josiah Wadsworth, the father of Mary Ann mentioned above, is supposed to have come from Ireland, and settled in Hamilton county, N. Y., where he followed farming, and died there an old man; he was the father of thirteen children.

William H. Carpenter was reared on the paternal acres in Hamilton county until he was eleven years of age. He came to Rock county that year, and here he attained his manhood. He had his education in the district school, and in 1864 he bought a farm of 120 acres, upon which he made many permanent and substantial improvements, and was engaged in its cultivation until 1882. That year he moved into Evansville, and seventeen years later he sold the farm. He was an active and busy man through all these years, and though there is but little of change and adventure in his career, it has been honorable and creditable throughout.

On Jan. 1, 1865, occurred the marriage of William H. Carpenter and Miss Elizabeth Ballard, daughter of Gailus and Sarah (Felt) Ballard. They became the parents of three children, William, Cora and Grace. William died at the age of seven. Cora is at home, and Grace is a student at the Normal School in Milwaukee. Mr. Carpenter belongs to Union Lodge, No. 32, A. F. & A. M., Evansville Chapter, No. 35, R. A. M., and is a staunch and devoted member of the order. He is a Republican, and is highly esteemed by many friends. He lives at No. 232 Church street, Evansville, and has been a resident of the county forty-six years.

WILLIAM W. RILEY, for several years the genial and efficient agent of the American Express Co. at Beloit, Wis., was born at Green River, Vt., April 16, 1870. His parents, William H. and Anna A. (Head) Riley, were natives of New York, and had a family of three children: William W., of Beloit; Franklin H., of Milwaukee; and John Wesley, of Appleton. The father was a farmer boy in New York, and at the outbreak of the Civil war enlisted in the 6th N. Y. Vol. Cav. He served four years and three months at the front, and was seriously wounded several times. He had a bullet wound in the center of his forehead, and a saber thrust through his arm into his left side. He was thrown from his horse in front of a cannon at the premature explosion of the latter, and had his face filled with powder, and was otherwise so seriously injured that he was kept in the hospital for a half year or more. He was in the battle of the Wilderness, and many of the other bloody struggles that marked the history of the Army of the Potomac. When he came back from the war Mr. Riley entered the employment of the Boylston Manufacturing Co., at Green River, Vt., and rose to be the head of the blacksmithing department of their extensive factory. That position he held until 1874, when he went into business for himself at South Norwalk, Conn., as a general worker in iron, at carriage making and manufacturing oyster tongs, and had a regular working force of about eighteen hands. He came West to Milwaukee on account of his wife's health, and died three days later, May 5, 1883, at the age of thirty-five. His wife still survives, and has her home in that city. She married Robert C. Higgs for her second husband, and they have two children, Benjamin and Dean. William Riley, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in County Cavan, Ireland. He studied at Oxford for the Episcopal ministry, but his father disowning him, he married an English girl, and emigrated to Ottawa, Canada, with the intention of practicing law. His health failed him, and he turned to farming, locating near Ogdensburg, N. Y., where he died in middle life during the Civil war, from injuries received by being thrown from a buggy. He was the father of three sons and three daughters. The maternal grandfather of William W. Riley was James Head. He was born in Lincolnshire, England, and was all his life a farmer. He came to this country in 1833, and served in the Civil war. He retired from farming about 1872, and came West to Milwaukee, investing his money in lead mines in the western part of the State. He died in 1889, and his wife in 1896, the mother of thirteen children. They were both born in 1800, within one day of each other.

William W. Riley received his schooling at South Norwalk, Conn., and at the age of thirteen began his life work in Milwaukee as a cash boy in a dry goods store. He was messenger boy for the Western Union Telegraph Co., and held successive clerical positions until 1890. That year he started in as second assistant cashier of the Milwaukee office of the American Express Co. He remained in the Milwaukee office until February, 1896, when he was sent to Beloit to take the agency of the company in that city, and he acted as their competent and trusted representative in Beloit.

Mr. Riley and Miss Gertrude Weaver were married July 8, 1896. Mrs. Riley is the daughter of Thomas and Emma (Callear) Weaver. Mr. and Mrs. Riley are members of the Methodist Church, and are regarded as valuable helpers by the church community. They have a comfortable home at No. 122 E street. Mr. Riley belongs to Morning Star Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., and to Beloit Chapter, No. 9, R. A. M. He is a Republican in political faith.

JOHN LYONS (deceased) was one of the pioneers of southwestern Wisconsin. Born in Manchester, England, on Aug. 15, 1801, his early youth and manhood were spent in the land of his birth, where he was reared to the trade of cotton spinner, and in 1822, selected Mary Johnson, a native of his own city, to be his life companion. In 1832 he came from England to Philadelphia, and it was not until two years later that he came to Grant county, Wisconsin, locating at Potosi or Snake Hollow, as the locality was then named, on account of some local tradition. In 1836 he was joined by the family, consisting of his wife and four daughters, who had remained most of this time in England.

Mr. Lyons engaged in mining and followed this occupation as long as he was able to labor. His death occurred at Potosi, on April 11, 1874, and the wife and mother passed away on Dec. 8, 1873. She was a devoted Christian woman, and in all respects possessed a most lovable character. Like her husband she had been gifted with a most melodious voice, and this has been inherited by several of her children. Three of the four daughters who accompanied her from the English home yet survive, these being: Mrs. Sarah A. Greene, of Potosi; Mrs. Elizabeth L. Davies, of British Hollow, Grant county; and Mrs. Rachel Woodhouse, of Bloomington, Grant county; the eldest, Mrs. Leah Jane Moreing, died in Stockton, Cal., at the home of her son, Cyrus, in 1875. Of the five children born after the family settlement in America Hugh and Abigail died in infancy; Edward and Jervis died in early manhood; while the eldest, John George, who was the first male white child born in Potosi, is still a resident of that place.

John Lyons was a man of much natural ability, and was the possessor of a high sense of honor and of unswerving integrity. In early life he was a consistent member of the Methodist Church but, owing to the position of the local church on the slavery question, he associated himself with the Primitive Methodist Church, and his eloquent voice was often heard against both slavery and intemperance. Not only was he a man of fine presence, but a forceful and fluent orator. Gifted with a tenor voice of remarkable power and sweetness, he used it for the advancement of morality, and in the interests of those who could neither speak nor sing for themselves. Long will his name live in the hearts of the earnest and thoughtful citizens of Grant county.

ASBJORN E. STEENSLAND, a prosperous farmer of the town of Moscow, Iowa county, has been a resident of that town for over forty-seven years, and in that long period has established himself as one of the valuable citizens of this locality.

Mr. Steensland was born in Norway in 1833, son of Erick and Ingeborg Steensland, who brought their family to the United States and to Wisconsin in 1854, settling at once in the town of Moscow, Iowa county, where the family is well represented at this time by our subject and his brother Ole, who is mentioned elsewhere. The family took up their home on the farm now owned and occupied by our subject, and there the father engaged in farming until his death, in November, 1868. The mother survived until September, 1887. Of the large family born to this worthy couple eight grew to maturity and still survive.

Asbjorn E. Steensland was reared and educated in his native land, and has engaged in farming all his active life. In February, 1865, he enlisted in the Union service, becoming a member of Company F, 46th Wis. V. I., which regiment served in Alabama, on detached duty, for the most part engaged in guarding railroads. As a soldier Mr. Steensland faithfully discharged the duties assigned him, and he received an honorable discharge, being mustered out with the rest of his command. He holds membership in G. A. R. Post No. 224, at Blanchardville. He has led an industrious, useful life, and merits the respect in which he is held by his fellow citizens throughout the township, having done his duty in all the relations of life—business, social, public or domestic. He is a staunch Republican in political faith, and takes a deep interest in local affairs; he has served as township treasurer.

Mr. Steensland was married before he entered the army to Miss Melena Storland, like himself a native of Norway, who came to America the same year as he did. Twelve children have blessed their union, five sons and seven daughters: Ingeborg Hegland, wife of a farmer; Ivrene W. Severson, wife of a lumber dealer; Judith; Erik; Iver; Julia; Susan; August; Elmore; Eunice; Mamie; and Ferdinand.

JAMES HUFFMAN is one of the prominent and prosperous farmers of Clarno township, Green county, residing four and one-half miles southwest of Monroe.

Mr. Huffman is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Jones) Huffman, who were natives of Pennsylvania, of German descent, and located in Wisconsin in 1845. They became the parents of eight children: Absalom, deceased; Solomon, deceased; William, deceased; James, our subject, who was born Oct. 19, 1839; Ellen, who married Isaac Miller, and died on the overland route to California in 1862; Christiana, who married John B. Starr, of Iowa; Elizabeth, who married Andrew Hiserote, of Nebraska; and Jacob, of Clarno township. The mother of these died in 1846, and for his second wife Mr. Huffman married Barbara Mowery, two children being born of this union: Daniel, of Nebraska; and Mary, who married E. Barnes, also of Nebraska.

James Huffman came to Wisconsin with his parents when he was but six years of age, and received his education in the rural free schools, which were then held in log cabins. He was poor in purse, but he possessed energy and hope. On Oct. 21, 1858, he married Mary E. Downs, of Green county, daughter of Jesse and Malinda (De Long) Downs, who were among the early settlers of the county, coming here from Coshocton county, Ohio, in 1845. They died while Mrs. Huffman was a child, she being reared by her grandmother, Mrs. Susanna De Long. For some time after marriage our subject and his wife resided in a log cabin 18x16 feet, floored with slabs, and covered with boards that were held by logs being laid on them, but peace, health and happiness filled the cabin, and now this worthy couple own one of the fine farms and substantial residences of Clarno township. Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Huffman: Emma E.; Albert, deceased; James, a resident of Chicago; Anna, deceased; Alva S., a resident of Clarno township; Minnie, who married Arthur Gilmore, and lives in Cadiz township; Jacob C., who married Nellie E. Meachner, now deceased; and Lizzie, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Huffman have six grandchildren, all boys, two of whom have reached manhood. In 1862 Mr. Huffman made the overland trip to California with a team, returning in 1863, and in 1865 migrated to Iowa with his family, in 1871 returning again to Green county, where he has since resided. He is the owner of 160 acres of fine farming land, and also twenty acres of orange land in Florida. Although he has become a successful and prosperous man, Mr. Huffman still enjoys looking after his interests. For seventeen years he conducted a dairy business in connection with his farming, and now takes great pride in his fine Shorthorn cattle.

In politics Mr. Huffman is a staunch Democrat, in which faith he was reared, and he has been called upon to serve in many of the local town offices, having been school director, clerk and township assessor, which positions he filled to the entire satisfaction of the community. Both he and his wife have been consistent members of the U. B. Church for twenty-five years, living exemplary Christian lives, and esteemed by the whole neighborhood.

JOHN LEGLER, one of the respected and leading business men of Green county, a dealer in live stock, grain, lumber and coal at Juda, has not only made for himself a fine reputation as a business man, but has accumulated a very comfortable competence by the exercise of those natural endowments of a clear-sighted and practical mind, an honest disposition, and industrious habits, that win success anywhere.

Mr. Legler is a son of David and Elizabeth Legler, of Green county, Wis., who came from Switzerland in 1847, and settled in the northern part of Green county, in company with a large colony of their compatriots. The father took up government land, and made a farm in the wilderness, where he lived and died. Of his sixteen children, seven were born to his first marriage, with Barbara Legler. But two of these survive: Andrew, of Green county, Wis.; and David, who is a farmer in Nebraska. The others died in childhood. Of the children by his second wife the following survived to maturity: John, whose name appears above; Jacob, who is clerk in a lumber yard in Green county; Fredolin, a farmer in Iowa; and Elizabeth, wife of Peter Classy, of New Glarus, Wis. The others died in infancy. David Legler died in 1887, at the age of eighty-four.

John Legler was born April 5, 1852, and on March 2, 1871, married Miss Mary Blumer, of Green county, Wis., a daughter of John and Mary Blumer, of that county. They have had four children: Elizabeth, born in 1873, wife of Albert Babler, of Monticello, Wis.; John L., born in 1879, in business with his father; Wilma K., born Feb. 13, 1884, now a student at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis.; and Mary, who died in infancy.

John Legler began life as a farmer's boy, with somewhat limited educational advantages. His entire schooling was not more than a year in all, but he has had the teaching of experience, and is a keen, observant character. When he married he started out in life a poor man, and followed farming until he was thirty-five years of age. At that age he gave up farming and came to Juda to engage in his present business. Mr. Legler has become very well-to-do, and is one of the leading men of the village.

Mr. Legler is a staunch Prohibitionist, and attended the national convention of that party which was held in Chicago in July, 1900. He belongs to the Good Templars. He has served as town chairman and school director. Mr. Legler is a man of fine mind, clear views, and takes a strong interest in everything that relates to the general good of the community. His genial nature and accommodating spirit have made him many friends.

PATRICK GRANT, at present (1900) the register of deeds of Iowa county, and a man held in high repute for both ability and integrity, was born in Ireland, but has made his home in southern Wisconsin since his boyhood, in fact for half a century. His father, Thomas Grant, was born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, about 1815, and emigrated to America in the spring of 1850, bringing with him his wife, Johanna, and his three sons, Patrick, John and David. The objective point of the family was the mining lands of Iowa county, and thither they proceeded immediately after disembarking at Montreal. The voyage across the Atlantic was made in a sailing vessel to Quebec, and thence they proceeded by steamer to the historic city, whence they started on their westward journey. Nearly eight weeks were spent on the sea, and it may be readily believed that when their wanderings ceased, on reaching the village of Highland, the hearts of all were joyful. The elder Grant at once began work in the mines, but the tales of vast wealth, to be had with little labor, in California, allured him to the Pacific coast in 1852. He remained there for three years, when he returned to his home and family in Wisconsin. He died in 1874, at the age of about sixty years, happy in the love of his family and the sincere respect of the community. His widow survived him until Oct. 5, 1889, when she, too, passed away, at the home of her son, Patrick, who, with his faithful wife, had devotedly and tenderly ministered to her in her declining years. Patrick was the first born son.

John, the second, went from Highland to Illinois in 1860, and thence to Missouri, where he began the life of a steamboatman on the lower Mississippi. Being in the Confederacy at the outbreak of the Civil war, he was drafted into the Southern military service much against his wish. He availed himself of the earliest opportunity which offered to escape into the Northern lines, and passed the latter years of his life in the territory of Wyoming, dying there about 1888. David, the youngest of the three sons of Thomas Grant, was a blacksmith by trade, and settled at Dubuque, Iowa, where he died in 1895.

Patrick Grant was a boy of twelve when he crossed the ocean with his parents. He grew to mature years in Highland, and in early manhood married Elizabeth Gunn, whose parents, John and Mary Gunn, were, like his own, emigrants from Ireland. Their earliest homes in America, however, were in the States of New Hampshire and New York, and the family settled in Highland about 1848. Mrs. Grant is the youngest of a family of four children, the others being James, William and Isabel, of whom William died in Idaho in 1899; James served through the war for the Union as captain of Company G, 27th Wis. V. I., and since quitting the service he has resided in various localities, in 1896 being elected to Congress from Idaho, and still has his home in Washington, D. C.; Isabel married William Bambrick, of West Virginia, who subsequently removed to Georgetown, Col., where he died, and her present home is at Haley, Idaho. Mr. Gunn, Sr., died in 1860, and his wife on Sept. 24, 1889. To Mr. Patrick Grant and his wife nine children have been born, five of whom are yet living. Isabel, the eldest, is a stenographer, and is employed in Milwaukee; Delia is her father's deputy in the register's office; Grace and Elmer live at home; William, John and Thomas died in childhood, or early youth.

No public man in Iowa county enjoys a more enviable reputation than does the present register of deeds, who is now serving his second term in that office, his name being a synonym for incorruptible integrity. Prior to his elevation to this post he had held other positions of honor and trust, among them being those of chairman of the board of supervisors, town treasurer and member of the school board. Prior to 1884 Mr. Grant was a Democrat, but in that year cast his vote for James G. Blaine and the Republican ticket, and since then has affiliated with the Republican party. In religious creed he is a devout Catholic, his life being a practical exemplification of the vital power of the faith which he professes.

DR. CARL STEIGER, physician and surgeon at Monroe, Green county, has a sound and thorough medical education obtained at the best European schools, and is one of the most progressive, cultured and capable practitioners of medicine to be found in the Northwest.

Dr. Steiger was born in Zurich, Switzerland, Feb. 12, 1861, and is the only child of John Carl and Amelia (Grohs) Steiger, both natives of Switzerland. The senior Steiger began the study of medicine when he was a young man, but broke off his medical work to take up the business of a tradesman for several years, returning, however, to the practice of medicine. He was a great traveler, and followed his profession in India and in Spain. He served in the regular army in Switzerland. His death occurred in 1886, at the age of fifty-six. His wife died when she was in her nineteenth year, leaving her son then only seven months old. Peter Steiger, the father of John Carl, was in early life a clergyman, being called from the pulpit to enter civil life, and became the governor of the canton of St. Gallen, and for the rest of his years he was a public character, in the service of the republic. He had three sons and one daughter, and lived to be sixty years old. Johann Grohs, the father of Amelia, was a native of Switzerland, and was a hotel-keeper in Zurich, and reached the venerable age of ninety-two. Amelia was his only child.

Dr. Carl Steiger, left a motherless child when a mere infant, was taken into the home of his maternal grandfather, and kept there until he reached the age of six years. At that age he was taken to Marthalen, Switzerland, to another home, and sent to the public school until he reached his twelfth year. Then the young lad, as the custom was, entered the gymnasium at Winterthur, where he studied for seven years. He went to the academy at Lausanne, and took up the study of medicine. He was in the academy three years, and then matriculating at the University of Munich, spent two and a half years in its medical department, receiving his diploma in 1887. It represented long and laborious years, and his standing in the university secured him the appointment of assistant physician in the Munich city hospital the same year. In 1888 he came to this country, and on June 15, that year, he located in Monroe, Wis., immediately engaging in practice as a general physician. He is an able and careful practitioner, understands his profession as closely as a hard-working and observant student can, and is regarded as a reliable and successful physician. His office is located on East Russell street, half a block from the court-house square.

Dr. Steiger and Miss Belle Linder, the daughter of John and Lydia (George) Linder, were married May 27, 1889. The Doctor has had three children born to him, Carl, Max and Huldah. Carl died when eleven months old. Dr. Steiger belongs to Concordia Lodge, No. 174, of the German Odd Fellows, the Germania Wisconsin G. U. G., a mutual life insurance fraternity, the A. O. U. W., and the Monroe Turnverein. He is a genial and popular gentleman.

WILLIAM CLARNO, who offered himself a willing sacrifice to his country in her hour of peril, is now living retired at his comfortable home in Browntown, Green county. In the dark days of 1862 he volunteered in the Union army, becoming a member of Company C, 3d Wis. V. I., under Capt. Flood, and took part in many of the hard fought battles of the war. His first enlistment dates from March 11, 1862, and was for three years' service, at the end of which time he re-enlisted, and was transferred to the Western Army. He participated in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Chancellorsville, Antietam, Gettysburg, Buzzard Roost, Resaca, Dallas and Lost Mountain. In the last named battle Mr. Clarno saw his last service, as he was wounded by a minie ball June 16, 1864, which caused the amputation of his right leg. He received an honorable discharge, and returned home July 26, 1865, and now draws a disability pension from the government for his gallant service.

Mr. Clarno was born July 6, 1841, in Clarno township, Green county, son of Andrew and Mary (St. John) Clarno, and received his education in the little log school-houses of that day. After his return from the war he studied dentistry, and followed the practice of that profession some eleven years, but his health had been undermined by his long service in the army, and he was unable to stand the strain of indoor life, so he engaged in the well drilling business, continuing in same for sixteen years. In 1882 he removed to Browntown and has since lived retired. He has taken an active part in politics, and has been a member of the village board. Since 1876 he has supported the Democratic party.

On August 8, 1868, Mr. Clarno was married to Miss Elizabeth Peregoy, who was born in 1849, daughter of John and Susan Peregoy, old settlers of Monroe, Wis. This marriage has been blessed with seven children, of whom the following is a brief record: Emma, born May 5, 1870, married Edward Phillips, who died Jan. 31, 1901, leaving his widow with six children; William, Jr., born Feb. 13, 1872, now residing in South Wayne, Lafayette Co., Wis., married Miss Annie Tyler, of Winslow, Ill.; Stella, born Oct. 10, 1873, is the wife of Carl Larson, of Browntown; Susan, born Sept. 16, 1875, married Charles Tucker, of South Wayne, Wis.; Jeanette, born March 11, 1877, died in infancy; Libbie, born Feb. 20, 1879, died in childhood; and Jessie, born Aug. 30, 1887, is at home.

Mr. Clarno comes of one of the early settled families of Wisconsin. His father, Andrew Clarno, was born in Sangamon county, Ill., in 1813, of German origin, his father, John Clarno, being one of the pioneers of Illinois. Andrew Clarno was married in Stephenson county, Ill., to Mary St. John, and became the father of six children: Mary Jane, Robert (a bachelor of Monroe, Wis.), William (our subject), Valentine (now of Hamilton county, Neb., was a soldier in Company C, 3d Wis. V. I., in the Civil war), Andrew (also a soldier in the 5th Battery, Wis. Light Artillery, and died of illness while in the service), and Augustus. Andrew Clarno, the father of William Clarno, was killed by a runaway team July 10, 1852, in Clarno, and his wife died June 10, 1897.

Anderson St. John, father of Mrs. Mary (St. John) Clarno, and grandfather of William Clarno, was a native of France, who early located in Kentucky, whence he removed to Sangamon county, Ill. He was a typical pioneer, bold, fearless and trustworthy. He had taken part in the Revolutionary war, the war of 1812, and in the Black Hawk war, besides many of the skirmishes with the red men so common to life on the frontier. He and his wife, Nancy, were the parents of the following children: Martin, of Dane county, Wis.; John, Matthew, William, Charlotte, Melinda, Lucy and Mary. Mr. St. John died near Orangeville, Illinois.

FRED DIVALL, a retired and honored farmer and resident of Lancaster, Grant county, where, with his wife, he has made his home since April 27, 1855, was born on the South Downs, in the county of Sussex, England, Jan. 11, 1830, and is a son of John and Lucy (Haler) Divall, natives of the same county, where they passed their lives on a farm. They were the parents of five sons and five daughters, of whom three of the sons—Fred, Edwin and Alfred—came to the United States. Of these, Edwin settled in Lancaster township, Grant county, and died many years ago. Alfred came in 1862, lived in the same township, but for some time prior to his death, in August, 1899, had made his home with his nephew, George Divall; he left a son, Roy Divall. The family of Edwin, however, never reached America, although they had made every preparation to come when the news of his untimely death caused a change of purpose.

Fred Divall was married Feb. 11, 1855, in England, to Mary Farncombe, born in 1833, a daughter of William and Mary Farncombe, of Sussex county, who were the parents of thirteen children, nine of whom reached maturity and three of whom are still living. The father was born in 1791, and for twenty-eight years served in the British army, and took part in the battle of Waterloo; he died at his home in Sussex, Feb. 21, 1890, his wife, who was born in 1800, having previously passed away. Four of the older of the thirteen children died in the West Indies, where the father was stationed seven years while a soldier; the three surviving members of the family are Mrs. Elizabeth Brown and Thomas, both in England, and Mrs. Divall.

About two weeks after marriage Mr. Divall and wife started for America, and were seven weeks on the voyage from London to New York, whence they came direct to Lancaster, Wis. The first land purchased here by Mr. Divall was a quarter-section in Lancaster township, to which he added, a little later, a quarter-section adjoining, but situated in the township of Liberty, and still later purchased 185 acres more in Lancaster township, thus becoming one of the largest land owners and most successful farmers and stock growers in that part of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Divall lived on this farm for thirty years, and then he sold it to his son-in-law, Reuben Austin.

Mr. and Mrs. Divall had born to them ten children, of whom one daughter died in infancy, and the survivors are Mrs. Mary McCormick; Frederick William, who resides in Montfort township; Mrs. Lucy Weir; George A., proprietor of the Lancaster Hotel; James E., of Ellenboro; Mrs. Amelia Austin; John E., in Liberty township; Albert T., also of Liberty township; and Mrs. Orah Kemper, in Nebraska. There are twenty-nine grandchildren, and at Christmas-tide, 1898, the entire family—sons and daughters and their wives and husbands and children—spent the holiday week with the parents and numbered fifty-one persons.

Mr. and Mrs. Divall retired to Lancaster in March, 1892, and have now been residents of Grant county for forty-five years. They have a most pleasant home, where they are passing the evening of life in peace and contentment. They are consistent members of the Episcopal church, and are among the most esteemed old settlers of Grant county, in which all but one of their surviving children reside.

ABRAHAM KEY, one of the defenders of the Union during the Rebellion, and a representative citizen of Patch Grove township, belongs to one of the pioneer families of Grant county, and for many years was a resident of Wyalusing township. He was born in Pike county, Ill., in 1835, his parents being Marshall and Sarah (Schall) Key. The name Key is a historic one, and some of the representatives of this family have attained to national fame. The branch of the family to which Abraham Key belongs is along the same line of descent, though a little remote, as was Francis Scott Key, the famous author of the "Star Spangled Banner." Philip Barton Key, who was slain in Washington many years ago by Gen. Sickles, was descended from the same ancestry. The parents of Abraham Key were married in Kentucky, and from that State moved to Illinois, coming to the territory of Wisconsin in 1841, and locating near Montfort, Grant county. Subsequently they removed to Lancaster, and still later to Beetown. The father was engaged in lead mining for many years, and in those early days the places above mentioned produced large quantities of lead ore. Later the family took up their residence in Wyalusing township, where the father died in 1879, and the mother passed away some years later. In their family were eight children, three sons and five daughters, all of whom are living at the present writing, in 1900, with the exception of George. The others are Eliza, Amanda, Abraham, Surilda, Nancy, Mary Ann and Benton. The eldest daughter, Eliza, is now a resident of Minnesota.

Abraham Key remained under the parental roof until he entered the service of his country during her hour of peril. He enlisted Sept. 3, 1864, in the 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, and was in active service until the close of the war. The command nominally belonged to the Army of the Potomac, and a large part of its service was in defense of the national capital, being assigned to the fortifications around the city of Washington. Its duties were arduous, and often called for the exercise of as much skill and bravery as did the more active service at the front. After the war Mr. Key returned to the old homestead in Wyalusing township.

In 1871 Mr. Key was married to Miss Laura Herring, also a native of Illinois, and they have become the parents of eight children, three sons and five daughters, namely: Abraham, Jesse, Lloyd Fitch, Mary, Nellie, Jennie, Wisconsin Belle and Millie. Mr. Key was a faithful soldier in the war for the Union, and as a citizen is highly respected by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance. For more than a quarter of a century he made his home in Wyalusing township, but is now an honored resident of Patch Grove. Fraternally he is a worthy member of the G. A. R. Post of Bloomington.

OLE M. ERICKSON, blacksmith of Browntown, Green county, is a native son of Norway, who has found friends and fortune in the New World. His father, Martin Erickson, located in Wiota township in 1857, and there bought a small farm, where he made his home until his death, in 1886, when he was aged seventy-four years. He and his wife, Lena, were married in Norway, and became the parents of twelve children: John, a farmer of Wiota township, married Johana Smedstad; Caroline married C. C. Rood, a farmer of Wiota township; Even married Bell Elifson; Lena married Chris Olson; Ole M. is mentioned below; Martin resides in Wiota township; August married Lena Hanson, who is now deceased; Peter wedded a Miss Anderson, who is also deceased; Henry is a farmer; Joseph is deceased; Josephine married George Denare, a farmer; and Oscar M. married Hilda Paulson.

Ole M. Erickson was born in Norway Oct. 14, 1854, and coming to America as he did in childhood, the greater part of his life has been passed in Wisconsin. He was reared on the farm in Wiota township, and received his education in the common schools. As a youth he inclined to the blacksmith's trade, and determined to make it his life work. At the age of twenty-nine he located in Browntown, and has there conducted a general blacksmith shop, and has also engaged in wagon making, and in the implement business. He started out in life as a poor man, and his industry and economy alone are responsible for the substantial position he occupies to-day.

On Sept. 7, 1877, Mr. Erickson was married to Miss Mary Larson, who was born April 27, 1856, daughter of Oto and Anna Larson, natives of Norway, who early settled in Lafayette county. Mr. and Mrs. Larson had a family of nine children, seven of whom are yet living: Louis married a Miss Anderson; Charles married Miss Dora Johnson; Mary (Mrs. Erickson); Sophia married Elef Golicson, of Jordan township; Nettie resides in Browntown; Lena is deceased; Conrad married Estella Clarno, who is deceased; Telah married Dr. Osborn, of Chicago. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Erickson have come two children: Morgan E., born May 28, 1879, married on Feb. 21, 1901, Miss Lottie Binger, who was born Feb. 21, 1877, daughter of Jerry Binger, an early settler of Cadiz township; and Richard Elmer, born Oct. 20, 1885, is at home.

The Republican party finds in Mr. Erickson a staunch adherent, and he has served his town and township as school director and treasurer, and at present is a member of the village board. In religious faith he is a Lutheran. The family reside in the handsome home he owns in Browntown, and are quite popular among those who know them best.

CALVIN LADD, of Patch Grove, Grant county, is an honored veteran of the Civil war, who enrolled his name among the boys in blue Sept. 16, 1861, becoming a member of Company M, 4th Mo. Vol. Cav. He enlisted for three years or during the war, and served the full time, being honorably discharged on Oct. 19, 1864. He participated in all of the engagements in which his regiment took part, never being off duty except for about six weeks when ill in the hospital. He served in Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee, in fact, generally throughout the Southwest, and took part in the battles of Pea Ridge, and Guntown, under Gen. Sturgis. At Union City, Tenn., he lost the second finger of his left hand by accident. Though much broken down in health, he remained at the front with his regiment until his term of enlistment expired, and returned home with a war record of which he may be justly proud.

Mr. Ladd was born in Schenectady, N. Y., in 1842, a son of Lemuel and Amy Ladd, who came to Wisconsin in 1855, and located in the Patch Grove settlement, where the father died in January, 1879. The mother is still living and continues to reside at the old homestead. In their family were eight children, seven of whom are living at this writing, in 1901. One son, Elijah S. Ladd, now a resident of South Dakota, was also a soldier of the Civil war, being a member of the 2d Wis. Vol. Cav.

In 1870 Calvin Ladd was united in marriage with Miss Matilda Quick, a daughter of Winslow and Ruth Quick. Her mother died many years ago, but her father is still living, a resident of Patch Grove township. Mr. and Mrs. Ladd have four children, one son and three daughters, namely: Mariette, wife of Fred J. Arnsburger; Essie; Lemuel; and Leta. The family have a pleasant home in Patch Grove, where they delight to entertain their many friends. Mr. Ladd is an esteemed member of Bloomington Post, G. A. R., and by his ballot is a supporter of the men and measures of the Republican party. He was a good soldier, and as a citizen is well worthy the high regard in which he is held.

BEN. FRYSLIE, one of the enterprising and successful young farmers of Jordan township, Green county, where he carries on general farming, dairying and cheese making, was born April 9, 1865, on the farm which he now conducts and on which his parents settled in 1853.

Andrew and Chestie (Gardalen) Fryslie his parents, were natives of Norway, born about ninety-six miles from Christiania. Concluding to try to better their circumstances in America, they came hither, and after a few years' residence in Wiota township, Lafayette Co., Wis., settled in Jordan township, Green county, taking up land in section 28. At that time they were blessed with very little of this world's goods, but they had health and ambition, and by industry succeeded in establishing themselves comfortably in life. Mr. Fryslie at the time of his death owning a fine farm of 34½ acres, with fine barns and a good two-story dwelling. The land was all highly improved and under profitable cultivation, and he ranked among the leading well-to-do farmers of this locality, where he was universally respected. Mr. and Mrs. Fryslie were married in 1849, and nine children were born to their union, seven of whom survive, namely: Ole, of Clark county, Wis.; Inger, of Chicago, Ill.; Henry, living near Chicago; Anton, of South Dakota; Peter, of Colorado; Carrie, who resides with her mother and brother on the old home place; and Ben., our subject. Andrew Fryslie passed away Jan. 6, 1900, at the homestead, where his widow still resides, now aged seventy-seven years. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran church, and lived an upright life, was a valued citizen and good neighbor, and much missed in the community where he had so long had his home. His political support was given to the Republican party.

Ben. Fryslie, whose name opens this sketch, was reared on the old home place, and received his education in the local public schools. He has always followed farming, and has been remarkably successful, being apparently gifted with unusually good judgment and ability in the management of matters agricultural. He is a hard worker, and his honesty and integrity in all his dealings have won him the unqualified esteem of his neighbors and fellow citizens. It is his intention to buy out the heirs to the home farm, in the cultivation of which he is engaged. Mr. Fryslie has not married. Like his father, he is a Republican in political sentiment.

PETER BELL was a hard-working and upright farmer for many years, and with his farming operations carried on his trade of stone mason. He is now living a quiet and retired life at Albany, Green county, in the enjoyment of a competence that represents industrious years and patient saving.

Mr. Bell was born in Clinton county, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1821, and is a son of John and Effie (Ash) Bell, both natives of New York. They were the parents of six children, of whom four are now living: Margaret, the widow of Jeremiah Burbank, of Castana, Iowa; Peter, of Albany, Wis.; Joseph, of Bassett, Iowa; and Ann, wife of Amos Burbank, of Castana, Iowa. The father was a farmer, and came from New York to Wisconsin in 1848, locating in the town of Magnolia, Rock county, where he lived five years, when he moved to Dane county, where he died in 1863, when nearly eighty-six years of age. His widow survived him some four or five years, and was an esteemed member of the Methodist Church. In his political faith he was a Democrat. The father of John Bell was a native of Holland, and died in old age, leaving a large family. David Ash, the father of Effie mentioned above, was a native farmer of New York, had a large family, and died in old age. John Bell, father of our subject, had been twice married. By his first wife, who was a Miss Van Hining, he became the father of five children: Rowland, Henry, Rebecca, Eva and Cornelius, of whom Rebecca and Eva still live at the age of ninety-five and ninety-seven years, respectively.

Peter Bell was a small child when his parents moved to Herkimer county, N. Y., where they lived seven years. From that county they moved into Wayne county, where his home was had until he came West. He attended district school in Herkimer county, walking two and a half miles. Mr. Bell was married March 1, 1849, to Miss Huldah Miller, daughter of David and Melvina (Wolven) Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Bell became the parents of four children, David Ansel, Maggie, Martha and William. David Ansel died at the age of seven months. Maggie married Francis Atkinson, of Albany, and has one child, Francis. Martha married Seth Hewitt, and lives at Arlington, S. Dak.; they have two children, Effie and Ivan. William is a tinner by trade, and lives at Rolfe, Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell have been members of the Methodist Church for fifty years. He has been trustee, class-leader and steward for many years, but the increasing infirmities of old age, and his desire that younger men should take up the work, have led him to resign. He belongs to Erastus Hoyt Post, No. 69, G. A. R. He was a Republican from the organization of the party until 1884, when he became a Prohibitionist, and has continued in that political faith to the present time. He was supervisor in Primrose township, Dane county, one year before the war, and also served as justice of the peace three years.

In 1851 Mr. Bell came to Wisconsin, with his wife, by way of the lakes, and located in Rock county, where he remained one year. He was two years in the town of Sylvester, Green county, when he moved to Dane county, where he and his brother Joseph bought a farm of two hundred acres, which they cultivated until the breaking out of the Civil war. Mr. Bell enlisted Aug. 14, 1862, in Company K, 33d Wis. V. I., and served three years to a day. He was at the siege of Vicksburg from its beginning to the triumphal entry of the conquering troops into the city; under fire for nineteen days in the Red River campaign; participated in the battle of Cane river; and was present at the siege of Spanish Fort. In all, he was in fifteen hard-fought battles and many skirmishes. In one of the skirmishes, in pursuit of Gen. Hood in Tennessee, he lost the sight of one of his eyes. Mr. Bell has followed stone mason and contract work for the past thirty years. For twenty-seven years he has lived in Albany, where he has a good home.

David and Melvina (Wolven) Miller, Mrs. Bell's parents, lived in Ulster county, N. Y., and came west to Wisconsin in the fall of 1854, and located in the town of Mt. Pleasant, Green county, where he died in 1865, at the age of seventy-one. His widow died in 1881, at the age of eighty-six. He served in the war of 1812, and his wife received a pension after his demise. In religious belief they were both Presbyterians. They reared eleven children, six of whom are now living: Eliza, the wife of Franklin Bennett, of Albany, a sketch of whose life appears in this volume; Maria, wife of Luke Edwards, of the town of Sylvester; Peter, of Albany; Huldah, the wife of Peter Bell; Louis, now in the Rocky Mountains; and George, of Iowa Falls. Mrs. Bell's paternal grandfather was David Miller, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was taken prisoner by the Indians; he was the father of a large family, and lived to be about eighty years old. Mrs. Melvina (Wolven) Miller was a daughter of Zachariah Wolven, a native of New York, who died before the Revolution.

JOHN W. HULBERT, a well-known citizen and veteran soldier of Muscoda, Grant county, occupies a well-cultivated farm on section 11, and is one of the representative men of this community. He is a native of New York, having been born in the Empire State Oct. 6, 1836, son of Ansel and Grisselle Hulbert, the former of whom was a native of Vermont, and the latter of Scotch parentage, and both were sturdy, honest people, good types of the best pioneers, who have made the "wilderness blossom like the rose." In 1850 the family migrated from New York to Wisconsin, settling at Stoughton, Dane county, but afterward removed to Indiana, and finally settled again in Wisconsin, the father dying in 1899, in Richland county, Wis., at the great age of ninety-eight. The mother died many years prior to her husband's death, in Canada, where the family were then residing. They had three children: John W., the subject of this sketch; Ansel, residing in Richland county; and a daughter, who now resides at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin.

John W. Hulbert enlisted in 1862 in Company C, 87th Ind. V. I., and served in his regiment in the Army of the Cumberland, taking part in some of the most important battles and campaigns of the war, including Perryville, Munfordville, Stone River, etc. After about a year of service Mr. Hulbert was honorably discharged on account of disability, and has never regained his health. Like so many of his comrades-in-arms, he sacrificed his physical well-being for his country, and can not receive too high praise for the years he has patiently endured the suffering thus entailed.

Soon after his return from the army Mr. Hulbert was married to Miss Rosana Fuller, who was born in Ohio, a daughter of Curtis and Betsy Fuller. Of the eight children born of this union, two died in infancy; the others, two sons and four daughters, are as follows: Grant, Elsie, Charles, Maud, Edith and Nina. Mr. Hulbert is a member of the G. A. R. post at Muscoda, and in politics is a Republican. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hulbert are hospitable people, and enjoy the friendship of a large circle of friends. They are numbered among the representative people of Muscoda, and are worthy of the highest esteem.

CHARLES B. FINN (deceased) was a faithful soldier in the war for the Union, and one of the well-known and highly esteemed citizens of Patch Grove township, Grant county. He enlisted on Feb. 9, 1865, in Company G, 47th Wis. V. I., and was discharged at Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 4, 1865. Mr. Finn was born in the city of New York, Sept. 25, 1835, and was a son of Anthony and Catherine Ann (Shuma) Finn, the former a native of the State of New York, the latter of the city of the same name. In their family were five children, three sons and two daughters, but Charles B. was the only one to enter the army during the Civil war. From New York city the family moved to Erie, Penn., and later Charles B. Finn went to Ontario, Canada, where he was united in marriage with Miss Lydia G. Allen, who was born in the town of Ipswich, England, in 1843, and when two years old was taken by her parents, David and Harriet Allen, to Canada, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Finn was the youngest of the five children who came to America with the parents. All but one are still living, namely: Harriet, a resident of Windsor, Ontario; Edwin, of Missouri; Orlando, of Ontario; and Mrs. Finn. Elizabeth died in Ontario.

In June, 1861, Mr. Finn became a resident of Patch Grove township, Grant Co., Wis. He first located on a farm two miles west of the village of Patch Grove, and some time later purchased the farm on which his widow now resides. His death was an especially sad one, being sudden and unexpected, as he was killed by lightning Oct. 1, 1888. It was not only a severe loss to his family, but a source of deep regret to all who knew him. He was an industrious and enterprising man, upright and honorable in all the relations of life, and highly respected and esteemed in the community where he made his home.

To Mr. and Mrs. Finn were born six children, three sons and three daughters, namely: Albert C., who married Laura Colby, the daughter of a soldier; Lucius O.; Olive Mary, wife of R. S. Ryerson, of the State of Washington, where she now resides; Carrie Eliza, wife of Horatio Miller, of Denver, Colo.; Jesse W.; and Florence A. Mrs. Finn is a lady of intelligence and culture, who presides with gracious dignity in her pleasant home, and, like her husband, makes many friends.

FRANKLIN BENNETT. Among the older and more venerable agriculturists of Albany, Green county, Mr. Bennett has long been conspicuous by reason of his manly integrity, his upright character, and his life of industry and honesty.

Mr. Bennett was born in the town of Charlotte, Chittenden county, Vt., Dec. 12, 1821, a son of James and Fannie (Hall) Bennett, natives of Long Island, and of Walpole, N. H., respectively. They were the parents of seven children, of whom only two are now living: Franklin; and Caroline, the widow of D. B. Traverse, of Eau Claire, Wis. The father was a wheelwright when a young man, and when he became of age enlisted as a ship carpenter on board the ship "Constitution," and then served in the army during the war of 1812. He located in Vermont after the closing of the war, and married in Williston, that State, carrying on his trade of wheelwright. In later life he moved to Canton, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., where he continued work at his trade. There he died at the age of seventy-six, his wife dying three years before, at the age of sixty-three. She was a Methodist. The father of James Bennett was a native of New York, of English, Irish and Scotch descent, and was a carriage maker by trade; he was the father of three children, and died in advanced years. Elisha Hall, the father of Fannie Hall mentioned above, was a farmer in his native State, New Hampshire, where he reared a large family, and died when old.

Franklin Bennett was about twelve years old when his parents moved into New York. He grew to manhood and received his schooling in Canton. In 1847 Mr. Bennett came west to Beloit. He had a small farm of about forty acres near Belvidere, Boone Co., Ill., where he lived ten years. He sold that at the expiration of this period, and moved to Wisconsin.

Mr. Bennett married Miss Sarah Rounds, daughter of Brinton Rounds, in 1837. Seven children were born to this union, three of whom are now living,—Ann, Emma and James. Ann married George Bennett (deceased), and had four children, two of whom are living, Rev. Harry (a preacher in the Christian Church), and Bertha (a teacher); Mrs. Ann Bennett now lives in Monroe. Emma married Edward Bacon, and lives two miles south of Monroe; they were the parents of five children, four of whom are still living, Don, Bert, Ralph and Orrin. James married and lives at Altoona, Wis. Mrs. Sarah (Rounds) Bennett died in Illinois in 1856. Mr. Bennett was married Jan. 29, 1859, to Mrs. Eliza Edwards, widow of Ansel Edwards, and daughter of David Miller. There were no children by the second marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett belong to the Methodist Church.

Mr. Bennett enlisted in August, 1862, in Company F, 31st Wis. V. I., and served three years. He participated in the battles of Atlanta and Bentonville, and in many skirmishes, and was on the celebrated march of Gen. Sherman to the sea. Mr. Bennett returned to his farm in Green county when the war was over, and continued on it until 1880. That year he sold his farm and moved into Albany, where he built a good home, and for a time followed the work of a mason. Lately his advanced age has necessitated a quiet life, and for several years he has lived retired. Mr. Bennett was a Whig in early life, and on the dissolution of that party joined the Republican party, but at the present time he is a Prohibitionist. He is the senior vice-commander of Erastus Hoyt Post, No. 69, G. A. R., and is highly respected by all the old comrades. His present wife was an early settler of Green county, and her parents were natives of New York.

DR. EDWARD B. OWEN, a dentist of Brodhead, Green county, widely known as a master of his profession, well versed in all its mechanical niceties, and thoroughly understanding the art of caring for the teeth, has many friends in the community, and is regarded by all who know him as a reliable and trustworthy gentleman.

Dr. Owen was born in Montgomeryshire, Wales, Aug. 20, 1850, a son of Abram and Mary (Jones) Owen. They were the parents of five children, and three of these are living: John E., of Oregon, Wis.; David, of Redfield,

S. Dak.; and Dr. Edward B. The father was a stockman and farmer, and died in Wales at the age of eighty-two, a leading man in his own community. His wife died in 1886, at the age of seventy-three. He was a Methodist, and she a Baptist. His father was a farmer, and died in his native Wales, the father of two sons. John Jones, the father of Mary, was a farmer in Wales, and died in middle life; he had two sons and a daughter.

Dr. Edward B. Owen came to America in 1860, and made his home at Oregon, Wis., where he grew to manhood. He attended the public schools, and was a college student at Madison. Then he entered the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, at Philadelphia, and was graduated in 1888. After this he took a special course at the college of dental surgery in Chicago. He began the practice of his profession at Oregon, where he remained a little over two years. His health failed at Oregon, and he was obliged to take a rest. When he had partially regained his strength he came to Brodhead and engaged in the practice of his profession. Here he has continued to the present time. Dr. Owen is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is its Sunday-school superintendent. He is a member of Bicknell Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of the Monroe Chapter, R. A. M., and of Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, where he has taken the Uniform Rank. Dr. Owen is a Republican, and belongs to the Southern Wisconsin Dental Society, to the Wisconsin State Dental Association, and the National Dental Association. He is a stockholder in the Brodhead telephone exchange, and in everything that relates to the progress of the community he has a keen and persistent interest.

JAMES W. LYMAN, the present clerk of Green county, and one of the most popular official occupants of the court house at Monroe, Wis., is a native of the county he is serving so well, and a fair representative of the new generation that has come to take charge of the State as the "old guard," the early settlers, fall away. He is enterprising and intelligent, not afraid of a little trouble to oblige a stranger, kind and courteous to all, and enjoys a reputation for integrity and manliness that would be creditable to any one.

Mr. Lyman was born in the town of Decatur, Green Co., Wis., Oct. 3, 1865, a son of George S. and Naomi (Mitchell) Lyman. His father was born on Long Island, and his mother in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of five children, two of whom are now living, Louise, the wife of T. J. Blackford, of Juda, Green county, Wis., and James W. The father was a tinner by trade; and came to Wisconsin about 1848, making his home in Monroe, where he followed his trade for several years. Then he rented a farm, and cultivated the soil in the town of Decatur until in 1870, when he bought a farm of eighty-five acres in the town of Sylvester, one mile north of Juda, and lived here until his death, in 1897, when sixty-three years old. His wife died in 1878, and he then married Mrs. Eva Andrews, by whom he had one son, Clark, who lives in Monroe, as does also his widowed mother. The paternal grandfather of James W. Lyman bore the name of Ashley Lyman; he was a native of Northampton, N. H., of English descent, and passed his entire life as a farmer, dying in early life, leaving one son, George S.

Abner Mitchell, the father of Mrs. Naomi Lyman, was a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent, and he followed the occupation of farming. He was one of the early settlers of Green county, locating in the town of Spring Grove, where he took up land from the government, and spent his life, dying on the old homestead on his eighty-fourth birthday; he had been a prominent man in his active days, and in 1854 had represented this district in the General Assembly, and from time to time had filled various local offices. He became a thrifty farmer, and owned farming land in the towns of Sylvester, Spring Grove and Decatur. In his family were nine children.

James W. Lyman was reared on his father's farm and received his education in the district school and in the graded schools of Juda, and being a close student, he became very well educated. Leaving school when strength and age counselled the taking up of some life work, he took up the trade of a carpenter, and followed it for some years. His inclination led him to the South, and he spent seven years (1886-1892) farming in Jefferson county, Florida. By this time he had seen enough of the sunny South, and he was ready to come back to his old home in Green county. This he did, and for two years worked in and about Juda as a carpenter. He lived on the farm, and in 1898 he was elected county clerk, which position he holds at the present time. Since his induction into office he and his family live in Monroe.

On April 22, 1896, Mr. Lyman wedded Miss Louise Mitchell, a daughter of Franklin and Jane (McVean) Mitchell. Two children, Catharine Louise and Naomi Jean, have gladdened their home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lyman are members of the Baptist Church at Juda. He is an active worker in the Sunday-school, and takes a strong interest in everything calculated to help the world onward and upward. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Royal Arcanum, and is a strong believer in fraternal insurance. He is a Republican, and served as assessor of Jefferson township two terms.

JOHN Q. HASTINGS, a retired farmer and a veteran of the Civil war, now spending his declining years on his farm two miles southeast of Browntown, Green county, was born in Mercer county, Penn., Jan. 29, 1844, and is a son of Hugh and Saloma (Bearnheard) Hastings, both natives of Pennsylvania. John Hastings, the grandfather of John Q., was born in Ireland, and came to Pennsylvania before the Revolution. In 1777 he settled in Fort Pitt, and became the father of five children, Abel, David, Eliza, Mary and Hugh.

Hugh Hastings was born in 1810, married in 1832, and died in 1857. His wife, Saloma Bearnheard, was born in 1812, and she became the mother of nine children: Harriet; Jane is dead; Elizabeth Martha; Margret, deceased; David; Mary; John Q.; Sarah K.; and Phebe.

John Q. Hastings was married to Miss Barbara Spece, June 2, 1867. Mrs. Hastings was born June 2, 1849, and is the daughter of William and Julia (Youngblood) Spece, who came to Green county from Ohio in 1845. To this marriage have come eight children: (1) Frank O., born in 1868, married Lena Brown, of Martintown. (2) Fred P., born in 1870, married Emma Warner, of Cadiz township. (3) Saloma, born in 1872, is the wife of John Patrick, of Sioux county, Iowa. (4) Wilhelmine, born in 1874, married Oscar D. Curtis, of Browntown, Wis., a justice of the peace, and a student of law, and also a candidate for the position of county clerk in 1900. (5) Phœbe, born in 1876, is the wife of Joseph Dale, a barber of Browntown. (6) Hugh, Jr., born in 1878, is single and makes his home in Browntown. (7) Ethel, born in 1880, now living in Milwaukee. (8) Maggie, born in 1886, died in childhood.

Mr. Hastings is a Democrat, and a man of fine character and deep religious convictions, though he has never seen fit to unite with any church. During the Civil war he served as a soldier of the Union, enlisting in Company B, in August, 1861, and was a member of the 18th Wis. V. I. until the following year. At that time his enlistment period terminated, and he reenlisted in the 92nd Ill. V. I., and participated in many of the exciting scenes of the great war. He was with Gen. Sherman in his March to the Sea, and had a part in many hard-fought battles. He lost an eye in the service, for which he is drawing a pension. His discharge from the service was given him in 1865, so that practically he served throughout the entire war.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastings are spending their declining days on their farm, and have that peace and comfort that should rightly follow their useful and well-spent lives.

THOMAS J. ALSOP, a prominent representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Brooklyn, Green county, was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., May 25, 1844, the only child of John and Kezia (Searing) Alsop, both natives of New York.

John Alsop was a farmer and came to Wisconsin in 1854, and settled in the town of Janesville where he engaged in farming. After a time he moved into the village of Brooklyn where he spent his last days, dying at the age of seventy-three; his wife, Kezia, passed away the same year, aged sixty-three years. Both were Quakers in religious faith. John Alsop was a son of Thomas Alsop, a native of New York, of an English ancestry: he was a captain of a whaling vessel, sailing the sea for seventeen years, but after his marriage he settled in Cayuga county, N. Y., where he reared a large family, filled an important place in the community, and died at the age of fifty-five. John Alsop, father of Thomas, and great-grandfather of our subject, was a prominent merchant in the city of New York, and the founder of the Chamber of Commerce. The history of the family in America begins with the year 1624. Kezia (Searing) Alsop was a daughter of John

P. Searing, a native of the city of New York, where he began his business career as a hatter, but in later years took up the occupation of farming; he came West to Vernon county, Wis., in 1857, where he died at the age of sixty-three years. Mr. Searing was a soldier in the war of 1812, reared a large family, and was highly esteemed in his own neighborhood.

Thomas J. Alsop was ten years old when he came with his parents to Wisconsin. Here he attended the public schools, and began his business career as a cultivator of his father's farm. At the death of that gentleman this farm came into his possession, but in 1885 he sold it and bought 330 acres in the town of Brooklyn, which was formerly known as the Melvin farm.

Mr. Alsop was married Feb. 2, 1871, to Miss Frances, a daughter of Jesse and Mary B. (Brooks) Smith, and they have become the parents of the following children: Grace, Mabel, Roscoe, Irving, LeGrand, Irene, and Harold. In politics Mr. Alsop is a Democrat.

Jesse Smith, the father of Mrs. Alsop, was a native of New York, and his wife, Mary B. (Brooks), of Vermont. To them were born three children: Stanley B., of Janesville, Wis.; Frances E., whose name is mentioned above; and Mary K., widow of Warren Richardson, of Leon, Kansas. Mr. Smith came from New York to the village of Union in 1846, and established himself as a merchant. He died in that place in 1873, and his widow died in 1896, at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. She was a Baptist. He had been twice married, and by his first wife, Betsy Wilmarth, he had six children, all now deceased. In his early days Mr. Smith was a man of prominence, and in New York was a Colonel in the State Militia. He was next to the youngest in a family of eleven children.

Dr. John Brooks, of Bernardston, Mass., father of Mary B. (Brooks) Smith, was born in Worcester, Jan. 12, 1783, and in spite of limited opportunities acquired a good education and became a teacher. For a time he was a book binder at Walpole, N. H. In 1804 he began his medical studies in Westminster, Vt., in which he spent three years, and for fourteen years was a successful and popular physician, at Newfane, Vt., and was elected the second secretary of the medical Society of Vermont. In 1813 or 1814 he represented his town in the Vermont Legislature. In 1819, on account of his health, he gave up the practice of medicine and removed to Dummerston, Vt., where he finally began preaching the doctrine of Universal Restoration. It was in his capacity of a clergyman and pastor that he settled in Bernardston, in 1822. He died in 1865 at the advanced age of eighty-two years. He was twice married, and reared a numerous family.

REV. ISAAC S. BUSSING, for several years pastor of the local church of the United Brethren in Christ, is counted one of the strong clergymen of Monroe, Green county. He is a man of great natural gifts, strong character, and deep devotion to the sacred calling in which he is engaged. Well versed in its divine lore, he is a Bible preacher, ever loyal to his Master.

Mr. Bussing was born at Albany, N. Y., May 25, 1855, a son of Harmon and Harriet (Smith) Bussing, natives of New York. They had a son and a daughter, the latter of whom died when twenty-one years of age from the effects of an accident. The father was a dry-goods merchant in Albany, and lived there until a year and a half before his marriage. His first wife died about 1857, and he married Betsey M. Smith, a sister of the first Mrs. Bussing. To this marriage were also born a son and a daughter, Alice B. and Walter. Mr. Bussing died at the home of his daughter in November, 1891, at the age of sixty-three years. Mrs. Betsey M. Bussing died June 30, 1900. They were members of the Reformed Protestant Church of America. The grandfather of Rev. Isaac S. Bussing also bore the name of Harmon Bussing; he was born in Ireland, but was brought to this country when a child, passing the greater part of his life near Albany, N. Y., engaged in farming. He was the father of five children, and lived to be eighty-nine years of age. John Smith, the father of Harriet Smith noted above, was born in New York, and was the descendant of Holland-Dutch ancestors.

Rev. Isaac S. Bussing was reared in the city of Albany, where he attended the public schools, and helped his father in the store in the intervals of his school work. He was an energetic, pushing lad of determined spirit, and has taken entire care of himself since he was fourteen years of age. In later years he pursued his studies by the light of the midnight oil, so congenial to the scholarly mind. Mr. Bussing is in every sense of the word a self-made man; he has conquered difficulties that would have overwhelmed and crushed a less courageous soul.

Mr. Bussing began life for himself as a shipping clerk with Wood, Lewis & Hawley, well-known collar and cuff manufacturers at Troy, N. Y., and remained with them between eight and nine years. It was while in their employ that his strong religious nature asserted itself, and he became a recognized and powerful worker in the cause of the Master among the young men of that city, at one time having gathered a class of seventy-five young men under his instruction and inspiration. He had been with them about a year when J. R. Pratt, Wisconsin secretary of the Y. M. C. A., induced him to come West, and enter upon the duties of Lumberman's secretary of the association. Mr. Bussing did so, and for several seasons spent the winter season in traveling through the various lumber camps of the northern woods. This was an arduous life, and his health became so undermined that he was called in from the field, and assigned to the office of general secretary at Lake Geneva, Wis. Mr. Bussing remained at this point, and discharged the duties of the position until 1892, when he entered the regular work of the ministry of the Methodist Church, having his first charge at Springville, Wis. He was pastor there two years, and while he was there a sweeping revival greatly advanced the cause of the church. In Springville, to-day, there is standing a beautiful church, which is a lasting memorial to the work of Mr. Bussing in that community. From Springville he was transferred to the church at London, Dane county, in the fall of 1893, where he had a pastorate of twelve months that was fruitful in the strengthening of the church, the material improvement of the property and the lifting of all debt. In 1894 Mr. Bussing was assigned to the church at Dartford, the county seat of Green Lake county, and here his ministry was attended with large revivals and many accessions to the church.

In the winter of 1896 ideas that had long been working in the mind of Mr. Bussing became convictions, and he realized that as a matter of conscience he should do his work as a minister henceforth under the auspices of the religious organization known as the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. To break away from a ministry that offered such large attractions, and which had been singularly agreeable to him was no slight thing, but with the subject of this article right went before any question of ease or comfort, and he accordingly hastened to identify himself with this body as soon as he had become thoroughly convinced that it was founded on the Gospel. He resigned from the Methodist communion on Easter Sunday, 1896, and entered almost immediately upon his work as pastor of the Church of the United Brethren, at Pickrell, Neb. There his work was particularly noticeable by one hundred three conversions taking place under his effective preaching at that point. He was sent to Julian, Neb., at the next session of the conference, where he remained a year and a half; and from that point he came to Monroe, where he has since resided.

Mr. Bussing and Miss Ella S. Burger, a daughter of William F. and Cornelia E. (Wyant) Burger, were married Nov. 6, 1874. Three sons and three daughters are the fruit of this union, William H., Harriet E., Martin, Benjamin T., Ruth Mary and Esther May. Mr. Bussing is brigade chaplain of the Domain of Wisconsin, Knights of Pythias, holding the rank of major in that order, and also belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. He is the first vice-president of the Monroe Ministerial Association. Mr. Bussing takes an independent stand in all political affairs, and aims to cast his vote at every election with a view to the general good of his country, rather than the promotion of mere party aims.

GILBERT T. HODGES, whose prominence in the agricultural, financial and political circles of Green county, Wis., easily places him in the front rank of the popular and substantial citizens of the State, was born in Montgomery county, Ind., Jan. 6, 1841.

William Hodges, his father, was born in Kentucky, of English descent, and when he started out in life for himself was empty handed, but he pre-empted eighty acres of land in Montgomery county, Ind., of which he cleared five acres and built a log house, planting his five acres in corn. This tract he traded for another eighty-acre tract which was wholly unimproved, which in turn he cleared and traded for a third, upon which he made his home until 1846, when he sold all off and moved to Wisconsin, where he purchased 260 acres in Monroe township, Green county, and where he built a good house. As the years passed on he added to his possessions 160 acres three and one-half miles northwest, but this he divided between his two children, David and Rachel, and also gave to Lewis eighty acres off the home farm. He then purchased eighty acres each on the south and the east sides of the original place, and forty acres on the west, and as the last named land was in the corporate limits of the city of Monroe, he sold it off in town lots. While he never had enjoyed the benefits of an education, he was a successful man. He kept no accounts, but after his son Gilbert had attained the age of ten years, he depended upon him to do any necessary figuring. When he started out on stock buying expeditions, he was always accompanied by Gilbert, who looked after the numerical side of the business. Mr. Hodges helped to survey the land in the neighborhood, and it was said he was infallible when called upon to settle boundary disputes. In 1856 he purchased land in Davis county, Mo., and lived there for two and one-half years, but at the end of that time returned to Wisconsin, and passed a year and one-half in straightening up his affairs. He then returned to Missouri, where he remained, however, but a year, the outbreak of the Rebellion making a home in Wisconsin more desirable for a Northern sympathizer. In the spring of 1877 he purchased town property in Winfield, Kans., and went there expecting to make it his future home. In August, 1879, he started back to his old Wisconsin home, but was taken ill on the way, and died the day after his arrival, in his eightieth year. Just after he left his early home in Kentucky and took up his abode in Indiana, he married Sarah Powell, daughter of Lewis Powell, of Montgomery county, Ind., and to their union came eight children, three of whom are now living: Rachel, widow of Thomas Randall, makes her home in Winfield, Kans.; William J., of Stillwater, Oklahoma; and Gilbert T. The mother of these died in 1884. Both were faithful followers of the tenets of the Christian or Disciples Church. Mr. Hodges served for many years as a justice of the peace.

Lewis Powell, father of Mrs. Sarah (Powell) Hodges, and maternal grandfather of Gilbert T. Hodges, was a native of Virginia, where he gained a livelihood chiefly by hunting. Game of all kinds abounded there, and he was a typical and daring pioneer of those early struggling days of our country. He took part in the Indian war, and was called Capt. Powell. His brother Decader was killed in the battle of Tippecanoe. Lewis Powell was captured many times, but always succeeded in effecting his escape. He moved from Virginia to Tennessee, and thence to Montgomery county, Ind., making his home there until 1844, when he located in Monroe township, Green Co., Wis., and commenced to improve a farm about four miles northeast of the village of Monroe. This he shortly after divided among his children, and lived with them until his death, which took place in 1858, at the home of his youngest daughter, Mary Anne Clark, when he was aged ninety-nine years. He was of Scotch descent, and was very religious, his home having been a meeting place for religious discussions for many years. He also held many minor offices, among them justice of the peace.

Gilbert T. Hodges has passed by far the greater part of his life in Monroe, Green county. He was reared on his father's farm, and received such education as the district schools afforded, later attending a college in Madison. His first essay in life for himself was as a teacher, beginning this work when he was eighteen years of age, by teaching three terms in a school in Missouri. This was followed by four winters' teaching in his home in the district schools of Clarno township. He met with great success in this work, but having been trained to farm work, he returned to that as a life work, farming with his father on shares, and buying stock. His first purchase of land consisted of 105 acres in Clarno township, known as the "Stearns farm," a portion of which he sold in 1865, and the remainder in 1870. In 1868 he bought eighty acres of his father's farm of the heirs, and thirty-four acres of his father's land within the corporation, and of the latter he sold ten acres to the Fair Grounds Association. He has since bought 120 acres in Cadiz township. He continues to buy stock in large quantities, and as he began this business in 1863, he is now the oldest continuous stock buyer in the county, and feeds cattle on a large scale. He has also bought wool for many years. His remarkable ability as a judge of stock has made him an authority in the community, and in the State Agricultural Society, of which he has been a member many years, and was an officer for about five years, being superintendent of the cattle and dairy departments.

Mr. Hodges has not confined himself entirely to agricultural pursuits, but has become a factor in financial circles, where his foresight and his wisdom have made him an invaluable counselor. He is the largest stockholder and a director in the Citizens Bank, and is a stockholder in the First National Bank. In politics, too, Mr. Hodges has played a prominent and influential part. His ballot is cast in favor of the Democratic party, and he has filled many offices. He was chairman of the county board of supervisors for ten or twelve years, and was chairman of the building committee having in charge the erection of the present handsome court house. He was a candidate for the State Assembly in 1894 and 1896, being defeated the first time by only 160 votes. He was a delegate from Milwaukee to Washington, D. C., Feb. 22, 1900, to secure the location of the national convention of the Democratic party at Milwaukee, but was defeated by the Kansas City committee. That year he went to Kansas City as a delegate, and there assisted in the nomination of William J. Bryan for president of the United States, and in the fall election, being a candidate for Congress, suffered defeat with his chief in the general landslide. Mr. Hodges has served as clerk of the district school board in Clarno township. Socially he belongs to the Catholic Order of Foresters, and for ten years he was president of the Green County Agricultural Society, and at present is one of its trustees.

On Feb. 13, 1866, Mr. Hodges was united in marriage with Miss Annie F. Banks, daughter of James A. and Grace Mary (Walker) Banks, and eight children came to bless their union: Isabel and Grace both died in infancy; Lewis A., a graduate of the Monroe high school, has been connected with the Citizens Bank for thirteen years, now holding the position of assistant cashier (he married Cornelia Mack, of Brodhead, and has two children, Constance and Van Antwerp); Emma Frances, who attended the University at Madison two years, then entered Holy Angels' Academy, at Minneapolis, and later attended Conservatory of Music at Chicago, whence she was graduated (she married Elmer Manning, a machinist at Monroe, where they reside, and where she is now president of the Woman's Club); Gilbert T., Jr., a graduate of the literary and legal departments of the University at Madison, is now practicing law in Chicago; Annie died when nearly four years old; James William (who was a member of Company H, 1st Wis. Vols., in the Spanish-American war) and Paul are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

James A. Banks and wife, parents of Mrs. Hodges, are both natives of England, who came to America in 1843, and located in Massachusetts, near Haverhill, whence after seventeen years they came to Monroe. During his residence in England Mr. Banks was a traveling man, and was interested in a woolen and cotton factory there. In Massachusetts he had charge of a cotton factory, later becoming a shoe manufacturer in Haverhill. After locating in Wisconsin, he engaged in business until burned out, and then, as he was advancing in years, he retired. His death occurred in 1886, at the age of eighty-three years, and his wife died in 1881, at the age of seventy-five. They were married in the Episcopal Church, later uniting with the Roman Catholic. In politics he was a staunch Democrat. For a time he was a member of the militia in England. His father had died early and his early training was given him by his grandfather. Mr. and Mrs. Banks were the parents of seven children, five of whom survive: Isabel, wife of Edward Flanders, of Chicago; James, of Jefferson, Wis.; Annie F., Mrs. Hodges; Grace Mary, wife of Robert Graham, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Sarah Alice, wife of Charles A. Lytle, of Monroe, Wis. The two last named were twins. Mr. Banks' grandmother was a cousin of Thomas Jefferson. Mrs. Grace Mary (Walker) Banks was a daughter of Thomas Walker, a farmer and mail carrier in England, where he died at the advanced age of ninety years, the father of thirteen children, eleven of whom grew to maturity.

ELIAS J. HELGESEN, M. D., a prominent practicing physician and surgeon, and a member of the well known drug firm of Helgesen & Godfrev, of New Glarus, Green county, is a young man to whom success has come early in life, won by skill and ability in his profession, and by enterprise and upright methods in the business world.

Dr. Helgesen was born in Moscow township, Iowa county, Feb. 2. 1866, son of John and Ingobar (Docken) Helgesen, natives of Norway. His education was all acquired in the district schools, and he remained at home until he had attained the age of twenty-one. Then he matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Keokuk, Iowa, and was graduated in medicine in 1893. He had formerly studied under a preceptor, and for two years before receiving his diploma he had practiced in Badger, Iowa. He completed his professional training in Keokuk, Iowa, and then practiced two years in Forest City, Iowa. In 1895 he located in New Glarus, where he opened a drug store in connection with his practice. Three years later he associated with him in business, Mr. A. Godfrey, a pharmacist graduate of the University of Chicago. His practice has been constantly on the increase, until at the present time he has all that he can possibly attend to. Nature endowed him with a kindly, sympathetic nature that inspires his patients with confidence, and makes his presence in the sick room most welcome.

On Jan. 26, 1886, Dr. Helgesen was married to Miss Josephine Wise, daughter of John and Susan (Winner) Wise, and four children have come to this union: John S., Walter J. E., Reuben L. and William J. Both the Doctor and his wife are Lutherans in their religious faith, but as the only English speaking church in New Glarus is the Methodist, they attend that, and are active in its work. Dr. Helgesen belongs to the A. O. U. W. and the M. W. A. Through his Alma Mater he is a member of the Alumni Medical Association of Keokuk, Iowa. Politically the Doctor is a staunch Republican, and was delegate to the State convention which nominated Gov. La Follette. At present he is serving as justice of the peace, and this attests the high esteem in which he is held, as he is the first person to hold office in New Glarus outside of the Swiss people. He is progressive and public spirited, and has endeared himself to all classes of people.

John Helgesen, father of Dr. Helgesen, was a remarkably versatile man, being a shoemaker, carpenter and stone mason. In 1861 he left his native Norway for America, and located in Moscow township, Iowa Co., Wis., where he bought a farm, and thereafter made its care his life work. His father had accompanied him from their foreign home, and lived until 1862, when he died at the advanced age of ninety years. Mr. Helgesen was twice married, and by his first wife he had four children, as follows: Margaret, wife of Knute Edmonds, of Hollandale, Wis.; Annie, widow of John Cashman, of Manitowoc, Wis.; Hannah, wife of Frank Copeman, of Chicago; and Holver, of Iowa county. He later married Ingobar Docken, daughter of Erick Docken, a native of Norway, who came to America in 1859, locating in Moscow township, where he died in 1867, at the age of fifty-five years. To this second marriage were born ten children: Dr. Elias J.; Dr. Peter A., present mayor of Lake Mills, Ia.; Dr. John M., of Barneveld, Wis.; Thomas, of Moscow township, Iowa Co.; Henry, of the same place; Sever E., of New Glarus; and Albert, Paul, Mary J., and Clara, all of Moscow township. John Helgesen served his adopted country for some time as a soldier in the Civil war, being a private in Co. H, 15th Wis. V. I. He has a brother, Thomas Helgesen, a wealthy ship builder of Liverpool, England.

GEORGE R. STEWART, a popular young grocer at Brodhead, Green county, with a good city and country trade, is rapidly coming to the front as a progressive and successful business man. He is genial and courteous in his manner, honest and reliable in his dealing, and has gained a reputation for unswerving integrity that goes unchallenged in this community.

Mr. Stewart was born in the town of Spring Valley, Rock county, Wis., Feb. 20, 1874, and is a son of Harmon and Kate (Bartlett) Stewart, both of whom were also born in this State. They were the parents of five children, George R., Harriet B., Anna L., Kittie A., and Genie M. The father was a prominent farmer in the town of Spring Valley, where he owned a farm of two hundred and seven acres. He had other real estate holdings that were very valuable, and was one of the solid men of his day. He moved into Brodhead, and there died in 1887, at the early age of thirty-five years. His widow still survives, and she and her family are residents of this city. They were Presbyterians in their faith and sympathy, but were not identified with any church. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and a Republican. His father Herman B. Stewart, was a native of Vermont, and one of the earlier settlers of Rock county, where he engaged in farming and milling; he had four children, and died at the age of seventy-five. Luke C. Bartlett, the father of Kate Bartlett mentioned above, was a native of New York, following the trade of wagon maker; he came into Wisconsin at an early day, first settling in Rock county, but afterward moving into Green county, where for a time he was in business at Albany; he has lived in Brodhead for a number of years, and is still engaged at his trade. He was the father of seven children, six of whom are now living.

George R. Stewart was only some seven years old when his parents came to Brodhead, and here he has grown to manhood. He obtained his education in the Brodhead schools, and prepared himself for a mercantile life, upon which he entered as soon as he was through school. He was a clerk for a time, and then, forming a partnership with David Gombar, began the grocery business. The partnership was dissolved at the end of two years, Mr. Stewart buying out his partner, since which time he has been alone. He has a growing trade, and needs more help from time to time as his business grows on his hands, but he feels fully competent to manage it alone. He belongs to the Knights of the Globe, and in politics is a Republican.

ABRAHAM V. KNAPP, of Lima township, Grant county, was born in Seneca county, N. Y., June 27, 1832, a son of James D. and Lois (Ingersoll) Knapp, natives of the State of Connecticut, where they were born in 1800 and 1799, respectively. While both were quite young they moved with their parents to western New York, where they were married. They engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years, and later the family moved to Monroe county, Mich., where the father died in 1854. Soon after this sad event the mother and family moved to Wisconsin, settling first at Lancaster, and later at Platteville, where the mother died in 1888. Four children were born to this couple, all in the State of New York: (1) Jerusha G. never married, and died at her home in Platteville in 1898. (2) Spencer crossed the Plains to California in 1852, and died a short time after reaching that State. (3) Riley J. was a farmer, enlisted in Co. K, 47th Wis. V. I., and at the close of the war returned to his home in Wisconsin, was never married, and died at Platteville in 1900. (4) Abraham V. was the youngest son.

From early boyhood Abraham V. Knapp has been engaged in farming. On the breaking out of the Rebellion in 1861, he enlisted in Co. F, 10th Wis. V. I., served as private, second and first sergeant and second lieutenant, under Generals O. M. Mitchel, Buel, McCook. Rosecrans and Thomas, participated in a number of battles, of which Perrysville and Stone River were the most important. At the latter battle he received an injury (ruptured veins in the leg) that permanently disabled him for military service, and in December, 1863, he resigned his commission, and returned to his home.

The year following his return Mr. Knapp was married to Miss Laura E. Waldorf, of Grant county, a daughter of Jesse and Clarissa (Jones) Waldorf, who were born and reared in Trumbull county, Ohio. They both belonged to old pioneer families of that State, and came West to Grant Co., Wis., in 1840, taking up a tract of land, which they greatly improved. Mr. Waldorf was chairman of the board of supervisors for many years, and served one term in the Legislature. Two daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf, Mrs. Knapp and a sister Mary, now deceased, who married Amanda Miner, a resident of Iowa, and left no family. Mr. Jesse Waldorf died in 1871, and Clarissa Waldorf in 1884.

Soon after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Knapp settled on the old Waldorf homestead, where they now reside. To them were born ten children: Fred W., of Fennimore, a tinner by trade, married Miss Mary Streeter, of Grant county; Frank S., mentioned below; Sidney D. B.; Clara L.; Charles D.; Jesse E.; Horace H.; Lloyd P.; Edna M.; and Ernest N. Politically Mr. Knapp has always been a Republican, casting his first presidential vote for Fremont in 1856. Both Mr. and Mrs. Knapp have long been members of the M. E. Church. Mr. Knapp superintended the Sunday-school near his home for twelve years, and had the satisfaction of having one hundred scholars, all of whom were members of the M. E. Church.

Frank S. Knapp was born in Grant county, in February, 1867, and grew to manhood on the home farm, attending the district school. Later he was a student at the State Normal at Platteville, and also at the commercial college in Madison. For a short time he engaged in teaching, and then was engaged for about eighteen months as bookkeeper for the lumber firm of W. U. Taylor & Son, of Platteville. During 1892 and 1893, he was enabled to pursue his chosen study, that of dentistry, at the State University of Iowa. The first location Dr. Knapp made for the practice of his profession was in Alexandria, S. Dak., where he remained a few months; then returned to Platteville, bought Dr. Deffinbacher's office fixtures, and has since resided in this city, where he built up a very desirable practice. During these eight succeeding years Dr. Knapp has become very well known among his brother dentists, was for two years president of the Southern Wisconsin Dental Association, and is also a member of the State Dental Society. Socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and the order of Odd Fellows, and is a charter member of the K. of P. order of this city, of which he has been C. C. Politically he is a Republican and is now serving his second term as alderman. The summer of 1900 Dr. Knapp spent in Europe, visiting England, Scotland, Ireland and France, and attending the Paris Exposition. Dr. Knapp has always attended the M. E. Church, and contributes to its support. Upright in all his dealings, thoroughly understanding his profession, pleasant in manner, Dr. Knapp not only has attained eminence in his work, but is also very popular personally and is a young man of whom Platteville may well be proud.

NILS KNUDSON. Among the honorable survivors of the old settlers of Adams township, Green county, is Nils Knudson, who is located on his fine farm, on Section 16, fifteen miles northwest of Monroe, Wis., and is one of the leading and substantial men of this locality.

Mr. Knudson was born in Walders, Norway, on May 5, 1833. His father, Knud Nelson, was born in Norway, in 1804, and came to Adams township, in 1856, and died in 1884, having had a family of nine children: Bessie, deceased; Mary, of Iowa; Nils, of this sketch; Isabella, the wife of Ole O. Syaness, of Wisconsin; Knudt, of Iowa; Ole, deceased; Annie, the wife of Ole Anderson, of Iowa; Lena, the wife of James Rassmussen, of Iowa; and Thomas, of Iowa.

On March 7, 1861, Nils Knudson was married to Carrie Olson, and three children were born of this union: Knudt; Ole, deceased; and Caroline, the wife of Oliver Brager, of Iowa. Mrs. Knudson died in 1872, and in 1874 Mr. Knudson was married to Miss Carrie Nelson Avok, who was born in Norway on May 16, 1846, and who came to the United States when a girl. Five children were born to this marriage: Nils, born Oct. 26, 1874, at home, single; Martin, born on Feb. 12, 1877, at home, single; Ingeborg, born on Feb. 7, 1879, married Gilbert Jordet, of North Dakota; Minnie, born on Jan. 9, 1884; and Anna, born on June 30, 1888. Although now Mr. Knudson is one of the leading and wealthy men of Green county, when he came to America it was as a poor young man, and naturally the reader would ask how these intervening years have been spent, the question being easily answered by the neighbors of Mr. Knudson, who could tell of his industry, his energy and good judgment, his business ability, and also his honest and upright dealing with all with whom he has been associated in business. Mr. Knudson has a high standing in Adams township, and the family is one of the most highly respected. A prominent member of the Democratic party, he has exerted considerable influence, and has been called upon to serve the township in several positions, notably as school director, member of the school board, and as road supervisor. His means are large, and he has recently purchased a $16,000 farm in North Dakota. In the Lutheran Church he is a valued and consistent member, and is highly regarded, through the community, as one of the most esteemed of the old settlers.

SEVER CHESTELSON, who resides on Section 11, Brigham township, Iowa county, is a well-known citizen of his community, and was a soldier of the war of the Rebellion, having been a member of Company C, 12th Wis. V. I. In January, 1862, he enlisted, and was discharged July 16, 1865, having covered in his experience as a soldier all that period of the war in which systematic and continuous efforts were employed to crush the insurrection. At the time of his enlistment, the Nation was just beginning to realize it had a serious and terrible war on its hands. With thousands of other brave and loyal men, Mr. Chestelson took up arms against the sea of secession, as soon as he saw the struggle and the principles it involved. He was with his regiment during the greater portion of his service, participating in some of the most important events of the war. He took part in the siege and capture of Vicksburg, followed Gen. Sherman in his famous March to the Sea, and shared in the glory and honor of the Grand Review at Washington. With his regiment Mr. Chestelson was mustered out of the United States service at Louisville, and discharged at Madison.

Sever Chestelson was born in Norway in 1831, and grew to manhood in his native country, coming to America after he had reached the age of twenty-two years. For a time his residence was at Stoughton, Wis., then at Blue Mounds, and finally, in 1854, he settled on the farm where he is found at the present time. To this place he returned at the conclusion of the war, and here presently he brought his wife, Miss Anna Thompson, to whom he was married in 1866. She was born in Norway in 1843, and was brought to this country by her parents when only two years old. Her parents lived many years in Blue Mounds, but long since passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Chestelson have seven children living: Maria, Sarah, Amanda, Randine, Carl, Sophia, and Curtis. Two others passed away in childhood. Mr. Chestelson's health was much impaired by his army experiences, never having recovered from the hardships through which he passed; his heart was seriously injured, and this shuts him out from active and continuous work. A good soldier in the war, he is a good citizen at the present time, and has maintained throughout his life a high standard of character.

Mr. Chestelson had two brothers who died in the war for the Union. Tarjei and Aslak Chestelson, both members of the same company as our subject. They were fine young men, and very reliable and trustworthy soldiers. Aslak died in the rear of Vicksburg, during the progress of the military operations against that rebel stronghold. Tarjei, who was taken ill, was on his way to the hospital, when he died on a steamboat on the Mississippi, while being taken North. Mr. and Mrs. Chestelson have a pleasant and hospitable home, and are held in high esteem in the community in which their quiet and useful lives are passing. Mr. Chestelson belongs to Gen. Dixon Post, No. 191, G. A. R., at Mt. Horeb, Wisconsin.

CASPAR W. KARN, proprietor of the Browntown Mills, in Green county, is one of those German-American citizens who have contributed so much that is good to American citizenship. He was born in Saxony March 15, 1843, a son of George and Mary (Fromholdt) Karn, who were natives of the same country. In their family were five children, three of whom—George, Peter and Margaret—remained in the Fatherland, while Valentine accompanied his brother, Caspar, to the new World in 1867; he soon returned to his native land, however, and remained there.

Caspar W. Karn had as a traveling companion on his journey to America, Miss Catherine Schmidting, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Prouch) Schmidting, of Cologne, Germany, the former of whom died in Germany. The latter started for the New World with her daughter, but the daughter becoming ill at Bremen, returned to her old home, and later came to her mother in Madison, Wis., accompanying Mr. Karn as above stated. On Sept. 8, 1867, Mr. Karn and Miss Schmidting were united in marriage, and to their union have come eleven children: Louis W., born July 13, 1868, is now living in Chicago; William F., born June 8, 1871, now a farmer in Lafayette county, married Edith Michael, and has two children, Leah and Willie; Earnest A., born Dec. 23, 1872, a farmer in Green county, married May Foy, and has two children, Ella and Amelia; Mary M., born July 20, 1874, married Peter J. R. Post, a merchant of Dane county, and has two children, Junita and Leana; Herman Joseph, born Sept. 21, 1876, resides in Iowa; Frank A., born Oct. 1, 1878, resides in Green county; George L., born Jan. 17, 1881, is at home, engaged with his father in the milling business; Edward J., born Oct. 1, 1882, John Henry, born March 29, 1885, Oscar H., born Jan. 28, 1887, and Amelia E., born July 30, 1888, are all at home.

When Mr. Karn came to America he was a very poor man, and his capital consisted chiefly of his trade, that of milling, which he had learned in the old country. He first worked in Madison, Wisconsin, and later in Middleton, and then began a series of changes which included Iowa county, Columbia county, Mount Vernon, and Milwaukee, whence he returned to Mount Vernon, where he purchased a mill and put in a roller process. In 1895 he sold out there and located in Browntown, where he owns a mill fully equipped with all the latest machinery, and capable of turning out the best grade of work. He also owns a two-story dwelling and sixty-five acres of fine land, all the result of his industry and careful management, assisted by his good wife's clear judgment. In politics Mr. Karn is a staunch Democrat, and has held a number of offices in the various places he has lived, among them being that of school director. In religious faith he is a Lutheran; Mrs. Karn and the children are Catholics, and they all take an interest in all that pertains to the welfare of their churches.

Mrs. Karn has a sister who still makes her home in Germany, and is now the wife of William Brown, who was for a time a captain of a boat on the river Rhine.

CHRISTOPHER MACABUS JACKSON. While perhaps most of the sturdy settlers of Wisconsin came originally from the East, or directly from the old country, a few, here and there, may be found who represent the best blood of the South, sons and grandsons of those brave and daring Virginians, who crossed the mountains, and in one of the longest and bloodiest struggles with the savage race, wrested from Indian occupancy and control the fair lands of Kentucky. One of the best specimens of that rare and splendid type of American manhood is Christopher M. Jackson, who is also the oldest surviving pioneer of Potosi, Grant county, and with one exception its oldest citizen.

Mr. Jackson was born in Greenville, Muhlenberg county, Ky., Jan. 17, 1816, one of the thirteen children of Jesse and Hannah (Rhodes) Jackson, who were among the most worthy pioneers of Kentucky, and the grandson of Christopher Jackson, who was probably of English descent, the family having located in Virginia, in Colonial times. Christopher had seven sons, Julius, Christopher, Gabriel, Samuel, George, Leroy and Jesse, one of whom entered the Continental army at the age of sixteen years. Jesse Jackson, father of our subject, was born in Virginia, but migrated to the Kentucky frontier about 1785. The Indians were then very troublesome and the settlers often had to live in a blockhouse, where to avoid surprise by the savages, Jesse took turns with the others in standing guard. He was a farmer and millwright by occupation, and a man of commanding influence. He served as sheriff of Muhlenberg county, and was for many years a justice of the peace. In religious faith he was a member of the Baptist church. He died in 1847, aged seventy-eight years. His wife, Hannah Rhodes, was a native of Pennsylvania, of Dutch lineage. She was one of six children, her four brothers and one sister being Solomon, David, Henry, Jacob and Catherine. Of the thirteen children born to Jesse and Hannah Jackson, two died in childhood. The other eleven attained an average age of over eighty years, Nancy being ninety-eight at her death. They were Elisha, Nancy, Samuel, Leroy, Elizabeth, Martha, Mary, Esther, Christopher M., Susan and Harvey. Of these Christopher M. and Harvey are the only known survivors, the latter being a resident of Sac City, Iowa.

Christopher M. Jackson, at the age of nineteen, in 1835, left his native State for the Northwest. He tarried for a short time at Dubuque, Iowa, then came to Wisconsin, which was a part of the territory of Michigan. In 1836 he located at Potosi, and was living there when the territory of Wisconsin was organized. He followed mining for several years, then bought wild land and turned his attention to agriculture. In 1850 he drove team across the Plains to California, spending about fifteen months in that State. While there he discovered the famous "Yankee Jim" mine, which in company with others he developed and for a time worked quite successfully. Upon his return to Wisconsin he sold his interest in the mine. Since 1873 Mr. Jackson has resided in the village of Potosi, where for thirteen years he kept the Banfill House. For some years he was a partner with his son-in-law in the leading store of the town, under the firm name of Hunt & Jackson, though he never gave personal attention to mercantile business.

In 1846 Mr. Jackson married Miss Martha Bonham, a native of Pike Co., Missouri, and the daughter of Captain Francis and Mary (Neavill) Bonham, who were among the prominent pioneers of Grant Co., Wis.

Capt. Bonham was one of a family of five sons and two daughters, namely, James, Joseph, Francis, Harvey, Martin, Isabella and Mahala. He was born in Rye Valley, Wythe county, Va., in 1806, and in 1818 removed to Pike county, Mo., where he served during the pioneer days as a captain of militia. Though he possessed few opportunities for a schooling, he had by extensive reading, aided by a remarkable memory, acquired a broad and useful general education. He died in Grant county in 1892, aged eighty-six years. Among the cherished heirlooms which he left to his posterity was a sword, carried by one of his ancestors, in the days of Cromwell's Roundheads, and which also did service in the American revolution. His wife was a native of Shelby Co., Ky. Their eight children, four sons and four daughters, were Martha (Mrs. C. M. Jackson); Euphemia (Mrs. Ott); William; James, who died in his youth; Calvin; Carlos; Lenora (Mrs. Baldwin, deceased), and Mary Frank (Mrs. Brooks). Mrs. Martha (Bonham) Jackson, the wife of our subject, died Nov. 6, 1880, aged forty-nine years.

To Christopher M. and Martha Jackson were born eleven children, of whom two died in childhood. The others are Anna Eliza, who married M. L. Spaulding, and died in 1890, aged forty-one years; Lura Jane, who married W. H. Hunt, and resides in Platteville, Wis.; Matilda Jeannette, who married Adolph Kinney, and resides in St. Paul, Minn.; Adella May, who died April 25, 1895; Minnie Eva, who died April 15, 1893; Martha Lincoln, of Potosi; Myrtle Belle, who married Herman Ott, of Preston, Minn.; William Christopher, of Wilton, N. D.; and Jessie Frances, who married S. H. Hedges, of Chicago. Mr. Jackson has also fifteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild. He is spending his declining years in one of the most pleasant homes in the village, where his comfort is carefully looked after by his daughter, Martha L. Mr. Jackson cast his first presidential vote for Zachariah Taylor in 1848. Since the Republican party came into existence he has been one of its staunchest supporters, though never a candidate for any official position. He has always taken a deep interest in the development of Potosi, and he has been a prominent factor in its material advancement. Though for some years past, physical disabilities have prevented his active participation in business affairs, his mind is still active, and he is by no means indifferent to the progress which is being made in his locality, as well as in the world at large.

ADAM D. SCHMID, the present occupant of the important and responsible position of county treasurer of Green county, has been a resident of Monroe for a number of years, and of the county since he was a small boy. He has been all his life an industrious and hard-working man, moved by laudable ambitions, and exhibiting a spirit of integrity and downright honesty in all business transactions. He has greatly prospered, and is now the owner of a very comfortable portion of this world's goods.

Adam D. Schmid was born in Canton Glarus, Nitfurm, Switzerland, March 4, 1836, and is a son of Mathias and Catharine (Schmid) Schmid, both natives of the mountain republic. They had a family of eight sons and five daughters, of whom six are now living: Mathias, of Beresford, S. Dak.; Henry, of New Glarus; Adam D.; and Thomas; Melchior, and Catherine (the wife of Casper Hauser), all residing in New Glarus, Wis. The senior Schmid, imbued with the love of liberty, and hearing of the possibilities of the New World, early determined to bring his children to the United States, that they might have opportunities to rise which Old-world conditions denied them. He emigrated to America in 1845, where he began a career as a real-estate owner and farmer by purchasing twenty acres. When he had paid for this more was bought, until, at the time of his death, in 1854, he owned a farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres. He was only fifty-two, and his widow survived many years, dying in 1877, when seventy years old. They were both members of the Lutheran Church. His father, Mathias Schmid, was a native of Switzerland, where he died well advanced in years. He had a large family. The father of Catharine Schmid was Henry Schmid, a native of Switzerland, where he followed the life of a shepherd. He died in middle life, being swept down the mountain in a snowslide.

Adam D. Schmid was a sturdy lad of nine years when his parents decided to seek their fortunes in a New World, and he still retains vivid memories of the voyage across the ocean.

It was made in a sailing-vessel, and required forty-eight days for its completion. A severe storm was encountered, and the ship was blown far out of its course. The family left their Swiss home April 15, and it was not until August 16 that they arrived at New Glarus, Wisconsin, then the Mecca of the hopes and ambitions of many of their countrymen. Adam grew to manhood on his father's farm, and attended the New Glarus public schools. When his father's death, in 1854, called for the mutual help and co-operation of all the children, Adam was not found wanting. He gave his time and labor freely to the task of paying the indebtedness yet remaining on the place. This was soon accomplished, and in 1855 the young man dared to contract for a farm of his own. It consisted of one hundred and thirty acres, and was increased by subsequent purchases until at one time Mr. Schmid owned a large and valuable farm of four hundred and sixty-four acres, all in the township of New Glarus. There he made his home until 1896, when he moved into the city of Monroe, feeling that he was entitled to "take it easy" the rest of his life. He has a neat and attractive home on Railroad street, and is amply provided for all the contingencies of life.

Mr. Schmid is a staunch Republican, and has been an earnest party worker for some years. For many years he was a member of the town board, and was town assessor for one year. He was elected treasurer of the county in 1898, and has proved a capable and reliable official.

Adam D. Schmid and Mary Duerst were united in the solemn bonds of matrimony April 29, 1858 and the union has proved in every way a fortunate and happy one. Mrs. Schmid is the daughter of Nickolaus Duerst and his wife Maria (Streiff). They have had five sons and six daughters, Nicholas, Kathrina, Mathias, Adam (deceased), Mary, Theodore, Rosalina, Anna, Bertha, Clara, and Wilhelm Arthur (deceased). Nicholas, a farmer in the town of Monroe, married Anna Babler, and has five children, Mary Palma, Freddie, Nicholas, Alvin, and Alma. Kathrina married Charles Kundert, lives at Beresford, S. Dak., and is the mother of five children, Charles, Walter, Wesley, Gladys and Apal. Mathias lives at home, and is single. Adam died when nineteen years old. Mary married W. F. Leg-ler; they live at American Falls, Idaho, and have four children,—Nellie Dorothea, Arthur, Adam and Johnnie. Theodore married Mary Schmid, and later Iva Lizer, and lives in the town of Monroe, Green county. Rosalina married Eugene Nonenberg, lives at Catharin, Colo., and has one child, Mabel. Anna married James Budge, lives at Aspen, Colo., and has two children, Russell and Orrin. Bertha married John Voegli; they live in Exeter township, Green county, and have two sons, Adam and Clarence. Clara married Peter Garfield Wells, of Monroe. William Arthur died when four years old. Mr. and Mrs. Schmid are members of the German Evangelical Church, and are valued citizens of the community.

JOHN FRANKLIN LITEL, a retired business man of Albany, Green county, has had a varied and eventful career in the commercial world. He has been active and industrious, and has always believed in hustling to get on in the world. He is highly spoken of by those who remember him as an active business man, and is now taking his ease, which he has richly earned by long and arduous years.

Mr. Litel was born in Bond county, Ill., Oct. 13, 1831, son of John Franklin, Sr., and Lucretia (Dudgeon) Litel, natives of Tennessee. They were the parents of fourteen children, of whom five are still living at this distant day. John Franklin, of Albany; Lewellyn A., of Belleville, Ark.; Francis Marion, of Conway, Mo.; Rowena, wife of Mr. Whittier, of Smith Center, Kans.; and Ellen, wife of Henry C. Boone, of Kansas. The father was a farmer, and moved to Illinois in the early days, settling in Bond county. In 1832 he enlisted in the Black Hawk war, and while in the service came to Wisconsin. He was entranced with the country, and in 1833 brought his family to Platteville, where he engaged in lead mining. In 1841 he moved to Buchanan county, Mo., and helped to survey the city of Saint Joseph. Two years later he came back to Platteville, and was engaged in farming for two years. In 1847 he moved to Highland, and was established in farming there until 1867, when he removed to West Bend, Iowa, and ten years later located in Downs, Kansas, where his wife died in 1880, at the age of sixty-eight years. He and his youngest daughter then went to Conway, where he died in 1898, at the age of eighty-eight. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church. William Litel, the father of John Franklin, Sr., was a native of Tennessee, and a farmer of Irish descent; he had a small family, and died when old. John Dudgeon, the father of Lucretia, was a native of Alabama, of a French lineage; he was a tanner by trade, and lived to be over ninety years of age.

John Franklin Litel was a child of two years of age when his parents moved from Illinois into Wisconsin, and he attended the public schools at Platteville, and then followed lead mining until 1852. That year he crossed the Plains to California, and was six months on the way. For four years he was a gold miner, and his efforts were crowned with fair success. He came to Wisconsin in 1856, and in the spring of 1857 engaged in the mercantile business at Highland. He was successively in Avoca, in Lone Rock, and in Footville, following the same line. At Afton he built a flour mill, and in 1880 he came to Albany, and went into a general store. In 1892 he retired from active business interests, and, as it is possible for him to do, he is taking pleasure and comfort in the passing years. He has lately made a trip to California, and another into Mississippi.

On August 16, 1860, Mr. Litel was married to Miss Mary A. Mears, a daughter of Michael and Mary (Maher) Mears, and six children have come to bless this union: James Edward, John F., Jr., and Cora May are living; three died in early childhood. James Edward is mentioned elsewhere in this volume; John F., Jr., is a banker in Oregon, Wis.; and Cora May married John Caraway, of Biloxi, Miss. Mrs. Litel was a member of the Catholic church. Mr. Litel was a Democrat in his active years, though he is not taking an active part in politics. He has been supervisor of the town of Albany three terms, and was a member of the village board for several years.

WASHINGTON F. SELLECK. Among the brave men who devoted the opening years of their manhood to the defense of our country from the internal foes who sought her dismemberment was this gentleman, now a prominent resident of Millville township, Grant county.

Mr. Selleck was born in Canada in 1842, a son of George J. and Zoa Selleck, who emigrated from Canada and settled at Waukesha, Wis., several years before Wisconsin became a State. A few years later they located in Wyalusing township, Grant county, and later moved to Ellenboro township. The mother died many years ago, and the father, who long survived her, passed away at the home of his son Washington F., in Millville township, in 1896. In his family were ten children, and three of the sons served in the Union army during the Civil war, namely: Wellington, now a resident of Hasty, Minn.; George, who lives in Beetown, Grant county; and Washington F. On reaching man's estate the last named married Miss Sarah Jane Huston, a daughter of John Huston, and to them have been born seven children, three sons and four daughters: May, Louisa, Charles, George, Ethel, Henry and Katy.

Early in the fall of 1862 Mr. Selleck entered the service of his adopted country as a member of Company M, 4th Missouri Cavalry, which company was organized at Boscebel, Grant Co., Wis., as a part of Fremont's body guard. The command went to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, where they were drilled, and from there accompanied Fremont on an expedition into Missouri, but, as is well known, the General was about this time superseded, and the command to which Mr. Selleck belonged joined in the campaign under Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, taking part in the battle of Springfield, where the gallant Lyon fell. Mr. Selleck fought under Gen. Sigel at Pea Ridge, after which the command was transferred to the 5th Missouri Cavalry, which was consolidated with the 4th and thereafter known as the 4th Missouri Cavalry. It was then in active service in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, and for six months was stationed at Vicksburg, thence going South. While at Vicksburg Mr. Selleck performed an important and interesting service, being sent as orderly to the famous stockade at Andersonville for the exchange of prisoners. He had an opportunity of witnessing the horrible condition of the Union prisoners at that infamous prison, and also had the satisfaction of assisting to relieve a small portion of them by exchange, he returning with them to Vicksburg. He continued to serve until June, 1865, when he was mustered out at New Orleans, and returned to his home in Grant county, Wis., with a war record of which he may justly be proud. He is highly esteemed as an honorable, upright citizen, and as a gallant soldier in the war for the Union.

THOMAS A. LYNCH, a well-known citizen and successful agriculturist, residing three miles south of Browntown, in the township of Cadiz, Green county, is a native of the Buckeye State, born in Coshocton county, March 2, 1849, a son of Simon and Margaret (Divan) Lynch, both natives of Ohio.

Simon Lynch was born June 15, 1824, a son of William Lynch, a native of Pennsylvania, of Scotch-Irish and German origin, who became one of the pioneers of Ohio. Simon Lynch was married in 1843 to Margaret Divan, and became the father of twelve children, of whom we have the following record: William and Samuel died in childhood; Elizabeth became the wife of Frank Fullis, of Sterling, Ill., who met an accidental death; Thomas A. is mentioned below; Martha J. wedded Frank Ullom; John W. died in 1890; Ellen is a teacher in the public schools of Milwaukee; Annie M. is the wife of John Howe, of Monroe, Wisconsin; Simon P., a farmer of Cadiz township, married Mary M. Tyler, of Martintown, Wisconsin; Hester, the youngest, a music teacher, resides with her mother in Monroe. George W. and Absalom died in 1862. The father of this family passed away April 2, 1901, and the widowed mother makes her home in Monroe, lovingly cared for by her children.

Thomas A. Lynch was early trained to the work of a farmer, and has continued to follow that calling all his life. His education was obtained in the public schools, and the interest in educational work then aroused has made itself felt in later years by his work as a school director. He has ever taken an active interest in public questions, and in politics is a Republican. When there is work to do for his party, he can always be found ready to lay aside any personal interest and devote his time to the public weal. He has held the offices of road master, collector and treasurer of his township, and has given good satisfaction in every office he has held.

On Jan. 8, 1874, Mr. Lynch was married to Miss Mary Bratley, daughter of William and Mary C. (Cain) Bratley, who came from Savannah, Ga., to Green Co., Wis., in 1860. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lynch; Grace E., wife of Myron Rinehart, of Cadiz township; Elsie A., wife of Frank Tyler, a farmer of Cadiz; Altha V., Raymond D., Ural B., Ethena C. and John W., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch are interested workers in the Methodist Church, with which they united in early life.

William Bratley, father of Mrs. Lynch, was born in England, and came to America when he was twenty-eight years of age, after having passed twelve years as a sailor. He was the father of ten children, eight of whom survive: Melissa, wife of Isaac Denny, of Sylvester township; Silas H., of Cadiz township; Mary A., Mrs. Lynch; Joseph A., who married Eva Wright; Eliza J., wife of Willis Ullom, of Nora, Ill.; Edward F., of Lena, Ill.; Isabelle, wife of A. Bechtol, of Lafayette Co.; Lenora A., who married Harry Morse, of Winslow, Illinois.

GEORGE F. SCHAAL, one of the leading farmers of Waterloo township, Grant county, residing on section 36, is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1830, a son of Leonard and Rosana (Weller) Schaal, natives of Germany, who never came to this country, but lived and died in the land of their nativity. Of the family born to this worthy couple, George is the only one who ever crossed the ocean, but he has two brothers still living in Germany, Jacob, six years his junior, and Christian, nine years younger, while two sisters, Rosana and Christina, are also alive. A sister, now deceased, was named Catherine, but she died in Germany.

George F. Schaal was the eldest son, and would have inherited his father's property had he remained in Germany, but preferred to make his own way in life, and landed in New York, on June 7, 1853. Thence he went to Connecticut, where he worked in a rubber factory for eight months, after which he proceeded to Buffalo, N. Y., and remained three months. His next removal was made in the spring of 1854 to Galena, Ill., but went from there, almost immediately to the lumber region a few miles north of Chippewa Falls, where he worked for sixteen months, when he penetrated further north, to a point above Wauson, and remained for four years. After this he went to the southern part of Grant county, and worked for George Geyer for eight months.

About this time Mr. Schaal returned to Germany, but after staying a few months returned to America, in the summer of 1861, after the war had broken out. Although he endeavored to enlist several times, he was refused, as the quota was full, so Mr. Schaal located at Potosi, and later at Barkers Prairie, where he was employed for several seasons. His next location was at Waterloo, and it was while residing here that he was finally accepted, Oct. 1, 1861, as a member of Company K, 6th Wis. V. I., participating in many of the important engagements of his regiment. During the battle of Hatcher's Run, Feb. 6, 1865, Mr. Schaal was severely wounded in the shoulder by a piece of shell, and sent to the hospital at Petersburg. When he had recovered sufficiently, Mr. Schaal was detailed as a nurse, but the duties were so severe for him in his enfeebled condition that he fell sick and did not recover until the close of the war, when he rejoined his regiment, marched with it to Washington, and participated in the Grand Review, after which he was honorably discharged, June 23, 1865. After the war Mr. Schaal purchased a fine farm at Waterloo, where he still makes his home, and through his industry and thrift he has amassed considerable property.

Mr. Schaal was married in 1863 to Miss Adelfena Kemich, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1843, and made the journey to this country alone. Mr. and Mrs. Schaal are the parents of eight sons, of whom seven are living: George F., August, Henry, Albert, William, Edward and Gustave, and one Otto, is deceased. In addition they had four daughters, now deceased: Rosana, Matilda, Lydia and an infant unnamed. Mr. Schaal is a staunch Republican, and he and Mrs. Schaal are consistent members of the M. E. Church. Their home is a pleasant one, and they are highly esteemed by a large circle of friends.

JAMES E. LITEL is a prominent and progressive citizen of Albany, Green county, where he was formerly engaged as a general merchant, having kept a good stock of goods, carefully selected for the local needs, and, in his business, won a reputation as a man of honesty and integrity.

Mr. Litel was born in Avoca, Wis., Aug. 29, 1861, and is a son of John F. and Mary A. (Mears) Litel. The father was born in Illinois and the mother in Ireland. Seven children were born to them, three of whom are now living: James E.; John F., of Oregon, Wis.; and Cora May, wife of John Caraway, of Biloxi, Miss. The father, when seventeen years of age, started to California, and for several years was a gold miner. On his return he engaged as a general merchant at Avoca for several years and then spent a year on a farm. He was in business at Lone Rock again, and from there he went to Afton, where he built a gristmill. He was a general merchant at Footville, after leaving Afton. In 1880 he came to Albany, and continued the same business for several years. In 1885 his son, James E., succeeded to the business.

James E. Litel was three years old when his father left Avoca and he spent his childhood and youth in the various towns where his father was engaged in business. When old enough he was taken into his father's store as a clerk, and had a thorough commercial training under his immediate supervision. As already noted, in 1885 he bought the store, and was engaged in its management until December, 1900, when he sold out and went to California, remaining several months. In August, 1901, James E., in company with his father, John F., and brother, John F., Jr., organized the Bank of Oregon, located at Oregon, Wis., which transacts a general banking business, and is in a prosperous condition.

On Jan. 11, 1880, James E. Litel was married to Miss Ella Beach, daughter of H. P. and Lydia (Rush) Beach. They are the parents of four children, two of whom are living at the present time, Hazel and John B.; Sidney died at the age of five months; and one died in infancy. Mrs. Litel belongs to the Methodist Church. Fraternally Mr. Litel is a member of the Knights of Pythias. Politically he is a Democrat, and during the administration of President Cleveland was postmaster of Albany; he was chairman of the Democratic central committee during several campaigns. He has been a member of the board of trustees of Albany several terms, and is a gentleman of character and standing at home and wherever he is known.

W. H. AND B. J. BENNETT are the able and popular proprietors of The Mineral Point Tribune, which was established in 1847, the first number appearing as The Wisconsin Tribune, on Sept. 4, of that year. George W.

Bliss, the founder, learned the printing trade in the State of New York, for a time being a co-laborer with Horace Greeley. Mr. Bliss came to Mineral Point, with his family and part of the material for his newspaper, in an emigrant wagon. Overcoming many difficulties that have obliterated so many like enterprises, the publication was continued, and not half a dozen weeks have since passed in which the paper did not appear. Mr. Bliss was proprietor and editor continuously for over twenty-one years. From 1851 to 1854 he had a partner, Josiah B. Cheney, and from 1858 to 1869 his son, Edward U. Bliss, was associated with him, but the founder was at all times chief editor and manager. On June 1, 1869, the Blisses sold the plant and business entire to W. H. Bennett and John B. Teasdale. The firm of Bennett & Teasdale continued until 1871, when Mr. Teasdale sold his interest to Mr. Bennett. In 1889 B. J. Bennett, brother of W. H., purchased a half-interest in the business, and in 1891 became sole owner. In 1894 W. H. Bennett repurchased a half-interest, and since then the brothers have conducted it in partnership.

It is a peculiar circumstance that in the fifty-four years since the founding of this venerable paper, only two families have ever had control of its columns, and in every issue since the first, in 1847, the name of Bliss or Bennett has appeared as proprietor. Both of the present proprietors learned the printing trade in the office, W. H. Bennett having begun with the original proprietor, Mr. Bliss, in 1857. B. J. Bennett having entered the office as a boy in 1869.

W. H. BENNETT was born at Platteville, Wis., Dec. 27, 1839, and moved, with his parents in 1841, to Mineral Point, where he resided until Sept. 27, 1861, when he enlisted as a soldier for the Union in Company E, 11th Wis. V. I. He was discharged from the army in October, 1864, and worked as a printer in New Orleans, La., and Mobile, Ala., until June, 1866, when he returned to Wisconsin and became foreman of the Mineral Point Tribune. On Jan. 1, 1867, at Boscobel, Wis., he established The Appeal, and conducted it for two years, and then returned to Mineral Point, where, the following year, he became a proprietor of the Tribune, on which he began work as an apprentice in 1857.

Mr. Bennett has held a number of important positions; among those may be mentioned deputy revenue collector, 1874-1876, and State superintendent of public property, under the popular Governor Rusk, 1882-1888. He is an active and prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and was assistant adjutant-general for the Department of Wisconsin from June 1, 1897, to June 1, 1898.

B. J. BENNETT, the junior member of the firm, was born in Mineral Point March 6, 1854. At the age of fifteen he began working with his brother, W. H., on The Tribune, and has been constantly with it for the thirty-one years succeeding, as printer, foreman, editor and proprietor. He early developed taste and skill as a printer, especially in the job and advertising departments, and for years has been recognized as the best workman in that line in southwestern Wisconsin.

These brothers are sons of Matthew and Grace Bennett who emigrated from England and settled in Wisconsin in 1836. The father followed mining generally. He early became thoroughly American in sentiment, and familiarized himself with her system of government. He served several terms as assessor and treasurer of his town, and for several years as deputy county treasurer.

W. H. Bennett was married, in 1867, to Miss Louisa Andrews. Four sons have been born to them: Edgar Powell, Alex. George, William Bryant and Vivian Andrews.

B. J. Bennett was married, in 1877, to Miss Hattie Hosking. Their family consists of one daughter, Veta L.

DANIEL WICHSER, senior member of the firm of Wichser & Babler, somewhat extensively engaged in business in Monticello, where they handle all kinds of agricultural implements, windmills, pumps, tanks, heaters, pipes, fittings, gas engines and almost anything a modern and well-conducted farm may need, is a hustling and energetic young man with a host of friends throughout this section.

Mr. Wichser was born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, Oct. 8, 1869, and is a son of Casper and Sarah (Blumer) Wichser, both natives of the canton just mentioned. They were the parents of twelve children, of whom nine are now living: Magdalena (the wife of Franz Hefty), Sarah (who married Jacob Kundert), Elsbeth (who married Melchior Zwicky), all three still making their homes in Switzerland; Jacob (who lives in Italy), Fred (of Switzerland). Melchior (who remained in Switzerland until 1883, when he, too, came to America), Rosa (the widow of Jacob Schindler, of Switzerland). Daniel (who came to Wisconsin), and Balz (who is located in Beloit). The father worked in a cotton factory in the city of Betschwanden, where he died in 1894, at the age of sixty-four years. His widow still has her home in that city. They were both members of the Swiss Reformed Church. The paternal grandfather of Daniel Wichser was Melchior Wichser, who was killed by a fall in the mountains in middle life; he was the father of four children, and was engaged in various occupations. The maternal grandfather of Daniel Wichser was Jacob Blumer; he died in Switzerland at the age of seventy years, and left a small family.

Daniel Wichser was reared in Canton Glarus, where he received the benefit of the very excellent common school system that prevails in the Mountain Republic. After his school days were ended he entered a cotton factory, where he was engaged for three years. He worked a year in a sawmill, and another on a railroad. This terminated his career in his native land, as he came to America, making his home in Monticello, Wis., where he has lived to the present time. He crossed the ocean in 1888, and his successful career in this country is but another illustration of the value of pluck and determination, which the lives of thousands of his compatriots have already given to the world. For the first three years after his arrival in this country Mr. Wichser worked on a farm, and was then employed in the town of Monticello as a machinist. By this time he felt competent to engage in business for himself, and, forming a partnership with James E. Moore, they operated together for a year in the windmill and pump business. For two years he carried on this business alone, and uniting with Ezra L. Babler, under the firm name of Wichser & Babler, the two have carried on business together up to the present time. They are doing well, as they are both capable and reliable workmen, understand their business thoroughly and have the confidence of their patrons to a marked degree.

Mr. Wichser was married March 8, 1897, to Miss Sarah Zweifel, a daughter of Fred and Sarah (Voegeli) Zweifel. To this union have come two children, Wilbert Lincoln and Nina. Mr. and Mrs. Wichser are members of the Swiss Reformed Church. Politically he is an active Republican, and his standing in the community is attested by his election to the village board. He owns his own home in the village and has built a very complete shop. While still a young man, he is regarded as one of the leading business men of this section.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BULFINCH, of the town of Sylvester, is well known among the pioneers of Green county. He occupies a well-improved farm about four miles northwest of Juda.

William and Mary (Sherman) Bulfinch, his parents, came of old Massachusetts stock. They were married Feb. 19, 1821, and became the parents of nine children: Oscar C., born Dec. 3, 1821, died an infant; Joseph, born Nov. 14, 1822; William S., born Sept. 13, 1823, died April 21, 1850; John A., born Sept. 5, 1826; Marshall L., April 12, 1828, a resident of Grant City, Mo., where he has followed the tailoring trade; George Washington, our subject; Mary O., born Aug. 25, 1832, died July 15, 1837; Edward E., born March 28, 1835; and Eunice, born May 28, 1836. This family have all passed away except George W. and Marshall L.

George W. Bulfinch was born June 11, 1830, and came West with his parents in 1844. They subsequently spent some time in Illinois, remaining there until 1847, when they made their home on Section 22, town of Sylvester, all of this land being now included in the farm on which Mr. Bulfinch is living. Mr. Bulfinch was married, May 14, 1861, to Alice, a daughter of George and Agnes (Atkinson) Fletcher, from Cumberland, England. Mrs. Bulfinch came to Green county with her parents when she was ten years old. In 1856 her parents removed to Kansas, where her father died. Mr. and Mrs. Bulfinch have had three children: (1) Erwin Marshall, born March 16, 1862, is a civil engineer, and has his home in Guatemala, Central America. (2) Mary A., born Oct. 2, 1870, is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and is a school teacher. (3) Arthur F., born Jan. 5, 1872, is also a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

Mr. Bulfinch was reared on the farm, and obtained his education in the local schools. In 1853 he took a trip to Oregon and California, making the journey overland with six yoke of oxen and trail wagons. He returned to Wisconsin in 1856, by the Isthmus route and steamer to New York City, from which point he came back to his home. This journey covered about twelve thousand miles. Later Mr. Bulfinch made a trip to Montana, and still later a second trip to California. In 1867 he was again in Montana, and once more returned to Wisconsin in 1869. Mr. Bulfinch remained on the home farm until 1875, when he went to the Black Hills, and in 1876 he again made the journey, coming back late in the same year. He has also been in Arizona and New Mexico. Since 1876, however, he has devoted himself steadily to home farming, and has been very successful. Mr. Bulfinch is an honorable and upright man, a patriotic citizen, and well informed on everything that relates to farming.

JOHN HARTWIG, JR., a progressive and prosperous agriculturist of Jordan township, Green county, resides on his farm of 220 acres, improved land, located on Jordan creek, four miles north of Browntown, and some eight miles northwest of the city of Monroe.

Mr. Hartwig was born Dec. 28, 1859, in Ohio, a son of George Hartwig, who was born in Berlin, Germany, a son of John Hartwig, who died in Germany, the father of six children, viz.: George; John, Andrew and Maggie, all three living in Canada; Eliza, in Cincinnati, Ohio; and Christena, in Germany. George Hartwig was married in Ohio to Elizabeth Hunsberger, a native of Switzerland, and of their children we have the following record: (1) John is mentioned farther on. (2) George is in Minnesota. (3) Louis, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere. (4) Matilda is the wife of Frank Keil, of Martintown, Wis. (5) William is on the old home place in Green Co., Wis.; he married Helen Stark. (6) Henry, of Jordan township, married Lena Starkie. (7) Andrew, a farmer in Jordan township, married Amelia Stark. (8) Lizzie is at home in Monroe. (9) Mary is the wife of Thomas Swievel, of Pittsburg, Penn. In 1856 the father of this family came to the United States, locating first in Ohio, thence, in 1862, removing to Jordan township, Green Co., Wis. He and his wife now reside in the city of Monroe.

John Hartwig, the subject proper of these lines, was reared on the home farm in Jordan township, Green county, receiving his education at the public schools of the neighborhood. A lifelong farmer, he has made a success, and now owns, as already related, 220 acres of first-class land, doing general farming, including stock raising and dairying, his herd now numbering sixty head.

On March 13, 1885, John Hartwig was married to Miss Lizzie Schneider, of Monroe, Wis., born Nov. 28, 1866, a daughter of Rudy and Elizabeth (Beller) Schneider, natives of Switzerland, who were among the early settlers of Green county, Wis. They had a family of thirteen children: Lizzie, Emil, John, Rudy, George, Martha, Louis, Otto, Lena, Edward, William, Freida and Samuel (who died at the age of ten years). To Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig have been born five children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Emma, Oct. 23, 1886; Samuel, June 15, 1888; Lena, Feb. 8, 1890; William, Sept. 16, 1891; and Lizzie, May 10, 1893. In politics Mr. Hartwig is a Democrat, and he has served as school director and road overseer. In religious faith he is a member of the German Lutheran Church, while, socially, he and his wife enjoy the esteem and regard of the community at large.

DE WITT C. CULVER, of the town of Wyoming, Iowa county, is a son of Alvah Culver, one of the pioneers of that part of Wisconsin.

Alvah Culver was a native of New York, where he was born in 1811, and there he grew to manhood. He married Catherine Foster, and in 1837 the young couple emigrated to Green Bay, Wis., thence, in 1839, to Iowa county, and were long residents of what is now known as Old Helena. He engaged in hotel keeping and farming, and also worked some at carpentering, and operated the ferry at Helena. His death occurred Feb. 28, 1885. The wife and mother survived but a short time, passing away on May 1 the same year. He and his wife were the parents of nine children, six of whom are living at this time.

De Witt C. Culver was born at Green Bay, Wis., March 19, 1838, having been but a small child when he came with his parents to Iowa county. With the exception of two years in Missouri, he has constantly been a resident of Iowa county since 1839, a period of over sixty years. Mrs. Culver was formerly Mrs. Mary Ann (Donnelly) Hogan, and she was born in Prince Edward Island in 1836. As her father died when she was a child, she came to Iowa county with relatives, and in 1864 wedded Mr. Culver. They have five children, four daughters and one son; Sophrona M., wife of Ole Olson; Mrs. Mary Catherine Overland, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Jane Eliza, wife of Edward Mitchell, of Dodgeville, and Anna and George. Mrs. Culver has a son by her first husband, Thomas Hogan. Mr. and Mrs. Culver have a pleasant home, and are numbered among the respected people of Wyoming.

BARTHOLOMEUS A. KUNDERT, of the firm of Hefty & Kundert, general merchants of New Glarus, Green county, is one of the progressive and public-spirited citizens of Swiss descent, who have done so much toward the upbuilding of Green county, Wis., from both moral and material standpoints. Broad-minded, liberal and upright, he belongs to that class of men who command respect wherever they go. He was born in New Glarus township Oct. 13, 1858, son of Paul Kundert, and grandson of John Thomas Kundert, the latter known as "Baumeister."

John Thomas Kundert was born in Switzerland, a son of Oswald Kundert, and followed various occupations there until 1853, when he came to America and located in New Glarus township, Green Co., Wis., where he purchased 140 acres of land and engaged in farming. He continued in this for several years, and then sold out to his sons, Paul and Balz, and passed the rest of his life among his children. He died in 1893, aged ninety-three years. He married Elizabeth Voegeli, daughter of Balthasar Voegeli, who passed his entire life in Switzerland. Seven children were born to John Thomas Kundert and wife, but three of whom survive: Rosina, widow of John Hess, of Monroe, Wis.; Paul; and Barbara, wife of Bernhard Zweifel, of New Glarus. The entire family belonged to the Swiss Reformed Church. John Thomas Kundert had belonged to the regular army in his native country, and for a time was a soldier in Holland.

Paul Kundert was raised in Switzerland, and earned his livelihood by whatever honest labor he could find to do. He accompanied his father to America in 1853, and as they landed here without money Paul again was willing to work at almost anything. He worked on farms and on the railroad, and his first purchase of land was, as stated above, in connection with his brother. After some time they sold this and purchased 530 acres in New Glarus, four miles west of the village. Mr. Kundert lived there many years, and in July, 1888, divided his land between his sons, Paul and Jacob, and moved into the village, where he has since lived retired.

On April 26, 1857, Paul Kundert was united in marriage with Mrs. Sybilla (Knobel) Kundert, daughter of Bartholomew and Sybilla (Kundert) Knobel, and widow of Thomas Kundert. To this union were born nine children: Bartholomeus A. is mentioned below; Elizabeth married T. C. Hefty, and has four children, Lillian S., Esther, Clarence and Paul; Sybilla married John Babler, now of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and has four children, Henry, Herman, Esther and Clara; Paulus married Barbara Legler, and lives on the old homestead; Jacob married Dora Legler, and has six children, Lydia, Lillie, Bertha, Paul, John and Gilbert; Barbara married Peter Legler, of Argyle, and has four children, John, Paul, Felma and Victor; Balthasar married Annie Legler, and lives in Monticello, Wis.; John married Emma Sweeney, and has one child, Una; Anna Katharine is the deceased wife of J. U. Babler, and had three children, Alice Marie, Katharina Anna, and Esther Sybilla (the last two being twins, and the last named deceased). The family are members of the Evangelical Church Association. Politically Mr. Kundert is a Republican.

Bartholomeus A. Kundert has passed his entire life in New Glarus township. His boyhood and youth were passed on his father's farm, and his education acquired in the common schools near his home. In 1882 he started out in life for himself, locating in New Glarus, and entering into partnership with T. C. Hefty in a general merchandise establishment, which they have together conducted ever since. They are among the leading business men of the place, and their store has been enlarged from time to time, as their increasing trade demanded. The stock now consists of dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, wall paper and notions. They are careful in the selection of their goods, always aiming to carry the best goods on the market, and ever seeking to please the good taste of the best class of trade. In 1893 Mr. Kundert, in connection with his partner, Mr. Hefty, was instrumental in organizing the Bank of New Glarus, in which they are both largely interested, and of which Mr. Hefty is at present the cashier, Mr. Kundert being identified therewith as a director and depositor.

On Jan. 21, 1886, Mr. Kundert was united in marriage with Anna Maria Elmer, daughter of Werner Elmer and his wife Barbara Durst, and one daughter, Alma Sybilla, has been born to them. They take an active interest in the work of the Swiss Reformed Church, Mr. Kundert belonging to the choir, called the "Liederkrantz," and their hospitable home is always open to the entertainment of their friends. Socially Mr. Kundert belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America; politically he is a Republican, and on May 6, 1898, was appointed postmaster of New Glarus, which office he still holds. He has also served as town clerk, proving a most acceptable official.

Werner Elmer and his wife, Barbara (born Durst), parents of Mrs. Kundert, were both natives of Switzerland, and early settlers of Green county, where the former engaged in farming for many years. Mr. Elmer is now living retired from active work, but still takes an important place in the life of the community, and has served several terms as supervisor, and is an active member of the Swiss Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer were the parents of six children, namely: Anna Maria, Mrs. Kundert; Werner, of Dane county, Wis.; Barbara, wife of Dietrick Stauffacher, of New Glarus; Nicholas, now business clerk of Hefty & Kundert, of New Glarus; Verana, wife of J. Fred Legler, of Primrose township, Dane county; and Jacob Herman, now remaining on his father's farm. Nicholas Durst, father of Mrs. Elmer, was a farmer in Switzerland, and early located in Green county, Wis.; his wife, Maria Streiff, is still alive, and is now ninety-one years old.

DAVID MANI, a retired farmer and cheese maker of Browntown, Green county, is one of the typical self-made men who have found home and fortune in an adopted country.

Mr. Mani was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, a son of Jacob and Susanna (Knitti) Mani, natives of that country, where they passed their entire lives. The former, born in 1815, died in 1888; and the latter, born in 1824, died in 1889. They were the parents of fifteen children, seven of whom lived to maturity: David, our subject; Rosa, who married Jacob Carlen, of Ohio; Susanna, Lena and Margaret, in Switzerland; Jacob, who married Miss Annie Swefel, and is a farmer at Farmers Grove, Wis.; and Mary Ann, who died in Switzerland. Jacob Mani was a son of Rudolph Mani, a native of Switzerland, who was the father of seven children, as follows: John, Jacob, Rudolph, David, Elizabeth, Rosa and Catherine, all now deceased, and all of whom except David remained in Switzerland. David, son of Rudolph, came to America, and passed the remainder of his life in New York State.

On March 1, 1872, David Mani, subject of this sketch, sailed from Hamburg, Germany, for America, and after a very stormy voyage landed in New York April 1, 1872. When he landed he was immediately confronted with a serious financial question, as his available capital consisted of exactly one dollar, but a pair of willing hands soon found employment, and the increase of capital followed as a natural sequence. He remained in New York State four years, engaged in cheese making. Good management and close attention to business brought prosperity in sight, and in 1876 Mr. Mani sought a new field of labor, locating in Wisconsin, where he continued to follow cheese making until 1890, when he purchased a farm of eighty acres of land, one-half of which is in the village of Browntown. He improved this with a good cheese factory and other buildings, and ten years later sold out for $4,800, and removed to the village, where he is the owner of a fine two-story dwelling and considerable other real estate. During his parents' lifetime he regularly contributed to their support, paying the rent for their home in Switzerland and about $20 annually besides, which to them was a large sum.

On Feb. 7, 1878, Mr. Mani was united in marriage with Miss Lisetta Teuscher, of Monroe, who accompanied her parents, Christ and Rosa (Mani) Teuscher, from Canton Berne, Switzerland, in 1871. Mrs. Teuscher is deceased, but Mr. Teuscher is still living at his home in Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Mani have become the parents of nine children, namely: David and Lisetta, both deceased; Mary, born

Nov. 26, 1881, now makes her home in Monroe; Jacob, born May 1, 1884; David J., born May 17, 1886; Lillie, born April 26, 1888; Rudolph, deceased; Rosa, born April 23, 1892; Ernest, born May 7, 1899. In his political preferences Mr. Mani is a staunch Democrat, and in religious faith, while a member of no church, inclines to the teachings of Luther.

ROBERT HULL, one of the early pioneers of Grant county, has been prominently identified with the growth of Platteville, which he has seen advance from a small village to its present proportions. Many are the entertaining accounts he can give of the days when the great commonwealth of Wisconsin was principally a vast tract of unbroken land, covered with the virgin forest; when the voice of man was not heard; when journeys were made with teams, and only the barest necessities of life obtainable. Such days as these developed the character of the pioneers, and laid the foundations of a mighty State, whose sons and daughters are a credit to it, and whose voice is heard among the great ones of the nation.

Robert Hull was born in Northumberland county, England, in November, 1821, and was the son of John and Jane (Graham) Hull, natives of England, where they lived and died. Of their large family of eleven children, but two now remain, our subject and a brother, Jesse, who resides in England, the former being the only one who ever left his native land. Growing to manhood in good old England, Mr. Hull became convinced that there was more opportunity in America for his advancement, and in 1854 he made the passage, via New York, to Galena, Ill., where he resided a short time, then removed to what was then known as the "New Diggings," in Grant county, and here remained eight years. The next change was made to Platteville, where Mr. Hull purchased a comfortable and pleasant home on the corner of Third and Cedar streets, and has since resided there. By occupation Mr. Hull is a miner, but since coming to Platteville he has been engaged on city contracts.

Just before embarking for America Mr. Hull was united in marriage with Mrs. Jane (Lee) Philipson, a daughter of George Lee, who died in his native land, England. Mrs. Hull was born in Northumberland county, England, in May, 1821, and was a lady of unusual graces of mind and character. Gentle, loving and charitable, she made her home a heaven upon earth, and endeared herself to a large circle of appreciative friends. On March 20, 1894, occurred the tragedy of Mr. Hull's life, for on that day death claimed the deeply loved wife, and since her decease Mr. Hull has felt sadly bereft. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hull, but Mrs. Hull's son, Matthew Philipson, was reared by Mr. Hull as his own, but, just as the young man was emerging into a happy, useful life, he died, Nov. 26, 1868, aged nineteen.

Politically Mr. Hull is a staunch Republican, always voting the ticket of that party, and is also a consistent member of the Congregational Church, with which Mrs. Hull was also identified. Mr. Hull is a man who brings his religion into his daily life, and by his example teaches the great lessons of Christianity and morality.

COL. CHARLES MAPPES (deceased) was one of the most prominent men in business in his day to be found in Lafayette county, Wis., and for many years was a resident of the city of Belmont. He had extensive experience in various commercial enterprises, was well versed in human nature, and was moved by large ambitions.

Charles Mappes was born in Prussia, Aug. 4, 1826, and grew to manhood in his native country, receiving, after the custom of his people, a solid and durable education. In 1846 he went to Mexico, where he served in the Mexican war seven months. After that he accompanied Gen. Harney to Florida, and assisted in the operations against the hostile Indians. In the fall of 1848 the adventurous young German made his way to California, and, taking a hand in the gold mining of the time won out a large fortune and brought back to the East with him on his return, in 1851, a very considerable sum of money. With this Mr. Mappes built a hotel in Indianapolis, and kept hotel for several years in the capital city of Indiana. In 1855 he moved to Terre Haute, in the same State, where he followed the same business. In 1860 he came west to Dubuque, Iowa, and kept hotel for two years in that stirring city. Mr. Mappes was then a year at Mineral Point, Wis., and following that he made a journey into Idaho. There he discovered the first gold found in the territory, and was instrumental in the formation of a police and military force known as the Idaho Rangers, of which he was elected colonel and commander. His family now holds a deed for 8,200 feet of quartz ledges, and they have been offered $40,000 for 600 feet.

Col. Mappes and Miss Minnie Faust were united in marriage in 1855. Mrs. Mappes was born in 1824 in Germany, daughter of John and Irene Faust, who came to this country at an early day and located on a farm in Indiana, where they died. She grew to womanhood in the State of Indiana, where she was married. In 1864 the young couple came to Belmont, which was their home as long as he lived. When the village was in its infancy he embarked in business, and was a hotel-keeper for several years, owning his own establishment. In 1884 Col. Mappes put up the St. Charles Hotel on the site of his first building, which had been destroyed by fire, and conducted it with marked success until his retirement from business, in 1891. During his residence in Belmont he made and spent a fortune, and had he realized on some of his mining investments, in which he was an extensive dealer, as he had reason to expect, he would have become one of the wealthiest men of the day. He was always open-handed and enterprising, ready to take hold of anything that had a promise of results in it, and was one of the most popular men of the county, with many friends. He died in February, 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. Mappes were the parents of six sons, and two daughters: (1) Lewis, born in Indianapolis, married Miss Mollie Garden, and resides in Sioux City, Iowa, where he is in business; he has three children, Rudolph, Nellie and Marie. (2) Frederick, born in Dubuque, married Miss Millie Wood, of Georgetown, Wis., and is a conductor on the Union Pacific Railroad; he lives at Grand Island, Neb., and has two children, Daisy and Frederick. (3) Nettie, born in Illinois, is now the wife of Edward Schriter, of Darlington, Wis., and is the mother of five children, Charles, Lewis, Bertha, Mamie and Bay. (4) Charles, born in Menominee, Wis., was educated in the normal school at Platteville, and is now a railroad man at Rawlins, Wyoming. (5) Minnie, born at Belmont, is now the wife of Frank Webb, of this city, and is the mother of four children, Hazel, Roy, Edith and Frankie. (6) George, born in Belmont in July, 1873, attended the Belmont school until he was fourteen years old, when he secured a position as brakeman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad; he is now a brakeman on a main line passenger, and is a popular and capable young man with a bright future before him. (7) William, born in Belmont in 1875, grew up in his native town, where he learned telegraphy; he followed this occupation some few years, and then went to Philadelphia, where he had secured a desirable position in a grocery store, remaining three years, but on the outbreak of the Spanish-American war left to enlist in the heavy artillery, and is now in Manila, fighting the insurgents in the wilds of that country. (8) Otto, a bright and promising young man of eighteen years of age, was drowned in the Pecatonica river in Lafayette county.

Col. Mappes was a Democrat, and during his life held a number of local offices in the town of Belmont. He was one of the stockholders of the water works, and a member of its board of management a number of years. He and his wife were consistent members of the Lutheran Church.

LOUIS HARTWIG, one of the thrifty and successful young farmers of Jordan township, Green county, is a native of that township, born Jan. 6, 1864, on the old George Hartwig homestead.

George Hartwig, his father, was born in Berlin, Germany, a son of John Hartwig, who died in Germany, the father of six children: John, Andrew and Martha, all three living in Canada; George; Eliza, in Cincinnati, Ohio; and Christena, in Germany. George Hartwig was married in Ohio to Elizabeth Hunsberger, a native of Switzerland, and of their children we have the following record: (1) John, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere. (2) George, in Minnesota. (3) Louis, of whom more extended mention is made farther on. (4) Matilda, wife of Frank Kiehl, of Martintown, Wis. (5) William, a farmer of Jordan township, Green Co., Wis.; he married Helen Stark. (6) Henry, of Jordan township, married to Lena Starkie. (7) Andrew, on the old home place in Jordan township, married to Amelia Stark. (8) Lizzie, at home in Monroe. (9) Mary, wife of Thomas Sweivel, of Pennsylvania. In 1856 the father of this family came to the United States, locating first in Ohio, thence, in 1862, removing to Jordan township, Green Co., Wisconsin.

Louis Hartwig was reared on the home farm in Jordan township, and received a good common-school education. Choosing the occupation of farming, he at the age of twenty-one commenced his life work on his own account, and from that time forth prospered, until now he owns a fine farm of 167 acres, all under a good state of cultivation, and equipped with a commodious dwelling and first-class barns. Here he is engaged in general farming and stock raising, besides dairying.

On April 11, 1889, Louis Hartwig married Miss Mary Butts, of Jordan township, Green Co., Wis., born July 20, 1870, a daughter of George Butts, of Jordan, who had the following family of children: William; Herman; Minnie, wife of Samuel Blumer; Augusta married, and is living in Monticello, Wis.; Mary, wife of Louis Hartwig, our subject; Annie, wife of Charles Patterson; Lena, now Mrs. Stauffacher, of Iowa; and Dora.

To Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hartwig have been born five children, their names and dates of birth being as follows: Rossie, in January, 1890; John G., in October, 1891; Frederick M., in July, 1894; Dewey H., March 29, 1898; and Elda, in January, 1901. Mr. Hartwig enjoys the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, and is highly popular in the community in which he lives.

THOMAS LONGBOTHAM is numbered among the leading business men of Platteville, Grant county, where he owns and operates finely equipped livery and boarding stables.

Mr. Longbotham was born in Fidlers Green in July, 1846, a son of Thomas and Hannah Longbotham, who were born in England in 1807 and 1822, respectively. After their marriage the parents came to Grant county, Wis., in 1841, selecting Potosi as a place of residence. Here the father pursued his trade of weaver for several years, and then engaged in smelting ore, owning smelting works at Potosi. After some years he sold the smelting works, purchased a farm at Fidlers Green, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1895, his wife having passed away several years previously. These two good people were earnest members of the M. E. Church, and very devout Christians. Of their children we have the following record: William, born at Potosi, is now a farmer in Nebraska; Elijah, born in Potosi, married Miss Taylor, of Grant county, settled on his farm at Rockford, Iowa, where he died in 1888, leaving a wife and two children, Ellen (wife of Fred Tibets, of Iowa) and Thomas L. (of Rockford, Iowa); Rebecka, a graduate of the State Normal, has been a teacher for a number of years in Grant and Iowa counties; John, born in Grant county, is now a prominent banker of Cuba City, and is also interested in the bank of Stevens Point; Joseph, born in Grant county, was educated at the State Normal and a business college, is now cashier of the Cuba City bank, married to Sarah K. Mathews, of Dickeyville, by whom he has three children, Leslie, Pearl and Mary H., now students of the State Normal, and all residents of Platteville; Hannah E.; George, who died in childhood; and our subject.

Thomas Longbotham worked upon his father's farm, attending the district school during the winter months, until he attained to maturity years, when he purchased a farm in Floyd county, Iowa, on which he erected buildings and made many improvements, remaining there for eight years. At that time Mr. Longbotham sold his property, located in Nebraska, where he engaged in farming. He returned to Grant county in 1896, and the following year removed to Platteville, where he purchased and now operates one of the finest livery stables in Grant county, known as the Brick Livery Stables. A full line of modern and stylish carriages, barouches, carts, sleighs, etc., is carried, and the horses are of excellent stock. Mr. Longbotham personally superintends his business, and every detail is carried out under his direction, while his corps of assistants is carefully selected.

In April, 1896, Thomas Longbotham married Alvira L. Gilmore, daughter of Lysander and Julia Gilmore, of Georgetown, Grant county. The Gilmore family is among the oldest in the State, and originated in America in Virginia. Mrs. Longbotham was born and educated in Grant county, and is a very pleasant and estimable lady. To this union one son has been born, Thomas G. Mr. and Mrs. Longbotham reside in a comfortable home on Water street, where they receive their many friends. A Republican to the core, Mr. Longbotham takes a deep interest in the workings of that party, and socially is connected with the I. O. O. F. Although not a member of any religious denomination, Mr. Longbotham has always contributed of his means to the support of church work, and is public spirited, kind hearted and liberal. Commencing the struggle of life poor in purse, but rich in pluck and energy, he has attained his present solid position, although still a young man, by his own unaided efforts, and can not be too highly commended for his industry, thrift and perseverance.

MALACHI SIMONS, of the town of Fennimore, Grant county, represents one of the old pioneer families of the community. He was born in Cornwall, England, Feb. 9, 1833, a son of Nicholas and Christina Simons. In 1848 the father and his eldest son, Nicholas Simons, crossed the ocean, and came to Wisconsin, and went to work in the mines at Hazel Green. The next year he sent for the mother and the remaining four children, and about two years later they all settled on a farm in the town of Jamestown. In 1856 the father pre-empted land in the town of Mount Ida, and there made a homestead, residing there until his death, Dec. 30, 1879, at the age of eighty-three. In his early life he was a steward for a lord of a manor, and at a later period was overseer of mines. When he came to this country he naturally turned to the mines for an immediate living. His wife died July 30, 1873, at the age of seventy years. Their children were: Nicholas, who died Jan. 10, 1871, at the age of forty-three, leaving a wife and six children; Malachi was the second; Frederick died Dec. 12, 1864, at the age of twenty-seven, leaving a wife and one child; William resides on the old homestead in the town of Mount Ida; Jane married Elijah Rogers, and died in 1874, leaving a husband and five children. Malachi and William are the only members of the family living at the present writing.

Malachi Simons was about sixteen years old when he came to the United States, and has lived in Grant county since that time, having been a resident of Mount Ida for more than half a century. For many years he followed mining. Mr. Simons purchased a farm in the town of Mount Ida April 4, 1857, and here he lived for four years, when he moved to Fennimore, where his home has been to the present time.

On May 11, 1852, Mr. Simons wedded Mary Elizabeth Semmens, a daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Semmens. She was born in Cornwall, England, in 1827, where her parents lived and died. Mrs. Simons was married in England to William Row, in 1848; soon after their marriage they came to this country and located in Maryland, remaining nearly three years, and then settled in Dubuque, Iowa, where Mr. Row died in 1851, during the cholera epidemic. Mr. and Mrs. Simons have two children, a son and a daughter, Richard, on the home farm; and Katie, the wife of Adam Hill, of the town of Mount Ida. A daughter, Grace, died Sept. 14, 1863, when ten years old. Mrs. Simons had two children by her first husband, Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Dempsy, of Fennimore, and Mrs. Mary Jane Rogers, of South Dakota.

THEODORE L. ACHESON, whose home is at No. 262 South Bluff street, Janesville, is one of the leading citizens of Rock county, and exerts a strong influence in its political and business affairs. He has filled various public positions in the county, discharging every duty with the utmost fidelity, is an honorable and upright man, and has a multitude of friends.

Mr. Acheson was born in the town of Newburgh, Orange Co., N. Y., Oct. 3, 1849. His parents, William B. and Margaret (Elliott) Acheson, natives of the same county, had a family of ten children: David A.; Robert B.; Alexander; William E.; James C.; Theodore L.; Alfred S.; Mary Ann, wife of Thomas Harper, of Magnolia township; Hannah J., wife of Robert B. Harper, of Spring Valley; and Sarah Margaret, wife of Wallach Cochran, of Janesville. The father served an apprenticeship as a tanner with an uncle. After he had grown to manhood and married he became a farmer. He made his first appearance in Janesville in 1861, and, liking the country, purchased a farm of 240 acres in Magnolia township, Rock county. He did not long survive his change of location, dying in September, 1863, when fifty-one years old. His wife attained the age of seventy-four, and died in July, 1891. In early life they were identified with the old Covenanters, in later years attending the Presbyterian Church. His father, Robert Acheson, came from the North of Ireland, where he was born of Scottish parentage, and settled in the city of New York, where he died. He had a family of five daughters and two sons. Her father, William Elliott, was born of Scottish descent in the North of Ireland, and was a farmer all his life. He died in Orange county, N. Y., well advanced in years.

Theodore L. Acheson came to Wisconsin in 1861, and to Janesville in 1883. At the date first mentioned he was a well grown lad, and had been a student in the public schools of his native county. In his Wisconsin home he went to a district school in Magnolia township, and continued to live on the paternal homestead until 1883. That year he became deputy sheriff under R. B. Harper, and served two years with that gentleman. Sheriff Hanthorn continued him in the same capacity in 1885 and 1886. The city council of Janesville then appointed him constable of the Third ward, and retained him in that position until 1891. In 1889 and 1890 he was under-sheriff for G. C. Babcock. In 1891 he was chosen city marshal, and served the public very efficiently in that office for six years. In the fall of 1896 he was elected sheriff, and held that responsible office one term.

The wedding ceremonies of Mr. Acheson and Miss Jane Martin, daughter of Hugh and Jane Martin, were celebrated March 12, 1881. They have had three children, Grace, Nina and Arthur L. Grace married Samuel P. Brown, deputy sheriff of Rock county. Mrs. Acheson is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Acheson belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Home Forum. He is a Republican, and a man of strong convictions. His home on South Bluff street was purchased by him in July, 1899.

THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN HART, a prominent veteran of the war of the Rebellion now residing in Wyalusing township, Grant county, was born in Dupont, Jefferson Co., Ind., Nov. 15, 1843, a son of Orrin L. and Eveline (Houghton) Hart. His father, who was of strong Whig proclivities, named him for Frelinghuysen, a well-known statesman of that day, and who, the following year (1844), was the candidate for vice-president on the ticket with Henry Clay. Mr. Hart's maternal grandfather, Joab Houghton, was a native of the highlands of Scotland, and in early life came to America. He was a soldier in the second war with England, known in history as the war of 1812, and fought with Gen. Jackson in the famous battle of New Orleans.

Orrin L. Hart, father of Theodore F., was born in Massachusetts, but when a small boy was taken by his parents to Pennsylvania. His mother belonged to one of the early Mohawk Dutch families of eastern New York, and was one of the few that was spared in the famous Indian massacre in the Mohawk Valley. She lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years, passing away in 1863. In October, 1852, Orrin L. Hart and family emigrated from Indiana to Wisconsin, and located in the town of Millville, Grant county, where the wife and mother died in 1864. The father is still living but has been an invalid for a number of years. Of their children we have record of Theodore F., of this review; Wallace, who was named for the well-known clergyman, Rev. William Wallace, and is now a resident of Chicago; Abigail, wife of George H. Foster, of Millville; Mrs. Adeline Day; and Josephine, wife of Michael Gillon, of Ontario, Vernon Co., Wisconsin.

Theodore F. Hart was a lad of about nine years when he came with his parents to Grant county, which has since been his home. On Aug. 11, 1862, he donned the blue, becoming a member of Company C, 25th Wis. V. I., and was discharged from the service for disability in March of the following year. A severe rupture received in the service was the chief cause of his discharge. However, he had not yet seen enough of army life to satisfy him, and he determined if possible again to enter the service. But not having yet recovered, it was necessary for him to use considerable strategy in order to pass the required examination. In this he was successful, and he was a second time enrolled as one of Uncle Sam's soldier boys. He expected to be assigned to his old company in the 25th, but in this he was disappointed, and was enrolled as a member of Company C, 18th Wis. V. I., in July, 1863. His regiment formed a part of the 15th Army Corps. He took part in some of the most important events of the last two years of the war, fighting under Gen. Corse at Allatoona Pass—one of the most thrilling engagements of the whole struggle. He was one of the 143 who were on the skirmish line when the battle began, and of whom only thirty-one succeeded in getting back to the fort. It was on this occasion that Gen. Sherman signaled from Kenesaw Mountain "Hold the Fort for I am coming," which has given rise to the famous religious song with that title. Mr. Hart with his regiment marched with Sherman to the sea and thence to Washington, D. C., taking part in the Grand Review in that city. He was finally discharged July 13, 1865.

After the war Mr. Hart was variously engaged for some time, working for a time in the pineries near Grand Rapids, Wis. In September, 1866, he erected a shingle mill at Wyalusing, which he operated for some time.

Mr. Hart was married, in March, 1867, to Miss Nancy Scarf, a daughter of Samuel Scarf, one of the pioneers of southwestern Wisconsin and a soldier of the Black Hawk war. He was a well-known early settler of Prairie du Chien. Mr. and Mrs. Hart have five children: Willard, Caroline, Maud, Mabel and Euphemia. Mr. Hart is an influential citizen of his community, and very prominent in Grand Army circles. He is a member of W. K. Forshey Post, No. 23, of which he was commander four years, and has been twice appointed assistant inspector of district 17, and was one year on the staff of Col. A. E. Watters. Mr. Hart is a man of extensive and varied reading, and is well informed on the general issues of the day. He and his wife are members of the Congregational Church, and are quite prominent socially.

GEORGE MILLER (deceased) is remembered in Hazel Green, Grant county, as an honorable and upright citizen, and was born in Baden, France, in 1817. In 1840 he came to Wisconsin, and for a time worked in Jo Daviess county, Ill. In 1848 he married Miss Katherine Keiser, a lady born in France, in March, 1830, the daughter of Nicholas and Christine Keiser, both born in that country. In 1833 they came to America and settled in Jo Daviess county, Ill., where he lived until a short time before his death, in 1862, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Miller. Mrs.

Keiser died in 1897, being 108 years old at the time of her death. Mrs. Miller is the only representative of this family now living.

Mr. Miller was a shoemaker by trade, and worked for a time in Hazel Green. In 1849 he bought forty acres of wild land in the town of Hazel Green. To this he added by purchase from time to time, until at his death he was the owner of 190 acres of fine farming land. A good house and ample barns were erected by him, the land cleared and brought under high cultivation, and the entire property made one of the most valuable in this part of the State. To Mr. Miller and his wife were born eleven children, of whom four are now living: (1) Catherine, born in 1855, is the wife of John Kuntz, who resides near the Miller homestead. Mrs. Kuntz was married to Joseph Yorkshire before her present marriage, and to him she bore four children, George, John, Joseph and August. By Mr. Kuntz she has four children, Leo, Mary, Charles and Agnes. (2) Peter, born in 1858, married Miss Christina Nalice, of Galena, Ill., and is now living on his mother's old homestead. (3) Christina, born in 1873, is now the wife of Henry Schnowdenberg, and has her home in Jo Daviess county; there are three children in this family: Orvil, Gladys, and Adele. (4) Clara, born in 1875, is now the wife of Peter Cabanas, of Hazel Green. They have one daughter, Lea. Mr. Miller, like his wife and family, was a member of the Catholic church, and all have been liberal supporters of same. In his political affiliations Mr. Miller was a Democrat.

JOHN BECKER enjoys an enviable standing among the older and most respected farmers of Green county, both on account of his years and his high character. He is making his home on a large farm four miles southeast of Monroe, which has become, thanks to his industry and management, one of the most desirable country residences in the southwestern part of the State.

Mr. Becker is a son of Casper and Annie (Elmer) Becker, both of whom were born in Switzerland, and were emigrants to this country about 1848. They came to Wisconsin, and were among the earlier settlers of Green county. To them were born children as follows: Jacob, who is a farmer in the town of Washington; Casper, who died in 1891; Peter, a farmer in the town of Washington; John, born Jan. 18, 1854; Annie, the wife of John Bloom, of Monticello, Wis.; Rosa, wife of Jacob Marty, a farmer in the town of York; and Fannie, wife of D. Zimmerman, of New Glarus, Wisconsin.

John Becker grew to manhood under the parental roof, and was married to Miss Mary Ann Karlen in 1880, who was born in Canton Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 27, 1863, and was brought to this country while still a child. Jacob and Mary Ann (Zwahlen) Karlen, her parents, came from Switzerland, now reside in Monroe, where Mr. Karlen is engaged in business as a cheese-maker. They are mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. John Becker became the parents of the following children: Mary Ann, born Oct. 15, 1880; John S., born Nov. 8, 1884, is attending school; Jacob E., born Feb. 15, 1888; Emma S., born Oct. 2, 1893; and Herman W., born Nov. 17, 1897, all living at home.

John Becker was reared on the home farm, and received his education at the hands of the teachers of the public schools of the town of Washington. When he married the united resources of his wife and himself, save their youth and strength, were small indeed. But their hearts were light, and they were willing to work hard, endure poverty and practice self-denial, that by and by they might come to affluence. They now own a fine farm of 268 acres, all highly improved, and in a fine state of cultivation. In 1901 he built a large barn, 32x70 feet with basement, and 20-foot posts. In politics Mr. Becker is a Democrat. He is an honorable and upright man, and believes in the Golden Rule, and the law of honesty and fair play, as the essential part of all creeds and churches. He is a man with a warm heart, is a good neighbor, and a genial, companionable citizen.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON, who ranks high in Jordan township, Green county, as an all-round farmer, dairyman and cheese manufacturer, is a native of Krydsherets, Christiania, Norway, born April 15, 1849.

Anders Narveson, his father, was born Aug. 18, 1825, near Christiania, Norway, a son of Narve Narveson, who died in Norway at the age of ninety-six. Maria Ellingson, wife of Anders Narveson, was born in 1818, and died in 1897, in Cottonwood Co., Minn. They had four children: Nicholas, who will be more fully spoken of farther on; Julia, wife of Anders C. Anderson, of the town of Ann, Cottonwood Co., Minn.; Mary, wife of John Svenson, living in Minnesota; and Jennie, deceased in childhood. Anders Narveson still lives in the town of Ann, Cottonwood Co., Minnesota.

Nicholas Anderson, whose name introduces these lines, when twenty-one years old, in 1870, came to the United States, settling in Wisconsin, where, in Green county, he took up farming pursuits. In 1875 he and his entire family removed to Cottonwood county, Minn., but in 1884 they returned to Green county and settled on the old Erickson homestead, where he has since made his home. He owns a fine farm of 160 acres, under excellent cultivation, and supplied with a comfortable dwelling, also commodious barns and other outbuildings.

On Jan. 28, 1872, Nicholas Anderson married Miss Julia Erickson, of Jordan township, Green county, born Sept. 18, 1851, a daughter of Thore and Annie (Olson) Erickson, the former of whom came from Norway to Green county, Wis., in 1848. They were married Feb. 5, 1850, and settled on the farm now owned and occupied by our subject. They had seven children, five of whom are yet living: Julia, wife of Nicholas Anderson; Erick Erickson, in Rockford, Ill.; Ole, in North Dakota; Mary, the wife of Ole Johnson, of Cottonwood county, Minn.; and Andrew, a farmer of Wiot township, Lafayette county. The father of these died on the old home place in Jordan township, Green county, in 1885, the mother passing away in 1893. To Nicholas Anderson and his wife have been born fourteen children, eleven of whom are still living: (1) Albert, born Jan. 20, 1873, married Clara Jacobson, and they reside in Argyle, Lafayette county. (2) Thomas, born Aug. 8, 1874, lives in Montana. (3) Edward, born Jan. 7, 1876, married Amelia Jackson, of Jordan township, Green county. (4) Carl J., born Jan. 1, 1878, is at home. (5) Olaf N., was born Sept. 5, 1879. (6) Nettie G., Oct. 7, 1881. (7) Emma A., May 6, 1884. (8) Gena Maria, Aug. 14, 1885. (9) Alma Laura, Jan. 20, 1889. (10) Otto L., Feb. 26, 1890; and (11) Clara M., Nov. 6, 1893. Among those deceased was Anna Lenora, a twin sister of Alma Laura. Mr. Anderson is a firm believer in practical education for his children. Thomas and Edward attended the short course of Agriculture, at Madison, Wis., in 1895-1896; and Olaf N. attended the Toland's Business University, at Monroe, Wis., in the year of 1899-1900.

Mr. Anderson is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is a Republican in politics, and has served in Jordan as school director, road overseer and in other offices with ability and fidelity. While living in Cottonwood county, Minn., he served as chairman of the town of Ann, supervisor, and justice of the peace. He has participated in many political conventions, including the State Republican convention of 1900, at which he was one of the sturdy supporters of Gov. R. M. La Follette, and has always exerted a marked influence in the local affairs of his community.

JOHN MCBRIDE, a retired farmer residing in Platteville, Grant county, was born in Elk Grove, Lafayette county, Wis., April 13, 1837. His parents, John and Rosa (McCartin) McBride, were natives of Ireland, who in 1820 settled on wild land in Lafayette county, where the father cleared up a large farm, on which he and wife passed the remainder of their lives, both dying in the faith of the Primitive Methodist Church. In politics the father was a staunch Republican. Of their children, ten in number, seven died young; of those who lived to mature years, Mary, now deceased, was married to William Robinson, of Grant county, where several of her children still live; Robert, also deceased, retired from his farm in Lafayette county, and died in Platteville in 1899, leaving a widow and four children: John, whose name opens this sketch.

John McBride was educated in the district schools of his native village and at the Platteville Academy. He grew to manhood on the home farm, and in October, 1865, married Miss Mary E. daughter of Lorenzo and Roxie (McCumber) McNett, of Elk Grove, Lafayette county. Mr. and Mrs. McNett were born in New York State, and came to Wisconsin in 1835, settled on a farm and reared four children, two of whom are still living, Mrs. E. B. Barnes, in Platteville, and Mrs. John McBride, the latter of whom was graduated from the high school of Hazel Green and was for some time a very successful school teacher.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. McBride lived on the McBride homestead until 1894, when they came to Platteville, where Mr. Mc-Bride erected a fine dwelling, but still owns the old farm in Lafayette county. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. McBride have been born three children, viz.: (1) W. L., born in 1866, in Lafayette county, was educated in the State Normal School of Platteville; in 1894 he married Miss Lucy Churchill, of Platteville, a cultured lady who had been a school teacher for several years. One daughter, Helen, blessed this union. The family reside on their own property on Pine street, adjoining that of the father, John McBride. (2) Rosanna M., daughter of John McBride, was born in Lafayette county in November, 1868, and was a student in the State Normal school until her marriage in 1889 to Elmer E. Herron, the present deputy sheriff of Le Mars, Plymouth county, Iowa, where they reside and have a family of four children, viz.: Clay, Lloyd, Lenna, and John. (3) Elsie A., born in Lafayette county in September, 1883, is a well-advanced student in the State Normal school of Platteville. Mr. McBride and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics he is a Republican. While a resident of Lafayette county he served as treasurer of his township, as chairman of the town board, and also filled several other local offices with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the public. A descendant of one of the old pioneer families of the State, he enjoys the respect of all the inhabitants of Platteville and Grant county, and he and his wife are still fondly cherished in the memory of their old friends in Lafayette county.

ABEL C. FOWLER, a well-known carriage maker of North Andover, Grant county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war, was born in Westchester county, N. Y., in 1820, a son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Monte) Fowler. The father, who was a native of England and a carpenter by occupation, moved his family from New York to Connecticut, and there died. The mother's death occurred when Abel was a small child. He is the third in order of birth in a family of four children, the others being Thomas, Isaiah and Mary, and is the only survivor so far as known. Isaiah was also in the Union army, being a member of the same company and regiment as Abel C., and died at the Soldiers Home in Togus, Maine.

In May, 1861, Abel C. Fowler enlisted in the 4th Conn. V. I., which was afterward changed to the 1st Connecticut Heavy Artillery, and was commanded by Col. R. O. Tyler. Mr. Fowler's service covered a period of three years, and he took part in the seven days' fight in the Peninsular campaign under Gen. McClellan, and the battle of the Wilderness under Gen. Grant.

While Mr. Fowler was in the service his wife, whose maiden name was Mary L. Boothe, came to Potosi, Grant Co., Wis., with their three children, and upon receiving his discharge he rejoined his family here. His first wife died many years ago, leaving two children, who still survive, namely: Henry W., a resident of Coles, Neb.; and Mrs. Ella Bannock, of Denver, Colo. Since the death of his first wife Mr. Fowler has been twice married. He has a pleasant home in North Andover, and is successfully engaged in carriage making. He is widely and favorably known throughout the community, and has a host of friends in Grant county.

LEWIS W. SHULL, now doubtless the oldest native born resident of Lafayette county, Wis., is a son of one of the earliest pioneers of the Territory of Wisconsin, and has himself played no insignificant part in the development of the country.

Jesse Shull, his father, left an ineffaceable imprint in the early history of the Northwest. He was born in Pennsylvania April 1, 1785, and passed his early life at his home in Centre county, that State. The first important break which occurred in his life was the war of 1812, in which he participated. He had been trained to the trade of a hatter, but when the war was over he came immediately to St. Louis, Mo., and began buying furs for the American Fur Co. This business required him to go up the Mississippi river to trade with the Indians, and he finally located at Dubuque, Iowa, soon after going to Galena, Ill. In the fall of 1818 he severed his connection with the fur company, and, removing to what is now Shullsburg, in Lafayette county, he engaged in business on his own account, buying furs, and also in investigating the mining lands. It was through his discovery of the valuable mineral ore in Wisconsin that the mines were so early developed. The little animal known as the badger, so numerous that Wisconsin is yet known as the "Badger State," was everywhere to be found then, and in digging holes in the ground threw out pieces of mineral ore. This led Mr. Shull to investigate, with the result of the discovery of priceless mining interests. He at once gave up the fur trade and devoted himself exclusively to mining, becoming so successful that he soon added smelting to his work, thus becoming the first miner and smelter in the State. The news of the rich mineral fields discovered by Mr. Shull in southwestern Wisconsin soon spread abroad, and in a short time the miners began to come from all over the country.

Among the many who came to engage in mining was A. P. Van Matre, who was accompanied by his sister, Melissa. They were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Van Matre, of Highland county, Ohio, and arrived early in the spring of 1826. On Aug. 20, following, occurred the marriage of Jesse Shull and Miss Melissa Van Matre, whose brother (also a hatter by trade) had become a partner of Mr. Shull's. This partnership lasted until 1835, and they devoted themselves to mining and smelting. After the dissolution Mr. Shull removed to what is now the town of Cadiz, in Green county, there to engage in farming during the remainder of his life. The only change of occupation he had permitted himself had been to do what he regarded as the paramount duty of every citizen, of sound body and suitable age—to enlist in his country's service when needed. In 1828 he had gone forth as a soldier in the war with the Winnebagoes, and in 1832 in the Black Hawk war.

For his services in the war of 1812 Mr. Shull received a land warrant from the government, which he sold to a Mr. Malone, who with it located land in Black Hawk county, Iowa, on a part of which now stands the city of Waterloo. When he moved to Cadiz township, Green county, Mr. Shull purchased 400 acres of land, which he had nearly all improved when his death occurred, Feb. 12, 1864. Mr. Shull was a typical pioneer, rugged, honest and industrious, strong in his convictions and fearless in their expression. In politics he was a Whig of the old school, in religion an earnest Christian, identified with the Christian Church. The town of Shullsburg was named in his honor, and well it might be, inasmuch as he was the first miner and smelter in the region, and his was the first marriage celebrated in what is now Lafayette county.

Mrs. Melissa (Van Matre) Shull was born Aug. 11, 1811, and passed away July 3, 1893. She bore her husband nine children; those yet living are as follows: Lewis W. is the oldest; Morgan is a resident of Clay county, Iowa; John resides in Oregon; Mrs. Sadie Martin lives in Nebraska; and Mrs. Elizabeth Rodebaugh makes her home in Indianapolis, Ind. Those who have passed away are as follows: Andrew P., Jesse, Mrs. Nancy Edwards, and Marietta, the last named dying at the age of thirteen.

Lewis W. Shull, the only one of the family now residing in Wisconsin, was born in Shullsburg, Aug. 12, 1831, and has always made his home in Lafayette county. His general occupation has always been farming, though at present he is engaged in keeping the Hotel Watson, at South Wayne.

In April, 1863, Mr. Shull enlisted in Company K, 16th Wis. V. I., and served until the close of the war. His regiment was assigned to the 1st Brigade, 3d Division, 17th Army Corps, and he took part in the battles of Resaca, Marietta, Kenesaw Mountain, siege of Atlanta, the march to the sea, and then, after all was over, took part in the grand review in Washington. He was discharged from service at Madison. At the battle before Atlanta he was wounded by a minie ball, which, just as he was reloading, cut the bayonet of his gun entirely off, struck the star on the strap of his cartridge box, passed through it, and cut a rib on his left side partly off. There it lodged until it poisoned the wound, and erysipelas followed, which caused his confinement in the hospital for some time, and in fact he has never fully recovered from the effects.

In 1869 Mr. Shull was united in marriage with Miss Mary Buchanan, who was born in the town of Cadiz, Green Co., Wis., daughter of Benjamin and Isabel (Robb) Buchanan. Five children have come of this union: Mrs. Melissa Bell Gearhart, of Amber, Iowa; Minnie; Mrs. Sadie Stites, of Winslow, Ill.; Edna; and Thomas. The family are honored members of society, and have proven themselves worthy of the respected name they bear.

R. S. JACOBS, one of the enterprising business men of Clifton township, Grant county, is the proprietor of a flourishing harness and saddlery establishment, and was born in Canton, Fulton Co., Ill., in 1833, a son of George and Elizabeth (Johnston) Jacobs, natives of Franklin county, Penn., who came to Illinois in 1828, and settled at Canton, but in 1844 removed to Linden, Iowa county, and opened up a farm. Here the father died in 1876, aged seventy-six. The family were among the first settlers of the township. Of their children, we have record of John, who died young; Cyrus and George, both deceased; R. S., our subject; Sarah Ann and Mamie, both deceased; Susan, now Mrs. Marsden; Eliza; Nathan, a resident of Linden, served three years in the 30th Wis. V. I., during the Civil war.

Our subject was reared and educated in Linden, and engaged in farming for several years, then, in 1881, came to Livingston and learned the trade of saddler and engaged in business for himself. At the first call, in April, 1861, Mr. Jacobs responded, enlisting at Mineral Point, Wis., in Co. I, 2d Wis. V. I., for ninety days, and then re-enlisted at Madison, Wis., for three years or during the war, being in the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 1st Army Corps, participating in the battles of Bull Run, South Mountain, White Sulphur Springs, Gainesville, and was honorably discharged in 1863. After this he returned to Linden and took up his ordinary pursuits.

In 1865 Mr. Jacobs married Miss Nancy Vickerman, born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Job and Rebecca (Tyler) Vickerman, natives of Pennsylvania and pioneers of Linden, both of whom are now deceased. Six children have been born of this union: Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Andrews, of Clifton township; Mary Lois, now Mrs. Prior; George, a teacher; John; Amy; and Rex. Mr. Jacobs is a member of George F. Legate Post, G. A. R., at Mineral Point. Steadfast in his support of the Prohibitionist party, Mr. Jacobs has been honored by appointment to the school board; he is a justice of the peace, and in every walk of life proves that he is an honest man and a loyal citizen.

A. C. ULA, who was born in the town of York, Green county, May 12, 1865, is a son of J. C. and Thora (Anderson) Ula, and belongs to those Wisconsin farmers whose work is so much an expression of character and pronounced integrity that it gives a name to the State as the home of a bright and progressive class of agriculturists. Among these A. C.

Ula has a distinctive right to be reckoned. His home is on a farm of 120 acres in section 15, of York township, five miles east of Blanchardville, and about twenty-five miles northwest of Monroe.

J. C. Ula, his father, was one of the leading citizens of his time, and was born in Norway Aug. 31, 1840, and was a son of Christen and Olaug (Olson) Ula, who came to Green county, Wis., in 1852. They made their home in Albany township, that county, and the following year they took up government land in the town of York, making it their home as long as they lived. Christen and Olaug Ula were the parents of five children: (1) J. C., mentioned above as the father of A. C. Ula; (2) Julia, who married E. L. Soper, of the town of York; (3) Hans, of the town of York; (4) Ole, of Buffalo county, Wis.; and (5) Inger, deceased. Christen Ula died in 1888, and his widow in 1891. Both were laid to rest in the Ula cemetery, on the old homestead. They were among the very early settlers of the town of York, and are remembered by the old settlers as people of good hearts and kind spirit.

J. C. Ula was married to Miss Thora Anderson, of the town of York, June 27, 1864, by whom he became the father of the following children: A. C., whose name introduces this article; Andrew, born July 17, 1866, died in September, 1889; Lena, born Dec. 7, 1867, married Edward Iverson, of Emmet county, Iowa; Gertrude, born April 10, 1869, married Melvin Eidsmore, of the town of Moscow, Iowa Co., Wis.; Nettie, born Dec. 17, 1870, died in 1886; Olie, born May 2, 1872, is the widow of John Elstad, and the mother of one son, Norman J., being now an inmate of the home of her mother, on the old farm; Hannah, born March 19, 1874, is the wife of A. O. Burger, of North Dakota; Peter O., born Feb. 5, 1876, is unmarried, and is engaged in cultivating the old farm; John, born Feb. 1, 1878, is at home; Tena, born Dec. 5, 1879, is unmarried, lives at home, and is in charge of the postoffice at Ula; Clara, born Jan. 30, 1884, is at home; Anton, born Feb. 27, 1886; Oscar F., born Dec. 9, 1888; Alma, born Feb. 17, 1893, is the youngest of this interesting family of sixteen children, two of whom died in infancy. J. C. Ula was a leading man in his time in the community in which he lived. For many years he served at different times as justice of the peace, and chairman of the town, assessor, school director and constable of the town. In the course of his active and busy life he was called upon to administer many estates.

Mr. Ula was a member of the 46th Wis. V. I., entering the service in 1865, and serving until the close of the war, when he received an honorable discharge. Mr. Ula was a staunch Republican, and a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. His death occurred Jan. 24, 1898, and his remains are resting in Ula cemetery, on the home farm. Mr. Ula came to Green county, and began his struggle for success here under very depressing circumstances, but rose from poverty to own a fine farm of 400 acres, well supplied with creditable dwelling house, farm buildings, and all the requisites for intelligent and profitable farming. His loss was deeply felt by his family and by the community in which he lived, for he was a good citizen, a courteous and obliging neighbor, and a loving husband and father.

A. C. Ula was married Oct. 2, 1887, to Miss Jennie E. Davis, a daughter of David and Agnes (Olson) Davis, of Argyle, Wis., and has become the father of three children, two of whom are living: John D., born Feb. 18, 1889; and Ada, born April 10, 1892. Mr. Ula has remained on the farm, and had his education in the public schools. When he became a young man he engaged in the mercantile business, and was located in Argyle for eight years. Leaving the store at the end of that period, he resumed the work to which he was reared, and is now engaged in general and stock farming, devoting much attention to the dairy business, and has become one of the foremost young farmers of the town.

Like his father, Mr. Ula is a staunch Republican, and has served his town as school clerk and treasurer, justice of the peace, and for the last three years has been township assessor. He is a devout follower of the teachings of Luther. Mr. Ula is one of the most respected and useful men of the town, and both he and his wife are counted good neighbors and kind friends.

JACOB HOOSER (deceased) was for many years a resident of Grant county, Wis., and played a man's part in the giant endeavor his generation was making to reclaim the wilderness for the home for a happy and prosperous people.

Mr. Hooser was born in Sumner county, Tenn., Oct. 25, 1807, and was a son of Jacob and Catherine Hooser, who came from Germany and made their home in Tennessee for a time. They moved to Philadelphia, when somewhat advanced in life, where he worked at his trade, that of a blacksmith, for some years. In 1820 he transferred himself and his family to Sangamon county, Illinois, where they lived until both husband and wife had passed away. Six children were born to them: Ambrose, their eldest son, came to Grant county, and followed farming in the town of Platteville until he died; Jacob; Polly married a Mr. Hass, and died near Dubuque; Rolina married and died in Illinois; John died in Illinois; Katie is Mrs. John Finley, of Nebraska.

Jacob Hooser came to Galena previous to the Black Hawk war in 1832. He was engaged in that uprising, was in many fights with the Indians, and had several narrow escapes for his life. He married Elizabeth Knox, of Illinois, who died at his home in Platteville in 1867, the mother of four children. Justice, John and Amanda are dead, and Jacob is living in Oklahoma. Mr. Hooser purchased from the government a section of land in Platteville township, and in 1848 built a stone house, which is in good preservation at the present time. He also built a stone house for one of his sons on the same property. This is now owned by Fred Klinger. Mr. Hooser made many improvements on these houses during his life. He dealt largely in real estate, and owned considerable land in different parts of Grant county. He was a Republican during his life, and filled a number of local offices, and was a prominent man in the affairs of the township. He was brought up a Baptist, but never united with the church. At the age of ninety-two he passed away, dying in March, 1899.

In 1875 Mr. Hooser and Miss May Bennett were united in marriage. She is the daughter of Levi and Mary (Jacobs) Bennett, and was born in Lafayette county April 11, 1847. To this union four children were born: Mary E., born in 1875 at their present homestead, was educated in the high school at Platteville, and is a young lady of culture and refinement, an inmate of her mother's home; Archie B., born in 1879, educated in the Platteville high school, and for some time a student of the State Normal, is the manager of the family estate, and is a young man of much ability, highly spoken of in the community; Sarah B., born in Platteville, in September, 1882, is now a student in the Platteville school; Lester W., born Feb. 4, 1877, was a promising young man and had many friends, and died July 22, 1894. Archie, the only surviving son, is a staunch Republican; he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the K. of P., of Platteville. The members of this family are very much respected, as was their father before them, and are useful citizens of the community.

STEPHEN SWAN, who has a pleasant country home on Section 19, in the town of Brooklyn, Green county, was born in Cheshire, Eng., Aug. 11, 1825, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Barber) Swan, both of whom were natives of England. They were the parents of four sons and three daughters and three of their children are now living: Taylor, of the town of Spring Valley, Rock county; Stephen; and James, of Maryville, Missouri.

Samuel Swan was a hatter, and owned a farm, where his children were reared, ten miles from Manchester. In 1846 he came to this country, and settled on a farm in the town of Spring Valley, Rock Co., Wis., where he died about 1860, aged seventy-five years; his wife had died in England twenty years before. In religious faith they were Methodists. He became prominent in local affairs, and had served as supervisor in Rock county for the town of Spring Valley. Taylor Swan, the father of Samuel, and the grandfather of Stephen, was an English farmer, and was born and died in Cheshire; he lived to be eighty years of age, and was the father of four children.

The maternal grandfather of Stephen Swan, Mr. Barber, was a small farmer, and died in England about seventy-five years of age, the father of two daughters and one son.

Stephen Swan, whose name appears above, was reared and educated in England, and in 1845 came to Wisconsin, where he bought land in Rock county. This he afterward sold to his father and brother, and eight years later bought a 200-acre tract in Green county, about 1860, aged seventy-five years; his wife acres, and now owns a farm of 280 acres, which he has improved in accordance with the most modern ideas of progressive farming.

On Dec. 14, 1852, Mr. Swan was married to Miss Isabel Taylor, a daughter of Robert and Mary (Smith) Taylor. To this union were born twelve children: Robert, Frances, Mary, Eliza, William, John, Archibald, Ralph, Armina, Sarah, Walter and James. Robert, who is engaged in farming in Minnesota, married Helen Nye, and has three children: Sarah, Jessie and Robert. Frances married Edward Farnsworth, of Dayton, Wis., and has five children, Dollie, Eliza, William, John and Roy; Mary died when twenty-eight years old; Eliza is the deceased wife of Henry Kingdom, by whom she had four children. Isabel, William, Henry and Robert; William is single and lives at home; John, who lives in the town of Brooklyn, married Kate Noonan and now has two sons, Roy and Arthur; Archibald married Catherine Deremer, now deceased, and has three children, Raymond, Archie and Rosa; Ralph of the town of Brooklyn, married Myrtle Bartlett, and they have two children, Isabel and Marion; Armina married William Thomas, of the town of Exeter, and has two children, Esther and Wilner; Sarah is the wife of James McKinney, by whom she has two children, Burdette and Isabel; Walter married May McGee and lives in Exeter; and James married Fannie Watkins, and makes his home in Brooklyn. Mr. and Mrs. Swan have two great-grandchildren, Gladys Greatsinger and Bernice.

Stephen Swan was formerly not identified with the Republican party, but voted for Mr. McKinley in 1900. For four terms he was chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and was called on the grand jury a number of terms. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

Robert Taylor and wife, Mary (Smith), parents of Mrs. Swan, were natives of Scotland. In 1840 they came to America and located in the town of Spring Valley. They were the parents of seven children, of whom four are now living: Isabel; William and Peter, of Brodhead; Mary, who is the wife of Charles White, of the town of Porter, Rock county. Mrs. Swan's father died May 10, 1885, in the town of Spring Valley, when nearly seventy-eight years of age. His wife died in 1890, at the age of eighty-five. They were both members of the Presbyterian Church. John Taylor, father of Robert, died in Roxburghshire, Scotland, when he had become old. Archibald Smith, father of Mary, died in Spring Valley, at the age of seventy-five.

SAMUEL B. VANNATTA was for many years prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Grant county, but is now living a retired life in the city of Platteville. A native of New Jersey, he was born in Warren county, Oct. 29, 1834, a son of Aaron and Elizabeth (Kishpaugh) Vannatta, who were also born in that county. In 1846 the father removed with his family to Virginia, and ten years later came to Grant county, Wis., locating in Harrison township, where he transformed a tract of wild land into a good farm, making it his home until his death, in 1880. Throughout life he followed agricultural pursuits. His wife died in the same township in 1889. They were the parents of ten children, nine of whom are still living, namely: Mrs. Jane Massy, of Virginia; Samuel B., of this review; Mrs. Travis, of Nebraska; Mrs. Channing, of Dubuque, Iowa; Morgan, who was a member of the 25th W. V. I., during the Civil war and died at Helena, Ark., in 1864, his remains being brought back to Grant county for interment; Silas, a farmer of Harrison township; Mrs. Otera Wilson, of Platteville; Ann, wife of E. J. Marvel, of Platteville; H. L., a farmer, of Platteville township; and Mrs. Allie Kies, of Lafayette county, Wisconsin.

The first twelve years of his life Samuel B. Vannatta passed in his native State, and then accompanied his parents on their removal to Virginia. In 1856 he came to Grant county, Wis., and opened up and improved a good farm in Harrison township. He successfully engaged in general farming and stock raising until 1884, when he removed to Platteville, and is now living in ease, retired from active labor.

During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Vannatta responded to his country's call for aid, enlisting at Platteville, in 1862, for three years or during the war. He became a member of Company E., 25th Wis. V. I., which was assigned to the Western Army, and was under the command of General Sherman in the siege of Atlanta, the battle of Decatur, Ga., and on the March to the Sea, as well as the Carolina campaign. Mr. Vannatta participated in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C., at the close of the war, and was honorably discharged from the service at Madison, Wis., in 1865.

In 1862 Mr. Vannatta was married in Grant county to Miss Mary Luce, a native of Wisconsin, daughter of Perry and Nancy Luce. By this union there was born a son, S. B., now a resident of Harrison township. The wife and mother died in 1863, and in 1866 Mr. Vannatta was again married, in Grant county, his second wife being Miss Cynthia Kies, who was born in this county, a daughter of David Kies, one of the first settlers of Grant county, where he took up government land and continued to make his home here until death. Mrs. Cynthia Vannatta died in Harrison township, in 1877, leaving four children: Elias, now a resident of Grand Rapids, Wis.; Arena, also of Grand Rapids; Alma, at home; and Daniel, who lives on his father's farm. In 1880 Mr. Vannatta wedded Miss Jane Sprague, a native of England, and a daughter of Thomas Sprague, a pioneer of Grant county, where he died in 1853. This wife died in Platteville, June 23, 1898, leaving one child, Bessie.

Mr. Vannatta is an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is also connected with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and W. T. Sherman Post, No. 66, G. A. R. He is an earnest advocate of Republican principles, and, while a resident of Harrison township, filled the offices of township treasurer and assessor to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. His sterling integrity and honorable, upright manhood fully entitle him to the position which he holds in the estimation of the people of his community.

GEORGE ECK, one of the well known and prominent veteran soldiers and pioneers of Liberty township, Grant county, is a man well known in his section of the country, as one deserving of praise for his industry and thrift, and as a good representative of our German-American citizens. Mr. Eck was born at Havre, Germany, in 1826, being a son of George and Wilhelmina (Calder) Eck, both of whom were natives of Germany, where they lived and died. A brother of our subject, Fred Eck, came to America, and during the Civil war served in the 43d Wis. V. I. and died in service.

George Eck came to Grant county in 1854, and engaged in plastering and painting, and later purchased a fine farm of forty acres, near Stitzer, Liberty township, where he now resides. Since coming into possession of this property, Mr. Eck has improved it greatly, erecting new buildings and keeps everything in excellent condition, and as a result his crops show the effect of his labors.

In 1865, Mr. Eck enlisted at Hazel Green, Grant county, in the 44th Wis. V. I., for one year, or until the close of the war, and was stationed at Nashville, Tenn. Here the climate so affected Mr. Eck that he was taken sick, and was honorably discharged, after which he returned to Lafayette county, and on account of the injury to his health, from which he has never recovered, he now receives a pension of $16 a month.

Before coming to America, Mr. Eck was married to Wilhelmina Kalder, born in Germany, and to this union eight children have been born: William, a farmer of Liberty township; Hannah Rowena, who died in 1899; Margaret; George Frederick Wilhelm; Mary Wilhelmina; Katie; Henry Ludwig; and Emma. Socially, Mr. Eck is a prominent member of the G. A. R. Post, and politically adheres to the teachings of the Republican party. Having been a resident of Liberty township since 1862, Mr. Eck is one of the oldest inhabitants, and enjoys the esteem of his neighbors, as well as a wide circle of friends outside the immediate vicinity of his home.

W. D. BURR, merchant and postmaster at the village of Ellenboro, Grant county, was born in Rock county, Wis., Dec. 9, 1852, son of B. F. and Nancy A. (Barnard) Burr.

Mr. Burr's parents were both natives of the state of New York, the father born July 20, 1816, and the mother June 18, 1820. Both grew to maturity in New York, where they were married in April, 1846, and where they continued to make their home for some five years. Mr. Burr was educated for the ministry and followed that profession in connection with farming all his life. In 1850 he and his wife came West to Rock county, where he purchased a farm, which he cultivated when not engaged in clerical labors. There our subject was born. In about 1856 Mr. Burr bought a farm in Jefferson county, Wis., which became the family home some nine years. At the expiration of that time the family removed to a farm in the town of Lima, Grant county, which was their home until 1869, when Mr. Burr bought a farm in the town of Ellenboro, one mile east of the village. He cultivated this place until 1879, in the intervals of his preaching, and in the year named it was sold to W. D. Burr, the father removing to South Dakota, where he followed farming and preaching until his death, in 1894. His noble and beautiful-spirited wife, who had shared with him all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, died May 4, 1888, at the home of her son, W. D. Burr. To Mr. and Mrs. Burr came a family of seven children: (1) Irving, born in New York in April, 1847, died at the age of fifteen years. (2) Frank, born in New York in 1848, married Miss Katie Richards, of Atlantic, Iowa, and is a boot and shoe merchant of that city. There are eight children in their family. (3) P. A., born in New York in January, 1850, married Miss Lizzie Landon, and they live on his ranch in Lincoln county, S. Dak., with their two children, Minnie and Orla. (4) W. D. is our subject. (5) Sophia, born in Rock county, Wis., in November, 1855, was educated in the Normal School, and died Dec. 9, 1873. She was much thought of by those who knew her. (6) Catherine O., born in Jefferson county, Wis., in November, 1857, was educated in the State Normal at Platteville, and was for some time a teacher. She died in 1875, a bright and charming young woman. (7) Helen D., born in Jefferson county, in June, 1860, married O. J. Anderson, and moved to South Dakota, where she died in March, 1897, leaving a family of four children. She obtained her education at the State Normal, and was a teacher for several years in Grant county and Iowa.

W. D. Burr remained with his parents in their various locations until he was grown, and received a district-school education. In 1879 he came into the ownership of his father's farm in the town of Ellenboro, on which he made his home for two years. In May, 1883, he married Miss Ida Nichols, daughter of Leonard and Elizabeth (Bell) Nichols, old pioneers in Grant county. Her father, Leonard Nichols, was superintendent of the Rand & Laflin Powder Mills at Platteville for some years, and was killed in the explosion at the mills in 1870. Mrs. Nichols died in Iowa, and four of her children are living: (1) Carrie is the wife of James Lynn, of Dubuque, Iowa; (2) Ida is the wife of W. D. Burr; (3) George is a resident of Buffalo Gap, S. Dak.; and (4) Lillie is the wife of O. E. Clubb, of St. Paul, Minn. Mrs. Ida Burr was born in Ulster county, N. Y., in 1861, received a good education in the State Normal at Platteville, and was a successful teacher in Grant county for some five years. For about two years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Burr lived on the farm, and then moved to Montgomery county, Iowa, where he farmed for about the same length of time. In 1886 they came back to Ellenboro, where Mr. Burr went into business as a merchant, continuing thus to the present time. In 1887 he was appointed postmaster under President Cleveland and has held this office ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. Burr are the parents of eight children: Mabel, born Feb. 10, 1884; Lillie, in October, 1885; Walter D., in January, 1888; Harry, in January, 1890; Florence, in February, 1892; Eva, in June, 1894; Vera, in August, 1896; and Catherine, in November, 1898. Mabel is a student at the State Normal in Platteville.

Mr. Burr is a Republican, has been assessor, and is now treasurer of the town. He has been one of the delegates to the county convention on several occasions. He belongs to the local camp of the Modern Woodmen of America at Ellenboro, and to the Knights of the Maccabees. In religion this family are all identified with the Baptist Church. Mr. Burr is a leading and enterprising business man, and has the respect of the community.

PETER SAMBROOK. This active and enterprising tradesman has been in business in Belmont, Lafayette county, some thirty-five years, and has largely contributed to the general prosperity of this portion of Wisconsin by the character of his relation to his patrons. He is an honorable and upright merchant, carries a stock of honest and reliable goods, and has a habit of making personal friends of his patrons.

Mr. Sambrook was born in Birmingham, England, in January, 1827, and is a son of James and Sarah (Millard) Sambrook, who were born, reared and died in England, leaving a family of six children: Jane and Paul still remain in their native country; Philip went to Australia, where he is now living; Joseph enlisted in the English army, and died some years ago; Sarah came to Chicago in 1870, and died there twenty-two years later, having never married.

Peter Sambrook had his education from the local schools of his native land, and their work at that time was neither very broad nor deep. In 1855 he emigrated to America, a strong and sturdy young man of nearly thirty years of age, and entered a plow factory at Platteville, Wis., and put in some five years at that laborious but useful trade. He had learned the milling trade in his own country, but somehow the opportunity never seemed right to take it up after arriving in Wisconsin. Mr. Sambrook left the factory in 1860, and made investments in a store, and very soon decided that he had found his life work. He discovered natural aptitude for trade, and devoted himself to it with energy and success. The business was maintained in Platteville five years, and was then sold, that the enterprising young merchant might transfer himself and all his interests to the new town of Belmont. This was a new trade center that had just been started, as a result of the completion of plans for certain railroad construction. The Milwaukee railroad did not penetrate this section of the county, however, until 1869, and the growth of Belmont, rapid and substantial, lagged and halted before the advent of the iron horse. Mr. Sambrook was on the ground, and patiently waited improved conditions which he was sure would follow the completion of the railroad, and he was quick to take advantage of the change for the better, and has held the situation to this time, a success both in trade and in character and standing in the community.

In 1850 Mr. Sambrook wedded Miss Eliza Woodward, daughter of Thomas and Anne Woodward, who lived and died in England. Mrs. Sambrook was born in England in 1828, and received her education in her native town. No children have come to them. Mr. Sambrook purchased considerable real estate after his arrival in Belmont, where he has erected a store and a dwelling house, and is the proprietor of one of the leading commercial establishments in this part of the State. He has always been a Democrat, and has served on the town board a number of years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sambrook have been consistent members of the Episcopal Church from youth, and are highly esteemed by all who know them personally. Mr. Sambrook came to this country without means, and by his own industry and thrift has accumulated a handsome competence. He has been identified with the growth of Belmont, and he and his wife are counted among its best people.

NELSON OLSON (deceased), late of the town of Fennimore, Grant county, was a soldier of the war for the Union, Scandinavian blood being ever loyal to the cause of liberty and the progress of men.

Mr. Olson was born in Norway Dec. 3, 1825, and grew to manhood in his native country. He came to America in 1847, landing at New Orleans, and traveling up the river to Jefferson City, Mo., where he found work a short time. He soon went to Chicago, and from there to the pineries of Michigan, where he spent two years. On July 15, 1851, Mr. Olson was married at Racine, Wis., to Miss Betsy E. Hogle, who was born in Middlebury, Genesee Co., N. Y., June 3, 1825, a daughter of Andrew and Hannah (Reed) Hogle. Andrew Hogle came to Grant county, Wis., in 1837, and was one of the very earliest settlers of Potosi; he returned to New York, and in 1843 brought his family to this State. In 1864 he and his wife removed to Fennimore, and in 1878 to Le Mars, Iowa, where he died Nov. 20, 1893, at the venerable age of ninety-eight; his wife died in 1894, at the age of ninety. They were the parents of six daughters and one son, the latter dying in California many years ago. All the daughters are living but one: Mrs. Susan Fetter is deceased; Mrs. Patience Powel lives in New York; Mrs. Betsy E. Olson; Mrs. Amanda N. A. Crouch, of Le Mars, Iowa; Mrs. Mehitable Crow, of the same place; and Mrs. Jane Duncan, of Marshalltown, Iowa.

Mr. Olson worked in the pineries the winter following his marriage, and the following spring he and his wife came to La Crosse, and soon after settled in Houston county, Minn. He enlisted in August, 1864, in Company K, 11th Minn. V. I., and served until about the time the war closed, when he was discharged. His health was badly undermined by his army experiences, and he never fully recovered his former strength and vigor. In 1865, soon after the termination of the war, Mr. and Mrs. Olson removed to Grant county, Wis., and settled in the town of Lancaster, later moving to their Fennimore home. Three of the four sons born to them are living: Andrew J., William H. and Charles W. One son, Frank N., died at the age of twenty-six. They were very worthy people, highly respected in the community for genuine worth and unassuming goodness. The death of Mr. Olson was a cause for genuine sorrow in the community.

HENRY MARTENS, a well-known furniture dealer of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Hanover, Germany, Dec. 9, 1847, and is the eldest of the seven children that constituted the family of Henry and Helena Martens, who came to this country in 1854.

Henry Martens, the father, was a carpenter, landed in the city of New Orleans, came up the Mississippi river to Galena, Ill., and thence across the prairie by wagon to Platteville, then a small village, and the ground on which the house of Henry Martens, the younger, now stands, was then heavily timbered with hard wood; it was situated near the site of the present high school building. Although his property was slightly improved when he bought it, Mr. Martens erected a new dwelling and other buildings, and on this property he and his wife passed the remainder of their days, devout in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which they were the first members in Platteville. Of their seven children, Ida and Frederick died young; Catherine was born and educated in Germany, and after coming to Wisconsin was married to John Shambo, a wagon-maker in Platteville, and is the mother of two children, Henry and Frank; William, born in Germany, is a cabinet-maker, is married, and has an adopted child, Lillie (they reside in Platteville); John, born in Platteville, married a Miss Peterson, and has four children, Clarence, Sophia, Laura and Lillie (he works in the store of his brother Henry); August, also born in Platteville, and working at cabinet-making for his brother Henry, is married to a Miss Shepherd, and has five children.

Henry Martens received a good German education, and after coming to America acquired the English language, making a specialty of its study, though he did not attend school, as his father required his services as a manufacturer of furniture in his shop. In 1870 Henry went into business on his own account, adding the manufacture of organs and other musical instruments to that of furniture, and now has the largest establishment in his line in the city.

In 1873 Henry Martens married Miss Bertha Hillman, a highly educated lady who came from Germany to America in 1870, and was for many years her husband's book-keeper. After the death of her parents Mr. Martens purchased the old family residence, in which Mrs. Martens died, in January, 1887, leaving her husband with one daughter, Helena, born in 1879, who graduated from the Platteville high school, and is well educated in music. Mrs. Martens was a sincere Christian, a devoted wife and loving mother, and was greatly missed in the community in which she had lived. On Sept. 12, 1900, Mr. Martens was married to Miss Charlotte Wilke, of Platteville, daughter of Gottlieb Wilke.

Mr. Martens continued to reside in the old homestead until 1898, when he sold his dwelling and purchased a very fine residence on Virgin avenue, where he and his family are surrounded with every comfort in life. They are all members of the Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Martens has been an officer for thirteen years, and a member of the choir for over twenty years, and to the support of which he has ever been a most liberal contributor. In politics Mr. Martens has been an ardent Republican ever since he was entitled to a vote, has been a member of the city council, and has been largely instrumental in adding to the improvement and general progress of the city. Although but a poor boy when he began life in Platteville, he has risen to a place of distinction and financial prosperity, and has won the unfeigned esteem of his fellow citizens in all stations of life. As a business man his name is beyond reproach, and his musical instruments, in the construction of which he exercises the most conscientious care, have secured him an enviable celebrity, and are in general use throughout the West.

GEORGE KIELER, a retired merchant of the village of Kieler, in the town of Jamestown, Grant county, was born in Prussia, Germany, Sept. 20, 1845.

Mr. Kieler's parents, John and Catherine (Hube) Kieler, were both also born in Prussia, he in 1800, and she in 1806. There they obtained their education, and there they were married. Mr. Kieler was a stone mason and contractor in his own country. In August, 1855, they came to this country, making the voyage across the ocean in a sailing vessel, and landing at Quebec. They came to Wisconsin by way of the lakes, and settled in Jamestown, Grant county, where he bought a tract of land and made a home near what is now known as Kieler, named after the family. This was the home of this honest and worthy couple as long as they lived. The husband and father died in 1882, and the mother in 1888. Both were devout members of the Catholic Church, and he was instrumental in the establishment of the first Catholic church built in Kieler, in 1856. A new rock edifice has taken its place, the old building being now used for a school house. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kieler: (1) Gertrude, born in Prussia, married John Richter, of Germany, and came to this country three years previous to the arrival of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Richter settled near Kieler, where she died, leaving five children, Joseph, John, Annie (wife of Bernard Dubie, of Potosi), Mary (Mrs. John Kelly, of Potosi), and Dorathea (wife of Charles Jacobs, of Iowa). (2) Dorathea was born in Germany, married Joseph Richards, and settled near Kieler, Grant county, afterward moving to Paris, same county, where he died, leaving four children, John, Henry, Lawrence, and Catherine (wife of Frank Ludwig). Mrs. Richards lives at Kieler. (3) Barbara, born in Germany, became the wife of Frank Uthe, of Germany. They made their home at Paris for a time, while Mr. Uthe went to California in search of gold. They made a permanent home at Dickeysville, where he died, the father of eight children, Henry, Frank, John, Joseph (deceased), Charles, Matilda (deceased wife of George Schumacher, of East Dubuque), Elizabeth (who married Joseph Witherhold), and Catherine (wife of Martin Houser, of Harrison, Grant county). (4) Lawrence, born in Germany, received his schooling in the old country. He married Miss Elizabeth Collogan, of Grant county, and for some years he lived on a farm in the town of Jamestown, and is now a farmer in the State of Iowa. His children are John, Thomas, Frank, Joseph, George, Benno, Rosie (Mrs. Thomas Lenstra, of Iowa), Louisa, Dora (wife of John Flanagan, of Iowa) and Barbara (at home). (5) Frank, born in Germany, acquired his education in the old country. He married Miss Margaret Kothe, of Jamestown, and their home is now in Paris. Their children are Lawrence, Matilda, Louisa, Dora, Annie, Edward, Charles, and Arthur, all unmarried and at home. (6) George is our subject. (7) Louisa, born in Germany, is the youngest of the family, and received her education in this country. She married Henry Schumacher, of East Dubuque, and has a family of children—Henry, Katie (wife of Thomas Hicken, of Minneapolis), Annie and Angeline.

George Kieler was partly educated in Germany, and had a few years' instruction in the district school in Jamestown. He learned the trade of shoemaker in East Dubuque, and worked at it while he was a young man. Mr. Kieler married Miss Dorathea Montage, a lady of Grant county, and the daughter of Karl and Mary Montage, natives of Prussia, who were long settled in Grant county. They died in Dickeysville. Mrs. Kieler was born in Germany in 1849, and grew to womanhood in Grant county.

George Kieler first settled in the town of Paris, where he worked at his trade some two years in the town of Dickeysville, and then went to Iowa, where he bought a farm, cultivating it some two years, until driven out by the grasshopper plague. Coming back to Jamestown, he followed his trade for some years. In 1882 he purchased real estate, put up a store building, and handled general merchandise in connection with his shoe trade for many years, becoming very prosperous. In 1883 he established the first postoffice, under the administration of Arthur, holding it until 1899. Mr. Kieler has been a notary public for some fourteen years. In 1890 Mr. Kieler bought a farm, which he still owns. In 1899 Mr. Kieler sold his store, and purchased the "Jamestown Hotel," at Louisburg, which he is now conducting, though in October, 1900, he sold the hotel, expecting to move shortly to his farm in Kieler. There are eight children in his family: (1) Katie, born in Dickeysville, in 1872, was educated in the school at Kieler, and is a young lady of more than ordinary ability, being her father's assistant in the store and postoffice for a number of years. (2) George W., born in Jamestown in 1874, is now employed as manager of a creamery at Lebanon, Ohio, having graduated from the Dairymen's Association at Madison, Wis. (3) John H. was born in Sac county, Iowa, in 1876; (4) Lawrence, in Jamestown, in 1878; (5) Carl, in Jamestown, in 1880; (6) Louisa, in 1886; (7) Agatha, in 1892; (8) Matilda, in 1894.

Mr. Kieler is a Democrat, and has held the office of town treasurer and school clerk for a number of terms. He has been one of the leading business men of his community, and has made his mark for honesty and uprightness. All the family belong to the Catholic Church, and our subject has given liberally to its support. He is a member of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

NORMAN CHURCHILL, now retired from active business, was born in Troy, Madison Co., Ill., Jan. 17, 1827, a son of William B. and Almira (Humes) Churchill, both natives of the East. They were the parents of two sons and three daughters: Caroline E., the widow of Judge Bingham; Norman; George; Lucina Ann, the widow of William Sykes; and Maria.

William B. Churchill was a farmer, and one of the early settlers of Madison county, Illinois. With his brother George, he was active in keeping Illinois from becoming a slave State. Mr. Churchill lived a few years near Alton, but spent his last years in Madison county, where he died at the age of sixty years. His widow survived many years, and came to Monroe, where she died when about eighty-six years old. He was a Methodist, and his widow a Universalist. Living in Alton at the time the Lovejoy printing press and materials were thrown into the street, his influence and sympathy were given to the Abolitionists. These were stormy times, and it required strength and courage to resist the enemies of human liberty. Mr. Churchill served in the war of 1812, and in the last years of his life drew a pension for his services. His brother was a member of the Illinois Legislature several times, in 1817 and 1818, when the Capitol was at Vandalia, and afterward when it was at Springfield. Jesse Norman Churchill, father of William B., was a native of New York, and came of English stock. A Congregational minister, he was twice married, and died in the East.

Norman Churchill was reared on the farm in Madison county, Ill., until he was fourteen years old. His education was acquired in the old-fashioned subscription schools. After spending some two years in Alton, he came with his parents to Green county, Wis., and has lived in Monroe since the spring of 1840. At that time there were but one or two log cabins and one frame house erected in what is now a handsome and beautiful city. The frame house passed into his possession, and he continued to own it until 1888, when he tore it down and rebuilt. For thirty-two years he was engaged in the manufacture of sash and doors, and the preparation of all kinds of cut lumber, running a saw and planing mill in connection for general custom business.

Mr. Churchill was married Feb. 27, 1854, to Miss Ann E. Sherman, a daughter of Dr. Weaver O. and Amy (Terry) Sherman, natives of New York. To this union were born six children: Charles B., Dolly and Kittie (twins), William W., Minnie Beatrice and Erni N. Charles B., a plumber and steam fitter, and also a brick maker in Monroe, was married to Amelia Wood, and is the father of four children: Ethel, Lottie, Helen and Norma. The twins died in early childhood. William W., a consulting engineer for Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Company, of New York, married Pearl Dadman, of Boston, now dead. Minnie Beatrice married Dr. William G. Cole, lives in Guerneville, Cal., and is the mother of one child, Margaret. Erni N., a plumber and a steam fitter, was married to Miss Edith D. Harris, of Postville, Iowa, and lives in Monroe.

Mr. Churchill is a Unitarian, but has given his support to the Monroe Universalist Church, as did also his wife, assisting in the building of the edifice used by that church before the war. He has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows since 1853, and is the only charter member of Monroe Lodge, No. 72, now living. Always a strong temperance man, he was for many years an active worker in the Good Templar order, and for thirty-six terms was Worthy Chief of the local lodge. He was the first chief of the Monroe fire department, having been a member of that organization for more than twenty years. Always a Whig, when that party gave way to the newly formed Republican party, he became as active in the latter, and has been a Republican since the organization of the party in Wisconsin, in 1854. For two terms he was a member of the board of supervisors, and served as chairman of the board one term. Mr. Churchill was a millwright in his young manhood, and built a brick flouringmill in Monroe, with a capacity of one hundred barrels of flour a day, which he operated as long as this was a wheat-growing district. He owns a good home and five acres of land in the city of Monroe, where he has lived for thirty-two years, and has owned the land for over fifty years. He owns the hardware store building now occupied by Capt. Kundert, and has a half interest in the Perine Farm. He is a well-to-do and highly respected citizen, and has always taken a leading part in local affairs. Mrs. Norman Churchill was the only child of Dr. Sherman, who practiced medicine in Monroe from 1849 until his death in 1884, at the age of eighty-two. His wife, Amy (Terry) Sherman, died in 1872, at the age of seventy. Mrs. Churchill began reading medicine under her father when about fourteen years of age, and was graduated from Hahne-mann Medical College. She practiced medicine until her death July 26, 1896, at the age of sixty-four.

JEFFERSON CRAWFORD is president of the Crawford Mining Co., of Hazel Green, and one of the stirring, energetic, business men of Grant county.

Our subject was born in Hazel Green Oct. 14, 1851, a son of Jefferson and Catherine (Harper) Crawford. The father was born at Carmichaels, Greene Co., Penn., in 1809, and the mother in the same county in July, 1816. Their earlier years were passed in the East, and they came to Wisconsin previous to their marriage, which took place in 1841. The father was a farmer and a miner, a keen and pushing business man, and he was a member of the mining firm of Hewlet & Crawford, which became one of the most important mining and smelting firms in Hazel Green and Galena, Ill. In later years Mr. Crawford was connected with other mining enterprises, owned large tracts of land, and carried on farming and stock raising on an extensive scale. In 1854 he built a large store, and, as a member of the firm of J. L. Crawford & Co., embarked in general merchandising, in which he was remarkably successful. His sales for one year amounted to over one hundred thousand dollars. In 1862 the business was merged into the new firm of Crawford, Mills & Co., which soon became the Crawford & Mills Mining Co. The business was continued until the death of Mr. Crawford, in 1868. The career of this honored and successful gentleman invites scrutiny and suggests thought. Coming into the county without means, he first made a living as a day laborer, but by thrift, economy and wise business management gradually became wealthy, and left his family a large estate acquired by clean methods, without a taint of dishonesty. In early life Mr. Crawford was a Whig, later became a Republican, and was nominated by that party for the position of State treasurer, but he was impelled to decline the proffered honor in consideration of his extensive business interests, which demanded his closest attention. Mr. Crawford was a warm friend of Gen. Grant, who came to his home a number of times during our subject's last sickness. Mr. Crawford was one of the founders and warm friends of the Presbyterian Church in Hazel Green, of which his wife was a devout member. He died leaving his wife with four children: (1) Salome died when four years old. (2) Mildred L., born in Grant county in 1845, obtained her higher education at Clinton, N. Y., becoming highly accomplished in both music and the classical studies. She makes her home with her sister, Mrs. Jennings, in Pittsburg. (3) Catherine died when four months old. (4) Alice R., born in 1847, was educated in Chicago, and at Jacksonville, Ill., and is now the wife of W. K. Jennings, a prominent lawyer and wealthy citizen of Pittsburg. They have a family of three children, Clara C., Florence C., Dale C., the last named a graduate of Yale College. (5) John J., born in 1856, acquired his education in the Cumberland Presbyterian College at Lincoln, Ill., and in 1876 engaged with his brother in the management of the home business. In 1882 he became engrossing clerk of the Legislature, serving two terms. In 1884 he secured a position with the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., holding same about two years, and he now lives at Randolph, Mass., where he is the manager of an extensive banking institution. In 1884 he married Miss Josephine Turner, a daughter of Seth Turner, a wealthy banker of Boston, and there are three children in their family, Turner, John and Judith. (6) Jefferson is our subject.

Jefferson Crawford received his early education in the private schools of Hazel Green, his father preferring that method of instruction. When the father died the management of the extensive estate fell upon him and his brother John, as noted above. Since the fall of 1883 he has had sole management of the mining interests, which have developed into immense proportions. On 558 acres Mr. Crawford has at least 450 ore-bearing crevices and in addition he is working a large amount of leased land.

Mr. Crawford and Miss Bessie N. Crowle were married in 1883. Mrs. Crawford is a daughter of James R. and Elizabeth Crowle, who, in 1871, came from England, where she was born, to Grant county. Mrs. Crawford is a lady of much culture, and before her marriage was a teacher in the city of Lancaster for one year, and in Hazel Green and vicinity for several years. Mr. Crawford and his wife settled at the old homestead, which is one of the fine residences in this part of the county, and which has been much improved, and made thoroughly modern in all its appointments since Mr. Crawford's marriage. They have two children: Ellen J., born in 1885, attended the high school in Hazel Green, being a member of the class of 1901. John J., born in 1890, is a student in the home schools.

Mr. Crawford is one of the stalwart Republicans of his county, and has taken an active part in political work for the last quarter of a century. He has served as a member of the village board, though never an aspirant for political honors. Mr. Crawford belongs to the Masonic fraternity. He is a popular and successful man, of a genial and kindly spirit, and has a host of friends. Mrs. Crawford is a worthy companion to such a husband, and is a lady of many gifts of mind and heart, and most attractive personality.

JAMES W. MURPHY, an eminent attorney at law of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of this city, was born in April, 1858, and is the only survivor of the six children born to William and Catherine (O'Sullivan) Murphy, the former of whom was born in Adrigole, county Cork, Ireland, January 15, 1824, and the latter in Kenmare, county Kerry.

Dennis Murphy, father of William Murphy, and grandfather of James W., came to the United States in 1839, accompanied by his daughter Mary, the eldest of his children, his destination being Dubuque, Iowa, where a married sister had resided since 1834. On arriving at the port of New Orleans, Dennis and his daughter were attacked with yellow fever, to which the former succumbed, but the daughter recovered and reached Dubuque in safety, but later came to Platteville, Wis., where she was married to the late David Gardner, whom she survived several years, expiring in 1894, at the age of seventy-two years.

The principal occupation of William Murphy in Ireland was farming, but for a time he was employed as bookkeeper and clerk on the board of public works at his native town, where he married Miss O'Sullivan in 1849. In 1853 he and wife came to America, tarried a few months in Ulster county, N. Y., and the same year came to Platteville, Wis., arriving at the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary Gardner, on what was then known as "Irish Hill." A brother, James, had preceded him to Platteville, and was mining here when the Mexican war opened, for which he at once enlisted, serving until its close and dying shortly afterward.

William Murphy first went to housekeeping in Platteville in a house that had been previously used for hotel purposes and was known as the "Braly House," now occupied by N. Henning. For a short time he worked in Mr. Avery's brickyard and next at various employments, principally mining, and it may be said that in this he was very successful, having taken out, with sundry partners, nearly one and a half million pounds of lead ore; in company with Mr. Henning he discovered and worked the lead bearing their names, on the lands of Dr. Davis, south of town, taking out nearly 700,000 pounds. In company with John Stephens Mr. Murphy discovered and worked the lead bearing their names, on land owned by himself adjoining that of the former. In 1857, accompanied by a miner from Potosi, he went on a prospecting tour through the townships of Mount Hope and Woodman, Grant county, and discovered lead ore at different points, but the country was sparsely settled and transportation difficult, and they abandoned the intention of developing their "finds." Mr. Murphy is still of opinion that valuable mines will yet be developed in that region, and in this opinion he is sustained by many old mines and by the legend of the last mine worked in the territory by Spaniards, and which is now known positively to be situated there, the secret of its location being guarded by parties who are awaiting a favorable opportunity to develop it.

In 1859 Mr. Murphy purchased the lot at the corner of Elm and Cedar streets, on which the residence of H. M. Gribbee now stands, the lot being then covered with heavy timber. Cedar street was then practically the north line of the village, there being but few houses beyond it in that direction. Mr. Murphy had lived for a short time in the old frame house now called the Shoneback place, near the Roundtree branch, on the Cheever Mill road, but on acquiring the corner lot mentioned, he cleared off the timber, with which he erected the log house which was his home until 1866.

Since coming to Platteville Mr. Murphy has made it his constant home, with the exception of ten years, which period he spent on a farm one mile south. Twice has he visited his native land, each time resting at his old homestead, which was erected in the early part of the eighteenth century.

James W. Murphy was graduated from the State Normal School of Platteville with the class of 1873, and holds the record to-day as the youngest graduate of the State Normal School in Wisconsin. For five years he was a teacher in Grant county. He studied law with A. W. Bell, of Platteville, was admitted to the Bar in 1879, and then attended the law department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, from which he was graduated with the class of 1880. In 1886 he was elected district attorney of Grant county, and filled the position for four years. He has practiced law at Platteville since April, 1880. In January, 1881, he formed a copartnership with A. W. Bell, under the firm name of Bell & Murphy, which continued until July, 1882. From this time until January, 1887, he practiced alone, and then formed a copartnership with D. J. Gardner, under the firm name of Murphy & Gardner, this relationship continuing until 1895, since which time he has practiced alone.

In 1881 Mr. Murphy was joined in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Jones, daughter of John W. and Catharine Jones, prominent residents of Lafayette county, Wis., where she was born in 1860. To this marriage have been born five children, four of whom are living: Catharine M., Lyola, John W., and Bessie. Mary Agnes, the youngest child, died in infancy. The family are all members of the Catholic Church. In politics Mr. Murphy was identified with the Republican party until 1896, when his views of the financial issues of the day brought him into the William J. Bryan fold.

PAUL RUDOLPH. This name will be readily recognized by those familiar with the local affairs and business personnel of Janesville, Rock county, as that of the proprietor of the well-known grocery house at the corner of Center street and Western avenue, in that city. Generations of German tradesmen and artisans have transmitted commercial instincts to him, and he has developed business habits that insure success. He is a thorough workman, everything he does is reliable, and his integrity and worth are conceded.

Mr. Rudolph was born in Germany Feb. 6, 1855. His parents, Herman and Sophia (Stein) Rudolph, were both born and reared in Germany. They had two children: Paul, our subject; and Adelheid, wife of John Kohler, of Janesville. The father was a merchant in Germany, where he died in 1878, at the early age of forty-nine, and three years later his widow came to this country; she is now living in Janesville. They were Lutherans, and of excellent standing in every relation of life. His father, who was a goldsmith, died in middle life, leaving seven children. Johann Stein, the father of Mrs. Sophia (Stein) Rudolph, held a government position, that of district overseer. His family consisted of two children.

Paul Rudolph was educated in Germany after the thorough-going old-country fashion, and when fourteen began clerking in a grocery store. Upon the attainment of his majority he emigrated to the United States, seeking that large success in life which invincible conditions made doubtful if not impossible in his native land. Landing here in 1876, he made Monroe, Wis., his first stopping place, securing a position as clerk in a grocery store in that city, and remaining there until 1878. He then journeyed West to Pottawatomie county, Kans. The next year he came back to Wisconsin, opening a grocery store in Janesville, which has proved a decided success, and he is still at the old stand, doing business in the same honorable and upright fashion that has been a characteristic of the family. In 1894 he embarked in the leaf tobacco business, and ships to all parts of the United States, also exporting to Europe.

Paul Rudolph and Miss Amelia Blasing, daughter of Carl Blasing, were united in matrimony July 1, 1878, and she has proved in every way a capable and worthy helpmeet to her husband. They are the parents of six children: Otto, Alfred, Ella, Ethel, Edwin and Gertrude. In politics Mr. Rudolph has taken an independent attitude, and at every election judges for himself what is best for the times.

DAVID THOMPSON. Among the prominent, progressive and influential citizens of Belmont township, Lafayette county, is David Thompson, who commands the esteem and respect of the whole surrounding neighborhood. Mr. Thompson was born in Knoxville, Tenn., July 26, 1822, a son of Daniel and Rosie (Cathcart) Thompson, both of whom were born in North Carolina, where they grew to maturity and married. Daniel Thompson was a soldier in the war of 1812, taking part in the battle of New Orleans.

Daniel Thompson was of Scottish ancestry, and his father, James Thompson, served in the Revolutionary war, under Gen. Washington. Daniel settled in Tennessee after his marriage, and the family remained there until our subject was nine years old, removing then to near Lexington, Ky. When sectional feeling ran high, about the time of the opening of the Civil war, Mr. Thompson, being a Union man, returned to the old home in Tennessee, where he and his wife died, but a few days apart, in 1863. The family born to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson consisted of nine children: Polly married Nicholas Felker, of Pennsylvania, who moved to Iowa, where his wife died, leaving four children. Isaac married and settled in Illinois, dying in 1858, leaving a family. Joseph was born in Tennessee, married Eliza Cathcart, and moved to Sanborn, Iowa, where he died. Jane married John Goings, of Tennessee, and settled in Kentucky. William married and settled at Edwardsville, Ill., where he became a wealthy stock dealer, later buying 1,400 acres of land in Jackson county, Mo., where he spent the last years of his life. Sarah married Alex Goings, and died in Tennessee. Our subject is next in the family. James, born in 1826, was a soldier, connected with the 33d Wis. V. I., and served through the Civil war; he married Annie Gooden, of Nashville, Tenn.,

and came West to Grant county, where they lived at the time of the Civil war, but later moved to East Missouri, where he lives retired, he and our subject being the only survivors of this fine old family (two daughters of James are living, one in California, the other in Montana). Rhoda married in Tennessee, and died soon after.

Our subject received his early education in the district schools of Tennessee and Kentucky, and in 1840, with his brothers Isaac and William, removed to Edwardsville, Ill., where he engaged in farming. In 1844 he was married to Miss Sarah A. Scoggie, a native of Tennessee, the daughter of Lemuel and Sarah (Webb) Scoggie, natives of North Carolina, who resided in Tennessee until 1832, when they moved to Madison county, Ill., and later purchased a farm in Bond county, remaining thereon until the time of their death. Of their family of twelve children Mrs. Thompson is the only one surviving.

In 1851 Mr. Thompson, with his wife and two children, moved from Illinois to Lafayette county, Wis., where he purchased a tract of land and settled down to make a home. At that time the country was totally unsettled—nothing but unbroken prairie from Hazel Green, Wis., to the Iowa line. With limited means, Mr. Thompson, like many another pioneer, had come to the new country to make there a permanent dwelling place, and was willing to endure the burdens of its exacting life, facing droughts, hot winds, Indians and floods, with an equanimity which told of indomitable spirit. At the outbreak of the war, however, our subject left his personal affairs in the hands of his capable wife, bravely shouldered his musket, and marched away in defense of his country. Under Col. Moore, of the 33d Wis. V. I., he went first to Memphis, Tenn., and soon was initiated into the dangers of the soldier's life. His first engagement was at Cold Water, Tenn., in 1862, the others of the year being Hollow Springs, Yockney Station, and Moscow, fighting a path through to Meridian on the line of Georgia and thence marching to Plum river. After giving the enemy a lesson, the regiment marched back to Memphis and then fought their way to Vicksburg, taking part in the famous battles there. At Jackson, Miss., they captured the city, went thence to the mouth of the Red river, capturing Fort DeRussy, thence to Yellow Bayou, and later marched to meet Gen. Banks at Alexandria. For the following two weeks they fought until the enemy surrendered, and then went after Gen. Hood's army, which surrendered at Nashville. Our subject was wounded in the foot, at Memphis, while on detached duty, and was sent to the hospital at Nashville, where he was kept until his discharge, at the close of the war. Returning to his home in Lafayette county, he recommenced his life of farming, making improvements and erecting comfortable and substantial buildings upon his land. In the meantime the development of the country had advanced, neighbors were more plentiful, and the conditions of life had grown much more easy. A man of intelligence, he was called upon to fill many of the local offices, and soon became identified with the most important interests of the town.

Of the children born to our subject and wife, some died in childhood. Nancy J., born in Illinois in 1857, married David Ashmore, who was a member of the 7th Wisconsin, part of the Iron Brigade, during four years of the Civil war; they now live in Iowa, on his farm, with a family of twelve children, Judson, Annie, Dora, Robert, Augusta, Manny, Ollie, Edward, Ben Butler, James, Lavina and Grace. John W., born in Illinois in 1859, died when a young man, much lamented. Mary, born in the present home, married William Enlow, a prosperous farmer of Belmont, and has a family of seven children, Elmer, Stephen, Fern, Wilda, Jess, Raymond, and Robert M. Charles, born in Belmont, married Abbie Eyslica, of Grant county, and they live in Pocahontas county, Iowa, where he is a stock farmer; they have the following family, Ora, Mabel, Justin, David, Ira, Eugene, Bernice, Ruby and Mary. Emma and Eva, twins, were born in Lafayette county; the former married Watt Enlow, and lives in Iowa, with two children, Owen and Claud. Eva married Thomas C. Davis, of Platteville, and has three children, Myrtle, Clyde and Merlin. Eugene married Nellie Robinson, a daughter of Rev. Joseph Robinson, of Platteville, one of the old-time ministers of Grant county, and they are residing in Plover, Iowa, with their two children, Millford and Leonie. These children and grandchildren make up a family in which Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have reason to take pride.

Politically Mr. Thompson has always been identified with the Republican party, has been a member of the town board, and has held various local offices, efficiently performing each duty. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the M. E. Church, where they have worshipped for sixty years, and have taken an active part in church work during their whole lives. His ideal for the progress of his town is high, and he has shown a hearty interest in all that has promised to be of benefit to it. Our subject and his family enjoy the esteem of the community in the highest degree.

JOHN McLIMANS, who passed away in Sherburne, Minn., June 21, 1899, was a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and a settler of Grant county in the early days. He was born in Mercer county, Penn., May 26, 1831, and was a son of John McLimans, Sr., who was born Dec. 12, 1799, and died Dec. 18, 1848. His mother was Nancy (Mitchell) McLimans, who was born Nov. 12, 1800, and died in Fenimore township, April 10, 1852. The grandfather of John McLimans was a youth when the war of the Revolution was being waged, and took part in it as a teamster, and did other duty such as a boy could render; several of his brothers were active soldiers in that great struggle. John McLimans, Sr., and wife were the parents of fourteen children. All these children came to Grant county, but only two sons, Henry and Robert, and two daughters, Elizabeth, a resident of Washington, and Mrs. Harriet Kinney, are living. John McLimans came to Grant county in 1849 in the company of two brothers, William and Patterson. John Mitchell, an uncle, was established here, and at his invitation the brothers came. They were so pleased with the prospect, they went back to bring the other members of the family out the following spring. The mother died in 1852. John McLimans settled on government land in the town of Liberty, and immediately began a series of extensive improvements. On April 15, 1856, he was married to Miss Sophronia A. McGhan, who was born in Erie county, Penn., March 14, 1837, daughter of Silas and Mary (Potter) McGhan, who came to Grant county in 1847. They began house-keeping in the home Mr. McLimans had already prepared on his farm. Mr. McGhan took up government land, and made a farm which was his home until his death, April 30, 1863; his widow survived many years, and died Oct. 23, 1889, at the age of eighty-three. They were the parents of six children: George, a resident of Colorado; William, of Sherburne, Minn.; Owen, a resident of Cedarville, Minn.; Merritt, of Colorado. These brothers were all members of Company H, 7th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and completed full three years of enlistment. Mrs. McLimans had a sister, Mrs. Jane Groshong, of Montana, who died August 4, 1898.

John McLimans enlisted in the Union service Sept. 4, 1862, as a member of Company H, 7th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, which formed a part of the "Iron Brigade," and was mustered out May 31, 1865. He was with his regiment in all its engagements down to the battle of Gettysburg, where he was taken prisoner on the first day of that famous battle. He was confined in Libby prison and at Belle Isle, but was paroled after a month, and rejoined his regiment at Fredericksburg. He passed through the campaign of the Wilderness and the siege of Petersburg, where he was taken sick and sent to Whitehall hospital at Philadelphia. There his wife helped to care for him. She secured a furlough for him and took him home with her, where he remained a month, and then came back to his regiment. From that time he continued in active service until his time expired.

Coming back to peaceful life, our subject resumed his farming occupations as soon as his health would permit, and was on the farm for many years. In 1891 he moved into Fennimore, where he lived, until he passed away. He died in Minnesota, where he and his wife had gone to visit their children who were settled there. He was a great sufferer from diseases that had followed him from the army, though he was a man who made little complaint. He was a gallant soldier, making a record that was without spot or stain, a good citizen and a kind and faithful husband and father. His wife and ten children survive, Mrs. McLimans and two of her sons now living in the pleasant residence in Fennimore. Mrs. McLimans is a most estimable lady, and is greatly respected by all who know her. Of the children, Silas married Christina Kramer. John R. married Lena Whaler, and they have had seven children. Sophronia, Riley, Lena, Thomas, Glenn, Blanch and Ethel. Nellie L. married Philip Keller, of Liberty, Grant county, and has six children. John, Ray, Harrie, Edgar, Cora and Mabel. George O. lives with his mother. Marv J. married William Latham, and has three daughters, Fern, Hattie and Lula. Huldah S. married William Ellis, and has five children, Orin, Martha, Carrie, Oscar and one not yet named. James I. married Adda Hannan, and they have four children, Ira, May, Fern and Adda. Hattie E. is the wife of Norval Walker, and has one son, Tanner. Irene was married May 30, 1900, to Tanner Walker, of Preston, Wis., where he is engaged in farming (he and Norval Walker are brothers and their father, Thomas Walker, was in the same company as John McLimans during the Civil war). Robert M. lives with his mother. Nancy died in infancy.

GEORGE S. WHITCHER (deceased), for many years a prosperous and successful dairy farmer, was born in New Hampshire May 4, 1830, and was a son of John and Annie (Culver) Whitcher. The father was born in Maine, and the mother in Vermont.

For a time after their marriage our subject's parents lived in New Hampshire, and then moved to Michigan, where they lived some years. They moved to Ohio, and spent some years there before coming in 1844 to Wisconsin, where they settled on land afterward owned by their son, George S. They reared a family of well-educated sons and daughters, the older daughters teaching school in Ohio, and for a number of years being prominent in the educational work of Grant county. Mr. and Mrs. Whitcher both died in Grant county.

George S. Whitcher crossed the Plains to California when only eighteen years old, and was very successful in the gold mines of that distant land. Returning with ample funds, he purchased the property where he lived and died. In 1859 he married Miss Rhoda L. Cooley, of Belmont, Lafayette county, a daughter of Sherman and Diana (Day) Cooley, and from a prominent old New England family. The father was born in Hartford county, Conn., in 1806, and the mother in Vermont in 1811. Mr. Cooley was a man of good education, and was a school teacher in his native State, where he learned surveying. Moving to Ohio in 1833, he was often called upon to do surveying in that State. Mr. Cooley married before locating in Ohio, and in 1856 moved to Wisconsin, where he bought a farm near Belmont, Lafayette county, engaging in its cultivation until 1869. That year he bought a farm in the town of Lima, and made his home thereon until his death, in 1887. Mrs. Cooley died in 1897. She was the mother of eight children, seven of whom are living: (1) Mary is Mrs. Nathan J. Everett, of Cortland, Ohio. (2) Frank B. died in 1893. (3) Rhoda L., Mrs. Whitcher, was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1836, and obtained her education in that State where she taught school several years. (4) Roswell, born in Ohio, is now a resident of Waverly, Neb. (5) Richard, born in Ohio, spent three years as a soldier in an Ohio regiment during the Civil war, and is now a farmer at Waverly, Neb. (6) Alfred S. lives at Eagle, Neb. (7) Timothy, born in Ohio, lives at Brainard, Neb. (8) Edward L. born in Ohio, graduated from the Platteville State Normal, and is now principal of a high school in Oklahoma.

After his marriage George S. Whitcher settled on the quarter-section he had purchased from the government, and gradually added to it from time to time until he owned over six hundred acres, the greater part well cultivated land. Here he had a fine home, barns, and other outbuildings needed for farm work. In 1880 he built a large cheese factory on the farm, and a stone creamery building in the town of Lima. As superintendent of this he kept close watch of its operations until his death, July 31, 1898. Mrs. Whitcher was left a widow with five children: (1) John F., born in Lima, in September, 1860, was educated in the State Normal at Platteville, and was a teacher some three years. His father had purchased him a farm in Nebraska, and he spent several years in its cultivation. When his father died he returned to the home, and is assisting his mother in the management of their extensive business interests. (2) Fannie L., born in 1863, had a normal school training, and was a successful teacher previous to her marriage to Peter J. Conner. They live in Lincoln, Neb., and have four children, George W., Clay, Blanche and William McKinley. (3) Lee, born in 1866, married Miss Mercy Lymburger, of Nebraska, and they now reside on a portion of his father's estate, with their three children, Frank, Oris, and Walter. (4) Nora, born in 1872, married John Kenny, a farmer in the town of Lima, and is the mother of two children, Ira G. and Catherine. (5) George S., born in 1876, prepared for teaching at the Platteville State Normal, and for several terms was engaged in the school room. At the present time he is assisting his mother in the management of their extensive estate.

George S. Whitcher was always a Democrat, and frequently took a prominent part in political gatherings. He was interested in the work of the local churches, and freely contributed to their support. For many years he was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and took an active interest in its work. Mrs. Whitcher is a lady of character and ability, and, though she mourns the loss of her kind and indulgent husband, finds comfort in her honorable and industrious family of children, trained in the ways of right and truth. They have an extensive estate, and give its management much care and thought.

PHIL. MCGOVERN, a retired farmer, is one of the best known and most highly esteemed citizens of Grant county, a gentleman of benevolent actions, genial in disposition, and numbering friends by legions. The birth of this good man occurred in the North of Ireland, in March, 1823, and he was the son of Thomas and Bridget McGovern, who died in Ireland some years before our subject crossed the ocean. Prior to his making the journey two of his brothers, James and Patrick, had emigrated, the former purchasing land near Milwaukee, where he resided until his death, in 1894. Patrick was among the brave pioneers who braved untold dangers in the gold fields of California, was successful, married in that State, and died there some years ago.

Phil. McGovern was educated in his native country, and hearing such glowing accounts of the opportunities offered by the New World, he came to New York in 1840, thence traveled to Mauch Chunk, Pennsylvania, and later located at Lancaster, that State, where a cousin, Edward McGovern, was living. The next removal was via Buffalo to Platteville, Wis., where he engaged in mining for eight years. In 1851, fired with stories of the discovery of gold in California, Phil. McGovern crossed the Plains to that State, and worked very successfully for four years. He then returned to Platteville, purchased prairie land east of town, and improved a large farm which he still owns. In 1895, Mr. McGovern retired from active farming, and, purchasing a fine building site, erected his pleasant home, which is supplied with all modern improvements, and finished throughout with hard wood.

In July, 1857, Mr. McGovern was married to Miss Margaret McGovern, born in Ireland in 1837, a daughter of John and Margaret (Morrow) McGovern. John McGovern came from Ireland in 1847, settling on a farm in Grant county, where he died. To himself and wife were born five children, whom he brought to America with him, their mother having died prior to leaving Ireland. Of this family the wife of our subject and two brothers alone survive: John McGovern, Jr., of Lacrosse, Wis., and Thomas, of California. Those now deceased are: Katie was the wife of a Mr. McMaran, of Dubuque, Iowa; Ellen was the wife of Thomas Mont Clair, of St. Paul. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. McGovern, of whom three died in infancy: (1) Henry, born in Grant county, in 1859, is a resident of Whittemore, Iowa, where he is engaged in conducting a nursery. (2) Thomas F., born in Grant county, attended the State Normal for several years, and assisted his father on his farm in Iowa, and now resides in Whittemore, Iowa, engaging in a real estate and loan business, and is also a notary public, is also vice president of the Boyce Land, Loan & Live Stock Co., of Whittemore. He married Miss Kate Cullen, of Iowa, and has three children, Alice, Lloyd and Meda. (3) Philip C., born in February, 1864, was educated in the State Normal, and now resides in Omaha, Neb., where he is engaged in the tobacco and cigar trade; he is married, but has no family. (4) Benjamin, born in Grant county, was educated in the State Normal, and resides on the home farm. (5) Maggie, born in Grant county, was well educated in the State Normal, and is now residing at home; she is one of the most cultivated and accomplished young ladies of Platteville, and a great comfort to her parents. (6) John, born in Grant county, is now a student in the State Normal.

Mr. and Mrs. McGovern and family are all devout members of the Catholic Church, and have always been liberal contributors to it. Not only did Mr. McGovern subscribe very generously to the erection of the old church, but also towards the new one, built a few years ago. Politically, Mr. McGovern has always identified himself with the Democratic party, and loyally supports its candidates. Few men deserve success more than Mr. McGovern, and his prosperity is but the just reward of his years of effort. Never has he turned a deaf ear to the needy, but gives liberally, not only of his means, but also of his time and sympathy. The family Mr. and Mrs. McGovern have reared, is one that does credit to their care and good example, and each member of it is entitled to high esteem.

JOHN A. SMITH. Among the necessary adjuncts to a progressive town is the newspaper, and since 1888 Monticello, Green county, has had in The Monticello News one of the most complete and satisfactory sheets published in the county. This enterprise was established, and has been ably conducted, by John A. Smith, who was born in Jefferson county, Wis., on Oct. 3, 1864, a son of John M. and Eva (Summers) Smith, both of whom were born in Pennsylvania. A family of one son and five daughters was born to them: Nora, who married Hullett Hutson, of Edgerton, Wis.; Susie, who married John Bowen, of Edgerton, Wis.; Ella, who is the widow of J. D. Hoffman, of Rockford, Ill.; Christie, who married Robert McGill, of Oregon, Wis.; John A., our subject; and Retta, who married Newton F. Wells, of Whitewater, Wisconsin.

The paternal grandfather was an old resident of Pennsylvania, as was also the maternal, both of them living to advanced age. The father, John M. Smith, was a carpenter and builder in early life, and after locating at Helenville, Jefferson Co., Wis., continued to be occupied in the same way, but has now retired from active business. During the Civil war he was a member of Co. F, 29th Wis. V. I., and served faithfully in the ranks for three years. In politics he belongs to the Democratic party.

John A. Smith was reared in Jefferson county, Wis., and attended both country and town schools, later entering the Northwestern Business College, at Milwaukee. He then began to learn the printer's trade, under his brother-in-law, at Edgerton, Wis., on the Wisconsin Tobacco Reporter, following this trade a number of years. At various times he has had charge of newspapers, and has taken part in the preparation of some of the most important in the country, finally forming a partnership with M. C. Russell, in the publication of The Whitewater News, continuing this for one year, at the expiration of which time he bought the interest of Mr. Russell, continuing one year longer, and then sold out. The following year was spent by our subject in recuperating, but in 1888 he located in Monticello and established his present successful paper. In politics our subject is a Republican, but his paper is conducted on independent lines.

Mr. Smith was married in November, 1889, to Miss Fannie L. Barney, a daughter of Milo L. and Anna (Burtiss) Barney, and two children have been born of this union: Lela B. and Raymond. Socially Mr. Smith is connected with the A. O. U. W., Knights of the Globe, and is past master workman in the former order at this place. He has shown marked ability in the conduct of his paper, being energetic and progressive, while at the same time he is diplomatic and careful in his selection of the news of the day, aiming to make of his paper an ideal home journal.

A. KNAPP is one of the leading and influential citizens of Cassville township, Grant county, who has taken an active part in promoting its substantial improvement and material development. An adopted son of America, his loyalty is above question, and for three years he fought for the old flag and the cause it represented during the Civil war.

Mr. Knapp was born in Germany, in 1840, a son of Conrad and Mary Knapp, who came to America in 1846, bringing with them their nine children, but of this once numerous family only two members are now living, in 1900, these being our subject and Jasper, a resident of Lancaster, Wis. One son, Philip, served with our subject in the war for the Union, a member of the same company and regiment.

In August, 1862, A. Knapp offered his services to the government, and became a member of Company H, 25th Wis. V. I. When hostilities ceased he was honorably discharged, June 27, 1865, after almost three years of active and faithful service on southern battle fields, never being off duty with exception of six weeks, when confined by sickness in the hospital at Memphis, Tenn., during which time his regiment was stationed at Helena, Ark. Mr. Knapp took part in Sherman's Atlanta campaign, the famous March to the Sea, and then marched on to Washington, D. C., where he participated in the Grand Review. Like most old veterans, he feels the effect of his long army service more and more as the years go by, his chief troubles being rheumatism, caused by exposure, and partial deafness, caused by the explosion of a shell.

On Dec. 31, 1865, Mr. Knapp was united in marriage with Miss Edie L. Roberts, a daughter of Herman and Elizabeth Roberts, natives of Kentucky and Ohio, respectively, and early settlers of Beetown, Grant Co., Wis. They left the county after many years residence here, and the mother died in Colorado, the father in Missouri. Mrs. Knapp is a native of Illinois, and is one of a family of ten children, five of whom are living in 1900. Mr. Knapp and his wife have five children, three sons and two daughters, namely: Alice L., Perry H., Nettie M., Clav W. and Park. In 1897 Mr. Knapp, with his family, moved to Kansas, thinking that a change of climate would be beneficial to his health, and after one year spent in that State, went to Iowa, where he remained two years, but receiving no apparent benefit from the change, he returned to Wisconsin in March, 1900. Here he is comfortably situated on a fine farm in Cassville township, Grant county, and enjoys many of the comforts of life. In his political views he is a Republican. He was one of the faithful soldiers in the war for the Union, and is to-day one of the most highly respected citizens of his community.

HENRY E. RANOUS, though yet a young man, has attained prominence as a druggist and pharmacist in Janesville, Rock county, and stands high among the younger business men of the city. With a thorough preparation for his calling, his future is secure. He has those personal qualities that win popular favor and attract patronage, and his friends anticipate for him a successful career.

Mr. Ranous was born in Watertown, Wis., Sept. 5, 1870. His parents, Clark and Lydia (Lindon) Ranous, also natives of this State, had three children: Henry E.; Nellie Mary, wife of Charles Schaller, of Janesville; and Francis Andrew, of Fond du Lac, Wis. Clark Ranous is a railroad man, being freight agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad in Janesville, of which city he has been a resident since 1872, and his manly and upright qualities, joined to his thorough business abilities, have won him a large circle of friends. He was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, enlisting from Jefferson, Wis., and while in the service suffered from prolonged and serious sickness. After he came back from the war he secured a position with the Northwestern, and has remained with that road to the present time. Politically he is a Republican. His father was born in the State of New York, came West, located in Palmyra, Wis., and died in middle life; he had a large family. The maternal grandfather of Henry Ranous, Edwin Williams, a native of New England, came to Columbus, Wis., many years ago, and died soon after. His widow married Joseph Lindon, and her daughter took his name. Mrs. Ranous is an Episcopalian.

Henry E. Ranous was two years old when his parents brought him to Janesville, and here he spent his childhood and youth, attending the city schools. He was graduated from the Janesville high school in 1889, and began the study of pharmacy with Frank Sherer, spending two years under his supervision, was a student in the Chicago College of Pharmacy, and came back to Janesville to go into business with W. T. Sherer, under the firm name of W. T. Sherer & Co. This partnership continued for five years, and was terminated by the withdrawal of Mr. Ranous, for the purpose of uniting with Dr. St. John in the purchase of the drug business of Prentice & Evenson. They took the firm name of H. E. Ranous & Co., and the business associations thus formed have proved in every way profitable and pleasant, and are still unbroken. Mr. Ranous is a member of the Episcopal Church; fraternally is a Master Mason, affiliating with Janesville Lodge, No. 55, A. F. & A. M.; and in political sentiment is a Republican. He lives at home with his parents.

JOHN KEMP, a venerable representative of the farming community of Jamestown, Grant county, is not now engaged in active work, spending his last days in well-deserved peace and rest, and leaving to other hands the duties which he so well discharged through a long and useful life.

Mr. Kemp was born in Cornwall, England, in June, 1830, a son of John and Elizabeth (Watts) Kemp, both natives of Cornwall, the father born in 1797, and the mother in 1795. Soon after their marriage they came to the United States, and in 1842 settled near Cleveland, Ohio, where they lived some two years. They then came West to Wisconsin, settling at Hazel Green, Mr. Kemp finding work in the lead mines, which occupation he followed some years, after which he bought 120 acres of wild land from the government, paying for it $1.25 an acre. This land he cleared up, erected buildings thereon and made a home for his family. Mrs. Kemp died while they were residing in Hazel Green, leaving him one son, John, and one daughter, Elizabeth. The latter was born in England in 1828, and is now the widow of Joseph Varker, of Cuba City. Her family consists of seven children: (1) Caroline, widow of William Champion, of Cuba City; (2) John R., a farmer in the town of Hazel Green; (3) Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Daniels, of the town of Hazel Green; (4) Philena, wife of Robert Wilkinson, of Iowa; (5) Frank, a resident of the old home in Hazel Green; (6) Ida, at the home in Cuba City; and (7) Russell, a resident of Cuba City.

John Kemp came with his parents to Wisconsin in boyhood, and his education is somewhat limited on account of the fact that the settlements in Wisconsin had outrun for the moment the development of the school system. When twenty years old he went to California to seek his fortune in the gold fields, making the journey across the plains by way of Fort Laramie. For about four years he remained in the gold fields, and came back to Wisconsin in time for the burial of his father, who died that fall.

On May 5, 1855, Mr. Kemp married Miss Jane Roberts, of Hazel Green, daughter of Daniel and Anna Roberts, both of whom died in Cornwall, England. Mrs. Kemp was born in England in 1835. When a young girl she came to her brother, John Roberts, at Mineral Point, where he is still living, retired; Mrs. Kemp and her brother John are the only living members of the Roberts family in this country. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Kemp settled on his father's old homestead in Hazel Green. In 1862 Mr. Kemp crossed the plains for Oregon, taking with him his wife and two children, worked in the mines at Auburn, that State, one year, and then moved to Boise City, Idaho. While in Auburn their eldest son, John, was drowned in one of the mine prospecting holes. Mr. Kemp and his wife remained in the gold fields four years, and then returned to Wisconsin to make their home on the old homestead, which has been their abiding place to the present time. Mr. Kemp has since spent a year in California for the benefit of his health, taking his wife and family with him, and making the journey by rail. Coming back to Wisconsin, they purchased a home near Louisburg, where in 1872 he erected a new house and other buildings, now owning one of the choice homes in this section.

To Mr. Kemp and his wife have been born ten children, six of whom survive: (1) Charles, the eldest living, was born in October, 1865, and obtained his education in the Wisconsin schools. He married Miss Fannie Riker, of Dubuque, where he is a telephone manager. They have four children, Hazel, Francis, Floyd and Charlotte. (2) John H., born in August, 1868, was educated at the high school at Dixon, Ill., and the Platteville State Normal, and for several years has been a teacher in the public schools. He married Miss Alice Shepherd, of Maine, and they are living on his farm in Jamestown, Grant county. (3) William A., born in California in July, 1871, was graduated from the college at Dixon, Ill., and is a resident of Jamestown. (4) Royal R., born in the present home in October, 1873, is the manager of the home farm. (5) Alfred H., born in Jamestown in December, 1876, grew up at the homestead, where he still resides. (6) Edna B., born at the present home in August, 1878, was educated in the home and Dubuque high schools, and is an intelligent young lady.

Mr. Kemp is a Republican, but not a seeker for office. In religion the members of the family are identified with the Congregational and M. E. Churches. Mr. Kemp was one of the founders and builders of the first church in his section of the country, and has always taken a great interest in church work. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

JOSEPH PINCH (deceased). One of the prominent and successful men who assisted materially in the development of Smelser township, Grant county, was Joseph Pinch, who passed out of life in January, 1891, when he had reached his sixty-fourth birthday. He was born in Cornwall, England, in January, 1827, a son of Joseph and Nancy Pinch, both of whom were reared in England, where the former died. The mother decided to remove to America, and with her six children took passage and finally located in Grant county, Wis., in 1849, where she remained until her demise. The family is not a large one now, two daughters dying in New Jersey, where the widowed mother first located, two (Elizabeth and Maria) in Wisconsin, and Elias, the survivor, lives in Iowa.

Joseph Pinch was reared in his English home, and was given educational opportunities there, and in 1851 married Miss Anna Jane, who was born in 1829, a daughter of Thomas and Nancy (Knight) Jane, who were residents of England until 1868, when they came to America and settled in Galena, Ill., where they made their home until they died, some years ago, leaving Mrs. Pinch as the only survivor of the family. After our subject came to America he settled on a farm at Dover, N. J., and there was employed in the iron works, in that State. In 1852 he removed to Cherry Valley, Ill., making the trip by rail and boat, with teams and wagon, thus taking all means of travel at that time possible. Mr. Pinch later moved to Jamestown, Wis., and bought a farm and improved it, upon which his family lived for fourteen years, until he purchased his farm in Smelser township, where he resided until his death. This event called forth many expressions of sorrow and regret from the whole community, for Mr. Pinch had lived a life of honesty, industry and good works and was highly esteemed. Religiously Mr. Pinch was a member of the M. E. Church, and had been since boyhood, always taking an active part in the religious work in his neighborhood. Politically he was identified with the Republican party. To himself and wife were born: John, born in New Jersey in 1852; Annetta, born in Grant county in 1854, married James Jane, of Idaho Springs, Colo., and has four children, Frederick, Albert, Mable and James; Marqueta, born in Grant county in 1857, married William Ketto, and went to Colorado, where she died in 1889, leaving seven children, William, Walter, Joseph, Frank and Harry (twins), Jennie, and Millie, who are residents in the home of their grandmother; Joseph, a farmer here, born in 1862, married a Miss Heil, of Smelser, and has six children, Frederick, Frank, Henry, Elmer, Bessie, and Estella; Jennie, born in 1867, married Sylvester Florine, a mining engineer of Smelser, and has four children, Walter, James, Lillie and Etta; and James, born in 1872, married Estella Finnigan, and resides on the home farm in Smelser.

The widow of our subject resides among her children and old friends, enjoying the comforts provided by her husband during life, and is known throughout the community as a lady deserving the sincere affection and respect which she inspires. For very many years she has been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and is one of the leading spirits in charitable work, within the circle she is able to reach. The family is respected, and none in Grant county are more highly entitled to it than the children of the late lamented Joseph Pinch.

MARTIN HAYDEN is a farmer and miner now residing in the town of Platteville, Grant county, and though somewhat advanced in years, he is still a hale and hearty man, bearing himself with the strength and vigor that naturally belong to an earlier period in life. He is a man of character, and is well and favorably spoken of by those who know him best.

Mr. Hayden was born in the south of Ireland in 1832, and was the son of John and Mary Hayden, who lived and died in Ireland. Mr. Hayden's somewhat limited education was acquired in his native island, and in 1847 he emigrated to this country. He crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel, landing at the port of New York, and found his first employment in this country as a laborer on a railroad, and as a farm hand in Connecticut for several years. In 1849 he went to Frankfort, Ky., where he did railroad work for a year and a half. He went from Kentucky to St. Louis, and did general work for two years, more anxious to be employed than to pick his work. He then came north as far as La Salle county, Ill., and there he was employed for three years in railroading and steamboating, and then entered Wisconsin, locating at Platteville, Grant county, mining in the winter and working on the farm in the summer. At this place he made a modest investment, buying eighteen acres of land one mile north of Platteville, and made some substantial improvements. At a later period he bought eighty acres of land two miles southwest of the town of Platteville, and converted this into the fine farm where he now lives. He has made extensive improvements, putting up a handsome and attractive house, a large barn, and such other improvements as are needed in a modern and up-to-date farm.

Mr. Hayden and Miss Mary Cummings were married in Platteville. She was born in Ireland, and is the mother of nine children: John, born in Grant county, is married and lives with his family in Madison, Wis.; Mary, now the wife of Charles Homiston, of Minneapolis, has a family; Thomas, a resident of Platteville, married and has a family; Ellen, unmarried, lives in Chicago; William is a resident of his father's home; Lizzie lives in Chicago; Martin is also in Chicago; Hannah married Edward Newman, of Chicago; and James lives at home and follows the trade of a painter. Mr. Hayden came to this country poor, and landed in New York with only five dollars in his pocket. By his industry and prudence he has amassed a considerable fortune, and owns a fine farm in Grant county. Politically he is a Democrat, and in religious belief belongs to the Catholic Church, as do all the other members of the family. He was a contributor to the first church of his faith in Grant county. He is a natural student, and is especially well posted on the history and geology of Wisconsin, and his memory is remarkably retentive for one of his years. He has a kindly disposition, and his neighbors speak highly of him.

LEWIS MORGAN OKEY (deceased). Among the representative business men of Grant county none were more deserving of representation in this volume than Lewis M. Okey, the well-known president of the Cassville Bank. For many years he was connected with the agricultural interests of the community, and through his well-directed efforts gained a handsome competence that numbered him among the most prosperous and wealthy citizens of Cassville. Keen discrimination, unflagging industry and resolute purpose were his salient characteristics, and thus he won that prosperity which is the merited reward of honest effort.

Mr. Okey was born in Woodsfield, Monroe Co., Ohio, Jan. 3, 1823, and died at Cassville, Wis., July 7, 1900. He was a son of Henry and Minerva (Baldwin) Okey, natives of Vermont and Massachusetts, respectively, and pioneers of the Buckeye State. The father opened up and improved a farm in Monroe county, Ohio, where his wife died in 1844, and he subsequently came to Cassville, Wis., where his death occurred in 1856. To them were born six children, four sons and two daughters, of whom our subject was the eldest; Wilson came to Grant county, Wis., in 1854, but died in Hull, Iowa, in January, 1901; Cornelius came to Cassville in 1854, enlisted in 1861 in the 7th Wis. V. L., served through the Civil war, and was in the government employ at Washington, D. C., until his death, Feb. 2, 1901; Mrs. Jane Weimer is a resident of Pike county, Mo.; Mrs. Belinda Yockey makes her home in Hull, Iowa; and one son died young.

Lewis Morgan Okey was reared and educated in the county of his nativity, and in 1850 came to Cassville, Wis. The trip was made by water, down the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., and up the Mississippi to Cassville, where he landed April 7, 1850, from the first boat that came up the river that year. The town at that time was a mere hamlet. For two years Mr. Okey made his home in Waterloo township, Grant county, and then purchased 480 acres of prairie and 160 acres of timber land in Cassville township, making a full section, which he improved and placed under a high state of cultivation. For many years he was extensively engaged in general farming and stock raising, making a specialty of blooded stock, and became one of the most substantial agriculturists of Grant county. At his death he still owned three large farms near Cassville, aggregating 1,180 acres. In 1892 Mr. Okey purchased a full interest in what is now the Cassville Bank. It was organized as the First Commercial Bank of Cassville, in August, 1889, by M. A. Creglow and Lewis M. Okey, and the bank building was erected the same year. When Mr. Okey became sole proprietor he changed the name to the Cassville Bank, and from its inception served as president. As a financier he ranked among the ablest, and his executive ability and excellent management brought the concern with which he was connected a high degree of success. He was always distinguished for punctuality and methodical habits, a characteristic which was emphasized during his last sickness, when he took pains to arrange all the details of his business in anticipation of his death.

Before leaving Monroe county, Ohio, Mr. Okey was married, in 1842, to Miss Caroline Titus, a native of Norfolk county, Mass., and a daughter of Samuel Titus, who died in Missouri. To this union were born five children, namely: Samuel, who is married, and lives on the old homestead in Cassville township; William, who is postmaster at Cassville, having had charge of the office for his father, who was postmaster from 1898 to June 27, 1900, when he resigned in favor of his son, the latter's bond being approved on July 9, just two days after his father's death; Lewis H., who is married, and follows farming in Cassville township; Minerva, wife of George H. Groom, of Storm Lake, Iowa; and Dora, who died in 1854, aged eleven months.

Socially Mr. Okey was a member of Cassville Lodge, No. 255, F. & A. M., R. A. Chapter, of Lancaster, Commandery, K. T., of Boscobel, and Wisconsin Consistory, of Milwaukee. He cast his first presidential vote for Henry Clay, the Whig candidate, but from the organization of the Republican party had been one of its staunch supporters; and had served as chairman of the board five years and as a member of the city council at Cassville. Mr. Okey was practically a self-made man, whose success in life was due entirely to his own well-directed and energetic efforts. On first coming to Wisconsin he worked in the lumber woods, at day labor, or anything which he could find to do. Since 1889 he had made his home in Cassville, where he was regarded as one of its most prominent and honored citizens.

JAMES McWILLIAMS. Among the well-known and highly esteemed citizens of the city of Darlington, Lafayette county, is James McWilliams, whose birth took place in county Derry, Ireland, the oldest of four children, his parents never crossing from the old country. Our subject was the first of his family to tempt fortune away from home, and he arrived in Shullsburg, Wis., on March 20, 1851. When he reached New York he was almost without means, but he was anxious and willing to work, and soon found employment in the iron works at Safe Harbor, Lancaster Co., Penn., where the labor was hard and laborious, but was well paid for. Continuing his work there, where he married Miss Catherine McWilliams, he saved a few hundred dollars and resolved to move West and devote his time to the more congenial pursuits of agriculture.

The first purchase of land made by Mr. McWilliams was of eighty acres, in the town of Seymour, and here he built a small house to shelter his family and then began to look about for some work that would enable him to live. In those days the grass grew wild and rank on the prairie, and our subject conceived the idea of cutting a large quantity and selling the hay, later contracting with some mining company at New Diggings for seventy-five tons, at $5.00 a ton. It was customary in those days, as at later times, for neighbors to assist one another, especially in threshing time, and thus Mr. McWilliams secured his hay, and naturally expected a rich reward. Having been called upon to assist a neighbor in threshing, it was necessary to be away from home over night, and what was his disappointment and sorrow to find on his return that fire had broken out and destroyed all the hay and nearly everything he owned, except the land. This was a terrible blow, but the following morning he started for Shullsburg and started to find employment. When he reached there, after much deliberation, he accepted the hard offer of a Mr. McNulty, who engaged him for fifty cents a day, "from the time he could see in the morning until he could see no longer at night," to wind a windlass at the mine, the distance which he had to walk from his home being eight miles, and he continued at this labor all winter. With these meager wages he supplied food for his family, and saved enough to buy twenty-four bushels of seed wheat at a dollar a bushel. Later our subject engaged in work for a religious denomination known as "The Brothers," near Dubuque, Iowa, being all the time looking for work when his own land did not demand his attention. About this time a man came into the neighborhood to buy stock, and our subject engaged to go with him, Mr. McWilliams calling at one place as they passed through the country, and his employer at another. On one occasion he bought of a farmer three mules, and his employer at the same time bought the same of another man, the bargain suiting the latter so well that he engaged Mr. McWilliams to accompany him over Missouri, Iowa, and elsewhere, our subject all the time gaining valuable experience and becoming a good judge of live stock. Increasing his land, which he placed under fine cultivation, he engaged in raising stock, finally becoming noted for his fine stock and cattle, breeding English Shorthorns.

After many years actively engaged Mr. McWilliams is now practically retired, although he still owns his land and takes great interest in fine cattle. The wife, who had come from Pennsylvania, died many years ago, leaving two children, John and Mary. Four sons blessed his second marriage, James, Joseph, Thomas and William. Mr. McWilliams has always been an industrious and respected citizen, and has shown by his own life what may be accomplished by energy and industry. His whole family are valued members of the Roman Catholic Church.

J. B. PENN, a most respected retired hardware merchant of Platteville, Grant county, is a native of Henry county, Va., born in 1817, and was reared to manhood and educated in the common schools in Kentucky, whither his parents, Abram and Sarah Penn, had removed in an early day, settling in Christian county.

In 1839 J. B. Penn came to Grant county, Wis., followed lead mining for some years, as well as other pursuits, and in 1850 went overland to California, where he worked in the gold fields two years. In 1852 Mr. Penn returned to Wisconsin and married Miss Samantha Collins, at that time a resident of Jamestown, Grant county, and a daughter of Aquilla and Mercy (Smith) Collins, of Boston, Mass., whence they removed to Genesee county, N. Y., where Mr. Collins followed farming until a short time before coming to Wisconsin, and here he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Penn is the youngest and only survivor of a family of eight children, and was educated in the State of New York. Mr. Penn, after marriage, lived in Platteville a short time, and then purchased a farm a mile from town, on which he and family resided fourteen years, and which he then sold and bought a fine home in Platteville, and at the same time embarked in the hardware trade, which he conducted with unvarying success eight years, when he retired on a competency.

To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Penn have been born two children, namely: (1) Emma G., born and reared in Platteville, was here married to Thomas Bass, and has three children, viz.: Horace H., now principal of the high school at Yankton, S. Dak.; Helen M., a teacher in the high school at Cassville, Wis.; and Georgie P., a student in the State Normal School of Platteville. (2) James B., also born in Platteville, was educated in the high school, and at present lives in Sherman county, Kans., where he is engaged as dealer in live stock, and also as butcher; he married a lady of Goodland, Kans., but has no children.

In religion Mrs. Penn is a Congregationalist, while Mr. Penn is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to the support of which he is a liberal contributor. He has been identified with the prosperity and growth of Platteville from its infancy, has served one term as its mayor, has filled various other local offices, has lived to see it grow from a mere village to a city of fair proportions, and has been largely instrumental in promoting this growth. He is still one of its leading citizens, and stands high in the esteem of those who have known him so many years.

CHRISTIAN A. THOMPSON was born in Whitewater, Wis., June 29, 1860, son of Thomas and Mary (Mason) Thompson, both natives of Norway. They had a family of four daughters and two sons, all but one now living: Hans, of Forest City, Iowa; Josephine, wife of Fred Johnson, of Beloit; Carrie, Mrs. Peter Meyers, of Janesville; Christian A.; and Anna, Mrs. Huntley, of Huron, S. Dak. Thomas Thompson was a farmer. He came to America with his parents in 1839, at the age of three years, and they found a home in the township of Whitewater, Walworth Co., Wis., where he grew to manhood, married and engaged in farming. He died in 1878, at the comparatively early age of forty-two. His father, Hans Thompson, was a farmer, and died in Walworth county when about fifty-five years old, leaving a small family. Christian Mason, the maternal grandfather of the gentleman whose name introduces this article, was a farmer, and died in Walworth county at the age of sixty-five. He had a family of six children.

Christian A. Thompson grew to manhood under his father's roof, and remained on the family homestead until eighteen years of age. He had a very good education, finishing at the Whitewater Normal. He learned the trade of molder, which he followed for twelve years. Having attractive business qualities, he was offered a position as clerk in the grocery at Janesville, Rock county, which he afterward owned, and held same for a year and a half, when he went into business for himself as a grocer, on River street. He was in business at that location for three years, when, in October, 1898, he moved to West Milwaukee street, carrying a large and well-selected stock of goods. Mr. Thompson is a stockholder in the Fuller & Johnson Manufacturing Co., of Madison, Wisconsin.

On June 7, 1887, Mr. Thompson married Miss Bertha Vandewater, a daughter of Joseph and Elalia (Ellis) Vandewater. They have no children. Their home is at No. 159 Madison street, Janesville. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are members of the Congregational Church, in which he serves as junior deacon. He is a Mason of high standing, belonging to Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., and Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.; is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a Republican, and a good citizen, highly respected by all who know him.

CHARLES RITER, a retired farmer, now making his home in Belmont, Lafayette county, belongs to that mighty generation that won the county from the wilderness, and, with no friend except his strong arm and honest heart, has wrought out an ample competence from hard conditions that attended his early manhood in this country. It requires courage of a high order to leave one's native country and cross the ocean to find a home among strange people, with a different tongue and alien ways, to take the hard work, and do the heavy tasks, never to lose heart or be discouraged, but to struggle on, even when sure that the day will dawn soon, and the coming of the morn will be all the brighter for the present darkness. Yet so this man wrought that now in his old age he is not a stranger in poverty and distress, but an honored and respected resident of a town and county he has helped to make, with means at his command, and friends to rejoice at his prosperity.

Mr. Riter was born near the river Rhine, in Germany, June 24, 1828, son of Joseph and Maria Riter, who were born and reared in Germany. His grandfather, Joseph Riter, was born in Germany, and died there. He married Maria Istricken. Our subject's father died in Germany in 1848, and the mother came to America, locating in Buffalo, N. Y., where she lived some three years, thence moving to Erie, Penn., where she died in 1891. She was the mother of five children, of whom Christine died in Germany, and the others came to this country and settled in different States. Martin, the eldest son, lives in Minnesota; Marie married and settled in Minnesota; and Andrew, for many years a captain on a Mississippi river steamer, died at Dubuque, Iowa.

Charles Riter came from his native land to the United States in 1850, and spent a year working in Albany, N. Y. In 1852 he traveled on toward the West, and found a home in Grant county, Wis., where for a number of years he was employed in farm work. In 1855 Mr. Riter and Miss Mercy Farr were united in marriage. The bride was born in Cornwall, England, and has proved in every way a helpful companion to her honorable and hard-working husband. After their marriage the young couple first settled at what was called the "blockhouse," in Grant county, and in 1865 they bought a farm in Kendall township, Lafayette county. This farm was the family home until 1892, when our subject purchased a home in Belmont, and, moving into town, retired from active farm labors. Mr. Riter was a hustling and successful farmer. The small estate with which he began in 1865 had expanded into a magnificent farm of 460 acres in less than thirty years thereafter. He wrought valuable and extensive improvements upon his place, put up commodious and suitable buildings, and made one of the model farms of the southwestern part of the State.

In 1873 Mrs. Mercy Riter passed away, the mother of ten children, two of whom Eliza and Benjamin, died in childhood. The names of the others are also briefly given: (1) Charles Riter was born in Grant county, married Miss Mary Moody, and lives on a farm in Lafayette county; they have five children, Sarah, Ella, Lester, Albert and Charles. (2) Etta, born in Grant county, is now the wife of Charles Daugherty, of Chicago, and has three children, Edith, Maud and Clare. (3) Susan M., born in Grant county, is Mrs. John E. Simmons, of Belmont, and is the mother of two children, Charles and Orval. (4) George, born in Lafayette county, married Miss Anna Mankey, and is a prosperous farmer of Plymouth county, Iowa; they have four children, Elsie, Harold, Ruth and Laura. (5) Joseph, born in Lafayette county, married Edith Simmons, and lives in Belmont. (6) Frank, born in Lafayette county, married Miss Rose Metcalf, and lives in Lafayette county on his father's old farm; they have one child, Harley.

(7) John, born in Lafayette county, married Miss Mamie Garvey, and lives on part of his father's old homestead farm; they have one son, Leroy. (8) Laura, the youngest child of the family, was born on the Lafayette county farm and educated, as were the other children, in the public schools; she has remained with her father since the death of her mother. Mr. Riter entered into matrimonial engagements a second time, Mrs. Mary A. Stout, the widow of Thomas Stout, being the other contracting party. She is now deceased. Mr. Riter is a Republican, and has held the office of roadmaster in Kendall township some years. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, while his family are mostly associated with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Riter landed at New York a penniless lad, and has absolutely made his own way in the world. He is a man of sterling worth and genuine character. He has passed through many trials, and his faith in religion has been tested by that Grim Reaper who has cut down the earthly life of several of Mr. Riter's loved ones, but he holds to the deep truths of the immortal life, and feels with every passing year the nearness of the better world.

GEORGE R. HODGE. This worthy and esteemed citizen of Wyalusing township, Grant county, was one of that vast army of young men who, during their country's peril in the early '60s, responded to the call of duty and risked their lives in defense of the Union. He is a native of the Empire State, his birth occurring in the town of Clymer, Chautauqua county, November 21, 1840, and is the eldest in a family of nine children, whose parents were John Ripley and Phebe (Cassler) Hodge, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. His brother, William A. Hodge, served with him in the same company during the war.

On Aug. 31, 1864, George R. Hodge was enrolled as a member of Company G, 15th New York Engineers, and received an honorable discharge from the service on June 13, 1865, at Fort Barry, Va. He was rejected as a candidate for military duty earlier in the war on account of a severe injury to a toe joint, but later, as has been seen, succeeded in entering the service. His regiment was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, doing duty chiefly at City Point and Petersburg, Va. When Sherman marched to the sea they were ordered South to meet his command, but before reaching that general were recalled, going to Richmond, and thence to Washington. They were finally stationed at Arlington Heights, where they remained until the war ended. The service of this branch of the army was of such a nature that it was called frequently from place to place, as their services were required.

After the war Mr. Hodge came West, and has since made his home in Grant county, Wis. On Dec. 29, 1875, he was united in marriage with Miss Alice Gulick, who was born at Patch Grove May 29, 1850, being the first child born in that village. Her father, Joachim Gulick, was a native of Montgomery county, N. Y., and when a lad moved to Chautauqua county, that State. Receiving a good education, he engaged in the occupation of teaching for some years, and in the capacity of teacher went South when a young man. While there he met and married Miss Caroline Perry, the ceremony being performed at Christianburg, Henry Co., Ky. In the fall of 1849 they came to Wisconsin, and took up their abode in Grant county, Mr. Gulick becoming one of the pioneer teachers of this region. He followed that profession during the winter season, while through the summer months he engaged in farming. He finally located in Wyalusing township, where he purchased his first farm, previous to this time having rented land. In 1854 the present township of Wyalusing was set aside from Patch Grove, and the same year Mr. Gulick was chosen chairman of the board of supervisors. He was one of the most prominent and influential men of his community, and in his death, which occurred Sept. 28, 1872, the township realized that it had lost a valued citizen. Mrs. Hodge is the eldest of his ten children, all of whom attained mature years and married, while the wife and mother and eight of the children are still living, in 1900. The two deceased were James, who died at the age of forty-four years; and William, at the age of thirty-three. The mother still lives on the old homestead, where she has resided since 1853, and is one of the few remaining pioneers of that part of Grant county.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodge have no children of their own, but have reared two sons of her sister, Mrs. Marian Willard. Like her esteemed father, Mrs. Hodge was a successful teacher before her marriage, and her work as an educator covered a period of ten years. She is a lady of culture and refinement, and of much ability, and presides with gracious dignity over her pleasant home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hodge are worthy members of the Methodist Church, and wherever known are held in high regard.

RICE D. GORHAM, a prominent and representative citizen of Monroe, has been a life-long resident of Green county, and possesses the public confidence to a marked degree. He was until recently in the grocery business, and commanded a flattering patronage.

Mr. Gorham was born in Green county, Wis., April 11, 1854, and is a son of William C. and Elvira M. (Chaffee) Gorham, both natives of Ohio. They were the parents of two sons, Rice D. and Ernest W. The father has always been a farmer, and established himself in Wisconsin in 1844, locating in the town of York, and taking up a quarter-section of government land. He bought seventy-five acres later on, and still later 140 more, making a magnificent rural estate of 375 acres, which was his home for twenty years. In 1894 he rented his land and moved into Monroe, where he still resides. His wife died two years later, at the age of sixty-two. She was a woman of fine spirit, and a devout member of the Free Will Baptist Church. William C. Gorham served in the Union army for nine months during the Civil war as a member of Company H, 46th Wis. V. I., doing his principal military duty in Tennessee. In the spring of 1867 he sold his farming property in the town of York, and bought 240 acres in the town of Sylvester. He has increased this by subsequent purchases, so that at one time he was the owner of 520 acres. He now owns 300 acres in Sylvester, and also several houses and lots in Monroe. His father, Elisha Gorham, was a native of Ohio, and was born of English parents. He was in the war of 1812, and was a life-long farmer; he came to Wisconsin in 1844, settled in the town of York, and lived to be over ninety years of age. He was twice married, and became the father of two sons by his last wife, William C. and Henry C. Orville Chaffee, the father of Elvira noted above, was a native of Vermont, and a settler in Ohio at an early day, finding a home in Geauga county, where he followed farming. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, reared a large family, and lived to be eighty-six years of age.

Rice D. Gorham has always made Green county his home. He grew to manhood under the parental roof, and received his education from the local schools and the Whitewater Normal. When he attained his majority his father presented him with an eighty-acre farm, and the young man succeeding as a farmer, was presently able to purchase another eighty, and was a farmer for nine years, having his home in the town of Monroe about two and a half miles from the city. In 1884 Mr. Gorham rented his place, and, moving to the city, engaged in the hardware business, which was his main occupation for thirteen years, with the exception of one year spent on the road as a traveling salesman for farm machinery. Mr. Gorham was a member of the incorporated hardware company known as the Kundert Hardware Co. for eight years, and made his beginning in that line as a clerk on a salary. He was a successful salesman and a good business man, and has acquired a very comfortable competence. In May, 1899, he bought a stock of groceries, queensware, and everything usually found in a first-class establishment of that kind, and as long as he was thus engaged met with the success his efforts merited.

Rice D. Gorham and Miss Emma C. Bragg were united in marriage Dec. 31, 1874. Mrs. Gorham is a daughter of Thomas J. and Emily (Nobles) Bragg, and is the mother of two children, Addie E. and Nellie E. Addie E. died April 6, 1891, and Nellie E. is now a bright and winsome child. Mr. and Mrs. Gorham are members of the Universalist Church. He belongs to several fraternal orders, and is a faithful worker in the I. O. O. F., the Knights of the Globe, and the Knights of Pythias. In this last order he has taken the uniform degree, and is assistant inspector general of the state of Wisconsin. Mr. Gorham is a Republican, and has held a number of offices—chairman of the Monroe town board for three terms and alderman from the first ward in Monroe five years. He is also a veteran member of the National Guard of Wisconsin, has filled all the offices of his home company, served thirteen years and resigned with the rank of captain. He has his home at 309 East Russell street, where he built a fine residence in the winter of 1899-1900.

Thomas J. Bragg, Mrs. Rice Gorham's father, was a native of Virginia, where he was left an orphan when only four years old. He removed from Virginia to southern Illinois when quite young, and at the age of twenty came to Wisconsin, and made his home in the town of Monroe, four and a half miles north of the city. He married in southern Illinois, but reared his family in this county. He had two daughters and three sons, and all but one of his children are now living: William P.; Thomas J.; Emma C., wife of R. D. Gorham; Charles D. Mr. Bragg continued farming until 1878, when he divided his land among his children, and moved into Monroe, where he is still living.

FRANK WITZIG is one of the most prominent farmers of Mount Ida township, Grant county, and a veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Germany, April 15, 1831, being the son of Martin and Anna (Patchkowsky) Witzig, both natives of Germany, who came to this country in 1854. They reached Chicago, thence went to Milwaukee, Wis., where they hired a team to go to Waterstown. At the latter place Mr. Witzig bought a yoke of oxen, and proceeded to Mineral Point and Clifton. Remaining in Clifton township for a short time, he then removed to Liberty, where he entered 160 acres of land, which he cultivated most successfully. The good couple made this their home until Mr. Witzig's death, which occurred July 31, 1862. His remains rest in the cemetery at Highland. His wife survived him until May 27, 1900, when she passed away at Fennimore in her ninety-second year. Of the children born to Martin and Anna Witzig we have record of Adam; Josephine, now residing in Fennimore township; Peter, who died in Fennimore in 1871; John, who enlisted in an Illinois regiment in 1862, and died in a hospital the same year; Frank; Joseph, of Clifton township; Johanna, Mrs. Bonsall, died in Iowa county in 1888; Rosa, who became Mrs. John Krefal, and resided in Chicago for some time, where she died; and Catherine, who married Abraham Minsky, of Chicago.

Frank Witzig attended the common schools at Liberty, is a man of natural ability, and he has always made the most of his opportunities. He enlisted in the 41st Wis. V. I., for one hundred days service, being stationed at Memphis, Tenn., on garrison duty, and was honorably discharged in the fall of 1865. Mr. Witzig re-enlisted in Clifton township, and cherishes highly a record of honorable mention signed by President Lincoln, which he received during his last enlistment. In 1884 he came to Mount Ida township, and purchased the farm upon which he now resides.

In the year 1865, in Iowa county, Wis., Frank Witzig married Catherine Bonsall, daughter of Andrew and Anna Bonsall, both natives of Germany, who came to America in 1858, locating in Highland township, where the former opened up a farm, on which he resided until his death. To Frank and Catherine (Bonsall) Witzig have been born five children: Frank; Elizabeth, now Mrs. Steinforth, of Fennimore township; Newman; Mary; George. The family are among the early prominent pioneer-citizens of the county, and Frank Witzig has always been identified with its interests. They enjoy the respect of their neighbors, and their friends are numbered by legions.

WILLIAM MORGAN (deceased) was long a popular and successful farmer in the town of Hazel Green, Grant county, where he was widely known and universally respected for his sterling worth and manly qualities. Mr. Morgan was born in Monmouthshire, England, a son of Thomas Morgan, a native of England, who died there when William was a small boy. Mr. Morgan came to this country in 1850, and made his way to southwestern Wisconsin, where he worked for several years among the farmers. In 1860 he married Miss Margaret J. Kitto, of Hazel Green, who was born in England in 1828, a daughter of William and Mary Kitto, the former of whom died in his native land in 1832. The widowed mother came to this country, and settled at Hazel Green, Wis., soon after her husband's death, and there Mrs. Morgan was reared and educated. Mrs. Kitto brought six children with her to the New World: Elizabeth, born in England, married Richard Williams, and is now dead; William is a resident of Benton, Lafayette Co., Wis.; Jane married Joseph Pascoe, of Illinois, and is now dead; John was one of the early California and Australia gold miners, and died unmarried in Hazel Green; Henry, deceased, married Miss Martha Andrews, and settled in Hazel Green, where he died, leaving two sons, William and Robert; Margaret J., wife of William Morgan, had a district school education.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Morgan settled on a farm in Benton, Lafayette county, where they lived twelve years. At the end of that time they sold out, and Mr. Morgan bought a farm of seventy acres one mile south of Hazel Green, where they lived until 1886. That year Mr. Morgan sold out, and bought a farm of 227 acres two miles west of Hazel Green, where they lived until the death of Mr. Morgan, in December, 1897. Seven of their children lived to grow up: (1) Mary H., born in 1860, is the deceased wife of J. W. Pascoe, of Jo Daviess county, Ill., and left four children, who are being reared in the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Morgan. (2) Merib, born in 1862, is now the wife of William H. Decker, who is a prominent attorney at Allen, Neb., and has three children, Berryl M., Lyman and R. (3) William B., born in 1864, married Miss Nettie Mabe, and lives on the old homestead in Hazel Green. They have two children, Hannah and Elma L. (4) Thomas, born in 1866, married Miss Clara Stock, of Galena, and is now living in Colorado, where they have three children: Elmer, Edith and Edna. (5) Gustavus C., born in 1871, had a high-school education in Hazel Green, and is living unmarried at home. (6) Henry E., born in 1875, was a graduate of the high school at Hazel Green in 1897, and is living unmarried at home. (7) Roland L., born in 1877, is living unmarried at home.

Mr. Morgan was identified with the Republican party. He began his career in Wisconsin with small means, and by his energy and indomitable will succeeded in amassing a considerable fortune, which provided nicely for his family after his demise. A record of his life in its detail would be that of character and integrity. The family are identified with the Methodist Church.

ROY JABERG, the popular and hustling proprietor and manager of the Monroe Steam Laundry, at Monroe, Green county, was born in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, September 6, 1872, a son of Frederick and Eliza (Moser) Jaberg, the former born in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, and the latter in Canton Glarus, Switzerland. They were the parents of two children, Roy and his older sister, Cora, who is the wife of W. R. Sharp, of New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Frederick Jaberg was a farmer up to the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted as a private in the Union army, and bore himself as became a valiant soldier fighting for his country. After the war he returned home and ran a fire engine until his death in August, 1885, at the age of forty-six years. In politics he was a Republican, and in religious belief, a Methodist. He and another man built a church at Mineral City, Ohio, and he, as is also his wife, who is still surviving and has her home in New Philadelphia, was active in church work.

Jacob Jaberg, the father of Frederick and the grandfather of Roy, was a native of Switzerland. Coming to America when he was quite young, he settled in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, when it was infested with the Indians, and engaged in the vocation of farming, becoming locally prominent. He was the father of thirteen children, and died in Ohio at an advanced age. Jacob Moser, the father of Eliza, whose name appears above, was also a native of Switzerland, and came to America at an early day, locating in Tuscarawas county. He was a tailor by trade, and was well established in business at New Philadelphia, where he died at a great age, the father of eight children.

Roy Jaberg was reared in New Philadelphia, and when he was sixteen years old, left the public school to enter a machine shop for the purpose of learning the trade. This he did, and for a number of years was a machinist of good standing, working in several shops. In July, 1899, Mr. Jaberg came to Monroe, and bought the steam laundry, which he has operated to the present time with marked success.

Mr. Jaberg was married May 10, 1894, to Miss Huldah Hoehn, a daughter of Henry and Eliza (Katerly) Hoehn. To this union have come a son and a daughter, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. Jaberg is a Methodist, while his excellent wife was reared in the Lutheran faith. He belongs to the order of the Knights of Pythias, and is a Republican.

Henry Hoehn, mentioned above, was a native-born Swiss, and his wife, Eliza (Katerly) Hoehn, was born in Ohio. They had a family of four children: Huldah, who is now Mrs. Jaberg; Albert, a commercial traveler; Ida, who is Mrs. Edward Bengston, of Freeport, Ill.; and Sophie, who married J. Karlen, of Monroe. Henry Hoehn came to Wisconsin in 1845 with the company who settled New Glarus. During the Civil war he enlisted in the Union army, and became captain of his company. Serving throughout the war, he returned to Wisconsin at its conclusion, and started a clothing store at Monroe, and built the block where Discher & Schneider are now found. For the past few years he has led a retired life. With his wife he belongs to the German Lutheran Church.

Mr. Jaberg is full of enthusiasm and energy, and has already built up a fine trade, which has come partly as the result of his skill as a workman, but also from the desire to please his patrons.

JAMES W. REDMAN represents an early Wisconsin family, and now resides in the township of Beetown, Grant county. On Jan. 26, 1837, he was born in Dubuque, Iowa, his parents being James and Margaret Redman, pioneers of that city, the former of whom died when our subject was a child, but the mother still survives, and resides in Cassville. After the death of her first husband Mrs. Redman married Hiram Currant (now deceased), a pioneer of the Northwest and a soldier in the Black Hawk war. Two children were born to the parents of our subject, one sister, Matilda, passing away in early life. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Currant, four of whom are living.

James W. Redman removed with his mother's family to Potosi, Grant county, and has lived in this locality ever since, excepting the years spent in defense of his country. Entering Co. A, 43d Wis. V. I., at Prairie du Chien, he went to Milwaukee, where the regiment was organized. Going to the front, his command served principally in Tennessee and Georgia, where they did good service in scouting, this being particularly hard on a soldier. For a time our subject was confined to a hospital, at Clarksville, Tenn., but recovered and rejoined his company, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war.

In 1854 Mr. Redman wedded Miss Susan Atkinson, a daughter of William Atkinson, of Grant county, also a pioneer. Five sons and two daughters have been born of this union: Edith, William, Ely, Perry, Henry, Mary and Lester. Hard service broke down Mr. Redman's health, and he has never recovered from the privations and exposure of his army life. In his township he is a useful and respected citizen, and takes a commendable interest in educational matters, being now the efficient clerk of school district No. 31, Beetown township.

HARRY AMES, the proprietor of the "St. Charles Hotel" at Belmont, is one of the most popular and successful hotel men of Lafayette county. He keeps a neat and tidy establishment, and caters to the wants of his patrons in a hearty and taking manner.

Mr. Ames was born in Albion, N. Y., in October, 1847, a son of George W. and Sarah (Howell) Ames, who were born in England, and brought to this country when young. George Ames learned the painter's trade in New York, and after some years of married life in that State, moved to Detroit, Mich., where his wife died in 1857, leaving him three children, who are grown up and residing in different parts of the United States. After the loss of his wife he returned to Albion, New York, and is now engaged in the grocery business in that city. Of his children, his oldest son, William, was for some years in the service of the Detroit & Bay City railroad, and is now engaged in the real estate business in Bay City, Mich.; he married Miss Ida Barns, of Lapeer, Mich., and is the father of four children. Lizzie Ames was born in New York in 1845, a student of the high school at Erie, Penn., and married Bernard Good, who is the superintendent of the dead letter department of the postal service at Washington, D. C.; they have five children, who were born at Detroit, Michigan.

Harry Ames received his education in the schools of Erie, Penn., and began to take care of himself very early in life, earning his way as a newsboy. For two years he was a driver for Charles Read on one of his canal boats, navigating the Erie canal. In 1871 he secured a position on the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, running from Erie to Kane, Penn., being on that division eight years.

Mr. Ames and Miss Mary Powers were married in 1885, in Janesville, Wis. She is the estimable daughter of Anthony and Ellen Powers who were born in Ireland, and are still living in Janesville. After his marriage Mr. Ames located in Rockford, Ill., where he was a contractor for seven years. In 1892 he opened a restaurant at Belvidere, Ill., and made his home in that city for two years. In 1894 he moved to Beloit, Wis., remaining two years, and then passed a similar period in Monroe. In September, 1898, he came to Belmont, and assumed the management of "St. Charles Hotel," which he has successfully conducted to the present time. He has a livery barn in connection with his hotel, and that is an important part of his business.

To Mr. and Mrs. Ames were born three children: Pearl, born in Rockford, Ill., in August, 1889, is now a student in the Belmont schools, and is well advanced in music for a child of her age; Hazel was born in Rockford in 1891; and Harry W. was born in Beloit, in 1893. Mr. Ames is a Republican, and is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. He fired the first engine that ran from St. Paul to Aberdeen, over the H. & D. railroad. He was brought up in the Baptist church. Mr. Ames is one of Belmont's genial, whole-souled landlords, and he has made many friends among the people of this region by his manly and courteous ways.

LIEUT. W. H. OETTIKER, a valiant ex-Union volunteer and a thriving hardware merchant of Platteville, Grant county, was born near Pittsburg, Allegheny county, Penn., in August, 1841, and is the oldest of the four children that constituted the family of Jacob and Mary (Brighenstein) Oettiker, natives of Switzerland, who came to America when young, and for some years lived in Allegheny county, Penn., where the former engaged in merchant tailoring.

In 1848 the Oettiker family came to Wisconsin by boat from Pittsburg, Penn., down the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., thence up the Mississippi river to Galena, Ill., and thence by wagon to Lafayette county, Wis., where Jacob Oettiker purchased 160 acres of Government land, on which he reared his four children to farming and on which he resided until advancing years called for a surcease from labor, when, in 1894, he purchased a home in Platteville, where he is now living in retirement, at the extreme age of ninety-nine years, his wife being seventy-nine. Of the children, John and Jacob own good farms, and live in Lafayette county; Dr. James Oettiker practices in Platteville; and W. H. will now be further spoken of.

W. H. Oettiker received his education in Wisconsin, at the common schools, and until twenty years old lived on the home farm. In 1861 he enlisted, at the call to arms, in Company E, 11th Wis. V. I., and was assigned to the Western Army. He saw service at Vicksburg under General Grant, at Peach River, Jackson, and dozens of other desperate and hard-fought battles, and in 1864 was commissioned second lieutenant, and served as such until the close of the Rebellion; he then re-enlisted, and for one year served on the frontier in subduing refractory Indians.

After his final discharge Lieut. Oettiker returned to Lafayette county, and in 1867 married Miss Eva Libert, an accomplished young lady of Grant county, and at once settled down to farming on the Lieutenant's homestead in Lafayette county, where they lived about twelve years. In 1879 the Lieutenant sold his farm and removed to Platteville, where he embarked in well-drilling and pump-making, but later sold out his business and bought a farm near the city, resumed agriculture, and re-engaged in well-drilling and pump-making until 1899, when he again sold out. He then entered upon his present prosperous trade in hardware, having the largest store and carrying the best-assorted stock of heavy hardware in the city, and also handling all kinds of water pump supplies. The four children born to Mr. and Mrs. Oettiker are Mary, William, Evalina and Katie, all born in Lafayette county and now living in Platteville, and all still single, with the exception of Evalina, who is the wife of Charles Smith; she has no children. In religion the family have been reared in the Presbyterian faith, but are not members of any congregation. In politics the Lieutenant is an active Republican, and fraternally is a member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Platteville. The family are all held in high esteem, and associate with the best people of Platteville.

HENRY KETTLER, retired farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Platteville, Grant county, was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1828, a son of Henry and Louisa (Krause) Kettler. The parents, natives of the same place, came to the New World in 1857, and made their home with their son in Smelser township, Grant Co., Wis. The father died in 1877, the mother ten years later. In the family of this worthy couple were four sons, of whom Henry is the eldest; Conrad came to Grant county in 1857, and died in November, 1899; August is also a resident of Platteville;

Frederick was single on coming to America, was married in Grant county, and now resides in Nebraska.

Henry Kettler was reared and educated in his native land, and there continued to make his home until 1856, when he took passage at Bremen on a sailing-vessel, landing after a voyage of fifty-two days in New York, whence he came direct to Grant county, Wis. He purchased a farm in Smelser township, and to its improvement and cultivation devoted his energies for many years. Meeting with excellent success in his farming operations, he was at length able to lay aside all business cares and live on the accumulation of former years, moving in 1892 to Platteville, where he has since lived a retired life.

In 1862 Mr. Kettler was married in Smelser township to Miss Mary Knipping, also a native of Hanover, Germany, and to them have been born three children, namely: Henry, who now lives on the home farm; John, who is married and resides on the same place; and Louisa, Mrs. Wise, who lives on a farm in Belmont township, Lafayette county, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Kettler are active members of the Lutheran Church, in which he has held office for the past fifteen years, and in politics he is identified with the Democratic party. He is one of the prominent and well-known men of Grant county, and is highly respected and esteemed by all with whom he has come in contact.

TILDEN S. ROOT, a prominent farmer of Wyalusing township, Grant county, was a faithful soldier of the war of the Rebellion, being a member of Company C, 48th Wis. V. I. He was enrolled Feb. 11, 1865, and discharged March 24, 1866. He is one of three brothers who fought in defense of the old flag, all of whom were members of the same company, entered the service at the same time, and returned safe to home and friends. Tilden S. was with his regiment in active duty during the whole time of his service. The 48th did guard duty much of the time. On April 14, 1865, Company C arrived in Lawrence, Kan., and on Sept. 5, the same year, left that point for Colorado. Returning to Leavenworth, Kan., the following March, the regiment was mustered out of the United States service at that place, and soon afterward was discharged at Madison, Wisconsin.

The Root family is of English origin, but Vermont claims several generations prior to the emigration of Jared E. and Siena L. (Lamb) Root, the parents of Tilden S., who left Windham county, that State, in 1837, and removed to Twinsburg, Summit county, Ohio, where Tilden S. was born in 1843. In the family were nine children, four of whom were born in the Green Mountain State, the others in Ohio. The first to come to Grant county, Wis., were the oldest son, Jerome Root, and his sister Lydia, the oldest of the family, who came here in the early fifties; John F. came next, in 1857; and by 1860 all of the family had arrived, including the parents, who passed the remainder of their lives in Wyalusing township, and who were widely known and highly esteemed people. Six of the children are living at the present writing, in 1900, including those who took part in the Civil war, namely; John F. and Tilden S., both residents of Wyalusing township; and Addison L., of South Dakota.

After the war Tilden S. Root returned to Grant county and resumed farming, which he has made his life work. On Jan. 11, 1872, he was united in marriage with Miss Delilah Boorman, a most estimable lady, who was born in Grant county, in 1854, her father, John Boorman being one of the pioneers and respected citizens of Wyalusing township. By this union were born four children, as follows: Mrs. Ella Beer, Mrs. Estella Heaton, Edward and Carson. Mr. Root has to his credit an honorable war record, and as a citizen is held in high regard by all who know him. He is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and socially is quite popular in the community where he has so long made his home.

GEORGE W. HALE (deceased). Among those who have largely contributed toward the upbuilding and development of this portion of the great Northwest, there are many who no longer dwell among us, having passed to their just reward, leaving behind them, however, a memory richly fraught with good deeds, and hallowed by tender associations. Of such, is no one more truly a shining example than George W. Hale, who at one time was one of the largest farmers of Grant county.

Mr. Hale was born in New York, in 1820, and twenty years later came West, purchased forty acres of land in Smelser, where he erected a log cabin. The first site of the old homestead was near the present one, and it was made bright and pleasant by his young wife, who, in her maidenhood, had been Sarah Blanchard, of Fairplay, Wis. Their marriage occurred in 1840. Before the new home was built, Mrs. Hale died, leaving her husband three sons, Marshall, who married Mary Rouse, and now has three children, Rosy, William, and Susan; Alonzo; Lafayette died in childhood. Some years later, Mr. Hale married Mrs. Hickman, who was born in 1823, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Eaton, and brought to Wisconsin about 1832, prior to the Black Hawk war. Mr. Eaton located for a short time in Illinois, then removed to Smelser, purchased a farm, and remained there until his family had attained maturity, when he and his wife returned to Illinois. George W. Hale entered into rest in March, 1864.

ALONZO HALE, second son of George W. Hale, and still a resident of the old homestead, was born in 1844, in Smelser. Growing rapidly to manhood, working hard on the farm during the summers, and pursuing his studies in the winters, he soon assimilated the knowledge taught in the country schools, and probably would have pursued his education in higher institutions of learning, had not the Civil war just then engrossed the attention of all and fired the patriotism that saved our nation's honor. He enlisted in Co. I, 25th Wis. V. I., being mustered into the service at La Crosse, Wis., on Sept. 14, 1862, and serving through the remainder of the war. The regiment served on the frontier in Minnesota, and at Fort Snelling, and was ordered to Indian Territory. After much skirmishing, they were transferred to Columbus, Kentucky, and joined Sherman's army, from whence they participated in Johnston's raid, and other engagements, to Atlanta, thence to Raleigh, through the Carolinas, and finally witnessing Johnston's surrender. On the victorious army marched, through Virginia to Washington, where Alonzo Hale was one of the gallant soldiers to participate in the Grand Review. In June, 1865, he was honorably discharged at Madison, after which he returned to his old home to be met with the sorrowful news, that during the time he himself was fighting his country's enemies, the aged father had met with his honorable discharge upon the battle-field of life.

Politically, Mr. Hale is a staunch member of the Republican party; is a member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Platteville, and is very popular in this organization. Owing to his long service in the war, Alonzo Hale's health has never recovered its former good condition, but he does not regret the sacrifice he made, and is highly respected as one of Smelser's veteran citizens, and also as one of its progressive and successful farmers.

BERNARD STOCKEL, a well-known Grant county farmer, was born in Hanover, Germany, Dec. 21, 1843, a son of Henry and Christina (Kimpee) Stockel, both native Hanoverians.

Henry Stockel was married in his native land, and emigrated to the United States in 1852, coming with his wife and children to Council Hill, Ill., where Benjamin Stockel, a brother, had already established himself. They lived in Illinois a short time, and then moved to Sinsinawa Mound, in the town of Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis., where Mr. Stockel bought a tract of wild land, and by hard labor and persistent industry converted it into a desirable home. The first improvements in that region were made upon this farm of 160 acres, and here Mr. Stockel passed his entire life, dying in 1895, and leaving his aged wife, who is still a resident of the place. To day she is one of the very oldest pioneers of this part of the State. Six children were born to them, and they are still living: (1) Bernard is the eldest. (2) Mary, born in Germany, is the wife of Garrett Bussan, of Illinois. (3) John, born in Wisconsin, married Miss Loveland, of Illinois, and now resides on the old farm of his father. (4) Henry, born in Grant county, married Miss Christina Schonhof, who died, leaving four children all of whom live in Iowa. (5) Joseph, born in Illinois, is single, and lives on the old homestead. (6) Christina is the wife of George Speiker, and lives in Jo Daviess county, where she has a family.

Bernard Stockel was eight years old when his parents moved to this country, and had his education in the district schools of Illinois, and in Grant county, growing up on the home farm, which he managed until his marriage in 1867, to Elizabeth Huls, who was born in Jo Daviess county, Ill., in 1850, a daughter of B. H. Huls, an old-time resident of that county. After his marriage Mr. Stockel purchased the "Mathew Burk home," of 160 acres. A large stone house, good barns, and many substantial improvements render the farm very attractive and desirable. To their union were born five children: (1) Henry, born in 1871, had his education in common with all the other children of the family in the Hazel Green schools, and is now at home unmarried. (2) Annie, born in 1873, is a young lady at home; (3) Joseph, born in 1875; (4) Julia, born in 1880, is a young lady at home; and (5) Frank, born in 1885, is still a student at school.

Mr. Stockel and his family are all devout members of the Roman Catholic Church. In politics he has always been a Democrat, and has served as a member of the town board for three years. Like a host of his countrymen who have greatly prospered in the United States, Mr. Stockel began at the foot of the ladder, has already become prosperous, and is now one of the respected citizens of the town.

JOHN W. PETERS, one of the leading contractors and builders of Janesville, Rock county, is a good example of what can be accomplished by earnest, persistent effort, directed along the proper channels.

John W. Peters was born Jan. 18, 1854, at Whitewater, Wis., son of John and Lydia (Frost) Peters, natives of Devonshire, England. The paternal grandfather of our subject was William Peters, a native of England, a contractor and builder, who died in his native land in middle life. He had a family of five children, all now deceased. The grandfather on the mother's side, John Frost, was also a native of England, came to America, and located at Whitewater. Later he removed to Janesville, dying there at the age of eighty years. While in Whitewater he pursued the occupation of farming, but after coming to Janesville retired from active labor. A large family was born to himself and wife.

John Peters, the father of John W. Peters, immigrated to America about 1852, locating in Whitewater, Wis., and came to Janesville in 1854, dying in that city in March, 1876, at the age of fifty-two. His wife, who still survives him, resides at Janesville. By occupation Mr. Peters was a contractor, and he was very successful at his calling. In religious opinion he was an Episcopalian, while Mrs. Peters is a member of the Methodist Church. Four children were born to them, three daughters and one son: Eliza, Mrs. Perkins, of Elgin, Ill.; John W.; Miss Mina Peters, of Elgin, and Tillie, wife of Henry Davis, of Pullman, Illinois.

John W. Peters, our subject, was reared in Janesville, attending the excellent schools of that city, and when fifteen began learning the trade of mason and builder, which he has successfully followed ever since. For fifteen years Mr. Peters was with the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, constructing bridges, buildings, etc., after which he engaged in business as a contractor and builder in Janesville. However, his efforts are not confined to that city alone, as he has contracts throughout the State. Among the substantial structures in Janesville which bear evidence of his skill are the county buildings, including the Rock county jail, the latter constructed in 1899; in 1893 Mr. Peters constructed the high school at Clinton, Rock county, a modern edifice. In addition to this contract, the same year Mr. Peters and his partner, O. F. Nowlan, had others, amounting to some $80,000. The work of this firm is not confined to public structures, as they have erected many of the finest buildings in Janesville, including Mr. Peters' own home, No. 101 Fourth avenue, corner of Hickory street. Possessing a thorough insight into their work, commanding unlimited facilities for the prompt and efficient carrying out of their contracts, Mr. Peters and his partner are well equipped to handle the enormous volume of business which annually is awarded them, and are destined to become one of the leading contracting firms of the State.

On Dec. 23, 1875, Mr. Peters married Miss Mary Kate Ward, daughter of D. C. and Mary Ward. One son and two daughters have been born to this union: John Dewitt, who died in March, 1890, Myrtle and Kathryn. Mrs. Peters and her two daughters are members of the Episcopal Church, in the work of which they take an important part. Socially Mr. Peters is a member of the Royal Arcanum; Western Star Lodge, No. 14, F. & A. M.; Janesville Chapter, No. 5, R. A. M.;

Janesville Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; Wisconsin Consistory, S. P. R. S., at Milwaukee; and Tripoli Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Milwaukee; and he and Mrs. Peters are also members of the Eastern Star. Politically Mr. Peters is a Democrat, and has represented the Second Ward in the city council.

WILLIAM HAWK, now living retired in Platteville, Grant county, was born in Cornwall, England, in September, 1840, and one of the six children born to George and Johanna (Rolins) Hawk, also natives of Cornwall, where they were married. On the voyage of George Hawk, wife and children to America, Mrs. Hawk was taken sick and died, her body being buried at sea. Mr. Hawk, with his children, finally reached Potosi, Wis., where he worked in the lead mines until his death, which occurred in 1869. The children all attained maturity in Potosi, where they were educated, the five besides William being born and named in the following order: George, who was a soldier in the 21st Wis. V. I. during the Civil war, is married and is a resident of Platteville, Wis.; Johanna, widow of William Gilbert, resides in Pittsburg, Kans., with her daughter, Elizabeth; Elizabeth, wife of Philip Knapp, resides in Oregon, and has several children; Alice, widow of William Chester, lives in Missouri, and has four children, and Mary, widow of John Forsythe, of Central Illinois, also has four children.

William Hawk enlisted in 1861 in the United States Volunteer service, was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland, under Gen. Thomas, and took part in a number of hotly-contested battles, including those of Murfreesboro, Chattanooga, Chickamauga, and all those in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama and through the campaign under Gen. Sherman, inclusive of his historical march through Georgia to the sea, and at the close of the war was honorably discharged with the rank of corporal.

While home on a furlough in May, 1864, Mr. Hawk married Miss Mary Grinrodd, daughter of Edmund and Elizabeth Grinrodd, formerly of New York State, but both now deceased. After the close of the war Mr. Hawk lived on a farm east of Platteville one year, and in 1867 retired with his wife and children to his handsome residence in Platteville, where he still resides in ease and comfort. The following is the record of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hawk: William A., who died a young man; Etta M., wife of John Broadback, a butcher in Vandalia, Ill., and the mother of three children—William, Girdon and Gladys; Fannie E., a graduate from the State Normal School at Platteville, and now a teacher at Warsaw, Mo., where she has been for the past five years; Edwin G., who married Miss Laura Pitts, and has one son, Kenneth, and now resides in Platteville; Johanna, wife of Thomas Julian, of Montfort, Wis.; John J., a resident of Vandalia, Ill.; and Alice S., who received a college education, and is in the millinery business in her native city of Platteville.

Religiously Mr. Hawk and family are Episcopalians, and politically Mr. Hawk is a Republican, under the auspices of which party he has held the office of town treasurer six years. He is an enthusiastic member of Sherman Post, G. A. R., and socially he and family are among the most respected residents of Platteville.

A. B. CHAPMAN. For over sixty years this gentleman has been a resident of Grant county, and has witnessed almost its entire development. He has seen its wild lands transformed into beautiful homes and farms, its hamlets grow into villages and flourishing towns, and all of the interests and evidences of an advanced civilization introduced. As a farmer he has met with success in business affairs, and is now living a retired life in Cassville.

Mr. Chapman was born in Sherrell Mountain, Dubuque Co., Iowa, in 1836, a son of Ammyson and Mary (Dunlard) Chapman. The father was born in Connecticut, the mother in Canada of French Huguenot extraction. At a very early day in the development of the State, Ammyson Chapman moved to Iowa, and took up a tract of government land, at one time owning 160 acres of land where the city of Dubuque now stands, but was driven off his claim by United States troops, after which he came to Grant county, Wis., in 1838, and opened up and improved a farm in Harrison township. He was a soldier of the Black Hawk war, and was prominently identified with the early development and upbuilding of this section of the State. He was born Sept. 1, 1800, and died in Cassville township, Grant county, in 1881, having long survived his wife, who passed away in 1865. Their children were Mrs. Mary Knox, who went to California in 1850; A. B.; Mrs. Lois Lang, a resident of Dakota; Peter, a veteran of the Civil war, and a resident of Grant county, Wis.; Collin, who was a member of a Wisconsin regiment in the same war, and is now a farmer of Waterloo township, Grant county; and Mrs. H. Schuelter, a resident of Cassville.

Being only two years old when brought by his parents to Grant county, A. B. Chapman was reared in the wilds of this State, and received a limited education, as schools were few and widely scattered in this locality during his boyhood. His early life was spent upon the home farm in Harrison township, and throughout his active business career he engaged in agricultural pursuits, becoming owner of a good farm of 120 acres in Waterloo township, which he still owns. He moved to Cassville Feb. 22, 1899, and is now living a retired life, enjoying a well-earned rest.

At Dubuque, Iowa, in 1864, Mr. Chapman married Miss Josephine Oshea, a native of St. Paul, Minn., and a daughter of Lewis Oshea, an early hunter and trapper of the Northwest, and his wife, a Sioux Indian. Her uncle, Link Comas, was chief of the Sioux tribe. Of the fourteen children born to Mr. and Mrs. Chapman, the following named are living: Birdsell, a resident of Waterloo township, Grant county; Arizona; Mrs. Alvaretta Cowder; Mrs. Jane Wilmot, of Cassville; Ernest, who took a course at Bailey College and is now on the home farm; Orlando; Josephine; and Jessie.

During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Chapman enlisted at Potosi, Grant county, in the 49th Wis. V. I., for one year, and as a part of the Army of the West was on detached duty, being stationed most of the time at Rolla, Mo., and he now holds an honorable discharge. As a Republican he takes quite an active interest in political affairs. As a prominent pioneer and worthy citizen of Grant county, he is certainly deserving of honorable mention in this volume.

WILLIAM HOFFMAN, a representative of one of the old families of Grant county, was born in 1844, in Louisville, Ky., son of Peter and Mary (Basler) Hoffman.

Peter Hoffman, his father, one of the respected pioneers of southwestern Wisconsin, was born in Germany in 1815, and sought a new home in the New World, in 1833, settling first in Pennsylvania, thence removed to Ohio, where he married Mary Basler. Three of their children survive: William, our subject; Henry; and Louisa, who is a resident of St. Paul, Minn. From Ohio the family removed to southern Illinois, locating near East St. Louis, and in 1847 located in Benton, Lafayette Co., Wis., where the father worked at his trade as a shoemaker. Through industry and thrift he was able within ten years to become the owner of a considerable tract in Grant county, and thither, in 1857, he removed with his family. A part of this land now forms the farm of William Hoffman.

William Hoffman has passed the greater part of his life in Wisconsin, and he now owns a fine farm of 208 acres. He enlisted in Company K (Capt. Baxter), of the 47th Wis. V. I., early in the war of the Rebellion, and marched and fought with his regiment until the struggle was ended. His health was seriously impaired, but he escaped wounds, and the memories of his years in the service are full of pleasant recollections. He is an esteemed member of Tom Cox Post, G. A. R., of Lancaster.

Mr. Hoffman married Mary Baker, who has become the mother of ten children, three sons and seven daughters. In politics Mr. Hoffman is a staunch Republican, and works faithfully for the interests of that party.

JOSEPH WATTERS, now a retired farmer of Hazel Green, Grant county, was born in Cornwall, England, only son of Joseph and Mary (Spargo) Watters, who were born, reared and passed their entire lives in England. The father was an old-time miner in Cornwall.

After the death of his parents Joseph Watters came to this country in August, 1848, and settling near Hazel Green, Wis., engaged in lead mining, following that work for some years. In 1851 he went to California by the ocean route across the Isthmus to San Francisco, and from there to the gold fields, where he remained some three years, then coming back to Hazel Green, where he had left his wife and family. When Mr. Watters had returned to his home he bought wild prairie land in the town of Hazel Green, and began life as a farmer. To this original tract he afterward added a quarter-section, and now owns a fine place of 240 acres. Here he erected a fine home, with good barns and comfortable outbuildings. Mr. Watters has followed stock raising quite extensively, his farm being well situated for that purpose.

In June, 1848, Mr. Watters married Miss Lizzie Williams, who was born in Cornwall, England, in March, 1830, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Williams, the former of whom died there, but the mother came to this country and died in Hazel Green. To this union have been born six children, one of whom died in childhood: (1) John, born in 1849, married Miss Sarah Bartle, of Hazel Green, and is a farmer in the town of Hazel Green; there are two sons in this family, Virgil and Lloyd. (2) Peter, born in 1858, married Miss Elizabeth Stephens, and resides on a farm in the town of Hazel Green, where two daughters have come to them, Hannah and Grace. (3) Edward, born in 1868, married Miss Katie Mills, and they lived with his father on the old homestead, where she died in 1896, leaving one son, Clifford. (4) Mary is single, and at home with her parents. (5) Grace, born in 1872, is at home with her parents.

Mr. Watters has been for many years an active worker in the Republican party. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Church, and he was one of the builders of the first church of his denomination in Hazel Green. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with the Blue Lodge at Hazel Green. Mr. Watters came to Grant county when a young man, without means. The country was a wilderness, with but few homes on the prairies, and these miles apart. There was courage in his heart and strength in his muscles, and he has hammered out a large success in life. Mr. Watters is a man of strong affections and deep friendships. These are not lightly placed, but to be his friend once is to be always his friend.

J. B. MURPHY, one of the prosperous farmers of Marion township, Grant county, enjoys the honor of being chairman of the town board, and was born at Hastings, N. Y., on Jan. 10, 1839, being a son of Arthur and Delia (Cotton) Murphy, natives of Ireland.

The father came to New York at the age of eighteen, while the mother was brought to this country when but an infant. In 1856 the family came to Grant county, and although the father was a stonemason by trade, he took up land in Woodman township, which he greatly improved, and resided upon the farm until his death, which occurred in 1878, his wife surviving him until 1896. To them were born children as follows: Mary, clerk in the land office at Washington, which position she has held for twenty years; Edward, of Woodman; Caroline, Mrs. Ballinger, of Bloomington township, Grant county; Kate, of Colorado; Anna, Mrs. Lewis, of Iowa; Alice, of Bloomington township, this county; Walter, of Bowen county, Iowa; our subject.

J. B. Murphy was reared in Waukesha county, Wis., and then moved to Iowa county, whence in 1856 he accompanied the family to Woodman, Grant county, later going to Millville, and finally to Marion township, in 1866, where he purchased a farm of 200 acres, now counted as one of the finest pieces of farming property in Grant county. In August, 1861, Mr. Murphy enlisted in Co. H, 7th Wis. V. I., for three years or during the war. The regiment was mustered in at Madison, Wis., and was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, forming part of the famous "Iron Brigade." During his term of service Mr. Murphy participated in the battles of Gainesville, second battle of Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Wilderness and Petersburg, and also took part in the capture of the Weldon railroad. On account of a gunshot wound received in the hand, Mr. Murphy was honorably discharged in September, 1864, having served bravely and been promoted to the rank of sergeant.

In 1866 Mr. Murphy was married, in Fenimore, to Miss Alice Graham, born in Venango county, Penn., daughter of William and Eliza (Dixon) Graham, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Mount Ida township in 1858, opening up a farm, where the mother died in 1879, and the father in 1888. They were prominent pioneers of Mount Ida township, and will long be remembered as representative farmers. Five children have been born to our subject: Lillian, Mrs. Smith, of Republic, Wash.; Frank, married, and resides in Mason City, Iowa; James, of Mason City; Alta and Grace. Mr. Murphy is an active member of John McDermott Post, G. A. R.,

No. 101, Boscobel. In political matters, Mr. Murphy's sympathies are with the Democratic party, and he has acceptably served as chairman of Marion township for ten years, prior to the present term. Few men are more popular in Grant county than Mr. Murphy, and he may well be regarded as one of the leading exponents of the best agricultural interests of the great commonwealth of Wisconsin.

E. D. BUSHNELL, deceased. The victims of war cannot be counted by the list of those slain upon the field of battle. For years after the close of strife, in any country, noble lives pass out of existence whose decease can be directly traced to the terrible exposure, the deprivations and rigors of the prison, and the horrors of the army hospital, these martyrs deserving the crown of laurel just as surely as if the death blow had come through sword thrust or musket ball, in front of the enemy. Among those who were thus sacrificed while yet in the prime of life was the subject of our sketch, E. D. Bushnell.

The birth of our subject occurred in Ohio, on Jan. 19, 1834, his parents being Daniel and Minerva (Cole) Bushnell, who came to the State of Wisconsin at a very early day. The only survivors of their family are Hiram and Mrs. Lydia Watchorn, of Grant county, Wis., and Daniel, a resident of Dakota. When the first call was issued for volunteers for service in the Civil war our subject was among the number to respond, enlisting in Company C, 7th Wis. V. I., and participated in all the battles of his regiment until the time of his capture by the enemy, near Broad Run, on Oct. 9, 1863. His prison life included confinement in five places, each one worse than the previous one, Belle Isle, Florence, Savannah, Milan and Andersonville, release coming just in time to send home a wreck of the sturdy, ambitious young volunteer who had so bravely gone forth. Although he never recovered his normal health, he recuperated enough to follow his quiet occupations.

In 1867 Mr. Bushnell married Miss Elizabeth J. Austin, a daughter of Samuel R. and Minerva (Ashmore) Austin, and a member of one of the old and prominent families of Lafayette county. Mrs. Bushnell was born in Belmont, near the Mound, in March, 1849, and was educated in the schools of her native place. After marriage our subject purchased eighty acres near the line of Iowa county, in the town of Belmont, and remained at this place until his health completely failed, his death taking place in a hospital, where he was placed in order that the very best and most skillful care could be afforded him. Mr. Bushnell was noted for his kind disposition, and, to the close of his life, for his devotion to his family.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell were: Samuel, born in 1868, died in 1892. Charles, born in 1870, was educated in the Platteville Normal School, and became a teacher; in 1897 he married Lillie Rundle, of Iowa county, and settled upon a farm, but he is now a student in the Northwestern College of Dentistry, in Chicago; they have one daughter, Florence. Lewis E., born in 1873, was educated at the Platteville Normal School, and remained at the old home with his mother until his marriage, in 1898, to Nettie Enloe, who was a daughter of an old veteran of Wisconsin; they now reside on a farm in Iowa county. Lillie, born in 1875, graduated from the State Normal School, and now follows teaching in Evansville, Wis. Mary, born in 1877, graduated in the class of 1899, and is one of the intelligent and charming young teachers of Oneida county, Wis. Rose, born in 1879, is also a graduate of the Normal School, class of 1899, and is one of the successful teachers of Lafayette county. Archie, born in 1881, is a student at the Normal School, where he promises to be as brilliant as the other members of this very intelligent family.

An ardent Republican all his life, Mr. Bushnell was never robust enough to take upon himself the cares of office. Mrs. Bushnell and the family are connected with the M. E. Church, and all enjoy the esteem of the community.

WILLIAM S. BLACKFORD. This esteemed and influential citizen of Monroe township, Green county, is one of a family of seven children born to William and Rachel (Johns) Blackford.

William Blackford, his father, was a potter by trade, and was of German lineage, while his mother's ancestors were Welsh. Both parents were born in Pennsylvania, where they married, and lived until 1845. In that year they determined to seek better fortune in the West, and set forth, with their children and household goods, for Delphi, Ind. Proceeding by covered wagon from Fayette to Brownsville, Penn., they continued their westward journey by water, going by steamboat to Monongahela, to Pittsburg, and the Ohio to Cairo, Ill., at the junction of that stream with the Mississippi. As has been said, it had been their intention to ascend the Wabash to Delphi, but low water forbade this, and forced them to continue their journey in the manner described. They sailed up the Mississippi to Dubuque, thence went to Galena, where they hired a wagon and proceeded to Green county, Wis., making their first stop with William Goodell. The land chosen by Mr. Blackford on which to build a home for himself and his family was heavily timbered, and was situated in the township of Jefferson. To clear it was no easy task, but sturdy thews and sinews can accomplish much when to their strength is added a firm resolve, inspired by love. On this farm, thus reduced to cultivation by the axe of the woodman and the plow of the pioneer, the parents passed the remainder of their lives, the mother dying about 1859, and the father in 1871. Of their seven children, two have died—Thomas and Lavina. Enoch, the eldest of the five yet living, resides in Juda, in Green county; Rebecca is the wife of Stephen Mann, of Page county, Iowa; William S.; Rachel is Mrs. Peter Roub, and lives in the South; and Samuel is a resident of Louisiana.

William S. Blackford was born Feb. 3, 1833, in Fayette county, Penn., and was consequently a boy of twelve years when he accompanied his parents to Green county, Wis., which has been his home ever since. In 1860 he was married to Nettie Hedge, whose native State was Indiana. Mrs. Blackford died in 1877, and he has not married again. He has three daughters: Jennie Florence, the eldest, the wife of Charles Hartwick; Nellie Josephine, whose home is in Carroll, Iowa; and Rose, who lives with her father in Monroe township. Mr. Blackford is well known as a worthy representative of an honored pioneer family, and is highly esteemed for his own good qualities of head and heart.

CORNELIUS HOWARD is numbered among the prosperous farmers and veteran citizens of Watterstown township, Grant county, and resides on a fine farm in section 11, which he has brought up to a good state of cultivation.

Mr. Howard was born in what was then Morgan (now Elliott) county, Ky., in 1847, being a son of Thomas and Nancy Howard, natives of Kentucky and Ohio, respectively. The parents removed from Kentucky, where their children were born, to Illinois, and after living in that State a short time they pushed further into the wilderness, and in 1863 located in Grant county, Wis. Here the mother died, but the father still survives, and resides in Kentucky. Five children were born of this union, four sons and one daughter, and all of them, except Cornelius, reside in Ohio.

Our subject was reared and educated in Kentucky, and always followed the occupation of farming, with the exception of a few years spent in working on a railroad. By his own efforts he finally amassed sufficient money to purchase his present comfortable farm. At the outbreak of the Civil war Cornelius Howard was too young to enter the service, but in January, 1865, when but eighteen, he enlisted in Company E, 47th Wis. V. I., and remained until the close of the war. During his term of service Mr. Howard's health became seriously impaired, and he has never recovered from the effects of the hardships he suffered.

To Cornelius Howard and his wife, Caroline, four sons have been born: Fred, George, Charles and John, but the last three died in early childhood. Having been a good, brave soldier, Mr. Howard naturally takes a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the veterans, and is an active member of the G. A. R. Honest, thrifty, industrious, Mr. Howard has gained for himself the respect of his neighbors, and is justly regarded as a substantial man, and a good representative of the agricultural interests of Grant county.

FRED A. MEYER, postmaster of Boscobel, Grant county, is also a member of the firm of Meyer & Johnson, editors and publishers of the Boscobel Dial-Enterprise, one of the most widely-quoted and influential local papers of the State. Both members of this enterprising and stirring firm are young men, but have won their spurs as newspaper men on hard-fought fields of journalism.

Mr. Meyer was born in Boscobel Dec. 29, 1871, son of Edward A. and E. Josephine (Honn) Meyer. The father was a native of Westphalia, Germany, and the mother of Ohio, where she was born in 1843. Frederick A. and Henrietta Meyer, the parents of Edward A., came to this country in 1848, bringing their family with them, and settled on a farm near Waukesha, where Edward A. was reared to manhood. In 1858 he came to Boscobel, and spent several years in this city. In 1861 he went back to Waukesha, and in 1866 once more became a resident of Boscobel. This time he engaged in business as a member of the firm of Meyer, Hildebrand & Co., dealers in general merchandise. After a time the firm became Meyer Brothers, Gustave, a brother of Edward A., purchasing the interest of the other parties. Meyer Brothers were in business for many years, and became one of the best-known firms in southern Wisconsin. Their patronage was very large, and their goods most attractive in quality and price. When the firm went out of business Edward A. turned his attention to manufacturing. His marriage took place at Madison, Wis., in April, 1867, and has been blessed with four children: Bruce M., a manufacturer at Rockton, Wis.; Richard F. died in 1894, at the age of twenty-five years; Fred A., of Boscobel; and Charity Belle, who is now the wife of Dr. C. F. Rodolf, of Muscoda, Wis. Mrs. Meyer is a member of the Congregational Church, and a lady of high standing in the community. Mr. Meyer is a man of considerable prominence, and is an influential Democrat, his advice being often followed in party matters. He was mayor of the city for a term, served three terms as chairman of the board of supervisors; has also served four years as treasurer of the school board, and has been an alderman several terms.

Fred A. Meyer was a graduate of the high school of Boscobel in the class of 1892, and while attending school learned the printer's trade, and liked it so well that it has become his life work. In 1893 he purchased the paper known as the Leader, in company with Harlan J. Johnson, and entered upon a career that has met with marked success from the beginning. The newspaper history of the firm appears in the sketch of his partner, published elsewhere in this work. Mr. Meyer was married Sept. 8, 1898, to Miss Nellie E. Pengilly, a daughter of Rev. R. Pengilly, a minister of the Methodist Church. She was born in Argyle, Wis., and is the mother of one daughter, Josephine E. The young husband is a member of the orders of the M. W. of A. and the Foresters. He is a strong Republican, and at the present time is the postmaster of Boscobel, and is conducting his office to the eminent satisfaction of the community.

FRANK E. TRENARY, a well-to-do stock farmer in the town of Platteville, Grant county, attends closely to his business, and has not only succeeded in accumulating a very handsome competence, but has won and holds the confidence and respect of his fellow townsmen.

Mr. Trenary was born in his present home in Platteville in April, 1862, and is a son of Philip and Isabel (Lower) Trenary, both born in Cornwall, England, in 1812 and 1814, respectively. They grew to maturity in Cornwall, were married there, and had four children before they came to this country. In 1844 they located in Grant county, and settled on a farm in the town of Platteville, where they made a home for their family. Mr. Trenary purchased a large amount of land, leaving to his sons productive farms. He erected buildings suitable to his needs on two of these places, and the one where our subject lives was his first improvement. The other farm, which he improved later, is now owned by his son William. He was one of the oldest and most scientific agriculturists in this part of the country, and brought the best knowledge of the times to help him in his business. He died in September, 1896, and his widow still survives him. They had a family of eleven children. John P., the eldest, was born in England in 1837, and married Miss Bessie A. Stephens, and they reside near Belmont, where he is an extensive stock farmer. Mary H., born in England, became the wife of Henry Pierce, of Pomeroy, Iowa, and was the mother of eight children, all living in that State, Charles, John, Frank, Sylvester, Jessie, Phil, Robert and Arthur. Charles, born in England, married Miss Carrie Greenrod, and resides on his farm in Pomeroy, Iowa. Emma, born in England, and educated in the Platteville schools, is now the wife of John Ware, of Big Patch, and is the mother of one daughter, Clara B. Ellen, born in Wisconsin, married John Rickard, and resides in Platteville, where her husband is the engineer of the Normal School building. Robert, born in Grant county, married Miss Lizzie Henry, who died soon after marriage, leaving no family; later he married Miss Carrie Hawk, and for a time resided in Pomeroy, Iowa, until a short time before his death, when he returned to Grant county, and died in 1894, leaving three children, Myrtie, Seanson and Earl; one son, Orrin, died young. Henry, born in Grant county on the old homestead, married Miss Agnes Jeffrey, and lives in Austin, Minn., where he is engaged in business; they have two children, Loren and Floyd. Carrie, born in Grant county, died at the age of nineteen years. Bryan F., born in Grant county, married Miss Selina Huntingdon, and is a farmer in Lafayette county; they have had two children, Clyde, who is at home, and Laura, who died when eight years of age. Will and Frank E., born in 1862, are twins; Will married Miss Carrie Raisbeck, of Platteville, and resides on one of the paternal farms in Lafayette county; he is the father of three daughters, Cleo, Lenice and one not named.

Frank E. Trenary grew to manhood under the parental roof, and received his education in the Platteville schools, finishing his school days at the Normal. In 1886 he married Miss Annie Huntingdon, daughter of Robert and Mary (Stephens) Huntingdon, an old and prominent family of Grant county. Her father died in 1872, leaving a wife and three children. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Trenary settled on the farm where they are now residing. They have had two children, Estella M., born in October, 1890, and Lloyd E., born in October, 1897. Mrs. Trenary was born in 1865, and obtained her education in the Platteville schools.

The entire Trenary family are Republicans, and their honored sire held to the same political faith. Mrs. Trenary is a member of the Primitive Methodist Church of Platteville, and her husband, while not a member, supports the church, and gives his influence for everything good and noble in the community. He is one of Grant county's enterprising farmers, and is thoroughly respected, not only for his good business qualities, but for his good and kind personal character.

RICHARD F. ELLIS, a leading up-to-date and prosperous farmer of Jordan township, Green county, is a native of New York State, born July 12, 1837, in Chautauqua county. The first of the Ellis family in this country were three brothers, who, about 250 years ago, came to the New England colonies from England.

George and Hulda Ellis, grandparents of our subject, were natives of the State of Maine. They had a family of ten children, named respectively: Benjamin, Richard, Nehemiah (sketch of whom follows), Sewell, George, Abel, John, Hulda, Amie, and Abbie, all now deceased. Hulda, Amie and Abbie married three brothers by the name of Deveroux, and their families averaged twelve children each, the majority being boys, all, except three, of whom served in the war of the Rebellion.

Nehemiah Ellis, father of Richard F., was born Aug. 4, 1804, near Bangor, Maine, whence, in 1819, he removed with his parents to Chautauqua county, N. Y. In 1828 he married Rachel Osgood, and to this union were born twelve children, six of whom reached maturity, viz.: Mary, wife of William Kinston, of Monroe, Green county; Eliza, widow of Samuel Shook, formerly of Iowa; Richard F., our subject; Lewis, a farmer of Pocahontas county, Iowa; Laban, residing in Denver, Colo.; and Samuel, of Hastings, Neb. Nehemiah Ellis, the father of this family, migrated from New York State to Stephenson county, Ill., in 1838, and purchased a farm near Orangeville. In 1847 he removed to Green county, where he bought a farm in Jordan township, which he continued to cultivate until 1875, in that year removing to Buena Vista county, Iowa, where he passed the rest of his life, dying March 15, 1891. Thus, in his time, he was a settler in three States of the Union, and was a typical frontier pioneer.

Richard F. Ellis, whose name opens this sketch, was an infant when his parents went from New York State to Illinois, and about ten years old when they settled in Green county, Wis. Here he received the greater part of his education, and was reared to farming pursuits. In 1864, during the Civil war, he enlisted in Battery D, 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, in which he served until June, 1865, being stationed at Fort Jackson and Fort Berwick, La. On his return from the front, in 1865, he sold out his first farm, and in 1870 bought his present one of 240 acres, on which he has made his home ever since, engaged in general farming. In politics he is independent, and for over twenty years has served as school director, and has also been treasurer, etc. In religious faith he and his wife are members of the Church of Christ.

On Aug. 29, 1864, Richard F. Ellis married Miss Emma Bowden, of Monroe, Wis., born Dec. 15, 1844, in Knox county, Ill., and brought to Green county, Wis., when about one year old. Her parents, Samuel and Elizabeth (Virtue) Bowden, had a family of eight children, five of whom are yet living: Elizabeth, widow of George Norris, formerly of Chicago, Ill.; Ellen, widow of Ephraim Miller, and now living in Monroe, Wis.; George, in southern Missouri; Emma, wife of Richard F. Ellis; and Richard, a resident of Chicago. To Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Ellis have been born seven children, a brief record of whom is as follows: (1) William, born Sept. 15, 1866, married Catherine Laubaugh; he is a farmer in Jordan township, Green county. (2) Flora, born May 20, 1869, is the wife of Charles Smith, of Monroe, Wis. (3) Edwin, born March 26, 1872, married Anna Brazel, of Adams township, Green county. (4) Franklin, born Oct. 12, 1874, married Rosa Stauffacher, of Jordan township, Green county. (5) Lee, born Dec. 25, 1876, is on the home farm. (6) Louis B., born Sept. 3, 1882, is at home. (7) Ida May died in infancy.

JAMES F. SCHRODER. This is the name of one of the stirring and capable young men who are pushing to the front in business and agriculture. He lives in the town of Platteville, Grant county, and is both enterprising and successful.

Mr. Schroder was born in Montfort, Iowa county, in November, 1875, and is a son of C. F. and Mary I. (Harms) Schroder. His father was born in Germany in 1840, and his mother was born in Grant county. After their marriage his parents settled at Montfort, Iowa county, and followed farming until 1882 in that locality, when he purchased the Huntington farm, two miles south of Platteville, which farm became his home for the rest of his life. He died March 17, 1894, leaving his wife with three children. The widow did not remain on the farm long after her husband's death, but moved into the city of Platteville, and is still a resident of that place. They were the parents of four children: (1) Anna, born in Iowa county, was educated in the Montfort and Platteville schools, as were the other children; she is now the wife of Jacob S. Brugger, and resides on a fruit farm one mile east of Platteville. They have four children, Clarence Elmer, Fernie Isabelle, Hazel May and Herbert D. (2) Ellen Jane died when ten months old. (3) James F. (4) George William, born at Montfort, married Miss Anna Scheel, and resides in Plymouth county, Iowa, where he is engaged in farming; they have three children, Mabel Gertrude, Ethel Isabelle and Bessie Helen.

James F. Schroder was educated in the district and normal schools at Platteville. He lived on the farm until the death of his father, when he accompanied his mother into Platteville, the charge of the farm falling very largely into his hands. In May, 1898, Mr. Schroder married Miss Etta Johnston, a daughter of John and Mary Johnston, old and prominent residents of Grant county, but formerly of Germany. She was born in Platteville in June, 1875, and had her education in the local schools. Mr. and Mrs. Schroder lived in Platteville until 1900, when they moved to the old Schroder farm, which is one of the finest rural estates in the town, containing about 400 acres, in a high state of cultivation, and thoroughly kept up. Mr. Schroder is a Democrat. All the family are members of the Reformed Lutheran Church. The father of James F. Schroder was one of the old-time Californians, crossing the plains during the gold excitement there, and returning some years later to Wisconsin, where he invested his money in real estate and became one of the independent farmers of this county, and a man of real worth, with many friends. His widow and children are all prominent members of society, and count their friends among the best people in the community.

SAMUEL MELANCTHON SMITH, M. A., is a young attorney of Janesville, Rock county, whose knowledge of law and general business ability have been fittingly recognized by his appointment as attorney and secretary of the Janesville Machine Co. He is rapid and accurate in everything that relates to the interest of the company with which he is associated, and in a general way is regarded as one of the abler and more progressive members of the Rock county Bar.

Mr. Smith was born in Galena, Ill., June 29, 1869, and is a son of Rev. Dr. Ambrose C. and Hannah L. (Slaymaker) Smith, both native of Pennsylvania. Dr. Smith was pastor of the South Presbyterian Church of Galena for twenty-three years, until 1889, when he was elected president of Parsons College, at Fairfield, Iowa. He held that position until 1896, when, by reason of broken health, he had to give up work. Mr. Smith has two brothers: Henry S., a physician of Negaunee, Mich.; and Edward A., a dentist of Madison, Wisconsin.

Samuel M. Smith was educated in the schools of Galena and under the private instruction of his father. He was a member of the graduating class of 1890 from Beloit College, receiving the degree of B. A., and three years later received the degree of M. A. He made a good record at school, both as a gentleman and as a student, and on his graduation secured a position as teacher in the School for the Blind, at Janesville. This position he held for one year, and was then made bookkeeper for the Merchants & Mechanics Savings Bank in that city. He had read law to a considerable extent while in the bank, and attended the law school at Madison, taking the course to within three months of completion, leaving the law school to accept the position of assistant cashier of the Merchants & Mechanics Savings Bank of Janesville. In the spring of 1894, while still connected with the bank, he was admitted to the Bar, and a year later became the junior member of the law firm of Whitehead, Matheson & Smith, entering upon the practice of his profession under very favorable auspices. In October, 1897, he was selected as attorney for the Janesville Machine Co., and, as noted above, was soon afterward chosen secretary of same.

Mr. Smith and Miss Margaret Sheldon were married Nov. 11, 1896. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of Alfred H. Sheldon, and was born and reared in the city of Janesville. She is a lady of many gifts and graces. Mr. Smith is a Republican, and is a member of the school board from the Third ward. He is a member and trustee of the First Presbyterian Church, and at the present time is serving as a member of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association. He belongs to a college fraternity. Mr. Smith owns his home at No. 305 South Third street.

Since the above sketch was written Mr. Smith, in March, 1900, resigned his position with the Janesville Machine Co., to accept the position of secretary of the Wisconsin State Tax Commission, at Madison, and in April, 1901, left the latter position to take the secretaryship of the Board of Control, Endowment Rank, Knights of Pythias, in the head office at Chicago; this position carries with it the management of the insurance branch of the order.

JAMES E. BOWEN is a name prominent in the records of the town of Sylvester, Green county, where he has lived an honorable and upright life for many years.

Mr. Bowen is a son of Davis and Rachel J. (Brown) Bowen, natives of Virginia, the former of whom was born about 1795, and his wife in 1792. They came to Wisconsin in 1838 when it was teeming with Indians and wild beasts, and settled on section 27, town of Sylvester. Here they lived and died, his death occurring in 1867; his widow survived until 1876. They were married about 1820, and were the parents of three children: James E., whose name introduces this article; Robert C., who died in Wisconsin; and Annie M., who married Reuben G. Fleek, of Brodhead, and is now deceased. Davis Bowen was a son of Samuel Bowen, a captain in the militia of the colony of Virginia. He had a reputation as a born Indian fighter, and participated in all the combats with the savages in the Upper Ohio Valley during the Revolution. In history he is recorded as one of the very first settlers to cross the mountains and penetrate into West Virginia. The ancestors of Capt. Bowen were of Welsh nativity.

James Edgar Bowen was born Sept. 25, 1825, in West Virginia, near the mouth of the Cheat river, near the Pennsylvania line. He came to Green county during his thirteenth year, and spent his older boyhood among the scenes and hardships of pioneer life. In 1859 he married Miss Martha Ann Clark, a daughter of Joseph Clark, whose name figures in the pioneer records of this State. Two of their children lived to maturity: Davis, who was born in 1864, and resides in Montana; and Susan, born in 1868, who married James Sherman Shafer, of the town of Sylvester, and is the mother of two children, Vivian Jeanette and Martha Vara. Mr. Shafer and his family live near Desmet, South Dakota.

Mr. Bowen first lived on the farm in Green county at a time when very little opportunity was given the average youth for schooling. In all he attended school less than a year, and his education, which is by no means meager, has been acquired very largely by home study and contact with the world. He has in years past been an extensive traveler. In 1851, in company with some friends, he drove an ox-team overland to Oregon and California. In 1854 he returned home, by way of Panama and the steamer route to New Orleans, and thence home via the Mississippi river. Mr. Bowen has been in some thirty-five States of the Union, as well as Mexico and South America. He is a man of retentive memory and wide reading, true and honest in his convictions, and frank and outspoken in their expression. Politically he is a stanch Democrat, and his father before him was a strong and earnest supporter of Andrew Jackson. Our subject cast his last vote for William J. Bryan in 1900. He was a States Rights Democrat during the Civil war.

Mr. Bowen comes of a family of pioneer settlers in every generation from his great-grandfather to his own son, who early moved to Montana.

HENRY PITTS, one of the prominent citizens of Mineral Point, Iowa county, and an important factor in the G. A. R. post of that locality, in which he serves as adjutant, is one of the brave veterans of the war of the Rebellion, who is deserving of high honor as a defender of our nation's honor. The day is coming when the badge of the G. A. R. man will not be seen; and then, like children who have lost a dear parent, we will mourn that we did not do sufficient homage to our brave one while he was permitted to be with us.

Henry Pitts was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1847, a son of Philip and Catherine (Soper) Pitts, also natives of Germany, where the father died, but the mother came to America, passing away in Ohio in 1887. One brother, Philip, served in an Indiana regiment during the war, and now resides in Wabash county, Ind. Our subject was reared in Germany, where he received his education in the public schools, and came to America, landing at New York, on May 26, 1861, from whence he went to Wabash county, Indiana.

In 1863 Mr. Pitts enlisted in Company H. 113th Ind. V. I., for three years or until the close of the war, being mustered in at Indianapolis and assigned to the Western Army, participating in the battles of Blue Spring, Cedar Mountain, Watkins Ford; then was placed on detached duty near Stevenson, Ala., where he received a wound that forced him to remain in the hospital at Nashville, Tenn., where his hand was amputated. In July, 1865, he was discharged, and returned to Wabash county, Ind. Here he remained until 1873, when he went to Milwaukee, thence in 1892 to Mineral Point. Mr. Pitts is a notary public, has been a justice of the peace, and is a man of whom nothing but good is ever spoken.

In 1875 Mr. Pitts married Barbara Remyzer, born in Milwaukee, a daughter of Frederick and Frances (Alterman) Remyzer, natives of Germany, who, in 1830, came to Buffalo, later moving to Detroit, and in 1838 to Milwaukee. The father was a shoemaker by trade, and died in 1878, in Milwaukee, his wife passing away in 1887. To our subject and wife were born four children: W. C. enlisted in Company E, 1st Wisconsin, for the Spanish-American war, was stationed at Jacksonville, Md., in October, 1898, and in March of the following year he enlisted in Company B, 3d U. S. I., and is now in the Philippines; Albert J., at home; J. C. and Anna G. Mr. Pitts is an active member of Geo. H. Legate Post, G. A. R., in which, as before mentioned, he fills the office of adjutant; is a life-long Republican, and takes a deep interest in politics. Kindly, genial, accommodating, Mr. Pitts has made many friends, and is regarded as one of the best representatives of our veterans in this part of the State.

GEORGE W. BUSSEY, a thrifty and venerable citizen of Green county, Wis., is a retired farmer now spending the closing years of a useful and industrious life in the village of Juda. Mr. Bussey is the son of Hezekiah and Fannie (Cross) Bussey, of Brown county, Ohio, who came to this State in 1846, and made their home here as long as they lived. Hezekiah Bussey was born Aug. 5, 1789, and died Dec. 27, 1871. Fannie Bussey, his widow, was born March 20, 1790, and died Oct. 30, 1879. John Bussey, the grandfather of George W., was a native born Englishman, who came to America before the Revolution, settling in Virginia, where he became the father of four children: John, who was killed in the war of 1812; Hezekiah, named above; Mary married

Amos Black, of Virginia; and Annie, who married Benjamin Ashby, of Kentucky.

Hezekiah Bussey and Fannie Cross, daughter of John Cross, of Ohio, were married July 12, 1810, and to their union came the following children: John R., born March 20, 1811, was a farmer in Oklahoma, and died June 19, 1885. William C., born Aug. 22, 1812, died, unmarried, in California, Dec. 6, 1884; in 1846 he went to California, making the voyage in a sailing vessel around Cape Horn. George W. Elener, born Aug. 8, 1818, married Elizer Tracy, of Green county. Nelson, born July 29, 1822, married Orra Dyer. Mary Ann, born April 30, 1826, married the late William Cöoley, and died in April, 1899.

Mr. Bussey was born Dec. 19, 1816, and was married Aug. 26, 1836, to Miss Emily Gaby, daughter of John Gaby, of Maryland, and became the mother of these children: (1) Phoebe E., born April 9, 1839, married Jeremiah Ostrander, of Green county, and died Aug. 10, 18—. (2) Ada J., born March 13, 1841, married William J. Ostrander, and died Oct. 30, 1879. (3) Mary Ann, born Dec. 19, 1842, married Oct. 25, 1857, Charles Van Buren, a farmer of Green county, now residing with her father in Juda. (4) Fannie H., born April 26, 1844, married John Myers, a farmer of Green county. (5) Mahlon, born Nov. 4, 1845, married Miss Lena Clark. (6) John N. and (7) Orra E., born April 8, 1848, twins; Orra E. is the wife of Nathan Ainsworth, of Green county. (8) Susan C., born May 24, 1850, is Mrs. John Schemmerhorn, of Madison. Mrs. Bussey was born Feb. 7, 1813, and died March 7, 1888.

Mr. Bussey started out in life without a dollar, and with but a meager education. He came with a wife and two children to Wisconsin in the fall of 1842, while it was still a territory. When they crossed the Wisconsin line there was not a dollar in the family treasury. Having learned the shoemaker's trade when a boy in Ohio, he followed it at night, working by the light of a tallow candle. During the day he was a carpenter. For some years he worked in this most industrious fashion, and then bought a mill of his brother, which he operated for seven years. At the end of that time he sold it and turned the proceeds into a small farm, and after a time traded that for a woolen mill. This plant he managed for a number of years, when he exchanged it advantageously for a very valuable farm. Here Mr. Bussey farmed for a number of years, and then selling part of the place, bought his present very handsome and convenient home in Juda, where, as already noted, he is living retired. Mr. Bussey owns this quarter-section farm in the town of Spring Grove, and also has a farm of 160 acres in Kansas. Mr. Bussey is not connected with any church. High moral ideals determine his life, and he affirms that honesty and square dealing are the principal parts of religion. As a volunteer in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion he displayed a lofty patriotism, and to that key his life has been attuned. He served as a member of Battery D, 1st Wis. Heavy Artillery, and enlisted in 1862. Mr. Bussey served at Fort Jackson, in Louisiana, and at other places, and received an honorable discharge at the close of the war. From the country he helped to rescue at the cost of impaired health, he is now receiving a pension of $16 a month. In politics Mr. Bussey is a Republican, and has been justice of the peace, road supervisor, assessor, postmaster at Oakley, and is a capable and efficient official. Belonging to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, he has striven to exhibit in his life the principles underlying that noble order. He has been a Mason in good standing for forty years. At the age of eighty-four years, it is given him to look back over a long and useful life which has been lived for the welfare of the world and the happiness of those around him.

JAMES BALLANTINE (deceased) was one of the pioneers of Grant county, and its record would be incomplete without his life history, connected as he was with its growth and development since 1846.

Mr. Ballantine was a native of the State of New York, born in Delaware county Feb. 22, 1822. His father, David Ballantine, was born in the highlands of Scotland, and came to America in his youth. His mother, Ann (Grant) Ballantine, was also of Scotch parentage, but she was born in Albany, N. Y., and in that State, she and her husband passed their married life, both dying in Bovina. David Ballantine was a prominent business man in his town, where for many years he carried on a mercantile enterprise.

James Ballantine was one of ten children, the family comprising seven sons and three daughters. One son died in infancy, but all the others reached mature years, although now this once numerous family is represented alone by Thomas Ballantine, a farmer near Sedgewick, Kansas. James Ballantine was in his twenty-fourth year when, in 1846, he came to Grant county. Immediately he entered a large amount of land, and engaged extensively in farming and stockraising, becoming one of the most successful agriculturists and stock men in Grant county. In 1863 Mr. Ballantine met with a serious accident that changed to some extent his course in life. By the running away of his team, one of his limbs was so badly injured that amputation was necessary. Following this accident, he disposed of much of his land, and then made his home, until he married, with his brother, David, and together they engaged extensively in the live stock business and became very prosperous.

On Feb. 13, 1867, Mr. Ballantine was married to Miss Abbie A. Pennock, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Ann (Dubell) Pennock. Mrs. Ballantine was born in Albany, Ohio, and came to Grant county, Wis., with her parents in her tenth year. The family first settled at Millville, where Mr. Pennock worked in a cabinet and furniture shop, having the trade and skill of a mechanic, but his death occurred three years after his arrival, and he left his wife with seven children, the oldest of them but fourteen years old and the youngest but three months. The mother of Mrs. Ballantine, although left in limited circumstances, reared her family carefully and faithfully to be worthy citizens, and all of them lived to maturity. In her declining years she resided with her devoted daughter, Mrs. Ballantine, and there died on April 29, 1899, at the advanced age of eighty-four years.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ballantine settled in the village of Bloomington, and here Mr. Ballantine continued in the stock business, and also loaned money. His death occurred on July 18, 1895, in his seventy-third year, his widow and five children surviving to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and kind father. Four of the children are now living: Duncan Grant, who continues his father's business; Grace May; David Walter; and Edith Virtue. Two children have passed away.—Anna Mabel, at the age of twenty-six, and John Robert, at the age of three years. Mr. Ballantine was a most successful business man and useful citizen, and was ever held in high esteem. In his political views he was a Republican for many years, but in his later life he was a Prohibitionist. Mrs. Ballantine has one of the most beautiful homes in Grant county. The stately brick residence is a monument to the taste and liberality of her husband, by whom it was erected for the pleasure and comfort of his family. Mrs. Ballantine is a lady of culture, prominent in religious and philanthropic work, and is superintendent of the evangelistic work of the Bloomington branch of the W. C. T. U.

O. P. DAVID, retired farmer, Montfort, Grant county, Wisconsin.

OTIS F. WELLS, one of the prosperous farmers of Jordan township, Green county, has resided in that township since 1850, and is justly classed among the pioneers whose industry and perseverance have made the locality what it is to-day.

Mr. Wells is of Irish origin several generations back, his ancestors having lived in the Eastern States for many years. His grandfather was lost while serving his country in the war of 1812. In his family were children as follows: Philip, Warner, Caleb, Nelson, Eliza and Liful, all now deceased. Of these, Philip Wells, father of our subject, was born in New York State, and in about 1818 married Nancy Tanner, who was also a native of New York, and of Irish descent. Ten children blessed this union, viz.: Lorinda; Addison; Melissa, who married Simon Ewing, of California; Maria, who died in California; Otis F., our subject; George, who married Susan Sanborn, and now lives in Iowa; Jane married James Blunt, who lives in Monroe; Thomas, who married Susan Starr, and lives in Iowa; John, who married Minerva Clark, of Jordan, Green county; and William, who married Cordelia Morton, of Cadez township, Green county. Mr. and Mrs. Wells migrated to Wisconsin in an early day, and later lived in Stephenson county, Illinois.

Otis F. Wells was born Feb. 19, 1831, in Gauga county, Ohio, where he passed the first few years of his life. In 1837 he moved with the family to Stephenson county, Ill., and was reared on the frontier, with little or no opportunities for education, his days being occupied with hard work from early boyhood. As above stated, he came to Green county in 1850, and for a number of years he was engaged in freighting, with oxen and horses, hauling goods from Milwaukee and Chicago to Stephenson county, and in the lumber districts in the northern part of the State, often making trips of two or three hundred miles. Mr. Wells was without means when he commenced life for himself, and at the time of his marriage his belongings consisted of a few shillings and an old rifle, which he traded for three hogs. However, he has been hard-working and judicious in his management of affairs, and he now owns a fine farm of 200 acres in Jordan township, well improved, besides three nice dwellings in Monroe, all acquired by his own well-directed efforts and economy. Mr. Wells attributes his success to his temperate habits. He is highly respected in his neighborhood, and his fellow citizens have shown their confidence in his honesty and ability by electing him to various township offices, such as treasurer, etc. He is a staunch Republican in political faith.

On Sept. 16, 1850, Mr. Wells married Miss Harriet Sharrard, of Jefferson township, Green county, who was born in 1832 near Camillus, N. Y., and in 1843 came with her parents, E. H. and Eliza Sharrard, to Green county, the family settling in Sylvester township, and later in the town of Jefferson. Her father was born in Canada, her mother in Connecticut. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sharrard only one son and one daughter reached maturity. Mrs. Wells' brother, James Sharrard, is a resident of Atchison, Kans. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wells: Ella, born in 1854, is the widow of John Trickel, of Monroe, Wis. James F., born Jan. 17, 1858, married Julia Taylor, of Jordan township; he is engaged in farming. Lillis, born June 20, 1868, is the wife of Edward Conery, of Monroe. Clarence, born April 28, 1873, married Miss Minnie Baughman, and resides on his father's farm in Jordan township. Mr. and Mrs. Wells have occupied this place for over fifty years. Our subject has never connected himself with any particular church, but he is a firm believer in Christianity.

WILLIAM BINGER (deceased) was engaged in farming at the time of his death, and was rapidly coming to the front in his calling. A bright young man, with more than ordinary endowments and high moral aims, he was recognized as one of the most promising members of the community in which he lived.

Mr. Binger was born Aug. 21, 1863, and died July 21, 1899. Jeremiah and Sarah (McCauley) Binger, his parents, were old settlers in Cadiz, Green county, Wis., and his father is still residing in that town. A sketch of his grandfather, William Binger, may be seen elsewhere. On Sept. 19, 1885, Mr. Binger married Eva Benage, who was born Oct. 20, 1864, a daughter of Abraham and Barbara (Wise) Benage, both members of prominent families. This union was blessed with two children: Roy, born July 8, 1887, died Nov. 22, 1892; and Rossie, born Nov. 27, 1893.

Abraham Benage was born Nov. 6, 1838, in Union county, Penn., son of Samuel and Eva (Dersham) Benage, also natives of that State, the former a veteran of the war of 1812. In 1841 the family removed to Ashland county, Ohio, where Abraham married Barbara Wise, a native of that county, born May 29, 1841. Samuel Benage came to Wisconsin in 1865, and died near Twin Grove, Green county, when over eighty-five years of age; his wife reached the age of seventy-two. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Benage came to Wisconsin in 1869, and he now owns a well improved farm in the town of Jefferson; he gives some attention to fruit culture. He and his wife were the parents of four children: (1) Elmira married Douglas Bradley, of Stephenson county, Ill. (2) Agnes married Eugene Hall, a farmer in the town of Spring Grove. (3) Eva is the widow of William Binger, as noted above. (4) Lillie, the youngest, married Archie Ostrander, of the town of Jefferson. Mrs. Barbara Benage died Feb. 7, 1899. She had always been connected with the Lutheran Church, with which Mr. Benage united Nov. 14, 1858.

William Binger was a Republican, and a hard working citizen. When he married he did not have a dollar; but by industry, economy and wise management he made a good living for his family. Mr. Binger was reared on the farm, and received his education in the public schools. An honest and true-hearted man, he was liked by all who knew him, and his taking away, in the very prime of life, was greatly deplored by a wide circle of friends and relatives. Mrs. Binger has rented her farm, and is devoting herself to the education of her only son. She is a good and kind-hearted woman, highly respected by all who know her.

JOHN C. BELLMYER (deceased) was a native of Germany, came to this country when a young man, and applied himself to his trade of blacksmithing. He worked hard, denied himself many of the pleasures and recreations which young men were wont to regard as necessary in his time, and became forehanded and prosperous. All his life he sustained a high reputation for honesty and veracity, and now that he has passed on to the better world those who knew him long and well bear willing testimony to his native manliness and genuine worth.

Mr. Bellmyer was born in Germany in 1814, and after coming to this country worked at the blacksmith's trade in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. In 1853 he entered Wisconsin, and not long afterward married Miss Minna Kuehn, of Platteville. Her parents, Casper and Minna Kuehn, lived and died in Germany, where Mrs. Bellmyer was born in May, 1828. She grew to womanhood in her native country, and when she reached the age of twenty-five came to Wisconsin, living in Kendalltown, where her brother, Frederick Kuehn, had purchased a farm. Mr. Bellmyer bought a farm near Platteville, and made extensive improvements. He owned 200 acres, which he developed into a fine rural estate, on which he made his home until his death, in 1873. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, and lived the life of a good man. He was always a Whig, and after the organization of the Republican party acted therewith.

Mr. Bellmyer was twice married, and by his first marriage had two children, Lizzie and Dennis, the latter a farmer in the town of Platteville. Of the children born to his second union, Fred, the eldest, is mentioned below. Albert, after reaching manhood went to Arizona, and resided there until after his death, being killed by the Indians in 1893. Carrie, widow of John Harms, lives in Platteville, and has three children, Dennis, Fred and Nellie. Minnie, now Mrs. John Boldt, of Platteville, is the mother of five children, Frank, Charles, Jesse, Edwin and Benjamin. Charles married Lillie Bailey, of the town of Platteville, and is now living in Elk Grove; they have four children, John, Adelbert, Lenys and Estella. Mary is now the wife of Frank Habel, of Platteville; they have three children, Shirley, Delmer and Lester. Henry married Louisa Mehren, and lives at Platteville, where he has a fine farm; they have three children, Edwin, Pearl and Emerson. Dennis has a family of six children, Gertrude, George, Nellie, Frank, Albert and Sarah. All the family were born in Platteville.

Mrs. Bellmyer is a member of the Lutheran Church, where she and her husband worshiped since the building of the new church, Mr. Bellmyer being one of the original supporters of the denomination here. He was an old pioneer, and a highly-respected citizen of the county. The family are all well-to-do, and hold an enviable place in the community.

FRED BELLMYER was born Dec. 16, 1857, on the farm where he lives, and of which he is now manager and part owner, owning 227 acres of valuable land. He was educated in the public schools. Mr. Bellmyer is largely engaged in farming and stock raising—Short-horn cattle and Poland-China hogs—and ships to the Chicago markets about three carloads of hogs and one carload of cattle annually, usually going to the market himself and taking charge of the sales. He raises large quantities of corn and hay, all of which is fed out on the farm, thus keeping the soil at its best continually. Politically Mr. Bellmyer is a Republican, and is treasurer of the school board of his district; he attends the Lutheran Church. He is unmarried.

WILLIAM POSTEN, of Millville township, Grant county, Wis., has an excellent record as a soldier in the war for the Union, taking part in many of the most famous engagements in which the Army of the Potomac participated. He enlisted Oct. 13, 1861, in Company D, 51st Penn. V. I., and was in active service until mustered out on July 27, 1865. His service included the disastrous battle of Fredericksburg, and the operations of the 9th Corps under Burnside in the Shenandoah Valley. He fought with his regiment in the Wilderness, at Spottsylvania, and Cold Harbor, and during the siege of Petersburg his command formed a part of the troops who charged the Confederate works, following the famous mine explosion. As is well known their efforts proved disastrous to the Union army, owing to the lack of support to the attacking force. Mr. Posten took part in the charge on the Confederate works in front of Petersburg, on April 2, 1865, which resulted in the capture of the outer works, and the rapid flight of Lee's army and Jefferson Davis from Petersburg and Richmond, and with his regiment followed Lee to the end at Appomattox.

Mr. Posten was born in Pennsylvania, Nov. 9, 1844, a son of Elihu and Elizabeth (Arlingburg) Posten, also natives of the Keystone State, where the father's death occurred. Subsequently the mother came to Wisconsin and died in Crawford county. This worthy couple were the parents of twelve children, but only three are living at this writing in 1901, while William was the only one in the army during the Civil war.

When hostilities ceased, Mr. Posten returned to Pennsylvania, and in the spring of 1866 came to Wisconsin, but a year later returned to his native State, where he continued to make his home two years. Since then he has resided uninterruptedly in Grant county, Wis. He was married, Feb. 22, 1873, to Miss Nettie Foster, who was born in Millville township, in 1853, a daughter of Simon R. Foster, and they have become the parents of nine children, four sons and five daughters. Fraternally Mr. Posten is an honored member of the G. A. R. Post No. 134, and is one of the highly esteemed citizens of his community.

REV. J. P. CROKE has been the esteemed and honored pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, at Gratiot, Lafayette county, since 1888. The church edifice at this place is the result of the consecrated labors of the Rev. John T. Kinsella, who was then the resident pastor at Shullsburg, a brother of the Rev. James F. Kinsella, and who died at Franklin, Milwaukee Co., Wis., March 4, 1879.

The first resident pastor in Gratiot was the Rev. W. Bernard, who came in 1873, and remained about three years. He was succeeded by the Rev. J. Tiernan, who was pastor from 1876 to 1880. The Rev. R. S. Tucker, his successor, died here in May, 1886. Rev. R. T. Smith followed him, and had charge of the church until 1888, when he became a professor in St. Francis' Seminary, and the present incumbent was appointed to the pastorate.

St. Joseph's Church is one of the strongest in southwestern Wisconsin, as its parish includes over one hundred families strongly devoted to the church and its admirable pastor.

Father Croke also attends a mission church at South Wayne that numbers about twenty earnest and devoted families.

Father Croke is a native of Wisconsin, born in 1858, a son of Daniel Croke, who settled in Milwaukee about 1849, making that city the home of himself and his wife as long as they both lived. Of their three children, one son is deceased, and the only daughter, Mary C., makes her home with our subject. Father Croke was educated in the Milwaukee schools and at St. Francis Seminary, which institution he entered in 1880. He was raised to the priesthood June 24, 1887, his only other work before his advent in Gratiot having been at Shullsburg, where he ministered to the congregation while the regular pastor visited his native country, Ireland.

CHRISTOPHER ANDERSON belongs to the great army of hardy men and industrious toilers, the contribution of Norway to the making of Wisconsin, and his earnest nature, patient and persistent labor, unswerving honesty and genuine manhood indicate the best strain of the old Norse blood. Mr. Anderson has long resided in the town of York, Green county, but was born in Norway, near Christiania, Nov. 10, 1844. His home is on section 9, in the town of York, about five miles east of York, where he has made a creditable place for himself in the public esteem, both as a man and a farmer.

Anders Christopherson and his wife, Bertha, the parents of Christopher Anderson, came from Norway to America in 1851, settling first in Dane county, Wis., and then buying a farm in the town of York three years later. They were the parents of four children: (1) L. M., who married Rhoda Halverson, was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, enlisting in the 46th Wis. V. I. early in 1865. He was a farmer, and for some twenty years was a teacher in the Dane county schools, making a fine reputation for himself as an enlightened and intelligent citizen. His death occurred in 1898. (2) Christopher. (3) John C. is unmarried, and lives in Minnesota. (4) Caroline Maria is the wife of Hans Carlson, of Lafayette county, Wisconsin.

Anders Christopherson was born in 1808, and died in 1883. His wife was born in 1822, and died in 1871. Both were buried in the old Norwegian cemetery in the town of York, and are remembered as honorable and upright people, with kindly hearts and neighborly spirit.

Christopher Anderson was married to Miss Mary Lee, a daughter of Ole H. Lee, Nov. 22, 1871. Mrs. Anderson was born July 28, 1853, and has become the mother of the following children: (1) Andrew B., born Sept. 10, 1872, remains on the home place; (2) Annie B., born Dec. 6, 1874, died unmarried; (3) Martha O., born Oct. 29, 1877, is the wife of Anton Lien, a thrifty young farmer of the town of York; (4) Clara Josephine, born Jan. 20, 1882, is at home unmarried; she is a bright young woman, and an accomplished musician, having graduated from the Dixon (Ill.) College of Music, and is a teacher with bright prospects; (5) Lina S., born March 3, 1888, is the youngest of the family.

Mr. Anderson had his education in the public schools, and early determined to be a farmer. At the present time he owns a fine place of some 180 acres, with a good dwelling house and ample farm buildings. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, of York, with the organization of which he was closely associated. In town affairs he has always been greatly interested, taking an active part in everything that looked to the public good. On the town board his services were valuable, and for thirteen years he has been a school director. All his life Mr. Anderson has been a hard working and painstaking man, and is engaged in general farming and dairying, milking about twenty cows, proving by his useful life and successful management the truth of the statement already made that he is one of the most estimable and leading citizens of the town.

Of the people who were living in York at the time of the coming of Mr. Anderson in 1854, there are very few now to be found here. In the intervening years a wilderness has been converted into a populous and highly cultivated section, and in this transformation the Andersons have played an important part.

MARTIN LARSON, one of the respected farmer citizens of Moscow township, Iowa county, where he has passed the greater part of his life, was born in Norway April 19, 1844, a son of Lars and Bertha Christopherson, and was about nine years of age when his parents brought their family to America. Their first location was in the town of Argyle, Lafayette Co., Wis., whence they removed to Iowa county, settling on the farm now owned and cultivated by our subject. This was the family homestead for a number of years, the parents finally removing to Dakota, where they ended their days, the father dying in September, 1884, and the mother surviving until April, 1893. Twelve children were born to them, six of whom died in childhood, the others all attaining maturity. One son, Christopher, enlisted in August, 1863, in the 33d Wis. V. I., and died Nov. 9, 1864, while in the service. Among our subject's most valued possessions is a bundle of letters written him by this brother while away in the army, recording his experiences, pleasant and unpleasant, the hardships, privations and sufferings he endured in the service, and other matters now especially interesting.

Martin Larson grew up on the paternal farm, receiving such education as the local public schools afforded. On Feb. 14, 1865, he enlisted in Company C, 50th Wis. V. I., which was commanded by Col. John G. Clark, of Lancaster, and served with the command until he received an honorable discharge. The 50th rendezvoused at Madison, Wis., and went thence to St. Louis, Mo., after some experiences along the Mississippi river receiving orders to proceed to Jefferson City, Mo. They were next stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., whence they were ordered to Lawrence, that State, a place made famous earlier in the war by the brutal massacre of its inhabitants by the noted guerrilla, Quantrell, and his forces. From Lawrence they went to Fort Rice, Dak., to keep the Indians in check and use force to subdue them, if necessary, and they left that place for home May 21, 1866, after fifteen months of continuous service. They were discharged at Madison June 18, following, our subject returning to his home in the town of Moscow. He has since carried on agricultural pursuits, and his life has been a successful one from something more than a financial standpoint, for, while gaining a competency for his declining days, he has, by his industry and honorable methods, won the high esteem and good-will of all who know him. His health has not been particularly robust since the war, but he has by good management accomplished as much as many who have had no such drawback.

In May, 1867, Mr. Larson was united in marriage with Miss Caroline Larson, and their family consists of eight children, three sons and five daughters: Emma, born June 8, 1870, married Chris. Sorum, a farmer at Yellowstone, Wis.; Sam, born April 30, 1872, married Emma Hanson, and is engaged in farming at Hollandale, Iowa Co., Wis.; Belle, born Aug. 8, 1874, married Joseph Watrud, a merchant of Blanchardville, Wis.; Laura, born Dec. 6, 1876, married David Peterson, a farmer at Perry, Dane Co., Wis.; Charles M., born Oct. 30, 1879, is a photographer at Hollandale; Mary, born March 8, 1882, married Peter Jackson, a farmer at Hollandale; John, born June 18, 1884, is at home; and Clara, born Aug. 21, 1890, is also at home. The entire family are members of the Lutheran Church. Socially Mr. Larson is an honored member of G. A. R. Post No. 224, at Blanchardville. He has a highly prized memento of his service, a Bible given him by Rev. Edward Morris, chaplain of the regiment, and bearing the date of presentation—May 21, 1866, the day the command left Fort Rice.

JOHN A. MEACHAM, a prominent retired farmer residing on his fine farm two and one-half miles south of Browntown, Green county, on the Browntown and Martintown public road, is a representative of an old New England family of Scottish descent, the first of the family having emigrated from Scotland to New England over two hundred years ago.

Lyman Meacham, grandfather of John A. was a native of New York State, and was killed by falling down the hatchway of a steamboat, on Lake Erie. He married a Miss Goodspeed, also a native of York State, and became the father of thirteen children.

Hosea Meacham, son of Lyman, was born Jan. 9, 1809, and died in Cadiz township, Green county, Wis., April 11, 1890, an honored and esteemed citizen of the community. His wife, Mary (Nichols), whom he wedded about 1829, was born in 1811, and died in 1886. For over fifty years they were constant followers of the teachings of the Methodist Church, and for over half a century of married life dwelt happily together, beloved by their friends and their family of eight children, the latter being as follows: Lyman R., a retired farmer of Clark county, Wis.; Cordelia, wife of Reuben Burrington, of Browntown; William R., who died at Fort Jackson, while serving in the Civil war in Battery D, 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery; Fannie B., wife of Jacob Deitz, of Monroe, Wis.; Horace, of Clark county, Wis.; Walter W., a farmer and teacher of Rock county; John A., subject of this sketch; and Helen, who died in infancy.

John A. Meacham was born in Crawford county, Penn., May 20, 1841, and was reared to manhood in New York State, his parents having returned to their native State soon after his birth. In 1857 he came to Wisconsin and for fourteen terms was engaged in teaching—ten in his home district. Farming has always been looked upon as his occupation, and he has won for himself from the native forest a fine farm of 200 acres that will bear comparison with any other in the township. It is well fitted with all modern improvements, good buildings, etc., all the result of his own taste and labor. During the Civil war he was a volunteer in Company M, 4th Wis. Vol. Cav., enlisting in February, 1864, and serving in the Army of the Gulf until the close of hostilities.

On Aug. 1, 1867, Mr. Meacham was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Robb, who was born Feb. 25, 1843, in Ohio, a daughter of Andrew and Helen (Richel) Robb, and five children have been born of this union, namely: Frank A., born Feb. 27, 1869, died in infancy; Ed. L., born July 22, 1870, is at home; Nellie E., born Jan. 2, 1874, married Jacob Huffman, and died in 1899, leaving an infant son; John Arthur, born Nov. 4, 1876, married Mabel Ullom, of Cadiz township; and Mary Alta, born Nov. 25, 1880, is the wife of Andrew Meythaler, Jr. Mrs. Meacham was brought by her parents to Wisconsin about 1851. In politics Mr. Meacham is a staunch Republican, and he has held a number of town offices, among them those of chairman of the township board, for four years; town clerk, for twenty years; treasurer; and school director for many terms. Socially he has been a member of the I. O. O. F., at Browntown, Lodge No. 275, for many years, and is also identified with Smith Lodge, No. 31, F. & A. M., of Monroe, Wisconsin.

JOSEPH RICHARDSON (deceased), late a farmer of Benton township, Lafayette county, with a period of residence dating back to pioneer days, was a native of County Durham, England, where he grew to manhood and married. In 1841 he bade farewell to familiar scenes at home, and, boarding a sailing vessel, started out in quest of home and fortune in the New World. He crossed the Atlantic, landing at New Orleans, and then by way of the Mississippi river reached Dubuque, Iowa, thence to New Diggings township, Lafayette Co., Wis., where he engaged in mining for a short time. After a while he purchased a tract of government land on the line between New Diggings and Benton townships, and passed the rest of his life clearing and improving this farm. He erected good buildings and made of it one of the desirable homes along the river. His death occurred in 1872, and was greatly mourned not only in his family but by the entire community. He was a man of sterling integrity and honorable dealings, of great wisdom in counsel, and of great and unswerving fidelity to duty. In politics he always voted the Republican ticket.

His wife, whom he married in England, was, in her maidenhood, Miss Elizabeth Watters, and she was born in Yorkshire, England, the daughter of William Watters, who died in England. Her mother came to Wisconsin and made her home with her daughter until her death some years ago. A large family of children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Richardson: (1) John, born before the removal of the family to the New World, now resides in Nebraska. (2) Mathew, also born in England, married Mary A. Craig, and now lives in Greene county, Iowa. (3) Ann, born in New Diggings, married John Coates, of Lafayette county, and lived in Benton until her death. She left one daughter, Emma, now Mrs. Leonard Penniston. (4) Mark is married and lives in New Diggings. (5) Luke married Mary Lethlane, of Jo Daviess county, Ill., and now lives in Nebraska. He has a family of four children, Ben, Joseph, Angeline and Meda. (6) Joseph is married and lives on his farm near Galena, Ill. He has four children, Nora, Hattie, Annie and Ida M. (7) Sarah is now the wife of Thomas Coulthard, and resided at White Oak Springs until his death. She has eight children, Cora (now Mrs. John Seater, of White Oak Springs), Annie, Barbara, Jennie, Rev. Wesley, Webster, Bessie and Mabel. (8) Elizabeth married Henry Hall, of Lafayette county, and has six children, Joseph, Henry, Everett, Vinnie, Roy and Robert. (9) Barbara wedded Sidney Sedgwick, of Galena, Ill., and has seven children, Benjamin, Flora, George, Barbara, Reuben, Percy and Russell. (10) George died in early manhood. (11) William married Miss Lizzie Curwin, of Benton, and moved to Dakota, where she died, leaving three children, Annie, Maud and Joseph. (12) Thomas married Miss Louisa Hawkins, of Benton, in which town they reside on his farm. They have seven children, Thomas, Benjamin, Joseph, Willard, Lewis, Edmund and Reuben. (13) Grace L. was educated in the home district schools and later in the Darlington high school. She now has charge of the home and is giving her mother the tender care her advancing years require, and is greatly beloved in the community. (14) Benjamin was educated in the high school at Darlington, and is now manager of the old homestead.

In their religious belief the family have been raised in the faith of the Church of England, and have led Christian lives, liberally supporting church work. Mrs. Richardson has ever been one of the highly esteemed ladies of the community, and many are the tales told of her kindness in times of illness, and of her ready sympathy toward the afflicted and distressed.

ADOLPH PRUSSING. This gentleman, who spent his early manhood in active business, mainly in agricultural pursuits, is now living a retired life in Platteville. A man of great energy and more than ordinary business capacity, his success in life is largely due to his own efforts, and to the sound judgment which has enabled him to make wise investments and take good advantage of his resources.

Mr. Prussing was born in Holstein, Germany, Feb. 28, 1845, and there spent the first fourteen years of his life. In 1859 he came to the United States with his parents, J. and Catherine (Nipp) Prussing, also natives of Holstein. They took passage on a steamer at Hamburg, and after a voyage of twenty-one days landed in New York, whence they proceeded at once to Galena, Ill., and from there to Grant county, Wis. In his native land the father had followed blacksmithing and farming, and purchasing a farm in Platteville township he devoted the remainder of his life to agricultural pursuits. He died in Lafayette county in 1875, and his wife passed away at the same place in 1893. Both were earnest members of the Lutheran Church. Of their three children Adolph is the oldest; William, a farmer by occupation, died in Platteville township, in 1889, leaving a widow who now resides on Water street in Platteville; Lena is the wife of T. W. Schroeder, of Elk Grove, Lafayette Co., Wisconsin.

Adolph Prussing was educated principally in the schools of his native land, but also attended school in Platteville for a time. Throughout his active business life he followed the occupation of farming with marked success, and in 1868 purchased an improved farm of eighty acres in Elk Grove township, Lafayette county, to which he added from time to time until he now owns 320 acres of valuable and productive land, which he has placed under excellent cultivation. He also has 160 acres in Belmont township. In connection with general farming he also followed stock raising, and in that branch of his business also prospered. In 1894 he moved to Platteville, and has since lived a retired life, enjoying the fruits of former toil.

In Lafayette county Mr. Prussing was married, in 1866, to Miss Lena Kay, also a native of Holstein, Germany, and a daughter of Klaus and Lucy (Nipp) Kay, who came from that country to America in 1857 and located in Lafayette county, Wis., where the father died March 11, 1897, the mother December 13, 1866. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Prussing are Lutherans, and in politics he is an ardent supporter of the Democratic party, who takes an active interest in public affairs, having efficiently served as a member of the town board while a resident of Elk Grove township. He has become one of the leading citizens of Platteville, and is widely and favorably known throughout this section of the State.

REV. J. A. E. NAESS, Evangelical Lutheran minister, Boscobel, Grant county, Wisconsin.

GUSTAV OLSON was born near the city of Christiania, Norway, March 13, 1853, a son of Ole Olson, who came to America in 1872. He has risen to prominence in the agricultural circles of the town of York, Green county, where he owns a fine farm, and is very prosperous. His home is three miles east of Blanchardville, and twenty miles northwest of Monroe, on section 29. Recently he has purchased a tract of bottom land, consisting of twenty-two acres, paying for it $75 an acre, and has refused $50 an acre for his entire farm. Mr. Olson arrived in Green county in 1870, working for wages for two years, and then went to Clear Lake, Iowa, but on account of the hard times returned to Wisconsin and bought a small place of forty acres, but soon sold this, and for two years rented a farm in the town of Moscow, Iowa county. He then bought a place of 100 acres; this again was sold, and the proceeds invested in his present home.

On Sept. 11, 1876, Mr. Olson was married to Miss Bertha Anderson, who was born in Norway April 8, 1855, a daughter of Christian Anderson, a noted clockmaker of Norway, who made the clock in the Main street tower in Christiania, and she accompanied her parents on their removal to Green county in 1869. To this marriage have come the following children: (1) Clara H., born Nov. 19, 1877, is the wife of Lewis Wahl, of the town of York; (2) Oscar, born July 4, 1880, married Lena Peterson, of York; (3) Alfred, born June 16, 1882, is at home; (4) Ida Helena, born Jan. 5, 1885, is the wife of Carl Skindingsrud (both born twins), of the town of York; (5) Ella O., born Jan. 29, 1886; (6) Clarence, born May 23, 1888; (7) Bennie, born March 15, 1890; (8) Nellie, born April 22, 1893; (9) Mary, born Sept. 18, 1896; (10) Lydia, born Aug. 26, 1899. Two children not mentioned above died in infancy. The children are bright and intelligent, most of them natural musicians. Mr. Olson has two sisters now living: Johannah (the wife of Gilbert Paulson), and Caroline (the wife of Christian Anderson), both living in South Dakota. Mrs. Olson has a brother and two sisters: Alfred (who lives near Blanchardville), Helena (the wife of Ole Thompson), and Andrenna (the wife of Knudt Pederson).

Mr. Olson came to this country a very poor boy, but his success in this country illustrates the possibilities of life in this country to the children of hopeless old world conditions. The farm which he owns and cultivates is one of the best in this part of the State. On it is a handsome three-story dwelling house and two barns, and it is supplied with every convenience for profitable and progressive agriculture. It has one orchard containing 200 apple trees. Mr. Olson has always done his own work, even to shoeing his horses, and Mrs. Olson has proven herself a most valuable helpmeet in the accumulation of this world's goods, as she has done all her family sewing, made all her own carpets, and, with the exception of nine weeks during illness, has never been obliged to hire assistance. Their competence is the result of their united effort, and is a source of just pride to them. At the present time Mr. Olson devotes his attention not only to general farming and stock raising but to dairying on an extensive scale, being a partner in a cheese factory located on his farm, for which he furnishes daily the milk of forty-five cows.

In his politics our subject is a staunch Republican, and both he and his family belong to the Lutheran Church.

MRS. LEVINIA GLASSON, the estimable and popular proprietor of the "Hotel Glasson," an hostelry known throughout the southern part of Wisconsin as being one of the best and most attractive of the excellent houses of entertainment to be found at Belmont, Lafayette county, was born in Cornwall, England, in September, 1852.

Rev. William and Mary A. Harris, her parents, were both born and reared in her native country, and came to this country the year of her birth, locating near Mineral Point, Wis., where they lived two years. In 1854 Mr. Harris was called to a church in Iowa county, Wis., where he was in the active pastorate twenty-seven years, dying while still "in the harness," in 1881. His devoted wife survived until 1892, and reached the age of seventy-seven. Mr. Harris was well educated in his native country, and commanded the personal esteem and affection of the large congregation to which he ministered for that long period. His family consisted of eight children: Mary, the eldest, born in England, is now the wife of William Tremain, of Cobb, Wis., and has four children, John, William, Francis and Charles. Mariah, born in England, is the wife of Johnston Rule, of Linden, Iowa Co., Wis., and has four children, Emilv, Thomas, Clara and Rilla. Thomas, born in England, married Caroline Rule, and now resides in Mason City, Iowa; he is the father of five children, Minnie, Thomas, Millie, Clara and Caroline. Betsey, born in England, married George Stephens, and resides at Cleghorn, Iowa; they have four children, Grant, Elmer, Willie and Frederick. Jane, born in England, married James Larch, and lives in Dane county, Wis.; they have one, son, Frank. Levinia is the sixth in the family. Ellen, born at Mineral Point, Wis., resides with her sister, Mary, at Cobb, Wis. Henry, born in Grant county, married Miss Mary K. Williams, of Montfort, and is now a farmer in Iowa county; they have three children, Lela, Irvin and Ray.

Mrs. Glasson received her education mainly in the public schools in Iowa county, and remained under her parents' care until her marriage with John Glasson, in 1866. His parents, John and Mary Glasson, came from England and settled in Iowa county, Wis., at an early day. Mr. Glasson was a loyal soldier of the Union during the Civil war, serving as a member of the 11th Wis. V. I., and making a good record. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Glasson settled in Iowa county, where he engaged as a barber, following that vocation until 1872, in which year they moved to Belmont. Mr. Glasson died in 1878. Their only son, Linus, born in 1872, is now an active and energetic young business man, and is employed at the hotel, with his mother. He received a fair education, but on account of ill health was compelled to leave school early. Mrs. Glasson lost her house in 1883 by fire, a dire disaster, which left her without means and without a home. By perseverance, however, she has rebuilt, and is now on the high road to a competence. She has connected with her restaurant a good stock of confections and groceries, and some time ago she opened her home as a boarding house and hotel. From the start this proved a most successful move, and our subject has a good patronage, and is doing well. She is a woman of energy, a good business woman, and has those qualities that command success. Mrs. Glasson belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church, and is respected for her many virtues, being a good friend and kindly neighbor.

JAMES F. CARNs (deceased), in his day one of the most esteemed residents of Grant county, was born in Ohio, in November, 1811, and was a son of Abram and Catherine Carns, both of whom were born in Ireland, and came to this country at a very early day. They moved late to Illinois, where their last days were passed.

In 1849 Mr. Carns came to the State of Wisconsin, with the intention of mining, located first at Jamestown, and later at the Fairplay mines, remaining there a number of years. While a resident of this place he married, in 1851, Miss Ann Litton, daughter of Smith and Sarah (Gilland) Litton, of Jacksonville, Ill., where they were very prominent residents. For some time Mr. Litton was mayor of Jacksonville, and he was a man widely known and well remembered. His birth took place in Tennessee, in 1810, and he died in 1848. Mrs. Litton was born in Kentucky in 1811, and passed away in 1884. They reared four sons: Burton died in Illinois; James resided in Minneapolis, where he died some years ago; Albert resides in Georgetown, Grant Co., Wis., with his sister (in 1861 he became a volunteer in the 61st Ill. V. I., and served faithfully until the close of the war, losing his health in the service of his country); Charles is a resident of Wood county, Kans., where he lives with his family. Mrs. Carns was the only daughter.

Mrs. Ann (Litton) Carns was born at Jacksonville, Ill., Aug. 12, 1833, and received a superior education in the excellent schools of Jacksonville, becoming a teacher in the public schools for a short time. Her marriage with Mr. Carns took place in Wisconsin, but they returned to Jacksonville, where they lived during the years of the Civil war. Returning to Fairplay, Wis., Mr. Carns followed his occupation of lead and zinc mining. In 1872 he purchased a farm in Smelser township, removed his family to it, and there his death took place in May, 1884. While a resident on the farm he made many general improvements, erected new barns, fences, etc., and rendered the place most comfortable and attractive. Mr. Carns was well known in this section as an honest and upright man, who could count every neighbor a friend. His family of wife and children still survive him: (1) Burton was born in 1856, grew to manhood, engaged in agricultural pursuits, married Samantha Vannetta, and still resides on his farm, with four children, Lester, Roy, Harry and Lennis. (2) Edward, born in Wisconsin in 1858, married Glenn Vannetta, resides on his farm in Smelser, and has two children, Gladys and the baby. (3) Ella, born in Illinois, in 1860, married Rudolph Luce, who was principal of the Belmont schools at the time of her death, in 1892.

She left five children, Elsie, B. W., Frankie, Roscoe and James, these children all making their home with their grandmother, except Roscoe, who resides with his uncle Edward. (4) Lizzie, born in Wisconsin in 1863, is a graduate of the normal school at Platteville, and for eight years was a successful teacher in Grant county, four terms being in Big Patch. She is now the wife of George Reige, of Big Patch, and has three children, Maud, Guy and Mildred. (5) Frank, born in 1868, was well educated in the Platteville Normal School, and for some time was manager of the home farm and was also a teacher in the district school, teaching some five years in Smelser and Georgetown. Grant county numbers no brighter young man among her many youths. In various ways he comes to the front when some one of brains is needed. His services were required for census enumerator, in 1900, and the duties were performed with accuracy and energy. With his mother he retains the home farm in Smelser township, but with her resides in Georgetown. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Georgetown lodge, and also of the Modern Woodmen. (6) Bertha, born in December, 1875, was a student at the Platteville Normal School, where she was fitted for the position she now holds as teacher in the graded schools of Belmont, Lafayette county; for several years she was an acceptable teacher in the high schools of Benton, being a cultured and intellectual young lady. In politics Mr. Carns was a stanch Republican and his sons follow the example of their excellent father. Mrs. Carns was carefully reared in the doctrines of the Christian Church and there she still holds her membership, although her children are of various denominations. Mr. and Mrs. Carns well represent the best element of Grant county's pioneers. The family as a whole is a prominent one, and no history of this part of the State would be complete without a record of it.

JOHN C. MARTIN, one of the prosperous business men of Mineral Point, Iowa county, and who as an advocate of temperance has a reputation that extends throughout the country, is a native of Scotland, born in Aberdeenshire in 1845, a son of William and Mary (Lumsden) Martin, also natives of that country.

The family sailed from Glasgow, Scotland, in 1852, and after a voyage of seven weeks and four days landed at New York, whence they proceeded to Waukesha county, Wis. After remaining there two years they removed to Rock county, Wis., and in 1855 to Waldwick township, Iowa county. Here the father opened up a farm and remained for a number of years, the mother dying on that place in 1860. The father survived her until 1886, and died in Lafayette county. To them were born children as follows: Jane is now Mrs. Joseph Van Matie, of Lafayette county. William enlisted at Mineral Point, in 1862, in Company E, 30th Wis. V. I., became second sergeant, later was promoted to captain, serving in the Red River campaign and at Ft. Blakely, and was honorably discharged in March, 1866; he died at Peterson, Iowa, in January, 1895. George F., now a resident of Clayton county, Iowa, was a member of Company D, 40th Wis. V. I., enlisting from the University of Wisconsin. Mary died in Milwaukee in 1871, unmarried. Samuel enlisted at Mineral Point in Company E, 30th Wis. V. I., and died Jan. 5, 1863, at Camp Randall. Isabelle died in childhood. John C. is our subject. James P. enlisted in Milwaukee, in 1864, when but seventeen, in Company H, Heavy Artillery; he now resides near Sutherland, Iowa. Franklin and Alex L. also reside near Sutherland, Iowa. Abram W. died in Peterson, Iowa, Aug. 12, 1897.

John C. Martin, though but ten years of age when he came to Iowa county, began work in the lumber woods at Mineral Point, driving an ox-team. Later he worked by the month, and then entered the service of his country. After the war was over Mr. Martin settled in Waldwick township, where he purchased a fine farm of 120 acres and improved it, in the meanwhile teaching school and running a threshing machine. Finally he sold his farm and purchased another, of 134 acres, in Mineral Point township, upon which he erected a comfortable residence, barn and other outbuildings. This, too, he sold, and bought a third, on the line of Iowa and Lafayette counties, comprising 265 acres, of which 105 acres are in Lafayette county. This place is still owned by Mr. Martin, although in 1892 he moved to Mineral Point and embarked in the milling business, operating a large feedmill, and building up a flourishing trade, which is constantly increasing.

In 1864 Mr. Martin enlisted in Company

H, 1st Heavy Artillery, for one year, or during the war, being mustered in at Madison, Wis., and was on garrison duty at Washington, D. C. He was mustered out at Alexandria, Va., and honorably discharged at Milwaukee in 1865.

In 1869 Mr. Martin was married to Mary E. Schellinger, who was born in Mineral Point township in November, 1842, a daughter of Henry and Martha (Bigelow) Schellinger, natives of Mercer county, Penn., and New York, respectively. The father came to Kaskaskia, Ill., and in 1835 removed to Iowa county, Wis. After settling at Mineral Point Mr. Schellinger married, his wife having been a resident of Mineral Point from the time she was eight years of age. There he opened up a farm, and he died in Platteville in 1872, his widow surviving until November, 1896. The Schellinger family was of Dutch descent, and inherited the traits of economy and industry so common to that nation. To Mr. and Mrs. Schellinger were born twelve children: Augustine, now Mrs. John Graham, of Eureka, Kans.; Mary E., Mrs. Martin; Silas H., a resident of Boulder, Colo.; George, of Pierre, S. Dak., assistant State superintendent of schools; Charles L., of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Abbie A., Mrs. Robert Mass, of Kansas City; Clara L., Mrs. W. N. Cooley, of Yankton, S. Dak.; Eunice, principal of a public school at La Crosse, Wis.; Edith, Mrs. William Pierce; and three who died in infancy. Nine children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Martin: Walter S. (married), who lives on the farm; Katie M., Mrs. Albert Johnson, of Lafayette county; Robert B. (married), an evangelist of Rich Hill, Mo.; Agnes C., a teacher in the public schools; Nellie J., attending school; John C.; William Henry; Hattie G.; and Mary Anna.

Mr. Martin is an ardent Prohibitionist in politics, was candidate for State treasurer on that ticket, and was also mentioned very favorably for governor. During the campaign he canvassed the State, making one hundred speeches in the interests of his party, held tent meetings, and was a delegate to the W. C. T. U. convention at Chicago. Mr. Martin has held the office of supervisor of Mineral Point, and other local positions, and is regarded as one of the leading exponents of his party in the county. In religious matters he takes an active interest in the Primitive M. E. Church, of which he is a member. He has been connected with George H. Legate Post, No. 125, G. A. R., and has been its chaplain for seven years. Fraternally Mr. Martin is a member of the Knights of the Globe, is chief ranger of the Order of Foresters, and has taken an active part in the Grange. Being so widely known, he has made many friends, and by them, and by all who have come in contact with him, he is regarded as a man of great ability, keen grasp of whatever subject is under discussion, and a convincing orator. The good he has accomplished by his untiring efforts cannot be fully estimated, but he is destined to occupy a high place in the future workings of his party.

• ELIJAH P. WIXOM, one of the wealthiest farmers and largest land owners of southern Wisconsin, has a fine home at No. 153 Milton avenue, Janesville, Rock county, where he dwells amid the comforts that rightfully attend the closing years of such a singularly useful and successful career as his has been.

Mr. Wixom was born in Putnam county, N. Y., Feb. 15, 1835, a son of Robert and Charity Maria (Barrett) Wixom, both of whom were born in that State. They were the parents of three sons and six daughters, five of whom are now living: Elijah P.; Julia Ann, widow of Henry Kidder, of Fulton township; Phebe, widow of David Kelly, of Milton Junction, Wis.; Deborah, wife of J. W. Austin, of Janesville; and Benjamin D., of Fulton township. Another brother, Robert Wixom, enlisted in Company B, 36th Wis. V. I., for service in the Civil war, and twelve days after he had gone to the front was wounded and taken prisoner. He was incarcerated in the prison at Richmond, where he died. The father was a cattle driver when a boy, following that work eleven years. In mature life he was a farmer, and combined with the cultivation of the soil the trades of carpenter and millwright. He is remembered as a natural mechanic and a genius with tools. Coming West to Wisconsin about 1850, he located in the town of Fulton, Rock county, where he bought a tract of eighty acres, and after a time as much more. He improved this farm, and made it one of the most valuable places in that part of the county, and, becoming greatly interested in stock culture, devoted more and more attention to that as the years went by until stock raising was the main branch of his agricultural operations. He died in 1868, at the age of fifty-seven. His wife survived him many years, and died in 1894, aged eighty years. They were both Baptists. He was justice of the peace many years while in the East, and served in that position after coming into Rock county. He took much interest in school matters, and was a useful citizen.

Elijah Wixom, our subject's grandfather, was a native of New York, of Holland-Dutch descent, and was a farmer by occupation. He served in the American army during the war of 1812, as a private. He died in middle life. He had seventeen children, by two marriages. His father was a Revolutionary soldier. Josephus Barrett, the maternal grandfather of E. P. Wixom, was a native of New York, of English and Irish descent, and was a lifelong farmer. He was the father of twelve children, and lived to be eighty years of age.

Elijah P. Wixom was fifteen years old when he came with his parents to Rock county. He was given the usual amount of education for the times, obtained principally at the neighboring district school, and applied himself to the work of the farm. He has always followed farming and stock raising, from an early age, and when a boy was accustomed to ship poultry to New York. He has always displayed the instincts of a natural born trader. He made his home with his parents until he came of age, when he bought a 160-acre farm in Fulton township, in partnership with his brother Benjamin. They bought it entirely on credit, and paid for it in two years. Elijah sold his interest to his brother as soon as the title was cleared, and purchased for himself a farm of 100 acres in the same township. This was his home for thirty years, and it has been added to from time to time until he now owns about 600 acres of land in Fulton and Janesville townships. Besides this tract he owns 900 acres in Rock county, and 100 in Dane county, his entire real-estate holdings in southern Wisconsin thus aggregating more than 1,600 acres, the agricultural possibilities of this vast body of land being fully utilized. In 1801 Mr. Wixom moved into the city of Janesville, and built one of the finest residences to be seen in that center of fine homes, and here he has lived to the present time. He has about 150 head of fine cattle upon his place, and many horses. He rents his farms on shares, but takes a close interest in their management, and is active in conserving his best interests.

On Nov. 5, 1863, Mr. Wixom married Miss Clara M. Hurd, daughter of Silas and Cynthia (Cowan) Hurd, natives of New York, who came to Wisconsin in 1836, and located in the town of Fulton, Rock county, where they died. They were interred in the cemetery at Edgerton. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wixom: Claron W., Ella May and Silas H. Ella May married James R. Lamb, and has her home in Janesville; they have one son, Stewart James. Silas H. is attending the high school. Mr. and Mrs. Wixom attend the Unitarian Church. He is a member of several fraternal orders, uniting with Western Star Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M.; the Knights of Pythias; and the Patrons of Husbandry. He was formerly a Republican, but now acts with the Democratic party. He has held various important local offices, was supervisor of Fulton township six years, and has been school clerk and director many years.

MRS. JOHN RICHARDS. One of the highly esteemed and beloved residents of Benton township, Lafayette county, widely known for her life of Christian works and beautiful character, is Mrs. John Richards, who was born in Cornwall, England, March 11, 1820, a worthy daughter of Richard and Ann Eustice, both of whom died in their native country. She was one of five children, all of whom have passed away. Her only brother, Richard, was a resident of Hazel Green, where he followed mining until his death in October, 1900. Mrs. Richards grew to womanhood in England, becoming a type of the fair daughters of that land, and in 1842 married John Richards, who was born in Cornwall in 1815. After marriage the young couple resided in England some years, but in 1845 decided to cross the water to seek a home in America. Their first location was in Missouri, but later they removed to Hazel Green, in Grant county, where our subject with three children remained, when Mr. Richards crossed the Plains in 1849 to the gold fields of California. After two years of mining along the Pacific coast Mr. Richards returned and engaged in lead mining until 1854, at which time he purchased a farm at Meeker's Grove, Lafayette county, and there the family resided at the time of the lamented death of Mr. Richards, in January, 1880. When he was called from earth the community lost one of its leading citizens. His acquaintance was large and, as he was a man of great intelligence, he was always prominently identified with public affairs, being politically connected with the Republican party.

Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Richards: Elizabeth, who was born in England, married Henry Yager, of Grundy county, Iowa, where he died in 1899, leaving his wife and three children,—William, Eva, Kittie, all of Cedar Rapids; Thomas H., born in England, died while crossing the ocean; Christ-anna, born in Hazel Green in 1848, married Thomas Dixon, of Iowa, and they have five children, John, Lewis, Mabel, Hudson and Clare; Mary J., born in Hazel Green, married John Jenkins, of Cuba City, and has four children, Victor, William, Minnie and Lester; William J., born at Meeker's Grove, married Louisa Fervene and they reside with his mother in Meeker's Grove (they have four children, Edith, Alma, Albert and Lorena).

Previous to Mr. Richards' death he purchased the large stone house at Meeker's Grove, in which his wife now resides, having sold the farm. Before coming to America Mrs. Richards united with the Primitive Methodists and has since consistently lived the life of a Christian. Many trials have beset her path, but through all she has kept her way, doing good to all who have come within her influence. Many acts of charity and generosity have taught her neighbors the truth of her professions, and few old residents are more highly esteemed.

WILLIAM T. BRIGGS, one of the representative men of Muscoda, Grant county, can trace back his family history to the very early days of this country. Mr. Briggs was born in Addison county, Vt., April 24, 1823, a son of William and Kasiah (Richardson) Briggs. William Briggs, Sr., was a native of Massachusetts, and the son of Owen Briggs, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, which fact entitles the subject of this sketch to membership in the order of Sons of the Revolution. According to the history of the Briggs family, the grandfather, Owen Briggs, was one of three brothers who emigrated to America prior to the Revolution, and their descendants can be found in great numbers throughout the eastern States.

The father of our subject, William Briggs, Sr., was a soldier in the war of 1812, participating in the battle of Plattsburg, and in another important engagement. His wife was of Scotch ancestry, while the Briggs family originated in England.

Taking with him his wife and four children, in 1831, William Briggs, Sr., migrated to the Western Reserve, in Ohio; in 1845 removed to Mason county, Ill., and about 1850 settled in Eagle, Richland Co., Wis., where this worthy couple passed the remainder of their lives. Mr. Briggs, Sr., was a collier by trade, but during his later years was engaged in farming. Upright and honorable in all his dealings, he gained the hearty respect of his fellow citizens, and he and his wife were consistent members of the Methodist Church, in which Mr. Briggs was a class-leader for nearly half a century. Physically this grand old pioneer was one of the most powerful men of his day, and possessed a constitution of iron, dying at the advanced age of eighty-nine. Of the four children of this worthy couple, three were living in 1900: Maranda, widow of T. R. McClaffin, of Oberlin, Ohio; William T., the subject of this sketch; Daniel, of Eagle, Richland Co., Wis.; and Lucy, deceased, who married Levi Coat, and passed her life in Mason county, Illinois.

William T. Briggs, the immediate subject of this biography, lived at home until twenty-one, then started out in life for himself. In 1855 he removed from Mason county, Ill., to Dane county, Wis., and in 1862 located in Richland county, where he remained until 1883, at which time he came to Muscoda, and has since resided here.

On Oct. 14, 1844, Mr. Briggs was married to Miss Mary Jane Burrington, born Oct. 15, 1828, in Vermont, a daughter of John and Irene Burrington, who removed to the State of New York, and later to Ohio, with their family. Later they migrated to Windsor, Dane Co., Wis., where the parents passed their remaining days. Mrs. Briggs was one of a family of twelve, six sons and six daughters, eleven of whom grew to mature years, but only five survive (1900). namely: Daniel F., Riol and Charles, all of Richland county; Mrs. Briggs, and Kaziah, wife of W. W. Hall, also of Richland county.

Mr and Mrs. Briggs have three children, two sons and a daughter: Marvin, of Muscoda; Willis, of Eagle, Richland county; and Irene, wife of John Mathew, of Richland county. Their grandchildren are nine in number, and it is a remarkable fact that during the fifty-six years Mr. and Mrs. Briggs have been married death has not visited any of their family, not even in the second generation. Contented and happy, knowing that their children and children's children are well and prosperous, and looking back over well-spent lives, Mr. and Mrs. Briggs are slowly descending the hill of life. In religion Mr. Briggs is a Restorationist, while Mrs. Briggs is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Briggs is a Master Mason, having joined the fraternity in 1864, and is as prominent in his lodge as he is in the social and religious life of Muscoda, while Mrs. Briggs is equally esteemed among her circle of friends.

MARTIN KUEHNER, of the town of Potosi, Grant county, is one of the well-known German-American citizens of southwestern Wisconsin, where he has made his home since 1861.

Mr. Kuehner was born in Wittenberg, Germany, May 26, 1825, and grew to manhood in the Fatherland, where he married his first wife. In 1854 he brought his family to America, and located in the State of Ohio, making their home in Pike county, that State, until their removal to Grant county, where, for over forty years, Mr. Kuehner has tilled the soil, and made for himself a home in the New World.

On Jan. 12, 1882, the wife who had accompanied him from Germany, passed to her last rest, leaving her husband and five children, four sons and a daughter, to mourn her demise. In 1883 Mr. Kuehner wedded his present wife, who in her maidenhood was Amelia Koellar. She was a native of Germany, and came to America in 1881. To this union have been born three sons and two daughters, namely: William, Louisa, Adolph, Annie and Leo. They reside in their pleasant home on Mr. Kuehner's fine farm, where they are held in high esteem by their neighbors and friends. Mr. Kuehner owes his present comfortable circumstances entirely to his own industry and good management, and his standing in the business world is that of an honest and upright man, and a thoroughly progressive citizen.

CHRISTOPHER GULSON (deceased) was in his lifetime an active and honored citizen of the town of York, Grant county, coming here in 1852 from his native country, Norway, where he was born Sept. 17, 1817. In 1843 he was married in his native land to Miss Thora Haugen, by whom he had one child, Mary, born Feb. 24, 1845, who accompanied her parents to this country when she was seven years old.

When Mr. Gulson came into Green county he settled on government land, and commenced with but little to aid him beside his strong arm and stout courage. Beginning under the most restricted conditions, and in the greatest poverty, he became, by hard work and unremitting industry, the owner of an extensive and valuable tract of land, consisting of nearly 400 acres in Section 8, about four miles northeast of Blanchardville, with good dwellings and first-class barns. He sustained a fine reputation as a neighbor and business man, and was known to be honest and square in all his dealings. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he was an officer for twenty-five years before his death. In political sentiment he was a Republican.

Mr. Gulson served in the army in his native land, and brought to this country an enlightened and enthusiastic love of liberty. He was highly prized in all the social and domestic relations of life, and was much missed at his death, in 1883. His remains were interred in the old Norwegian cemetery in York. Mrs. Gulson still survives, and is living on the old place, making her home with her daughter, Mary. For the last two years she has been blind. Mary Gulson and Andrew Barger, a native of Norway, were married June 10, 1888, and to them has come one son, Christopher, born April 15, 1889, a bright and promising young lad. Mr. Barger is a Republican in politics, and a Lutheran in religion. He and his wife are engaged in the management of the farm. Mrs. Barger is a hard-working woman, possessed of unusual business qualifications. She belongs to the Lutheran Church, and carries the spirit of her faith into her daily life.

HUGH FLANNERY, a well-known citizen of Avoca, Iowa county, was one of the bravest soldiers of the Civil war, and sad to record, one of its greatest sufferers. His birth took place in County Mayo, Ireland, where his parents died, and he was brought when a child to this country by his brothers and sisters. He resided in Chicago until 1853, and then went to California, there remaining until August, 1859, when he returned to Chicago for more than a year, after which he became a resident of Avoca.

On Sept. 7, 1861, Mr. Flannery enlisted in the 6th Battery, Light Artillery, Wis. Vols., which command rendezvoused at Racine, Wis., and early in March, 1862, left for St. Louis. From there they went to New Madrid, Mo., taking part in the siege of Island No. 10, going from there to Ruggle's Point, and thence to White River, the object in these movements being to disperse the guerrillas who were continually committing depredations in that vicinity. The command, however, was almost immediately recalled to re-enforce the troops at Shiloh, but did not reach that historic field until the famous battle was over. Mr. Flannery took part, with his battery, in the siege of Corinth, the command following the enemy after the evacuation, and then returning to its former position. On Oct. 1, they advanced again on Corinth, and took an active part in the operations at that place, and here, on Oct. 4, Mr. Flannery was severely wounded, this serious accident ending his operations in the field, and very nearly ending his life. He was injured by a bursting shell, one fragment of which struck him on the left side of the face, cutting it severely and destroying the left eye. Another fragment injured badly his left hand, and while thus severely wounded, and endeavoring to rise to his feet, he was struck by a ball in the left hand, receiving also several shots in the right thigh and other portions of the body, including the neck and left side: the ball which produced the latter wound has never yet been taken from his body. That anyone so frightfully wounded could recover seemed impossible; he was removed from the battlefield to the field hospital, where he was given the best treatment available at that time, and a month later was removed, on the cars, to Columbus, Ky., and there was placed on a hospital boat and sent to Keokuk, Iowa, where he remained until March 2, 1863, the date of his honorable discharge. Mr. Flannery had asked for this in order that he could find improved treatment for his severe wounds. Going to Chicago, he placed himself under the medical care of the celebrated Dr. Holmes, and was treated by him for three years, but even the skill of this great oculist did not avail to save the left eye, and it was finally removed in order that the other could be successfully treated. The partial recovery of Mr. Flannery is remarkable, and he must have had a constitution of iron to have endured the strain. For a time he was entirely blind, but he is now able to see slightly with the right eye, and can distinguish large type, with the help of a magnifying glass.

On Dec. 4, 1863, Mr. Flannery was married to Miss Marcella Quinn, a native of his own land, and they have five children living: Mathew J., Hugh F., James S., Mary Elizabeth, and Catherine. Two children died, James Walter, in infancy, and Marcella, at the age of twenty.

WILLIAM WOMACK, farmer, Platteville, Grant county, Wisconsin.

JOHN HARTWIG, Sr., who holds a very prominent place among the older and more successful farmers of Green county, was born in Germany, Feb. 12, 1824, and is a son of John Hartwig. His brother, George, is a retired farmer in Monroe, and of his sisters, one resides in Cincinnati, one in Canada, and one in Germany.

John Hartwig, Sr., whose name introduces this article, remained in the old Fatherland until he reached full age, and in 1850 came to this country. For some fifteen years he was employed as a coal miner near McKeesport, Penn., and in 1866 made his appearance in Wisconsin. That year he bought a farm of 120 acres on section 1, Jordan township, eight miles northwest from Monroe, and here he is found at the present time, but slightly hindered from active work by his advanced years, and still bearing himself with the strength and vigor that we scarcely expect to find in one whose years have passed the allotted three-score and ten.

Mr. Hartwig was married in Germany to Miss Catherine Rabbe, and to this marriage were born nine children, three of whom are now living: Maggie is the wife of Thomas Crow, of Cadiz township, and his sketch appears on another page; George is at home engaged in the active farm work, and is unmarried; and Catherine is at home, keeping house for her father and brother, as the mother died Jan. 15, 1899, at the advanced age of seventy-six years.

Mr. Hartwig is a Democrat, and in religion is a member of the Lutheran Church. His career in this country illustrates the possibilities of life it offers to a poor man, who is willing to work and save. Landing here without a dollar, and, coming from a childhood and youth of extreme privation, he has become, if not wealthy, at least very comfortable in his circumstances. Wealth is a variable term, and in an earlier day the property Mr. Hartwig has amassed would have been regarded as wealth, and, as it is, it lifts him far above all possible want.

It is a quiet, industrious and peaceful life that has been lived by John Hartwig—a life in which he has proved himself an honest man, a devoted husband, a kind father, and a good neighbor. In all these relations he has been tried and not found wanting, and now in the evening of his days, it is a great comfort to him that his industrious and useful life has been lived to such excellent effect. Many are his friends, and his character is above question. At his advanced age he is still strong and vigorous, and though seventy-seven is able to do a fair day's work on the farm, where he is engaged in farming and stock raising, and where he expects to spend the remainder of his days.

WILLIAM H. DENTZLER, one of the prosperous farmers of Liberty, Grant county, and a well-known veteran of the war of the Rebellion, is not an American by birth, but by choice; and, like so many who have sought our shores, he has proven himself a worthy citizen, a faithful soldier and a successful agriculturist.

William H. Dentzler was born in Saxony, Germany, on Feb. 18, 1831, a son of Gotlieb Dentzler. The latter, with his wife and the remainder of his family, came to this country about two years subsequent to the arrival of William H. Dentzler, and they all resided in Philadelphia for several years. The next removal was to Liberty township, Grant county, Wis., where a farm was purchased, the same being now the property of our subject. Here the good father and mother resided until their death, the father passing away at the age of eighty-two, and his wife some ten days prior to his demise, she being eighty-four. Eight children had been born to them, of whom six are still living.

Few people who have not participated in the excitement during the war between the North and South, have any conception of the wild enthusiasm which spread over the country. Men abandoned everything to rush to the defense of their flag, and among them was William H. Dentzler, who had been in America but ten years. Enlisting on June 22, 1862, at the Newhall House (which was afterward burned, causing a loss of many lives, to which disaster our subject was an eye witness), in Milwaukee, he served faithfully until the close of the war, rendering efficient aid to his regiment as baker, he having learned that trade some years prior to enlistment. It was not an easy task to provide so many soldiers with the "staff of life," but although often wearied and almost discouraged, Mr. Dentzler never failed, and his fine bread is still remembered by his comrades-in-arms. The regiment was stationed the greater part of the time at Oswego, N. Y., and was honorably mustered out at the close of the struggle.

During 1864, while on a furlough, occurred the romance of Mr. Dentzler's life, and he married Miss Catherine Field, of New York. Four children have blessed this union: George, Edwin, Louise and William. Mr. Dentzler is an active member of Sam Montith Post, G. A. R., Fennimore, and in political matters adheres to the teachings of the Republican party. Having toiled long and faithfully, Mr. Dentzler is certainly entitled to highest praise, and is a man who enjoys in marked degree the respect of his neighbors and friends.

REV. EUGENE M. MCGINNITY, the scholarly and devoted pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Janesville, Rock county, is now at the very flower of his manly powers; and whether in the pulpit, expounding the Gospel of Life, or by the bedside of the sick and dying, preparing for the flight of the soul to the better world, he is always the faithful priest and consecrated pastor. He commands the respect and holds the love of the entire city, not only for his professional ability, but for the purity and sweetness of his personal character.

Father McGinnity was born in County Monaghan, Ireland, Sept. 1, 1840, a son of Eugene and Alice McGinnity. The family came to this country and settled in Lafayette county, Wis., in 1847. The father was a farmer, and on his arrival in this State purchased a farm, whereon he made his home as long as he lived. He had little mercenary taint in his disposition, and preferred to spend his money on the education of his children rather than to store it in useless accumulations. He gave them all good schooling, and yet when he died left a very fair competency. Both he and his wife passed away in Lafayette county, Wis., where they settled on their arrival in the State. They were the parents of nine children, three of whom died on the voyage across the Atlantic. Of the others, James and Thomas are farmers in Wisconsin; Daniel, twin brother of our subject, was ordained a priest, and died after six years' service as a clergyman (he went to the Rocky mountains in the hope of restoring his health, but without success); Mary married Michael Kierns, of Lafayette county, Wis.; John, the only one born in Wisconsin, is a lumber merchant in Denver, Colorado.

Father McGinnity grew to manhood on the homestead farm, attending the district school, and displaying a deep love of learning. At the age of sixteen he and his twin brother entered St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee, and on Dec. 27, 1863, both were ordained to the priesthood by the Right Rev. Bishop John Martin Henni. The young clergyman, now a notable figure on the streets of Janesville, was sent to take charge of St. Isadore Church, in Manitowoc county, Wis., and one year later was transferred to Darlington, Lafayette county, where he served until 1869. In 1871 he had leave of absence to accompany his brother to the Rocky mountains in search of restored health, and the latter's death was a severe blow to our subject, who cherished him in an almost ideal affection. However, he returned to his work with a brave spirit, and was given charge of the church at Lake Geneva, where he remained for ten months. From there he went to Monroe, where he spent seven years in his Master's work. In 1880 he took charge of his present work, after he had done a great work at Darlington, building houses of worship both there and at Seymour and Wiota. He greatly reduced the debts, and proved himself a wise and careful manager at all places where he has served, and at Janesville he has made a noble record. When he came here the church property had passed into the hands of a non-Catholic under mortgage foreclosure, and many other debts hung over the congregation. The property was redeemed at a cost of $20,000. Several thousand dollars have also been spent in church improvements—an altar put in at a cost of $1,200, the church frescoed, and many other needed improvements made. Father McGinnity has built a parsonage at a cost of $6,000, containing all modern improvements, and which, with all the other church property, is entirely free from debt. The congregation comprises 450 families, and maintains a very fine parochial school, under the charge of the Sisters of Mercy, whose Mother House is located here. Father McGinnity is an active temperance worker, and devotes much time and thought to the advancement of this great reform. He has served as president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Society of Wisconsin, and has delivered many forcible and effective addresses on this theme throughout the State.

JEFFERSON DRAKE, a time honored and pioneer settler of Green county, Wis., was born in Jefferson county, Virginia, Dec. 22, 1812, a son of Robert and Margaret (Park) Drake, early settlers of the Old Dominion, of English descent. When our subject was but four years of age he accompanied his parents from Virginia to Ohio, and there grew to manhood. He was one in a large family of children born to Robert and Margaret Drake, the others being Abner, Amos, Park, Mendenhall, Samuel, Rena and Sarah, and Jefferson is the only survivor.

In 1840 Mr. Drake came to Wisconsin and located in Green county. He did not remain on his first trip, but returned to Ohio, and did not make a permanent settlement in the Badger State until 1845, when he located on Section 17, in Clarno township. This was his home for upwards of thirty years, when he sold out and purchased 120 acres of land in Section 23, Cadiz township, of which he afterward sold forty acres, and now resides upon a well improved tract of fifty-six acres in the village of Cadiz. He has ever been a highly respected citizen, bearing a good reputation for fair dealing and strict principles, and his pleasant disposition has won him many warm friends.

In 1857 Mr. Drake was united in marriage with Miss Mahala Moore, who was born in Ohio in 1834, and came to Green county with her father, Thomas Moore, in 1846. This marriage has been blessed with six children: Laura, born in 1858 is at home; Lincoln, born in 1860, is a farmer, and married Manzella Austin, who bore him two children, Theodore and Otha; Ida May, born in 1862, married Daniel Howder, of Cadiz; Thomas, born in 1864, married Sarah McCamant, and has two children, Iva and Glenn; Eli, born in 1867, married Eva Robb, of Cadiz township, and has three children, Floy, Lena and Bernice; and Dora, born in 1869, is now deceased. In politics Mr. Drake has been a Republican from the time that party first presented a presidential candidate. His first vote for president was cast in 1836, when Martin Van Buren was his choice, and he has never missed a presidential vote up to the present, his last vote having been cast for William McKinley, making nineteen different elections. He is now the oldest resident of the county, and is hale and hearty, with a remarkable memory that makes him a most pleasing companion, and one much sought by the local historian.

CHARLES GANT, who is now living retired in the village of Waldwick, Iowa county, was one of the early settlers of Waldwick township and for many years one of its most successful farmers, being still the owner of a large amount of land in this section.

Mr. Gant was born in 1830 in Norfolk, England, son of James and Dina Gant, who spent all their lives in that country. They were the parents of seventeen children, of whom but three now survive: Samuel, a resident of Taylor county, Iowa; Harriet, who lives in England; and Charles, our subject, who was the youngest of the family. Charles Gant came to America about 1857, and has since made his home in Wisconsin. For a time he lived at the "Twelve-Mile House," an historic place between Hazel Green and Cuba City, in Grant county, and he was subsequently employed by Harker Spensley, at Mineral Point, prior to his settlement in Waldwick township, Iowa county. His first purchase was a tract of eighty acres, on which he and his wife lived for thirty years, their home the first several years being in an old log school house which stood on the place. Mr. Gant then bought 120 acres, and they moved to the house on that place. He later bought a farm of 116 acres, adjoining, and a farm of 160 acres in Mineral Point township, as well as forty acres of timber land in Waldwick township. When Mr. Gant commenced farming on his own account he was in very limited circumstances, and the outlook was often gloomy and discouraging, but by hard work, and with the help of his devoted wife, he has succeeded in overcoming all obstacles, and, as may be judged from the amount of property he has acquired, has become quite prosperous. Our subject continued to actively engage in the labors of the farm until January, 1901, when he and his wife moved into the village of Waldwick, there to enjoy in peaceful retirement the ease and comforts which a long life of industry has entitled them to. They have ever been held in the highest esteem by all who know them, and Mr. Gant has, by his upright and useful life, attained a high standing among the best citizens of the community, for the rewards of his active business career represent something more than the selfish pursuit of gain.

On July 3, 1868, Mr. Gant was united in marriage with Miss Ann Jackson, who was born in April, 1839, in Yorkshire, England, daughter of James and Margaret Jackson, and eight children—six sons and two daughters—have blessed their union, viz.: Edward, James W., Thomas S., Hattie D. (Mrs. Harris), Samuel D., Charles, John R. and Sarah M., all married but the last-named, who is still with her parents. They have a pleasant home in Waldwick. All the children have been finely educated, and have become worthy and useful members of society. In religious connection Mr. and Mrs. Gant are identified with the Methodist Church.

JAMES JACKSON (deceased), one of the early settlers of Waldwick township, Iowa county, and in his day one of its most respected citizens, was a native of Yorkshire, England.

Mr. Jackson was reared and educated in England, and there married Margaret Sunter. In 1853 they came to America and to Wisconsin, locating first in Shullsburg, Lafayette county, and later in Benton, that county, where they resided for three years. Their next move was to a place near Cuba City, in Grant county, whence they came to Waldwick township, Iowa county, here making their permanent home. Mr. Jackson was a local minister of the M. E. Church, and he was much esteemed throughout this locality, where he became well known.

He was in poor health for several years prior to his decease, which occurred when he was fifty-three years old, and he was the first one buried in the Waldwick cemetery, where his wife also rests. She survived him many years, passing the last fifteen years at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Gant, in Waldwick township, and died Jan. 3, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were the parents of seven children, five of whom survive at this writing: Ann (Mrs. Charles Gant), Richard, John, James and Peter. Mary, who married Thomas Hird, died at Galena, Ill., Sept. 5, 1899, leaving a family of four children.

WILLIAM WILKINS, one of the successful farmers of Wingville, Grant county, and an honored veteran of the war of the Rebellion, is now residing upon his well cultivated farm, where he is enjoying life, surrounded by comforts his own toil has procured.

Mr. Wilkins was born in Wiltshire, England, in January, 1833, a son of James and Ann Wilkins, who lived and died in England. Our subject was reared to the occupation of farming, and when yet a young man came to America, locating at Linden, Wis., and after working at several places, finally accumulated sufficient money to purchase his present pleasant home, which he has greatly improved, until it is now one of the finest farms in Wingville township.

The war record of our subject is a very interesting one, he enlisting, August 4, 1862, at Georgetown, in the 25th Wis. V. I., this regiment being the one with which General, afterwards Governor Jeremiah Rusk was identified. Mr. Wilkins was one of the first to be enrolled in his company, and was mustered into the service at La Crosse, Wis. The first assignment of the regiment was at New Ulm, Minn., to assist in quelling the Indian disturbances, and it was sent via Winona and La Crosse to Madison, and thence to Columbus, Ky. From here they were sent to Vicksburg, and the regiment participated in the famous siege, keeping Gen. Johnston from relieving the Confederate forces. After the surrender of Vicksburg the regiment was ordered up the Mississippi river to Cairo; up the Ohio to Paducah, Ky., and across country to Montgomery, Ala., joining the army under Gen. Sherman. The regiment participated in the famous March to the Sea. However, Mr. Wilkins was so unfortunate as to be wounded in his left arm at the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, and as it was very severe, being four inches long and two wide (so described by the surgeon), he was obliged to have it treated in the field hospital. In those days the facilities for caring for and transporting the sick and wounded were poor and meager; the weather was unbearably hot, and Mr. Wilkins suffered untold agonies with his arm. Later he was taken to Resaca, where he had been previously engaged in battle, thence to Chattanooga, on to Nashville and Louisville. The next removal was to Mound City, and from there he was taken to Keokuk, Iowa, where he was honorably discharged, on June 21, 1865. William Wilkins was not the only one of this family who did gallant service for his country, as his brother, Stephen, enlisted in the 7th Wis. V. I., was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run by a fragment of shell. However, he recovered, and is now a resident of Mineral Point, Wisconsin.

On Nov. 9, 1869, Mr. Wilkins was married to Miss Jane Blaine, a daughter of James F. Blaine. Of the children born of this union, two sons are now living: George and Charles; Edwin B., James, Elmer and Nellie died in infancy. Mrs. Wilkins passed away June 13, 1897, leaving two sons and her husband to mourn her loss. She was a good, Christian woman, loving wife and mother, and in her the community lost a sympathetic neighbor. Mr. Wilkins is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, of which his wife was also a member. Genial, kind hearted, generous, Mr. Wilkins is liberal in his donations to the Church, ready in his support of all movements tending towards the advancement of the community, and he enjoys the respect and confidence of a wide circle of friends.

ISAAC DIVAN, a venerable and highly respected retired farmer of Cadiz township, Green county, is a native of Ohio, born July 25, 1816, in Coshocton county.

Leonard Divan, his grandfather, was a native of Germany, whence he came to this country when a young man, settling in Pennsylvania. The names of his children were as follows: Jacob, Henry, John, Pollie, Barbara, Catherine and Sarah. Of these, John was born in 1790, in Pennsylvania, and was a distinguished soldier in the war of 1812. He became one of the early settlers of Green county, Wis., having previously lived in Coshocton county, Ohio. In 1813 he married Catherine Shrake, also a native of Pennsylvania, and they had a family of fourteen children, eleven of whom reached maturity, named, respectively: Margaret, Isaac (our subject), Jacob, George, Frederick, John, Urias, Henry, Abigail, Drusilla and Lucinda. The others died in childhood. The father of this family died in Clarno township, Green Co., Wis., in 1862; his wife, who was born in 1796, passed away in 1891, at the patriarchal age of ninety-five years.

Isaac Divan, the subject proper of this memoir, was reared on his father's farm in Ohio, and in his boyhood and youth had to work so hard, early and late, that the only education he was able to receive was extracted from a three-months experience in a country school. In 1845 he came to Green county, Wis., when the country was wild and uncleared, and here, July 8, 1846, he settled on the farm he still owns, and which at that time was covered with timber. It now comprises 120 acres of well-improved land. While a young man he had learned the trade of carpenter, and in his new Western home he found it useful, for he was enabled to build his own house, the one he still lives in. He had also learned cabinet-making in the East, which trade he also followed to some extent in Wisconsin, being one of the first undertakers in Green county, though he never followed that business regularly.

On March 15, 1839, Isaac Divan married Miss Christenia Jones, born in Coshocton county, Ohio, Jan. 22, 1819, a daughter of William and Christenia (Bright) Jones, of that State, who removed thither from Maryland. To Mr. and Mrs. Divan were born twelve children, a brief record of whom is as follows: Margaret, born Dec. 26, 1839, is the deceased wife of David Howder; Alexander, born May 18, 1841, was a volunteer during the Civil war, in Company G, 5th Wis. V. I., and died in the service; Catherine, born Dec. 30, 1842, married Peter Wagoner, of Illinois; Eliza J., born Aug. 1, 1844, married Jacob Wagoner, of Illinois; Elizabeth, born Jan. 17, 1846, died young; Abigail, born April 18, 1848, died in childhood; Mary Ellen, born Oct. 18, 1850, married Rev. J. B. Rife, a minister of the Evangelical Church; Arabella, born Sept. 15, 1852, died young; Isaac, Jr., born

Nov. 27, 1854, is a minister of the Evangelical Church; Christenia, born April 28, 1857, is the wife of Alfred Sanders, of Cadiz township, Green county; John, born Aug. 26, 1859, is a minister of the Evangelical Church; and Charles R., born Oct. 23, 1861, married Minnie Ackerman (he is farming the old homestead). The mother of this numerous family was called from earth March 16, 1897, after a married life of fifty-eight years. Mr. Divan has twenty-six grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

Mr. Divan is a member of the Evangelical Church in Cadiz township, well and widely known for his Christian philanthropy. In politics he is a staunch Republican, originally a Democrat, his first presidential vote having been cast for Martin Van Buren in 1836. He was the first clerk of Cadiz township, and served as justice of the peace, and held other offices of trust during his fifty-five years' residence in Cadiz township. For a man of his advanced age he is in excellent physical condition, has a most retentive memory, and is an interesting conversationalist.

EDWARD JOHN PERKINS needs no introduction to the citizens of Iowa county, especially in Linden township and vicinity, where in his long and faithful service as superintendent of the Iowa County Asylum for the Chronic Insane he has become widely and favorably known.

Mr. Perkins has occupied his present responsible position since 1881, and the length of his incumbency alone is sufficient proof of the satisfaction he has given in discharging the many and difficult duties thereof, to say nothing of the improvements which have been effected during his regime, curtailment of expenses, etc. Iowa county has one of the best kept institutions in the State for the care of its poor and chronic insane, and it is not saying too much to admit that a large share of the credit is due to Mr. Perkins, who by his efficient management has brought the affairs of the farm into a most systematic and business-like condition. In 1881 the old poorhouse contained about thirty-five inmates, and the farm comprised 120 acres. Now (1901) the farm comprises 400 acres, in a body, and 120 acres of woodland about two and a half miles distant; the buildings, including the new poor house, built in 1901, with a capacity of fifty inmates, are all fine brick structures with modern improvements and conveniences, and about 130 insane and thirty paupers are cared for. Iowa county was the third county in the State to establish an asylum for the insane. There is no doubt that Mr. Perkins' natural adaptability has much to do with his continuously successful management, for he has the faculty of securing considerable assistance on the farm and about the institution from those under his charge, thus making them, as far as possible, self-supporting, though at the same time his treatment of all is most humane and kindly. His popularity is not wondered at by those who know him intimately.

Mr. Perkins is a native of Iowa county, born July 20, 1850, in Dodgeville, son of Joseph and Grace (Sincox) Perkins. His father, a native of Cornwall, England, became a resident of Dodgeville in 1845, and he died there in August, 1900, at the advanced age of about eighty-four years. The mother passed away in August, 1895, aged seventy-seven years. Edward Perkins was reared and educated in Dodgeville, and prior to assuming the duties of his present position was engaged in a general store. On June 29, 1871, he married Miss Elizabeth Elliott, a native of Lockport, N. Y., and daughter of William Elliott, and to her efficient assistance attributes a full share of the success which has attended his efforts. In addition to tireless industry Mr. Perkins is gifted with an energy and good judgment which inspire all around him with confidence in his ability to carry to satisfactory completion anything which he undertakes, and this spirit is a power for effective work in his particular position. The farm is located five miles from Dodgeville, the county seat, and nine miles from Mineral Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins have one child, Mary. Fraternally our subject belongs to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, and the Masons, and in the latter has attained the thirty-second degree, belonging to Wisconsin Consistory, at Milwaukee.

HENRY B. GIFFORD, M. D., occupies an honorable place among the medical practitioners of Green county. At his home in Juda he is known as a man of exhaustive information, large medical experience, and high character.

Dr. Gifford is a son of Rev. J. C. and Julia

(Balis) Gifford. The father was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., Dec. 8, 1826, and has been a clergyman of the Free-Will Baptist Church for fifty years; the mother was a daughter of Abitha and Maria (Cloughs) Balis, both of New York. To their union were born four children: Nellie M., the eldest, is the widow of Oliver C. Dunwell, of Rock county, Wis. Josephine died in childhood. Henry B. is our subject. Joseph B., who was born April 1, 1870, resides at Brodhead, Wis. Alden Gifford, the grandfather of Dr. Henry B., was born in Massachusetts, and moved to New York, where he reared a family of thirteen children. He was a Presbyterian in religion, an upright man, and a most successful farmer.

Henry B. Gifford was born on a farm at Orfordville, Wis., April 12, 1859, and obtained his general education in the public schools. At the age of nineteen he took up the study of medicine, and graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago, Feb. 20, 1883. The first location he made for the practice of his profession was at Cherry Valley, Ill., where he resided for three years, having an extensive patronage throughout the adjoining country. He then practiced in Orfordville for ten years. In 1895 the Doctor moved to Juda, Green county, where he has established himself as a thoroughly competent and successful physician.

Dr. Gifford and Miss Lydia A. Cramer were married Feb. 20, 1884. Mrs. Gifford is the daughter of Brook and Catherine (Lovette) Cramer, of Cherry Valley, Ill., honorable and upright people, of German ancestry. To this union have been born one son and one daughter, V. M., July 12, 1886, and Harry G., March 30, 1892. Dr. Gifford is a staunch Republican. He is a Royal Arch Mason in good standing, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen, and the Home Forum, and, as might be expected, belongs to the Central Wisconsin Medical Association and the Wisconsin State Medical Association. He is local medical examiner for all the leading life insurance companies. The Doctor has made his own way in the world, and has met with marked success. He came to Juda without the assurance of the least patronage, and, by his courteous manners, manifest devotion to his profession, and the mastery of its details, has won for himself a very large practice. He is a good citizen, and attentive and kind to all, and seems to present in his own personality, in a striking degree, the qualities that make for success in his profession.

GEORGE PAULSEN, ex-treasurer of Iowa county, and a leading representative citizen of Moscow township, where he has resided for over forty years, is one of the many valuable contributions which Norway has made to the personnel of this progressive and thriving community, having been born in that country in 1835.

Mr. Paulsen is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Paulsen, likewise natives of Norway, who came to America in 1853 with their family, then consisting of four children, and first located in the town of Christiana, Dane Co., Wis. About two years later they removed to Iowa county, and purchased the farm in Moscow township now owned and occupied by their son George, who, when the parents advanced in years, purchased the homestead, in the cultivation of which he has ever since been engaged. After many years' residence on that place they removed to Winnebago county, Iowa, where the father died in 1887, the mother surviving until January, 1901, when she, too, passed away, at the advanced age of nearly ninety-two years. Of the five children born to this worthy couple three survive: George, who is the eldest; Ole, a resident of Perry, Dane Co., Wis.; and Elsie, Mrs. Johnson, of Winnebago county, Iowa. Another son, Kittel, who died in August, 1896, at his home in Worth county, Iowa, was a Union soldier in the war of the Rebellion, serving as a member of Company C, 37th Wis. V. I.; he was severely wounded June 17, 1864, at the siege of Petersburg, this wound ultimately causing his death, and the bullet that did the injury is still preserved—a sad though highly-prized memento—in the family; it passed completely through his body.

George Paulsen passed the first eighteen years of his life in his native country, receiving rather limited educational advantages, as his parents' circumstances obliged him to support himself from an early age. He was but ten years old when he left home and went to live with an uncle, for whom he worked, and he has paid his own way ever since. Though he came to America with the family he stood his own expenses for the journey across the ocean and to Wisconsin, and he engaged in manual labor for others a number of years before securing enough to justify him in starting out for himself. Employment of any kind, if it was but honorable, was always welcome to him. For some time he was engaged by the Mineral Point Railroad Co., and when that concern went into bankruptcy he lost the wages due him. However, all his experiences were not quite so discouraging, and in time he purchased the homestead and began its operation on his own account, in which he has continued to the present day, with what success may be judged from his financial standing among the solid business men of his section. Ability such as he displayed in the management of his own affairs could not long go unrecognized by his fellow townsmen, who have solicited his services for some of the most important and honorable local offices. In 1883 he was elected to the position of treasurer of Iowa county, to which he was twice re-elected, serving three terms in a most acceptable and efficient manner. He has filled most of the township offices, and is at present chairman of the town board, an incumbency in which he has been retained for a number of terms. Mr. Paulsen's continuous public service is sufficient testimony of his value as a promoter of the general welfare, but his career has been equally useful and honorable in all the other relations of life. When he came to Wisconsin, nearly a half century ago, she had but recently reached the dignity of Statehood, the population was comparatively sparse, and what are now her best resources were almost or entirely undeveloped. There was but one schoolhouse in the town of Moscow. Mr. Paulsen may justly take personal pride in the rapid strides which have been made in the fifty years intervening, for he himself has taken no unimportant part in the development of his town and county, and has always maintained a reputation for giving his influence on the side of progress and improvement, whether interested or disinterested in the special movement on hand at the time. His political support has ever been given to the Republican party, with which he has been identified since its organization, having cast his first presidential vote for Fremont, in 1856, and never missing a National election since. He is an honored member of G. A. R. Post No. 224, at Blanchardville, being a veteran of the Civil war, for which service he enlisted in September, 1864. He became a member of Company E, 22d Wis. V. I., with which he served until the close of the war, receiving an honorable discharge. They were much of the time on detached duty, as train guards, the work being arduous and at times dangerous.

In 1867 Mr. Paulsen married Miss Margaret Gulickson, who was born in 1838 in Norway, whence she came to America in 1844 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gulick Gulickson. Four children have been born to this union, Henry, Albert, Carl and Edward.

CHARLES W. WISCH. For thirty-five years this gentleman has been a resident of Janesville. He has seen it grow from a country village into a substantial and elegant city, and enjoys a personal acquaintance with many of its very best people. His occupation is that of a barber, and his habits and character are beyond question.

Mr. Wisch was born in the kingdom of Prussia, near Kolberg, Oct. 9, 1849, and is a son of John and Henrietta (Brack) Wisch, both natives of Germany. They had five sons and one daughter, four of whom are now living: Charles W.; Herman F., in Chicago; John F., of Fort Atkinson, Wis.; and Mary, the widow of John Bohm, of Beloit. The father was a farmer, and sought a home in this country in 1853, locating near Watterstown, Wis., where he continued his life labor of farming. He remained on the farm fourteen years, and then moved to Plymouth, Rock county, where he lived until his death in 1892, at the age of sixty-two. His widow is still living. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. His father was John Wisch, born in Germany, and a cattle herder by early training; he came to this country in 1858, and located at Watterstown, where he lived with his son until his death at the age of sixty-six. He had four children. The father of Henrietta (Brack) Wisch was a soldier in the German army, and died in middle life, leaving a small family.

Charles W. Wisch came to America with his father and mother when about four years old. He was reared on the farm, and attended the schools of Watterstown, both public and parochial. When he was sixteen he began life for himself as a workman in a broom factory; later he clerked in a grocery store, and after his marriage he learned the barber's trade, which he has followed for many years. On Nov. 1, 1872, Mr. Wisch was married to Miss Clara E. Middaugh, daughter of Eliezer Middaugh and his wife, who was a Miss Marble. Two children have blessed this union: Charles P., who married Miss Edith Dick, and is the father of one child; and Alice. Mrs. Wisch is a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and is a lady of many attractive qualities. Mr. Wisch is independent in his political action. Socially he belongs to the Mystic Workers of the World. He has been in the barber business for twenty-five years, and now has three chairs in his shop, and his patronage comes from the best citizens of Janesville. He is an intelligent and respected gentleman with a host of friends. His home is at No. 63 Milwaukee street, Janesville, in which city he has resided since 1865.

MICHAEL A. TORPHY, of Barneveld, is a well-known teacher of Iowa county, and represents one of the early families of his locality. His father, Thomas Torphy, was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, about 1828, and came to America in 1848, but his parents lived and died in the old home. Three brothers and two sisters came later to America, and two of the former survive, John and Michael Torphy, residents of the town of Ridgeway, in Iowa county; the other brother, Patrick, lost his life on Lake Michigan in 1855.

Thomas Torphy landed in New York, and went thence to Chicago, where he remained for a time, later migrating to Milwaukee, Wis., and one and one-half years later becoming a resident of the town of Ridgeway. Previous to becoming a citizen of Iowa county he had been engaged in railroad construction work, being a stone mason by trade, and this occupation he followed in Iowa county, in connection with farming. Near Albany, N. Y., he married Ann Vaughn, a connection of the famous family of that name, of which Cardinal Vaughn is a representative, the name long having been prominent in both religious and army circles. From February, 1865, to the following June, Thomas Torphy served in the Union army, and proved himself a brave soldier. His death, on April 27, 1868, was occasioned by an accident, his team of horses running away while he was returning to his home. Seven years previous to this time his first wife had died, and he had contracted a second marriage. At the time of his death he left a large family of children, all of them under fifteen years of age, and thus it became a necessity for the older ones to care for themselves early in life.

Michael A. Torphy was the eldest son, and the eldest but one of the family, and he started out to make his own way in the world immediately after the death of his father. Ambitious to obtain an education, he engaged in farm work during the summers and attended school through the winters, and in 1873 had an opportunity to receive instruction, for a time, from Prof. L. D. Harvey, a prominent educator, and the present State superintendent of the public schools of Wisconsin. By this means he was enabled to receive a county superintendent's third-grade certificate, and engaged in teaching in what is now the town of Brigham, then a part of Ridgeway township. For two years he remained in the same district, and then attended the Darlington high school, at all times being a careful and conscientious student. Since 1876 Mr. Torphy has been engaged in educational work in one locality, in the town of Ridgeway and vicinity, and in 1898 he was rewarded with a life State certificate, which sufficiently attests the success he has gained in the educational field. Mr. Torphy is justly considered one of the leading educators in his county. He has been a candidate at county election several times, but being a Democrat, in a Republican county, has been defeated, although he has always run ahead of his ticket. On one occasion his town, which gives a Republican majority of 150, gave him a majority of 119, and other townships, where he had become known, also gave him majorities. While Ridgeway included the town of Brigham Mr. Torphy was elected town clerk, and served six consecutive terms in that capacity; for a number of terms he was assessor and justice of the peace, and he has been a notary since 1882. His first appointment to the latter position was made by Gov. Jeremiah Rusk.

Mr. Torphy was married, July 18, 1883, to Miss Mary Jane McCloskey, one of his former pupils, who was born in the town of Brigham, a daughter of James McCloskey and wife, who were among the early settlers of Iowa county. Mr. and Mrs. Torphy are the parents of eight children, three sons and five daughters, two children dying in infancy. Our subject's literary attainments are of a high order, and he is well informed on the live issues of the day, believing that in this way he can best direct the intellectual progress of his pupils. As a citizen he is held in esteem, and as an official he performs the duties which devolve upon him in a most satisfactory manner.

MRS. SARAH MANCHESTER holds an assured position among the venerable citizens of Green county, where she is highly regarded as one of the oldest settlers of this part of the State. There are few now living whose memories of pioneer times are more vivid, or more prolonged into the early days than those of this venerable lady, whose years are far beyond the Psalmist's limit.

Mrs. Manchester was born in Pickaway county, Ohio, March 16, 1816, daughter of Isaac and Catherine (Patterson) Kline, early settlers of that State. She was one of a family of eight children, of whom but two now survive. Mrs. Manchester and her sister Mary, Mrs. Clemmens, who lives in Kansas. Our subject's brothers and sisters were named John, Eli, James, Catherine, Mary, Jane and Pollie. Sarah Kline first married Samuel Myers, who was born June 15, 1807, in Pennsylvania, of Dutch descent. While his parents were moving into Ohio from Pennsylvania his father died on the way, and his mother came into the State with him alone. He married Sarah Kline Nov. 17, 1831, and they became the parents of ten children: (1) Isaac, born Sept. 1, 1832, married Miss Elizabeth Smith, of Illinois, and moved to Wisconsin, where he died July 27, 1895. (2) George, born Feb. 16, 1836, died Dec. 27, 1882. (3) John, born March 22, 1839, was the first white child born in the town of Spring Grove, Green Co., Wis. (4) Eli, born Sept. 29, 1841, resides in Fayette county, Iowa. (5) Jane, born March 8, 1844, is the widow of Franklin Barnum, whose sketch is found elsewhere. (6) William, born May 10, 1846, died Nov. 10, 1869. (7) James, born May 20, 1848, is a resident of Story county, Iowa. (8) Miles, born Oct. 15, 1851, is a farmer in the town of Jefferson. (9) Samuel, born April 28, 1854, is a farmer in the town of Spring Grove. (10) Frank, born April 13, 1857, is a farmer in the town of Jefferson. Samuel Myers died May 2, 1863. He was a resident of the town of Spring Grove for a number of years. Mrs. Myers remained a widow for over twenty years, and was married in 1884 to Alexander G. Manchester, a carpenter in the town of Spring Grove, who died in 1896. Of Mrs. Manchester's thirty-three grandchildren twenty-four are living, and she has nineteen great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Manchester came to the Northwest when it was a wilderness peopled with wild beasts and wilder Indians. In company with her father and husband she came to Wisconsin in 1837, and they made their home on a tract of land, part of which now constitutes the site of the village of Oakley. Mrs. Manchester is the owner of a considerable portion of the real estate on which the village has been built. The house in which they lived during their first summer in Wisconsin was made of logs, roofed with clapboards, and lacking both a chimney and a floor. A fire would be built in the corner, and over it Mrs. Manchester cooked the scanty food on which they lived through the summer—mostly mashed corn, and what wild game they could kill. When they settled here Chicago was a lake of mud and ice, and the nearest railroad was east of the Allegheny mountains. There were no habitations between their home and the site of the present city of Monroe.

Mrs. Manchester, after passing through the various hardships and trials of pioneer life, is still hale and hearty at the age of eighty-five years, and lives on the farm where she and her first husband, Samuel Myers, settled sixty-three years ago. She is a lady of the most estimable character, and commands the unmeasured esteem of the community.

EDWARD FIELD, a substantial farmer of New Diggings township, Lafayette county, is a man whose high standing in the community is based upon his integrity and manly principles. He was born in that township July 11, 1842, son of William and Sarah (Sanford) Field.

William Field was born in Louisville, Ky., and about 1827 or 1828 located in New Diggings township. The greater portion of the inhabitants at that time were Indians, and the early settlers' lives were filled with exciting experiences of treachery, bloodshed, wild beasts, etc. Mr. Field purchased some twelve or fourteen hundred acres of land near the town of New Diggings, and became one of the large shippers of ore. He was a very prominent business man up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1856. His wife, Sarah Sanford, was a native of Canada, and shared bravely with her husband the hardships of frontier life. She died at the old home in 1892. Politically Mr. Field was one of the old Jacksonian Democrats, and religiously he was connected with no denomination. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Field, eight of whom are yet living: (1) George, born in New Diggings, operated one of his father's farms; he married Annie Harker, and was accidentally drowned at New Orleans, just after he had returned from an European tour. (2) Elizabeth married John Chambers, of Iowa, and both are now deceased; they left a large family. (3) Fannie married Abner Rock, of Shullsburg, Wis., and has a number of children. (4) William, a farmer of New Diggings, married Grace Hurley, and has a family of children. (5) Martha married Willard Townsend, a farmer of Shullsburg, Wis., and both are now deceased; they left one daughter, Ada, now the wife of Blake White, of Illinois. (6) Emily is unmarried and resides at the old home. (7) Benjamin, a farmer of St. Cloud, South Dak., married Emeline Williams, and has a large family. (8) Edward is the next in order of birth. (9) Alice is the widow of a Mr. Dixon, of Beetown, Grant Co., Wis., and has two children. (10) Annie married Frank Bailey, of New Diggings, and has six children. (11) Cyrus, residing on the old home farm, married Bell Meccer, and has a number of children.

Edward Field received his education in the winter schools, in the days when three months comprised the winter term. The first seventeen years of his life were passed on the home farm, and then the threatening war storm broke forth in all its fury, and young Field became a member of Company K, 20th Wis. V. I., enlisting in July, 1862. His regiment was assigned to the Western army, and served until the close of the war, taking an important part in a number of engagements, among them being Prairie Grove, of Missouri, Van Buren, on the Arkansas river, Vicksburg, Miss., Yazoo City, Miss., Brownsville, Tex., Atchafalaya, La., Fort Morgan, Ala., Franklin Creek, Miss., and the Spanish Fort, Ala. The regiment was discharged at Galveston, Tex., and sworn out at Madison, Wis. In 1865, after the battle of Brownsville, the regiment was taken to old Mexico to guard the American Consul during Maximilian's siege of Matamoros. After the close of the war Mr. Field returned to Lafayette county, and settled on his present farm, which he cleared and improved, erecting good and substantial buildings. He has also added 150 acres adjoining, to his original farm, and now has a large tract of land under a high state of cultivation.

In 1866 Mr. Field wedded Miss Hannah Collings, who was born in England in 1849, daughter of Cornelius and Johanna Collings, natives of Ireland, who located in Lafayette county in 1865. Mrs. Field was educated in England, and was one of a family of four children, the others being, Cornelius, Timothy (who died in Colorado), and Catherine (widow of Samuel Carter, of New Diggings). Twelve children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Field: Harry and Fannie both died in childhood; William, born March 3, 1867, moved to California in 1886, where he is engaged in mining in Angle Camp, and is quite successful (he married in California); Edward, born Jan. 18, 1869, now residing in Hazel Green, Wis., married Rose Rodgers, and has a son, Raymond; Charles, born in March, 1871, is now a ranchman in Iowa, unmarried; Catherine, born April, 1873, married William McGrain, of Shullsburg, and has one son, Homer; Gerald, born in 1875, now manages the home farm; Timothy, born September, 1877, now residing in Dubuque, Ia., married Maggie Murphy, and has a daughter, Margaret; Benjamin, born in 1878, married Lizzie Bright, of Shullsburg, and lives on the old homestead; Mary E., born in June, 1881, married Joseph Morgan, of Seymour township, Lafayette Co.; Arlley, born Feb. 26, 1890, a student in the home schools; and Arthur, born March 7, 1894. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and in his political belief, Mr. Field is an uncompromising Republican, and has been a member of the town board for a number of years. He and his family are highly esteemed citizens, and are very popular in the social life of the community.

JOHN P. TRENARY, one of the prominent and substantial citizens of Platteville, Grant county, and one of the largest landholders in Lafayette county, is of English birth and parentage. His parents, Philip and Isabel (Lower) Trenary, were natives of Cornwall, England, born in 1816 and 1820, respectively, the former a son of William Trenary, the latter a daughter of Eber and Mary (Hockey) Lower. All were residents of England.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Trenary came to this country in 1845, soon making a permanent settlement in Platteville, Wis. Mr. Trenary spent his whole succeeding life on the farm, in his later years retiring from active duties. In politics he embraced the principles of the Republican party, was a good citizen, and left his family the record of an unblemished life. His death occurred in 1896, and his widow still resides in Platteville, at the age of over eighty years. The family born to the parents of our subject was a large one: John P., the subject of our review, was the eldest; Mary A., born in 1839, married Henry Pierce, of Iowa, and at her death left eight children; Charles, born in 1842, married Caroline Greenrod, and lives in Pocahontas, Iowa, with a family of ten children; Emma, born in 1844, married John Ware, and resides at Big Patch, with one daughter; Ellen, born in 1847, married John Rickard, and resides in Platteville; Robert, born in 1849, married Caroline Hawk, and lived in Platteville, where he died in 1895, leaving two children; Henry married Agnes Jeffery, and resides at Austin, Minn., with two children; Carrie is deceased; Bryan F. married Selina Huntingdon, and resides in Platteville, with one son; William married Carrie Raisback, resides in Platteville township, and has three daughters; and Frank E. married Annie Huntingdon, and resides on the old homestead, with two children.

Our subject is by birth an Englishman, but America has claimed him so long as one of her worthy citizens that, to all intents and purposes, he belongs on this side of the Atlantic. In Cornwall, England, he was born Feb. 19, 1837, and there remained until he accompanied his parents to America, in 1845. His education was acquired in the district schools, and until he had reached maturity he continued on the old homestead, engaged in agricultural pursuits. After his marriage he purchased a tract of partly improved land in Kendall township, Lafayette county, which he cultivated for a number of years, and by substantial and continued improvements made of it one of the best farms in the county. Mr. Trenary believes thoroughly in the best methods of farming, and from long experience has discovered that the best is none too good in the way of buildings, implements, stock or cattle, hence has been eminently successful. He has given particular attention to stock, resulting in a reputation for his farm which extends over a wide section. His estate covers 600 acres of the best and most finely cultivated land in Lafayette county. Since 1900 Mr. and Mrs. Trenary have made their residence in Platteville.

On Dec. 31, 1859, occurred the marriage of Mr. Trenary to Miss Elizabeth A. Stephens, the worthy daughter of Michael and Mary Stephens, this family being one of the old and prominent ones of Grant county, having come thither from England in 1842. Mr. Stephens crossed the Plains to California, making two trips, but finally locating in Platteville. Five of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Stephens still survive: Jane, wife of James Stevens, of Platteville; Fannie, wife of John Bonson, of Platteville; John, of California; Samuel, of Sioux City, Iowa; and Mrs. Trenary, who was born in England, Feb. 1, 1837, and grew up in Grant county, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Trenary have had a family of six children: Thomas Edgar, born in 1861, married Lizzie Lillick, of Kendall township, and they now reside in Montana, where he is engaged in lumbering; they have two sons, Guy and Ellis. Otis L., born Sept. 21, 1865, was educated in the Platteville Normal School, later graduated from the Bryant Commercial College, of Chicago, and is now a professor in the Kenosha Commercial College; he married Lula Colvin, of Scranton, Penn., and has one child, Gladys. Isabel, born March 20, 1864, married John Ruskell, of Kendall and has four children, Charles, Bessie, Maud, and Mary. Emory, born in 1868, resides on the farm in Kendall. Fannie is at home. Dennis, who married Millie Kilpatrick, of Kendall, resides on the old home farm in Lafayette county.

In his political views Mr. Trenary has long been identified with the Republican party, and both he and wife are consistent members of the M. E. Church, to which he has given liberally, enabling much benevolent work to be carried on. His early married life was hampered by want of means, but his energy and industry have enabled him to pass his last days in affluence, and he and his estimable wife have reared a family of which the community has every reason to feel proud, its various members ranking among the representative citizens.

61

MARSHALL B. LEWIS, an enterprising and highly popular young farmer and school teacher of Jordan township, Green county, is a native of that township, having been born May 12, 1862, on the old Lewis farm in Section 8.

James Lewis, his father, was born in the North of Ireland, of Scotch and Welsh ancestry, a son of John Lewis, who died in his native land. James came to this country in 1848, settling in 1860 in Jordan township, Green Co., Wis., where he took up agricultural pursuits, and is now the owner of a fine farm of 300 acres, well cultivated and yielding good crops. He is one of the few living old settlers who came here some forty years ago. In politics he is a Republican, in religious faith a Presbyterian.

In April, 1852, James Lewis married Miss Anna Hood, and eight children blessed their union, six of whom are yet living: (1) Andrew, of the firm of Strieff & Lewis, hardware merchants, Monroe, Green county; he is the present county chairman, and for some time was clerk of the circuit court. He married Miss Kate Dickson, of Argyle, Wis. (2) Elizabeth was the wife of Ernest Rankin, formerly of Argyle, Wis., and died in Fresno, Cal. (3) Margaret married William Mitchell, of Lafayette county; she died in Blanchardville, Wis. (4) John is register of deeds for Green county, and makes his home in Monroe; he is unmarried. (5) Marshall B. is the subject proper of these lines. (6) George lives in Plainview, Neb.; he married Janet Watson. (7) Ella is the wife of J. H. Britt, of Illinois. (8) Miss Mary lives at home, and is housekeeper for her aged father and her brother Marshall. The mother of this family died Jan. 30, 1897, aged seventy years, and her remains rest in the Lewis cemetery, town of Jordan. Mr. Lewis has eleven living grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Andrew Lewis had three children, Leo and Grace, living, and one that died in infancy. Elizabeth left one living child, Millie. Margaret left one son, Allen Ernest Mitchell, now in business with his father at Monroe. George has four daughters, Emily, Mary Dale, Phyllia and Luella. Ella has three, Raymond L., Marie and John. The great-grandchild is Wallace Peck, of Fresno, California.

Marshall B. Lewis was reared on the home farm, and received his education in part at the common schools of Jordan township, in part at the Argyle and Monroe high schools. For the past ten winters he has followed teaching, farming during the summer months, and he owns a fine farm of 240 acres adjoining the homestead of his father, where he carries on general farming, including stock raising and dairying. In addition to this he conducts the homestead farm, having, altogether, charge of 540 acres.

In politics Mr. Lewis has always been a Republican, and in religious faith a Protestant. He has ever taken an active interest in the affairs of his township, and has held the offices of school clerk, while at the present time he is clerk of the township board of supervisors. Socially he is a Freemason in good standing, a member of Monroe Lodge, No. 21, and is also affiliated with the K. of P., Monroe Lodge, No. 41. He has not yet enrolled himself in the noble order of Benedicts. A genial, well-read, sociable gentleman, Mr. Lewis has many warm friends, and enjoys the respect of the community at large.

GEORGE T. SPAULDING, dealer in farm machinery, carriages, wind mills, etc., Brodhead, Green county, Wisconsin.

EDWARD NELSON. To the man who is not afraid to work success does not always come unless the industry is accompanied by business tact and good judgment. Edward Nelson, the popular young postmaster of Browntown, Green county, is one of the successful men of the county, with business acumen and wisdom far beyond his years. He was born in Norway, son of Peter and Emma (Thompson) Nelson, who came from Norway to America in 1869, locating at Argyle, Wis., where they reared their ten children: Thompson, who married Augusta Hanson, of Lafayette county; Nels, deceased; Martin, deceased; Peter, who married Bessie Anderson, and is now register of deeds at Darlington, Wis.; Edward, mentioned below; Andrew, deceased; Severn, who is in the employ of his brother Edward, at Browntown; Mary, who married Louis Anderson, of Darlington, Wis.; Tillie, who married A. Christenton, of Lafayette county; and Chris, who lives with his parents. Peter Nelson was very poor, but by hard work and strict economy he has acquired a fine farm of 300 acres in Wiota township, Lafayette county, and has greatly improved it with good buildings. In politics he is a strong Republican, and is regarded as one of the substantial citizens of his town.

Edward Nelson was reared to hard work on his father's farm, and obtained such education as he could in the common schools of the neighborhood. Naturally bright, he quickly learned all that was given him, and at an early age began to learn the tinner's trade at Darlington. In 1893, in connection with his brother Thompson, he opened a hardware and general store, and the next year purchased his brother's interest, since which time he has conducted the business alone, giving evidence of business sagacity that is most phenomenal. His pleasant manners and honorable dealing have won him friends and customers, and made him a social favorite as well.

On March 10, 1895, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Trickle, who was born March 10, 1878, daughter of Edward and Matilda (Hawthorne) Trickle. Mr. and Mrs. Trickle were the parents of the following children, besides Mrs. Nelson: James, of Freeport, Ill.; Annie, of South Wayne; George, of Browntown; Alfred, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Elmer, of Browntown; and Ben and Charles, of Browntown. To Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have been born two interesting children, Galey and Mamie. Mrs. Nelson is one of the cultured and accomplished ladies of Browntown society, and is greatly beloved by her friends. Mr. Nelson is a Republican in politics, but in religious matters is identified with no denomination, although he takes an interest in church work and is a willing contributor to all worthy causes. Socially he is a member of the M. W. A. and the I. O. O. F. As a citizen his interest in public affairs is an active working interest, and he has served as township clerk, supervisor of roads, and successfully administered the affairs of Browntown as president of the village board.

RUDY M. KUNDERT, one of the wealthiest and most progressive general farmers and cheese manufacturers of Jordan township, Green county, is a native of New Glarus, Green Co., Wis., born June 5, 1861.

Jacob Kundert, father of Rudy M., was born in Canton Glarus, Switzerland, in 1830, and for five years before coming to this country, in 1854, he worked in a cotton factory. On May 16, 1851, in Canton Glarus, he married Barbara Kundert, and they had a large family, of whom mention is made of the following, three having died in infancy: Jacob, a farmer of Monroe township, Green county; Sarah, widow of Frederick Luther; Barbara, wife of Mathias Meier, a farmer of Jordan township; Abraham, a farmer of Lafayette county, Wis.; Rudy M.; Henry, residing in Monroe City, Wis.; Maggie, wife of Jacob Nichols, of the State of Oregon; Thomas, deceased; Frederick, a farmer in Monroe township, Green county; Annie, wife of John Lee, of Monroe; John, also of Monroe, the youngest living. The mother of this numerous family was born in 1830, and died Nov. 10, 1899. The father died Aug. 15, 1895, having lived retired for several years prior to his decease. When he came to this country he owed one hundred dollars passage money, but eventually he became one of the leading wealthy farmers of Green county, at one time owning 1,200 acres of land, and was also an extensive cheese manufacturer. On his arrival in Wisconsin he remained some fifteen years in New Glarus, Green county, then removed to Monroe township. During the war of the Rebellion he enlisted, Sept. 12, 1862, in the 9th Wis. V. I., and participated in the battle of Prairie Grove, also in the Red River campaign.

Rudy M. Kundert was reared to manhood on his father's farm, at the same time receiving a liberal education at the public schools of the neighborhood. A lifelong industrious farmer, he has accumulated a fine property, comprising 200 acres of highly cultivated land situated some three miles north of the village of Browntown; he has also for several years carried on a cheese factory on his own premises, and at the present time he owns some forty head of milch cows.

On Feb. 7, 1888, Rudy M. Kundert married Miss Susan Shear, born March 22, 1864, a daughter of Joseph and Josephine (Lutz) Shear, natives of Germany, who came to Green county, Wis., in early times. They had a family of eleven children, nine of whom are yet living: Amelia, wife of Andrew Rinehart, of Cadiz, Wis.; Ferdinand, in Jordan township, Green county; Frederick, in South Dakota; Helen, wife of Thomas Dowd, of South Dakota; Louisa, wife of George Ault;

Susan, wife of our subject; Annie, wife of Joseph McCarty; Lawrence, in Monroe township, Green county; and Andrew, in Monroe, Green county.

Six children, all yet living, have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rudy M. Kundert, their names and dates of birth being as follows: Helen E., Dec. 11, 1888; Thomas, June 21, 1890; Clara, Aug. 31, 1891; Frederick, Dec. 12, 1892; Charles, March 20, 1895; and Lena, March 24, 1900. In his political preferences Mr. Kundert is a Democrat, and for several years has served as school director and treasurer, also as road supervisor; at this writing he is a member of the township board. In religious faith he is identified with the Lutheran Church, and in all the relations of life he is looked upon as an excellent, trustworthy citizen.

C. L. BARLOW, Monticello, Green Co., Wisconsin.

JOHN HALE (deceased), who passed his last years retired in the town of Lima, Grant county, was born in England in March, 1815, son of John and Esther Hale, natives of that country, who lived and died in their island home.

Our subject was one of three sons. He worked in the coal mines of England and Wales up to 1841, when he came to America, locating in the lead mining district of Grant county. Here, two years later, he married Miss Isabelle McCullough, who was born in Scotland in 1819. After their marriage they settled for a short time at Hazel Green, and he then purchased a farm in the town of Lima, engaging in its tillage for many years. Mrs. Hale died on this farm in 1864, leaving nine children: (1) John, born in 1844, was a soldier during the war of the Rebellion, going out on the first call for volunteers, and was severely wounded in one of the many battles in which he participated, but survived. In 1866 he migrated to Montana, where he married, and died leaving two children. He lost his life by suffocation in a mine while engaged in the rescue of one of his companions. His widow died a few years ago, leaving two sons, both residents of Montana. (2) Margaret, born in 1846, is now the wife of Alex Graham, who is engaged in the dairy business in Minnesota. (3) Robert C., born March 28, 1848, is mentioned below. (4) Sarah M., born in January, 1850, is now the wife of Thomas Caloway, of Kansas, and all of their children are in that State. (5) Elizabeth J., born in March, 1852, married John Caloway, a farmer in the town of Lima. They have six children. (6) Lafayette, born in 1854, lives in Kansas, where he is a prosperous farmer. He married Jane Poland, and has a family of seven children. (7) Alvin H., born May 21, 1856, resides on his fruit farm near Platteville. He married Nellie Johnson, and has one living child, Stephen O. (8) George F., born in February, 1860, when a young man went to Kansas, where he married and engaged in agriculture. He became very prosperous, and in 1894 moved to Oregon, where he owns a large fruit farm. He has no children. (9) Jacob A., born in April, 1862, is married, and lives in Iowa. They have one son, Virgil.

In 1864 John Hale, our subject, married Mrs. Sarah Graham, the widow of Gustavus Graham, who died in California. Mr. Graham, a native of New York, in 1835 married Miss Sarah Quick, who was born in 1815, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Quick, both natives of New Jersey, and residents of Sullivan county, N. Y., where they died. Mr. and Mrs. Graham came to Wisconsin the year of their marriage, and settled on a farm in the town of Lima, where he lived and reared his family. In the fall of 1849 he went to the mines of California, where he died within a year of consumption. Mrs. Graham was left with six small children to battle the world alone. (1) Robert H., the eldest of her family, was born in Grant county in September, 1838, and is now a resident of Platteville, where he is engaged in mining. (2) Alex, born in 1840, married Mr. Hale's daughter Margaret and lives in Minnesota. (3) William, born in 1842, lives in Iowa. (4) Mary J. died in childhood. (5) Louisa is now the wife of Orlando McQuisten, a resident of Montana. (6) Emma M., born in 1848, is the wife of Edwin Bullock, a hardware merchant in Kansas. (7) Sarah A., born in 1850, is now the widow of Joseph Van Meeter, and lives in Chicago with her three children. Mr. Hale had no children by his second marriage. In 1864, after his marriage to Mrs. Graham, he purchased the interest of the Graham heirs in the family homestead, and here he and his wife lived happily and contentedly, surrounded by every comfort, and putting every day of their lives to the best possible use.

Mr. Hale began as a poor boy in his adopted country, and by his own efforts made a standing among the people of Wisconsin that could not be questioned. As a Republican he was elected to several local positions in the town of Lima, and he was a member of the Christian Church, with which his widow also unites.

Robert C. Hale, the second son of our subject, was born at Hazel Green in 1848, and received a good district-school education. When a young man he made a purchase of land in Minnesota. Improving this somewhat, he sold out and returned to Grant county, where he found good business openings. In 1873 he married Mrs. Martha (Condree) Reed, of Wayne county, Ohio, and settled on a small farm in the town of Lima, where he bought a portable mill, manufacturing sawed lumber for a number of years. In 1886 he purchased a farm in the town of Lima, on which he has put up a bank barn and made many other valuable improvements. This place, which contains 200 acres, has become a fine farm. Mr. Hale is largely interested in stock raising, having seventy-five sheep, one hundred hogs, and a large number of cattle. Three children have come to Mr. Hale and his wife: (1) William F., born in January, 1875, is a farmer in the town of Lima, where he owns 160 acres of well-cultivated land. He is unmarried. (2) John J., born in 1877, graduated from the State Normal at Platteville in 1898, has taught school, and is now a clerk on one of the Mississippi river steamboats. (3) Jessie M., born in 1880, prepared herself for teaching in the State Normal at Platteville, and now holds a State certificate. In politics Mr. Hale is a Republican, and is a member of the Republican town committee. He has held the office of chairman of the town for four years, for twelve years was school clerk, and six years school director. He belongs to the Odd Fellows, and in religion he and his wife are members of the Congregational Church.

WILLIAM POHLE, Sr., a well-known and highly esteemed German-American citizen of Grant county, resides on section 33, in the town of Bloomington. For more than thirty years he has been a resident of the county, and with interest has watched and assisted in its growth and development.

The birth of Mr. Pohle took place in Westphalia, Germany, on April 12, 1829. His father, Hermann Pohle, never came to this country. In his own land our subject received a good education, as all boys are required to remain at school for a certain length of time. In 1852 he married Miss Ilsabein Storlman, and the following year they came to America; at that time they had one daughter, who is now a resident of Iowa. An uncle of our subject, Casper Pohle, who resided in St. Louis, Mo., with his wife made a visit to Germany, in the hope of restoring her health, and upon their return our subject and family came with them, another uncle, Henry Wiedman, also joining the party. This family group landed in New Orleans, and went thence up the Mississippi as far as St. Louis, which was the home of Casper Pohle. It was the first intention of our subject and his uncle Henry to settle in Missouri, but the Kansas border troubles had already begun, and much excitement existed on this account, so they determined to continue on up the river and land at Guttenberg, Clayton Co., Iowa. Henry Wiedman settled there, and there remained until his death. Mr. Pohle was also pleased with the locality, and bought 100 acres of land in Clayton county, remaining upon it until 1868, when he came to Grant county, arriving in February of that year. His first purchase of land was on section 34, from Mr. Benham, and immediately he began operations which through industry and good management enabled him to continually increase his possessions, until he has become one of the most extensive farmers and stock raisers in the county. His present home is one of comfort and beauty, and here he and his estimable wife live a life of ease, although always usefully employed. As previously noted, Mr. Pohle had excellent educational opportunities, and he has always been prominently identified with the intelligent movements of his locality. His parents had but two children, and as he was the only son, he was exempt from military duty, but he is still of the opinion that the United States offers the best opening to young men. During his life in Bloomington he has won the respect of the community, and is esteemed for his recognized honesty and integrity, which were shown in three years' service on the town board; he has been administrator of several estates. In politics he is a Democrat.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Pohle numbered ten, seven sons and three daughters. The eldest, Louise, born in Germany, resides in Garnaville, Iowa; Henry resides in Franklin county, Iowa; John lives in California; William and Hermann live in Bloomington; Anna resides in Patch Grove; August resides in Bloomington; Mary is in Hancock county, Iowa; Louis farms the homestead; and Edward is a dental surgeon, a rising professional man of Guttenberg, Iowa.

JOB HAMPTON CRABTREE is a pioneer resident of Bloomington, Grant county, who made his home there when that thriving and busy locality was almost a wilderness, and who has been conspicuously identified with its growth and development.

By birth Mr. Crabtree is a Kentuckian, the name being an old and honored one in the South. His parents, John and Middy Ann (Goff) Crabtree, were natives of South and North Carolina, respectively. John Crabtree was a boy at the beginning of the Revolutionary war, but, like Gen. Andrew Jackson, whom he knew well, he fought against the enemy during the closing scenes of that great struggle in his native State. He attained the age of eighty-four, and at the time of his death was about to receive a pension from the government on account of his services. From South Carolina he went to Georgia, where his residence was burned, and in that fire he lost his discharge from the Patriot army. His first wife, who belonged to the Hawkins family, died in Georgia, the second wife being the mother of our subject. From Georgia Mr. Crabtree removed to Kentucky, but both he and his wife passed away in Montgomery county, Ill., he at the age of eighty-four, and she at the age of seventy-five. John Crabtree was the father of twenty children, twelve of whom were born to the second marriage. All the children of the first marriage have passed away, and but five of the second survive, viz.: Job H., of this record; Isaac Jackson, a wealthy resident of California, where he located in 1850; Middy Ann, a resident of Litchfield, Ill.; Nancy Jane, of the same place; and Allen, who settled in California.

The birth of Job H. Crabtree took place in Muhlenberg county, Ky., March 14, 1819, and he was about ten years of age when the family removed from Kentucky to Illinois, where he resided until he came to Grant county, Wis., in 1845. On March 6, 1846, he was united in marriage to his present estimable wife, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Walker, and who is a daughter of George Walker. They have been permitted to pass a happy life of fifty-five years together, and together have borne the deprivations and hardships of pioneer life.

By trade Mr. Crabtree was a carpenter, and he followed same for some twenty years. When he first came to Grant county and landed in Potosi, in 1845, he was possessed of twenty-five cents in money, his other capital being his trade, his health and his determination to succeed. Pawning his trunk for his first week's board, he searched for any kind of employment, as laborers were more plentiful than employers, but by dint of strict economy, industry and his pleasing personality he soon became occupied, and his present fine farm of 320 acres is a testimony to his success. His first entry of land was eighty acres, and as he was able he increased it, cultivating, clearing and improving as the years went by. Since his marriage Mr. Crabtree has been a resident of Beetown and Bloomington. The surviving children of our subject and wife are: Allen, Frank, Eddie and one daughter, Mary Jane, the wife of Webster Cook. Mr. Crabtree and his wife were deeply bereaved in the death of their son, John Quincy, in 1876, at the age of twenty-two. His life was just opening into manly usefulness, and he was an estimable young man in every way. Emma died in babyhood, Charles in childhood, and the eldest child died at birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Crabtree are among the oldest living pioneers of Bloomington, and are ranked with the most worthy and highly esteemed citizens in southwestern Wisconsin. Their recollections of that life of yesterday are vivid and interesting, and admiration is not wanting for those who so bravely struggled against adverse conditions and so successfully overcame almost insurmountable difficulties in the way of making life easier for their descendants.

Webster Cook, of Bloomington, the son-in-law of Mr. Crabtree, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1841, and came West with his father's family about 1844. The father was a miller by trade, and his first location in Wisconsin was in the town of Waterloo, where he operated a mill for some time, but later he came to Beetown, Grant county. There he engaged in farming for some years, finally removing to Platteville, where he and his wife passed their last years.

On Aug. 19, 1862, Mr. Cook enlisted for service in the Civil war, in Company F, 7th Wis. V. I., which regiment formed a part of the distinguished Iron Brigade, and took part in many of the most severe campaigns and battles in the war for the Union. These include Gainesville, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and the siege of Petersburg. As the army was forming for the great attack for the possession of the Weldon Railroad, which was the key to the enemy's position, Mr. Cook was prostrated by a sunstroke, which rendered him unfit for further service, and from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. He is a member of the Will Hickok Post, No. 134. G. A. R. A brother, William Cook, now a resident of Boscobel, served in the Civil war as a member of the 10th Wisconsin. Webster Cook married Miss Crabtree in 1865. They have no family.

EDMUND S. FESSENDEN, M. D., of Albany, is one of the reliable physicians of Green county, who has added experience to theory, and has supplemented the study of books by the study of men. He lives up to the best ideals of his profession, and has many friends in Albany and through the adjacent regions.

Dr. Fessenden was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, Nov. 19, 1835, a son of James and Mary (Young) Fessenden, natives of New Hampshire and Connecticut, respectively. They were the parents of five sons and six daughters, and the following children are still living: Dr. Edmund S., of Albany; Sylvanus C., of Sharon, Wis.; Emily, the wife of Dr. Sutherland, of Nebraska; Laura, the widow of Ransom Phelps, of Aurora, Ill.; Rebecca Ann; Mrs. Nancy Hall, of Cresco, Iowa; Joel, of the same place; and Priscilla. The father was a cooper in early life, and became a farmer in Trumbull county, Ohio. He came to Wisconsin in 1856, where he located on a farm in Lafayette county. Some years later he moved to Howard county, Iowa, where he died in 1898, within two months of his eighty-first birthday. His wife died about two years previously, when seventy-seven. They were members of the Disciple Church. His father, probably a native of New Hampshire, had died of typhoid fever when about forty-five years of age; he was the father of eleven children, all of whom lived to be over fifty-six years of age. Philo Young, the father of Mary (Young) Fessenden, was a native of Connecticut, of English blood, and followed farming as an occupation; he passed away in advanced years, the father of a numerous family.

Dr. Fessenden lived on the farm in Trumbull county with his parents until he was ten years of age, and then went to Holmes county, in the same State, where he grew to manhood. His education was acquired in the district schools. In 1856 he came to Wisconsin with his parents, and here he attended the old Platteville Academy, after which he taught school four years. He began the study of medicine, but the Civil war postponed his preparation for his profession, and in December, 1863, as a member of Company E, 30th Wis. V. I., he marched to the front and served until the close of the war as a corporal. He was employed on detached service much of the time, and in 1864 stood guard at Fort Wadsworth, in Dakota. He was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., and resumed the study of medicine at the Eclectic Medical Institute at Cincinnati in 1865, remaining through the following year. He began his professional life in Grant county, Wis., and very soon moved into Richland Center, where he practiced for twelve years. He then came to Green county, and with the exception of four years at Mineral Point, his old home and the place of his marriage, he has continued to practice in this county, four years of the time being spent at Monroe. In December, 1899, Dr. Fessenden located in Albany, and contemplates a permanent residence here.

On March 25, 1860, Dr. Fessenden and Miss Henrietta Maria Howe, daughter of Henry and Camelia A. (Davidson) Howe, were married at Mineral Point, Wis. To this union were born three sons and three daughters, Irene, William N., Marion, Henry Howe, Katie and Edmund L. Irene married M. J. Chryst, of the town of Sylvester, and has seven children, Zina Muzette, Harold Clayton, Marjory, Neal Cleveland, Rexford, Archie Mc-Lean, and the baby. William N. is a painter and printer at Freeport, Ill. Marion married Edward F. Bratley, of the town of Cadiz, Green county, and has five children, Glenn, Lois, Maude, Alice, and the baby. Henry H., of Mineral Point, a painter by trade, married Miss Anna Libby, and has two children. Katie died when nineteen months old. Edmund L. is a painter. Dr. Fessenden and his wife with their two daughters are members of the Christian Church and are active workers in the Church and Sunday-school. They are both well informed in the Scriptures, of which he is a profound student. He belongs to the George H. Legate Post, No. 125, G. A. R., at Mineral Point, and in his politics is a Prohibitionist.

REV. GEORGE W. CASE, the present pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Monroe, Green county, is one of the most advanced and earnest men in the ministry in the West Wisconsin Conference.

George W. Case was born in Erie county, N. Y., Sept. 30, 1835, a son of James H. and Mary (Powers) Case, natives of Connecticut and Vermont, respectively, and passed his early life in that State. He was one of a family of six children, three of whom—James and Samuel, both of Hart Prairie, Wis., and himself—are now living. James H. Case was a man whose life was characterized by sterling manliness and integrity. By trade he was a blacksmith, but on his coming to Wisconsin, in 1849, he bought a farm of 200 acres in Walworth county, and devoted himself to its cultivation. After a time he increased this by the purchase of 240 acres, and upon this magnificent rural estate he lived until the year 1881, being eighty-three years old. His wife passed away in 1864, at the age of sixty-four. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. William Case, father of James H. Case, was born in Connecticut, and settled in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1800. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died well advanced in years. The father of Mrs. Mary Case was a farmer, and died in Vermont at a venerable age, the father of a numerous family; he had a son, Samuel, who was the proprietor of large foundry works at Schenectady.

Rev. George W. Case came to Wisconsin with his parents, and grew to manhood on the Walworth county farm. He enjoyed the most liberal educational advantages of the times, completing the course of study afforded by the local schools, and then attended Milton Academy, being a member of the first graduating class of that institution. Later he was a student at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., continuing his studies to the junior year. His collegiate education was completed at Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Mich., in 1862. Returning home, he secured the charge of the academy at Watertown, which he held for one year, and from there passed to the principalship of Bronson Institute at Point Bluff, Adams Co., Wis. But these were the times that stirred men's souls, and the young man could not resist the tide of patriotic devotion that was sweeping the young and brave into the hosts of freedom, to war for mighty treasures. Mr. Case enlisted in 1864 in Company K, 42d Wis. V. I., and was made orderly sergeant, later promoted to the second lieutenantcy. After the war he returned to Bronson Institute, and was at its head for a year following its removal to Kilbourn, Wis. He was principal of the high school at Columbus, Wis., and from that position entered into the active work of the Methodist ministry, and consecrated his future years to the Master's service. He joined the West Wisconsin Conference in 1863, and for thirty-four years, commencing with 1867, has been in the active work of the ministry. He represented his conference in the General Conference at Omaha, Neb., in 1892, and for ten years has filled the office of presiding elder.

On July 27, 1863, Mr. Case wedded Miss Nancy E. Nash, daughter of Francis and Catherine Van Bergen (Curtis) Nash. Four children have blessed this union: (1) Jennie W. is the wife of W. W. Smith, and lives in Austin, Minn., where her husband has charge of the Standard Oil plant; they have two children, Gladys and Elbridge. (2) James F. married Miss Helen Smith, and has his home in Portland, Oregon, where he followed the vocation of a civil engineer, he having had the construction of several important railroad and street bridges. He is now a major in the 40th Regiment, U. S. V. I., and is serving in the Philippine islands. They have one son, Archie W. (3) Mary Belle married Edward Gray, and lives in Sparta, Wis. (4) Baby, who died in infancy.

Fraternally Rev. Case belongs to Northern Light Lodge, No. 68, A. F. & A. M., and to Marathon Chapter, R. A. M., both located at Mauston, Wis. He is also a member of O. F. Pinney Post, No. 102, G. A. R., at Monroe, Wisconsin.

DANIEL DUNWIDDIE, one of the honored pioneers of Green county, Wis., is now living retired from active participation in business, in his comfortable home in Brodhead, surrounded by loving children and grandchildren, as well as by a host of warm friends. He was born in Greene county, Ohio, Jan. 6, 1822, son of John and Ruth (Bets) Dunwiddie, the former of whom was a farmer in Delaware and an early settler of Greene county, Ohio, where he purchased a tract of timber land, and farmed there until his death, in 1826; his wife, Mrs. Ruth (Bets) Dunwiddie, was the daughter of a Delaware farmer, and survived her husband several years. John Dunwiddie was a soldier in the war of 1812, and he and his wife were both Baptists in religious faith. They were the parents of eleven children, ten sons and one daughter, but two of whom are now living—Judge Brooks Dunwiddie, of Monroe, and Daniel, of Brodhead.

Daniel Dunwiddie grew to manhood on the farm in Greene county, Ohio, and made farming his life work until 1896. His first schooling was in the old-fashioned subscription schools, and after his mother's death he made his home with his sister Susan and her husband, Ezra Haines, remaining with them until he had attained the age of twenty-one years. In 1843 he first came to Wisconsin and made his home in Jefferson township, but a little later he gave up this land and purchased 160 acres in Spring Grove township, and twenty acres of timber land in Decatur township, making his home in Spring Grove until his retirement in 1896, since when he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Alonzo Barnes.

On Dec. 18, 1844, Mr. Dunwiddie married Miss Rebecca Austin, daughter of Joshua and Priscilla (Everly) Austin, and they became the parents of nine children: Priscilla married John Swan, of Juda, Wis., and has five children, Pliny, Ivan J., Otto, Victoria and Franklin; Louisa died in childhood; Ezra, of Coldridge, Neb., married Fannie Gifford, and has five children, Gertrude, Charles, Esther, Annie and Robert; Celista married Alonzo Barnes (who died in 1900), and has had two children, Rockwell, and one deceased; Theresa married William F. Holcomb, of Brodhead, and has one son, Frederick N.; Minnie died in childhood; John Milton, of Jefferson township, married Lucinda Davis, and has one child living, Ned Elmer; Idella married C. F. Cronk, of Madison, Wis., and has two children, Forbes B. and Margo; and Myrtle married Ross C. Murdock, of Brodhead, and has two children, Hazel and Marjorie. Mrs. Dunwiddie was born April 8, 1825, in Burlington county, N. J., and died March 23, 1895. Her marriage to Mr. Dunwiddie was celebrated in Warsaw, Kosciusko Co., Ind., and the ceremony performed by Judge Miller. On Dec. 18, 1894, they celebrated their golden wedding at their comfortable home in Spring Grove. Of the forty-five guests present the greater number were children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren (at that time there were three great-grandchildren, and at present eight). Many were the good wishes spoken on that memorable occasion, and few realized then that before another anniversary had passed the beloved mother and grandmother would be waiting for them all in the land that knows no care.

When Mr. Dunwiddie made his first appearance in Wisconsin, in 1843, he came on horseback. In 1844 he went to Indiana, where he was married in December, and in the following March he returned to Wisconsin, this time making the trip in a "Democrat" wagon, built somewhat after the manner of a prairie schooner, and drawn by two good horses. The team was driven by Mrs. Dunwiddie's brother, Isaac, and the trip required about ten days. The young couple began life as pioneers, and soon became inured to the hardships on the frontier. Their house was built of logs and plastered both outside and in. The roof was formed of slabs, held in place by hangers, and the floor was made of the same material, but dressed smooth. Milwaukee was the nearest available market for farm produce, and the outgoing team could make the trip in three days, returning in two. Marriage in those days, to be followed by pioneer life, meant a practical severing of all home ties. Years must come and go before there could be any hope of another meeting. Aside from the brother who drove the team in 1845, Mrs. Dunwiddie saw no one of her people for thirty-five years. At the end of that time this same brother visited Wisconsin, and brought with him his sister Elizabeth. Time had wrought its changes. The old log cabin had given way to a pleasant, well-furnished and comfortable home, the unbroken wilderness to well-cultivated fields. Mr. and Mrs. Dunwiddie were earnest members of the Baptist Church in Juda, taking an active part in all Christian work. After the death of his wife Mr. Dunwiddie left the old home hallowed by many a sacred memory, and is now passing the evening of his life in Brodhead.

THOMAS BANFIELD (deceased) was an extensive farmer of Smelser township, Grant county, and is remembered in this locality as one of the substantial men of the community. He was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, Dec. 10, 1841, a son of William and Ann (Kilbride) Banfield. When about three years of age he was brought by his parents to Smelser, where the family has since resided. The parents were very prosperous, and died wealthy and highly respected, after having had five children, four sons and one daughter.

Thomas Banfield was educated in the district schools of Smelser, where he gained a very fair knowledge of the branches there taught.

In 1867 Mr. Banfield married Julia Doyle, who was born in Ireland on March 10, 1845, daughter of Andrew and Mary A. Doyle, a pioneer family of Grant county. Mrs. Banfield grew to womanhood in Grant county, and received her education in the schools of Hazel Green. Mr. and Mrs. Banfield were the parents of eleven children, as follows: (1) William A., born in November, 1867, received his preliminary education in the home schools, and then spent two years in St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee. For five years he was a student in St. Joseph's College, Dubuque, Iowa, where he was graduated, and afterward entered a theological seminary at Montreal, and was ordained a priest in 1891. For one year after his consecration as priest he was assistant in a parish at Clinton, Iowa, and then assumed charge of his present parish at Bankston, same State, where he is the founder of a fine church, and is very popular. (2) Mary A., born in 1869, died at the age of six years. (3) Andrew, born in September, 1871, was educated in St. Joseph's College, Dubuque, and married Maggie Byrns, daughter of John A. Byrns, an old-time resident of Grant county, and has four children: Julia L., born in March, 1896; Thomas A., born in August, 1898; John Oscar, born in July, 1899; and Agnes L., born Feb. 19, 1901. They reside on a farm near the homestead. (4) Lizzie A., born Sept. 6, 1872, died Dec. 6, 1875. (5) Catherine C., born Aug. 11, 1875, is a graduate of the Cuba City high school, and is at present living with her brother, Rev. W. A. Banfield. (6) Charles M., born March 19, 1877, died in childhood. (7) Charles P., born May 15, 1878, was for six years a student of St. Joseph's College, Dubuque, Iowa, graduating in classics and philosophy June 18, 1901. (8) Nellie K., born Dec. 19, 1881, was a student of St. Clara's Academy, Grant county, Wis., and at present is a student of the Visitation Academy, Dubuque, Iowa. (9) Margaret, born July 5, 1883, died in childhood. (10) Stella J., born April 19, 1885, is a student of the home school, St. Rose, Wis. (11) Thomas N., born Sept. 7, 1887, is also a student of the home school. At the time of his marriage Mr. Banfield had a farm of 120 acres, but subsequently additions increased it to 360 acres. Many improvements were made, and he finally became the owner of one of the finest horse breeding farms in the county. In 1896 Mr. Banfield suffered great loss of property by fire, but through his energetic efforts soon recovered. The death of Mr. Banfield occurred Oct. 29, 1897. It was the cause of deep sorrow to the family and entire community, as he was a friend to all who ever had the pleasure of his acquaintance. At the time of his death he was a consistent member of the Roman Catholic faith, and a liberal supporter of same. Politically he was a Democrat, and one of the influential members of his party.

The Banfield family is one of the best educated and most influential in this community. All have nobly borne their parts in the development of Smelser, as well as Grant county. As business men they are very substantial; in politics they adhere strongly to the creed they consider as beneficial to the welfare and to the upbuilding of their country. Mrs. Banfield has the honor of having a brother, Hon. Arthur Doyle, who fought bravely for the nation's cause in the Civil war, and also a nephew, Mr. Shane Doyle, who was a defender of the same dear flag in the Philippine islands, where he was shot by mistake Nov. 22, 1900. His remains were removed to his old home in Grant county, Wis., and on July 20, 1901, was held one of the grandest military funerals ever witnessed in this part of the State. Both in their homes and in social circles the Banfields enjoy a large circle of friends.

J. H. PEACOCK, farmer and local minister, Lead Mine, Lafayette Co., Wisconsin.

FRANK D. TAFT. Among the enterprising and successful business men of Monticello, Green county, who have lived in this pleasant little city all their lives, is Frank D. Taft, who was born Oct. 20, 1862, a son of S. C. and Electa M. (Fluent) Taft.

S. C. Taft, of Monticello, a prominent member of G. A. R. Post No. 113, was born in Springville, Susquehanna Co., Penn., Dec. 29, 1819, and was a descendant of Samuel Taft, a native of England, who came with a brother to America, the latter mysteriously disappearing soon after landing. Samuel Taft, our subject's great-grandfather, had four children, born in Rhode Island, Jonathan, the grandfather, being born at Smithfield, that State, on March 13, 1772, and moved to Pennsylvania about 1812, where, on Dec. 17, 1817, he married Nancy Fox, eldest of the four children of Nehemiah Fox. In 1824 he moved to New York, where he died on his farm in Virgil township, Cortland county, June 11, 1851, his wife dying at the home of her son, at Monticello, Wis., March 11, 1862. They had reared three of their four children, of whom our subject's father was the second; John L., born June 25, 1822, resides in Fort Worth, Texas; Daniel B., born Sept. 28, 1826, died in Monticello in 1862.

The father of our subject passed his youthful days under the parental roof, and when old enough learned the lucrative trade of carpenter and millwright. His marriage to Elizabeth Grey, of Cortland county, N. Y., took place Sept. 28, 1843. She was a daughter of Ogden and Susan (Barnes) Grey, and died June 28, 1846. The second marriage of Mr. Taft took place in Addison, Steuben Co., N. Y., on Oct. 25, 1849, to Electa M. Fluent, who was born Jan. 27, 1825, a daughter of Joseph and Gannie (Dickinson) Fluent, the former being a native of Maine, and the latter of Pompey Hollow, Onondaga Co., N. Y. Mr. Taft removed to Janesville, Wis., in 1853, and on March 19, 1854, went to Monticello, Wis. Here he resumed his trade, also engaged in farming and led a useful and busy life until the time of his death, on May 16, 1897, at the age of seventy-seven. During the Civil war he enlisted at Monticello, on Dec. 22, 1863, in the 5th Wis. Light Artillery (some unaccountable blunder registers his enlistment Jan. 7, 1864), was mustered in at Madison, and was sent thence to Chattanooga. Connected with the 14th Army Corps, Mr. Taft saw some hard service, moving with his regiment to Ringgold, through Snake Creek Gap, and assuming position for the battle of Resaca, on May 14, where he with his companions fought all day until ammunition became exhausted. On the 15th he served his gun all day, and on the 16th he was at Rome; on May 26th went on the quick march to join the troops at Dallas, where the Union forces were successful. At Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, and other engagements in this neighborhood, Mr. Taft's battery did most effective service, participated in the fight at the crossing at Chattanooga, and followed in the battle of Peach Tree Creek, and taking part in the siege of Atlanta, where the brave Gen. McPherson met death. This battery did service through the siege, and then engaged in a three-hours' fight at Jonesboro. Returning to Atlanta, he remained with his section until in November (voting there for president), when he became a victim of typhoid fever, finally, after making many refusals, being forced to enter hospital. On Nov. 5 he was sent to a hospital at Chattanooga, and after two weeks he was transferred first to Nashville, then to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, thence to Prairie du Chien, and finally to Madison, expecting to go to New York, but illness forced him to the hospital again, at Madison, and in February, 1865, to Prairie du Chien, where he was obliged to remain until the return of the regiment to Wisconsin, where he was honorably discharged June 7, 1865.

Returning to Monticello, under the tender care of his family, he recovered health, and again took up the peaceful pursuits. Three of his family of six children are deceased: Lucius E., born Sept. 21, 1850, died March 18, 1854; Elizabeth A., born Aug. 12, 1852, died March 20, 1855; John O., born Nov. 20, 1854; Appleton R., born Sept. 12, 1857, mentioned below; Ogden G., born Oct. 7, 1860; and Frank, born Oct. 20, 1862. Mr. Taft was the first commander of his post, and served until his death. In December, 1848, he became a member of the Masonic fraternity, at Addison, N. Y., and in 1889 was worthy master of the lodge at Monticello, acting for ten years as an official. His first vote was cast for James K. Polk, after which he joined the Free Soil party, and naturally followed into the Republican ranks, becoming a staunch and active member of the latter party, being a member of the club of Monticello. As a prominent citizen he was called upon to serve in many important official positions, and for some years was a justice of the peace. Long will he be remembered as one of the leading citizens of this place.

Frank D. Taft, our subject, has lived in this town all his life, with the exception of two years spent in Kansas. His educational advantages were those of the common schools, and when he reached man's estate he learned his father's trade. For a number of years he engaged in contracting. His marriage occurred on Sept. 5, 1889, to Miss Rosa Marty, a daughter of Henry and Fannie (Durst) Marty, natives of Switzerland. Mr. and Mrs. Marty are the parents of the following children: Fannie, who married Fred Gerber, of Monticello; Ursilla, who married H. L. Babler, of this place; Rosa, Mrs. Taft; Fred H., of Madison; J. Henry, of New Glarus; Matt S., of New Glarus; Annie, who married William Preston, of New Glarus; and Nicholas C., of Monticello. Mrs. Marty was but five years old when brought by her parents from Switzerland. Mr. Marty came over in 1851. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Taft, Louisa A. and Herbert.

Appleton R. Taft, brother to our subject, was one of the soldiers who gave up their lives at Camp Cuba Libre. He passed away on Aug. 18, 1898, aged forty-one years, lacking but a month. His wife, Mrs. Nora Taft, had his body brought home for burial, and it was interred with military honors in the Monticello cemetery. He belonged to Company H, 1st Wis. Vols., and with high hopes had marched away beneath the same flag under which his father had so bravely faced danger.

Mr. Taft erected a very desirable residence in 1894, but has traded that for another, building several others, having the advantage of being able to build a new house when the old one does not suit. In politics he could be nothing but a Republican, and is socially connected with the Modern Woodmen of America. Mrs. Taft is a valued member of the Swiss Reformed Church.

DAVID BALLANTINE (deceased) was one of the early settlers of Grant county, and during his long life one of its most prominent citizens. His birth occurred at Bovina, Delaware Co., N. Y., Jan. 15, 1816, and his lamented death at his home in Bloomington, Wis., Feb. 5, 1899. With his four brothers, Robert, George, Thomas and James, he came to Wisconsin in the early days, and all of this family grew to be honorable, representative citizens. All have passed out of life with the exception of Thomas, who is a resident of Kansas. There were two more brothers, one of whom died in early life, and the other, Duncan Ballantine, passed his life in the State of New York. The parents were David and Ann (Grant) Ballantine.

David Ballantine, our subject, was married to Miss Nancy Ellis, Nov. 13, 1878. She was a native of Grant county, a daughter of Washington and Elizabeth (Cox) Ellis, who came from Virginia, and were early settlers of Grant county, locating first in the town of Ellenboro, and later in the town of Potosi. Mrs. Ballantine was only about two years old when her mother died, and she remembers nothing of her. The father remarried, and survived until 1880. Mrs. Ballantine was one of eleven children, nine of whom grew to mature years, and six still survive.

For many years the late David Ballantine was successfully engaged in business in Bloomington, in association with his brother James, and acquired large means, as well as a reputation for strict integrity. He was among the most highly esteemed citizens when called from the scene of his active labors. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ballantine, one son and one daughter. The former, Robert G. Ballantine, died April 1, 1895, when in his sixteenth year; the beloved daughter, Jeannette, has been spared, and is the wife of Dr. L. H. Giffen, of Webster City, Iowa. After the death of their son Mr. and Mrs. Ballantine adopted a child named Orville Fuller, who is being carefully reared by Mrs. Ballantine. She resides at her beautiful home in Bloomington, which was erected by her late husband in 1896, and is held in high esteem by the citizens of this community.

LLOYD-JONES. In the southeastern part of Iowa county, Wis., in the township of Wyoming, is a very unique farming community, located in what is known as the Helena valley. Nature has done much for this little valley, for it is one of the most picturesque spots in the State, and it has been called the "Berkshire" of Wisconsin. In harmony with the natural beauty of the place are the large and tasteful homes of the intelligent farmers, who live here—made up principally of the Lloyd-Jones families, seven in number. The industry of the community is cattle raising and dairying. There is a co-operative creamery in operation under the name of the Hillside Creamery Co., and steps have already been taken toward a co-operative laundry and bakery. This little valley seems to hold the happy combination of what is best in country and city, for not only is it a model farming community, but it is also quite an intellectual center. Here is located the Hillside Home School, which not only dominates the life of the vicinity about, but also draws pupils from all parts of the country. There have been represented in its catalogs over seventeen different states and territories, reaching from New Mexico to the Dakotas on the one hand, and from Vermont to Tennessee on the other—besides a representative from the distant Hawaii. The location of this school removes it from the distractions of the city, and surrounds the pupils with the ennobling influences of Nature. Abundant pure air and water, the excellent sanitary arrangements of the home, and such food as the large garden, green house, and well-stocked farm afford, make the conditions such as insure the physical well-being of the family. The buildings are large and commodious, equipped with modern conveniences, heated by steam, and the plant has a fine system of water works. The school laboratories and libraries are well supplied and the corps of teachers, large in number in proportion to the number of pupils, make the conditions quite ideal for the best development of the pupil. The school aims to inculcate simple habits of life, and an independence to the debilitating conventionalities. It seeks to be devout, but non-sectarian and open in its religious spirit, hospitable to all forms of thought, seeking the underlying unities of faith in diversities of creed and form. It tries to realize that culture which ripens into reverence, and that rationalism which is earnest and helpful. In short, character-building is its aim. It has special teachers for domestic science, manual training, art and music—including instructions in singing, piano and violin.

The school is on the accredited list of the Universities of Wisconsin and Chicago for all the courses of these institutions. Its graduates have also been admitted to the Northwestern University and the University of Illinois without examination. Lectures and musical entertainments are frequent throughout the school year, for the benefit of the school and the community; and during the months of July and August the Tower Hill Assembly, under the leadership of Jenkin Lloyd-Jones, gives ample opportunity for summer refreshment and uplift, as well as the pleasant and profitable intermingling of country and city people.

One of the attractive and unique features of the valley is the quaint and picturesque little chapel with its surrounding church yard, in which are seen the modest head stones marking the resting places of the near relatives and friends. This building is a memorial chapel erected by the Lloyd-Jones family, with the aid of friends, to the memory of their father and mother. It was erected under the direction of a grandson, Frank Lloyd Wright, one of the leading architects in Chicago.

Richard Lloyd-Jones and Mary Thomas Lloyd-Jones emigrated with their seven children from Wales in 1844. They were well connected in Wales, being direct descendants of some of the leading literary people of their country. For many generations the Lloyd-Jones family has been represented by ministers of note, conspicuous for their eloquence, as well as their broad sympathies and helpful services. This pioneer family spent that first winter of 1844 and '45 in Utica, N. Y., where they lost by death one of the children. In the spring Mr. Lloyd-Jones took his family into the then wilds of Jefferson county, Wis., and settled in Ixonia, where a home had been partly prepared for him by his brother, Jenkin Lloyd-Jones, who had preceded him by two years for that purpose. Here the family lived the heroic, unselfish life of the pioneer, often facing need themselves, by sharing with those who had greater need, until the Lloyd-Jones homestead became the synonym of hospitable refuge for the needy. The life of the family, like all pioneer life in the steamless age, was full of thrilling incidents, hardships and self-denial, but sweetened by the sympathetic, brotherly, almost communistic, feeling, peculiar to the early settlers in a new country.

Richard Lloyd-Jones was the leading mind of the little colony, and often acted as the lay minister of the community, while it was beyond the reach of an ordained minister. One of the sad offices that became necessary for him to perform was the conducting of the burial rites for his beloved brother Jenkin, who died two years after the arrival of the family.

In 1856 Mr. Lloyd-Jones moved his family, now numbering ten children, to Spring Green, Sauk county, where they remained for four years, when they moved into Helena valley. Richard Lloyd-Jones bought the homestead, which is now the site of Hillside Home School. Thomas L. and John L. each purchased an adjoining farm. Later the other children, yielding to the pleading of the mother, bought surrounding farms, until, before the father's death in 1886, sixteen years after the beloved mother had entered into rest, four sons and two daughters occupied comfortable homes in Helena valley. This large family are now advancing in years, and their lives are a fitting tribute to the noble self-sacrificing lives of their pioneer parents.

The eldest son, Thomas Lloyd-Jones, closed a useful and honorable life in 1894. The surviving brothers are John Lloyd-, Jenkin Lloyd-, James Lloyd- and Enos Lloyd-. Jenkin Lloyd-Jones is a prominent minister in Chicago, and has his summer home on Tower Hill, where he yearly spends the greater part of his summer vacation. The other brothers are residents of the Valley, and have been prominent in town and county affairs. John Lloyd-Jones was for eight years a member of the county board, and seven years superintendent of the poor. During these years he served on many important committees appertaining to county affairs. He was census enumerator in 1880. During the time of his public service, as in his private life, he won the reputation of possessing incorruptible integrity. James Lloyd-Jones was eight years on the county board, and during this period he served on the equalizing board of the county. He was held in high regard by his fellow members and constituency. Enos Lloyd-Jones, the youngest of this large family, is one of the leading men of his township. He has served for several years as a member of the town board, and as justice of the peace. He is full of public spirit, and a leader in co-operative enterprise.

Of the five surviving daughters Mrs. Margaret Jones and Mrs. James Philip, the two eldest, have their homes in the valley; Mrs. Anna Lloyd Wright has a home in Oak Park, Ill.; while the two youngest, Ellen C. Lloyd-Jones and Jane Lloyd-Jones, are the proprietors and principals of the Hillside Home School, where for thirteen years the second generation of the American Lloyd-Joneses have been, and are being educated. Many of these have already won distinction for themselves.

DWIGHT D. SAWIN, a leading prosperous farmer of Jordan township, Green county, was born Sept. 17, 1854, on the old homestead in that township, and comes of one of the best and oldest families in the county.

Mr. Sawin is descended from John Sawin, who was born in Boxford, Suffolk, England, about the year 1620, coming to America and making his home in the New England colonies. The line of Dwight D. Sawin's descent is as follows: John (the emigrant), John (2), Munning, Daniel, Abijah, Abijah (2), Horace, and Dwight D., our subject. Abijah (2) and his wife, Polly, were born in Connecticut.

Horace Sawin, father of Dwight D., was born July 18, 1812, in Ellington, Tolland county, Conn., and on July 28, 1839, married Elvira Burnett, of Munson, Ohio, born Jan. 28, 1817. In 1850 they settled in Jordan township, Green county, where they passed the rest of their days in farming pursuits. He was a successful agriculturist, and owned 215 acres of good land. Children as follows were born to this pioneer couple: William A. served in the Civil war as a soldier in the 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, and died at Ft. Berwick, La.; Calista E. married William Trotter, a farmer, and in early times a minister of the Christian Church of Jordan township, Green county; Harlow H., a carpenter by trade, married Chloe Stilson, and is now residing in Iowa; Chester C., of Redfield, Iowa, is married to Mrs. Nancy Benson; Seldon S. is a resident of Iowa City, Iowa; Dwight D. comes next in the order of birth; Newton E. married Mary Hautby, and is a farmer in Juneau county; Matilda married G. N. Hill, of Argyle, Wis.; and Jane E. is the wife of Charles E. Walker, of the State of Wyoming. In politics the father of this family was an old-line Whig originally, later giving his allegiance to the Republican party. He died Feb. 19, 1891, the mother on May 28, 1875. On Oct. 10, 1877, Mr. Sawin married Roxana M. Cutler.

Dwight D. Sawin, the subject proper of these lines, was reared to manhood on his father's farm, which he now owns, having bought out the heirs. The place consists of 215 acres of as fine land as can be found in the township, well equipped with comfortable dwelling, commodious barns and other outhouses, and here Mr. Sawin devotes his time and energies to general agriculture. In politics he is independent, has served as a justice of the peace, and was appointed as one of the Wisconsin enumerators to take the census of 1900. In matters of religion he is a believer in the Christian faith, but not a member of any church. Socially he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows (being a member of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin), and the Knights of the Globe. He is generally looked upon as an excellent neighbor, a loyal citizen, honest and reliable in all his dealings.

On March 31, 1891, Dwight D. Sawin was united in marriage with Miss Ida M. Hilton, of Lafayette county, Wis., born Feb. 6, 1856, a daughter of George and Wealthy (Hill) Hilton, and one child, Edgar H., was born to them Jan. 12, 1892. Mrs. Ida M. Sawin was one in a family of four children: George E., a carpenter by trade; Mary, wife of F. C. Hatcher, of Burlington, Kans.; John E., a farmer of Beloit, Wis.; and Ida M. The last named is a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and shares with her husband the respect and esteem of the community.

JOHN SWAN is one of the more influential citizens of Juda, Green county, where he is known as a very intelligent and well-read man, and is a son of William and Mary (Murdock) Swan, of Greene county, Penn. In 1846 John Swan came with his parents to Wisconsin, when it was a wild and unsettled wilderness, and his memories of the early days are very interesting. He was born Sept. 1, 1834.

William and Mary Swan were the parents of the following children: Thomas, Charles, Daniel, Elizabeth, William, Samuel, John, Isaac, Sutton and Richard. Mr. Swan married Miss Priscilla Dunwiddie March 28, 1866, and has reared the following family: Pliny, of Chicago; Otto W., of Brodhead, Wis.; Ivan J.; Victoria, the wife of Daniel Rosler, of Mineral Point, Wis.; Frank, who is home with his father, and is now teaching school in the town of Jefferson. Mrs. Swan is the daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Austin) Dunwiddie.

John Swan was reared on the farm, and had his education in the public schools. He has won for himself, in the years that have passed since his advent in the State, an honorable position. He is a justice of the peace and a notary public. For many years he has been a painter and contractor, and has acted as janitor of the Baptist Church. He is the sexton of the Juda cemetery.

Mr. Swan was a soldier in the Civil war, where he served chiefly in the Army of the Tennessee four years and nine months, and received an honorable discharge. In Juda Mr. Swan was a general merchant for eighteen years, and during this time was postmaster. For about twenty years he has held the position of justice of the peace, and has been clerk of the school board many years. Mr. Swan belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is one of the most devoted members of the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic. For the hardships and injuries of the Civil war he draws a pension of twelve dollars a month. Mr. Swan is a stanch Republican, and belongs to the Baptist Church. He has a high standing for his honesty and capacity, and is known as a reliable and trustworthy citizen. He is always willing to lend a helping hand, and is marked by the possession of a high moral character.

MRS. SOVENIA VANDERBILT was born Feb. 21, 1833, daughter of Evin G. and Barbara Ann (Strickler) Young, of Knox county, Ohio. She was married, July 24, 1851, to John W. H. Vanderbilt, of Green county, Wis., son of Daniel and Annah (Hopkins) Vanderbilt, of New York, the father being of English origin, and a cousin of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt. He had four children: (1) Ann married Osker Allen, of Michigan; (2) Zephia married Thomas J. Boxler; (3) Electy died at the age of eighteen; (4) John W. H.

John W. H. Vanderbilt was born July 28,

1828. He volunteered in the 36th Wis. V. I., and died while in prison at Andersonville, Dec. 4, 1864, leaving a family of six children, of whom (1) Daniel W. S., born Nov. 11, 1852, married Caroline Clark, of Spring Grove, Wis., and is living in California, on an extensive farm; he has two children: Mettie M. and Rilla B. (2) Evin M., born Nov. 12, 1854, married Alice Kenyon, and is a farmer in the town of Spring Grove; he has one child living, Ettie M., born Aug. 10, 1886. (3) Nina, born Dec. 31, 1856, married William A. Reid, an editor of Minnesota, and has two children, James M. and Floyd L. (4) William S., born May 18, 1859, resides on the old home farm in the town of Spring Grove; he married Urisulia Cushman, of Monroe, Wis., and is the father of two children now living: Floyd L. and Wayne. (5) Ettie M., born Feb. 7, 1862, married Frank Cain, of Juda, and has one child, Delta D. (6) Edith B., born July 23, 1864, married Charles Scoville, of Juda.

Mrs. Vanderbilt comes of a German family. Her father was born Aug. 25, 1799, and died in 1880. Her mother, born in 1806, died Jan. 6, 1881. They were the parents of the following family: (1) Nancy, born Oct. 30, 1825, is Mrs. Joseph Millich, of Ohio. (2) Elizabeth, born April 4, 1827 (died Feb. 21, 1893), was the wife of Andrew Riley. (3) Catherine, born Feb. 5, 1829, died June 14, 1840. (4) Rosina, born Feb. 2, 1831, died Dec. 27, 1832. (5) Sovenia is our subject. (6) William, born Feb. 27, 1835, died March 28, 1835. (7) Lavinia, born March 19, 1836, died Aug. 12, 1839. (8) Samuel, born Aug. 9, 1838, is now living in Kansas. (9) Isaac W., born Sept. 14, 1840, is a farmer of Spring Grove township. (10) Martha, born Feb. 27, 1843, died Dec. 23, 1881. (11) Zenas, born Feb. 2, 1845, died Aug. 26, 1845. (12) Joseph, born April 18, 1846, resides in Brownville, Neb. (13) May J., born May 1, 1848, resides in Ohio. (14) Alice J., born Oct. 10, 1850, married Cyrus Hiller, and is living in Superior, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was left a widow in 1864, with six small children. She had a farm of eighty acres, which she still owns, and has reared her children in a sensible and wholesome manner. She commands universal respect in the community, beloved and admired by all who come in contact with her. She is passing her last days in her home in Juda with her daughter, Mrs. Scoville, and is in receipt of a pension from the country her husband died to save.

JAMES PAUL, a prominent citizen and honored pioneer of Patch Grove township, Grant county, Wisconsin, dates his residence here from 1842. At that time the land was all wild and unimproved, and the few settlers that had located in this part of the county have nearly all passed away, while he, with a very few others, remains, a living witness of the crude condition of the country nearly sixty years ago. He has seen the unbroken wilderness transformed to its present advanced condition, and has always been prominently identified with this growth and development, having done his part in converting the wild land into fruitful fields and beautiful homes.

Mr. Paul was born near Aberdeen, Scotland, in March, 1823, a son of Alexander and Jessie (Mair) Paul, who never came to America, but spent their entire lives in Scotland. In their family were eight children, three sons and five daughters. The first to come to America was Alexander Paul, Jr., a brother of James, who crossed the Atlantic in 1838, and by way of Chicago went to Prairie du Chien, Wis., where he remained about two years. He then came to Patch Grove, Grant county, where he became possessed of considerable land, and for more than thirty years served as postmaster at that place. A number of years ago he removed to Brown's Valley in western Minnesota, where he engaged in merchandising.

James Paul followed his brother to America in 1840, and came to Patch Grove by way of Chicago and Galena. As he remarked to the writer, Galena at that time was a larger and more important place than Chicago, but after a lapse of sixty years it has less population and importance than it had then, while Chicago has its two million inhabitants, and is the second largest city in the Union, all of which has been accomplished in the comparatively short period of three score years. Mr. Paul entered the land on which he now resides from the government, and in the years that have passed has converted the wild tract into a beautiful farm.

On June 21, 1849, he married Miss Angeline Adams, who was born in New York State, in 1824, and in 1848 came West with her parents, Samuel and Jemima (Judd) Adams, who made their home in Grant county until their death. Of the four children born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul, two are living: Angeline, wife of Carson Scott; and James. Those deceased were Christina, who died at the age of twenty-four years; and John, who died at the age of fifteen.

Mr. Paul has long been one of the leading farmers and stock raisers of Patch Grove township, where he and his wife have a beautiful home and are surrounded by all the material comforts of life, the reward of industry and good management. Great have been the changes that time has wrought since he became a resident of Grant county. Mr. Paul served as clerk of Patch Grove township, when it included the present townships of Patch Grove, Wyalusing, Glen Haven, Millville, Mount Hope and Bloomington, much of the land at that time being assessed as unknown. For his work as clerk, which necessarily involved traveling over a large area of country, he received $60 per annum. He held that office for several years. In his political views Mr. Paul was a Democrat until 1861, when he became a Republican, but of later years has been independent in politics. He is a public-spirited citizen who gives his support to all worthy enterprises for the public good, and commands the respect and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact.

PETER A. HUBBARD. A well-known and honored citizen of Ridgeway township, Iowa county, is Peter A. Hubbard, who resides on section 22, and who has been a resident of the State of Wisconsin for more than forty years. The Hubbard family is of English ancestry, and the name is known in the early annals of New England.

Peter A. Hubbard was born in Windsor county, Vt., Jan. 4, 1828, a son of Peter and Anna (Trask) Hubbard, both of whom were natives of Vermont, where they passed their lives. They had a family of eight children, but only two of these survive, one of them being the subject of this biography, and the other, his brother, Varsil Hubbard, an esteemed resident of Rochester, Vt., where he lives retired, at the age of eighty-six.

The only one of his family to make a home in Wisconsin, Peter A. Hubbard came to the State in 1850. He was reared and educated in his native State, and there, too, was he taught the principles of farming. At the age of twenty-two, filled with the restless energy and enthusiasm of youth, he came to this country, which was then almost a wilderness, and first located in Columbia county, two years later going to Madison. That imposing and beautiful city was then but a hamlet, with no railroad connections. From Madison he came to Iowa county, and during the winter of 1857-8 he drove the stage between Ruggles and Arena, at a time when adventure and excitement were the order of the day. In 1858 he was married to Miss Ann Maria, the estimable daughter of John Williams, and when he decided to enter the army, in defense of his country, in August, 1862, he realized that he must leave not only a devoted wife but also two helpless little children. In those days true patriots did not pause to consider the ties of family or kindred, and on Aug. 14, 1862, Mr. Hubbard was enrolled as a member of Company C, 31st Wis. V. I. The regiment was sent to Fort Halleck, at Columbus, Ky., where it remained during the summer of 1863, but was then sent to Tennessee, and during the winter of 1863-64 did provost duty at Nashville. It was then attached to Sherman's army, and was present at the evacuation of Atlanta, and continued in the famous March to the Sea. On Aug. 9, 1864, Mr. Hubbard was detailed in connection with the supply train, and remained in that capacity until the army reached Savannah, Ga., where he was given a six-mule wagon, which he drove to Washington, this long and laborious duty taking from January 17 to the beginning of the month of May. He was discharged near Louisville, Ky., on June 20, 1865, and he gladly returned to the comforts of home. Through this long service Mr. Hubbard was in ill health, the trouble beginning at Racine, before he left the State, where he was attacked with the mumps. Not yet recovered, he insisted upon accompanying his regiment when it went South, and in his weakened state easily became a victim of rheumatism and chronic diarrhea. However, he continued to perform his soldierly duty, although his health was shattered, and he still feels the effects of the exposure and hardships.

After the war Mr. Hubbard resumed farming and is the owner of a very pleasant home, the family now consisting of four children, one son and three daughters: Ella, who married Reuben Calkins, of Montfort, Wis.; Eva Louise; Herman F.; and Hattie A., the wife of Joseph W. Owens, of Barneveld, Wis., and the mother of two sons, Norman and Bertram. Eva Louise was born in 1861; through a severe illness in early childhood she became entirely deaf, and was educated at the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Delavan, Wis.; later she married Edwin Ernst, also a deaf mute, who was educated at the same institution. Mr. Ernst also took a course of instruction in Washington, D. C., was a skilled mechanic, learning the trades of carpenter and cigarmaker, and was also a fine taxidermist; their home was in Oshkosh, Wis., and there Mr. Ernst died, in 1891, and his widow and two children returned to the home of Mr. Hubbard.

In politics Peter A. Hubbard is a staunch Republican, and both he and his wife are members of the Mill Creek Congregational Church. Socially he is connected with Williamson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of Dodgeville, where he is highly esteemed. Both as soldier and civilian Mr. Hubbard has always commanded the respect of the community, and is a representative citizen of this part of Iowa county.

SAMUEL FILMER CUCKOW, a prosperous and successful farmer of the town of Bradford, Rock county, belongs to the new generation of tillers of the soil, who work with their brains as well as their muscle, and now, in the very prime of life, is a fine specimen of that noble class, the American farmer.

Mr. Cuckow was born May 26, 1854, on the farm he now occupies, a son of Samuel Jarvis and Eliza Simmons (Filmer) Cuckow, and had the surroundings in his boyhood days that belonged to farmer lads of that time. He worked on the farm, attended the district school and the Emerald Grove high school, and the academies at Marshall and Walworth. After his school days had passed the young man remained at home, working first for his father, and later for himself, and his broad, well-tilled fields attest the intelligent care bestowed upon them. His land is located in section 17.

On Dec. 17, 1884, Samuel F. Cuckow was united in marriage with Mrs. Ida H. (Crump) Leap, widow of William E. Leap, and daughter of Josiah Harrison and Julia (Stuart)

Crump. They have an adopted son, Filmer Stuart Cuckow, born Nov. 27, 1893, who is the son of Mrs. M. E. Northrup, a deceased sister of Mr. Cuckow. Mrs. Ida H. Cuckow was born in Utica, N. Y., the eldest in a family of seven children. She is a lineal descendant of Anneke Jans, and belongs to the oldest family, in the line of succession, of heirs to her great undivided estate in New York. She is hospitable and very popular in the community, and presides over her happy home with all a woman's grace and refinement.

Josiah Harrison Crump, the father of Mrs. Cuckow, was a native of England, and came to this country in early manhood, locating at Utica. He became an architect, and rose to prominence in his chosen calling. In Utica he married Julia Stuart, and soon afterward removed to Niagara Falls, where he built the "Mount Eagle House," most of the public buildings in that city, and some of the finest residences, his own tasteful home being among them. From Niagara Falls he went to New York City, where he made his home for many years, but his last days were spent in Toronto, Canada, with one of his sons, where he died in 1891, at the age of seventy-three. His good wife had passed away two years previously.

PETER WOODHOUSE. Among the prominent citizens of Bloomington, Grant county, is Peter Woodhouse, the senior member of the banking firm of Woodhouse & Bartley, and a worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of southwest Wisconsin.

John Woodhouse, the father of our subject, was born about 1793 in Staffordshire, England, where he was reared, and where he married Ann Newton, who was born there in 1791. In 1830 Mr. Woodhouse left his family in England and crossed the ocean with the intention of providing a new home. By occupation he was a miner, and immediately after landing in America he made his way to Pottsville, Penn., the heart of the anthracite region of that State, where he secured employment, working industriously for two years before he thought it advisable to send for his family. In 1837 the family came to Wisconsin, settling in Grant county, where the father had been a short time previous to the arrival of the others. For years afterward he engaged in lead mining, being very prosperous. His land, on what is now known as Blake's Prairie, was obtained from the government, and this became the permanent home of Mr. Woodhouse, who died there in March, 1859, his widow surviving until February, 1868. Being among the earliest of the pioneers, they endured all of the privations and hardships incident to those early days, patiently awaiting the time when their labors should be rewarded. They were held in high esteem, and their memory is revered by those who now profit by the trials which they passed through. They became the parents of a large family of children, all but two of whom were brought from England. Of their six sons and four daughters, three survive: Mrs. Jane Hadley, of Bloomington; Peter, subject of this biography; and James, who is a resident of Lancaster. Mrs. Maria Fox died in Pennsylvania, never having come to Wisconsin, and soon after her death her husband, Henry Fox, was accidentally drowned in the mines, while he was at work. The first of the children to pass away after locating in this State was Levison, who died of typhoid fever in 1869, and his wife died two days later, leaving a family of nine children, the youngest but two hours old. Hannah became the wife of John Clegg, and died in 1865, at the age of thirty-two, leaving eight children; her husband survived many years, dying on May 20, 1901. Rev. John Woodhouse, a Methodist minister, was the next to pass away, and he was followed by Simon. The latter kept a hotel in Bloomington for many years; he left a wife and five children. Samuel died at Maxwell, Iowa, several years ago, and May Ann, Mrs. Hollenbeck, died at her home in Legal, Indian Territory, leaving four children.

Peter Woodhouse, our subject, was born in England Sept. 11, 1824, and was about eight years old when he came to America. Coming with the family to Wisconsin in 1837, this State has been his home ever since. For sixty-four years his hopes and fortunes have been bound up with those of Grant county, and very little of its development has been unobserved by him. Since 1849 his residence has been at Bloomington (at that time known as Tafton), and he previously lived in both Potosi and Beetown. For many years he engaged in both farming and mining, and he is considered one of the most substantial citizens of the county. In 1883 Mr. Woodhouse established the banking house in Bloomington in which he is the senior partner, and has been successful in its management. All of the brothers were successful men of business, and were estimable and honored citizens.

Mr. Woodhouse was married Jan. 11, 1858, to Miss Rachel Lyons, who was born April 11, 1832, in Manchester, England, a daughter of John Lyons, and came with her parents to America when but two years old. The family lived two years in Philadelphia, and then removed to Potosi, where the parents passed the rest of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Woodhouse have four children: Lily G., Mrs. Bartley; Rose, wife of Harry Grant; Milton F.; and Bertha, Mrs. Martin. Three children have passed away: Bessie, who died at the age of six years; Anna Mary, at the age of eight days; and Daisy, at birth.

Peter Woodhouse has traveled much, and has an interesting fund of information. In 1852 he went to California; and on the way had a most thrilling experience. Going by way of the Isthmus, he was a passenger on the ill-fated steamer "North America," which was wrecked on the Pacific coast, about thirty miles below Acapulco. The steamer was a total loss, and the passengers had a narrow escape. At Acapulco they were transferred to a sailing vessel, and after many hardships reached San Francisco in safety. Mr. Woodhouse remained in California about five years, and returned by the Panama route to New York.

Mr. Woodhouse is a progressive and public-spirited citizen. In his early voting days he was a Whig, but he has acted with the Republican party since its organization. Mrs. Woodhouse is a member of the Methodist Church, and he is liberal in his religious views.

PATRICK BARTLEY, the junior member of the banking firm of Woodhouse & Bartley, of Bloomington, is one of the well-known citizens and business men of Grant county. Mr. Bartley has the distinction of representing one of the early families of his county, and also of having been a soldier in the war for the preservation of the Union. His coming to Grant county dates from 1853.

Mr. Bartley was born in County Sligo, Ireland, Jan. 19, 1841, a son of Miles Bartley. In 1849 his parents, with three of their six children, emigrated to the United States, our subject remaining with a relative in Ireland; shortly afterward, however, he rejoined the family in the State of New York. From New York Miles Bartley removed his family to Galena, Ill., later moving to Wisconsin, where he entered land in the town of Patch Grove, on which he settled and resided many years, dying in Larned, Kans., at the advanced age of ninety-one years. His wife had passed away in Patch Grove in 1873.

As a boy Patrick Bartley engaged in farm work during the summers, and attended school in the winters. Soon after the outbreak of the Civil war, although but a youth of twenty years, he resolved to enter the service in defense of the Union. Accordingly, in September, 1861, he enlisted in what afterward became Company G, 5th Missouri Cavalry, which was organized in Milwaukee, Wis., as Milwaukee Cavalry, with the understanding that it was to constitute a part of Gen. John C. Fremont's body guard. Gen. Fremont, however, was superseded, and in November, 1862, the organization, then known as the 5th Missouri Cavalry, was consolidated with the 4th, and was thenceforth known as the 4th Missouri Cavalry. The regiment served with distinction in the Southwest, under Gen. Curtis, taking an active part in the campaign against the Confederate Gen. Price, and on March 6, 7 and 8 was engaged in the severe battle of Pea Ridge. It marched thence down the White river to Helena, Ark., where the regiment arrived in July, 1862, and here Mr. Bartley was taken severely ill, as the result of an injury received in the battle of Pea Ridge, and which finally occasioned his honorable discharge at St. Louis, soon after.

After his return from the army Mr. Bartley was for three years engaged in farming, following which he entered the Patch Grove Academy, where he was a student for three years, in preparation for the profession of teaching. For twenty years he continued to be one of the leading instructors of this part of the State, and at one time was principal of the school in Bloomington. In 1883 the present banking business was established, and Mr. Bartley became a partner in the same, which has continued until the present date. In 1877 he was admitted to the Bar, and has since practiced more or less.

On April 2, 1879, Mr. Bartley was married to Miss Lily Woodhouse, a daughter of Peter Woodhouse, his business partner, and four children have been born of this union: Frank L., Bessie R., Milton M. and Leo Paul. Mr. Bartley is a Democrat in his political affiliations, and an honored member of Will Hickok Post, No. 134, G. A. R.

Mr. Bartley is practically a self-made man, as he began life a poor boy, and was thrown upon his own resources at an early age. Entering the army in the service of his country, before he had attained his majority, he served as a faithful soldier, and later, by determination and energy, he fitted himself for the profession of teaching, and was successful in his endeavors. As a business man he has prospered, and his integrity has never been called into question, while as a citizen he is held in high esteem.

JOHN HANSON is one of the prominent citizens of Jordan township, Green county, though one of the younger members of that prosperous farming community, in which all his useful, active life has been passed. He was born Dec. 13, 1864, on the farm which he now manages.

Nathan T. Hanson, our subject's father, is well remembered by the older as well as the younger residents of this locality as a man who, in his day, took rank among the intelligent and successful men in this part of the county. He was a native of Maine, born in 1827, near Portland, and was of English origin. About 1850 he came West to Wisconsin, and at once settled on the farm in Jordan township, Green county, now owned by his children, where he successfully engaged in farming for the greater part of his remaining days. But though a hard-working agriculturist and the owner of a large property, he took equal interest in the advancement of the community in general, was public spirited in all local affairs, and was honored by his fellow townsmen with election to various offices of trust, in which he displayed the same ability that characterized the management of his own affairs. For a number of years he served as school superintendent of the township, was clerk of the township for some time, and served as chairman of the board two terms. He was well read, and kept himself informed on all current events of interest. Mr. Hanson was as popular as he was well known, was beloved for his neighborliness as much as he was esteemed for his integrity and good citizenship; his death occurred in New Haven, Conn., in 1894. He left a valuable farm of 185 acres, all improved and under a fine state of cultivation. Mrs. Hanson, whose maiden name was Mary Jane Smith, was born about 1834, in Pennsylvania, and was of Quaker origin; her parents, John and Ann Smith, also natives of Pennsylvania, came to Green county many years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson were married in 1859. She passed away in 1881. Seven children were born of this union, viz.: Emma, who is unmarried and resides in Monroe; Pauline, also unmarried, who lives on the home old place; John, our subject; Charles, who is unmarried; Ruth, deceased; George, living on the old place; and Edward, who married Hattie Stuntz, and resides at Whitewater, Wis., where he follows his trade, that of printer. Nathan T. Hanson had one brother, Simeon, who died in Maine.

John Hanson, whose name introduces these lines, has followed in the footsteps of his honored father in many ways, taking a leading part in local civil administration, and his services have proved highly acceptable to all concerned. He was reared on the home farm, educated in the local schools, and has become an intelligent, energetic man, noted for his honesty and integrity, his fairness in all his dealings, his temperate habits, and his staunch adherence to his convictions of what he thinks right. He is engaged in farming and dairying on the old home place, and has displayed business ability of a high order in its management. This record would not be complete without special mention of the offices which Mr. Hanson has held: For six years he was clerk of the township; for two years member and chairman of the township board; has served as assessor and in other positions, besides supporting, by his means and influence, all projects for the improvement and advancement of his township and county. Like his father, he is a staunch adherent of the principles of the Republican party. Socially he is a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge at Brownstown. Mr. Hanson has never married.

ALLISON W. STOUT. The evolution of modern architecture is based upon the conscientious work, high ideals and artistic tastes of the designer and builder. Among those who have successfully engaged in a business of this kind, in the beautiful town of Monticello, Green county, is Allison W. Stout, who was born, near Orangeville, Stephenson Co., Ill., Dec. 20, 1849, son of Samuel and Mary (Winters) Stout, natives of Pennsylvania. In their family were five sons and two daughters, six of whom are now living: Carrie, wife of Benjamin Musser, of Jewel City, Kans.; Edward, who lives in Stephenson county, Ill., on the old homestead; Cyrus, who resides at Siloam Springs, Ark.; Stephen, of Novelty, Mo.; Allison W., our subject; and Alice, who is the wife of Frederick Nihart, of Dewey, Utah.

Samuel Stout was a cabinet-maker, carpenter and joiner, and came to Illinois in 1844, first locating in Peoria, and a year later settling in Stephenson county, Ill., where he bought a farm, sold it, and bought another, whereon he reared his family. His death occurred April 22, 1897, at the age of eighty-four. His wife had entered into rest in 1896, in her seventy-third year. They were good and worthy people, devout members of the Evangelical Church, and Mr. Stout had been active in everything for the interest of his locality. Christopher Winters, father of Mary (Winters) Stout, was a native of Pennsylvania, of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, and located in Stephenson county, Ill., at an early day, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Allison W. Stout was reared on his father's farm in Stephenson county, where he attended the district schools. At the age of twenty he began to learn the carpenter's trade, and finding it congenial to his taste and natural ability, he made this his life work. For some ten years he has been engaged in contracting and building, and in the erection of his own elegant mansion, as well as those of others in the town, Mr. Stout has made use of his own designs.

On Sept. 12, 1894, Mr. Stout married Mrs. Lizzie Tone, widow of the late George Tone, and daughter of Richard and Ann (Pickup) Barlow.

Richard Barlow and his wife were natives of Manchester, England, who came to America in 1854, locating in Jefferson township, Green Co., Wis., and engaged in an agricultural life until the breaking out of the Civil war, when Mr. Barlow enlisted in Company D, 35th Wis. V. I., and faithfully served his adopted country from August, 1864, until February, 1866. Before the war Mr. Barlow followed the trade of tailoring, but since then he has been engaged in mercantile interests, and for twenty-three years filled the office of justice of the peace. Mr. and Mrs. Barlow were the parents of twelve children, ten of whom are still surviving, and they are honored and beloved residents in the home of their son-in-law, our subject, and his estimable wife.

Politically Mr. Stout casts his vote with the Republican party, conscientiously believing its principles to be the best for the country. For two years he was an efficient member of the village board. Socially he is connected with the Knights of the Globe. In addition to his own beautiful residence, Mr. Stout can point with pride to many of the most substantial buildings in this growing village. Although so many years have passed since he was an inmate of the old home, in Stephenson county, Ill., around which gather memories of his boyhood, he still has both a sentimental and financial interest in it. Mr. Stout is considered a representative citizen of Green county, where both he and wife have many friends and possess the esteem of all.

JOHN B. HORE, a well-known citizen of the town of Little Grant, Grant county, was a soldier in the Civil war, and has an honorable record for bravery. His birth took place across the ocean in 1826, in Cornwall, England, from which country have come some of the best citizens of the State of Wisconsin.

Reared in his native land, Mr. Hore did not come to America until 1847. Landing in New York, he went first to New Jersey, and there engaged in mining, later going to Pennsylvania, where he followed the same occupation. Subsequently he went to Maryland, thence back to New York, and then to the copper mines of Michigan, where he remained several years, but ever since the close of the Civil war he has been one of the esteemed citizens of Grant county. Mr. Hore went into the army in 1864, in Company F, 1st Wisconsin Cavalry, joining his regiment in Louisville, Ky., and at once entered into active service. As it is well remembered, the 1st Wisconsin Cavalry was a part of the force that captured the fleeing Confederate president, and Mr. Hore was with his regiment at that time, and had the pleasure of seeing the noted prisoner at Macon, Ga. There our subject was taken sick, from the effects of sunstroke, which rendered him unfit for any regular service. He was finally discharged in the fall of 1865.

Soon after the close of the war Mr. Hore was married to Miss Mary Coffman, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of Peter and Sarah Coffman, who had migrated to Wisconsin when Mary was about twelve years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Hore have eight children: Albert, James, Nettie, Jay and May (twins), Maria, Elizabeth and Era. During the war Mr. Hore was a faithful soldier, and since that time has won the respect of the residents of his locality as an industrious and most worthy citizen.

J. J. TRENER, retired farmer, Belmont, Lafayette county, Wisconsin.

WILLIAM B. GNAGI, M. D. Bereft of a mother's care in early infancy, Dr. Gnagi, now a rising young physician of Monroe, Green county, was reared in the family of Peter Gnagi, and under the fostering guardianship of this prominent citizen he was educated, and in gratitude he adopted the name of Gnagi when he attained his majority. He made his home with his benefactors until his marriage.

Dr. Gnagi was a native of Green county, Wis. He was born in the town of Clarno Feb. 3, 1870, the only child of Joseph and Maria (Hawthorn) Bender. The father, Joseph Bender, a native of Pennsylvania, had served through the Civil war as first lieutenant. Coming to Wisconsin at the close of the war, he married Maria Hawthorn, daughter of James Hawthorn, a native of New York, of Holland descent, who in early days had migrated to Green county, Wis., and there reared a large family. The young wife died a few days after the birth of their only child, William B., and the father, after finding a home for the motherless son with Peter Gnagi, returned to the East. He entered Johns Hopkins University, where he completed a course in medicine and surgery, and is now a practicing physician at Penn Yan, Yates Co., N. Y. He married again, and by his second marriage had three children, only one of whom, Estelle, is now living. William B., at his graduation at Rush Medical College, in 1893, met his father for the first time since their separation. His medical education was obtained partially by his own efforts. Reared on the farm of Peter Gnagi, he was given good educational advantages, and when twelve years old he accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Gnagi to California, where they remained two years on account of Mrs. Gnagi's ill health. Returning to Wisconsin, William B. entered the Monroe high school, and was graduated in the class of 1887, at the age of seventeen years. He taught district school for two terms in Clarno township, then took a business course in a school at Valparaiso, Ind. Choosing medicine as his profession, he began study in the office of Drs. Loofbourow and Confer, of Monroe, where he remained two years. He then entered Rush Medical College, at Chicago, and was graduated in the spring of 1893. Dr. Gnagi began practice in that city, and continued it successfully for seven years. In November, 1900, he came to Monroe, succeeded to the practice of Dr. Confer, his brother-in-law, and now occupies the same office.

Dr. Gnagi married June 2, 1891, Miss Louise Isely, daughter of John and Louisa (German) Isely. John Isely was a native of Switzerland, and for many years was a school and music teacher. He came to Green county, Wis., and there met his future wife, who was a native of Wisconsin, of Swiss parentage. For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. John Isely conducted the "Green County Hotel," in Monroe, and later moved to a farm near Oneco, Ill., about seven miles south of Monroe. Here he died, and his widow subsequently married David Stucky. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Isely, of whom six are now living, namely: Carrie, widow of Dr. Confer; Mary, wife of Henry Duerst, of Monroe; Louisa, wife of Dr. William B. Gnagi; Annie, wife of Fred Wettengel, of Monroe; Alice, wife of Rev. J. L. Haach, of Milwaukee; and Dr. John E. Isely, a dentist in Milwaukee, who for a time lived with Dr. Gnagi in Chicago, and there practiced dentistry. To Dr. William B. and Louise (Isely) Gnagi have been born four children: Elvira Louise, who died in infancy; Zelma Irene; Gladys; and William B., Jr. Mrs. Gnagi is a member of the Lutheran Church. Politically Dr. Gnagi is independent. While practicing at Chicago he served for a year as health officer and small-pox inspector, under Dr. Reynolds, the city physician. He is now a member of the Wisconsin Medical Society. Among the fraternal orders he holds membership in the Canadian Independent Order of Foresters, the Columbian Knights, Royal Arcanum and Chicago Turnverein. He has succeeded admirably in his Monroe practice, and already ranks high in the medical profession of Green county.

INDEX.

	PAGE.
Abell, Frank W.....	419
Acheson, Theodore L.....	883
Adams, Henry.....	489
Adams, John.....	680
Akin, Edward.....	75
Akin, Morgan J.....	74
Alexander, Frederick.....	325
Alexander, Hugh.....	484
Alexander, James S.....	484
Allen, Asaph J.....	423
Allen, Prof. Benjamin D.....	256
Allen, Henry R.....	423
Aller, Peter.....	28
Aller, William.....	28
Alsop, John.....	860
Alsop, Thomas J.....	860
Altman, Joseph.....	793
Ames, Harry.....	919
Andereck, Rev. John.....	777
Anderson, Andrew.....	389
Anderson, Christopher.....	908
Anderson, Henry S.....	753
Anderson, John (deceased).....	498
Anderson, John.....	118
Anderson, Mrs. John.....	498
Anderson, Nicholas.....	886
Andrews, Charles.....	174
Andrews, Rev. George W.....	174
Andrewson, Miss Annie T.....	5
Andrewson, Henry O.....	5
Andrewson, Rev. Ole, D. D.....	4
Anthony, John.....	718
Anthony, John E., D. D. S.....	92
Appleby, George M.....	103
Appleby, William H.....	252
Armstrong, Charles A., M. D.....	730
Armstrong, Leroy G., M. D.....	45
Armstrong, Robert.....	45
Arthur, Evan.....	545
Arthur, Samuel.....	561
Atherton, Walgrave.....	386
Atkinson, Francis.....	428
Atkinson, Richard.....	428
Atwood, Charles.....	323
Atwood, Volney.....	210
Austin, Nathaniel.....	804
Austin, Samuel R.....	543
Bacon, Charles A., M. A.....	216
Bainbridge, Mathew.....	618
Baker, Allen S.....	131
Baker, Edward D.....	818
Baker, Francis.....	656
Baker, Francis A.....	274
Baker, Henry.....	298
Baker, John T.....	132, 212, 274

	PAGE.
Baker, John W.....	809
Baker, Lewis.....	796
Baker, Mrs. Mary.....	657
Baker, Stephen J.....	212
Baldwin, Julius.....	404
Ballantine, Mrs. Abbie A.....	934
Ballantine, David.....	972
Ballantine, James.....	934
Ballantine, Mrs. Nancy E.....	972
Banfield, Thomas.....	969
Banfield, Mrs. Thomas.....	969
Banks, James A.....	864
Barber, A. H., M. D.....	277
Baremore, Alfred.....	573
Baremore, Mrs. Nancy E.....	572
Barger, Mrs. Mary (Gulson).....	948
Barker, George R.....	150
Barker, Job.....	150
Barliss, Hon. Andrew.....	128
Barliss, Mrs. Margaret.....	128
Barlow, C. L.....	963
Barlow, Richard.....	981
Barlow, Richard H.....	142
Barnard, Elliott D.....	88
Barnard, Shasta E.....	126
Barnes, Henry.....	206
Barnum, Frank.....	462
Barnum, Mrs. Sarah J.....	462
Barrett, David.....	736
Barron, James.....	697
Barrows, George W.....	602
Barrows, Joseph.....	602
Bartlett, Joseph.....	431
Bartley, Patrick.....	979
Basford, Hon. Luther.....	42
Basye, I. N.....	513
Basye, J. J., M. D.....	513
Batchelor, William.....	502
Bates, Allen C.....	85
Bates, Joseph W.....	85
Baumgartner, Jacob.....	458
Baxter, Hon. Charles Henry.....	344
Bayley, Ariel K.....	193
Beals, Charles W.....	13
Beals, Mrs. Johanna.....	13
Bean, Alburus C.....	708
Bear, James.....	446
Bear, Joseph L.....	446
Beaumont, Ramsey.....	334
Beaver, John O.....	19
Beaver, Ole J.....	19
Bechtolt, Rev. Albert B.....	709
Bechtolt, Daniel B.....	546, 709
Beck, John.....	389
Becker, John.....	885
Beilharz, Frederick.....	726

	PAGE.
Bell, John S.....	706
Bell, Peter.....	856
Bellmyer, Fred.....	937
Bellmyer, Mrs. John.....	936
Bellmyer, John C.....	936
Benage, Abraham.....	986
Bennett, Anson.....	669
Bennett, Byron.....	224
Bennett, B. J.....	874
Bennett, Chester C.....	147
Bennett, Clay W., M. D.....	740
Bennett, Felix C.....	331
Bennett, Franklin.....	858
Bennett, George.....	148, 451
Bennett, Hannah C., M. D.....	382
Bennett, James.....	213
Bennett, James, Sr.....	223
Bennett, Judge John R.....	9
Bennett, Hon. Joseph.....	691
Bennett, Lewis F., M. D.....	451
Bennett, Orrin J.....	669
Bennett, W. H.....	874
Bergheger, Herman.....	581
Berkey, Joshua H.....	694
Berry, Edward E., M. D.....	736
Bevan, Johnson.....	683
Bevan, Mrs. Johnson.....	683
Beveridge, James.....	128
Billings, William N.....	641
Binger, Mrs. E. B.....	936
Binger, Francis O.....	80
Binger, Samuel.....	80
Binger, Mrs. Susan.....	821
Binger, William (Cadiz).....	80
Binger, William.....	935
Bingham, Mrs. Caroline.....	409
Bingham, Judge John A.....	418
Bintliff, Gen. James.....	361
Bird, Joseph R.....	298
Birkbeck, Samuel, Ph.G., M. D.....	587
Bishop, Alonzo.....	616
Bishop, Myron A.....	616
Blackford, Enoch J.....	541
Blackford, William S.....	927
Blackman, Elisha.....	654
Blackman, Oscar L.....	654
Blackstone, Judge John W. 181.....	945
Blackstone, Joseph.....	181
Blakeley, Edwin.....	411
Blakeley, George A., M. D.....	411
Blakeley, Charles.....	214
Blakesley, George.....	315
Blakesley, Mrs. Ruth.....	315
Blanchard, Alvin.....	680
Blanchard, Asabel.....	680
Blanchard, C. D.....	525

PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Bleasdale, Ralph P.	141	Bushnell, Mrs. Elizabeth J.	926	Colson, D. L.	196
Bliss, Howard F.	33	Bussey, George W.	933	Coltman, John.	420
Bliss, James H.	231	Bussey, Hezekiah	933	Coltman, Martin E.	420
Blotz, John.	692	Bussing, Rev. Isaac S.	861	Comfort, Isaac C.	640
Blumer, Esajas.	405	Hutson, Thomas.	537	Comfort, Thomas.	640
Blumer, John, Jr.	406	Butson, Mrs. Thomas.	538	Confer, Francis M., M. D.	779
Blumer, John, Sr.	405	Buxton, John.	447	Conley, Capt. P. H.	416
Bohn, Syver H.	772	Buxton, Joseph.	447	Convey, Thomas.	778
Bonham, Alexander G.	51	Byers, Frederick W., M. D.	608	Cook, Alvin S.	307
Bonham, Charles S.	52	Byrne, Edward.	159	Cook, John H.	621
Bonham, Capt. Francis.	869	Byrne, Mrs. Esther.	159	Cook, Webster.	966
Bonham, Joseph.	51	Byrte, John.	821	Cooley, Francis A.	324
Bonson, Charles E.	722			Cooley, William B.	324
Bonson, John.	722	Cabanis, Hon. James H.	332	Coombe, Thomas.	449
Booth, Charles A.	368	Caldwell, Mrs. Ella M.	102	Coombe, William.	449
Booth, John R.	239	Callaway, James.	101	Cornelius, Nicholas.	674
Borden, William H., M. D.	96	Callaway, George A.	670	Correll, John.	646
Bossi, John A.	598	Callaway, John.	575	Cottingham, John M.	550
Bowell, Mrs. Catherine.	474	Callaway, Sampson H.	575	Cottingham, Miles D.	486
Bowell, Thomas A.	474	Calvert, William H.	398	Cottingham, Timothy.	550
Bowen, James E.	932	Camp, M. T.	175	Covert, George, M. D.	24
Bowmer, William.	241	Campbell, Hon. Archibald.	619	Covert, John A.	24
Boynton, Lars.	833	Campbell, Hugh.	242	Cowduroy, William.	112
Boynton, Lewis.	833	Campbell, William H.	824	Cox, Hon. George G.	633
Bracken, Gen. Charles.	442	Camron, Franklin.	829	Cox, James P.	614
Bracken, Thomas.	442	Camron, Hugh.	829	Cox, Judge James P.	614
Bradford, Frederick M.	761	Candler, Gustav.	569	Crabtree, Job H.	965
Bradley, Rev. Nathaniel C.	57	Cargill, Capt. William.	151	Cram, George H.	648
Bragg, Thomas J.	509	Carns, Mrs. Ann.	943	Craven, William.	107
Brant, Andrew J.	190	Carns, James F.	943	Crawford Brothers.	815
Bratley, Mrs. Mary C.	787	Carpenter, Alvin B.	33	Crawford, George.	816
Bratley, William C.	787	Carpenter, Edwin F.	318	Crawford, Jefferson.	899
Brewer, Lasell C.	142	Carpenter, John W.	799	Crawford, Hon. Robert M.	816
Bride, Patrick J.	588	Carpenter, William H.	846	Croke, Rev. J. P.	937
Bridge, Mrs. Anna.	392	Carr, Joseph G.	364	Cronin, Edward, M. D.	728
Bridge, John.	591	Carr, Hon. Solomon C.	272	Cronin, F. M., M. D.	728
Bridge, Joseph T.	391	Carrier, Terrence.	214	Crow, Thomas.	789
Bridges, Dudley C.	647	Carrington, Elisha.	18	Crull, George M.	734
Bridges, John.	648	Carthew, Mrs. Mary L.	171	Crull, George W.	734
Bridgman, Charles R.	235	Carthew, Thomas.	171	Cuckow, Samuel F.	977
Bridgman, John J.	235, 437	Case, Rev. George W.	967	Cuckow, Samuel J.	168
Briggs, William T.	947	Casler, Edgar S.	833	Cullen, George.	745
Brockhaus, Rev. H. H.	528	Cavanaugh, J. L.	427	Cullen, Joseph.	745
Brooks, Jesse.	817	Chamberlain, James A.	210	Culver, Alvah.	792
Brown, George M.	574	Champion, Charles B.	232	Culver, David W.	792
Brown, Nicholas H.	333	Champion, Mrs. Ellen.	233	Culver, DeWitt C.	877
Brown, Sam. P.	844	Chapman, Amyson.	463	Culver, John.	792
Brugger, Jacob S., Jr.	737	Chapman, A. B.	924	Culver, Joshua N.	139
Brunson, Delford B.	207	Chapman, Collins.	463	Culver, Lyman D., Esq.	139
Brunson, Ira W.	207	Chapman, Faithful W.	265	Curkeet, E. M.	443
Buchan, Joseph.	836	Charlton, Edwin A.	336	Curkeet, Mrs. E. M.	443
Buck, Erastus J., M. D.	424	Charnness, Isaac.	638	Curkeet, John.	291
Buckley, Cornelius.	351	Chestelson, Sever.	867	Curry, William M.	505
Buckmaster, Samuel B., M. D.	224	Churchill, Norman.	898	Curwen, John.	505
Buckmaster, Samuel R.	224	Clare, John.	574	Curwen, William W.	505
Bulfinch, George W.	876	Clark, Elijah N., M. D.	104	Cushman, Barnabas.	686
Bunbury, Thomas.	621	Clark, Jabez.	644	Cushman, Harvey.	685
Bunker, Mrs. Blanche.	762	Clarke, Charles C.	109	Cutts, Rufus I.	270
Bunker, William B., M. D.	762	Clarno, William.	852
Bunt, Mrs. Elizabeth.	559	Clary, Joseph H.	372	Dailey, Herman P.	731
Bunt, John.	559	Clemens, Christopher.	394	David, O. P.	935
Burdick, George.	17	Clemens, John.	394	Davies, John D.	758
Burdick, Justin H., M. D.	17	Clements, James W.	307	Davies, Thomas.	819
Burgess, Henry.	173	Clementson, Hon. George.	16	Davis, Benjamin J.	698
Burgess, J. Martin.	173	Clemmer, Jasper.	390	Davis, David.	395
Burns, Edward E.	610	Clemmer, John A.	390	Davis, James.	457
Burr, B. F.	893	Clifton, Bascom.	430	Davis, James N.	395
Burr, W. D.	893	Clifton, Isaac N.	430	Davis, John.	682
Burrington, David.	717	Cline, James.	195	Davis, William W.	468
Burrington, Reuben.	717	Cline, John.	277	Davy, Hiram L.	843
Burrows, William.	490	Colburn, T. J.	373	Day, Rufus M.	544
Burton, Joseph.	786	Colburn, Willis P.	373	Day, Rufus M.	627
Burton, Joseph M.	840	Colebeck, Henry.	540	Deller, Joseph.	595
Bushnell, E. D.	926	Collie, George L., A. M., Ph. D.	160	Dempsey, Rev. Thomas.	516
				Dennis, Robert W.	516

	PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Dennis, William.....	516	Ellsworth, John.....	770	Gerber, Nicholas.....	437
Dentzler, William H.....	950	Ellsworth, John M.....	771	Gerhart, Phillip.....	547
Derrick, Franklin H.....	355	Ellsworth, Reuben.....	771	Gibson, William F.....	435
Derrick, Franklin R.....	561	Elmer, Conrad K.....	491	Giesel, Rev. E. O.....	39
Derrick, Rodolphus.....	355	Elmer, John A.....	492	Gifford, Henry B., M. D.....	955
Devereux, Charles C.....	127	Elmer, Werner.....	879	Gilkey, Herbert S.....	98
Devereux, Edward.....	127	Elston, A. C. Vanderwater.....	260	Gill, Isaiah.....	588
DeWitt, Isaac G.....	567	Elston, S. B.....	260	Gillett, Alburts A.....	807
Dick, John.....	496	Elwell, F. A.....	626	Gilmore, Mrs. Judith J.....	241
Dick, William H.....	496	Elwell, James.....	626	Gilmore, Lysander.....	241
Dickinson, Charles C.....	600	Emmerson, Edward H.....	831	Glasson, John.....	943
Dickinson, Ensign P.....	600	Emerson, Mrs. Helen B.....	121	Glasson, Mrs. Levinia.....	942
Dinsdale, John.....	111	Emerson, Joseph, D. D., LL. D.....	120	Gleason, John E.....	79
Divall, Fred.....	853	Eplett, John.....	449	Gnagi, Peter.....	466
Divan, Isaac.....	953	Erickson, Ole M.....	854	Gnagi, William B., M. D.....	982
Dixon, Ora A.....	216	Etter, Rev. John T.....	471	Goldin, Reuben W.....	780
Dixon, William R.....	215	Evans, Evan J.....	320	Goldin, Hon. Theodore W.....	780
Dobson, Rev. Frederick.....	273	Evans Family.....	40	Goldmann, George H.....	97
Dodds, James J.....	685	Evans, John M., M. D., Sr.....	8	Goodrich, Elijah.....	139
Dodge, Ammi.....	500	Evans, Jonathan H.....	41	Goodrich, Ezra.....	48
Dodge, Hon. A. Clarke.....	136	Evensen, Mrs. Carrie.....	783	Goodrich, Joseph.....	48
Dodge, Charles F.....	500	Evensen, Christen.....	788	Goodrich, Lemuel M.....	60
Dolan, James.....	465	Eversoll, Rheinhard.....	623	Goodrich, Mark.....	139
Dolan, Owen.....	465	Ewing, Mrs. Jane A.....	275	Goodrich, Wilbur F.....	60
Doty, Edward P.....	183	Ewing, Mary L., M. D.....	87	Gorham, Ernest W.....	779
Doty, Ezra P.....	187	Ewing, Thomas H.....	275	Gorham, Rice D.....	915
Doty, E. Philo.....	323			Gorham, William C.....	915
Doty, Zuri S.....	167, 323	Farrey, William.....	275	Graham, Arthur W.....	806
Dowling, Rev. Sylvester J.....	749	Farwell, George.....	609	Graham, John.....	806
Doyle, Andrew.....	719	Farwell, Russell.....	609	Grant, Patrick.....	850
Doyle, Arthur.....	719	Fassbender, Henry H.....	594	Grant, Thomas.....	850
Draggs, John.....	424	Fathers, James A.....	771	Gratiot, Charles C., M. D.....	883
Drake, Jefferson.....	951	Fawcett, David.....	661	Gratiot Family.....	381
Dunn, Frederick C.....	454	Fennel, George W.....	802	Gratiot, Henry.....	382
Dunwiddie, Daniel.....	968	Fennel, R. C.....	803	Graves, Benjamin A.....	116
Dutbie, William.....	301	Fessenden, Edmund S., M. D.....	966	Graves, Roswell.....	116
Duxstad, Knud B.....	414	Field, Edward.....	959	Gray, Alonzo C.....	21
Dyer, Abner.....	809	Field, William.....	283	Gray, Mrs. Catharine.....	30
Dyer, William J.....	809	Field, William S.....	283	Gray, Charles S.....	429
		Finley, J. L.....	125	Gray, James.....	29
Eager, Almeron.....	130	Finn, Charles B.....	857	Gray, John.....	68
Earl, Harmon H.....	6	Finn, Mrs. Lydia G.....	857	Gray, Nathaniel.....	421
Earnest, James H.....	620	Flannery, Hugh.....	948	Gray, Samuel.....	68
Earnest, Mrs. Mary E.....	620	Flint, John.....	379	Gray, William H.....	421
Eastman, Amos.....	355	Flint, Capt. Thomas.....	378	Green, Henry W.....	12
Eastman, Andrew.....	203	Flower, Dwight, M. D.....	396	Green, Paul M.....	12
Eastman, Darius.....	354	Foley, John.....	418	Griffith, Samuel.....	310
Eastman, George W., M. D.....	1	Folts, David.....	594	Grimm, Aloys.....	262
Eaton, Edward D., D. D., LL. D.....	32	Folts, Ransom B.....	594	Grimm, Hermann.....	146
Eaton Family.....	349	Fowler, Abel C.....	887	Grimm, Philip C.....	141
Eaton, Mrs. Martha A.....	348	Frank, Major George R.....	15	Grindell, Lieut. John.....	165
Eaton, Rev. Dr. Samuel.....	32	Fredricksen, Frederick.....	622	Grindell, Mrs. Margaret A.....	504
Eaton, Thomas H.....	348	Fryslie, Andrew.....	855	Grindell, William.....	504
Eck, George.....	893	Fryslie, Ben.....	855	Grinnell, Robert P.....	374
Edden, Ransom W., M. D.....	841	Fuelberg, Frederick.....	687	Grinnell, Willard E.....	374
Edden, Thomas H.....	841	Funk, Benjamin.....	395	Grove, Mrs. Caroline.....	819
Eddington, Edward E.....	347	Funk, John E.....	395	Grove, Lars O.....	819
Eddington, Mrs. E. E.....	348	Funk, Nicholas.....	567	Grunenwald, Jacob.....	827
Edwards, James.....	494	Funk, Nicholas H.....	567	Gulson, Christopher.....	948
Edwards, T. L., M. D.....	81	Funston, W. J., D. D. S.....	169	Gundry, Joseph.....	605
Eidsmoe, M. O.....	747			Gundry, Miss Mary R.....	606
Eidsmore, A. M.....	747	Ganshirt, Lawrence.....	387	Gundry, William P.....	606
Einerson, John.....	758	Gant, Charles.....	952	Gunn, William.....	100
Einerson, Martin J.....	758	Garden, William.....	480
Einerson, Sever.....	758	Gardner, David.....	586	Haffele, Jacob.....	422
Eldredge, Barnabas B.....	30	Gardner, Dewey.....	440	Haggert, James.....	115
Eldredge, William M.....	224	Gardner, D. J.....	586	Hake, George W.....	580
Eley, Henry.....	416	Gardner, John W.....	744	Hake, Lycurgus.....	580
Elgar, William.....	213	Gardner, Warren E.....	440	Hale, Alonzo.....	921
Ellefson, George.....	822	Gassett, Lucius.....	471	Hale, George W.....	921
Ellis, Rev. Leroy.....	356	Gehrand, G. W.....	753	Hale, John.....	963
Ellis, Nehemiah.....	930	Geiger, John.....	354	Hale, Robert C.....	964
Ellis, Richard F.....	929	Geiger, Otto F.....	354	Hale, Mrs. Sarah.....	964
Ellis, William R.....	237	Gerber, Frederick.....	437	Hall, George W., Sr.....	122

PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Haman, Samuel H.....	526	Holford, U. L., M. D.....	754	Johnson, John A.....	707
Hancock, Edward.....	806	Holford, William H.....	754	Johnson, Stephen.....	305
Handy, Addison.....	228	Holmes, Edward A.....	383	Johnson, Warren.....	403
Haney, Mrs. Mary.....	436	Holmes, Harvey.....	383	Johnson, William.....	652
Hannum, Rufus.....	791	Holmes, William.....	211	Johnson, William F.....	535
Hannum, Warren.....	54, 791	Holmes, William, Sr.....	762	Joiner Family.....	293
Hansen, Carl A., M. D.....	105	Holmes, William S.....	466	Joiner, Stanley H.....	293
Hanson, John.....	980	Hooser, Jacob.....	890	Jones, Benjamin G.....	441
Hanson, Nathan T.....	980	Hooser, Mrs. May.....	891	Jones, Chauncey.....	438
Hanthorn, George.....	280	Hore, John B.....	981	Jones, James.....	731
Hartclerod, James M.....	743	Hornbeck, Cyrus A.....	577	Jones, Jesse S.....	187
Harker, Mrs. Mary A.....	460	Hornbeck, Mrs. Mary.....	577	Jones, John.....	196
Harker, Simon.....	459	Horner, Matthew.....	253	Jones, John H.....	271
Harms, Dedrick.....	499, 664	Horner, Rodger.....	253	Jones, John W.....	271
Harms, Miss Emily.....	665	Horsley, Henry.....	462	Jones, J. W.....	285
Harms, George L.....	665	Horsley, William.....	462	Jones, Mrs. J. W.....	285
Harms, James W.....	499	Horton, George H.....	483	Jones, Lloyd.....	872
Harms, John.....	666	Hosier, Evan A.....	392	Jones, Lloyd, Sisters.....	974
Harms, Louis L.....	337	Hovey, Alfred.....	765	Jones, Obed K.....	438
Harris, Hon. Joseph.....	144	Hovey, Eleazer.....	765	Jones, Rev. P. J.....	590
Harris, Rev. William.....	942	Howard, Cornelius.....	927	Jones, Richard Lloyd.....	973
Harrison, James.....	333	Howe, William E.....	117	Jones, Thomas J.....	161
Hart, Orrin L.....	884	Hubbard, Peter A.....	976	Karlen, Jacob.....	440
Hart, Theodore F.....	884	Hudson, Henry.....	421	Karn, Casper W.....	868
Hartford, W. P., M. D.....	434	Hudson, James.....	338	Keen, Joseph.....	415
Hartwich, Gottlieb.....	545	Hudson, William H.....	338	Keene, Oliver F.....	258
Hartwig, Christ F.....	725	Huey, Rev. Samuel G.....	739	Keene, Samuel B.....	258
Hartwig, George.....	877	Huffman, Jacob.....	530	Keith, Adam.....	18
Hartwig, John, Sr.....	949	Huffman, James.....	849	Kemler, A. W.....	20
Hartwig, John, Jr.....	877	Hughes, James.....	303	Kemler, James C.....	21
Hartwig, Louis.....	881	Hulbert, John W.....	857	Kemler, John.....	20
Hartwig, Mrs. Sophie.....	566	Hulbert, Lorrain D.....	783	Kemmerer, Charles W.....	481
Hartwig, William.....	566	Hull, Robert.....	880	Kemmerer, John F.....	254
Harvey, Mrs. Caroline.....	39	Hungerford, Ulysses M.....	317	Kemmerer, S. H.....	481
Harvey, Rev. William.....	38	Huntington, Richard.....	94	Kemp, Charles.....	837
Hassell, Rev. Richard.....	834	Huntington, Robert M.....	93	Kemp, John.....	908
Hassell, Samuel E., M. D.....	834	Hutzel, Samuel.....	592	Kempton, Rev. Arthur C.....	699
Hastings, John Q.....	860	Ingersoll, Chalmers.....	91	Kendall, Luther W.....	77
Hawk, George.....	689	Ingersoll, John W.....	482	Kendall, William.....	77
Hawk, William.....	923	Irish, Horatio P.....	227	Kenney, Edward.....	714
Hawley, Albert G.....	518	Irish, Stephen B.....	227	Kenney, J. E.....	714
Hawley, Daniel S.....	518	Israel, George W.....	322	Kettler, August.....	532
Hawley, Mrs. Mary L.....	519	Jaberg, Roy.....	917	Kettler, Henry.....	920
Hawthorn, Alfred H.....	511	Jackman, Claremont S.....	63	Key, Abraham.....	853
Hawthorn, James.....	511, 583	Jackman, Timothy.....	63	Key, Marshall.....	853
Hawthorn, John E.....	583	Jackson, Alfred A.....	56	Kieler, George.....	896
Hayden, James M.....	685	Jackson, Christopher M.....	869	Kieler, John.....	896
Hayden, Martin.....	910	Jackson, James (deceased).....	952	Kies, Allen.....	533
Hayden, Samuel.....	685	Jackson, James.....	822	Kies, Daniel.....	533
Hayes, John.....	180	Jacobs, David E.....	727	Killam, Kimble.....	98
Heathcock, John.....	624	Jacobs, R. S.....	889	Killam, Rush.....	98
Heathcock, Joseph J.....	624	Jacobs, Wilder B.....	723	Kilpatrick, James.....	257
Heberlein, John F.....	507	Jacobson, Iver.....	570	Kilpatrick, Fermer.....	776
Helgesen, Elias J., M. D.....	864	Jacques, William Henry.....	527	Kimball, Frank D.....	776
Helgesen, John.....	865	Jameson, Rev. James.....	19	Kinsman, Thomas.....	530
Helm, Ernest C., M. D.....	83	Jameson, William K., M. D.....	19	Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Caroline.....	325
Helm, Arthur C., M. D.....	84	Jeffery, Francis.....	62	Kirkpatrick, James C.....	650
Hemstreet, George E.....	832	Jeffery, James.....	62	Kirkpatrick, James G.....	325
Hern, Arthur.....	757	Jeffris, David.....	248	Klindt, John A.....	129
Hern, William.....	757	Jeffris, David K.....	252	Klinkhammer, F. W.....	243
Hetherington, W. M.....	24	Jeffris Family.....	248	Knapp, Abraham V.....	866
Hettman, Jacob R.....	263	Jenkin, Samuel.....	551	Knapp, A.....	907
Hill, Silas.....	287	Jenkins, Benjamin.....	460	Knapp, Frank S., D. D. S.....	866
Hinn, Charles P.....	698	Jenkins, Hon. Thomas, Jr.....	460	Knill, Harold.....	108
Hinn, Joseph, Sr.....	698	Jeremiason, Ole.....	613	Knobel, David.....	755
Hird, James S.....	795	Johns, Frederick.....	164	Knudson, Nils.....	867
Hird, William.....	795	Johns, John.....	164	Knudson, Albert G.....	99
Hoare, James A.....	738	Johnson, Edwin.....	444	Knudson, Gulick.....	100
Hoare, John.....	738	Johnson, Edwin A.....	444	Kolb, Philip.....	549
Hodge, George R.....	914	Johnson, Farnum.....	403	Krog, Fredrich.....	582
Hodges, Gilbert T.....	862	Johnson, Harlan J.....	717	Kubli, Joderich.....	644
Hodges, William.....	862	Johnson, Henry W.....	403	Kuehner, Martin.....	948
Hoffman, William.....	924			Kumlien, Ludwig, M. S.....	89
Holcomb, Reuben T.....	526

INDEX.

987

PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Kumlien, Thure T. L.....	89	Loucks, Adam H.....	481	Mayne, Dexter D.....	188
Kundert, Bartholomeus A.....	878	Lovejoy, Hon. Allen P.....	36	Meacham, John A.....	939
Kundert, Jacob.....	962	Loveland, Argalus.....	593	Meehan, John.....	411
Kundert, John T.....	878	Loveland, Edwin A.....	593	Meinert, Christopher.....	363
Kundert, Paul.....	878	Lowrey, Mrs. Heloise.....	804	Melvin, Alonzo.....	557
Kundert, Rudy M.....	962	Lowrey, Goodwin.....	803	Melvin, Fordyce R.....	557
LaBorde, Peter.....	452	Loy, William, M. D.....	506	Menzie, Charles H.....	303
Ladd, Calvin.....	855	Luchsinger, John.....	673	Menzie, Robert R.....	788
Lane, Henry C.....	66	Luckey, R. B.....	718	Menzie, Silas W.....	788
Lanyon, William.....	608	Ludlow, Mrs. Arabut.....	328	Metcalfe, Frank W.....	753
Lanyon, Mrs. William.....	664	Ludlow, Arabut.....	328	Metcalfe, Francis.....	774
Lappin, Mrs. Mary J.....	82	Ludlum, William M.....	380	Meyer, Fred A.....	928
Lappin, Thomas.....	82	Lunn, Ole J.....	359	Meyer, William C.....	528
Larson, Martin.....	938	Lyke, John J.....	240	Miles, James.....	400
Laughlin, James W.....	670	Lyman, James W.....	859	Miles, John F.....	400
Leadbetter, Mrs. Ann.....	756	Lyman, George S.....	859	Mill, Henry.....	266
Lee, Charles.....	898	Lynch, Thomas A.....	873	Miller, George.....	885
Lee, George.....	477	Lyons, John.....	848	Miller, Harvey M.....	374
Lee, John.....	477	Lytle, Charles A.....	774	Miller, Jacob.....	523
Lee, Truman T.....	80	McBride, John.....	887	Miller, Mrs. Katherine.....	885
Legler, David.....	850	McBride, Mrs. Robert.....	546	Mills, James, M. S., M. D.....	208
Legler, John.....	850	McBride, Robert.....	546	Mills, Judge Joseph T.....	631
Leser, Peter.....	606	McClain, John.....	565	Minor, Capt. Orrin E.....	479
Levitt, John.....	149	McDermott, Capt. John.....	149	Mitchell, Abner.....	491, 859
Levitt, Luther B.....	149	McDermott, Thomas E., M. D.....	150	Mitchell, Hon. Franklin.....	491
Lewis, Edward F.....	304	McDonald, Alpheus N.....	566	Mix, E. N.....	666
Lewis, Franklin F.....	312	McEwan, James.....	14	Mix, Homer P., M. D.....	656
Lewis, James.....	961	McGavock, Hugh.....	794	Monroe, William, M. D.....	536
Lewis, John.....	59	McGinnity, Rev. Eugene M.....	950	Monroe, William B., M. D.....	537
Lewis, Marshall B.....	961	McGovern, Phil.....	905	Moore, Aaron T.....	145
Lewis, Stephen B.....	304	McGowan, Emmett D.....	64	Moore, A. W.....	622
Lewis, Thomas.....	568	McGowan, James S.....	64	Moore, Frank I.....	587
Lewis, William, Sr.....	59	McGranahan, William.....	230	Moore, George A.....	145
Lewis, William.....	649	McGregor, Duncan, M. A.,		Moore, Isaac.....	587
Libby, C. A.....	38	Litt, D.....	392	Moore, Col. John.....	622
Libert, Frederick.....	385	McKahan, Lewis.....	625	Morgan, William.....	917
Lichtenwalner, Albert F.....	725	McKellar, Archibald, M. D.....	525	Morgan, Mrs. William.....	917
Lichtenwalner, Joseph S.....	745	McKenna, Mrs. Mary L.....	445	Morrell, Lee.....	12
Liddle, Miss Elizabeth A.....	195	McKenna, Michael.....	445	Morrell, Ruel.....	11
Liddle, Ralph.....	195	McKinny, James E.....	522	Morris, John I.....	188
Lincoln, Azariah.....	413	McKinny, Joseph.....	522	Morrison, Mrs. Catherine E.....	419
Lincoln, Joseph H.....	413	McLaughlin, William W.....	405	Morrison, Joseph.....	419
Lindsay, James.....	816	McLimans, John.....	903	Morse, Mrs. Angelett.....	23
Lipman, Ernest.....	456	McLimans, Mrs. Sophronia A.....	903	Morse, Calvin.....	630
Lippolt, Peter B.....	568	McMurray, John.....	504	Morse, Helen C.....	23
Litel, James E.....	874	McNeil, Martin.....	590	Morse, Mrs. Martha A.....	631
Litel, John F.....	871	McNett, Mrs. Amanda.....	548	Morse, Milton M.....	630
Little, John.....	102	McNett, Edwin L.....	548	Morse, Reuben S.....	229
Little, Thomas.....	169	McNett, Lorenzo.....	548	Morton, Alexander.....	535
Little, Walter.....	556	McPherson, Alexander.....	571	Moseley, Lucius S.....	357
Livingston, Joseph.....	644	McPherson, George W.....	732	Mouat, Jeremiah.....	200
Lloyd, Thomas J.....	249	McPherson, John.....	732	Mouat, Peter J.....	200
Lloyd-Jones.....	972	McWilliams, James.....	911	Mueller, Prof. Rudolph H.....	276
Lloyd-Jones, Richard.....	973	MacDonald, Edward, M. D.....	560	Muesse, Henry.....	659
Lloyd-Jones Sisters.....	974	Maher, Thomas.....	564	Muffley, John R.....	563
Loewi, Adolph.....	531	Manchester, Mrs. Sarah.....	958	Mullen, John.....	453
Loney, Charles W.....	134	Mani, David.....	879	Mullen, Samuel.....	453
Long, Henry.....	808	Mappes, Col. Charles.....	880	Mullen, Mrs. Samuel.....	454
Long, Louis.....	157	Mappes, Mrs. Minnie.....	881	Mulrooney, James.....	202
Long, William H.....	157	Marcussen, F. W.....	748	Munger, Augustus C.....	191
Longbotham, John.....	716	Marsden, Henry.....	469	Murdock, Edwin.....	131
Longbotham, Thomas.....	716, 882	Marsden, Thomas.....	469	Murdock, Floyd D.....	131
Longfield, Rev. Arthur.....	742	Marshall, Francis C.....	198	Murphy, Dennis.....	752
Loofbourrow, Nathan A., M. D.....	358	Marshall, George A.....	197	Murphy, J. B.....	925
Loomis, Oscar M.....	327	Martens, Henry.....	896	Murphy, James W.....	900
Loomis, Samuel B.....	450	Martin, Hon. Harry. C.....	232	Murphy, Matthew.....	752
Loomis, Miss Sara E.....	451	Martin, John C.....	944	Murphy, William.....	900
Looney, Abraham.....	360	Martin, John J.....	790	Myers, John.....	489
Looney, James S.....	360	Martin, Nathaniel.....	755	Myers, Samuel.....	958
Lord, Horace J.....	813	Marvel, E. J.....	279	Naess, Rev. J. A. E.....	941
Lord, James A., M. D.....	10	Marvin, Joseph T.....	279	Nagle, John.....	102
Lord, Simon Lock.....	10	Mates, William.....	350	Nagle, Thomas.....	738
Lothrop, Jason B.....	276	Mayhew, William A.....	296	Nagle, Thomas D.....	738

PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Napp, Conrad.....	222	Peake, Rev. Thomas D., A. M.,		Regez, Jacob.....	517
Napp, Mrs. Conrad.....	222	D. D.....	261	Rhoades, Mathias P.....	814
Neely, Benjamin F.....	677	Pearsall, Charles J.....	135	Rice, Moors.....	727
Neely, Robert.....	677	Peck, Everett.....	828	Rice, M. M.....	727
Nehls, Henning.....	695	Peck, Nelson.....	828	Richards, John.....	946
Nehls, William H.....	695	Peck, Walter W., M. D.....	720	Richards, Mrs. John.....	946
Nelson, Edward.....	962	Peckham, Abel.....	343	Richards, Orson M.....	221
Newhall, Elisha.....	23	Peckham, Mrs. E. M.....	344	Richards, Mrs. Orson M.....	221
Newman, Jefferson J.....	480	Peckham, Winfield S.....	343	Richardson, Edmund W.....	823
Newman, John.....	325	Pedley, John S.....	170	Richardson, Mrs. Elizabeth.....	940
Newman, William S.....	810	Pedley, Mrs. Mary A.....	170	Richardson, Mrs. Elizabeth W.....	811
Newton, E. Frank.....	487	Pedley, Peter S.....	515	Richardson, Hamilton.....	44
Newton, Isaac W.....	645	Pedley, William.....	516	Richardson, Joseph.....	940
Newton, John.....	645	Pengra, George H.....	738	Richardson, Leonidas.....	811
Nice Family.....	824	Pengra, George S.....	741	Richardson, Marshall P.....	701
Nice, John W.....	823	Pengra, Hon. Marshall H.....	760	Richardson, William S.....	811
Niehaus, Bennett W.....	593	Pengra, Wallace A.....	741	Riege, E.....	301
Nolan, Thomas S.....	254	Penn, J. B.....	912	Riggs, John M.....	383
Norcross, Hon. Pliny.....	35	Perkins, Edward J.....	954	Riley, William W.....	847
North, Thomas.....	199	Peters, John W.....	922	Rindlaub, Martin P.....	352
Nowlan, Burton F.....	278	Phelps, Abram.....	172	Riter, Charles.....	913
Nowlan, Oscar F.....	835	Phelps, Mrs. Elizabeth C.....	178	Robb, Davis.....	642
Nuti, Charles J. F.....	61	Phelps, Frank B.....	172, 176	Robb, Nelson.....	642
		Phelps, Milton M.....	172, 177	Robbins, James C.....	233
Oettiker, Jacob.....	294	Phillips, Allen F.....	308	Roberts, George W., M. D.....	764
Oettiker, John.....	294	Phillips, Charles E.....	831	Roberts, Mrs. Jane.....	201
Oettiker, Lieut. W. H.....	919	Phillips, Daniel W.....	407	Roberts, Jonathan.....	764
Okey, Lewis M.....	910	Phillips, David.....	496	Roberts, William D.....	201
Oliver, Charles.....	839	Phillips, Elmer.....	818	Robinson Family.....	433
Oliver, Washington.....	839	Phillips, Israel.....	817	Robinson, George H.....	124
Olson, Gustav.....	941	Pierce, James.....	143	Robinson, John.....	678
Olson, Mrs. Mary.....	769	Pierce, Richmond B.....	53	Robinson, John M.....	124
Olson, Nelson.....	895	Pilling, Elias.....	251	Robinson, Judson L.....	433
Olson, Oscar R.....	845	Pinch, Mrs. Ann.....	909	Robinson, Thomas.....	124
Olson, Rollin.....	769, 845	Pinch, Joseph.....	909	Robinson, William.....	484
Orton, Hon. Philo A.....	166	Pitts, Henry.....	932	Robinson, William J.....	484
Ortscheid, John B.....	773	Poble, William, Sr.....	964	Robison, James.....	445
Osborn, James.....	61	Pollock, David H.....	268	Rock, Abner S.....	469
Osborn, Capt. S. W.....	152	Pollock, Robert.....	295	Rock, Charles H.....	469
Ostrander, James.....	675	Pool, Francis.....	183	Roddick, Ariel.....	268
Ostrander, John H.....	675	Poole, Albert.....	539	Roddick, John.....	268
Owen, Dr. Edward B.....	858	Poole, John, Jr.....	539	Roderick, Henry.....	533
Owen, John.....	688	Porter, William.....	90	Roderick, James W.....	790
Owen, John H.....	688	Posten, William.....	937	Roderick, William G.....	660
Owrey, Jacob.....	375	Powell, Lewis.....	863	Rogers, James D.....	747
		Preston, Mrs. Charlotte.....	571	Root, Tilden S.....	920
Pace, Jackson.....	151	Preston, Matthew.....	488	Rose, J. M.....	147
Page, George.....	133	Preston, Nathaniel.....	570	Rosenthal, William.....	826
Palmer, Andrew J.....	836	Prior, August C.....	492	Ross, Augustus.....	470
Pape, Rev. Peter.....	94	Prior, Gottfried.....	492	Ross, John J.....	740
Parker, Charles H.....	86	Proctor, Eli.....	412	Ross, Leonard.....	507
Parker, Dwight T., Jr.....	368	Proctor, George A.....	412	Ross, Marion F.....	470
Parker, Dwight T., Sr.....	366	Prussing, Adolph.....	941	Ross, Samuel C.....	740
Parker Family.....	366	Prytchect, John.....	162	Ross, William H.....	507
Parker, L. Holden.....	86	Puffer, Prescott W.....	498	Rote, Alvin F.....	715
Parkinson, Col. Daniel M.....	720	Purves, Luther E.....	797	Rote, Lewis.....	715
Parkinson, Peter.....	721	Purves, Thomas.....	797	Rountree, Hon. John H.....	541
Parkinson, William B.....	679	Putnam, John J.....	371	Rowe, Frank.....	226
Patch, Henry.....	211			Rowlands, William.....	267
Paterson, David B.....	54	Qualley, Bernt W.....	712	Royce, Rev Fayette, D. D.....	7
Paterson, Hugh B.....	5			Rudolph, Paul.....	901
Patterson, Cyrus W.....	626	Raisbeck, John.....	417	Rundell, John S.....	643
Patterson, Franklin.....	493	Raisbeck, Leonard.....	417	Rundell, Samuel.....	643
Patterson, Parious P.....	626	Ralph, William.....	47	Rush, Henry.....	576
Paul, Homer M.....	119	Randall, A. N.....	768	Ruskell, Edward.....	359
Paul, James.....	976	Ranous, Clark.....	907	Russell, C. H., M. D.....	581
Paul, Lemuel.....	119	Ranous, Henry E.....	907	Russell, Dr. George W.....	243, 581
Paulsen, George.....	956	Ransom, Samuel C.....	302	Russell, George W.....	249
Paulson, Jacob.....	760	Raymer, Mrs. Amelia.....	701	Ryan, Edward.....	286
Paulson, Rev. Ole.....	255	Raymer, Jesse.....	700	Ryan, Edward H., A.B., LL. B.....	286
Peacock, J. H.....	970	Read, William H.....	119	Ryland, George W.....	639
Peacock, Thomas H.....	585	Rear, G. E.....	730
Peacock, William.....	585	Rech, John C.....	158	Sambrook, Peter.....	894
Peake, E. D., Esq.....	558	Redman, James W.....	918	Sawin, Dwight D.....	974

PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Sawin, Horace.....	974	Smith, Mrs. Laura R.....	543	Sutherland, George G.....	122
Scadden, Richard.....	742	Smith, Mark.....	540	Sutherland, Quincy O., M. D.....	121
Schaal, George F.....	873	Smith, Mrs. Mary M.....	94	Swan, John.....	974
Scheel, Henry.....	472	Smith, Melford Pratt.....	269	Swan, Stephen.....	891
Schenck, Nicholas.....	371	Smith, Samuel M.....	931	Swizer, John.....	487
Schenck, William.....	371	Smith, Scott.....	402	Sylvester, Caleb.....	432
Schindler, Andreas.....	601	Smith, Simon.....	476	Sylvester, Eben W.....	432
Schindler, Jacob D.....	601	Smith, William R.....	512
Schmid, Adam D.....	870	Sneclode, John H. C.....	457	Taft, Frank D.....	970
Schmitt, Anton.....	573	Snowden, Randolph.....	702	Taft, S. C.....	970
Schneider, Charles P.....	597	Snowden, W. R.....	702	Talmdage, John F.....	521
Schreiner, John.....	254	Sparks, Joseph.....	246	Talmdage, Rudolph.....	521
Schroder, James F.....	930	Spaulding, George T.....	962	Tarrant, Henry.....	218
Schroeder, Christopher F.....	713	Spears, William R.....	508	Taylor, James T.....	826
Schroeder, Mrs. Christopher F.....	712	Spellman, Jacob L.....	584	Taylor, Prof. John S.....	288
Schuelter, Hubert.....	667	Spencer, John C.....	763	Taylor, Robert.....	892
Scott, Robert W.....	264	Spencer, S. B.....	109	Teasdale, Alonzo B.....	524
Scott, Thomas.....	314	Spensley, Hon. James.....	658	Teasdale, Wilson.....	524
Seaton, Hon. James W.....	784	Sprague, Almerin.....	552	Tennant, William.....	522
Selleck, George J.....	65	Sprague, Burr.....	552	Terry, Lewis W.....	591
Selleck, Rev. Wallace L.....	65	Stanton, Daniel.....	705	Thomas, Hannibal.....	58
Selleck, Washington F.....	872	Stanton, S. W.....	705	Thomas, John.....	247
Sendelbach, Charles R.....	314	Stark, Charles W.....	137	Thomas, Josiah.....	247
Severson, Bryngel.....	681	Stark, William H.....	137	Thomas, Samuel, Esq.....	663
Severson, Sever O.....	748	Starr, Frank P.....	340	Thomas, Walter D., A. M.....	245
Sheffer, Rufus B.....	219	Starr, James.....	340	Thomas, William, Sr.....	58
Sheldon, John P.....	55	Stauffacher, Abraham.....	766	Thompson, Christian A.....	913
Sheldon, Thomas H.....	55	Steensland, Asbjorn E.....	848	Thompson, David.....	902
Sherman, James T.....	501	Stehl, Charles E.....	297	Thompson, Joseph.....	410
Sherman, T. B.....	148	Steiger, Carl, M. D.....	851	Thompson, J. W.....	340
Sherwin, Nicholas.....	664	Steinhoff, John H.....	729	Thompson, Knudt.....	682
Sherwin, Will.....	664	Steinhoff, William F.....	729	Thompson, Ole K.....	682
Shinoo, Benjamin.....	562	Stephens, Amo C.....	672	Thompson, Otis.....	700
Shinoo, Mrs. Elizabeth.....	562	Stephens, Chester.....	520	Thompson, William.....	340
Shinoo, Lewis.....	572	Stephens, Mrs. Jane.....	378	Thorburn, Adam.....	78
Shinoo, Mrs. Mary J.....	571	Stephens, John.....	554	Thorburn, George.....	78
Shockley, David C.....	454	Stephens, Michael.....	723	Thorson, Knudt.....	669
Short, Rev. Wallace M.....	92	Stephens, Mrs. Rosa E.....	520	Thorson, Mrs. Sarah.....	669
Shortney, Mrs. Isobel M.....	26	Stephens, Sylvester R.....	461	Thurber, Lauren L.....	415
Shortney, John.....	25	Stephens, Col. Thomas.....	376	Thurman, George W.....	581
Showalter, Hon. Reuben B.....	448	Stephens, William.....	554	Tighe, Thomas.....	475
Shull, Jesse.....	888	Steuert, Sigmund.....	110	Tindell, Isaac.....	223
Shull, Lewis W.....	888	Stevens, Casper.....	510	Todd, J. A.....	657
Side, John.....	250	Stevens, Charles D.....	696	Tollefson, Botolf.....	634
Sifford, John M.....	409	Stevens, Herman J.....	510	Tollefson, Thomas.....	635
Sifford, Mrs. Sarah J.....	410	Stevens, William.....	127	Tomkins, Charles W.....	464
Simmons, Henry.....	259	Stevens, William E.....	105	Torphy, Michael A.....	957
Simmons, Jacob.....	667	Stewart, Mrs. Carrie.....	689	Townsend, Absalom.....	233
Simmons, Thomas.....	667	Stewart Family.....	865	Traber, S. W.....	407
Simons, Malachi.....	883	Stewart, George.....	244	Treat, Hon. Cornelius M.....	220
Simons, Nicholas.....	883	Stewart, George R.....	865	Treat, Hon. Joseph B.....	375
Simpson, Jefferson B.....	426	Stewart, John.....	689	Treat, Nathaniel.....	375
Simpson, Philemon B.....	426	Stewart, John W.....	689	Treglown, Henry.....	746
Slack, Miss Elizabeth.....	656	Stewart, Robert.....	684	Treglown, L. H., M. D.....	746
Slack, Job.....	655	Stewart, Thomas.....	683	Tregoning, Sampson Uren.....	534
Smalley, Daniel N.....	69	Stillman, Jairus M.....	2	Trenary, Frank E.....	929
Smelker, I. C.....	388	Stockel, Bernard.....	922	Trenary, John P.....	960
Smelker, J. W.....	388	Stockel, Henry.....	922	Trenary, Joseph.....	932
Smiley, Daniel.....	704	Stockman, James.....	313	Trenary, Philip.....	929
Smiley, William.....	703	Stockman, John.....	313	Trenery, J. J.....	982
Smith, Aaron.....	400	Stone, Franklin.....	386	Trevitt, Edwin.....	475
Smith, Amos S.....	690	Stone, Gustavus.....	204	Trickel, Andrew J.....	455
Smith, Asabel P.....	292	Stone, Oscar.....	386	Trickel, William A.....	800
Smith, Charles M., Jr., M. D.....	29	Stott, Matthew.....	385	Trickle, Mrs. Mary E.....	672
Smith, Charles M., Sr., M. D.....	26	Stout, Allison W.....	980	Trickle, Robert W.....	672
Smith, George J.....	540	Streeter, Horace H.....	306	Tripp, William H.....	185
Smith, Henry.....	217	Strong, Judge Luman M.....	636	Trollope, Elijah.....	118
Smith, Isaac T.....	402	Strong, Orville.....	636	Trousdale, Rev. Samuel W., A. M., Ph. D., D. D.....	472
Smith, Jesse.....	861	Strong, Rolla M.....	701	Trow, John.....	502
Smith, John.....	326	Strong, Thomas.....	701	Trow, John A.....	502
Smith, John A.....	906	Strong, William B.....	316	Trumm, Daniel.....	393
Smith, John B.....	326	Stuart, Ezra H.....	434	Tuffley, George.....	555
Smith, Hon. John M.....	512	Sumner, Burton.....	163	Turner, George W.....	495
Smith, Jonathan.....	699	Sumner, Joshua.....	163

	PAGE.		PAGE.		PAGE.
Tuttle, Chester L.....	841	Wannemaker, H. L.....	179	Wiley, Thomas.....	608
Tuttle, George M.....	841	Ward, William A.....	617	Wilkins, William.....	953
Tyler, Dayton D.....	552	Ware, John F.....	339	Wilkinson, David.....	106
Tyler, Luallen A.....	427	Waring, Charles.....	310	Wilkinson, George.....	175
		Warren, Eugene F.....	319	Wilkinson, George C.....	175
Ula, A. C.....	889	Warren, Lemuel.....	653	Wilkinson, James.....	71
Ula, J. C.....	662	Warren, Lemuel H.....	653	Wilkinson, John.....	106
Ula, Mrs. Thora.....	662	Warrick, John.....	599	Wilkinson, John T.....	70
Ullom, Elisha.....	759	Warwick, Shannon W.....	751	Willey, John F.....	389
Underwood, Edward.....	793	Warwick, William C.....	751	Williams, Isaac L.....	589
Underwood, Oliver P.....	802	Washburn, Frederick A.....	495	Williams, John P. (Linden).....	628
Underwood, Parker C.....	802	Waterman, Anson P.....	300	Williams, John P.....	642
Unosh, Joseph.....	584	Watson, Thomas.....	646	Williams, John S.....	384
		Watt, David W.....	334	Williams, Mrs. John S.....	384
Vail, Mrs. Celia Y.....	801	Watters, Joseph.....	925	Williams, Capt. Matthew.....	329
Vail, Charles H.....	800	Webb, William.....	812	Williams, Matthew J.....	329
VanAllen, Matthew.....	238	Webster, George H., M. D.....	704	Wilmott, Edward M.....	671
Vance, Daniel W.....	578	Weil, Henry S.....	744	Wilmott, Isaac.....	671
Vance, John B.....	599	Weittenhillier, Charles.....	711	Wilson, John.....	398
Vance, Samuel.....	578, 599	Weittenhillier, Conrad J.....	676	Winkley, Darius D.....	767
Vandenburg, William G.....	281, 293	Weittenhillier, Sebastian.....	676, 711	Winskell, H. L.....	579
Vanderbilt, John W. H.....	975	Wells, A. W.....	710	Winskell, Joseph.....	579
Vanderbilt, Mrs. Sovenia.....	975	Wells, Otis F.....	935	Winter, George.....	652
VanGelder, Mrs. Eliza H.....	192	Wescott, Ezra.....	798	Wis, Charles W.....	957
VanGelder, Jacob.....	76	Wescott, Jefferson F.....	799	Wise, John E.....	117
VanGelder, Jacob O.....	76	Wescott, John E.....	798	Wiseman, Christopher.....	487
VanGelder, Samuel C.....	192	Wescott, Walter S.....	799	Wiseman, Thomas.....	487
VanMatre, James.....	215	West, Dennis W.....	830	Wiseman, Thomas.....	113
VanMatre, Morgan J.....	215	West, George.....	341, 735	Witherbee, Erasmus.....	113
Vannatta, Aaron.....	892	West, Samuel.....	735	Witherbee, Hiram.....	398
Vannatta, Samuel B.....	892	Wheeler, Hon. Guy.....	46, 184	Withrow, John.....	393
Van Norman, Eugene W.....	842	Wheeler, Justus P.....	46, 184	Withrow, William.....	706
Van Norman, Michael F.....	842	Wheeler, Hon. William G.....	184	Witzig, Frank.....	916
Van Wart, David.....	846	Whitcher, George S.....	904	Witzig, Joseph.....	517
Van Wart, Frank.....	846	Whitcher, Mrs. Rhoda L.....	904	Wixom, Elijah P.....	945
Vedder, A. W.....	125	Whitcomb, James.....	390, 632	Womack, William.....	949
Villemonite, Exever.....	781	Whitcomb, Rufus C.....	632	Wood, Frank.....	114
Villemonite, Frank G.....	781	White, Bartimeus.....	67	Wood, Royal.....	115
Vinger, Christian.....	750	White, William.....	289	Wood, Jerome.....	812
Vinger, Gulbrand.....	750	Whitehead, John.....	467	Woodbury, Peter.....	978
Virgin, Col. H. H.....	342	Whitehead, Hon. John M.....	27	Woodhouse, Peter.....	478
Vivian, Stephen.....	162	Whitehead, Levi.....	808	Woodle, Alpheus H.....	478
Vogel, Herman.....	752	Whitehead, Lewis.....	618	Woodle, Mrs. Hannah.....	236
Voigt, Peter.....	239	Whitehead, Mrs. Olive L.....	618	Woods, Edmund F., M. D.....	265
		Whitehead, Mrs. Sarah.....	467	Woodside, William W.....	93
Waddington, Judge James S.....	191	Whitehead, Mrs. Susan.....	803	Worthington, David B.....	349
Walker, Mrs. Anna R.....	639	Whitehead, Mrs. M. A.....	54	Wright, George W.....	401
Walker, David B.....	596	Whitford, Albert, M. A.....	153	Wright, John P.....	401
Walker, Joel W.....	639	Whitford, Rev. William C.....	72	Wright, Mrs. Nancy E.....	350
Walker, John.....	596	Whiting, Joseph B., M. D.....	80	Wright, Samuel.....	401
Walker, J. Newcomb.....	588	Whiting, Joseph B., M. D., Jr.....	80
Walker, J. R.....	588	Whitman, Hon. Joel.....	611	Yarwood, John.....	519
Walker, Thomas.....	290	Wichser, Daniel.....	875	Yeomans, Reuben C.....	828
Walsh, John.....	612	Wiederhold, George.....	282	York, Hon. H. D.....	198
Walworth, George.....	420	Wiederkehr, Henry.....	805	Yomans, David.....	230
Wamsley, Charles.....	503	Wight, Rev. C. A.....	687	Young, John A.....	496
Wanamaker, C. H.....	179	Wilder, Calvin H.....	161
		Wilder, Percy C.....	161	Zimmermann, George.....	563
		Wiley, John S.....	608

sign! 22

89082502402

b89082502402a

NON-CIRCULATING

89082502402

B89082502402A